" WE your Majesty's most dutiful and loy- " al Subjects the Commons of Eng- " land in Parliament assembled, do return our " most humble and hearty Thanks to your " Majesty for your most gracious Speech from " the Throne, and humbly crave Leave to " assure your Majesty, that this House will " support and defend your Majesty's rightful " and lawful Title to the Crown of these " Realms, against the Pretended Prince of " Wales, and all his open and secret Abettors " and Adherents, and all other your Maje- " sty's Enemies whatsoever. And we will " enable your Majesty to shew your just Re- " sentment of the Affront and Indignity offer- " ed to your Majesty and this Nation by the " French King, in taking upon him to declare " the Pretended Prince of Wales, King of " England, Scotland and Ireland. And we " are firmly and unanimously resolved to " maintain and support the Succession to the " Imperial Crown of this Realm, and the " Dominions and Territories thereunto be- " longing, in the Protestant Line, as the same " is settled by an Act declaring the Rights and " Liberties of the Subjects and settling the " Succession of the Crown, and farther pro- " vided for by an Act for the farther Limita- " tion of the Crown, and better securing the " Rights and Liberties of the Subject. And " for the better effecting the same, we will to " the utmost of our Power, enable your Ma- " jesty to make good all those Alliances your " Majesty has made, or shall make, pursuant " to the Addresses and Advices of your most " dutiful and loyal Commons of the last " Parliament, for preserving the Liberties of " Europe, and reducing the exorbitant Power " of France.

A. D. 1702.

To support the Protestant Succession.

His Majesty made this most gracious Answer.

His Majesty's most acceptable Answer.

Gentlemen,

I Give you my hearty Thanks for this Address, which I look upon as a good Omen for the Session. The Unanimity with which it pass'd, adds greatly to the Satisfaction I receive from it, so good a Step at your first Entrance upon Business, cannot but raise the Hopes of all, who wish well to England, and to the Common Cause. I can desire no more of you than to proceed as you have begun, and I depend upon it. For when I consider how chearfully and universally you concurr'd in this Address, I cannot doubt but every one of you will sincerely endeavour to make it effectual in all the Parts of it.

There is an Air of Concern, Duty and Affection in the Lords and Commons Addresses, which shews how safe and happy this Nation is in its Constitution when its Course is free, and there is no Spirit of Faction and Malignity prevalent to turn it from its natural Biass as the Case was lately, and it was King William's great Happiness when he was so near to the End of his Days, that there was such a true English Parliament in Being, in whom he could confide. The Lords having still the State of Affairs of England and all Europe as far as England was concern'd, under Consideration, drew np a second Address to his Majesty, wherein that august Assembly made so true and ample a Representation of the French King's unjust and violent Proceedings, that it mightily confirm'd every one in their just Abhorrence of them and their Zeal to have him reduc'd to Reason.

The Lords second Address against the French King.

" We your Majesty's most loyal and duti- " ful Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Tem- " poral in Parliament assembled, are highly " sensible of what we owe to Almighty God " for the great Deliverance he hath wrought " for us by your Majesty. We are highly sen- " sible of his Mercies in preserving you hi- " therto in so many publick and private Dan- " gers to which your Sacred Person hath been " expos'd, and we hope the same Providence " will carry your Majesty thorough the great " Work, which seems reserv'd for you, the " Reducing the exorbitant Power of France, " and maintaining the Balance of Europe.

" All true Englishmen since the Decay of " the Spanish Monarchy, have ever taken it " for granted, that the Security of their Re- " ligion, Liberty and Property, that their " Honour, their Wealth, and their Trade " depend chiefly upon the proper Measures " to be taken from Time to Time in Parlia- " ment, against the growing Power of France: " But it is their peculiar Blessing in your Ma- " jesty's Reign, to have a Prince on the Throne

" who

A. D. 1702.

" who not only agrees with them in this Opi-
" nion, but, who in the frequent Parliaments
" aſſembled, is ever reminding them of this
" their greateſt Concern, and who, to com-
" pleat their Happineſs, is always ready with
" the Hazard of his Perſon to ſupport his
" Subjects and Allies againſt their Common
" Enemy. And we eſteem it a farther good
" Fortune in this Time of Publick Danger,
" that the French King has taken thoſe Me-
" thods, which will make it impoſſible for him
" to impoſe any more upon the World by
" Treaties ſo often violated: Neither can he
" hope any longer to cover his ambitious De-
" ſigns or juſtify his Uſurpations under the " ſpecious Pretences of Peace.

" Your Majeſty hath ſo juſtly repreſented
" the Danger to which Europe is expos'd, by
" the French King's placing his Grandſon on
" the Throne of Spain, Your Majeſty is ſo
" juſtly ſenſible, that under that Pretence he
" is become abſolute Maſter of the whole Spa-
" niſh Monarchy; And we are ſo well ap-
" priz'd of the dangerous Conſequence of this
" bold Attempt, that we think it moſt proper
" to aſſure your Majeſty in your own Words,
" That we are under the higheſt Impatience,
" that ſpeedy and effectual Meaſures may be
" taken againſt the undoubted Ambition of
" the French King.

" And as the placing his Grandſon on the " Throne of Spain is viſible to the whole
" World, the Cauſe of all thoſe Dangers
" mention'd in your Majeſty's Speech, and of
" the Breach of the Balance of Power in Eu-
" rope, which the People of England are ſo
" deeply engag'd to preſerve, ſo we humbly
" conceive the Remedy is as apparent as the
" Diſeaſe, and that Your Majeſty's Subjects
" and Allies can never be ſafe and ſecure till
" the Houſe of Auſtria be reſtor'd to their " Rights, and the Invader of the Spaniſh
" Monarchy brought to Reaſon.

" To conclude, Sir, as we humbly addreſ-
" ſed to Your Majeſty laſt Parliament, to en-
" ter into Alliances with the Emperor, the " States of Holland, and all other Princes and
" States to unite againſt the Power of France,
" ſo we take the Liberty at this Time to aſ-
" ſure you, we are all willing and zealous to
" lay hold of this Opportunity, which the
" Bleſſing of God, and your Majeſty's Care,
" have put into our Hands; reſolving to make
" our utmoſt Efforts for our own Security,
" and the Support of our Allies; deſiring
" your Majeſty to reſt aſſur'd; that no Time
" ſhall be loſt, nor any Thing wanting on our " Part which may anſwer the reaſonable Ex-
" pectation of our Friends abroad, not doubt-
" ing but to ſupport the Reputation of the " Engliſh Name, when engag'd under ſo great
" a Prince in the glorious Cauſe of maintain-
" ing the Liberty of Europe.

His Majeſty anſwer'd graciouſly,

My Lords,

I Am extreamly pleas'd to find the juſt Sentiments you have of the preſent State of Affairs, and your Readineſs to do your Part in this great Conjuncture. I hope your joint Endeavours will be ſucceſsful for reſtoring the Balance of Europe, and eſtabliſhing the Common Security.

Theſe Addreſſes were a terrible Mortification to the French Court, whoſe Tool the Paris Gazetteer was perpetually crying up the Succeſſes of the Country-Party in the Elections for this Parliament. He could not help giving ſome Account of the King's Speech to them, but he ſunk their Addreſſes to his Majeſty. Not long after this, one Berzelli an Italian Bravo calling himſelf Count was taken up at Paris, and thrown into the Baſtile, being accuſed of a Deſign againſt the Life of King William, but this Floriſh of Generoſity vaniſh'd like a Vapour as it was, and the Aſſaſſin being ſoon diſcharg'd out of Priſon was commiſſion'd by the Duke of Anjou as King of Spain to raiſe a Regiment in Italy. The Sieur Barre whom the Count d'Avaux left in Holland talk'd very imprudently of the Elections in England before the Parliament met, but after theſe Addreſſes came to Holland he was ſo confounded that he feign'd himſelf ſick for two or three Days to avoid the Railleries of the Foreign Miniſters; the French Gazetteer was baited by all Paris for his falſe News and wretched Preſages, he was ask'd a thouſand times a Day, What's become of the Country Party in England? Which not being able longer to keep up he was at laſt oblig'd to own, There never was greater Unanimity in Parliament, and thoſe in France who had from the firſt been againſt owning the Pretender were free enough in cenſuring thoſe who had been for it.

A. D. 1702.

The Partiſans of the French Court confounded.

In the mean while the warlike Preparations by Sea and Land were carrying on in England with great Application, and it being reſolv'd to put a conſiderable Body of Troops aboard the Fleet, to execute a Deſign of a Deſcent concerted with the States in Holland, His Majeſty gave the Command of thoſe Forces to the Duke of Ormond, and appointed the Admirals of the Fleet as follows: The Earl of Pembroke Lord High Admiral of England For the Red, Matthew Aylmer, Eſq; Vice-Admiral; Sir Stafford Fairborn, Rear-Admiral; Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, Admiral of the Blue; The Marquis of Carmarthen, Vice-Admiral; ——— Bembow, Eſq; Rear-Adm. Sir George Rooke, Admiral of the White; Sir David Mitchel, Vice-Admiral; Sir John Munden, Rear-Admiral.

The King's Care of the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

The Faction were ſo far from loſing Heart as they loſt Ground, that Sir Robert Bedingfield, one of Oates's Jury, did this Year conteſt the Shrievalty of London with Sir James Bateman, one of the richeſt Merchants in that City but the Citizens were not as yet ſo infatuated as to truſt ſuch Men as Bedingfield with the Magiſtracy, the Poll ſtanding thus when it was clos'd, Sir James Bateman 2446, Sir Robert Bedingfield 2225.

On the 10th of February, the King gave the Royal Aſſent to an Act for appointing Commiſſioners to take and ſtate the Accounts of the Army and Navy, and was pleas'd after it to dine with the Earl of Portland in Whitehall. His Majeſty about the ſame Time order'd Commiſſions to be given out for ſix Regiments of Marines to be commanded by Lord Shannon, Col. Mordaunt, Col. Sanderſon, Col. Fox, Col. Villiers, Col. Colt, and ſeven Regiments of Foot, the Colonels Lord Lucas, Lord Mohun, Gibſon, Farington, Stanhope, Stringer, Sir Rich. Temple, Col. Coote and Col. Meredith were commiſſion'd for two Regiments to be rais'd in Ireland, from whence ſeveral Regiments were ſhipp'd off to be put aboard the Fleet, for which a fine Train of Artillery was prepared in Caſe of a Deſcent, which was his Majeſty's Scheme.

The King was pleas'd to give the Regiment of Horſe commanded by the late Earl of Macclesfield to the Lord Windſor, and to order the Lord Raby's Regiment of Dragoons for

Holland

A. D. 1702.

Regiments order'd for Holland.

Holland, together with the Duke of Schomberg's, Lieutenant General Wyndham's, Major General Lumley's, and Col. Wood's Regiments of Horſe, 200 out of the Troops of Guards commanded by Earl Rivers, and Col. Ogilvie, Colonel Stuart's Regiment of Foot, the Lord Tiviot's Regiment of Dragoons and Col. Row's and Col. Ferguſon's Regiments of Foot from Scotland, and one of the fineſt Trains of Artillery that ever was ſhipp'd off from the Tower. I mention no more of the military Preparations than what were compleated while his Majeſty was yet living, and I do it the rather becauſe ſome of theſe Names are in the Hiſtory of Sacheverel's Miniſters, who betray'd that Common Cauſe, with the Defence of which King William now entruſted them, and they would certainly have never lain under any Temptation to betray or abandon it in his Reign, which now draws with his glorious Life very near to a Period, but in his laſt Days and even Hours he had ſtill the Proteſtant Succeſſion next his Heart, and being ſenſible it would not be eaſily ſettled in Scotland, where it ſeem'd to be retarded, as Biſhop Kennet ſays, on Purpoſe for a Claim to an Independence on the Crown of England, and that nothing was more ſeaſonable at this Juncture than a Union of the two Kingdoms, his Majeſty to forward it, wrote this Letter to the Houſe of Commons, being diſabled from coming to the Houſe of Peers by a Fall from his Horſe near Hampton-Court, on Saturday, Feb. 21.

WILLIAM R.

His Meſſage to the Commons for an Union with Scotland.

HIS Majeſty being hinder'd by an unhappy Accident from coming in Perſon to his Parliament, is pleas'd to ſignify to the Houſe of Commons by Meſſage what he deſign'd to have ſpoken to both Houſes from the Throne. His Majeſty in the firſt Year of his Reign did acquaint the Parliament, that Commiſſioners were authoriz'd in Scotland, to treat with ſuch Commiſſioners as ſhould be appointed in England, of proper Terms for Uniting the two Kingdoms, and at the ſame Time expreſs'd his great Deſire of ſuch an Union. His Majeſty is fully ſatisfy'd, that nothing can more contribute to the preſent and future Happineſs of England and Scotland, than a firm and entire Union between them, and he cannot but hope that upon a due Conſideration of our preſent Circumſtances, there will be found a general Diſpoſition to this Union. His Majeſty would eſteem it a peculiar Felicity, if, during his Reign, ſome happy Expedient for making both Kingdoms one might take Place, and is therefore extreamly deſirous, that a Treaty for that Purpoſe might be ſet on Foot, and does in the moſt earneſt Manner recommend this Affair to the Conſideration of the Houſe.

The Commons appointed firſt one and then another Day to conſider of this Meſſage, but the Shortneſs of his Majeſty's Life prevented their Coming to any Reſolution.

K. William's Treaties for the Grand Alliance.

In the mean Time, Mr. Secretary Vernon, by Command, laid before the Houſe Copies of the Treaties of the Grand Alliance: 1. A Treaty between the King of Denmark and the States General, 15 June 1701. 2. Secret Articles of Treaty with Denmark, 15 June 1701. 3. Treaty between the Emperor, his Majeſty, and the States General, 7 Sept. 1701. wherein it was agreed, "That no "Peace ſhould be made, till an equitable and "reaſonable Satisfaction was obtain'd to the "Emperor for his Pretenſions to the Spaniſh "Monarchy." There was alſo two other Articles in this Alliance, "That they ſhould "faithfully communicate their Demands to "one another, and not treat of Peace unleſs "jointly, and with the Common Advice of "the other Princes." Which is proper to mention now that the Reader may perceive how the Managers of the Utrecht Treaty on the Part of England kept to theſe Articles, not only with Reſpect to their giving up Spain to a French Prince, but alſo with Reſpect to their Treating with Meſnager the French Agent in England without communicating one Step they took to the Allies and their ſending St. John, one of theſe Managers to France to treat ſeparately and clandeſtinely quite contrary to the abovemention'd Articles, and to the Honour and Safety of England. 4. A Convention between the King of England, the King of Sweden, and the States General, 26 April 1701. 5. A Treaty between the King of England and the States General. All which were ſo well approv'd, that the Houſe immediately reſolv'd, on the 7th of January, That a Supply be granted to his Majeſty. And that whoſoever ſhall advance or lend unto his Majeſty's Exchequer, the Sum of 600000 l. for the Service of the Fleet ſhall be repay'd the ſame with Intereſt at 6 per Cent. out of the firſt Aids to be granted this Seſſion. There was 50000 l. added to this Vote for Guards and Garriſons. They order'd an Account of the Debts of the Nation unprovided for to be laid before them, and on Jan. 9. reſolv'd Nemine Contradicente, "That Leave be given "to bring in a Bill for the farther Security of "his Majeſty's Perſon, and the Succeſſion of "the Crown in the Proteſtant Line, and ex"tinguiſhing the Hopes of the Pretended "Prince of Wales, and all other Pretenders, "and their open and ſecret Abettors. And on the next Day, they farther reſolv'd, "That "an Humble Addreſs be preſented to His "Majeſty, that he will be graciouſly pleas'd "to take Care that it be an Article in the ſe"veral Treaties of Alliance with his Majeſty "and other Potentates, That no Peace ſhall "be made with France, until his Majeſty and "the Nation have Reparation for the great "Indignity offer'd by the French King in own"ning and declaring the Pretended Prince of "Wales, King of England, Scotland and Ire"land. To which the King gave a chearful Anſwer, I will take Care of what you deſire. The Houſe agreed at the ſame Time, "That "the Proportion of Land Forces to act in "Conjunction with the Forces of the Allies "for making good the Alliances be Forty "Thouſand Men, and Forty Thouſand more "for Sea-Service. They proceeded to a Bill for the Attainder of the Pretended Prince of Wales. The Lords were intent upon the ſame Meaſures and paſs'd a Bill for the Security of his Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and for maintaining the Succeſſion of the Crown, according to the two late Acts of Parliament, Which they ſent down to the Commons, who after twice reading, let it lie upon their Table, as thinking their own depending Bills more effectual, yet the chief of theſe Bills, That for the Security of his Majeſty's Perſon, &c. was likely to have miſcarry'd by an Inſtruction to the Committee, that they take Care that the Oath in the ſaid Bill mention'd be voluntary. But this Offer being put to the Queſtion it paſt in the Negative. And on the

A. D. 1702.

Vote of Supply.

Further Reſolutions for the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

Votes for the Land and Sea-Forces.

A. D. 1702.

22d of January, they gave a much better Inſtruction to the ſame Committee, "That they "do take Care to make it equally penal to "compaſs or imagine the Death of her Roy-"al Highneſs, the Princeſs Anne of Denmark, "as it is to compaſs or imagine the Death of "the King's eldeſt Son and Heir, by the Sta-"tute of 25 Edward III. They alſo order'd a Bill to be brought in for continuing the Quakers-Bill, by which their ſolemn Affirmation and Declaration ſhould be accepted inſtead of an Oath. An honeſt well-meaning Man, one Joſeph Jacobs, who was then a Quaker in nothing but the Principle of Non Swearing, and was Preacher to a Congregation who thought like himſelf, drew up a Propoſal for all ſcrupulous Perſons, who could not ſwear in the Common Form to be admitted to Affirm and Declare as well as Quakers, which Propoſal he printed in the Manner of a Caſe, and deliver'd it to the Members of the Houſe of Commons, being a Perſon very firm to what he was principl'd in. Sir John Packington. an inveterate Enemy to Proteſtant Diſſenters of all Denominations, upon reading of this Caſe, pretended to fall in with it, purely to clog the Bill itſelf and prevent its Paſſing for he knew the Houſe would not come into it. However, he careſs'd Mr. Jacobs in a very extraordinary Manner, took him with him in his Coach to his Houſe at Kenſington, ſpent half a Day in Conſultation upon it, and encourag'd him to get as many Hands as poſſible to a Petition for ſuch a Clauſe in the Bill which he undertook to move, but when Jacobs ſet his Petition a Foot he met with ſo many Men who aſſur'd him Sir John Packington intended nothing but the rejecting of the whole Bill, that he dropt his Attempt, and the Quakers Act paſt as it now ſtands.

Joſeph Jacobs ſolicits for a General Affirmation inſtead of an Oath.

Sir John Packington eſpouſes it.

The Quakers Bill paſt.

On the 3d of February, the Houſe reſolv'd, that 350000 l. be granted to his Majeſty for Guards and Garriſons and Half-pay-Officers, as alſo that an Humble Addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty that he will be pleas'd to interpoſe with his Allies, That they may encreaſe their Quota's of Land-Forces to be put on board the Fleet. His Majeſty's Anſwer was, I will do it. And upon their Addreſs to employ the Half-Pay-Officers in the new Levies, he was pleas'd to ſay, It was always my Intention.

His Majeſty's Fall at Hampton-Court.

The unhappy Accident mention'd in his Majeſty's Letter to the Commons was, as we have hinted, a Fall as he was putting his Horſe to the Gallop near Hampton-Court. The Horſe fell, and the King fell with it, and in the Fall broke his Right Collar Bone. His Majeſty was immediately carry'd to Hampton-Court, where the Bone was dexterouſly ſet by Monſieur Ronjat, his Majeſty's Surgeon in Waiting, who having felt the King's Pulſe, told him he was feveriſh, and that any other Perſon in his Condition would be let Blood, "As for that, (reply'd the "King,) I have had now and then a Head-"Ach and ſome ſhivering Fits this Fortnight, "and had this very Morning a Pain in my "Head before I went out a Hunting." As there never was a Life of greater, or perhaps ſo great Importance ſince the Creation, 'tis miraculous, that conſidering the infirm State of his Majeſty's Health, thoſe who were near his Perſon, had not diſſuaded him from an Exerciſe, which as moderate as he might be then in it, was too violent for him. His Majeſty in the Afternoon, finding himſelf eaſy, return'd to Kenſington, contrary to Advice, which probably was the Caſe, as to his Exerciſe of Riding and Hunting in his weak Condition. He came to Kenſington in his Coach, about Nine o'Clock at Night, an unſeaſonable Hour for a Perſon ſubject to feveriſh Fits to be abroad in February. As he enter'd the great Chamber with his Arm ty'd up, he ſpy'd Profeſſor Bidloo, his Houſhold Phyſician, and ſaid, "I have got a Hurt in "my Arm, pray come and ſee it. Soon after He continu'd to this Effect. "I was ri-"ding in the Park at Noon, and while I en-"deavour'd to make the Horſe change his "Walking into a Gallop, he fell upon his "Knees. Upon that I meant to raiſe him "with the Bridle, but he fell forwards on "one Side, and ſo I fell with my right Shoul-"der on the Ground. Ronjat ſays, there is "little Bone broken, and indeed I feel ſome "Pain towards my Back." At the ſame Time he pointed, with his Left Hand, to the Shoulder-Blade, ſaying, There, there. Dr. Bidloo, finding his Pulſe in good Order, diſſuaded him from Bleeding, and after viewing the affected Part, gave his Majeſty to know, that the right Channel-Bone was broke obliquely a little below its Juncture with the Shoulder-Blade. The King then ſaid, Is it well ſet? Dr. Bidloo anſwering, No. His Majeſty ſaid to Mr. Ronjat, Juſtify yourſelf, Monſieur Ronjat, Is it well ſet? Mr. Ronjat reply'd, It was well ſet, but the Jolting of the Coach and the Looſening of the Bandage, had occaſion'd a Diſcunion. Indeed the Bone ſnapt again on Dr. Bidloo's Looſning the Bandage. After the Fracture was a ſecond Time reſtor'd, His Majeſty went to Bed, and ſlept that Night ſo well, that the Gentlemen who ſate up with him ſaid, They did not hear him complain ſo much as once. The King in Diſcourſe with Bidloo added, 'Tis a ſtrange Thing for it happen'd on a ſmooth level Ground, but a Mole had heav'd up, and left a Hole there in which the Horſe's Feet ſtuck.

A. D. 1702.

Unhappy Management.

His Diſcourſe with Dr. Bidloo.

The King's laſt Sickneſs.

The King ſeem'd in a fair Way of doing well, till on Sunday the firſt of March, a Defluxion fell upon his Knee, which was a great Pain and Weakneſs to him, and taken for a very ill Symptom, He thought it ſo himſelf, and took it for a Warning for Diſpatch of Publick Affairs. Therefore the next Morning this Meſſage was ſent from the Houſe of Peers to the Houſe of Commons.

Commiſſions Lords to paſs Bills.

Mr. Speaker,

THE King has granted a Commiſſion under the Great Seal for paſſing the Royal Aſſent to thoſe Bills, which have been agreed to by both Houſes of Parliament, and the Lords commiſſion'd by the King do deſire that this Houſe would preſently come up with their Speaker to be preſent at the Paſſing thereof.

Then the Speaker with the Houſe went up, and the Lord Keeper acquainted both Houſes, That his Majeſty by an unhappy Accident had been prevented from coming in Perſon, and had granted Commiſſion to ſeveral Peers for paſſing the Bills therein mentioned. The Lords ſo commiſſion'd were: Sir Nathan Wright, Lord Keeper, the Earl of Pembroke, Lord High Admiral, the Duke of Devonſhire, the Earl of Carliſle, and the Earl of Jerſey, who, March the ſecond, the Commons being at the Lords Bar, gave the Royal

A. D. 1702.

The Pretender attainted

Royal Aſſent to An Act for Attainting the Pretended Prince of Wales, an Act for Puniſhing Mutiny and Deſertion; An Act for the ſolemn Affirmation of the People call'd Quakers, and to ſome private Acts. On the 7th of March, the Lord Keeper went to Kenſington with a Commiſſion to be ſign'd by his Majeſty for the Paſſing of the Abjuration Bill, the Malt-Tax Bill, and what other Bills were ready for the Royal Aſſent.

In the mean Time, the King's Illneſs ſeemed to be at a Stand, till Wedneſday the 4th of March, when thoſe that were near his Perſon flatter'd themſelves that he was better, and his Majeſty took ſeveral Turns in the Gallery at Kenſington for the Air, but finding himſelf weary, ſate down on a Couch, and fell aſleep. Upon his Waking, he was ſeiz'd with a ſhivering Fit, which might very rationally be imputed to his ſleeping in ſo open a Place, and what yet we have met with concerning his Majeſty's Sickneſs could not, one would think, occaſion any diſmal Apprehenſions of the Danger he was in. The Breaking of the Collar Bone, and the Defluxion on the Knee, are by no Means Forerunners of Approaching Mortality, and even that ſhivering Fit, nothing but what is common to every Man ſitting thus and doſing in a Place expos'd to the Air, but his Majeſty's Conſtitution, at beſt not very good, was ſo worn with Cares and Fatigues more than Years, that it ſeems ſtrange he ſhould not have been prevailed with to forbear Hunting, and much more reſting himſelf in an open Gallery, eſpecially when he was infirm, and it was plain by his Impatience in being within Doors that he had feveriſh Symptoms deſerving the utmoſt Attention of all his Phyſicians. Upon this laſt ſhivering Fit, Sir Thomas Millington, Sir Richard Blackmore, Dr. Hutton, Sir Theodore Colladon, Dr. Bidloo, and others of the Faculty, were ſent for, and adminiſtered ſeveral Remedies, which gave his Majeſty great Relief, inſomuch that he was thought to be in a Way of doing well. But on Friday, the 6th of March, his Vomiting and Looſeneſs became ſo violent that he refuſed to take any Suſtenance till two o'Clock, Saturday Morning, when he drank a Diſh of Chocolate, which ſtaid with him: Soon after, the Phyſicians gave him a gentle ſleeping Draught to compoſe him, and it had ſo good Effect, that he reſted three Hours after. In the Forenoon he ſupp'd ſome Broth and a Cordial, and found himſelf ſomewhat eaſier, tho' exceſſive weak. He continu'd ſo all the Forenoon, as he did alſo in the Afternoon till Night came on, and then he had ſeveral Fits.

His Mind was ſtill ſo fix'd upon the Publick Intereſt that not being able to write his Name to the Commiſſion the Lord Keeper brought him to ſign, as abovemention'd. He commanded a Stamp to be prepar'd, with which he made his Signature to empower the Lords Commiſſioners to paſs the beforementioned Acts, and thus it was but a very few Hours before he dy'd that his Royal Aſſent was given to An Act for the farther Security of his Majeſty's Perſon, and the Succeſſion of the Crown in the Proteſtant Line, and extinguiſhing the Hopes of the Pretended Prince of Wales. Which with other Acts already ſpoken of were by Commiſſion paſs'd the ſame Evening.

A. D. 1702.

The Earl of Albemarle arriv'd at Kenſington from Holland, about Five o'Clock this Saturday Morning, and went immediately to wait on the King, who being willing at that Time to be undiſturb'd, bid the Earl go and reſt himſelf, and come to him ſome Hours after. His Lordſhip attending accordingly the King call'd him to one Side of the Bed, where the Earl gave him an Account of the Poſture of Affairs in Holland, at which His Majeſty ſeem'd well pleas'd.

At Night an extraordinary Council was held at Kenſington, before whom the Phyſicians appear'd frequently, and at laſt Sir Thomas Millington, who never left his Majeſty after the firſt Conſultation acquainted them that all their Hopes under God depended upon the Uſe of thoſe Remedies they had preſcribed, and on His Majeſty's Taking ſome little Suſtenance. Upon this the Duke of Devonſhire, and other Lords of the Council, deſired Dr. Bidloo to preſs his Majeſty to take ſomething. Accordingly, the Doctor ſpoke to him in Dutch, and his Majeſty made Anſwer, Lift me up and I'll take as much as I can of what is thought proper. Then he took ſome of Raleigh's Cordial, with the Cordial Julep, and ſoon after ſome hot Claret. He alſo thank'd Bidloo for the great Care he had taken of his Perſon, adding to this Effect: The King grows worſe
" If you and the other learned Phyſicians " have done all that your Art can do for " my Relief, but find all Means ineffectual, " I ſubmit. About three o'Clock on Sunday Morning, he call'd again for Dr. Bidloo, and complain'd to him, that he had had a bad Night, and could not ſleep. Upon that he ſate up and lean'd on him, ſaying, I could ſleep in this Poſture, ſit nearer me, and hold me up for a little Time. In this Poſture he ſlept about Half an Hour, and then waking ſaid, You can bear me up no longer. After which, he was held up by Mr. Freeman on the Right Side, and Mr. Sewell on the Left, both of them having Pillows in their Arms. Soon after the Phyſicians gave Notice they were apprehenſive his Majeſty had not long to live. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury who attended him in theſe Extremities with his Prayers and proper Exhortations, adminiſtered the Sacrament to him about Five in the Morning, which His Majeſty receiv'd with firm Attention and very great Devotion. The Lords of the Privy Council, with many of the Nobility and Gentry attended in the adjoyning Apartments, and ſeveral of them were call'd in at Times, to whom his Majeſty ſpoke a little, and then they withdrew in much greater Anguiſh of Mind than was their Royal Maſter ſo near the laſt Breath he was to draw. For while they were all drown'd in Tears, His Majeſty did not betray the leaſt Concern or Fear of Death, but labour'd to ſpeak with Eaſe and Chearfulneſs, and particularly when he talk'd a little to the Lord Overkirk, He rais'd His Voice in a diſtinguiſhing Manner. He took Leave of all of them with a great deal of Satisfaction, and deliver'd to the Earl of Albemarle the Keys of his Cloſet and Eſcrutore, ſaying, You know what to do with them. About Seven o'Clock he took Bidloo by the Hand, and breathing with great Difficulty ſaid, Can this laſt long? The Doctor anſwering, No. The King asked, How long? Doctor Bidloo reply'd, An Hour or an Hour and Half, tho' You may be ſnatch'd

A. D. 1702.

He expires.

ſnatch'd away in the Twinkling of an Eye. After that, while the Doctor was feeling his Pulſe, His Majeſty took him again by the Hand, ſaying, I do not die yet, hold me faſt. Having taken a little of the Cordial Potion, he faintly enquir'd for the Earl of Portland, who immediately came to him and plac'd his Ear as near as he could to his Majeſty's Mouth, but tho' His Majeſty's Lips were ſeen to move, the Earl was not able to hear any diſtinct articulate Sound. About Eight of the Clock His Majeſty ſitting on His Bed in His Night-gown, and in the Arms of Mr. Sewell, one of the Pages of the Back Stairs, Father of Mr. George Sewell, the Poet, He lean'd a little backwards towards the Left, and ſhutting his Eyes expir'd with two or three ſoft Gaſps. As ſoon as the Breath was out of his Body, the Lords Lexington and Scarborough, Lords of the Bedchamber in Waiting, order'd Monſieur Ronjat to take from the King's Left Arm a Black Ribbon, which had next to his Skin a Gold Ring with ſome Hair of the late Queen Mary, which the Lord Lexington carry'd to the New Queen her Siſter.

Thus dy'd William III. the greateſt Monarch that ever ſate on the Throne of England. If we conſider him not only as a Hero, in which he was equal to the Third Edward's and Fifth Henry's, but as a Politician, as an Aſſertor of the Liberty of Mankind, and the Deliverer of Oppreſs'd Nations. He was fifty-one Years, four Months old, and had reign'd thirteen Years, three Weeks and two Days.

The Royal Body being open'd, and the Phyſicians and Surgeons ſummon'd by the Privy Council to aſſiſt and examine the Diſſection, they made this Report.

The Phyſicians Report of the Diſſection.

1. Upon the Viewing the Body before the Diſſection, the following Appearances were remarkable. The Body in general was much emaciated. Both the Legs up to the Knees and a little higher, as alſo the Right Hand and Arm as far as the Elbow was conſiderably ſwell'd. There was likewiſe on the left Thigh near the Hip, a Bladder full of Water, as big as a ſmall Pullet's Egg, reſembling a Blain.

2. Upon Opening the Belly, the Guts were found of a livid Colour, and the Blood contained in their Veſſels black. The Gut call'd Ilion had in ſome Places the Marks of a ſlight Inflammation. The Stomach, Pancreas, Dyſentery, Liver, Gall, Bladder, Spleen and Kidneys were all ſound and without Fault.

3. In the Thorax or Cheſt we obſerv'd, That the Right Side of the Lungs adher'd to the Pleura, and the Left much more. From which upon Separation there iſſu'd forth a Quantity of purulent or frothy Serum. The upper Lobe on the left Side of the Lungs, and the Part of the Pleura next to it were inflam'd to a Degree of Mortification. And this we look upon as the immediate Cauſe of the King's Death. From the Ventricles of the Heart, and the greater Blood Veſſels ariſing out of them were taken ſeveral large, rough, fleſh-like Subſtances of the Kind call'd Polypus. The Heart itſelf was of the ſmaller Size, but firm and ſtrong.

A. D. 1702.

4. Upon laying back the Right Collar Bone we found it had been broken near the Shoulder, and well ſet. Some extravaſated Blood was lodg'd above and below the Fracture.

5. The Brain was perfectly ſound, and without any Sign of Diſtemper.

6. 'Tis very rare to find a Body with ſo little Blood as was ſeen in this. There being more found in his Lungs, than in all the Parts beſides put together.

Doctors Preſent.
Sir Richard Blackmore,
Sir Theodore Colladon,
Sir Thomas Hannes,
Dr. Harrel,
Dr. How,
Dr. Hutton,
Dr. Laurence,
Sir Thomas Mellington, Profeſſor Bidloo, &c.

Surgeons Preſent.
Mr. Bernard,
Mr. Cooper,
Mr. Gardner,
Mr. Ronjat, &c.

The Body interred.

The Royal Body having been embalmed, and for ſome Time lain in State at Kenſington, the Lords of the Privy Council adjuſted the Method of the Interment, and tho' it was not and indeed could not be as magnificent as bore Proportion with the Merit and Glory of the Deceaſed Monarch, yet it was perform'd with great Decency.

The Nobility, Privy-Couſellors, Judges, and both the Houſholds, that of the late King and the then Queen being aſſembl'd at Kenſington, with their Coaches, one Hundred and thirty in all. On Sunday, April 12th, the Proceſſion was as follows:

The Horſe Grenadiers with their Kettle Drums in Mourning beating a doleful March.

Eighty-ſix Mourning Coaches with two Horſes each, attended by Pages and Flambeaux.

The Yeomen of the Guard in Mourning.

Then the open Chariot with the Royal Corpſe. The Canopy over it ſupported by two Pillars. It was cover'd with Purple Cloth, and had at the End His Majeſty's Arms carv'd and gilt. It was drawn by Eight very fine White Horſes cover'd with the ſame Cloth down to the Feet.

Next came His Royal Highneſs, George, Prince of Denmark, the Chief Mourner in his Coach.

Then the Coaches of the Nobility, who were his Supporters, and their Aſſiſtants.

And laſt of all, the Horſe Guards with Trumpets ſounding low and diſmal.

The Proceſſion ſet out from Kenſington about Ten o'Clock at Night. At Eight, the Guns at the Tower began to fire Minute Sighs, and ſo continu'd till Three in the Morning. The Proceſſion came thro' Hide Park, St. James's Park, Arlington-Houſe-Gate, and ſo thro' Tuttle-ſtreet to the Weſt-Door of the Abbey-Church of Weſtminſter, whither

A.D. 1702. whither the Royal Corpſe was brought about One o'Clock, and being taken out of the open Chariot was carry'd by the Yeomen of the Guard.

The Pall was ſupported on the Right Side by the Dukes of Richmond, Ormond and Bolton. On the Left, by the Dukes of Southampton, Northumberland and Schomberg.

The Canopy was born up by ſix Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber on each Side.

The Gentlemen Penſioners receiv'd the Royal Body at the Abbey-Door, and bore it to Henry VII's Chappel.

Next after the Body came Clarencieux King at Arms, in the Abſence of Garter, having the Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod on his Right Hand, and another Gentleman Uſher on his Left.

Then came His Royal Highneſs, the Chief Mourner in a Long Cloak with the Star embroider'd upon it, and wearing the Collar of the Order, with the Duke of Somerſet Supporter to the Chief Mourner in a long Cloak, &c. on the Right Hand, and the Duke of Devonſhire, the other Supporter on the Left.

On the Right Hand.
The Earl of Kent.
The Earl of Huntington.
The Earl of Leiceſter.
The Earl of Denbigh.
Earl Rivers.
The Earl of Stamford.
The Earl of Sandwich.
The Earl of Radnor.

On the Left Hand.
The Earl of Derby.
The Earl of Dorſet.
The Earl of Northampton.
The Earl of Mancheſter.
The Earl of Peterborough.
The Earl of Kingſton.
The Earl of Angleſey.
The Earl of Marlborough.

Next came Henry, Earl of Romney, Groom of the Stole, and the other Lords of the Bed Chamber.

The Earl of Scarborough.
The Earl of Selkirk.
The Earl of Eſſex.
The Lord Lexington.
The Earl of Burlington.
The Duke of St. Alban's.
The Earl of Arran.
The Earl of Carliſle.
The Earl of Albemarle.
The Duke of Bedford.

After theſe came Count Cornelius d' Auverquerque, Maſter of the Robes. The Grooms of the Bed-Chamber, &c.

At the Entrance into the Church, the Dean and Prebendaries of Weſtminſter attended by the Choir in their Habits, all having Wax Tapers in their Hands receiv'd the Body with an Anthem, and falling into the Proceſſion juſt before the King at Arms, who carry'd the Crown and Cuſhion, they proceeded ſinging all the Way into Henry VII's Chappel, where the Royal Corpſe was depoſited upon Treſſels, and the Canopy held over it 'till the Service was read, by the Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, Dean of Weſtminſter. The Chief Mourner and his Supporters being ſeated on Chairs plac'd for them at the Head of the Body, and the Lords and others taking their Seats in the Stalls on both Sides the Chappel. Service being ended, the Royal Body was carry'd to the Vault preceded by the Lord Chamberlain, the chief Mourner, the Supporters and Aſſiſtants following. The King at Arms and Staff-Officers of his late Majeſty's Houſhold plac'd themſelves near the Vault into which, when Clarencieux had proclaim'd the Stile of the King then interred, the Officers threw their white Staffs: And thus ended this Ceremony, at which were more weeping Eyes and aking Hearts, than had ever been known in the like Number of Aſſiſtants on the like Occaſion, if any Occaſion could be like that of the Funeral of ſo good and ſo great a King, whoſe Character is drawn in all the Actions of his Life, and will be found in the Minds of the Readers long before they come to the End of it. There, and in the Minds of all good Britons, and all good Men to whom the Fame of his Illuſtrious Actions and Royal Virtues ſhall reach will his glorious Memory live and flouriſh till Names and Times ſhall be no more. A. D. 1702.

The King's Will.

His Majeſty made his Will ſoon after the Conqueſt of Namur in 1695 before he embark'd for England, in which to the great Diſappointment of the Houſe of Brandenburgh, he nominated his Couſin the Prince Friſon of Naſſau, Stadtholder of Frieſland, to be his Sole and Univerſal Heir, and appointed the States General of the United Provinces to be Executors. He gave by a Codicil the Lordſhip of Brevont, and 200000 Gilders as a Legacy to the Earl of Albemarle.

This Diſpoſition of the Succeſſion of Orange-Naſſau occaſion'd frequent Negociations between the Executors, the Prince of Frieſland and the King of Pruſſia, to which an End has been put lately, but not ſo good as the Friends to the Houſe of Naſſau deſir'd. 'Tis ſuppos'd, that King William's Deſign in making this Will was to recommend the Prince of Frieſeland to the States General, if ever they ſhould be diſpos'd to chooſe a Stadtholder, which high Office they might not think fit to conſer on ſo potent a Prince, as the King of Pruſſia, out of Jealouſy of Danger to their Liberty. in which the very Being of their Republick conſiſts.

I ſhould now epitomize this Hiſtory, and laying all the Facts cloſe together reduce them from Narration to Panegyrick, but as the Task is too difficult for a common Genius, ſo 'tis needleſs to thoſe that have read it.

The Behaviour of the Tories on the King's Death.

The Character of an Enemy is not to be ſuſpected if it is favourable, but to be depended on as an Homage to Truth. The French King ſaid of King William, Il eſt le plus Grand Homme de Cabinet du Monde, He is the greateſt Man for Counſel in the World. And as to his Heroiſm, the Prince of Conti who was an Eye-witneſs of it in Flanders ſaid it was Pity a Prince who deſerv'd the Crown he wore ſo well, ſhould have it diſputed with him.

We had Occaſion, ſpeaking of the Battle of the Boyne, to mention the Fine Saying of Buſſy de Rabuten, and the Verſes of the Abbot de Choiſy in Praiſe of King William, tho' they were French Papiſts and Enemies. How injurious, baſe and deteſtable were the Words and Actions of the Faction in England on his Majeſty's Death? Their Behaviour, which we are aſham'd to mention, was of a Piece with that in his Life-Time, without any Regard to Truth, Decency, Gratitude and Duty. They began immediately to inſult his Glorious Memory, and that with as much Brutality as Creatures who pretend not to be Brutes are capable of. 'Tis neceſſary when one ſpeaks in ſo ſtrong Terms to produce better Authority than one's own, and a French Hiſtorian writes, Les Torys outrez dans leurs Libelles, dans leur Converſations, & dans leurs Ballades lacherent la Bride a leur haine unjuſt & a leur aveugle Reſentiment. Le Chien eſt il mort? dit un Eccleſiaſtique de Diſtinction? &c.

A. D 1702.

De Cize, p. 221.

" The Furious Tories gave a Looſe to their " Fury in their Libels, their Diſcourſes, and " their Ballads to expreſs their unjuſt Hatred " and blind Reſentment againſt the Deceaſed " King. Is the Dog dead? ſaid a Dignified " Clergyman, Where now is Your God Al- " mighty, He is gone to the Devil, and " there ſhan't be a Presbyterian left in the " Kingdom. 'Tis ſo monſtrous and incredible, that I am oblig'd to repeat the Hiſtorian's own Words: " Donc votre Dieu tout- " puiſſant eſt alle au Diable, & ne reſtera pas " un Non Conformiſte dans le Nation, En- " tens tu Jean, dit un Gentilhomme qui " s'appelloit un des Champions de l'Egliſe, " Le Hollandois eſt mort, il eſt mort Hogan " Mogan, eſt mort, & nous avons a preſent " une Reine Proteſtante. On vit une Poem in- " titule, Sorrel, de la Couleur du Cheval qui " le Roy montoit, &c. Doſt thou hear " Jack, ſaid a Gentleman who call'd himſelf " a Champion for the Church, the Dutchman " is dead, Hogan Mogan is dead, and we " have now a Proteſtant Queen. There was " handed about a Poem entitl'd Sorrel, from " the Colour of the Horſe the King rode on when he had the Fall, which caus'd his Death, as the Faction fooliſhly fancy'd and reported. This Poem began thus:

A. D. 1702.

Scandalous Behaviour of the Tories.

Illuſtris Sonipes certe digniſſima Cælo,
Cui Leo, cui Taurus, cui datur Urſa locum.

Illuſtrious Steed, to whom a Place is given,
Above the Lion, Bull and Bear in Heaven.

" Les Gens de Haute Egliſe burent a la " Sante du petit Gentilhomme habille de Ve- " lours noir, c'eſt a dire a la Sante de la " Taupe, &c. High Church drank a Health to the little Gentleman dreſs'd in Velvet, that is, A Health to the Mole, which made the Hole into which the King's Horſe's Foot ſlipt when he fell. Such was the Spirit, the Humanity and Manners of theſe Men, and ſuch will they always be while they are inſpir'd and enflam'd by falſe Zeal and Bigotry, Pride, Avarice and Revenge, which are their Characteriſticks, as will farther appear at the Beginning and End of the next Reign.

THE

THE HISTORY OF ENGLAND, &c.

The REIGN of Queen ANNE.

CHAP. I.

From Queen Anne's Acceſſion to the Throne, to the Battel of Blenheim.

The Space of Three Years, Four Months, Five Days.

A.D.1702. IT is certain that all the late King's hearty Friends were under great Apprehenſions of ill Conſequences from Queen Anne's Acceſſion to the Throne, on Account of her known Attachment to that Intereſt, which, under the Diſguiſe of Church, had impos'd on many Minds, otherwiſe well-intention'd. And it was a moſt grateful Surprize to them, when after a continual gathering of Clouds over their Heads in the beginning of her Reign, a glorious Sunſhine broke forth and warm'd them, and chear'd them for ſeven Years together.

About five a Clock, Sunday-Evening, the Day the King dy'd, the Princeſs Anne of Denmark was proclaim'd Queen, with the uſual Solemnity, the Lords and Commons attending in their Coaches.

The Privy-Council being ſummon'd to meet at St. James's the ſame Evening, March the 8th, the new Queen made this Speech to them.

My LORDS,

Queen's Speech to the Council.

I Am extremely ſenſible of the general Misfortune to theſe Kingdoms, in the unſpeakable Loſs of the King; and of the great Weight and Burden it brings in particular to my ſelf; which nothing would encourage me to undergo, but the great Concern I have for the Preſervation of our Religion, and the Laws and Liberties of my Country: All theſe being as dear to me, as they can be to any Perſon whatſoever. You may depend upon it, that no Pains, no Diligence ſhall be wanting on my Part, to defend and Support them; to maintain the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, and the Government in Church and State, as it is by Law eſtabliſhed. I think it proper, upon this Occaſion of my firſt ſpeaking to you, to declare my own Opinion of the Importance of carrying on all the Preparations we are making to oppoſe the great Power of France. And I ſhall loſe no Time in giving our Allies all Aſſurances, that nothing ſhall be wanting on my Part, to purſue the Intereſt of England, together with theirs, for the Support of the Common Cauſe.

In order to theſe Ends, I ſhall be always ready to ask the Advice of my Council, and of both Houſes of Parliament; and deſirous to countenance and employ all thoſe who ſhall heartily concur and join with me, in ſupporting and maintaining the Preſent Eſtabliſhment, againſt all Enemies and Oppoſers whatſoever.

A.D.1702.

Which Declaration effectually quaſh'd a fooliſh Fancy and Report, that her Majeſty would not have aſcended the Throne, had her Father, the late King James, been living; grounded perhaps on her going into Mourning for him immediately

A.D.1702. after she became Queen; though it was a nice Distinction to decide whether that Mourning was for him, and not for King William, her Cousin, Brother, and Predecessor.

Many doubted whether his Royal Highness, Prince George of Denmark, should have a higher Title than that he had before, as was given to Philip, Prince of Spain, who marry'd Queen Mary I. and was call'd King of England; so the Lord Henry Darnley, Husband of Mary Queen of Scots, had the Title of King; as had her first Husband, Francis Dauphin of France: But such was the Moderation of Prince George, Queen Anne's Royal Consort, that he was content to continue with the same Title and Character as before, and was the first who did Homage to her Majesty, as Duke of Cumberland.

Prince George's Moderation.

Did Homage to the Queen.

Nothing could contribute more to the easing of the Minds of the People, than the seasonable Resolves of the two Houses of Parliament, to maintain her Majesty's Title, and the Act of Succession, against all Enemies; and to enable her to make good all Alliances which King William had concluded, and such others as she shall think fit to conclude, for reducing the Power of France, and also to enable her to pay the publick Debts.

Good Resolves of Parliament.

On Monday, the 9th of March, the two Secretaries of State for Scotland, the Earls of Seafield and Hindford, the Duke of Queensbury, Lord Privy-Seal, with such of the Scotch Privy-Councellors as were in London, attended her Majesty by Order at St. James's, where after having read to her the Claim of Right agreed upon by the Convention of Estates of that Kingdom, on King William and Queen Mary's coming to the Crown, they tender'd her Majesty the Coronation Oath, which she took; and admitting them to kiss her Hand, was pleased to enter upon the Administration of the Government of that Kingdom, according to the Act of Parliament. An Express was sent to the Privy-Council of Scotland, to act by their old Commission. It consisted of the Persons following:

Privy-Council of Scotland.

The Earl of Marchmont Lord High-Chancellor, President.
The Earl of Melvill.
The Earl of Cranford.
The Earl of Lauderdale.
The Earl of Buchan.
The Earl of Lowdon.
The Earl of Leven.
The Earl of Forfar.
The Viscount of Torbat.
The Viscount of Roseberry.
The Lord Montgomery.
The Lord Ross.
The Lord Polwarth.
The Lord Boyle.
The Lord President of the Session.
The Lord Advocate.
The Lord Treasurer Deput.
The Lord Justice Clerk.
The Lord Philiphaugh.
The Lord Halcraig.
The Lord Corsrig.
The Lord Rankeiler.
The Lord Phesdo.
The Laird of Grant.
The Laird of Stevenson.
The Laird of Meggins.
The Lord Provost of Edinburgh.
Mr. Francis Montgomery.

These Lords agreed to proclaim Her Royal Highness the Princess Anne of Denmark, Queen of Scotland. Then they all took the Oath of Allegiance, and sign'd the Assurance, except two, who scrupled it, because she was not as yet proclaim'd. The Earl of Marchmont, Lord Chancellor, at the same time administred the Oaths to Major-General Ramsay, Lord Lyon, and others. The Lords order'd the Queen's gracious Letter to them to be Printed. And recommended to the Lord Provost of Edinburgh, to cause all the Churches of that City to be hung with Mourning, on Account of his late Majesty's Death. The Earl of Marchmont had a Commission from the Queen to represent her in the General Assembly of that Church. A.D.1702.

The next Day after the King's Death, her Majesty went to the House of Peers, and sending for the Commons, spoke to both Houses as follows:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The Queen's first Speech to both Houses.

" I Cannot too much lament my own Unhappi-
" ness in succeeding to the Crown so imme-
" diately after the Loss of a King, who was the " great Support, not only of these Kingdoms, but
" of all Europe: And I am extremely sensible of
" the Weight and Difficulty it brings upon me.

" But the true Concern I have for our Religion,
" for the Laws and Liberties of England, for the " maintaining the Succession to the Crown in the " Protestant Line, and the Government in Church
" and State, as by Law establish'd, encourages me
" in this great Undertaking, which I promise my
" self will be successful, by the Blessing of GOD,
" and the Continuance of that Fidelity and Affe-
" ction, of which you have given me so full Assu-
" rance.

" The present Conjuncture of Affairs requires
" the greatest Application and Dispatch; and I am
" very glad to find in your several Addresses so una" nimous a Concurrence in the same Opinion with
" me, That too much cannot be done for the En-
" couragement of our Allies, to reduce the exor-
" bitant Power of France.

" I cannot but think it very necessary upon this " Occasion, to desire you to consider of proper
" Methods towards obtaining of an UNION be" tween England and Scotland, which has been so
" lately recommended to you, as a Matter that ve-
" ry nearly concerns the Peace and Security of
" both Kingdoms.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

" I need not put you in Mind that the Revenue
" for defraying the Expences of the Civil Govern" ment is expir'd.

" I rely entirely upon your Affections for the " supplying it, in such manner as shall be most " suitable for the Honour and Dignity of the " Crown.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" It shall be my constant Endeavour to make
" you the best Return for that Duty and Affection
" you have expressed to me, by a careful and dili-
" gent Administration for the Good of all my Sub" jects. And as I know my own Heart to be EN-
" TIRELY ENGLISH, I can very sincerely as-
" sure you, there is not any Thing you can ex-
" pect or desire from me, which I shall not be " ready to do for the Happiness and Prosperity of " England; and you shall always find Me a Strict
" and RELIGIOUS Observer of my Word.

Her Majesty's Speech gave great Satisfaction to all that heard it, which made a very numerous Auditory, who took particular Notice of her graceful and audible Pronunciation; but the Contents of it had not all the good Effects that could be expected from a Declaration so favourable to the Common Cause; which was a great Allay to the Grief of the Dutch, and all the Confederate Nations, for the Loss of their Chief.

The Earl of Marlborough, whom his late Majesty had appointed General of the Forces that were sent to the Assistance of the States-General, and Plenipotentiary with their High-Mightinesses, was appointed by the Queen to be Captain-General of the Land Forces in England, and had the most

Noble

A.D.1702. Lords diſm ſs'd the Privy-Council.

Noble Order of the Garter conferr'd on him, together with the Duke of Bedford. Three or four Days after the King's Death, the Duke of Leeds, Sir Charles Hedges, and the Biſhop of London, were ſworn of the Privy-Council; the Lord Somers, and the Lord Halliſax were diſmiſs'd. His Royal Highneſs Prince George of Denmark was made Generaliſſimo of all her Majeſty's Forces by Sea and Land; Sir George Rook, Vice-Admiral of England; and George Churchill, Eſq; Vice-Admiral of the Red, in the Room of Admiral Aylmer.

It will be neceſſary to mention ſome more Alterations at this Time, to give our Readers an Idea of the Temper of it, which will be explain'd by ſuch Facts.

The Queen favours the Tories,

The Earl of Scarſdale, and the Lord Viſcount Weymouth, who had ſome time forborn Attendance at Court, had now a gracious Reception, and kiſs'd her Majeſty's Hand; as did alſo Sir William Booth, a Sea Officer in the late King James's Service. But the Earl of Clarendon, having the Honour to be the Queen's Unkle, expected greater Marks of Favour and Diſtinction, notwithſtanding he had not conform'd to the Laws of the Conſtitution, by taking the Oaths to the Government. He came to Court the next Day after the King's Death, and deſir'd Admittance to her Majeſty; but ſhe ſent him word he ſhould firſt qualify himſelf, and then ſhe would be very glad to ſee him. Though he had done enough at the Revolution, by joining with, and acting for the Prince of Orange, againſt his Brother-in-Law King James; yet ſuch was the Solidity of this Nobleman's Judgment, that he refus'd to make a legal Submiſſion to King William, and even to Queen Anne, and continu'd in it to his Death. His Brother the Earl of Rocheſter was ſworn of the Privy-Council, as was alſo Sidney Lord Godolphin, who was thought to be as much in the High-Church Intereſt, as either of thoſe two Earls. The Earl of Malborough had never given that Party reaſon to think otherwiſe of him; but the Lord Malborough, and the Lord Godolphin ſoon finding it would be impoſſible for them to purſue the glorious Schemes form'd by King William, for reducing the Power of France, if Men were taken into Employment, in whom the Allies had no Confidence; theſe two Lords abated of their former Rigor in Spirituals, and reconcil'd themſelves gradually to the Party that were in the true Intereſt of England; hearty Enemies to French Tyranny, and Lovers and Aſſerters of Liberty. The French Hiſtorian I have ſo often quoted, ſays, Les Torys s'accomodoient mieux de la Paix que de la Guerre. The Tories find their Account better in Peace than in War: That Faction are well appriz'd of the little Credit they have abroad. All Foreigners look upon them as Friends to France, of which they gave ſubſtantial Proofs in the Reign of King Charles and King James II, and are always jealous of their Conduct, whenever it is in Uſe. This neceſſarily excited all that wiſh'd well to the common Cauſe, to deſire that the proper Inſtruments for the Service of it might be employ'd; and this put the Earl of Marlborough and the Lord Godolphin on another way of thinking.

will not ſee the Earl of Clarendon.

The Earl of Marlborough and Lord Godolphin reconcil'd to the Whigs.

Tories not truſted by the Allies.

The Lord Lucas being remov'd from his Office of Conſtable of the Tower, it was given to the Earl of Abingdon. That of Comptroller of the Houſhold was taken from the Lord Wharton, and given to Sir Edward Seymour; Sir John Leviſon Gower was made Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter; the Earl of Jerſey had the white Staff given him, as Lord Chamberlain of the Houſhold; John How, Eſq; was made Paymaſter of the Guards and Garriſons, and Privy-Counſellor; Sir Benjamin Bathurſt, Cofferer of the Houſhold; the Marquis of Normanby was declar'd Lord Privy-Seal; the Earl of Nottingham and Sir Charles Hedges, Secretaries of State, as they had been in King William's Reign; Sir Bevil Greenvile was appointed Governor of Barbadoes; Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave, a Teller of the Exchequer and Privy-Counſellor; Dr. Sprat, Biſhop of Rocheſter, was made Lord Almoner, in the Room of Dr. Lloyd, Biſhop of Worceſter; Mr. Finch had the Deanery of York given him; the Lord Godolphin was made Lord High-Treaſurer of England; and having been Sworn into that Office, in the Exchequer Court, on Monday May 11, he was accompanied into the Treaſury by 30 Peers of England; John Granville, Eſq; was appointed Lieutenant-General of the Ordnance; George Clarke, Eſq; Advocate-General; the Earl of Northampton was ſworn of the Privy-Council; Simon Harcourt, Eſq; was made Sollicitor-General; the Lord Dartmouth and the Lord Weymouth were put into the Commiſſion of Trade, in the Room of the Earl of Stamford and the Lord Lexington; the Lord Craven was made Lord Lieutenant of Berkſhire; two Judges, Mr. Juſtice Turton and Mr. Baron Hatſell, were ſuperſeded; Matthew Prior, and Robert Cecil, Eſqs; were made Commiſſioners of Trade; Colonel Farington, Henry Harris, Eſq; and James Iſaacſon, Eſq; put out of the Commiſſion for Stamps, and Mr. Pooly added to it. The Lord Cheney was appointed Lord Lieutenant of Buckinghamſhire; Robert Price, Eſq; was made one of the Barons of the Exchequer; the Earl of Winchelſea had the Government of Dover Caſtle given him; the Earl of Dyſart was appointed Lord Lieutenant of the County of Suffolk; and the Earl of Denbigh Lord Lientenant of the County of Leiceſter; the Lord Guilford Lord Lieutenant of the County of Eſſex; Edward Harley, Eſq; Auditor of the Impreſt; Sir William Whitlock, John Coniers, Eſq; and William Ettrick, Eſq; the Queen's Council; Sir Thomas Powis was made a Serjeant at Law, and one of the Queen's Serjeants; Chriſtopher Muſgrave, Eſq; Clerk of the Ordnance; Henry Graham, Eſq; Knight of the Shire for Weſtmorland, was appointed one of the Gentlemen of the Bedchamber to his Royal Highneſs; John Tucker, Eſq; Keeper of the State Papers, in the Room of Mr. Chamberlain; John Brewer, Eſq; Regiſter of the Cinque Ports; Dr. Hans was ſworn one of her Majeſty's Phyſicians. The Lieutenancy of the City of London being alter'd, they elected theſe ſix Colonels.

A.D.1702.

Whigs removed.

Sir William Pritchard of the White Regiment.
Sir Francis Child the Orange.
Sir Samuel Daſhwood the Yellow.
Sir Charles Duncomb the Green.
Sir Thomas Cook the Blue.
Sir John Fleet the Red.

Employed at Court.

It will be ſeen by this View of the Promotions, that thoſe Gentlemen who were loudeſt in the Debate about Places, and for Non-admiſſion of thoſe that were in them to be Members of Parliament, when there was no great likelihood of their being courted to accept them; did now very readily embrace the Opportunity to get into them, without thinking of being excluded the Parliament. Mr. John How had more than once declar'd, he for his Part would never be drawn off from his Country Party by the Temptation of a Place and when he was upbraided with acting contrary, 'twas reported he ſhould ſay he had kept his Word, for he had not a Place; that of Paymaſter General being divided between him and Mr. Fox. A poor Quib-

Mr. John How accepts of a Place.

ble

*A.D.*1702. P. 620.

ble for ſo renown'd a Patriot. It is certain there is a great deal of Truth in what Dr. Calamy writes in his Abrigment. "King William was no ſooner "dead, than the Diſſenters felt the Effects of the "Change. They that bore them ill will before, "and were ready to reflect upon them on all Occa- "ſions, now openly triumph'd; and though their "Hands were tied before, ſeem'd now to conclude "they ſhould have full Liberty to deal with them "as they pleas'd, and talked of nothing leſs than "ſuppreſſing them. This was common in the "City, and in ſeveral Parts of the Country. "They talked of pulling down their Meeting "Houſes, as Places not fit to be ſuffered; and in "one Town, Newcaſtle Under-Line, a Borough "for which Sir John Leviſon Gower was one of "the Repreſentatives, they actually went to work "as ſoon as ever the Tidings of the King's Death "reached them. Several Sermons were preached, "and Pamphlets diſperſed to blacken them as much "as was poſſible; and ſuch a violent Temper diſ- "covered itſelf on a ſudden, and ſuch an Inclina- "tion to Heat and Fury, as plainly ſhewed the "Parties affected to have been kept under an unna- "tural ſort of Reſtraint. Some that had taken the "Oaths to King William, ſhewed they did not "love him by aſperſing his Memory, &c. But "her Majeſty openly declaring for the ſame Mea- "ſures as had been purſued in the laſt Reign, and "the Houſe of Peers appearing zealous for the "Memory of King William, it was a Curb and "a Check to them."

High-Church begins to pull down Meeting-Houſes.

It muſt be confeſt, that though the Queen's falling in ſo chearfully with her Royal Predeceſſor's Meaſures, as ſhe expreſſed herſelf in her Speeches to the Privy-Council and Parliament, help'd very much to ſupport all good Britons under ſo great a Loſs and Affliction, as the King's Death was to them; yet her Majeſty's ſaying in that to the two Houſes of Parliament, her Heart was entirely Engliſh, ſeeming to be a Reflection on the late King for being a Foreigner, it occaſioned much Speculation and Diſcourſe, and not a little Diſcontent. Every one knew that her Majeſty's Speeches were drawn up by thoſe of her Counſellors in whom ſhe moſt confided; and it was Matter of Concern that any of them ſhould preſume ſo much on the Influence they had over her, as to put Words into her Royal Mouth ſo unworthy of King William's Glorious Memory, and ſo inconſiſtent with what ſhe was pleaſed to ſay in her Letter to the Parliament of Scotland two Month's after; It pleaſed God to make the late King the great Inſtrument of delivering our People from Popery and Arbitrary Power, and of reſtoring to them their ancient Rights and Privileges; and through the ſame Divine Grace we ſhall in the whole Courſe of our Reign aim at nothing more than the preſerving to them theſe Advantages. In what then was her Majeſty's Heart more entirely Engliſh than King William's? This Saying, to uſe the Words of a contemporary Hiſtorian, gave great Diſguſt to many good Proteſtants, that always looked upon him as the Saviour of their Religion and Country.

Queen ſays her Heart was entirely Engliſh.

The Expreſſion gives Offence.

The Addreſſes of the Lords and Commons were ſuited to her Majeſty's Speech; and her Anſwer to the Commons was a Return of her hearty Thanks for the kind Aſſurances they had given her; and that they could not be any way more agreeably confirm'd to her, than by their giving Diſpatch to all the Preparations for the Publick Service and the Support of the Allies. In Anſwer to the Lords Addreſs, ſhe told them, her Endeavours ſhould be always ſincere to ſupport the true Intereſt of England, and the common Cauſe.

The Parliament Addreſſes, and the Queen's Anſwer.

Theſe Addreſſes were followed by others from all Parts of the Kingdom. That from the Diſſenters in and about London was the more remarkable, becauſe all the Denominations of them, except Quakers, join'd in it. It was preſented by Dr. Daniel Williams; is ſhort and pithy. *A.D.*1702.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

The Diſſenters Addreſs.

WE your Majeſty's moſt loyal and dutiful Subjects, the Proteſtant Diſſenting Miniſters in and about the City of London, crave leave to repreſent the deep Senſe we have of the unſpeakable Loſs we and all your Majeſty's good Subjects ſuffer by the Death of our late glorious Monarch, William the Third.

But herein we are moſt ſenſibly and effectually relieved, by your Majeſty's moſt happy and peaceable Acceſſion to theſe Crowns; whoſe rightful and undoubted Title we acknowledge with the greateſt Sincerity; and whoſe conſtant Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion is ſo juſtly renowned; for all which, with unfeigned Joy, we bleſs and adore the Divine Goodneſs. We farther beg leave to aſſure your Majeſty of our moſt dutiful Affection, and inviolable Fidelity to your Royal Perſon and Government; not doubting of our Share in the many Bleſſings of your Majeſty's wiſe and happy Reign, which we heartily pray may be long over us.

The Queen's Anſwer.

Her Majeſty graciouſly thanked them for their Addreſs, aſſured them of her Protection, and that for her Part, ſhe would do nothing that might forfeit her Intereſt in their Affections: Which Words were remember'd, when afterwards the Royal Aſſent was given to the Schiſm and Occaſional Bills.

While theſe Addreſſes were preparing in England, her Majeſty wrote a Letter to the States General, wherein ſhe expreſs'd her grateful Reſpect for the Memory of King William.

High and Mighty Lords, our very good Friends, Allies and Confederates.

Her Letter to the States General.

"'TIS not without a ſenſible Grief, that we "find ourſelves obliged to notify to you the "afflicting News of the Death of the moſt High "and moſt Mighty Prince, William the Third, "King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, "our deareſt Brother of glorious Memory. On "Monday laſt he was attack'd with a Fever, which "increaſed ſo much the Days following, that "notwithſtanding all poſſible Remedies, he died on "Sunday about Eight a Clock in the Morning. "'Tis certainly a very great Loſs to all Europe, "and particularly to your State; the Intereſt of "which he always maintain'd with ſo much "Valour, Prudence, Zeal and Conduct. And "ſince it hath pleaſed God that we ſhould ſucceed "him upon the Throne of theſe Kingdoms, we "ſhall likewiſe ſucceed him in his Inclinations to "entertain conſtant Union and Friendſhip with "your Lordſhips, and to maintain all the Alliances "which have been made with your State, by our "ſaid moſt dear Brother and our other Predeceſſors; "and alſo to concur with you in all ſuch Meaſures "as muſt be neceſſary to preſerve the common "Liberty of Europe, and to reduce the Power of "France within due Bounds. This is what we "would pray you to reſt aſſured of; and that we "ſhall always look upon the Intereſt of England, "and that of your State, to be inſeperable, as be- "ing united by ſuch Ties that cannot be broke "without the greateſt Prejudice to both Nations. "So we conclude, praying God, High and Mighty "Lords, our very good Friends, Allies and Confe-

"derates,

A.D.1702. " derates, to take you into his Holy and Worthy " Protection.

Given at Our Court at St. James's, the Tenth Day of March, 1701, and of our Reign the Firſt.

Your very good Friend,

ANNE R.

Aud Underneath, Ja. Vernon.

It will be proper to compare the Saying of the Intereſt of England and Holland being inſeparable, with the Conduct of the Biſhop of Briſtol, and the Earl of Strafford, her Majeſties Plenipotentiaries at the Treaty of Utrecht ten Years after.

Dutch Ambaſſadors Audience.

Their High Mightineſſes gave immediate Orders to Monſieur Dyckvelt and Monſieur Odyck, to go for England to Condole the late King's Death, to Congratulate her Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne, and confer with her Miniſters about the Operations of the War; and they had Audience of the Queen ten Days after his late Majeſties Deceaſe. This prov'd to be Monſieur Dyckvelt's laſt Ambaſſy, for he was taken ill here, and died in about a Month.

Earl of Marlborough's Embaſſy to Holland.

Beſides this Letter, her Majeſty directed the Earl of Marlborough, who was diſpatched to Holland on this Occaſion, to give the like verbal Aſſurances to their High Mightineſſes. His Excellency arrived at the Hague on the 5th of April, before the Dutch Miniſter ſet out for England, and was conducted to the Aſſembly of the States General, by Deputies from their Lordſhips, as her Majeſty's Ambaſſador Extraordinary and Plenepotentiary, and Captain General of her Troops. My Lord Ambaſſador and the States Deputies rode in the firſt Coach of State with ſix Horſes, attended by fifty other Coaches, with ſix, four, and two a-piece. His Excellency coming into the Aſſembly, was ſeated in an arm'd Chair over-againſt the Heer Dyckvelt, Preſident, and having delivered his Credentials, they were read by the Grand Penſionary Fagel. He afterwards made his Speech in French, to notify his Majeſty's Death, the Queen's Succeſſion, and her Majeſty's Reſolutions, as in the Letter above-mentioned. Monſieur Dyckvelt anſwer'd his Excellency's Speech in the ſame Language, and pathetically explain'd their High Mightineſſes Sentiments, as to the Greatneſs of their Loſs, and their Satisfaction in her Majeſty's Reſolutions to purſue the late King's intended Meaſures.

The Queen's Letter, and the Advices from England, compos'd Men's Minds very much in Holland; but the News of the King's Death was receiv'd in France with ſuch Joy and Exultation, that the Court and People could hardly contain themſelves, without breaking out into the moſt furious Tranſports; as was done at Rome to ſuch a Degree of Extravagance, that Cardinal Grimani, the Imperial Miniſter complain'd of it to the Pope as an Affront to his Maſter the Emperor, who was the deceaſed King's Friend, Ally and Confederate. But little notice was taken of it. They were ſo afraid in France that the News would not prove true, that the Perſon who brought it firſt to Calais was ſeiz'd by the Governor's Order, and kept in Priſon till it was confirm'd. Upon which the French King permitted the Prince of Conti to take immediate Poſſeſſion of the Principality of Orange, and King William's Domains in Burgundy and Franche Comte, under pretence of a Title deriv'd to him from the Houſe of Longueville. Inſtructions were alſo ſent from France to the Sieur de Barre, the Count d'Avaux, Secretary ſtill in Holland, to renew Negotiations with the States-General, in hopes of ſeparating them from their Allies; but they took the wrongeſt Method imaginable to ſucceed in it; and indeed the Counſels of France, from the breaking of the Partition Treaty, are wild and unaccountable, ſeeming to be rather the Effects of Confuſion and Deſpair, than the Reſult of ſound Reaſon and good Policy. The Memorial the French Agent preſented to the States, being long, and not very entertaining, I ſhall content my ſelf with one Paſſage in it; wherein he intimates, That by the Death of King William they were to recover their time of Liberty, and be no longer under Violence and Conſtraint: For now their Republick was reſtored to itſelf, and their own Spirit was to govern, and their own Intereſt alone to be conſulted. This ſhocking Reflection on the Memory of a Prince, for the Loſs of whom their grateful Hearts were bleeding, was the ſureſt Way the French Miniſter could take to ſet the States againſt the Thing that was propos'd to them; accordingly in their Anſwer they ſhew'd how ill they took that vile Inſinuation, and what a profound Veneration they had for the Glorious Memory of their late Friend and Supporter, in theſe Words. Their High and Mighty Lordſhips are very much ſurprized to ſee that this whole Memorial ſeems founded upon this; That they are now more at Liberty to take ſuch Reſolutions as they think expedient than formerly. Doubtleſs this has Reference to the Death of his Majeſty the late King of Great-Britain, of Immortal Memory. But herein the ſaid Sieur Reſident has extremely deceived himſelf, for want of underſtanding the Conſtitution of their Government. That he ought to know, that their High and Mighty Lordſhips have heretofore had as much Liberty as at preſent, to debate and to take all ſuch Reſolutions as they judg'd neceſſary and uſeful for the Good and Preſervation of their State. It is true they cannot enough deplore their Misfortune, to ſee themſelves deprived of the Direction and Conduct of a Prince, whoſe Wiſdom, Moderation and Valour, will be fam'd as long as the World endures. A Prince, whoſe heroick Actions, and whoſe Merits from this Republick will never be forgot: And, in a word, whoſe Death is lamented in this Country by all Perſons whatſoever, from the Meaneſt to the Higheſt. That the Councils of his ſaid Majeſty having never had any other Aim both in Deed and in Word, than the Preſervation of their Liberty and Religion, and their High and Mighty Lordſhips being entirely convinced of this Truth, as having found the Benefit thereof; they are reſolved to follow the ſame Principles, and not to depart from the Alliances contracted during the Life of his ſaid Majeſty; but to perſiſt in the Meaſures taken purſuant to thoſe Alliances, and in ſhort, to make uſe at all times of the Means God hath put into their Hands for maintaining the Liberty of Europe.

Inſolent Memorials of the French in Holland.

Reſented by the States.

Count Joel, the Imperial Ambaſſador at the Hague, having had the French Memorial communicated to him, delivered one of his own to the States, wherein among other Remarks on the Sieur de Barres, he takes notice of that reproachful Flattery, that their Lordſhips were now more Maſters of themſelves, than they were fourteen Days ago; which is contrary to the Opinion that all Men have of their great Wiſdom, and is no way conſiſtent with the univerſal Grief over all the Provinces, for the fatal Alterations which the French Memorial points at. Biſhop Kennet obſerves in his Hiſtory, The little Tools of France were likewiſe working in England to depreciate the Memory of the late King, by Libels and Verſes, and Healths, ſo very rude and impudent, that they ſhew'd nothing but ſorry Wit and implacable

A.D.1702. Malice. But the deepeſt Fetch of Scandal was a confident Story invented by them, That the King had form'd a Plot to exclude her preſent Majeſty, &c. To know who theſe little French Tools were, we muſt have Recourſe to my French Hiſtory, where we read of the Gens de la Haute Egliſe, of High-Church, what is ſaid of the Libels, and Verſes, and Healths juſt mentioned, and then is added, En fin Leur Reſentment contre Guillaume alla juſqu'a Extravagance, &c. The Reſentment of High Church againſt King William was carried to Extravagance. "To render his Name and Miniſters odious to the "Queen, they reported that the King had formed "a Deſign to exclude the Princeſs of Denmark "from the Succeſſion to the Crown, and that ſe-"veral Papers about it were found in his Cloſet." A formal Story was invented and ſpread, that King James before his Death wrote his Daughter, the Princeſs of Denmark, a Letter, wherein he charged her not to accept of the Crown upon the Death of King William, but make way for the Succeſſion of his pretended Son. And that King William having Notice of this Letter, deſir'd to ſee it; which ſhe refuſing, he concerted Meaſures to put her by the Succeſſion. "This Sham, ſays Biſhop Kennet, "was ſo induſtriouſly obtruded upon the People, "that the Houſe of Lords thought themſelves "concern'd to make Enquiry into this Matter, "and to vindicate the Honour of their late Royal "Sovereign, which they did in this noble Reſolu-"tion, May the 5th.

The Lords vindicate King William againſt a falſe Report of the Tories.

"Whereas their Lordſhips have been inform'd "that there has been a Report ſpread abroad, that "among the late King's Papers, ſome Paper, or "Papers, have been found, tending to the Preju-"dice of her preſent Majeſty, or her Succeſſion to "the Crown: And whereas the Lord Preſident, "Earl of Pembroke, the Lord Steward, Duke of "Devonſhire, the Lord Chamberlain, Earl of "Jerſey, the Earl of Marlborough, and the Earl "of Albemarle who were the Perſons appointed "by her Majeſty to Inſpect the ſaid Papers, have, "at the Deſire of the Houſe, ſeverally declar'd, "that amongſt the late King's Papers they did "not ſee, or find any Paper, or Papers, in "the leaſt tending to the Prejudice of her Ma-"jeſty's Succeſſion to the Crown, or to her "Prejudice in any Reſpect whatſoever, or which "might give any Ground or Colour for ſuch Re-"port. It is thereupon Reſolved, by the Lords "Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament aſſem-"bled, that the ſaid Report is GROUNDLESS, "FALSE, VILLANOUS, and SCANDA-"LOUS, to the Diſhonour of the late King's Me-"mory, and highly tending to the Diſſervice of "her preſent Majeſty. It is order'd by the Lords "Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament aſſem-"bled, that the Matter of Fact aforeſaid, and the "Reſolutions of this Houſe thereupon, be laid be-"fore her Majeſty, by his Grace the Duke of "Bolton, the Earl Marſhal, Earl of Carliſle, the "Earl of Radnor, the Earl of Stamford, the Earl "of Scarborough, and the Lord Ferrers: And "that they do humbly deſire her Majeſty, from "this Houſe, that her Majeſty will give Orders to "Mr. Attorney-General, to proſecute with the "utmoſt Severity of the Law, the Authors, or "Publiſhers of the above-mention'd, or ſuch like "ſcandalous Reports.

In Purſuance of this Reſolution and Proceeding, the Duke of Bolton acquainted the Houſe that he, and the other Lords, had attended her Majeſty, and had preſented their Lordſhips Reſolution. To which her Majeſty was pleas'd to ſay in Anſwer:

I am very ready to do any Thing of this Kind; I will give Directions to Mr. Attorney-General, effectually to proſecute the Authors and Publiſhers of ſuch falſe Reports. A.D.1702.

But neither the Secretaries of State, nor Sir Edward Northey, the Attorney-General, were very forward in Matters which were not agreeable to the Party ſpoken of by the French Hiſtorian, and Biſhop Kennet, as Tools of France; who vilify'd the late King's Memory by Libels, Verſes, &c. as will appear by their Backwardneſs in the Buſineſs of Dr. Drake; a Phyſician of ſmall Practice, but of ſome Learning and Parts; which, together with the Spirit of High-Church, recommended him to the Heads of that Party; particularly to the Duke of Buckingham, who, as he told me himſelf, gave him Dinners, but no Money. He now wrote and publiſh'd a Book, entitled, The Hiſtory of the laſt Parliament, began at Weſtminſter the 10*th Day of* February, in the 12*th Year of King* William, A. D. 1700. In the Preface to which, was an inſolent Paſſage, that deſerv'd the ſtricteſt Animadverſions, and the ſevereſt Puniſhment. It was complain'd of to the Lords, and the Paſſage read in their Houſe, as follows: And perhaps there was a third Thing in Proſpect, of deeper Reach than all theſe; which was, that ſhould it have pleas'd God, for our Sins, to have ſnatch'd from us the King on a ſudden, by Chance of War, or other fatal Accident, during the Tumult of Arms Abroad, and the Civil Diſorders they had rais'd amongſt us at Home, and a numerous, corrupt, licentious Party throughout the Nation, from which the Houſe of Commons were ſometimes not free, they might entertain Hopes, from the Advantage of being at the Helm, and the Aſſiſtance of their Rabble, to have put in Practice their own Schemes, and to have given us a new Model of Government of their own Projection; and ſo to have procur'd to themſelves a laſting Impunity, and to have mounted their own Beaſt, the Rabble, and driven the ſober Part of the Nation like Cattle before them.

Dr. Drake abuſes the Friends to the Conſtitution.

For as this Party, made up moſtly of Perſons abandon'd to an Intemperance of Tongue and Life, had by falſe Pretences of Zeal for the Cauſe of Liberty, begun to diſtinguiſh themſelves by a new Denomination, that of Old Whigs, ſo did they now, in Defiance of Truth and Modeſty, ſtile themſelves alſo the Sober Party, as the old Puritans were ſtil'd. Drake again: That this is no Conjecture, will readily appear to any conſidering Perſon, from the Treatment her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Denmark, the Heireſs apparent to the Crown, met with all along from them and all their Party. They were not contented to ſhew her a conſtant Neglect and Slight themſelves, but this whole Party were inſtructed, not only to treat her with Diſreſpect, but Spight. They were buſy to traduce her with falſe and ſcandalous Aſperſions; and ſo far they carry'd the Affront, as to make her, at one Time, almoſt the common Subject of the Tittle-Tattle of almoſt every Coffee-Houſe and Drawing-Room; which they promoted with as wuch Zeal, Application and Venom, as if a Bill of Excluſion had then been on the Anvil, and theſe were the introductory Ceremonies.

The Paſſage being thus read, the Lords order'd, That Francis Coggan, Robert Gibſon, and Thomas Hodgſon, the Bookſellers for whom the Book was Printed, ſhould attend the Houſe on the Saturday following at eleven a Clock. But their Lordſhips being in the mean Time inform'd that Dr. Drake own'd himſelf to be the Author of the Book, and that he deſir'd he might be appointed to attend at the ſame Time, it was order'd, that he ſhould attend accordingly. And the Parties then giving their Attendance, their Lordſhips took the Paſſage before

A.D.1702. before complain'd of, into Conſideration. After reading of which, Dr. Drake was call'd in, and the Lord Keeper ask'd him what he had to ſay concerning the ſaid Book; and the Book and the ſaid Paragraph being ſhew'd him, he own'd he writ both, and thought he had juſt Reaſon to write it; for he had been ſpirited by Hopes and Aſſurances of Protection, let the Iſſue in that Houſe be what it would, or elſe he deceived himſelf and me; who a little while after this Affair came in Queſtion, met him coming out of Buckingham Houſe in the Park, and falling into Diſcourſe upon it, I found he had been under no Apprehenſion of any ill Conſequences of the Proceedings againſt him. On the contrary, he inſiſted on the Truth of his Conjectures, which he ſaid he could have reduc'd to Certainty, had it been as ſafe to have done it when he wrote the Book, as it might be then. I objected to him, that his pretended Model of Government was impracticable; and among other Things, urg'd the Biſhops Votes, whoſe Zeal for the eſtabliſh'd Church and Monarchy, would never ſuffer them to give Ear to any Whiſper of Change in the preſent Conſtitution. Upon which he ſhook his Head, and telling me, I knew nothing of the Matter: He added with a Firm Countenance, They had made their Bargain; they were to have been made Temporal Baronets, and to have had the Revenue of their Biſhopricks in Fee to them and their Heirs. And believe me, ſays he, it was certainly agreed upon. This Scheme, as monſtrous as it is, and more incredible than the Enchantments of Romances, did he ſeem to give as much Credit to, as if he had been Witneſs to the Agreement; and I doubted not, it had been the Subject of the Converſation at Buckingham Houſe, more than once. A Man under ſuch a Deception, might very well tell the Lords, he had Reaſon to write ſuch a Book, and ſuch a Paragraph, becauſe, as he explain'd himſelf, he had heard her Royal Highneſs talk'd of diſreſpectfully in almoſt every Coffee-Houſe. Then he withdrew, and after ſome Debate, was called in again, and the Lord Keeper told him, the Houſe was not ſatisfy'd with what he had ſaid, but thought he trifled, and requir'd him to acquaint the Houſe with the Grounds of his writing that Paragraph. He anſwer'd, He found it mention'd in divers anonymous Pamphlets publiſh'd at that Time, and hop'd it was no Hurt to Anſwer thoſe Pamphlets, and deſired Time to recollect what thoſe Pamphlets were. After which he withdrew, and being call'd in again, was ask'd theſe Queſtions.

Dr. Drake's Diſcourſe with the Author about the Biſhops.

He examin'd by the Lords.

If he could charge any Perſon, or Perſons, in the Kingdom, with the Matters aſſerted by him in that Paragraph?

He anſwer'd; "He did not know any ſuch "Perſon."

Then he was ask'd, Whether he had heard any other Perſon ſay, that they could charge any Perſon with the Matters contain'd in that Paragraph?

He ſaid, "He did not know of any ſuch Per-"ſon."

It being demanded of him, If he had any other Grounds beſides the Pamphlets; and what theſe Pamphlets were?

He anſwer'd, "He had no other Grounds be-"ſides the Pamphlets; and nam'd the ſeveral "Pamphlets following, as his Reaſon for writing "the ſaid Paragraph:" The two Legion Letters; the Black Liſt; the Jura Populi Anglicani; Toland's Reaſons for inviting over the Princeſs of Hanover. And being ask'd, If in any one of theſe Pamphlets, there was any thing ſaid about ſetting aſide the preſent Queen? He reply'd, "He did not "remember there was." He then withdrew, and a ſhort Debate enſu'd. After which the Queſtion being put, Whether the Paragraph ſhould be Cenſur'd, it was Reſolv'd in the Affirmative: That in the Preface of the Book, Entitled, The Hiſtory of the laſt Parliament, &c. There were ſeveral Expreſſions which were GROUNDLESS, FALSE and SCANDALOUS, tending to create Jealouſies in her Majeſty of her People, aad to cauſe great Miſunderſtandings, Fears and Diſputes among the Queen's Subjects, and to diſturb the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom. Their Lordſhips then order'd her Majeſty's Attorney-General forthwith effectually to proſecute the ſaid Dr. Drake, for having writ the ſaid Paragraph. But 'tis certain the Doctor was very eaſy under the Proſecution, and ſo far from any Diſcouragement upon that Account, that either he himſelf, or ſome other Author in Concert with him, publiſh'd a very long and inſolent Pamphlet in Vindication of the Paragraph; Entitled, Plain Proof of ſome late Deſigns againſt our preſent Conſtitution and Government, containing Eighty eight Pages Octavo: Wherein the Houſe of Lords are no more ſpar'd than the Memory of King William, and the Principles of the Revolution, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, though the Attack upon that is by a Side-Wind. Let us ſee a Paſſage or two in it, and ſhew how ill affected that Party has always been to the Royal Houſe of Hanover. For if an invidious Reflection on their Title to the Crown had not been grateful to them, the Author would not have gone ſo far out of the way for it. He charges a Writer, whom he pretends to Anſwer, With the impudent Aſſertion, as he terms it, That the Queen's Title was only grounded on two Acts of Parliament. For ſuch was the Stupidity of the Faction, that they ſunk her Majeſty's Parliamentary Right, which theſe Kingdoms, and all Europe, but her Enemies, had Recogniz'd, to aſſert her Hereditary Right; which High-Church ever did, and ever will, lodge only in the Pretender; and they never complimented Queen Anne upon it, but out of Hatred to King William, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion. By this impudent Aſſertion, ſays the Anſwerer, he endeavours to deſtroy her Majeſty's Right by Inheritance, and to make her Title meerly Precarious, and ſubject to the Will and Pleaſure of the People, and ſo to lay it on a Level with the Title of the Houſe of Hanover, by giving the ſame Foundation to both. What he adds is ſtill more abſurd and ridiculous. It would be impertinent to undertake a needleſs Defence of her Majeſty's Hereditary Right; and therefore I ſhall only obſerve here, that the Acts of Parliament, ſo far as they concern her Majeſty, are no more than a bare Recognition of her Right, but are the ſole Foundation of the Claim of the Houſe of Hanover. And in the ſame villanous Libel, did he with Impnnity belye his late Majeſty King William; who ſays he, was wrought upon ſo far, as to deſcend to Cloſeting, and other Arts, below the Majeſty of a King, and of the laſt ill Conſequence to the Liberties of the People.

A.D.1702.

Vote againſt Dr. Drake's Book.

Pag. 84. High-Church Enemies to the Houſe of Hanover,

And King William.

Now it will appear why I preſented the Reader with the Groupe of Figures brought upon the Stage in the beginning of this Reign; and he will not be ſurpriz'd to find the firſt Year of it diſturb'd with an Occaſional Bill, to perſecute and oppreſs our Proteſtant Brethren the Diſſenters; contrary as well to her Majeſty's Intereſt, as to her Royal Promiſe to preſerve the Toleration as ſhe found it; and it could not be preſerv'd, if any Article of it was abridg'd; and, without Doubt, contrary to her Majeſty's gracious Inclinations to promote the Welfare of all her People.

The French Proteſtant Miniſters, who had Penſions of King William, waited on the Queen with an

*A.D.*1702. an humble Addreſs, to condole the Death of that Prince, and congratulate her happy Succeſſion to the Throne. And her Majeſty in her Anſwer aſſur'd them of her Royal Protection.

The Operations of the War, King William's Scheme.

The Operations for the next Campaign were form'd by the late King: The Expedition to Cadiz was his Majeſty's Scheme, and the Siege of Keyſerſwaert the ſame, as were alſo the ſucceſſive Sieges and Conqueſts in the Summer following.

On the 30th of March, her Majeſty repair'd to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to,

An Act for the better Support of her Majeſty's Houſhold, and of the Honour and Dignity of the Crown.

An Act for Taking and Stating the Publick Accounts, &c.

After which ſhe return'd them her kind and hearty Thanks, for continuing to her, for her Life, the ſame Revenue they had granted to the King; which, ſhe was pleaſed to ſay, ſhe would take Care ſhould be managed to the beſt Advantage; and while her Subjects remain'd under the Burthen of ſuch heavy Taxes, ſhe would ſtreighten her ſelf in her own Expences, rather than not contribute all ſhe could to their Eaſe and Relief; with a juſt Regard to the Support of the Honour and Dignity of the Crown.

Queen gives 100000 l. towards the War.

The next Paragraph of her Speech was extreamly Popular: It is probable the Revenue may fall ſhort of what it has produced. However, I will give Directions, that One Hundred Thouſand Pounds be apply'd to the Publick Service in this Year, out of the Revenue you have ſo unanimouſly given me.

The Houſe of Commons, in their Addreſs of Thanks for this Speech, particularly took Notice of her Majeſty's unparallel'd Grace and Goodneſs, in contributing out of her own Revenue, to the Eaſe and Relief of her Subjects. And the Lords expreſs'd their Senſe of it, in their Addreſs, with equal Zeal and Gratitude. Her Majeſty told them in her Anſwer, That their Approbation of what ſhe did, would always be a great Satisfaction to her.

Her Majeſty having appointed the 23d of April, St. George's Day, for her Coronation, it was look'd upon by ſome Perſons, as a Token of Reſpect to the Memories of her Unkle, King Charles II. and her Father, King James II. and of her Diſpoſition to reſtore Things to the old Way, in which they refin'd too much on an Incident, that perhaps had nothing in it but what was Caſual. Her Majeſty being ill of the Gout, an open Triumphal Chair was made for her, to be carry'd in on the Coronation Day. For which the Duke of Devonſhire was appointed Lord High-Steward; and the Duke of Bedford, Lord High-Conſtable.

About the ſame Time ſhe was pleaſed to appoint the Ladies of her Bedchamber.

The Counteſs of Marlborough.	The Marchioneſs of Huntingdon.
The Dutcheſs of Ormond.	Lady Hyde.
The Dutcheſs of Queenſberry.	Lady Spencer.
The Counteſs of Scarborough.	Lady Fretcheville.
The Counteſs of Burlington.	Lady Charlotte Beverwert.
The Counteſs of Abington.	Lady Harriet Godolphin.
	The Dutcheſs of Hamilton.

On Friday, April 23. her Majeſty came to Weſtminſter about eleven a Clock, and the Nobility of both Sexes being put in Order, came in State to Weſtminſter-hall, where the Sword and Spurs, and the Regalia, were deliver'd to the Lords who were to bear them. The Proceſſion began about half an Hour after One, from the Hall to the Abbey. The Queen had a rich Circlet on her Head, and the Nobility carry'd their Coronets in their Hands. The Way was cover'd with Blue Cloath, and the whole Paſſage and Houſes, on each Side, cover'd with Spectators. But the Ceremonies at all Coronations being much the ſame, it will be needleſs to enlarge upon them. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury perform'd the Solemnity, and the Archbiſhop of York preach'd the Sermon. Her Majeſty was Crown'd about four a Clock, and being Enthron'd, his Royal Highneſs, Prince George of Denmark, as Duke of Cumberland, and all the Peers preſent, did their Homage, during which the Medals wre thrown about. The Dinner in Weſtminſter-hall was very Magnificent, and it was ſaid that 3700 Diſhes were ſerv'd at the Coronation Feaſt. It being a fine Day, the Shew was the more ſplendid and ſparkling; and the Queen, then Lame of the Gout, being carried in an Open Chair, it had the Face of a Triumph, as well as a Coronation Proceſſion. *A.D.*1702. The Coronation.

The Order her Majeſty was pleas'd to cauſe to be made in Council, ſome Days after, That the Princeſs Sophia, Electoreſs Dowager of Hanover, ſhould be pray'd for in all Churches, as one of the Royal Family, fill'd the Hearts of all good Britains with Joy: And both Lords and Commons voted her Thanks for her great Zeal for the Succeſſion of the Crown in the Proteſtant Line, expreſs'd in that Order.

On Sunday, May the 3d, the Princeſs Sophia was pray'd for, the firſt Time, in the Chapel Royal at St. James's; and this agreeable Order and Example, were follow'd in all Churches and Chapels throughout the Kingdom.

About the ſame Time, one Fitzgerald was Proſecuted for writing a Pamphlet againſt that Succeſſion, and being found guilty, had this mild Sentance paſt upon him; To appear near the Courts in Weſtminſter-hall, with a Paper pinn'd to his Hat, ſpecifying his Crime; which was thought to be a very moderate Puniſhment, and what a zealous Iriſh Jacobite would rather have gloried in, than been aſham'd of.

The Queen having given Directions that the Convention between her Majeſty, the Emperor, and the States-General, about declaring War againſt France and Spain, ſhould be laid before the Houſe of Commons, they voted an Addreſs of Thanks. But thoſe Members who did not love the Dutch and French Proteſtants the better, for their being Presbyterians, mov'd for an Addreſs, That no Perſon ſhould be an Officer in England or Ireland, in her Majeſty's new-rais'd Forces, but ſuch as were born in England, Scotland, or Ireland, or the Dominions thereunto belonging, or of Engliſh Parents, unleſs they were before in Half-Pay. But it being put to the Queſtion, it paſt in the Negative. The Lord Marquis of Hartington, and ſeveral leading Members of the Houſe of Commons, ſetting forth the Injuſtice and Ingratitude of diſcarding a great Number of French Refugee Officers, who had ſerv'd faithfully and gallantly in the laſt War againſt France. And an Addreſs was voted, That her Majeſty would be graciouſly pleaſed to give Directions, that ſuch Commiſſions as ſhould be renew'd to the Officers of her Army, might be without Fee or Charge. To which ſhe anſwer'd, I will take Care therein. Tories againſt the French Proteſtant Officers.

Prince George of Denmark being declar'd Lord High-Admiral of England, his Royal Highneſs came

A.D.1702. came to the Admiralty-Office, May the 22d, and ſate there the firſt Time, as Lord High-Admiral. His Council being to be Sir George Rooke, George Churchill, Eſq; Sir David Mitchel, and Charles Sergeſon Eſq;. A Promotion of Generals for Land Service was made the ſame Week.

Promotion of General Officers.

Charles Churchill, Eſq; Lieutenant-General.
Sir Charles Hara,
William Selwyn, Eſq;
Earl of Orkney,
Richard Ingoldsby, Eſq; } Major-Generals.

Earl of Eſſex,
Hatton Compton, Eſq;
William Matthews, Eſq;
William Seymour, Eſq;
Guſtavus Hamilton, Eſq;
Cornelius Wood, Eſq;
William Lloyd, Eſq; } Brigidier-Generals.

And the new Levies in England and Ireland, went on with great Succeeſs: But People then began to reflect a little on the Precipitation with which the laſt Army was disbanded. The keeping of them Standing, was now own'd to have been the beſt Policy, and beſt Husbandry. For every one believ'd that the breaking of theſe Forces was one of the greateſt Inducements the French King had to break the Partition Treaty; and the extraordinary Charge of keeping and maintaining freſh Troops, till they were fit for Service, would have gone a good way towards keeping them up, when they were up.

Declaration of War againſt France.

On the 4th of May, her Majeſty's Declaration of War againſt France and Spain, was publiſh'd at London, with the uſual Formalities, by the Kings at Arms, attended by Heralds and Purſuivants, the Horſe-Granadiers, and the firſt Troop of Guards, with Kettle-Drums, Trumpets, &c. Thus it was proclaim'd at Charing-Croſs, Temple-Bar, and before the Royal-Exchange. The Cauſes expreſt in the Declaration were, That the late King William had, by the repeated Advice of Parliament, enter'd into Alliances with the Emperor, States-General, and other Potentates, for preſerving the Liberty and Balance of Europe, and reducing the exorbitant Power of France; becauſe of the French King's unjuſtly taking and keeping Poſſeſſion of great Part of the Spaniſh Dominions, exerciſing an abſolute Authority over all that Monarchy; ſeizing Milan, and the Spaniſh Netherlands, by his Armies; making himſelf Maſter of Cadiz, of the Entrance into the Mediterranean, and of the Ports in the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies; deſigning to invade the Liberty of Europe, and to obſtruct the Freedom of Navigation. And whereas, inſtead of giving juſt Satisfaction, he has added the Indignity and Affront of declaring the pretended Prince of Wales, King of Great Britain and Ireland, and has influenc'd Spain to concur in the ſame: Therefore for maintaining the publick Faith of Treaties, for vindicating the Honour of the Crown, and for the preventing the Miſchiefs which all Europe is threatned with, her Majeſty declar'd War againſt France and Spain, by Sea and Land; and forbad all Communication and Correſpondence with France or Spain, or their Subjects; but promis'd Protection to the Perſons and Eſtates of the Subjects of France and Spain, in her Majeſty's Dominions, who ſhall demean themſelves dutifully.

The People univerſally expreſs'd their Satisfaction with this Declaration of War, by their Countenances and loud Acclamations, and pray'd for a happy Succeſs to her Majeſty's Arms, in the Proſecution of it.

The Earl of Marlborough returning to England, after his Conferences with the States Miniſters, receiv'd Inſtructions to procure a Stop to be put to all Correſpondence between the United Provinces and France and Spain; which was very reaſonable, ſince the Subjects of Great Britan were forbidden it, and the two Houſes of Parliament had preſented an Addreſs to her Majeſty to that Effect. Her Anſwer to it was. A.D 1702.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Queen's Anſwer to an Addreſs againſt Correſpondence with France.

I ſhall propoſe to the Allies to join with me in prohibiting all Intercourſe and Commerce with France and Spain, according to your Deſire. And am too much concern'd for the Publick Welfare, to omit any neceſſary Cautions for the Protection of our Trade.

It was ſaid, that when the French King heard of the Queen's Declaration of War againſt him, he turn'd it off with this Raillery, It is a ſign I am grown old, when the Ladies declare War againſt me. But her great General, my Lord Marlborough, in a Campaign or two, made him change Tone and Countenance.

French King's Saying on the Queen's Declaration of War.

May the 6th, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to the following Acts.

An Act for laying a Duty upon Land.
An Act for appointing Commiſſioners to treat of an Union with Scotland.
An Act for encouraging the Greenland Trade.
An Act for making good the Deficiencies, and the Publick Credit.
And to a great Number of private Acts.

Acts paſt.

We hear no more of the Proſecution of Dr. Drake; but that againſt one Triſtram Savage, for publiſhing a BLACK LIST, being a Liſt of ſeveral Members of the laſt Parliament, met together at the Vine-Tavern in Long-Acre. Theſe were moſt of them Weſt Saxons, very warm in the Intereſt of High-Church, and very cool in that of their Country. So Savage was fin'd and Pillory'd, and his Liſt burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman. But more Notice was taken of William Fuller, a ſorry Raſcal, it is true, for impoſing a Parcel of Lies on ſome credulous Perſons, for Evidence, about the Impoſture of the Pretender, for which he was in the laſt Reign put in the Pillory: But that was not thought ſufficient by the preſent Miniſtry; and being again convinc'd of Impoſture, he was ſentenc'd to be whipp'd in Bridewell, to beat Hemp there a whole Year, and to pay 1000 Marks. The latter was what occaſion'd a Diſcourſe. It being not eaſy to reconcile it to the Convention Parliament's Declaration of Rights againſt exorbitant Fines, to the Value of the Parties Eſtates; and Fuller was not worth one of the thouſand Marks Fine put upon him. It was ſaid the then Miniſters, for no body had a Thought of the Queen's approving it, were too good Friends to the Pretender, to ſuffer a Fellow that went about to prove him ſpurious, to go off without even bloody Marks of their Reſentment; and being to lie in Gaol till the Fine was paid, he was ſure to rot there. The Rogue certainly deſerv'd to be well laſh'd, and expos'd for his Roguery; but the Declaration of Rights is ſo Sacred, that none but High-Church Managers have ever yet dar'd to break in upon it; and we may aſſure our ſelves they would not have done it, if they had not reſented the Indignity put on the Mock Prince of Wales, by a Charge of Impoſture.

Fuller whipp'd in Bridewell, and fin'd 1000 Marks.

By the 25th of May, ſeveral other Acts were ready for the Royal Aſſent, which her Majeſty then gave to,

A.D.1702. An Act for continuing in Priſon ——— Counter, and others, concern'd in the horrid Conſpiracy againſt his late Majeſty. But one of thoſe Aſſaſſins found ſo much Favour during St. John's Miniſtry, that he got out of Newgate.

An Act to oblige Jews to maintain and provide for their Proteſtant Children.

An Act for the Relief of the Proteſtant Purchaſers of the Forfeited Eſtates in Ireland.

An Act for enlarging the Time for taking the Oath of Abjuration, &c. In which was this good Clauſe,

A good Clauſe of the Abjuration Act.

" That if any Perſon or Perſons, at any time " after the firſt Day of March 1702, ſhall endeavour to deprive or hinder any Perſon who ſhall " be the next in Succeſſion to the Crown for the " time being, according to the Limitations in an " Act, entitled, An Act for declaring the Rights " and Liberties of the Subject, and ſettling the Succeſſion of the Crown; and according to one " other Act, entituled, An Act for the further Limitation of the Crown, and better ſecuring the " Rights and Liberties of the Subject, from ſucceeding after the Deceaſe of her Majeſty to the " Imperial Crown of this Realm, and the Dominions and Territories thereunto belonging, according to the Limitations in the beforemention'd " Acts; that is to ſay, ſuch Iſſue of her Majeſty's " Body, as ſhall from time to time be next in " Succeſſion to the Crown, if it ſhall pleaſe God " Almighty to bleſs her Majeſty with Iſſue; and " during the time her Majeſty ſhall have no Iſſue, " the Princeſs Sophia, Electreſs and Dutcheſs " Dowager of Hanover, and after the Deceaſe of " the ſaid Princeſs Sophia, the next in Succeſſion " to the Crown for the time being, according to " the Limitation of the ſaid Acts; and the ſame " maliciouſly, adviſedly and directly, ſhall attempt " by any Overt-Act or Deed; every ſuch Offence " ſhall be adjudg'd High Treaſon, and the Offender " or Offenders therein, their Aſſeſſors, Procurers, " and Comforters, knowing the ſaid Offence to " be done, being thereof convicted or attainted, " according to the Laws and Statues of this Realm, " ſhall be deemed and adjudged Traytors, and ſhall " ſuffer Pains of Death, and all Loſſes and Forfeitures as in Caſes of High Treaſon.

Made Treaſon to oppoſe the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

While this Act was on the Anvil, the Lords made ſome Amendment to it for the further Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, which were taken into Conſideration by the Commons, and gave High Church one Opportunity more to ſhew their Averſion to the Illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover. The following Letter being communicated to me, by Arthur Maynwaring, Eſq; above twenty Years ago on another Occaſion, it will not be improper to make uſe of it on this, becauſe it ſets thoſe Men in a full Light, and expoſes their Deeds and Darkneſs.

Letter about the Tories oppoſing it in Parliament.

SIR,

" I have ſeen a Paper that was lately publiſhed, " which is ſign'd by George Smalleridge, D. D. " and Thomas Croſſe, called a Detection of a " Falſhood endeavoured to be impoſed on the Publick, " in a Paper intitled, a Teſt offered to the Conſideration of the Electors of Great-Britain. I have " alſo ſeen an Account of the ſame Matter printed in " the Gazette of the 30*th of* September, and " ſign'd by Mr. Jodrel. But having been myſelf " in the Houſe when that Matter was tranſacted, I " beg leave to acquaint you with ſome particulars, by " which it will plainly appear to you, that the firſt " Account is equivocating, and that the ſecond is " imperfect.

A.D.1702. " When the Houſe of Commons proceeded according to Order, to take into Conſideration " three Amendments made by the Lords to a Bill, " entituled, An Act for enlarging the time for taking " the Oath of Abjuration, &c. the Debate was " chiefly held upon the Subject Matter of the " ſecond Amendment; and thoſe Gentlemen that " were againſt giving that Security to the Houſe of " Hanover, principally inſiſted on the Danger of " multiplying Treaſons, and other Arguments to " that effect. But though hardly any notice was " taken of the firſt Amendment, it was in Courſe " to be firſt put. And now comes the great Art " and parliamentary Skill of thoſe Perſons that " were againſt the ſecond Amendment, the Security " for the Houſe of Hanover. They reſolved, according to the moſt uſual Piece of Management " in that Houſe, to try their Numbers, by dividing " upon the firſt. But that was ſo little thought to " be the Buſineſs of the Day, or indeed, of the " firſt Diviſion itſelf, that two or three Staunch " old Members went out juſt before the Diviſion, " having ſome particular Views at that time, " which made it inconvenient for them to declare " againſt the Proteſtant Succeſſion; and thoſe of " their Friends who ſtood the Diviſion, and whoſe " Names are ſet forth in the printed Liſt under " the Title of No's againſt agreeing with the Lords, " may ſtrictly and properly be ſaid in parliamentary Language, to have divided againſt the " Amendments; the rather becauſe few Inſtances " can be given, that even the weaker Side, upon " loſing ſuch a previous Queſtion divided again " upon any ſubſequent Clauſe that had been mix'd " in the ſame Debate.

" But I believe there is no body alive that does " not think, if they had thrown out the firſt " Amendment, they would immediately have proceeded to throw out the ſecond; and there were " two Circumſtances attending this Affair, which " muſt needs put it out of all doubt how it was " underſtood both abroad and within the Houſe. " Mr. Dyer, the common News Writer, expreſs'd " himſelf thus in his Letter to Cheſter upon this " Occaſion: The Prince of Wales has loſt it in " the Houſe by one Vote; or the Houſe of Hanover " has carried it but by one Vote; one of them I " am ſure it was, for which he was puniſhed by " the Houſe upon the Complaint of a Member " for that City.

" And to ſhew what the Members themſelves " thought of it, the only Gentleman that gave a " Negative to the firſt Bill for eſtabliſhing the " Proteſtant Succeſſion, who was then of that " Houſe, though ſoon after called up to the other; " ſaluted Sir Matthew Dudley, when this Diviſion " was over in theſe Words: How fare ye, Minheer " Dudley; upbraiding him by that Expreſſion for " having voted for the Intereſt of the Houſe of " Hanover, which the late King and the Dutch " had eſpouſed; To which the other replied, Fort " bien, Monſieur Gran---lle alluding by that to his " Vote, which he took to be for the French Intereſt, " as well as to his French Name, which had been " changed not many Years before, from a plain " Engliſh one, as it is ſtill printed in the Hiſtory " of the Earl of Clarendon.

" If I ſhould ſay therefore, that theſe Gentlemen were not for throwing out the ſecond Amendment, it would perhaps be a Logical Truth, becauſe they did not juſt divide upon that Clauſe; " but it would be a moral Lie, and a Fallacy, " that I ought to be aſhamed of, becauſe every

" Step

A.D.1702. " Step they took that Day was in order to throw " it out, &c.

Dr. Smallridge was Mr. Maynwaring's Tutor at Chriſt-Church, Oxon, but that did not hinder his bearing this Teſtimony againſt him and Sir Thomas Croſs, who could not know ſo much of the Matter as he did. I ſhall now inſert the Liſt he mention'd, of No's againſt agreeing with the Lord's.

A Liſt of No's about the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

Sir John Stonehouſe, Bart.
William Jennens, Eſq;
Thomas Renda, Eſq;
Sir Simon Harcourt, Knt. Sollicitor-General.
Simon Harcourt, Eſq;
Sir Henry Parker, Knt. Ailesbury.
Sir Samuel Gerrard, Bart.
Richard Crawley, Eſq;
Graundo Pigott, Eſq;
Hon. Arthur Anneſley, Eſq;
Sir George Warburton, Bart.
Sir Roger Moſtyn, Bart.
James Buller, Eſq;
William Cary, Eſq;
Rt. Hon. Henry Lord Hide.
William Pole, Eſq;
Francis Scobel, Eſq;
Sir Henry Seymour, Bart.
Alex. Pendarves, Eſq;
John Manley, Eſq;
George Granville, Eſq;
Henry Flemming, Eſq;
John Anſtis, Eſq;
Sir Nicolas Morrice, Bart.
John Tredenham, Eſq;
Sir William Coryton, Bart.
Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave, Bart.
Richard Muſgrave, Eſq;
Chriſtopher Muſgrave, Eſq;
John Curzon, Eſq;
Thomas Coke, Eſq;
John Harpur, Eſq;
Thomas Coulſon, Eſq;
John Woolcomb, Eſq;
Nicholas Hooper, Eſq;
Richard Hele, Eſq; Serjeant at Law.
James Bulteel, Eſq;
Sir Thomas Lear, Bart.
Richard Reynell, Eſq;
Frederick Herne, Eſq;
Thomas Strangeways, Eſq;
Thomas Chaffin, Eſq;
Nathaniel Napier, Eſq;
Hon. Henry Thynne, Eſq;
George St. Loe, Eſq;
Edward Nicholas, Eſq;
Richard Founes, Eſq;
Sir Robert Eden, Bart.
Sir Henry Belleſyſe, Bart.
Thomas Conyers, Eſq;
Sir Charles Barington, Bart.
William Fytche, Eſq;
John Comyns, Eſq;
Rt. Hon. John How, Eſq;
William Trye, Eſq;
Charles Cox of Cirenceſter.
Henry Gorge, Eſq;
Henry Cornwall, Eſq;
Ralph Freeman, Eſq;
John Gape, Eſq;
Charles Cæſar, Eſq;
Richard Goulſton, Eſq;
Henry Lee, Eſq;
Edward Knatchbull, Eſq;
William Gage, Eſq;
Hon. Heneage Finch, Eſq;
Thomas Bliſs, Eſq;
Thomas King, Eſq;
Richard Fleetwood, Eſq;
Robert Heyſham, Eſq;
John Ward, Eſq; of Newton.
Thomas Leigh, of Lyme, Eſq;
Hon. John Verney, Eſq;
Sir George Beaumont, Bart.
James Winſtanly, Eſq;
Hon. Lewis Dymoke, Eſq;
Sir John Thorold, Knt.
Sir Thomas Meres, Knt.
Arthur Moore, Eſq;
Hon. William Cecil, Eſq;
Hon. Charles Bertie, Eſq;
Hugh Smithſon, Eſq;
Thomas Croſs, Eſq;
Sir Francis Child, Knt.
Thomas Blofield, Eſq;
Sir Juſtinian Iſham, Bart.
Francis Arundel, Eſq;
John James, Eſq;
William Levinz, Eſq;
Sir Robert Jenkinſon, Bart.
William Bromley, Eſq;
Thomas Rowney, Eſq;
Francis Harreys, Eſq;
Hon. Charles North, Eſq;
Richard Holford, Eſq;
Roger Owen, Eſq;
John Kynaſton, Eſq;
Richard Mytton, Eſq;
Sir Edward Acton.
Nathaniel Palmer, Eſq;
Sir Francis Warr, Bart.
Sir Thomas Wroth, Bart.
Sir Jacob Banks, Knt.
George Pitt, Eſq;
Henry Holmes, Eſq;
William Stephens, Eſq;
Francis Gwyn, Eſq;
Edward Bagot, Eſq;
Joſeph Girdler, Serjeant at Law.
Sir Robert Davers, Knt.
Morgan Randal, Eſq;
Thomas Gery, Eſq;
Henry St. John, Eſq;
Robert Byerley, Eſq;
Rt. Hon. Lord Viſcount Buckeley.
Rt. Hon. Thomas Manſel of Margam, Eſq;

No's in all 117.

A.D.1702.

Yeas for agreeing with the Lords.

A Liſt of Yea's, &c.

Rt. Hon. Edward Lord Ruſſel.
Sir William Goſtwick, Bart.
William Farrer, Eſq;
William Spencer, Eſq;
Richard Nevill, Eſq;
Richard Topham, Eſq;
Sir Owen Buckingham.
Sir Richard Temple, Bart.
Sir Edmund Denton, Bart.
Charles Godfrey, Eſq;
Fleetwood Dormar, Eſq;
Richard Hampden, Eſq;
James Chaſe, Eſq;
Sir Ruſhout Cullen.
Rt. Hon. Henry Boyle, Eſq;
Anthony Thompſon, Eſq;
Hon. Ruſſel Roberts, Eſq;
Henry Vincent, Eſq;
Hon. Francis Godolphin, Eſq;
James Craggs, Eſq;
Hugh Boſcawen, Eſq;
Thomas Stanwix, Eſq;
William Cowper, Eſq;
Peter King, Eſq;
Thomas Bere, Eſq;
Robert Burridge, Eſq;
Sir William Phippard, Knt.
Henry Healy, Eſq;
Anthony Henly, Eſq;
Sir John Cropley,
Sir Iſaac Rebow.
Maynard Colcheſter, Eſq;
Richard Dowdeſwell, Eſq;
Rt. Hon. Thomas Lord Coningsby.
George Sayer, Eſq;
Hon. Charles Stanley, Eſq;
Ambroſe Pudſay, Eſq;
John Chaplain, Eſq;
Sir William Ellys, Bart.
Richard Ellys, Eſq;
Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Kt.
John Morgan of Tredegar, Eſq;
Sir Charles Turner, Knt.
Robert Walpole, Eſq;
Sir Thomas Littleton, Bart.
Hon. Sidney Wortley Montagu, Eſq;
Hon. Charles Egerton, Eſq;
Hon. Thomas Wentworth, Eſq;
Sir Francis Blake
Sir Henry Liddel.
William Carr, Eſq;
Emanuel How, Eſq;
Sir John Delaval, Bart.
Samuel Ogle, Eſq;
Jonathan Hutchinſon, Eſq;
John Thornhaugh, Eſq;
Sir Francis Molyneux, Bart.
George Gregory, Eſq;
Sir Humphry Briggs.
Sir William Forreſter, Knt.
George Weld, Eſq;
Robert Gale, Eſq;
Sir William Daines, Knt.
Edward Clarke, Eſq;
George Balch, Eſq;
Rt. Hon. Lord William Pawlet.
George Rodney Bridges, Eſq;
Anthony Morgan, Eſq;
Robert Mitchell, Eſq;
Thomas Dore, Eſq;
Paul Burrard, Eſq;
Richard Wooloſton, Eſq;
Rt. Hon. John Smith, Eſq;
Sir Michael Biddolph, Bart.
John Crew Offley, Eſq;
Thomas Guy, Eſq;
Hon. Spencer Compton, Eſq;
Sir Joſeph Jekyl, Knt.
Sir Thomas Felton, Bart.
Sir Richard Onſlow, Bart.
Charles Cox, Eſq;
John Cholmley, Eſq;
John Ward, Eſq;
Sir Robert Clayton, Knt.
Stephen Harvey, Eſq;
Denzill Onſlow, Eſq;
Thomas Onſlow, Eſq;
Thomas Pelham, Eſq;
Sir Nicholas Pelham, Kt.
Nathaniel Gould, Eſq;
Robert Eyre, Eſq;
Sir John Haules, Knt.
Sir James Aſh, Bart.
Thomas Jerviſe, Eſq;
Edward Aſh, Eſq;
William Moriſon, Eſq;
James Montagu, Eſq;
Charles Mompeſſon, Eſq;
William Walſh, Eſq;
Thomas Wylde, Eſq;
Charles Cocks, Eſq;
John Rudge, Eſq;
William Lord Marquis of Hartington.
Sir William Robinſon.
Sir William St. Quintin.
William Maiſter, Eſq;
Chriſtopher Stockdale, Eſq;
Sir William Huſtler, Kt.
Sir William Strickland, Bart.
William Jeſſop, Eſq;

Sir

*A.D.*1702. Sir Charles Hotham, Bart. Philip Papillon, Esq;
William Lowther, Esq; Henry Furnese, Esq;
John Pultney, Esq; Sir Arthur Owen, Bart.
Matthew Aylmer, Esq; Griffith Rice, Esq;
Yea's in all 118.

Whatever others may be, I am satisfied the Gentlemen of this List who are living, will think it no Dishonour to them to have appear'd so early and so zealously in the Interests of the Royal House of Hanover. The Queen having passed these Acts and several Private ones, made the following Speech to both Houses of Parliament; wherein having repeated her most hearty Thanks for their great Care of the Publick, and the many Marks they had given of their great Duty and Affection to her; and recommended to them all, the Preservation of the Publick Peace, and a due Execution of the Laws: She toldt hem, she should always wish that no Difference of Opinion among those that were equally affected to her Service, might be the Occasion of Heat and Animosities among themselves; that she should be careful to preserve and maintain the Act of Toleration, and to set the Minds of all her People at quiet; but that her own Principles would always keep her entirely firm to the Interests and Religion of the Church of England, and would incline her to countenance those who had the truest Zeal to support it. Then the Parliament was Prorogu'd to the 7th of July, but they sat no more.

Queen will maintain the Toleration and prefer Church-men.

As High Church in England had conceived great Hopes of working their Vengeance to the full on the Nonconformists, who had done nothing to offend them, but by receiving the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper from the Hands of Church of England Divines; so the Papists and Jacobites in Scotland flatter'd themselves with Dreams of the Destruction of the Church there, as by Law established, King William the Protector of the reform'd Churches, being by Death removed out of their way. But though there were several Alterations made in the Ministry there, and several hearty Friends to the late King and his Cause were removed, yet there was no clearing the Administration of them without employing the Enemies to the Revolution; which was thought too dangerous for a Government to do which was founded upon it. This matter is represented by the treasonable Author of the Memoirs more fairly than other Passages in his Book; as thus: The Queen still continued to bestow her Favours on the Church Party in England, and Alterations were made in Scotland, though not so much in the Behalf of the Cavaliers, i. e. Jacobites, as could have been wish'd; yet more to theirs than their Adversaries Advantage; which had this Effect, that it increased their Hopes of seeing better Days; but as much displeas'd the Presbyterians, as if their All had been taken away from them. Duke Hamilton, on notice of King William's Death, went with the Earl of Dundonal, the Earl of Ruglen, the Lord Yester, the Lord Blantyre and others, to the Market Cross of Hamilton, and proclaim'd the Queen; the Duke and his Party flattering themselves with the vain Imagination of promoting their Interest by the Change. The Earl of Marchmount, Chancellor; Earl of Melvil, President of the Council; Earl of Selkirk, Register; Adam Cockburn of Ormiston, Treasurer Depute; Sir John Maxwell of Pollock, Justice Clerk; the Earl of Leven, Governor of the Castle of Edinburgh; the Earl of Hyndford, one of the Secretaries of State, were all laid aside. The Duke of Queensberry, and Viscount Tarbat, were made Secretaries of State, and the Earl of Seafield was remov'd from that Office and made Lord Chancellor; Marquis of Annandale was made President of the Council; Earl of Tullebardine now Duke of Athol, Lord Privy-Seal; Lord Boyle, Treasurer Depute; Roderick Mc Kenzie, of Preston-Hall, Justice Clerk; Sir James Murray, of Philliphaugh, Lord Register; and the Earl of March Governor of the Castle of Edinburgh. And though 'tis true, all these, excepting the Earl of March, had been deeply enough engaged at, or since the Revolution, against the Interest of King James; yet the Duke of Queensberry, and his two Dependants, Lord Boyle, and Sir James Murray of Philliphaugh, pretended to be quite of another Mind; Athol, Seafield and Tarbat, valued themselves for having each of them once in their Life opposed King William. But before these Changes could conveniently be accomplished, it was necessary that the Parliament should meet, to continue the Fund appropriated for the maintaining the Forces in that Kingdom, and to provide otherwise for their Maintenance. The Duke of Hamilton and his Party, vigorously opposed the Meeting of that Parliament, alledging that no Instance could be given of the surviving of a Parliament after the Decease of the Prince who called it. Yet they met the 9th of June, the Duke of Queensberry being High Commissioner. Duke Hamilton, who had been at London to prevail with her Majesty to put off that Meeting, and to call a new Parliament, was prepar'd to continue his Opposition to this; and coming into the House, desired to be heard in his own Name, and in the Name of those that adher'd to him: His Speech was concerted by all of them, or rather by their best Heads, and consented to by all; for the Duke himself was by no means an Eloquent Man or fine Speaker.

The Disaffected in Scotland encourag'd.

They oppose the Meeting of the Scots Parliament.

We are come here in Obedience to her Majesty's Command, and we are all heartily glad of her Majesty's happy Accession to the Throne; not merely on Account that it was her undoubted Right, as being lineally descended from the ancient Race of our Kings; as if King William had not been descended from that ancient Race as well as Queen Anne, and did not stand in the same Relation to King James the First; but likewise because of the many Personal Virtues and Royal Qualities her Majesty is endowed with; which gives us ground to hope we shall enjoy under her auspicious Reign, all the Blessings that can attend a Nation, which has a loving and gracious Sovereign, united with a dutiful and obedient People, and we are resolved to sacrifice our Lives and Fortunes in defence of her Majesty's Right against all her Enemies whatsoever; and have all the Deference and Respect for her Majesty's Government, that is due from Loyal Subjects to their rightful and lawful Sovereign. 'Tis highly necessary to compare this solemn Declaration of Queen Anne's rightful and lawful Title against the Pretender, with Duke Hamilton's Conduct, for that French King's Tool, as he himself called him, or thought him, according to the Memoirs. The Plot being laid for bringing that French Tool into Scotland, this Duke was the deepest in it; and being upon a Journey to England, when News came from St. Germains that a Rebellion would be attempted at a short Warning; he said to Lockhart of Carnwarth, I shall always be ready, and am able to force my way out of England to Scotland; besides, the People of Scotland are all ready enough to join the King at the Instance he lands; and I do not know but I may do him better Service by being in the North of England to excite his Friends there to appear for him. I shall have occasion to say more of it hereafter; but this word

*A.D.*1702.

Duke Hamilton's Speech against it.

Absurdity in it.

360. He plots for the Pretender.

362.

A.D.1702. Word or two is enough to give us a juſt Idea of theſe Men of Principle and Honour, as they call'd themſelves. To return to the Speech again:

But at the ſame Time that we acknowledge our Submiſſion to her Majeſty's Authority, we think our ſelves bound in Duty, by Virtue of the Obedience we owe to the ſtanding Laws of the Nation, and becauſe of the Regard we ought to have for the Rights and Liberties of our Fellow-Subjects, to declare our Opinion as to the Legality of this Meeting; viz. That we do not think our ſelves warranted by Law to Sit and Act any longer as a Parliament; and that by ſo doing, we ſhall incur the Hazard of loſing our Lives and Fortunes; if our Proceedings ſhall come to be queſtion'd by the ſubſequent Parliaments.

Then the Duke read a Paper, which contain'd the Reaſons of their Diſſenting from the Proceedings of the other Members, who thought themſelves impower'd to Sit and Act as a Parliament. It contains as follows:

" Foraſmuch as by the fundamental Laws and " Conſtitution of this Kingdom, all Parliaments " do Diſſolve by the Death of the King or Queen, " except in ſo far as Innovated by the 17th Act " of the ſixth Seſſion of King William's Parlia- " ment laſt in Being."

That is to ſay, They very ſagaciouſly tell that very Parliament, of which he, and his Adherents, had alſo been Members, that all Laws were againſt their Sitting and Acting, except one Law of their own Making; which was certainly more valid to them, and upon this Occaſion, than all the Laws of Scotland concerning Parliaments. The Term Innovated here, has too much Nonſenſe in it, to be worthy the Ear of ſo Noble an Aſſembly. Is a new Law the leſs a Law for its being new? By that 17th Act, this very Parliament was impower'd, At King William's Deceaſe, to Meet and Act what ſhould be needful for the Defence of the TRUE Proteſtant Religion, as now by LAW ESTABLISH'D; which High-Church in England call a Schiſm, or worſe, and have been always endeavouring to ſuppreſs it by Schiſm-Bills, Occaſional-Bills, Teſts, &c.

Nonſenſe in the Speech.

And maintaining the Succeſſion to the Crown, as ſettled by the Laws of Right, and for preſerving and ſecuring the Peace and Safety of the Kingdom.

To provide for the Defence of their Church and Conſtitution, by making Proviſion for the Payment of the few Forces that were then in the Kingdom, and to maintain the Succeſſion to the Crown, as ſettled by the Claim of Right, in Recognizing Queen ANNE's Title, were the very Things this Parliament was ſummon'd to meet for, purſuant to a Law of their own Making. This Defect in Underſtanding, as well as Principle, has been a Chareſteriſtick of theſe Cavaliers, from the Days of Lunsford of Kingſton, to thoſe of Lockhart of Carnwath. The Speech once more:

And ſeeing that the ſaid Ends are fully ſatisfy'd by her Majeſty's Succeſſion to the Throne, whereby the Religion and Peace of the Kingdom are ſecur'd, we conceive our ſelves not now warranted by the Law to Meet, Sit or Act; whereas they had juſt ſaid, that there was a Law on Purpoſe for their ſo doing, And therefore do diſſent from any Thing that ſhall be done, or acted. Upon which he took Inſtruments, and crav'd an Extract of his Proteſtation; as did alſo the Marqueſs of Tweedale, the Earl of Errol, the Earl of Rothes, the Earl of Tullibardin, the Earl of Strathmore, and 74 other Members. One may perceive by the Marqueſs of Twedale, and the Earl of Rothes Names, that all theſe Diſſentients were not Cavaliers, in the Senſe of the Scotch Memoirs; but that others, either out of Diſguſt, or Miſapprehenſion, join'd with them in this Proteſtation: And the Party had wrought ſo great a Ferment in Edinburgh, under Countenance of the Proteſtors, that when the latter went in a Body from the Parliament Houſe to the Croſs-Key Tavern, they were huzza'd by the Crowd in the Streets: And doubtleſs it was for the Sake of theſe Huzza's, that they made ſuch a Proceſſion from the Senate-Houſe to a Tavern. They ſent up the Lord Blantire with an Addreſs from them to the Queen, ſetting forth the ſolid Reaſons above-mention'd, for their doing ſuch a weak Thing; but her Majeſty poſitively refus'd to receive it; and had her Senſe of Duke Hamilton and his Party continu'd the ſame, there had probably been no Rebellion in Scotland, nor ſo many of the firſt Quality, as the Memoir-Writer terms them, now wandring under Attainder for Treaſon, in Countries ſubjected to the like Tyranny, to which they would have ſubjected their own Country, by bringing in the Pretender.

The Diſaffected Proteſt againſt the Scots Parliament.

The Queen refuſes their Addreſs.

After this Hurly-Burly was over, her Majeſty's Letter to the Parliament was read; his Grace the Lord Commiſſioner made a Speech, the firſt Paragraph of which deſerves a Place in all Britiſh Hiſtories.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

THIS being our firſt Meeting in Parliament, after the Loſs of our late Glorious Sovereign, we cannot forbear to condole his Death with the moſt tender and ſincere Expreſſions of Gratitude and Eſteem. He was the Great Deliverer of theſe Nations, the Defender of the Proteſtant Intereſt, and the Support of the General Liberty of Europe. You have ſo often teſtify'd your Senſe of his Great Actions, by your dutiful Acknowledgments, that I need not inſiſt: For while RELIGION and LIBERTY are in any Value, King WILLIAM's Memory muſt be in perpetual Honour.

The Memoir-Writer repreſents the Proceedings in Scotland ſo falſly, as well as maliciouſly and impudently, that his Work is below Remark, and even Contempt; and eſpecially what relates to the Faculty of Advocates, whoſe Behaviour has more than once, ſince the Revolution, been equally Factious and Inſolent. Some of 'em met now to draw up, and ſign an Addreſs, concerning the Meeting of the Parliament; of which Information being given, Warrants were granted to the Macers, to cite the Dean of Faculty, and Advocates, to appear before the Committee, and to bring their Papers with them; which they refuſing, her Majeſty's Advocate was order'd to cite Witneſſes againſt them; but all that was done to them, was a ſevere Reprimand only. The Parliament ſoon diſpatch'd an Act, declaring their Meeting lawful, and the Money-Bill, for ten Months and an half Ceſs. They appointed a Committee to examine and ſtate the Publick Accounts, and paſs the Union Bill, the ſame as that in England. Some diſſented from it, becauſe they could not get a Clauſe inſerted in it, about Presbyterian Government; it being carry'd to have a Letter ſent to the Queen on that Matter. And it was the more unneceſſary, becauſe they paſs'd an Act for Security of Presbyterian Government in the Church by Law there eſtabliſh'd. In the Debate of it, one Mr. Alexander Bruce made a Whimſical Speech againſt it, pretending to prove that Presbytery was inconſiſtent with Monarchy. One notable Reaſon might have

*A.D.*1702. been urg'd by him for it, that the Presbyterians routed the Rump Parliament in England, and reſtor'd the Monarch, Charles II. Bruce was expell'd, as he ought to have been, out of all other Company, as well as theirs. They alſo paſs'd the Recognition Bill; in which, beſides the Oath of Allegiance, was this of Aſſurance.

Aſſurance. I A. B. do, in the Sincerity of my Heart, aſſert, acknowledge and declare, that her Majeſty Queen ANNE is the only lawful, undoubted Sovereign of this Realm, as well de Jure, that is, of Right, as de Facto, that is, in the Poſſeſſion and Exerciſe of the Government. And therefore I do ſincerely and faithfully promiſe and engage, that I will with Heart and Hand, maintain and defend her Majeſty's Title and Government, againſt the pretended Prince of Wales, and his Adherents, and all other Enemies, who either by open or ſecret Attempts, ſhall diſturb or diſquiet her Majeſty in the Poſſeſſion and Exerciſe thereof.

This Aſſurance was afterwards taken by Duke Hamilton, and by almoſt every one of the Chiefs of his Party, who enter'd into the Conſpiracy to Dethrone the Queen in 1707; for which Hooke, who was one of the Duke of Monmouth's Followers, and then a Diſſenting Teacher, but was now a Papiſt, and a bold Officer in the French Army, was ſent from St. Germains, and ſucceeded in his Negotiations with them, as far as Words cou'd carry it.

Her Majeſty not only refus'd to receive the Addreſs the Lord Blantire brought from Duke Hamilton, and his Adherents, but ſhe alſo wrote the following Letter to the Parliament.

ANNE R.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Queen's Letter to the Scotch Parliament.

" BEing inform'd that at your firſt Meeting, by " Virtue and Warrant of the ſeventeenth " Act of the ſixth Seſſion of this current Parliament, and of our Proclamation of Adjournment agreeable thereto, ſeveral Members of Parliament, after Prayers ſaid, and declining to wait " the Reading of our Commiſſion granted to " James Duke of Queensberry, repreſenting our " Royal Perſon in this Meeting of Parliament, " did preſume to declare openly, that they did not " conceive themſelves warranted to Meet and Act " in this preſent Seſſion of Parliament, and therefore diſſented from any Thing that ſhould be " done or acted therein, and thereupon did take " Inſtruments and withdrew, and remove from " their Attendance; we have thought fit to ſignify " to you, our juſt Reſentment of this irregular and " unuſual Proceeding, and our Reſolution to own " and maintain this preſent Seſſion of Parliament, " and the Dignity and Authority of the ſame, " and of our High-Commiſſioner thereto, againſt " all Oppoſers. And this we thought fit to declare, for your better Encouragement, that you " may proceed vigorouſly in your Work, for the " Defence of the TRUE Proteſtant Religion, " the maintaining the Succeſſion to the Crown, " and for the preſerving and ſecuring of the Peace " of the Kingdom. And ſo we bid you heartily " Farewel.

Given at our Court at St. James's, the 17*th Day of* June, 1702. And of our Reign the Firſt Year.

This Letter bears Date eight Days only after the opening of this Seſſion, and the Lord Blantire had but an ordinary Errand to bring an Addreſs, quite contrary to the Contents of it. *A.D.*1702.

The Alterations in the Scotch Miniſtry, beforemention'd, were not made all at once, nor many of them before the breaking of this Parliament. As yet the Earl of Marchmont was Lord High-Chancellor, and on the 27th of June, his Lordſhip propos'd an Act for Abjuring the pretended Prince of Wales, which he uſher'd in with a pathetick Speech. He was ſeconded by the Duke of Argyle, the Marqueſs of Anandale, the Earl of Melvill, the Earl of Lauderdale, the Lord Treaſurer Deput, and the Lord Advocate. The Earl of Melvill mov'd that it might be mark'd Receiv'd the firſt Time, and he was ſeconded by the Earl of Seafield; and the Queſtion, after a warm Debate, was carried in the Affirmative. Three Days after, the Parliament having finiſh'd the Buſineſs for which they met, was adjourn'd, and this Bill thereby left unfiniſh'd. Among ſeveral Random Gueſſes of the Memoir-Writer why it did not paſs, there is but one worth repeating after him: That it was foreſeen, by the Commiſſioner, and others, that they might expect little Thanks for it in England, conſidering what Hands the Adminiſtration was in at that Time. And, adds he, If the Queen ſhould afterwards favour the Intereſt of the diſtreſs'd Royal-Family, I have Reaſon to believe that the Queen, and her Engliſh Miniſtry, were then inclin'd to keep the Succeſſion in Scotland open, as a Check and Awe upon the Whigs, and Family of Hanover, both alike the Object of the Hatred and Malice of the Cavaliers and High-Church. Scotch Jacobites think the Tories their Friends.

The Earl of Rocheſter continuing Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and being unwilling to leave England at ſo critical a Juncture, the Earl of Mount-Alexander, Major-General Erle, and Thomas Keightly Eſq; were appointed Lord Juſtices, in the Room of the Archbiſhop of Dublin, and the Earl of Drogheda, whom the Lord Rocheſter had left in the Government of that Kingdom; where ſeveral Regiments, as the Lord Montjoy's, the Earl of Charlemont's, Colonel Guſtavus Hamilton's, the Earl of Donnegal's, and Colonel Colymbine's, receiv'd Orders to March to Cork, being to be ſhipp'd off there for Portſmouth, where they were to Embark aboard the Fleet deſign'd for a Deſcent on the Coaſts of France or Spain. At this Time was publiſh'd a Pamphlet, entitled, The Earl of Rocheſter's Vindication; written with a great deal of Wit, and not a little Malice. The beſt Anſwer to it was, the Cenſure of the Aylesbury Juſtices, who order'd it to be burnt in the Market-Place. The Truſtees for the Forfeited Eſtates grew daily more and more into Diſeſteem in Ireland, as will appear in the Sequel. Two new Regiments were rais'd there, commanded by Colonel Coote and Colonel Meredith. On the 29th of May, the Lord Mayor of Dublin oblig'd the Lord Lieutenant, by ordering all the Corporations of that City to march out in Arms, in Honour of the Reſtoration of King Charles II. and his Brother, the late Abdicated King James; but the Permiſſion granted the Counteſs of Tyrconnel, whoſe Husband had govern'd ſo Tyrannically in Ireland, and who had ſo long been in the Retinue of the late King James's Queen at St. Germains, to return to Ireland, was not well pleaſing either to Engliſh or Iriſh Proteſtants. Earl of Rocheſter's Vindication burnt.

Notwithſtanding the Hopes of ſome, and the Fears of others, that the Party who were in the true Proteſtant and Engliſh Intereſt, would be given up to the Revenge and Rage of the Enemies to both; or to ſpeak plainer, to High-Church, conſidering how her Majeſty was environ'd: Yet there

A.D.1702. there was ſoon an End put to thoſe Fears and Hopes, and the Moderation of the prevailing Counſels, except in a few Inſtances, was a great Baulk to the Expectations of thoſe, whoſe Heads were full of Power and Perſecution. People at firſt imputed this Moderation to the Wiſdom and Influence of the Earl of Marlborough, and the Lord Godolphin; but it was known afterwards, that his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Denmark, was the Promoter of thoſe healing and wholeſome Meaſures: which we have the more Reaſon to believe, becauſe that good Prince was no ſooner in the Grave, than High-Church found Acceſs to the moſt ſecret and ſacred Cabinet in the Court; and at the Expence not only of the Glory, but the Intereſt and Safety of England, ſacrific'd the Fruits of ten Victorious Campaigns, to the Reſentment, Pride and Avarice of a deſperate, and till then deſpicable Cabal. My French Hiſtorian explains it thus: de Cize. ANNE un mois & demi après ſon Avenemont a la Couronne jugea a propos d'appeller les Torys, au Miniſteree, &c.

Moderate Counſels owing to Prince George of Denmark.

French Author on Tory Management. "ANNE, ſix Weeks after her coming to the "Crown, thought fit to prefer the Tories to the "Miniſtry, but ſhe put moſt Confidence in thoſe "who were the moſt moderate of the Party. "'Twas thought England ow'd this to the good "Diſpoſition of the Prince of Denmark, the "Queen's Husband, whoſe Sentiments agreed "more with the Whigs, than with the others. If "the Queen, or the Prince, had conſulted their "particular Inclinations only, either the Tories, "or the Whigs, would have govern'd abſolutely: "But theſe Two Royal Perſons had ſo much "Complacency and Reſpect for each other, that "they both comply'd in their Turn. Tories were "plac'd at the Head of Affairs to pleaſe the Queen, "and others, whom the Nation had no need to "be afraid of, were employ'd to ſatisfy the "Prince, &c.

Earl of Marlborough's firſt Campaign.

There may probably be a little too much Refinement in the Frenchman's Politicks, but what he ſays, is pretty much confirm'd by the Hiſtory; though for a Year or two, the Prince's Influence was not very apparent, and the Confederates, and their Friends in England, did not promiſe themſelves that Succeſs in the War, when the Lord Marlborough, and the Lord Godolphin, were not ſo well known to them, as to their great Joy they were bleſt with afterwards; and indeed in the very firſt Campaign, which was open'd with the Siege of Keyſerſwaert: For notwithſtanding all the grand Airs, and the big Words of the FRENCH Court, and their Ambaſſadors, their King's numerous Armies on the Frontiers of the United Provinces, and Germany, did little more than look on, while the Confederates recover'd the Towns, which had been betray'd to him on the Death of the King of Spain.

On the 15th of April, the Trenches were open'd before Keyſerſwaert, by the Forces under the Command of the Prince of Naſſau Saarbruch, the Imperial General: For though the Prince was in the Service of the States-General, the Troops commanded by him were Auxiliaries only, and acted in the Emperor's Name, 'till England and Holland had agreed to declare War againſt France. There were 3000 French in Keyſerſwaert, and the Governor, the Marqueſs de Blainville, was reckon'd as gallant an Officer as any in France. The Prince of Naſſau's Army, at the opening of the Trenches, did not amount to 20000 Men, and the Mareſhal de Boufflers had an Army twice as numerous, on Flanders Side, and the Count de Tallard was poſted with a flying Camp on the other Side of the Rhine, over-againſt Keyſerſwaert, by which he very much incommoded the Beſiegers. They both gave out that they would raiſe the Siege; which Boaſt was deferr'd 'till the Duke of Burgundy put himſelf at the Head of the French Grand Army, and as 'twas ſaid at Verſailles, was to give a Coup de Eclat: Inſtead of which this Grandſon of France contented himſelf with threatning to Bombard Duſſeldorp, if the Prince of Naſſau's Army did not quit the Siege; which took up a great deal of Time, occaſion'd chiefly by the unſeaſonable Weather. The greateſt Action during it, was a Salley made by the Marqueſs de Blainville himſelf, on the 22d of May, which coſt the Allies three or four Hundred Men, and the Engliſh Regiments of Portmore and Stewart ſuffer'd moſt in it; but the French were repuls'd, with the Loſs of 500 Men. On the 9th of June, the Counterſcarp was ſtorm'd, and carry'd, after an obſtinate Fight, which laſted three Hours. The Earl of Huntington was wounded, and Lieutenant-Colonel Collier was kill'd. An Engliſh Officer wrote thus of it to a Friend; We had 492 Men kill'd, and about as many wounded. Thus far I can aſſure you, that in the Attack of Coquelet, at Namur, or any other I was ever engag'd in, I never ſaw the Ground cover'd with ſo many dead Bodies, as the French cover'd Way was, of whom our Men made a dreadful Slaughter, but I cannot give the Particulars of their Slain. On the 17th of June, the Gariſon evacuated the Place, upon honourable Conditions, and on the ſame Day Prince Lewis of Baden inveſted Landau.

A.D.1702.

The Earl of Marlborough, upon his Arrival in Holland, had a ſort of Miſunderſtanding with the Earl of Athlone, about Precedence. The latter commanded the Army which cover'd the Provinces on the Side of Flanders, and the greateſt Part of the Engliſh Troops being in that Army, it was not only the Earl of Marlborough's Right to Command them, but for the Benefit of the Service; though 'tis certain, the Earl of Athlone was the older General Officer, and had commanded a Royal Army in Chief, when the Earl of Marlborough was only a Lieutenant-General. This Diſpute was of too delicate and too dangerous a Nature for the States-General to leave it long in Suſpence, and it was accommodated by the forming a ſeparate Army, to be commanded by the Earl of Marlborough, which was to join that of the Earl of Athlone, when ſuch a Junction was neceſſary; and then in Honour to the Queen of Great Britain, the Earl of Marlborough was to have the Precedence; which cou'd not be conteſted with him, when upon the Death of Prince of Naſſau Saarbrach, their High-Mightineſſes appointed him General of their Army, as well as that of Queen Anne.

Earl of Marlborough made General of the Dutch Forces.

In the mean Time the French King put out his Declaration of War againſt the Emperor, England and Holland, dated at Marli, the 3d of July: It begins thus; and like moſt State-Papers publiſh'd in France, has ſomething pleaſant enough in it, though on ſo doleful a Subject as War, Blood and Slaughter.

French King's Declaration of War.

Although the Treaty concluded at RYSWICK, in a Time when the King, by the Superiority of his Forces, was in a Condition to have given Laws to the Neighbouring Princes that were jealous of his Power, was a certain Proof of the ſincere Deſire that his Majeſty had always to give Peace to his Subjects, and to reſtore Peace to Europe; his Majeſty nevertheleſs finds that the Emperor, without any lawful

A.D.1702. ful Right to the Spaniſh Monarchy, hath put himſelf in a Condition, by the Augmentation of his Troops, by Treaties and Alliances with ſeveral Princes, and particularly with England and Holland, to trouble the Repoſe of Europe, by a new War, as unjuſt as it is ill-grounded. They have begun Hoſtilities on all Sides, which are directly contrary to the Treaties ſo ſolemnly ſworn to. All Europe is Witneſs of his Majeſty's Moderation. She has ſeen Places attack'd, advantageous Ports ſeiz'd, Convoys ſtopp'd, and Priſoners taken, before any Declaration of War; and at a Time when his Majeſty was endeavouring by his Ambaſſadors and Envoys, to preſerve the Peace, &c.

The Duke of Burgundy being daily reinforc'd in his Camp, between the Maes and the Niers, it was expected that he would have given the Coup d' Eclat before-mention'd; but he kept himſelf cloſe confin'd in his ſtrong Camp, till advice came of the Earl of Marlborough's breaking up with the Confederate Army from the Camp near Nimeguen, and making a Motion as if he intended to attack him; his Royal Highneſs upon this, decamp'd with ſo much Precipitation, that his Army left a great deal of their Plunder and Forrage behind them. The ſame Officer I before-mention'd, wrote thus to his Friend. The French thought they came to a good Market, when they ſold a Sack of Corn to the Inhabitants of Goch and Genap for two Shillings Sterling. The Earl of Marlborough follows them cloſe, and they make great Marches to get out of his way. My Lord Marlborough in his March demoliſh'd the ſtrong Caſtle of Gravenbrook, which the French had fortified, and left a good Gariſon in it that might have held out five or ſix Days; but upon the Earl of Marlborough's Meſſage, that they ſhould have no Quarter if they did not ſurrender immediately at Diſcretion, they became all Priſoners of War; the Duke of Burgundy being almoſt within hearing of the Guns that were fir'd at it. By the Retreat of that Prince all Spaniſh Guelderland was abandon'd to the Arms of the Allies, who accordingly made good uſe of their Opportunity. The French Army encamp'd at Hasfelt, with the Damer behind and Moraſſes before them: They alſo entrench'd themſelves with Carts and Waggons full of Earth; being in no Condition, or no Diſpoſition to come to an Engagement with the Confederates. Their General, the eldeſt Grandſon of France lay quiet, only detaching 16 Battalions and 3 or 4 Squadrons to reinforce the Garriſons of Geldre, Rhineberg, Stevenſwart, Ruremond and Venlo. The Confederate Army under the Earl of Marlborough, conſiſting of 56 Battalions of Foot, 99 Squadrons of Horſe, and 38 Squadrons of Dragoons, encamp'd about the 5th of Auguſt, between Brey and Peer, 12 Miles from Hasfelt, and 7 Battalions and 8 Squadrons of the Gariſon of Maeſtricht being commanded to join them, my Lord Marlborough order'd Brigadier Jonagel and the Lord Raby, with a ſtrong Detachment to meet thoſe Forces. After they had join'd the Army, the Siege of Venlo was undertaken: The Lord Cutts had the Command of the Engliſh Foot, as Major General, and Brigadier General Frederick Hamilton ſerv'd under him in that Quality. That Body conſiſted of the Regiments, Web, Barrimore, Bridges and Hamilton; the Earl of Huntington, the Marquis of Lorn, Sir Richard Temple, and the Maſter of Stairs went with them as Volunteers. The Earl of Marlborough in his March to Helkeren, was in hopes to have brought the French, who had quitted their Camp to obſerve his Motions, to an Engagement; but his Motions will be fully explain'd by the following Letter from the Earl to the States General.

The Duke of Burgundy declines Fighting the Earl of Marlborough.

Siege of Venlo.

A.D.1702.

Earl of Marlborough's Letter to the States-General.

High and Mighty Lords,

" MY Lord Athlone hath without doubt given your High and Mighty Lordſhips a particular Account of what has paſt here within theſe three Days; that upon our Arrival in this Camp the 23d Inſtant, the Enemy began to appear marching out of the Defiles of Hochtel, whereupon I order'd immediately the Army to be drawn up in Battle, and to bring up the Cannon for Battery; the Enemy did the ſame, and about three of the Clock in the Afternoon we began to fire on both Sides: Monſieur Obdam, with the Detachment deſign'd for Venlo, was in our Right, and obſerving after we had cannonaded one another near two Hours, that the Enemies Left ſeem'd by their Marches and Countermarches to be in ſome Confuſion, I ſent Orders to Monſieur Obdam, and to all the Right-Line, to advance and charge them, which could not be put in Execution, by reaſon of the Difficulty of the Ground, ſome Moraſſes that were between us, and the Night coming on, they advanced however ſo far; that the Enemy was oblig'd to withdraw the Batteries they had on that ſide.

" My Lord Athlone took at the ſame time Spipil at the Enemies Right, which would have been of great Advantage to them. He poſted there the Count de Noyelles, with 8 Battalions, and ſo the Army continu'd under Arms all Night. All the next Day the Enemy from time to time chang'd their Ground, and ſent Troops from the Left to reinforce their Right; we were buſy all that Day in poſting our ſelves in ſuch a Manner as to be able to attack the Enemy with moſt Advantage: I propoſed to my Lord the Diſpoſition of the Attack to be made the next Day; being the Feaſt of St. Lewis, at break of Day, which he approv'd, as all the other Generals did with great Joy and Satisfaction, and appointed to come to me before Day at the Head of the Engliſh Infantry, to agree finally upon what Meaſures were beſt; but we underſtood the Enemy had privately decamp'd in the Night and marched towards Moll and Balen, whereupon, immediately as ſoon as it was Day, I follow'd them with 20 Squadrons of the Right, as my Lord Athlone did alſo on his ſide, leaving Orders for the reſt of the Army to be in a Readineſs to follow us; but the Enemy paſs'd the Defile with ſo much haſte, that there being beſides a Moraſs between us and them, we could not reach them, nor purſue them ſo far as we deſir'd. However, we fell upon ſome Squadrons of the King's Houſhold, who were in the Rear, kill'd ſeveral of them, and took ſome Priſoners with their Horſes.

" There are great Reaſons to believe, that if the Enemy had not thus retreated, we ſhould, by the Bleſſing of God, have obtain'd a glorious Victory to the Honour and Advantage of the Allies; the whole Army being very hearty and well inclin'd, and ſeeming to deſire nothing more than an Engagement.

" I ſhould have given my ſelf the Honour of writing Yeſterday to your High Mightineſſes, but that I was deſirous at the ſame time to acquaint you with the March of the Detachment for Venlo, which is gone hence this Morning, under the Command of the Baron d' Obdam, and intends to inveſt the Place on this ſide, next Monday. I have communicated this to Monſieur

A.D.1702. " ſieur Gueldermalſen, and to the Baron de Heyde, " that they may take their Meaſures accordingly. " I hope your High Mightineſſes will in a ſhort " time receive good News of their Succeſs, there " being nothing that I deſire more earneſtly than " the Good of the common Cauſe, and to give your " High Mightineſſes, upon all Occaſions, the Proofs " of that Zeal which I ſhall always have for your " Intereſt, as being with great, &c.

At the Camp at Helkeren, Auguſt 26, 1702. MARLBOROUGH.

Venlo was inveſted the 30th of Auguſt, and the Fort of St. Michael which lies before the Town taken by Storm about a Fortnight after. The Lord Cutts behav'd with his uſual Gallantry on that Occaſion, and contributed very much by his Conduct and Courage to the Succeſs of that Action. The Town held out but two or three Days after, and then ſurrender'd upon Articles. This Conqueſt was follow'd by thoſe of Ruremond and Stevenſwaert; after which it was reſolved to March to Liege; the City had been evacuated by the French, who kept the Citadel purely at the Inſtances of the Elector of Cologne, who had been choſen Elector and Biſhop of Liege by the Intereſt of the Confederates, in Oppoſition to the French King, to whom he now revolted; and to keep up the Spirit of his Party in that Biſhoprick, he ſollicited the French Court to order their Generals to hold it out. On the 20th of October the Trenches were open'd before the Citadel by Major General Ingoldsby's, Brigadier Stanley's and other Engliſh Regiments of Foot to the Right, and four Dutch Regiments to the Left. The Hereditary Prince of Heſſe Caſſel, now King of Sweden, reliev'd the Trenches the next Day with other General Officers. The Cannon and Bombs of the Beſiegers having had their Effect, and made a conſiderable Breach, Monſieur Cohorn order'd the Diſpoſition for an Aſſault the 23d of October about four o'Clock in the Afternoon; and though it was intended only to make a Lodgment, yet the Aſſailants went on with ſo much Courage, that being Maſters of the Breach, they enter'd the Citadel and took it Sword in Hand, having after the firſt Fury been very merciful to the Enemy. The Engliſh had the Honour to enter the Breach firſt, and the Governor, Monſieur de Violenne a Brigadier General, was taken at the Breach by a Lieutenant of Major General Stewarts Regiment; the Earl of Marlborough having ſent Orders to the Lord Cutts, who was appointed proviſionally to command the Gariſon of Liege after it was reduc'd, to make all the Diverſion he could in order to facilitate the Attack, my Lord commanded the Troops under Arms ſome time before the Action, and detaching 600 Fuſileers commanded by Sir Matthew Bridges, with 200 Grenadiers at their Head commanded by Major Sutton, he advanc'd through the Vineyards between the City and the Citadel, and gaining the Works on that ſide, which the Enemy had in a Manner abandon'd, paſt thro' into the Citadel with his Detachment, meeting with little or no Oppoſition. The French Gariſon conſiſted of no leſs than 8 Battalions, as many as were employ'd in the Aſſault, and the Lord Cutts gave the Earl of Marlborough after the Action was over, an Account of 163 Officers, and 2100 private Soldiers made Priſoners. With this Conqueſt the Earl of Marlborough finiſh'd his firſt glorious Campaign, but had like to have ſeen its Glory very much eclips'd, by an Accident at the end of it; for as his Lordſhip, Monſieur Geldermalſen, one of the States Deputies, and General Cohorn, were coming down the Maeſe in a Barge, with a Guard of 25 Soldiers only, a Party of the Gariſon of Gueldres, who lay in Ambuſh on the Banks of the River, A.D.1702. came upon the Boat on a ſudden, caught hold of the Rope by which the Horſes drew it and haul'd it aſhore, diſcharging their Fire-Arms, and throwing their Granado's into it at the ſame time. Thus they eaſily made themſelves Maſters of the Boat. Monſieur Geldermalſen was ſhot in the Reins by a Musket Ball, and ſix of his Domeſticks wounded. While the Officer who commanded the French Party were ſcrupling the Validity of a Paſs which that Miniſter had under ſome other Name for himſelf and Retinue; his Soldiers broke open the Trunks and carrying off the Plunder with the 25 Men that guarded the Barge, they then ſuffer'd it to proceed, and my Lord Marlborough came to the Hague ſoon after the News that he was taken and carried Priſoner to Guelder; which dejected the Spirits of the People ſo much, that nothing but the ſudden Appearance of his Lordſhip amongſt them could have kept them from ſinking. The Earl ſtaid at the Hague about three Weeks, and was no leſs ſucceſsful in his Negotiations there, than he had been in the Field. He left the Command of the Engliſh Forces to my Lord Cutts, and on the 22d of November ſet out for the Brill to embark for England. General Cohorn was ſent with 10000 Men into Flanders, ſome time before the Siege of Keyſerſwaert, to demoliſh the Lines between the Forts St. Donat and Iſabella. He took Middleburgh, a ſmall Town in the Spaniſh Territories which the French had begun to fortify, laid the Country about Bruges under Contribution, made himſelf Maſter of Fort St. Donat, and in a few Days levell'd thoſe Lines which the French had been many Months employ'd to raiſe. I ſhall juſt mention the taking of Landau after a Siege of three Months, and ſee what Account is given of the Expedition to Cadix, which was concerted in the King's time.

General Cohorn's Succeſs.

Landau taken.

A Month before the Fleet ſail'd, Sir John Munden was ſent out with a Squadron of Men of War to intercept a French Squadron commanded by Monſieur du Caſſe, and return'd to St. Hellens, without being able to hinder the French from getting into the Groyne, or to fight them there. The Queen bore this Diſappointment ſo impatiently, that a Commiſſion was iſſu'd to enquire into Sir John Munden's Conduct, and a Court Martial was held on board her Majeſty's Ship the Queen at Spithead, the 13th of July,

The Expedition to Cadix.

Sir John Munden try'd by a Court Martial.

PRESENT.

Sir Cloudeſly Shovel Admiral of the White, PRESIDENT.

Cap. Cole,	Cap. Good,	Cap. Bridges.
Cap. Mungs,	Cap. Mayne,	Cap. Maynard,
Cap. Leake,	Cap. Kerr,	Cap. Crow,
Cap. Greenhill,	Cap. Clarke,	Cap. Littleton,
Cap. Turvill,	Cap. Ward,	Cap. Hollyman,
Cap. Swanton,	Cap. Cooper,

who being all ſworn, and having examin'd the ſeveral Articles exhibited againſt Rear Admiral Munden, gave their Opinion, That he had fully clear'd himſelf from the whole Matter contained in them, and as far as it appear'd to the Court, had comply'd with his Inſtructions, and behav'd himſelf with great Zeal and Diligence in this Service; and accordingly the Court does acquit Sir John Munden from all the Particulars of this Charge. But whether it was that Sir George Rook did not favour him, or that the Removing him on account of Miſconduct, would be exemplary and uſeful in the Beginning of a War; he was laid aſide.

Citadel of Liege taken Sword in Hand.

Lord Marlborough taken and let go.

The Engliſh and Dutch Land Forces being join'd, made near 13000 Men, and the Engliſh and Dutch Squadrons near 50 Sail of Men of War. They ſail'd from Torbay the 21ſt of July, and reach'd

A. D. 1702 the Rock of Lisbon the 10th of Auguſt, where the Prince of Heſſe Darmſtadt, and Mr. Methuen the Younger, came on board the Admiral to aſſiſt at a Council of War, which was held the next Day, and then Mr. Methuen return'd to Lisbon.

On the 12th of Auguſt the Fleet came from before Cadix, and anchor'd about 2 Leagues from the City. Sir Thomas Smith, Quarter Maſter Geral, having view'd and ſounded the Shore on the Backſide of the Iſle of Leon in which Cadi ſtands, and reported that there were very convenient Bays to make a Deſcent; the Duke of Ormond vehemently inſiſted in a Council of War upon landing in that Iſle, in order to a ſudden and vigorous Attack of the Town, where the Conſternation was ſo great, that in all probability the Enterprize would have ſucceeded; but ſeveral of the Council, eſpecially the Sea Officers, oppoſing the Duke's Motion, it was reſolv'd that the Army ſhould firſt take the Fort of St. Katherine and Port St. Mary, to facilitate thereby a nearer approach to Cadix. The next Day, September 13, the Duke of Ormond ſent a Trumpet to Cadix, with a Letter to the Duke de Brancaccio the Governor, whom the Duke had known in the Spaniſh Service in the laſt Confederate War; but in Anſwer to the Letter inviting him to ſubmit to the Houſe of Auſtria, Brancaccio reply'd, He would acquit himſelf honourably of the Truſt that was repos'd in him by the King. On the 15th of Auguſt the Duke of Ormond landed his Forces in the Bay of Bulls, above a Mile on the Left of St. Katherine's Fort; the Cannon of which fir'd on his Men all the while, but with little Execution: The firſt that landed were 1200 Grenadiers led by Brigadier Pallant, and the Earl of Donnegal; they were obliged to wade to the Shore, and were all very wet when they reach'd it. In the mean time Capt. Jumper in the Lenox, and ſome Engliſh and Dutch light Frigates, kept firing on the Horſe that appear'd near the Coaſt, and were repuls'd by the Engliſh Foot. The Duke of Ormond as ſoon as the Troops were landed, ſent to ſummon Fort St. Katharine, but the Governor reply'd, He had Cannon mounted, with Powder and Ball ſufficient to receive him. On the 16th the whole Army march'd to a Camp mark'd out for them, near La Rotta, a Town within a League of the Place where they landed, from which moſt of the Inhabitants were fled; but ſtrict Orders being given againſt Plundering, many of them return'd; and had the Spaniards given due Attention to the Duke's Declaration, publiſh'd at his firſt coming on the Spaniſh Coaſt, they needed not to have been in any Conſternation.

The Engliſh take La Rotta.

It was as follows:

That her Majeſty the Queen of Great-Britain, having been pleas'd to give him the Command of the Forces which her Majeſty has join'd with thoſe of the States General, for aſſerting the Rights of the Houſe of Auſtria, in purſuance of their Treaties of Alliance with the Emperor: His Grace judg'd it neceſſary, before he made uſe of the ſaid Forces, to declare, That he did not come thither to poſſeſs himſelf of any Place of the Spaniſh Monarchy, in the Name of her Majeſty, or of the States General of the United Provinces, or to introduce therein the uſual Troubles and Calamities of War by way of Conqueſt; but rather to defend the good and loyal Subjects of the ſaid Monarchy, and to free them from the inſupportable Slavery whereto they are brought, and ſold to France by ſome diſaffected Perſons: Wherefore the Deſign of her Majeſty and the States General, being only to aſſert the Rights of the Houſe of Auſtria, his Grace declared, That all good Spaniards that ſhould not oppoſe his Forces, ſhould be protected in their Privileges, Religion, &c. But if contrary to Expectation, they did not concur with her Majeſty and the States General's good Intentions, his Grace took God to Witneſs, that then the Hoſtilities committed by the Troops under his command, muſt be laid on the Spaniards themſelves, who having ſo fair an Opportunity to ſhew their Loyalty, and follow the Motives of their Obligations and Intereſt, refus'd to embrace it. A. D. 1702.

On the 20th of Auguſt the Duke of Ormond having left a Gariſon of 300 Men under Colonel Newton of the Guards, in La Rotta, march'd towards Port St. Maries; ſome Squadrons of Spaniſh Horſe, about 600 in Number, fir'd upon the Duke's advanc'd Guards, and kill'd Lieutenant Colonel Gore's Horſe, of the Dragoons, but retir'd on the Approach of the Engliſh Grenadiers, of whom a Detachment under Colonel Pierce of the Guards were ſent to take Fort St. Catharine, which they did, and made 120 Spaniards Priſoners of War. The Duke enter'd Port St. Maries, attended by the General Officers, as Sir Henry Ballaſis, Lieutenant General; the Earl of Portmore, Sir Charles Hara and Baron Spaar, Major Generals; Colonel Seymour, Colonel Lloyd, Colonel Matthews, Colonel Hamilton and Colonel Pallant, Brigadier Generals: And notwithſtanding the ſtrict Orders the Duke had iſſu'd againſt Plundering, there was a very great Failure in the Execution of them; for which Sir Henry Ballaſis, and Sir Charles Hara, were put under Arreſt when they came to England. Ballaſis was diſmiſs'd the Service; and though Hara eſcap'd publick Cenſure, he did not private. Mr. Methuen, her Majeſty's Envoy in Portugal, in a Letter to the Duke of Ormond, dated Auguſt the 1ſt, gave this wholeſome Advice concerning the Conduct of the Army, That the Point of greateſt Importance, was to inſinuate to the Spaniards, and ſhew by their Proceeding, that they came not as Enemies to Spain, but only to free them from France, and give them Aſſiſtance to eſtabliſh themſelves under the Government of the Houſe Auſtria. It being found too difficult to approach Cadix, while the Spaniards were in Poſſeſſion of Matagorda Fort, over-againſt the Puntal, it was order'd to be attack'd, and a Battery of four Pieces of Cannon erected againſt it; but upon each Firing, the Guns ſunk into the Sand: And after a fruitleſs Attempt, the Deſign was given over, and the Troops order'd to re-imbark, which was done accordingly, with Intention to make the beſt of their way Home. As they were ſo doing, Captain Hardy, Commander of her Majeſty's Ship the Pembroke, who being ſent into Lagos Bay, with the Horſes on Board, to Water, in Diſcourſe with the French Conſul there, learn'd that they had extraordinary News, but had no Particulars. Soon after an Expreſs arriv'd from the Emperor's Miniſter at Lisbon, with Letters for the Prince of Heſſe and Mr. Methuen, who being both gone in a private Ship for England, the Expreſs would not deliver them, but return'd to Lisbon: However, he inform'd Captain Hardy that the French Squadron, and the Galeons, arriv'd at Vigo the 16th of September. With this News he made what Haſte he could to come up with the Fleet, which he did on the third of October, but the Wind blew ſo hard, that he cou'd not ſpeak with Sir George Rook 'till the 6th, when a Council of War was call'd, and it was reſolv'd to ſail thither, and attack the Enemy. Some ſmall Veſſels were ſent to make a Diſcovery of them, which was done effectually by the Kent's Boat; and the Captain underſtood, that Monſieur Chaſteau Renault's Squadron of French Men of War, and the Spaniſh Galeons, were all in that Harbour; but the Wind blowing a Storm, drove the Fleet to the Northwards, as far as Cape Finiſtre, and it came not before the Place 'till the 11th of October. The Paſſage into the Harbour was not above three Quarters of a Mile over, with a Battery of eight Braſs, and twelve Iron Guns

The Conduct at Port St. Maries.

French Fleet at Vigo.

A.D.1702. on the North-ſide, and on the South was a Platform of 20 Braſs Guns and 20 Iron Guns, as alſo a Stone Fort with a Trench before it, 10 Guns mounted, and 500 Men in it. There was from one ſide of the Harbour to the other, a ſtrong Boom of Ships Yards and Top-maſts faſten'd together with 3 Inch Rope, very thick, and under-run with Haulſers and Cables, the Top Chain at each end was moor'd to a ſeventy Gun Ship, the one call'd the Hope, which had been taken from the Engliſh, and the other was the Bourbon; within the Boom were moor'd 5 Ships of 60 and 70 Guns each, with their Broadſides fronting the Entrance of the Paſſage, ſo as they might fire at any Ship that came near the Boom, Forts and Platform. The Admirals remov'd the Flags from the great Ships into 3d Rates; the firſt and ſecond Rates being too big to go in: Sir George Rook went out of the Royal Sovereign into the Somerſet; Admiral Hopſon out of the Prince George into the Torbay; Admiral Fairborn out of the St. George into the Eſſex; and Admiral Graydon out of the Triumph into the Northumberland. A Detachment of 15 Engliſh, and 10 Dutch Men of War, with all the Fire Ships, Frigats and Bomb Veſſels, were order'd to go upon this Service. The Engliſh Ships, were the Mary, Grafton, Torbay, Kent, Monmouth, Berwick, Eſſex, Swiftſure, Ranelagh, Somerſet, Bedford, Cambridge, Northumberland, Oxford, Pembroke; the Aſſociation and Barfleur were to batter the Forts on each ſide. Such was the Diſpoſition agreed upon in a Council of War for the Attack by Sea. To facilitate which the Duke of Ormond on the 12th of October landed 2500 Men 2 Leagues from Vigo, on the South-ſide of the River; and the Lord Shannon, with 500 Grenadiers advanced to the Stone Fort at the Entrance of the Harbour, who having made themſelves Maſters of the Platform of 40 Pieces of Cannon, purſu'd the French to the Gates of the Fort, and attackt them ſo vigorouſly, that Monſieur Sozel, the Commander, deſpairing of holding the Place, pretended in a Gaſconade to fight his way through the Engliſh. But no ſooner were the Gates open'd, than the Grenadiers ruſhing in, made themſelves Maſters of the Fort, and took 300 French Men and 50 Spaniards.

While theſe Things were tranſacting aſhore, the Squadron of Men of War advanc'd toward the Boom, and after being ſtopp'd by a little Calm, Admiral Hopſon broke through it amidſt the Enemies Fire, from the Bourbon and Hope. The Boom being broken, the Kent and the reſt of the Squadron, as well Dutch as Engliſh, enter'd the Harbour, and the Aſſociation having batter'd the Platform on the North-ſide, another Party of Grenadiers took it Sword in Hand; by which the Confederate Forces became entire Maſters of the Shore and Harbour.

The Torbay, in which was Admiral Hopſon, was boarded by a French Fire-Ship, and in great danger of being burnt, had not the Fire-Ship been blown up too ſoon. However, the Torbay receiv'd conſiderable Damage, and 60 of her Crew during the firſt Conſternation threw themſelves over-board in hopes to ſave their Lives, but were moſt of them drown'd; while the reſt behav'd ſo well as to ſave the Ship. The French Admiral ſeeing the Boom cut in pieces, and the Forts and Platforms taken, as alſo the Bourbon Man of War, gave Orders to ſet Fire to his own Ship, and himſelf made his eſcape to Shore. His Example being follow'd by the other Commanders, there was a moſt dreadful Conflagration in the Harbour of Vigo; the Engliſh were as buſy in preſerving, as the Enemy were in deſtroying their own Fleet, and took ſeveral Men of War and Galeons, as by the following Account. A.D.1702.

French Ships taken, burnt, and run aſhore. — French Ships taken and deſtroy'd.

Ships Burnt.	Number of Guns.
Le Forte,	76
Le Enflame,	64
Le Prudent,	62
Le Solide,	56
Le Dauphin,	46
Le Entreprenant,	22
Le Choquant,	8
Le Favort, a Fire-Ship,
8 Advice Boats,	Tot. Guns 334
Ships 11

Taken by the Engliſh and brought home.

Ships.	Guns.
Le Promp,	76
Le Firme,	72
Le Eſperance,	70
Le Aſſuree,	66
4 Ships.	Guns 284

Taken by the Dutch.

Ships.	Guns.
Le Bourbon,	68
Le Superbe,	70
Le Sirenne,	60
Le Modere,	56
Le Voluntaire,	46
Le Triton,	42
6 Ships.	Guns 342
Tot. Ships 21.	Guns 960

Six Galeons were taken by the Engliſh, and five by the Dutch, who ſunk ſix.

A Liſt of the Galeons that were taken, burnt or ſtranded at Vigo. — Galeons taken or deſtroy'd.

Ships Names.	Commanders.	Guns.
Jeſus Maria Joſeph,	Don Manuel de Velaſco, Admiral.	44 Braſs
Santiᵐᵃ Trinidada Noſtra Senora las Animas,	Don Joſeph Chacon, Vice Admiral.	44 Braſs
Sad Juan Baxſta, Engliſh built,	Don Fernando Chawis, Rear Admiral.	50 Iron
Santo Chriſto de Mara cayo,	Don Vincente Alvarez.	40
Santo Chriſto de Buen viaje,	Don Franciſco Blanco.	36
Santa Cruz,	Don Alonzo y Parraguirra.	34
Nueſtra Senora del Roſario,	Don Cozme Antonio Monteagudo.	30
Neuſtra Senora delas Mercedes,	Don Franciſco Barragon.	12
Neuſtra Senora delas Anguſtias,	Don Miguel Cane.	24
Santo Domingo,	Don Ignacie Aſcanohuette.	30
Nueſtra Senora delos Dolores,	Don Antonio Gomez de Utiza.	36
El Toro,	Don Martin Noguerra.	26
Philipo quinto,	Don —— Martin.	8

San

*A.D.*1702.	San Diego,	Don Juan Daago.	12	*A.D.*1702.
	La Sacra Familla, Jeſus, Maria, Joſeph y las Animas,	Don Triburáo Bernardo Vera.	12
	And two other Ships.		438
	17 Ships in all.

Of theſe the Admiral and Vice-Admiral were burnt, and two others, one of thirty, and the other of thirty-ſix Guns: All the reſt were Taken, or Stranded, and the Toro was brought Home with the Engliſh Fleet.

It added much to the Glory of this Victory, that it coſt few Mens Lives, there being not above forty Soldiers kill'd, and ten wounded. Of the Seamen, very few were either kill'd or wounded; and thoſe of the Torbay's Crew that were drown'd, were the moſt that periſh'd in this Enterprize.

As to the Value of the Prizes taken, I never heard any good Account of it, and I believe the publick Reports magnify'd it; for the Spaniſh and French Ships had been twenty-five Days in Vigo Harbour, before the Confederates arriv'd there; and being in perpetual Fear of what happen'd, had unladen the greateſt Part of their Plate and rich Goods. The whole Cargo aboard their Fleet was computed at twenty Millions of Pieces of Eight, beſides Merchandizes: About fourteen Millions of which was Landed, and a great part of the Remainder loſt in the Galeons that were ſunk or burnt. The Merchandizes were ſaid to be of as great Value as the Plate, of which the Spaniards ſav'd a fourth Part; two fourths were deſtroy'd, and the other fourth taken by the Engliſh and Dutch. By which a Gueſs may be made, that two Millions of the Plate, and five Millions of the Goods, fell into the Hands of the Confederates; in all ſeven Millions of Pieces of Eight, about One Million five hundred thouſand Pounds Sterling, which certainly is more than ever was brought to the publick Account in England and Holalnd: But the Damage the French receiv'd, in the Deſtruction of ſo large a Squadron of fine Ships, was irreparable; and is like to be ſo, if the Maritime Powers continue to have the ſame Regard to the Marine, as have made them Maſters at Sea ever ſince this great and fortunate Action; which put a ſtop to the Clamour that was beginning, on Account of the ill Succeſs and ill Conduct at Cadix; not imputed to any want of Courage or Council in the Duke of Ormond, or Sir George Rooke.

Value of the Prizes.

The next Morning the Duke of Ormond took Poſſeſſion of Rodondilla, where the Soldiers met with good Plunder, a great deal of Silver having been carried thither by the Spaniards that were come aſhore. Cannas, a Village on the River of Vigo, was burnt; and Vigo threaten'd, for refuſing to pay the Contributions that were demanded of them, but the Threats were not put in Execution. Three Days after, Sir Cloudeſley Shovel join'd the Fleet, with twenty nine Sail of Men of War. The Duke of Ormond was for wintering at Vigo, if a ſufficient Number of Ships and Proviſions were left with him; but the Admiral declaring he would not leave above five or ſix Weeks Proviſions, that Deſign was laid aſide, and the Land-Forces reembark'd the 17th of October. The 19th Sir George Rook, and Admiral Hopſon, with ten Men of War, ſail'd for England, leaving Sir Cloudeſley Shovel, with the reſt of the Fleet, near Vigo, to deſtroy the Enemies Ships that were run aſhore; which he effected, and then return'd alſo to England, where they all arriv'd in Safety, about the middle of November. The Duke of Ormond, and Sir George Rooke, were receiv'd at Court moſt graciouſly. The Lord Shannon, and Captain Hardy, whom the Duke had ſent Home Expreſs with the firſt Account of the taking and deſtroying of the French Squadron, and the Spaniſh Galeons, had a noble Gratuity given them, and Captain Hardy receiv'd the Honour of Knighthood. About the ſame Time came the welcome News that Captain Lake, with a Squadron of Men of War, had deſtroy'd the French Harbours in Newfoundland, and twenty-two French Ships; had taken twenty-nine more, and ruin'd the Stages and Fiſhing-Boats at Trapaſſi, St. Maries, Colonet, great and little St. Laurence, and the Iſland of St. Peters, at the Entrance into Fortune-Bay, being all conſiderable French Settlements on that Coaſt.

French Harbours in Newfoundland deſtroy'd.

The Succeſs at Vigo contributed much to that of Mr. Methuen's Negotiations at the Court of Portugal, where the Prince of Heſſe Darmſtadt had been to aſſiſt in them, on the Part of the Emperor; and had alſo return'd to England with Mr. Methuen, to give her Majeſty an Account of the Diſpoſition of that King, and his Miniſters, to quit the Alliance with France, and enter into the Grand One with her, which was accompliſh'd the next Year. We have now done with the Military Tranſactions of this, and muſt return to the Civil.

On the 2d of July, the Parliament was diſſolv'd by Proclamation, and a new one appointed to be call'd, which was to meet the 20th of Auguſt; and in the mean Time, ſays a late Hiſtorian, who boaſts much of his Impartiality, the Elections were carried on with great Warmth and Contention, though with viſible Advantage on the Side of the Church, or Tory-Party; which was in great Meaſure owing to the Countenance and Encouragements they receiv'd from the Court. This wou'd have been partial in me, even to Scandal, and therefore I make Uſe of that Writer's Words, though they have no other good Quality, but that they are not my own. We ſhall preſently ſee again, how a Majority of ſuch a Party will behave, when Opportunity is given them.

A New Parliament.

On the 2d of July, Count Platen, Envoy Extraordinary from the Elector of Hanover, had his Publick Audience of the Queen and Prince, to the great Satisfaction of all good Britons, who otherwiſe had Cauſe enough to be diſſatisfy'd, ſeeing ſo many Enemies to the Proteſtant Succeſſion in Places of the higheſt Honour and Truſt. Three Days after was publiſh'd her Majeſty's Order againſt ſelling Places. Of which one Hiſtorian ſays, I take it to be more Matter of Form, than any Thing that had any real Effect. And another, It was ſhrewdly obſerv'd, that this was done after abundance of Places had been purchas'd from the favourite Counteſs. Both the Queen and Prince being adviſ'd by their Phyſicians to the Uſe of the Bath-Waters, they ſet out from Windſor the 26th of Auguſt, and lay the firſt Night at Oxford, where, the next Day her Majeſty was preſent in Convocation, and heard a Speech made by the Orator. After which, according to Cuſtom, all thoſe Courtiers who were willing to accept of the Univerſity Compliment, were made Doctors of Law; as the Duke of Somerſet, the Earl of Jerſey, the Earl of Sandwich, the Lord Delaware, Peregrine Bertie, Eſq; Sir Benjamin Bathurſt, Sir John Walter, Sir Simon Harcourt, William Bromley, Eſq; Henry Hanover Envoy has Audience.

P. 176.

The Queen at Oxford.

A.D.1702. St. John, Eſq; Edward Nicholas, Eſq; Charles Scarborough, Eſq;. At the Theatre, her Majeſty was entertain'd with the Rehearſal of ſome Poems, by Mr. Oately and Mr. Reſloff, Gentlemen Commoners of Baliol-Colledge, and Mr. Bilſon, Gentleman Commoner of New-College, and after that with a ſplendid Banquet. Having accepted of the uſual Preſents of a Bible, a Common-Prayer-Book, and a Pair of Gloves, the Queen took Coach for Cirenceſter, where ſhe lay at the Houſe of Thomas Maiſters, Eſq;. On the 28th, her Majeſty was waited upon by the Duke of Beaufort, and a great Number of Gentlemen, who attended her to Badminton, the Duke's Seat, where ſhe and her Retinue were magnificently entertain'd, and about eight the ſame Night, ſhe arriv'd at Bath, and took up her Lodgings at Dr. Pierce's Houſe in the Abbey-Cloſe, near the Church.

The Queen at Bath.

On Tueſday, the 1ſt of September, John Hawkins, Eſq; Mayor of Briſtol, Samuel Baily, and Richard Baily, Eſquires, the two Sheriffs, with ſeveral Aldermen, and the Town-Clerk, came to Bath to wait on her Majeſty, and give her an Invitation to her City of Briſtol; which ſhe being pleas'd to accept, on the Thurſday following her Majeſty, accompany'd with Prince George of Denmark, went thither, attended with ſeveral of the Nobility. The Mayor and Aldermen receiv'd the Queen at Lawford's Gate, with the accuſtom'd Ceremonies, and conducted her to Sir Thomas Day's Houſe at the Bridge-End; a great Number of Horſemen riding before, among whom were about ſixty Sea-Captains, all Inhabitants of Briſtol, with Red Cockades in their Hats. After them follow'd twelve Coaches of the Queen's and the Nobility's, with ſix Horſes each: Then came eighteen Miniſters of that City, riding Bareheaded; and after them the Common-Council in their Gowns, the Aldermen, all well Mounted, and in their Scarlet Gowns, all riding Bare; as did alſo the Mayor, carrying in his Hand the Pearl Sword before the Queen's Coach; the Guards being part in the Front, and part in the Rear of it, follow'd by the Coaches of the Nobility and Gentry. Her Majeſty was cloath'd in Purple, being her Mourning for the late King. Her Coaches, and the Trappings of her Horſes were Black. With the Queen rode in her Coach the Prince her Royal Conſort, and two Ladies of her Bedchamber. Conſidering the ſhort Time the City had for her Reception, the Entertainment prepar'd for her at Sir Thomas Day's Houſe, was very ſplendid. The City was at the Charge. And her Majeſty having conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on the Mayor, Sir John Hawkins, return'd to Bath about five a Clock the ſame Day, very well pleas'd with the Demonſtrations ſhe receiv'd there, of the Citizens Duty and Affections.

Entertain'd at Briſtol.

Engliſh and Dutch Reſidents in Sweden, complain of the Clergy there.

Mr. Robinſon, the Divine, who was the Engliſh Reſident in Sweden in King William's Time, began now to be a little talk'd of for a Memorial he, and the Dutch Reſident in that Kingdom, preſented to the Regency, complaining of ſome Theſes of Divinity, publickly argu'd in Upſal before the General-Aſſembly of the Clergy of Sweden, wherein it was aſſerted, that Atheiſm was now a prevailing Opinion in ſeveral Nations. That the Italians are to be rank'd firſt in that Number; the French in the ſecond Place; the Engliſh in the third; and the Dutch in the laſt: But it is not ſaid that the two Reſidents had any Reparation for the Injury done to the Character of their Nations, by traducing them as Atheiſts. Mr. Robinſon acted in this as became his Profeſſion; whether he did ſo at Utrecht, ten Years after, let the Caſuiſts determine.

Promotions and Preferments were ſtill made in Favour of High-Church. The Marquis of Normanby was made Lord Lieutenant of the North Riding of Yorkſhire; Sir Joſeph Tredenham, Knight, Charles Goring, Eſq; Robert Yard, Eſq; George Morley, Eſq; and Anthony Duncomb, Eſq; were made Commiſſioners of the Prizes; James Herbert, Eſq; Treaſurer, and Anthony Burnaby, Eſq; Secretary. Mr. Serjeant Hock was remov'd from being a Welch Judge, and Marmaduke Gwyn, Eſq; put in his Place. Sir John Trevor, Maſter of the Rolls, Sir Thomas Trevor, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, and John Granville, Eſq; were ſworn of the Privy-Council.

A.D.1702. More High-Church Men preferr'd.

Sub-Commiſſioners for Prizes.

William Campion, Eſq; John Boyſe, Eſq; } at Dover.
Edward Knatchbull, Eſq; Charles Goring, Eſq; } at Portſmouth.
John Mountſtevens, Eſq; John Manley, Eſq; } at Plymouth.
——— Anneſly, Eſq; Abraham Stanyan, Eſq; } at Briſtol.

Equeries to her Majeſty.

Hugh Chudleigh, Eſq;
Hon. Robert Bulkeley, Eſq;
William Duncomb, Eſq;
——— Fielding, Eſq;
——— Oglethorp, Eſq;
——— Liſter, Eſq;

I ſhall cloſe this Paragraph, with a Liſt of the New Juſtices of the Peace for Middleſex, which will ſufficiently ſhew what Diſpoſition the Court was now in, to favour the Friends to the late King, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

New Juſtices of the Peace.

Sir Edward Seymour.
Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave.
Sir Simon Harcourt.
John How, Eſq;
Sir Benjamin Bathurſt.
Robert Harley, Eſq;
Sir Thomas Daval.
George Clark, Eſq;
Edward Waldoe, Eſq;
John Tucker, Eſq;
Charles Scarborough, Eſq;
Sir Jeremy Sambroke.
Thomas Coke, Eſq;
Charles Davenant, Eſq; L. L. D.
John Caſe, Eſq;
William Aglionby, Eſq;
Bazil Herne, Eſq;
John Mabbot, Eſq;
Thomas Weſt, Eſq;
Nicholas Goodwin, Eſq;
John Highlord, Eſq;
Iſaac Clarke, Eſq;
John Huxley, Eſq;
John Croſley, Eſq;
Richard Dyot, Eſq;
Daniel Brattle, Eſq;
Thomas Paſſmore, Eſq;
Richard War, Eſq;
Edward Jennings, Eſq;
William Wright, Eſq;
John Lake, Eſq;
Thomas Goodall, Eſq;
Richard Page, Eſq;
William Bridges, Eſq;

To make Room for theſe, and others on the ſame Line in Politicks, fifty-ſeven Juſtices of the Peace, who had been in Commiſſion for the County of Middleſex in King William's Time, were now left out; and it is not to be queſtion'd, had not the Prince, and my Lord Marlborough, and my Lord Godolphin interpos'd, the Adminiſtration would have center'd in High-Church, from the beginning to the end of this Reign; which would then have been as Inglorious as the other Reigns had been, from the Death of Queen Elizabeth, to the Abdication of King James.

The Queen ſtaid ſix Weeks at Bath, and then return'd to Windſor, and thence to London; where on the 20th of October, the new Parliament met, and choſe Robert Harley, Eſq; their Speaker, who the next Day was preſented to the Queen, and approv'd. After which her Majeſty made the following Speech to both Houſes.

A.D.1702.

Queen's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" IT is with great Satisfaction I meet this Parliament, which I have ſummon'd to aſſiſt me " in carrying on the juſt and neceſſary War in " which we are engag'd. I have call'd you together as early as was conſiſtent with your Convenience in coming out of your ſeveral Counties; and I aſſure my ſelf of ſuch Evidences of " your Affection to me, and of your Zeal for the " Common Cauſe, as will not only give Spirit and " Forwardneſs to our own Preparations, but ſuch " Example and Encouragement to our Allies, as, " by God's Aſſiſtance, cannot fail of a good Effect, for the Advantage of the whole Confederacy. I have met with ſo many Expreſſions of " Joy and Satisfaction in all the Countries through " which I have lately had an Occaſion to paſs, that " I cannot but look upon them as true Meaſures of " the Duty and Affection of the reſt of my Subjects.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

" I muſt deſire you to grant me ſuch Supplies, " as will enable me to comply both with our particular Treaties and Engagements already made, " and ſuch others as may be neceſſary for the Encouragement of our Allies, and the proſecuting " this War, where it ſhall moſt ſenſibly affect our " Enemies, and be moſt effectual for diſappointing " the boundleſs Ambition of France. And that " my Subjects may the more chearfully bear the " neceſſary Taxes, I deſire you to inſpect the " Accompts of all the publick Receipts and Payments: And if there have been any Abuſes or " Miſmanagements, I hope you will detect them, " that the Offenders may be puniſh'd, and others " be deterr'd by ſuch Examples, from the like " Practices.

" I muſt obſerve to you with ſome Concern, " that the Funds given by the laſt Parliament, " have, in ſome Meaſure, fallen ſhort of the " Sums propos'd to be rais'd by them; and though " I have already paid and apply'd to the publick " Service, the Hundred Thouſand Pounds which I " promis'd to the laſt Parliament, yet it has not " ſupply'd that Deficiency.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" I cannot, without much Trouble, take Notice to you, of the Diſappointment we have had " at Cadiz. I have not yet had a particular Account of that Enterprize, nor of all the Difficulties " our Forces may have met with there; but I " have had ſuch a Repreſentation of Diſorders and " Abuſes committed at Port St. Maries, as have " obliged me to give Directions for the ſtricteſt " Examination of that Matter.

" I am earneſtly deſirous, for all our Sakes, that " this may prove a ſhort Seſſion. However, I " hope you will find Time to conſider of ſome " better and more effectual Method to prevent the " Exportation of Wool, and to improve that " Manufacture, which is of ſo great Conſequence " to the whole Kingdom. On my Part, nothing " ſhall be omitted for its Encouragement.

" I am firmly perſuaded, that the Love and " good Affection of my Subjects, is the ſureſt " Pledge of their Duty and Obedience, and the " trueſt and juſteſt Support of the Throne: And as " I am reſolv'd to Defend and Maintain the " Church, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, and to protect " you in the full Enjoyment of all your Rights " and Liberties; ſo I rely upon your Care of me. " My Intereſt and yours are inſeparable, and my " Endeavours ſhall never be wanting, to make you " all Safe and Happy.

A.D.1702.

Some Perſons, perhaps of too delicate Taſte, ſeem'd to diſtinguiſh between the Stile and Spirit of this Speech, and the Speeches from the Throne in the laſt Reign. They fancy'd they miſt ſome of that Cordiality and Eloquence with which they ſuppos'd the Lord Somers animated King William's Speeches; and it was obſerv'd that there was a Languor in this of the Queen, which was not in thoſe of the late King. But theſe were wild Gueſſes, and were no better founded than on a Conceit, that Wit, Learning and Eloquence were then, as in Greece and Italy, on the Side of Liberty, with which the then prevailing Party never ſided.

The Lords and Commons Addreſſes.

The Lords and Commons ſuited their Addreſſes to her Majeſty's Speech; and the latter, in the following Paragraph, caſt a Reflection on King William's glorious Memory: The late Diſappointment at Cadiz does the more affect us, becauſe it gives your Majeſty ſo much Trouble; but this Misfortune cannot make us forget, that the Protection and Security of our Trade, the vigorous Support of your Majeſty's Allies, and the wonderful Progreſs of your Majeſty's Arms, under the Conduct of the Earl of Marlborough, have ſignally RETRIEV'D the ancient Honour of this Nation. The Word Retriev'd, occaſion'd a great Debate in the Houſe, and out of the Houſe. It was ſaid it was not only ungrateful, and ungenerous, but unjuſt, to lay ſuch an Aſperſion on the Memory of the late King. For beſides that no King of England had ever fought ſo many Battels in Defence of our Country, againſt France, and done ſo many great Actions in Perſon; the Succeſs of her Majeſty's Arms, and the Support of her Allies, were in a great Meaſure owing to his late Majeſty's Schemes and Counſels. The Well-Affected in the Houſe, were for the Word Maintain'd, inſtead of Retriev'd; but upon a Diviſion, 180 Voices were for Retriev'd, and only 80 for Maintain'd. Speaking of this Diviſion to Colonel Dore, Member of Parliament for Lymington in Hampſhire, he ſaid, we were the leaſt Party that ever made an Oppoſition, but ſurely we were the loudeſt: For who, without Indignation, could hear a Reflection, ſo full of Nonſenſe, Injuſtice and Ingratitude, caſt on the Memory of their Deliverer, as the Queen her ſelf call'd his late Majeſty, in her Letter to the Parliament of Scotland. Mr. Walſh, at that Time Knight of the Shire for Worceſterſhire, whom Dryden ſpeaks of as the greateſt Critick of the Age, about this Time wrote a Poem, which had the Caſt of the fourth Eclogue of Virgil. It is as good a Picture of the Perſons then in Power, as any we can meet with. 'Twas call'd the Golden Age, and in it are theſe Lines:

In the Word Retriev'd.

A Saying of Colonel Dore upon it.

Mr. Walſh's Verſes upon it.

Now all our Factions, all our Fears ſhall ceaſe,
And Tories rule the promis'd Land in Peace.
Malice ſhall die, and noxious Poiſon fail;
Harley ſhall ceaſe to Trick, and Seymour ceaſe to rail.
The Lambs ſhall with the Lyons walk unhurt,
And Hallifax with How meet civilly at Court.
Vice-Roys, like Providence, with diſtant Care,
Shall govern Kingdoms, where they ne'er appear.
Pacifick Admirals, to ſave the Fleet,
Shall fly from Conqueſt, and ſhall Conqueſt meet.
Commanders ſhall be prais'd at WILLIAM'S Coſt,
And Honour be RETRIEV'D before 'tis loſt.

The Viceroys alludes to the Earl of Rocheſter, who kept the Lieutenancy of Ireland, but did not think fit to leave the Court to Exerciſe it in Perſon. The reſt of the Satire has eaſy Alluſions.

It was obſerv'd that the Queen ſaid not a Word of the Toleration in her Speech, and that the Church was nam'd, as if on Purpoſe to give another Handle for another ſmart Paragraph in the Com-

A.D.1702. Commons Addreſs: We neither doubt of the full Enjoyment of all our Rights and Liberties, nor of your Majeſty's defending and maintaining the Church, as by Law Eſtabliſh'd. Your Majeſty has been always a moſt illuſtrious Ornament to this Church, and has been expos'd to great Hazards for it; and therefore we promiſe our ſelves that in your Majeſty's Reign, we ſhall ſee it perfectly reſtor'd to its due Rights and Privileges, and ſecur'd in the ſame to Poſterity; which is only to be done, by diveſting thoſe Men of the Power, who have ſhown they want not the Will to deſtroy it.

Commons Addreſs againſt Diſſenters.

If by Church is meant a Congregation of Chriſtians met together to Worſhip God in Spirit and Truth, What are the Rights and Privileges ſuch a Congregation, or Church can pretend to, but the Liberty of Aſſembling, of Praying, Preaching, receiving the Sacraments, and doing all Acts of Piety and Charity? As to other Honorary, or Lucrative Rights and Privileges, we read of no ſuch Thing in the Holy Scripture; and therefore it would be more fair and candid to diſtinguiſh Religion from Intereſt, than to confound both in one Name, that of the Church. For if we underſtand the Proteſtant Religion by it, in Oppoſition to Popery, there was not one Man in Power to be diveſted for his Will to deſtroy it, but there were many to be diveſted of Places, to make Room for others.

On the 26th of October, the Houſe voted a Supply; and four Days after reſolv'd, that forty thouſand Seamen be employ'd for the next Year's Service. On the Lord-Mayor's Day, her Majeſty din'd at Guild-Hall, and conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on Gilbert Heathcot, Eſq; Francis Daſhwood, Eſq; the Lord Mayor's Brother, Richard Hoar, Eſq; and Mr. Eaton, the Linnen-Draper in Cheapſide, over-againſt Bow Church, in whoſe Balcony there was a ſtately Canopy erected, and her Majeſty ſate under it while the Show paſs'd by. The next Day the Lord Shannon brought the News of the Succeſs at Vigo; and November the 4th, Mr. Secretary Hedges acquainted the Commons, that her Majeſty having appointed Thurſday, the 12th, for a Day of Thankſgiving, ſhe intended to go to St. Paul's Church, as had been accuſtom'd in former Times, to return Thanks to Almighty God, for the ſignal and great Succeſs of her Arms, under the Earl of Marlborough and Duke of Ormond, and had given neceſſary Orders for the providing convenient Places in the ſaid Church for the Members of that Houſe, as well as for the Houſe of Lords. The very ſame Day that this Meſſage was brought by Mr. Secretary, did Mr. William Bromley, Member of Parliament for the Univerſity of Oxford, make a Motion for the bringing in a Bill, for preventing Occaſional Conformity, to incapacitate all Proteſtant Diſſenters, though of the very ſame Religion with the Reform'd Churches in Chriſtendom to ſerve their King and Country: Which Motion being joyfully receiv'd, the ſaid Mr. William Bromley, Mr. Henry St. John, and Mr. Arthur Anneſley, Member of Parliament for the Univerſity of Cambridge, were order'd to bring the Bill in. But before we enter upon that Affair, let us diſpatch ſome others that lie in our Way.

Mr. Will. Bromley of Oxford, moves for a Bill againſt them.

Mention has been made of the Acts paſt in England and Scotland, to impower the Queen to nominate Commiſſioners for treating about an Union between the two Kingdoms. In Purſuance of which, the following Perſons were appointed:

Engliſh and Scotch Commiſſioners for a Union.

For ENGLAND.

Thomas Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury.
Sir Nathan Wright, Lord Keeper.
Thomas Earl of Pembroke, Lord Preſident of the Council.
John Marquis of Normanby, Lord Privy-Seal.
Charles Duke of Somerſet, Maſter of the Horſe.
Edward Earl of Jerſey, Lord Chamberlain.
Charles Earl of Burlington.
Daniel Earl of Nottingham, Secretary of State.
Lawrence Earl of Rocheſter, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.
John Earl of Marlborough, Captain-General of her Majeſty's Forces.
Lord Biſhop of London.
Sir Charles Hedges, Secretary of State.
Sir John Holt, Chief-Juſtice of the Queen's-Bench.
Sir Thomas Trevor, Chief Juſtice of the Common-Pleas.
Sir John Leviſon Gower, Bart. Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter.
Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave, Bart.
Sir John Cooke, Doctor of Laws.
Robert Harley, Eſq;.
Charles Godolphin, Eſq;.
Samuel Clarke, Eſq;.
Stephen Waller, Doctor of Laws.

For SCOTLAND.

Duke of Queensberry.
Duke of Argyle.
Marquis of Annandale.
Marquis of Lothian.
Earl of Seafield.
Earl of Hyndford.
Earl of Leven.
Viſcount Tarbat.
Viſcount Stair.
Lord Gallway.
Lord Boyle.
Sir James Stewart, Advocate.
Sir George Alexander, Lord Preſident.
Sir James Smallet.
Sir Archibald Douglas.
Sir David Dalrymple.
Sir Patrick Johnſtoune, Provoſt of Edinburgh.
Mr. Montgomery, Provoſt of Glaſcow.
Mr. Scrimſer, Provoſt of Dundee.
The Provoſt of Aberdeen.

Charles Davenant, L. L. D. Secretary to the Commiſſioners.

By the Liſt of the Engliſh Commiſſioners might have been foreſeen what Succeſs would attend this Treaty. They met the Scots Commiſſioners the firſt time on the 22d of October. The Lord Keeper Wright, made a ſhort Speech on the Subject of their Meeting, and was anſwer'd by the Duke of Queensberry. The Queen made a Speech to quicken them in their work, December 14th. But when the Scots Commiſſioners deliver'd in their Propoſals for preſerving the Rights and Privileges of their Company trading to Africa and the Indies, a ſtop was put to the Buſineſs, and it was no more talk'd of after this Commiſſion. But the Scots Epiſcopal Clergy, underſtanding how things were like to go in England, preſented an Addreſs to the Queen that they might be reſtor'd to their Pariſhes. How monſtrous would it have been thought in England, if the ejected Miniſters had petition'd King Charles II, twelve Years after their Ejection, to be reſtor'd to their Churches, contrary to the Act of Parliament by which they were ejected? However, the Scots Memoirs inform us, A Letter was produc'd from the Queen to the Council, recommending the Care of the Epiſcopal Clergy to them; and we were told every Day, that ſhe deſign'd to beſtow the Biſhops Rents upon them. Pag. 34.

The Jacobite Clergy in Scotland Petition the Queen.

On the 6th of November the Houſe of Commons reſolv'd, That the Proportion of Forces for England to act in Conjunction with thoſe of the Allies, be 33000 Foot, and 7000 Horſe and Dragoons; and that 350000 l. be granted for Guards and Gariſons for the Year 1703; they alſo voted 70973 l. for Ordnance, 833826 l. for the Pay of the

A.D.1702. the Land Forces, and 51843 l. for Subsidies to the Allies. They also voted Thanks to the Duke of Ormond and Sir George Rook, who doubtless behav'd with equal Conduct and Courage in the Enterprize at Vigo; but no Officer distinguish'd himself more there, than Admiral Hopson, whom her Majesty Knighted, and settled a Pension of 500 l. per Ann. upon him, with a Reversion of 300 l. yearly for his Wife. At the Time appointed, her Majesty went in great State to St. Paul's Church, attended by both Houses of Parliament, the Lords of the Court, Judges, &c. The Duke of Ormond happening to be the Staff Officer in waiting, rode in one of the Queen's Coaches, together with the Duke of Somerset, and was almost deafen'd with the Acclamations of an infinite Number of Spectators, which I who saw the Cavalcade, saw also very plainly his Grace was not displeas'd with, and from that Day may be dated the Popularity into which he grew afterwards, and was so pleasing, and in the End so fatal to him. The Lords return'd him Thanks the next Day, and at the same Time resolv'd to Address the Queen, that she would order the Duke of Ormond, and Sir George Rook, to lay before them an Account of their Proceedings, which was done.

The Queen goes to St. Paul's.

The Duke of Ormon affects Popularity.

At the beginning of this Sessions, Sir John Packington exhibited a Complaint against the Pious and Learned Bishop of Worcester, and Mr. Lloyd, his Son, relating to the Rights and Privileges of the House of Commons; and reduc'd his Matter into several Heads, to which the House unanimously Agreed; and Resolved, " That it appear'd to them " that the Proceedings of William Lord Bishop of " Worcester, and his Son, and his Agents, in or- " der to hinder the Election of a Member for the " County of Worcester, had been Malicious, Un- " christian and Arbitrary: And that an Address " should be presented to the Queen, to remove the " said Bishop from being Lord Almoner. They also order'd the Attorney-General to prosecute his Son, Mr. Lloyd, after his Privilege, as Member of the Convocation, was out. The Lords, alarm'd at this Proceedure of the Commons, in respect to a Member of their House, did, on the 19th of November, agree upon an Address to the Queen; " wherein they represented, " That it is the un- " doubted Right of every Lord of Parliament, and " of every other Subject of England, to have an " Opportunity of making his Defence, before he " suffer any sort of Punishment; and therefore " they humbly desir'd her Majesty, that she would " be pleas'd not to remove the Lord Bishop of " Worcester from the Place of Lord Almoner, nor " shew any Marks of her Displeasure towards " him, till he were found guilty of some Crime, " by due Course of Law." To which her Majesty answer'd, That she agreed that every Peer, and Lord of Parliament, and indeed every other Person, ought to have an Opportunity of being heard, to any Matters objected against him, before he be punish'd: That she had not receiv'd any Complaint of the Bishop of Worcester, but look'd upon it as her undoubted Right, to Continue or Displace any Servant, when she should think it proper. Their Lordships having receiv'd this Answer, resolv'd, November 20. Nem. Con. " That no Lord of " their House ought to suffer any sort of Punish- " ment, by any Proceedings of the House of " Commons, otherwise than according to the " known and ancient Rules and Methods of Par- " liament." Sir Edward Seymour, to make Room for whom, the Lord Wharton was turn'd out of his Place of Comptroller of the Houshold, having attended the Queen with the Commons Resolution and Address against the Right Reverend Father in God, William Lord Bishop of Worcester, reported her Majesty Answer, That she was very sorry there was Occasion for this Address against the Bishop of Worcester, and that she would order and direct, that he should no longer continue to supply the Office of Lord Almoner. For it must be noted that High-Church, that makes Episcopacy the very Essence of Religion, does, however, as often as any of the Bishops disagree with her, spare them no more than Scotch Presbyters. Mr. Secretary Hedges bringing a Message from the Queen, about making Provision for the Prince, her Husband, if he should survive her Majesty, the Commons resolv'd, That 100000 l. a Year should in such Case be settled on his Royal Highness. A.D.1702.

Commons Vote against the Bishop of Worcester.

Lords Address against it.

'Tis highly necessary to let it be known now, and for ever, that the great Quarrel which High-Church had with Protestant Dissenters, was for their steady Adherence to the Succession of the illustrious House of Hanover. That Set of Men have been so immoderate and unconscionable in their Reflections on me for being Partial, that I am forc'd to use the Words of other Historians in what concerns them. The Author of the Reign of Queen Anne, in Folio, says, " The Act of " Parliament pass'd the first Year of King William " and Queen Mary, in Favour of Protestant Dis- " senters, was a great Eye-Sore to some of the " High-Church Party, chiefly because it strength- " en'd the Hands of the Well-affected to the Pro- " testant Succession; and therefore they resolv'd to " improve the first Opportunity that should offer, " to render that Law ineffectual." They took hold of a vain Exception against Sir Humphry Edwyn's going to a Meeting-House once with the City Sword. It was an Indiscreet, but not a Criminal Act; and far from being a sufficient Foundation for a Bill to lay a Million or two of as good English Subjects as any in the Kingdom, under Hardships. Besides, the natural Right which every Man has to the Liberty of his Conscience, and the Impossibility of Laws to convince the Judgment, or change the Will; it must needs scandalize all Protestants at Home and Abroad, to see the Church establish'd in England. treat the Church establish'd in Scotland, both under the same Head, Divine and Human, both professing the same Faith, as a Schismatick, and an Outcast. The Thing will not bear Argument with Men of good Sense, and good Conscience. We cannot mention too often, who they were that were honour'd with the bringing in of this Bill, two of the Members for the two Universities, and Henry St. John, Esq; whose Character will not do much Honour to a Christian Church, since it does none to Christianity. One cannot be so delighted with this Subject as to dwell upon it in particular; the Bill pass'd the Lower House, and was on the 20th of December, sent to the Upper by Mr. Bromley, for their Concurrence; after the rejecting a Motion for the exempting PROTESTANT DISSENTERS from such Offices as cannot by Law be executed without receiving the Sacrament: Which is an admirable Instance of the Justice and Humanity of that Set of Men. The Lords return'd it them the 9th of December, with no less than fourteen Amendments and Alterations: To four of which only the Commons agreed. On the 17th of December, John Granville, Esq; brought a Message from the Commons to the Lords, that the former desir'd a free Conference with their Lordships, on the Subject Matter of those Amendments; which the Lords agreed to, and appointed it presently in the Painted-Chamber. Their Managers were:

High-Church hate the Dissenters for their Zeal for the Protestant Succession.

The Occasional-Bill pass'd by the Commons.

A Conference between the two Houses upon it.

The Duke of Devonshire, Lord Steward.	Earl of Carlisle, Earl Marshal.
Duke of Somerset.	Earl of Peterborough.
Duke of Bolton.	Earl of Stamford.

Earl

A.D.1702. Earl of Sunderland.
Earl of Eſſex.
Earl of Angleſey.
Earl of Berkley.
Earl of Torrington.
Earl of Scarborough.
Earl of Orford.
Lord Viſcount Townſhend.
Lord Lawarr.
Lord Ferrers.
Lord Wharton.
Lord North.
Lord Grey.
Lord Mohun.
Lord Raby.
Lord Rockingham.
Lord Herbert.
Lord Haverſham.
Lord Somers.
Lord Halliſax.

Mr. Bromley, ever foremoſt in this Matter, deliver'd the Commons Reaſons for diſagreeing with their Lordſhips in the Amendments; which Reaſons having been conſider'd by the Lords, were not found ſatisfactory; ſo on the 13th of January, Mr. Anneſley brought a Meſſage from the Commons to the Lords, to deſire a free Conference, which being agreed to, it was held in the Painted Chamber January 16th.

Managers for the Lords.	Managers for the Commons.
Duke of Devonſhire.	Mr. Bromley.
Earl of Peterborough.	Mr. St. John.
Lord Biſhop of Saliſbury.	Mr. Finch.
Lord Somers.	Sir Simon Harcourt.
Lord Halifax.	Sir Thomas Powis.

The latter, Sir Thomas Powis, who is now choſen a Manager againſt the Proteſtant Diſſenters, is the ſame Man, who 14 Years before was a Manager againſt our Proteſtant Biſhops; particularly Biſhop Lloyd, againſt whom he and his Party preſented the Addreſs before-mention'd. The Managers for the Commons intimated, "That the intent "of this Bill was only to reſtrain a SCANDALOUS "Practice which was a Reproach to Religion, and "gave Offence to all good Chriſtians"; which is not the Caſe, if by Chriſtians we underſtand all the reformed Churches in Chriſtendom, who have never ſcrupl'd Communion with the Church of England; nor did I ever hear of one good Proteſtant Church of England Man that ever ſcrupl'd Communion with our reform'd Brethren abroad, who are for the moſt part of the ſame Religion with our Diſſenters; and as to the Conforming occaſionally, and not ſtatedly, we of the Church of England, ſhould look home firſt, and we ſhall find the nine in ten of our own Church who are in Employment, do qualify themſelves only occaſionally. The Managers again:

Church of England Men. Occaſional Conformity.

"This Bill enacted nothing NEW, and was "only intended to make the Laws in being more "effectual. That this Bill appear'd to the Com"mons abſolutely neceſſary for preventing thoſe "Miſchiefs which muſt prove deſtructive to the "Church and Monarchy; that an eſtabliſhed Re"ligion, and a national Church are abſolutely ne"ceſſary, where ſo many ill Men pretended to In"ſpiration, and where there were ſo many weak "Men to follow them".

That is to ſay, becauſe the French Prophets and ſome Quakers pretend to be inſpir'd; therefore the Presbyterians, who do not pretend to it, are to be confounded with them in the Diſpleaſure of their Country, and loſe the Rights both of their Birth and Religion.

"That the only effectual way to preſerve this nati"onal Church, was by keeping the Civil Power, the "profitable Places, in the Hands of thoſe whoſe "Principles are conformable to it. That the Par"liament by the Corporation and Teſt Acts, thought "they had ſecur'd our Eſtabliſhment, and provided "a ſufficient Barrier to diſappoint any Attempts "againſt them, by enacting, that all in Offices "ſhould receive the Sacrament according to the "Uſage of the Church of England, and never A.D.1702. "imagin'd a Set of Men could at any time riſe up, "whoſe Conſciences were too tender to obey the Laws, "but harden'd enough to break them.

This cannot be read without Reflections, which are not to be expreſs'd without giving Offence to Decency, as well as the Character of the Perſons that ſaid it; and what follows is of the ſame kind. "That as the laſt Reign began with an Act in "Favour of the Diſſenters, ſo the Commons did "deſire; That in the Beginning of her Majeſty's "Reign an Act might paſs in Favour of the "Church of England.

May one not ask, If the Wiſdom of that Argument is equal to what might be expected from the Wiſdom of a Nation?

The Commons Reaſons againſt the Lord's Amendments.

That thoſe Men might be kept out of Offices who have ſhewn they never wanted the Will, when they had the "Power to deſtroy the Church: And that this Bill "did not in any reſpect intrench on the Act of To"leration, or take from the Diſſenters any one Pri"vilege they have by Law, or give any one Privi"lege to the Church of England which was not at "leaſt intended her by the Laws as they then ſtood.

"As to the ſeveral particular Amendments made "by the Lords, the Managers for the Commons "inſiſted upon it, That if the Laws provided "that they that had Offices ſhould receive the Sa"crament, and by that intended a Conformity; "then whoſoever breaks the Intentions of the Law, "breaks the Law, or at leaſt evades it, and that it "was fit to provide againſt ſuch a Practice: That "if the Intention of the Teſt Act was the Reaſon "to provide againſt ſuch Evaders, the like Inten"tion in the Corporation Act would ſerve for a "Reaſon to provide againſt Evaders of that: That "by occaſional Conformity, the Diſſenters might let "themſelves into the Government of all Corpo"rations, and that it was obvious how far that "would influence the Government of the King"dom: That to ſeparate from a Church which "has nothing in it againſt a Man's Conſcience to "Conform to, is Schiſm; and that that is a ſpiritual "Sin, without the ſuperadding a temporal Law to "make it an Offence. That occaſional Confor"mity, declares a Man's Conſcience will let him "couform; and in ſuch a Man, Non-Conformity "is a wilful Sin. That in laying Penalties, the "Commons would always endeavour to make "them ſuch, as ſhould neither tempt to Perjury, "nor totally diſcourage Informations and Proſecu"tions, which they thought the Lords Amend"ment would do, ſhould they agree to it. That "the Puniſhment of Incapacity, the Recapacituting, "and the Increaſe of Puniſhment for a ſecond Of"fence, are warranted by many Precedents of the "like Nature, in other Penal-Laws. That an "Incapacity is a very proper Puniſhment, and that "a ſecond Offence is a Relapſe and Apoſtacy." After this, I think the Reader will excuſe the Remainder of it. For an Engliſh Proteſtant to receive the Sacrament in a Scotch, Dutch, or French Proteſtant Church, is by this Argument Apoſtacy, after having receiv'd it in an Engliſh Proteſtant Church. The Managers for the Lords declar'd, "That by "agreeing as far as they had done to the Bill, they "had gone a great Way for preventing the Evil "it was intended to Remedy; and own'd it to be "a Scandal to Religion, that Perſons ſhould con"form only for a Place. That they did not think "going to the Meetings to be Malum in ſe; for "that the Diſſenters are Proteſtants, and differ "from the Church of England only in ſome lit"tle Forms, and therefore they thought Loſs of "Office a ſufficient Puniſhment, without an In"capacity. That it cou'd never be thought thoſe "of the better Sort would be guilty of this Of-

The Lords Reaſons for them.

*A.D.*1702. " fence; if they were, they ſhould loſe their Of" fices. That in inferior Officers of the Cuſtoms
" and Exciſe, who had little elſe to ſubſiſt on,
" Loſs of Office was ſevere enough, ſince thereby
" they would be undone.

" That this was yet more conſiderable in Pa-
" tent Places, which by a common Cuſtom are
" bought and ſold, and are of the Nature of Free-
" holds: That Incapacity was too great a Penalty,
" and that it is hard to imagine any Offence that
" is not Capital, can deſerve it. That there is " no more Reaſon to puniſh this Offence with In" capacity, than to make it Felony. That the " Diſſenters are not obnoxious to the Govern-
" ment, as when the Corporation Act was made;
" the moſt conſiderable Perſons amongſt them be" ing well-affected to the Conſtitution, and hearty
" Enemies to the Queen's, and the Kingdoms
" Enemies. That in ſome Corporations, they
" take the Elections of Members to ſerve in Par" liament, to be only in ſuch as are concern'd in
" the Government of them, as at Buckingham;
" and the Lords wou'd not by this Bill deprive
" Men of their Birthrights; neither did they think
" fit to bring any greater Hardſhips upon the Diſ-
" ſenters, ſince great Advantages have accrued
" from the Act of Toleration. That the Lords
" did equally deſire a good Correſpondence betwixt
" the two Houſes, and were ſo ſatisfy'd of the Ne-
" ceſſity of Union at this Time, that they thought
" all Meaſures fatal that might create Diviſions
" amongſt Proteſtants at Home, or check the ne-
" ceſſary Union of the Allies Abroad. That in a
" Time of War they thought Alterations unne-
" ceſſary and dangerous, and were not willing to
" bring any real Hardſhips upon the Diſſenters at
" this Time, or give them any Cauſe of Jealou-
" ſies or Fears. That the Toleration had had ſuch
" good Effects, contributed ſo much to the Secu" rity and Reputation of the Churth of England,
" and produced ſo good a Temper among Diſſen-
" ters, that the Lords were unwilling to give the
" leaſt Diſcredit to that Act; Liberty of Conſci-
" ence, and gentle Meaſures, being moſt proper,
" and having been found moſt effectual towards in-
" creaſing the Church, and diminiſhing the Num-
" ber of Diſſenters: That ſome Parts of the Bill
" has an Air of Severity not proper for this Sea-
" ſon: That a proper Time ought to be taken to
" apply Remedies, the attempting too haſty Cures,
" having often prov'd fatal: That if there had
" been ſuch Danger and Neceſſity, this Remedy
" would have been propos'd before. That if this " Bill did enact nothing NEW, there would not " be ſuch a Conteſt about it. That they did con-
" ſent to a Puniſhment, but wou'd proportion the " Penalty to the Offence. That they hop'd their
" Deſires of ſecuring the Toleration Act, the Peace
" and Quiet of the Kingdom at Home, and the
" Intereſt of the Nation Abroad, would meet
" with a fair Conſtruction. That they conceiv'd
" both the laſt Reign, and this, began upon the
" ſame Bottom and Foundation; and that as in
" this Reign, her Majeſty has been pleas'd to give
" gracious Aſſurances as to Liberty of Conſcience,
" ſo in the laſt, the Church ever met with Pro-
" tection and Support: That it is hard, as well as " UNTRUE, to ſay of the Diſſenters, They ne-
" ver wanted the Will, when they had the Power,
" to deſtroy the Church and State; ſince in the laſt
" and greateſt Danger the Church was expos'd to,
" they join'd with her with all imaginable Zeal
" and Sincerity againſt the Papiſts, their common
" Enemies; and that ever ſince they have conti-
" nu'd to ſhew all the Signs of Friendſhip and
" Submiſſion to the Government of Church and
" State. That Toleration and Tenderneſs had " never miſt of procuring Peace and Union, as *A.D.*1702.
" Perſecution had never fail'd of producing the con" trary Effects. That the Lords could not think
" the Diſſenters could properly be call'd Schiſma-
" ticks. That ſuch an Opinion allow'd, would " bring an heavy Charge on the Church of Eng-
" land, who by a Law have tolerated ſuch a
" Schiſm; and that the Churchmen having allow'd
" Communion with the Reform'd Churches Abroad,
" it muſt follow they hold them not guilty of
" Schiſm, or could not allow Communion with
" them. That this Bill would inflict a ſecond
" Puniſhment on them who fled from France for
" their Religion. That this might be us'd as an " Argument to juſtify even the Perſecution in " France. That they could not depart from the
" Clauſe relating to the Dutch and Walloon
" Churches, ſo long eſtabliſh'd amongſt us, leſt
" it ſhould give great Diſguſt and Offence to the " Allies Abroad, and at the ſame Time forfeit the
" greateſt Character that can be given a Church,
" that of Tenderneſs and Charity to Fellow-Chri-
" ſtians, &c. That as to Workhouſes, they could
" not conceive that the Diſtribution of ſome Preſ-
" byterian Bread to the Poor, and Diſſenting
" Water-Gruel to the Sick, could ever bring any
" Prejudice to the Church of England: And that " they were of Opinion that the Diſſenters were
" coming into the Church, and that nothing but " terrifying Meaſures and Severity could prevent
" the happy Union. 'Twas further added, that a
" Papiſt Convict, as ſoon as he conforms himſelf,
" and receives the Sacrament, is immediately
" clear'd, no Incapacity lies upon him; but this Act
" would carry the Matter farther, to a Year's In-
" capacity. A Papiſt that ſhall Relapſe, and fall
" under a ſecond Conviction, is only convicted
" over again, without any Aggravation of the " Cenſure, which by this Bill would be much
" heighten'd upon a ſecond Offence: So that the " Penalties of this Bill are higher than any the
" Law has laid on Papiſts for aſſiſting at the ſo-
" lemneſt Act of their Religion. Before the Act
" of Toleration paſs'd, while Conventicles were Il-
" legal and Criminal Aſſemblies, a Man in Office
" that was preſent at them, was only liable to a
" Fine of Ten Pounds; whereas by this Bill,
" he would be liable to a Fine of One Hundred
" Pounds for being preſent at them, though they
" have an Impunity by Law: It does not ſeem to
" be very ſuitable, that the ſame Action ſhould be
" made ten times more Penal, after ſuch an Im-
" punity is granted, than it was before the paſſing
" that Law, while ſuch Aſſemblies were illegal.
" It ſeems enſnaring, and unbecoming ſo mild a " Government as ours, to lay ſo heavy a Penalty
" on a Crime ſo dubiouſly expreſs'd. Nor is it
" proper that the Sums rais'd by the Bill, ſhould all
" go to the Informer, which might give Encou-
" ragement to falſe Accuſations and Perjury.
" This Occaſional Conformity hath been both
" the Principle and Practice of ſome of the moſt
" Eminent among the Diſſenters ever ſince St.
" Bartholomew's, in 1662. Not only Mr. Baxter
" and Dr. Bates were here mention'd, but it was ſaid
" there was a famous and learned Man that liv'd
" at Salisbury, Mr. Tombs, who was a very zea-
" lous Conformiſt in all Points but one, Infant
" Baptiſm:" Whence it was inferr'd, that receiving the Sacrament does not neceſſarily import an entire Conformity to every other Particular, no more than a
Man who can ſubſcribe to the two firſt Articles of Religion, is by that concluded to aſſent to the reſt of the Thirty-nine.

The Charge againſt the Diſſenters falſe.

" And it is not a certain Inference, that becauſe
" a Man receives the Sacrament in the Church,
" he can therefore conform to every other parti" cular.

A.D.1702. " cular. Occaſional Conformity, was a ſtep that " carried many much further; and it was intimated " that the Lords were not willing to ruin Perſons " utterly on Account of a Practice that many well " meaning Men have been and may be led into, " and which they think naturally tends to bring " them over entirely to the Church, &c.

I was extreamly diſappointed not to find in the Courſe of ſo long an Argument, ſome of the Sentiments which gave Mr. Locke's four Letters of Toleration ſo great a Triumph over all its Adverſaries. If Mr. Bromley, Mr. Finch, Mr. St. John, Sir Simon Harcourt and Sir Thomas Powis had taken upon them to confute Mr. Locke, it would doubtleſs have been a great Relief to us in the tedious and tireſome way we are now travelling in.

Mr. Locke's Argument againſt the Bill.

That great Philoſopher in his firſt Letter repreſents the Church " as a voluntary Society of Men, " joining themſelves together of their own accord, " in order to the publick Worſhipping of God in " ſuch a Manner as they judge acceptable to him, " and effectual to the Salvation of their Souls. " The Right of making Laws for this Society can " (ſubordinately to the ſupreme Divine Legiſlator) " belong to none but the Society itſelf, or to thoſe " whom the Society by common Conſent has au- " thorized thereunto. No Force is here to be " made uſe of; the Arms by which this Society " are to be kept within their Duty, are Exhorta- " tions, Admonitions and Advices. No private " Perſon or particular Church has any Right in any " manner to prejudice others in their civil Enjoy- " ments, becauſe they are of another Church or " Religion, &c.

Mr. Bromley, Mr. St. John, &c. ſaid, Should any by this Bill be turn'd out of their Employments, and conſequently loſe their Votes in Elections; yet it cannot be ſaid they loſe their Birth-rights, becauſe no Man is born a Magiſtrate. How would Mr. Locke's Arguments have been confounded by ſuch fine reaſoning as this? No Man is born a Magiſtrate, but every Man by his Birth has a Right to be one if he is qualified for it by his Fortune, Capacity and Station in Life. The Managers for the Commons were ſurpriz'd to hear a Prelate ſpeak in Defence of occaſional Conformity. This alludes to the Biſhop of Salisbury, on whom it was incumbent as he was a Proteſtant Divine to ſpeak in defence of Chriſtian Liberty and Charity. Both Lords and Commons adhering to their ſeveral Reſolutions, with reſpect to this Bill, and the Amendments, it dropp'd. 'Twas taken notice of that Prince George of Denmark was at this time for its paſſing, tho' it was reported he ſhould ſay to the Lord Wharton as he was about to divide againſt him; My Heart is vid you. At this time alſo the Earl of Marlborough and the Lord Godolphin gave way to the prevailing Humour; and their Friends imitated them in Concurrence with the major Vote in the Houſe of Commons; which thoſe Lords had ſoon reaſon to be convinc'd they could not confide in, for a vigorous Proſecution of the War againſt France, eſpecially when they had ſhewn ſo little Deference to the Religion of our beſt Allies in it, as to endeavour to raiſe a Perſecution againſt it. They alſo put a ſort of Slur on my Lord Marlborough, though his Succeſſes in the War had drawn from them their Thanks by a ſolemn Deputation, at the Head of which was Sir Edward Seymour. His Lordſhip's Anſwer was equally wiſe and modeſt: Nothing could add to the Satisfaction I take in the Queen's moſt gracious Acceptance of my hearty and ſincere Endeavours for the Publick Service, but the obliging and favourable Senſe which the Houſe of Commons are pleas'd to expreſs of them; of which Honour, no Man can be more ſenſible than my ſelf. Our Succeſs is chiefly to be imputed to God's Bleſſing upon her Majeſty's happy Conduct, and the great Bravery of her own Troops, and thoſe of her Allies. Three Days after, December the 1ſt, her Majeſty declar'd before a Committee of Council, That ſhe was ſo ſatisfy'd of the Services of my Lord Marlborough to the Publick, and to her ſelf, both in the Command of the Army, and the entire Confidence he had ſettled between her and the States-General, that ſhe intended to make him a Duke; and to ſupport this new Dignity, ſhe order'd this Meſſage to be deliver'd from her to the Commons. A.D.1702.

ANNE R.

The Queen's Meſſage in Favour of the Earl of Marlborough.

THE Earl of Marlborough's Services to her Majeſty, and to the Publick, have been ſo Eminent, both in his Command of the Army, and in his having eſtabliſh'd an entire Confidence and good Correſpondence between her Majeſty and the States-General, that ſhe has thought fit to grant the Title of a Duke of this Kingdom to him, and to the Heirs Male of his Body; and alſo a Penſion of Five Thouſand Pounds per Annum upon the Revenue of the Poſt-Office, for the Support of this Honour, during her Majeſty's natural Life. If it had been in her Majeſty's Power, ſhe would have granted the ſame Term in the Penſion as in the Honour; and ſhe hopes you will think it ſo reaſonable in this Caſe, as to find ſome proper Methods of doing it.

" I cannot forbear taking Notice, ſays one Hi- " ſtorian, of the Looſeneſs of People's Tongues " upon this Occaſion without Doors; and the " Members within ſeeming for ſome Time to be " in an Amaze, kept ſo long ſilent, that, it was " ſaid, the Speaker ſtood up, and look'd round, " to ſee if any body would ſpeak to it: At Length " Mr. S——— having broke the Ice, a very " warm Debate enſu'd, and common Fame gave " out that an old Member ſhould ſay, Though I have accepted of an Employment at Court, yet I never did it with a Deſign that my Mouth ſhould be ſew'd up in this Houſe, when any Thing is offer'd that I think detrimental to my Country. Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave did not ſtick to ſay, I will not derogate from the Duke's eminent Services, but I think he is very well paid for them; and then in an invidious Manner he reckon'd up the profitable Employments enjoy'd by him and his Dutcheſs. This Meſſage meeting with ſo diſagreeable a Reception, it was follow'd by another, December the 15th, to acquaint them, That the Duke of Marlborough declin'd her Majeſty's Meſſage to them. However, the Commons voted an Addreſs, " Shewing their " unſpeakable Grief that her Majeſty's moſt duti- " ful Commons ſaw any Inſtances where they " were unable to comply with what her Majeſty " propos'd to them; but they begg'd Leave hum- " bly to lay before her Majeſty, the Apprehenſions " they had of making a Precedent for the future " Alienations of the Revenues of the Crown, " which had been ſo much reduc'd by the exorbi- " tant Grants of the laſt Reign, and which had " been ſo lately ſettled and ſecur'd by her Majeſty's " unparallel'd Grace and Goodneſs.

Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave's Speech againſt the Lord Marlborough.

A Reflexion on King William by the Commons.

As the Queen had Reaſon not to be pleas'd with this Balk, ſo had all good Britons to be offended at the Aſperſion thrown upon the Reign of King William. If there were more Grants in his Time than before it, there were more Perſons who deſerv'd them, and more good Things to be granted: Whereas it cannot be ſaid that one Mortal, from the Reſtoration to the Abdication, did deſerve the Grant of a Brickkiln for his Services to his Country, as it included the Proteſtant Religion, Liberty and Property.

The

*A.D.*1702. The Queen told them, "She ſhould always "think her ſelf much concern'd to reward thoſe "who deſerv'd well of her, and of the Publick. "On this Account ſhe beſtow'd ſome Favours on "the Duke of Marlborough, and ſhe was glad to "find them think they were well plac'd."

Vote againſt the Earl of Ranelaugh. The Commiſſioners for Publick Accounts having made ſtrict Enquiries into the Earl of Ranelaugh's, as Paymaſter-General of the Army; and drawn up a Narrative, wherein they charg'd him with great Miſmanagement, the Earl, on the 30th of November, preſented his Anſwer to the Houſe; and on the 4th of December, they Reſolv'd, That his Lordſhip had given great and unneceſſary Delays in his Proceedings before the ſaid Commiſſioners: Whether it was that the Earl had no great Opinion of the Qualifications of ſome of thoſe Commiſſioners, as Colonel Byerly, Colonel Granville, Mr. Henry St. John, &c. to Examine and State Accounts, or whether in a Conſciouſneſs of his own Innocence, he laid the Matter not much to Heart; it was ſaid that he puzzled the Cauſe, by ſending Cartloads of Accounts to the Commiſſioners; and this Vote ſeems to be a Confirmation of it. But the Houſe vindicated their Commiſſioners by another Vote, and expell'd the Earl of Ranelaugh, February the 7th.

*A.D.*1703. The Lord Halifax had by no Means reconcil'd himſelf to this Houſe of Commons, by being one of the Managers againſt the Occaſional Conformity-Bill: And Colonel Byerly having reported from the ſame Commiſſioners, their Examination of the Auditor, and other Officers of the Exchequer, the Houſe reſolv'd, January the 26th, That Charles Lord Halifax, Auditor of the Receipt of the Exchequer, had neglected his Duty, and was guilty of a breach of Truſt, in not tranſmitting the Impreſt Rolls half Yearly to the King's Remembrancer, &c. and that an Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleas'd to give Directions to the Attorney-General to proſecute him for the ſaid Offence. This will preſently appear to be a Melancholy Buſineſs; for the Queen ſaid in Anſwer, I will ſend to the Attorney-General, and give him my Directions, purſuant to this Addreſs. But the Lords having in the mean time taken the ſame Affair into their Conſideration, Reſolved, That Charles Lord Halifax, Auditor of the Receipt of the Exchequer, hath perform'd the Duty of his Office, in tranſmitting the ordinary Impreſt Rolls to the Queen's Remembrancer, according to the ancient Cuſtom of the Exchequer; and that he hath not been guilty of any Neglect, or Breach of Truſt, upon that Account.

And againſt the Lord Halifax.

He is vindicated by the Lords;

The Houſe of Commons order'd Reaſons to be drawn up againſt the Lords Proceedings, which were reported by Colonel Granville, and deliver'd at a Conference, February the 17th. I ſhall mention the laſt only: That which makes your Lordſhips Proceedings yet more irregular, it tends to prejudging a Cauſe, which might regularly have come before you, either originally by Impeachment, or by Writ of Error from the Courts below: And therefore the Commons can ſee no Uſe of their Reſolutions, unleſs it be either to intimidate the Judges, or prepoſſeſs a Jury, &c. The Lords Reſolv'd the next Day, That they had proceeded according to Juſtice, and the Evidence that was before them; and that the Commons, in their Reaſons, had us'd ſeveral Expreſſions and Arguments highly Reflecting, and altogether Unparliamentary, tending to deſtroy all good Correſpondence between the two Houſes, and to the Subverſion of the Conſtitution.

Who Vote that the Commons Proceedings tend to ſubvert the Conſtitution.

There was another Free-Conference on the 25th of February; the Managers for the Lords were, the Duke of Devonſhire, the Earl of Carliſle, the Lord Herbert, the Lord Ferrers, and the Lord Halifax. At the Head of the Managers for the Commons, ſays Abel Boyer, in his Hiſtory, was the Ingenious and Learned Mr. Finch. I ſhall only repeat what the Lord HALIFAX ſaid himſelf at the Conference. *A.D.*1703.

The Lord Halifax vindicates himſelf.

That the Lords RESOLUTION is well founded, ſince they had the Rolls themſelves before them, and Proof upon Oath; that by the Words of the Act, the Auditor was to tranſmit the Impreſt Rolls to the Remembrancer half Yearly, according to the uſual Courſe of the EXCHEQUER, which is eight Months, and four Months; that it was not his Duty to tranſmit them immediately to the Remembrancer, becauſe he was to ſend them to the Clerk of the Rolls, who is to Examine and Sign them: That it cannot be imagin'd the Auditor ſhould be tied to a certain Time to tranſmit the Rolls to the Remembrancer, becauſe they muſt firſt go through another Hand; and he never took it there was any Occaſion to put down the Time he examin'd them, for that would appear from the Time of the Delivery, and Date of the Roll: That there was one examin'd by the Clerk of the Rolls, the 4th of July, and he did not take it to be the Auditor's Fault, but to be the Duty of the Clerk of the Rolls to deliver them: That every body knew the great Trouble that had been given in his, as well as other Offices, by the Commiſſioners of Accompts; and that no Loſs had happen'd by not tranſmitting theſe Rolls, no Proceſs having been iſſu'd forth for many Years upon them.

The Anſwer of the Managers to this was, That indeed no Proceſs could iſſue, till the Rolls were tranſmitted; but it was not pretended that the Rolls had not been tranſmitted for many Years. The Cloſe of this Conteſt ſhews us, that Truth and Reaſon ſeek the Light, and court the Publick Judgment. The Lords order'd their Proceedings, in Relation to the Occaſional Bill and Publick Accounts, to be printed; but upon a Motion in the Houſe of Commons, that their Votes ſhould alſo be printed, it paſs'd in the Negative; though upon the publiſhing of the Lords, it was afterwards found convenient to publiſh thoſe of the Commons too. The Reader is well appriz'd of the Denomination of the prevailing Party; and from their Practices ever ſince they had a Denomination, might expect the ſame rough Counſels, the ſame Bitterneſs of Spirit, and the ſame dangerous Meaſures as they now meet with, and will meet with, whenever they are prevailing; but it was not yet Time for them to Addreſs the Queen againſt thoſe that delighted in War, becauſe there was no Safety for any Thing they held dear without it; and therefore upon her Majeſty's Meſſage about an Augmentation of Troops with Ten Thouſand Men, they comply'd with it; and the Queen expreſs'd her Satisfaction in it thus:

GENTLEMEN,

The Troops augmented.

IT is with great Satisfaction that I receive this Addreſs, which enables me to join with the States-General in augmenting our Forces according to their Deſire. I make no Doubt but the Convention beforemention'd will be approv'd, ſince it is abſolutely neceſſary for the Good of the whole Alliance; and I ſhall this Night ſend Directions to my Miniſter in Holland, to concur with the States in providing the Troops accordingly.

The Condition was, That there be an immediate Stop put to all Commerce and Correſpondence with FRANCE on the Part of the States-General; which was intended to hinder Remittances of Money to the French Forces in Italy, and to the Elector of Bavaria, then in Rebellion againſt the Emperor in Germany.

Her Majeſty, whom the Commons, jarring with the Lords, had made uneaſy, ſent two Meſſages to them, to diſpatch the Affairs that were depend-

A.D.1703. depending, which in Anſwer to the laſt Meſſage, they ſaid they had done, and the Seſſion broke up three or four Days after.

Some Time before this, December the 23d, the Queen went to the Houſe of Lords, and gave the Royal Aſſent to an Act for granting to her Majeſty a Land-Tax. And the Queſtion being put the ſame Day in the Houſe of Commons, whether Prince George's Servants ſhould be capacitated to ſit in Parliament, it was carry'd in the Affirmative by a great Majority. Then Sir Edward Seymour mov'd for bringing in a Bill, For Reſuming all Grants made in King William's Reign; which being carried by a Majority of One Hundred and eighty Voices againſt Seventy-eight, Mr. Walpole mov'd, That all the Grants made in the Reign of the late King James ſhould be Reſum'd likewiſe, which paſs'd in the Negative: And after this, I hope there will be no Occaſion to make Excuſes for not writing Encomiums on the Impartiality, Juſtice and Honour of this Majority. Sir John Holland made a Motion for bringing in a Bill, For the more free and impartial Proceedings in Parliament, by Providing, that no Perſon whatſoever in Office or Employment ſhould be capable of ſitting in Parliament, which paſs'd alſo in the Negative. The very Men, as How, and Muſgrave, and Seymour, &c. who had ſo vehemently puſh'd ſuch a Bill in King William's Reign, being now as vehement in oppoſing this; which is a Leſſon, but in Truth the Practice has been ſo common, that the People of England have no need of Leſſons to teach us, that the Offence taken at Perſons in Places, is not out of Fear that thoſe Perſons will ſacrifice the Country to the Court; but of Envy, becauſe they that take it, are not in Place to make that Sacrifice themſelves.

Sir Edward Seymour's Motion to Reſume no Grants but King William's. Mr. Walpole moves to Reſume King James's Grants. A Negative upon it.

Partial Proceedings of the Commons.

The Party who put the Negative on the Motion for the laſt-mention'd Bill, carry'd another, For the more free and impartial Proceedings in Parliament, by Providing, that no Perſon ſhall be choſen a Member, but ſuch as have a ſufficient Real Eſtate. Which the Lords rejected on the 22d of February: and it is with infinite Pleaſure that one ſees when a Majority, like that at this Time, are running Riot againſt the true Proteſtant Religion, and Proteſtant Succeſſion, againſt Liberty, and the true Intereſt of England, that Auguſt Aſſembly always ſtood in the Breach, and defended them with equal Wiſdom, Courage and Succeſs, 'till they were themſelves broke in upon, in the Time of Mr. Harley's Miniſtry.

The Lords true Patriots.

Foe Pillory'd.

While the Conformity Bill was depending, Daniel Foe, who tack'd de to his Name, after he had ſtood in the Pillory, publiſh'd the ſmarteſt of all his Venomous Libels, entitled, The Shorteſt Way with the Diſſenters; wherein, having rail'd at them by way of Irony, he endeavours to impoſe ſo much on High-Church, as to betray them into a Diſcovery of their Sentiments to be agreeable to his own, as he pretended in that Pamphlet; which paſt for ſome Time as the genuine Work of a rank Tory, and met with Applauſe in our two Famous Univerſities. A Bookſeller now Living, having an Order from a Fellow of a College in Cambridge for a Parcel of Books, juſt at the Time of publiſhing this Shorteſt Way, put up one of them in the Bundle, not doubting it would be welcome to his Cuſtomers; who accordingly thank'd him for packing ſo excellent a Treatiſe up with the reſt, it being next to the Sacred Bible, and Holy Comments, the beſt Book he ever ſaw; but underſtanding afterwards it was written by a Rank Independant, he rail'd at it as much as he had extoll'd it, and forbad his Bookſeller to ſend him any more Pamphlets without particular Order.

His Short Way lik'd at Cambridge.

The Houſe of Commons, after the Author, and the Deſign of the Book were diſcover'd, order'd it to be burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman, and the Author to be proſecuted; which was done with the Severity ſo natural to High-Church, when uppermoſt. Foe was fin'd Two Hundred Marks, and put in the Pillory; which he richly deſerv'd afterwards, when he ſcribbled for the People that put him there. The Earl of Nottingham ſent to, if he did not go to him in Newgate, to offer him Tory Mercy, if he wou'd diſcover who ſet him on to write his Shorteſt Way: But all who knew Foe, knew he needed no ſetting on to put ſuch a Trick on a Party, of whoſe Underſtandings, as well as Principles, he had no good Opinion; though he afterwards became their Tool, and drudg'd for them in the worſt Work they ever took in Hand, the breaking of the Confederacy, and reſtoring France to a Condition of becoming dangerous to the Liberties of Europe; but 'till he enter'd into the Service of Mr. Harley, he had been honeſt in his Principles, whatever his Morals were: And he now pleaded for himſelf, That he gave High-Church but their own Language, at leaſt the Senſe of their own Expreſſions, when he ſaid, "If "it ſhould be objected, that this renewing Fire "and Faggot would be Cruelty, and accounted "barbarous, he anſwer'd, 'tis Cruelty to kill a "Snake, or a Toad, in cold Blood; but the Poiſon of their Nature makes it a Charity to our "Neighbours to deſtroy thoſe Creatures; not for "any Perſonal Injury receiv'd, but for Prevention, and that as Toads and Vipers are noxious "to the Body, and poiſon the ſenſitive Life, ſo "the Diſſenters poiſon the Soul, corrupt our Poſterity, enſnare our Children, deſtroy the Vitals "of our Happineſs, and contaminate the whole "Maſs, and therefore they are to be rooted out of "this Nation, &c." He ask'd if this was worſe than the Tory Parſons hanging out bloody Colours, and Banners of Defiance; and ſhew'd them what many of their Sermons and Pamphlets, as well as their common Converſation tended to. And it may be demanded, what did the Addreſs of the Convocation tend to, when they told the Queen, We promiſe our ſelves, that whatever might be wanting to reſtore the Church to its due Rights and Privileges, her Majeſty would have the Glory of doing it. What Rights and Privileges had High-Church loſt ſince the Revolution, but Perſecution, but the Power of Domineering over Diſſenters, and Gaoling and Beggaring them, as was done in the Reign of King Charles and King James II? The Moderation of her Majeſty's Anſwer was very exemplary, had they been in any Diſpoſition to imitate it; Your Concurrence in this dutiful Addreſs, is a good Preſage of your Union in all other Matters, which is very deſirable for my Service, and the Good of the Church. Dr. Aldrich, Dean of Chriſt-Church, was Prolocutor of this Convocation, ſtanding in Oppoſition to the Seraphick Dr. Beveridge, who was put up by the Biſhops Party in the Lower-Houſe, whoſe Behaviour towards the Upper, was much the ſame, as that of the two laſt Aſſemblies. But I leave the Ornament of their Hiſtory to their own Hiſtorians.

Foe pleads that the Tories wrote worſe than he.

Sacheverel, who became afterwards ſo infamous for the Sedition he rais'd in the Reign of ſo good a Queen, publiſh'd a Diſcourſe at Oxford, call'd the Political Union, reflecting upon the Toleration: Leſley, a Nonjuring Prieſt, publiſh'd the Caſe of the Regale, avowedly ſetting the Church above the State; and one Stubbs, another of the ſame Order, printed his Sermon, FOR GOD, or for Baal. About this Time was the Earl of Clarendon's Hiſtory of the Rebellion put to the Preſs, after it had lain by thirty Years, it being thought a moſt proper Seaſon for publiſhing it. For it was become faſhionable in St. Stephens's, as well as all other Books for Perſecution publiſh'd.

And Clarendon's Hiſtory.

*A.D.*1703. Chapels and Churches, to caſt Reproach on her Majeſty's Parliamentary Right; though to ſay ſhe had any other, was as great Nonſenſe as the wrongeſt Heads were capable of. This was done to affront the late King's Right and the Right of the Royal Houſe of Hanover. To do it the more effectually, the Queen's Heirſhip was traced down from Edward the Confeſſor, without any Interruption by Impoſtors and Pretenders; and as a viſible Proof of it, the Wiſe ones of the Party put the Queen upon curing the King's Evil, according to the divine Gift deſcended on all the Hereditary Kings from the Confeſſor, who had very little Divinity in him but what conſiſted in Monkery. Not to dwell on a Controverſy which has nothing on the Side of it, but that ſame Monkery and Miracle, we ſhall only obſerve it was ſaid in the Publick Prints: Yeſterday the Queen was graciouſly pleas'd to touch for the King's Evil ſome particular Perſons in Private; and 3 Weeks after, December 19th: Yeſterday about 12 at Noon, her Majeſty was pleas'd to touch at St. James's about 20 Perſons afflicted with the King's Evil. The more Ludicrous ſort of Scepticks in this Caſe, ask'd, Why it was not call'd the Queen's Evil, as the chief Court of Juſtice was call'd the Queen's Bench. But Charles Barnard the Surgeon, who had made this touching the Subject of his Raillery all his Life-time, till he became Body Surgeon at Court, and found it a good Perquiſite, ſolv'd all Difficulties by telling his Companions with a Fleer; really one could not have thought it, if one had not ſeen it. A Friend of mine heard him ſay it, and knew well his Opinion of it. Bath, October 6th, A great Number of Perſons coming to this Place to be touch'd by the Queen's Majeſty for the Evil, her Majeſty commanded Dr. Thomas Gardiner, her chief Surgeon, to examine them all particularly, which accordingly was done by him, of whom but 30 appear'd to have the Evil, which he certified by Tickets as is uſual, and thoſe 30 were all touch'd that Day privately by Reaſon of her Majeſty's not having a proper Conveniency for the Solemnity.

Queen Cures the King's Evil.

The Obligation that modern Hiſtorians lie under to date all their Events, occaſions a ſort of Confuſion in Chronology, by the Hiſtorians going forward and backward to collect his Materials to bring them under their ſeveral Heads, and preſent them in one View; there being no avoiding it there needs no Excuſe for it to Connoiſſeurs.

The Bill for reſumming King William's Grants was too flagrant an Act of partiality to paſs even with this Majority, ſo it was dropp'd. To all the other publick Bills that were ready, her Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent, 27th of February, and in her Speech thank'd the Commons, not only for the Diſpatch of the Supplies, but for the Latitude they allow'd her in the Clauſe of Appropriation, and for their Readineſs to make Proviſion for the Prince; ſhe then added,

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" I deſire and expect from you, That you make " it your Buſineſs in your ſeveral Countries, to " continue and preſerve the Quiet and Satisfaction " of all my Subjects. I hope that ſuch of them " as have the Misfortune to Diſſent from the " Church of England, will reſt ſecure and ſatisfy'd " in the Act of Toleration, which I am FIRMLY " reſolv'd to maintain; and that all thoſe who " have the Happineſs and Advantage of being of " our Church, will conſider, that I have had my " Education in it, and that I have been willing to " run great Hazards for its Preſervation; and " therefore they may be very ſure I ſhall always " make it my own particular care to encourage and " maintain this Church, as by Law eſtabliſhed, " and every the leaſt Member, in all their juſt " Rights and Privileges: And upon all Occaſions of " Promotions to any eccleſiaſtical Dignity, I " ſhall have a very juſt Regard to ſuch as are " eminent and remarkable for their Piety, Learning, and conſtant Zeal for the Church; that by " this and all other Methods which ſhall be thought " proper, I may tranſmit it ſecurely ſettled to " Poſterity. *A.D.*1703.

Queen's Care for the Church.

Then having touch'd upon ſcandalous Pamphlets, and recommended Peace and Union as the moſt effectual Means to defeat the Deſigns of our Enemies; ſhe clos'd with acquainting them ſhe had order'd her Part of all Prizes to be applied to the Publick Service. After this Speech the Lord Keeper, by the Queen's Command, adjourn'd the Parliament to the 22d of April, but it met no more till Winter.

Whatever was the Occaſion, certain it is, our Maritime Expeditions in the Beginning of this War, had not Succeſs anſwerable to our Naval Preparations; not to depreciate the Glory of the Action at Vigo, it was as much owing to Chance, as to the Conduct of the Officers or the Courage of the Troops. A Committee of Lords had inſpected Sir George Rook's Papers, and honourably clear'd him, February 17. Indeed there ſeems no reaſon to call his Courage or his Conduct in Queſtion, till he enter'd into the Meaſures of the Harleian Junto.

The Government of the Leeward Iſlands in America, had pretty good Succeſs in the firſt Attempt againſt the French Settlements in America. Colonel Hamilton, Major General of thoſe Iſlands, being order'd with a ſufficient Force to poſſeſs himſelf of the French Diviſion of St. Chriſtophers, did accordingly march towards it, and ſending a brisk Summons to the Count de Gennes, the French Governor, to ſurrender; the following Articles were agreed upon, and the whole Iſland put in Poſſeſſion of the Engliſh without the loſs of a Man.

The King's regular Troops ſhall march out with Drums beating, &c.

That the Monks be allow'd to carry with them all that belongs to the Church.

That the Sieurs Rivary, Choiſin and Burglois, be forthwith reſtor'd, as well as all thoſe of the Quarters of the Sand Point, and all to be conducted to Martenico.

Other Articles were left at the Major General's Diſcretion.

Sign'd de Gennes, William Hamilton.

French Part of St. Chriſtophers taken.

Three or four Months after, Colonel Codrington, Fellow of All Souls College Oxon, and Chief Governor of thoſe Leeward Iſlands, ſail'd with a Squadron of Men of War, with ſeveral Privateers and other Veſſels, having about 4000 Land Forces aboard, to Guadalupa, the Chief of the French Iſlands. He came before it the 7th, and ſtood off till the 10th, waiting for the Maidſtone Man of War and ſome Tenders, with the Proviſion and Ammunition. On the 12th, Colonel Byam with his Regiment, and 200 of Colonel Whetham's Men, landed at a Place call'd Les Petits Habitants, where they met with ſome Oppoſition, but ſoon conſtrain'd the Enemy to retire; next Day Colonel Whetham landed in a Bay to the Northward of the Town, call'd La Bayliſſe, where he met with a vigorous Reſiſtance of all the Enemies Forces poſted in very good and advantageous Breaſt Works; however, the Engliſh made themſelves Maſters of the Enemies Entrenchments, and in an Hour after, of La Bayliſſe, of the Jacobine Church, which the French had fortify'd, and ten Pieces of their Cannon. They then took a Platform with three Pieces of Cannon, and a Redoubt with one. At Night

Colonel Codrington's Expedition againſt Guadalupa.

*A.D.*1703. Night 400 of the Engliſh, and the Marine Regiment, attack'd the Jacobine Plantations and Breaſt Work, all along the Jacobine River; which the French quitted upon the Firing of two Vollies only of ſmall Shot upon them. The next Day the Engliſh poſſeſt themſelves of the great Town, call'd, La Baſſe Terre, where they continu'd ſome time, ſending out Parties to burn and deſtroy the Enemies Houſes, Sugar Works, Sugar Canes and Proviſions, and then laid Siege to the Fort and Caſtle of La Baſſe Terre; but were ſoon oblig'd to give it over for want of Men or Neceſſaries, which methinks, ſhould have been thought of before the Siege was laid. However, the Miſcarriage is by no means to be imputed to Colonel Codrington's Management. Colonel Moor, Governor of Carolina, took and plunder'd the Town of Auguſtino, near the Gulph of Florida, but could not take the Caſtle for want of a Mortar and Bombs; which he ſent Colonel Daniel to fetch from Jamaica. In the mean time ſome French Men of War and Spaniſh Galleons coming to St. Auguſtino, Colonel Moor was forc'd to raiſe the Siege. Admiral Bembo was ſent with a Squadron of Men of War to the Weſt-Indies, and ſtation'd at Jamaica to have an Eye on the Enemy in thoſe Parts, where Captain Whetſton, in his Cruize took the Florraine a French Man of War, off of Cathagena; and Bembo on Intelligence of Du Caſs's being at Sea with four French Men of War, very joyfully made after him with his Squadron, and came up with him near the Coaſt of St. Martha. He had with him,

Colonel Moor takes Auguſtino.

Admiral Bembo deſerted by his Captains.

The Breda, Vice Admiral Bembo, and ——— Capt. Fogg.
The Defiance, Capt. Richard Kirby.
The Greenwich, Capt. Cooper Wade.
The Ruby, Capt. George Walton.
The Pendennes, Capt. Thomas Hudſon.
The Windſor, Capt. John Conſtable.
The Falmouth, Capt. Samuel Vincent.

Du Caſſe had four French Men of War, 70 Gun Ships or thereabouts, one great Dutch Flyboat of 40 Guns, and a ſmaller Ship, both full of Soldiers, 3 ſmall Ships and a Sloop. Admiral Bembo ſpy'd them the 19th of Auguſt, and made a Signal to his hindermoſt Ships for Battel, but he obſerv'd they were ſlack, and ſent to them to make more haſte to come into a Line. The Falmouth coming abreaſt with the Dutch Ship, attack'd her; the Windſor did the ſame to a French Man of War, and ſo did the Defiance before the Line was form'd, by which means the Admiral was oblig'd to engage alſo in that diſorderly Manner. The Defiance and Windſor having receiv'd 2 or 3 Broadſides only, went out of Gun-ſhot. Upon which the five ſternmoſt Ships of the Enemy lay on the Admiral, which very much gall'd him, his own Ships not coming up to his Aſſiſtance as they ought; Night coming on, the French were for running, and the Admiral perceiving it purſu'd them in hopes of renewing the Fight next Morning; when he found himſelf within Gun-ſhot of Du Caſſe, but his own Ships, except the Ruby, were 3, 4 and 5 Miles a-Stern. This Action did ſo great Diſhonour to the Engliſh Name, that we ſhall forbear entring into the Detail of it, and ſhall only repeat as much of it as appears in the Trials of the two Scoundrels, Wade and Kirby, who with the leſs Offenders were try'd by a Court Martial at Port Royal in Jamaica; Rear Admiral Whetſtone, Preſident. It was then prov'd that Admiral Bembo maintain'd a running Fight with Du Caſſe and his Squadron 5 Days, having no Ship near him but the Kirby, which was diſabl'd, and tow'd off to return to Jamaica if ſhe could; that he boarded Du Caſſe 3 times in Perſon, and was as often repuls'd, with the Loſs of 120 Men in the whole; that his Leg was taken off with a Chain Shot, and he was alſo wounded in the Face and the Arm; but this gallant Man order'd himſelf to be put into a Cradle, and continu'd the Fight till he was deſerted by his Captains; he diſabled one of the French Men of War, and made great Slaughter of Du Caſſe's Men, who could ſpare them, he having 1200 land Soldiers aboard the Flyboat, the ſmall Ships and Sloop. Kirby's getting out of Gun-ſhot after firing 2 or 3 Broadſides, was prov'd, and that his Behaviour caus'd juſt fear of Deſertion, to the great Diſcouragement of all the Engliſh in the Engagement; though he was commanded again and again to keep his Station, he kept 2 or 3 Miles a-Stern all the ſecond Day, and the third Day fir'd not a Gun; notwithſtanding he ſaw the Admiral in ſo great Diſtreſs, having 2 or 3 French Men of War upon him at a time. He threaten'd to kill his Boatſwain for repeating the Admiral's Command to Fire: Captain Conſtable and Captain Hudſon ſtood off as well as Kirby, as did Captain Wade alſo, and beſides, was Drunk during the whole time of the Admiral's Engagement. Kirby finding the brave Bembo determin'd to Fight it out to the laſt, wounded and deſerted as he was, had the Impudence to go on board to diſſuade him, by magnifying the Strength of the French, and leſſening that of the Engliſh. The Admiral ſummon'd the other Captains aboard, but Kirby had poiſon'd them, and got them to ſign a Writing of his own drawing up againſt Fighting, for which the Admiral ſeverely reprimanded him, and Kirby return'd on board his own Ship. The Admiral vindicated Captain Vincent and Captain Fogg, who he ſaid behav'd gallantly; and they alledg'd in excuſe for their ſigning Kirby's Paper, they did it for fear he would have gone over to the Enemy; and if his Accomplices had done ſo too, the Admiral himſelf would have been in Danger of being taken or ſunk. Conſtable had little to ſay for himſelf, and Kirby and Wade leſs, ſo the two latter were condemn'd to be Shot to Death, and Conſtable to be caſhier'd and impriſon'd during her Majeſty's Pleaſure, Vincent and Fogg were for Example ſake ſuſpended till the Lord High Admiral's Pleaſure was known, and Execution of the Sentence of Death againſt Wade and Kirby was deferr'd till they came to England, where the dead Warrant lay ready for them at Plymouth, and being brought thither in the Briſtol Man of War, they were preſently ſhot to Death, April 14th.

Kirby and Wade ſhot.

Admiral *Bembo took this Diſappointment very much to Heart; for though he had himſelf acquir'd as much Glory by the Part he bore in this Action, as ſo brave a Man could have been Ambitious of; yet the Loſs to his Country, by the Eſcape of the Enemy, when he had Reaſon to expect an eaſy and abſolute Conqueſt, threw him into a Languiſhment, which hinder'd the good Effect of the Remedies made uſe of to cure the Wounds he received in the Engagement, and he died at Jamaica the 4th of November 1702, much lamented by all good Engliſhmen, as well on Account of his Affection and Zeal for the Cauſe he had eſpous'd, as of his Bravery and Experience in Sea Service. Ever memorable ſhould be that ſaying of his, in a Letter to his Wife on the Loſs of his Leg: That does not trouble me half ſo much as the villanous Treachery of ſome of the Captains under me, which hinder'd me from totally deſtroying the French Squadron. If ever Reflections ſhould be caſt on the Conduct of the Admiralty for preferring experienc'd Sea Men or Tarrs, to the Command of Men of War; I deſire that whoever hears it will defy thoſe that make it, to give an Inſtance of a more gallant Officer

Admiral Bembo's Death.

A.D.1703 Officer in the Roll of Quality than was this Bembo, at first Prentice to a Waterman, and afterwards employ'd in the Merchants Service, till he became Master of a Ship in the Portugal Trade of about 100 Ton, which was his highest Preferment till he was taken into the Navy.

His Character.

Vice Admiral Graydon's ill Conduct.

This Escape of Monsieur du Casse was not the only one which he had the Luck to meet with, by means of the ill Conduct of the English. Vice Admiral Graydon in the Resolution, with 3 other Ships of War, the Montagu, Nonsuch and Blackwall, met with him in the Latitude of 47 about 7 Months after. He had four French Men of War, probably the same that Admiral Bembo engag'd; and Captain Cleaveland in the Montagu attack'd the Sternmost of them, but upon his first firing, Graydon made a Signal to call him off, being, as he said, under Orders not to lose any time in his Passage by chasing or speaking with any Ship whatsoever, but to convoy the Transports, having Colonel Columbine's Regiment on board the Store Ships and Merchant Men: But his general Orders to fight and destroy the Enemy whenever he had an Opportunity, as now he had a fair one, were thought to be of more Force than his particular Instructions; and accordingly the House of Lords took it in their Vote.

Vote of the Lords against him.

Resolv'd, That Vice Admiral Graydon, with a Squadron of her Majesty's Ships of War under his Convoy, meeting with four French Ships in his Passage to the West-Indies, and letting them escape without attacking them according to his Duty, from the Pretence of his Instructions, had been a Prejudice to the Queen's Service, and a great Dishonour to the Nation.

Boyer in his Reign of Queen Anne, has been so stupid as to take his Memoirs, and even his Characters for Scotish History, out of the Libel that goes under the Name of Lockhart; but as I have hinted, was the Work of a Jacobite Priest, and is full of Lies, which that most excellent Historographer was not sensible of, otherwise he would not have made so much use of the Book, the Man's Heart being in this Case better than his Head.

List of the Scots Parliament.

The Elections for Members of Parliament for Scotland, pursuant to the Queen's Writs for a New one being over; the following List, not perfect, was printed in London, October, 1702.

Commissioners for Shires.

Edinburgh.	Robert Dundass of Arniston,
	George Lockhart of Carnwath,
	Sir James Primrose of Carrington,
	Sir Robert Dickson of Inverask.
Hadingtone.	Sir John Lauder of Fountainhall,
	William Nisbett of Dirleton,
	Andrew Fletcher of Salton,
	Sir George Suity of Balgon,
	John Cockburn Jun. of Ormiston.
Roxburgh.	William Bennet Jun. of Grubet,
	Sir William Kerr of Greenhead,
	Sir Gilbert Elliot,
	Archibald Douglas of Cavers.
Selkirk.	Sir James Murray of Philiphaugh,
	Mr. John Murray his Brother.
Peebles.	Alexander Horseburgh of Horseburgh,
	William Morrisone of Prestongrange.
Lanerk.	William Bailly of Lamington,
	George Bailly of Jerviswood,
	John Sinclair of Camnetham,
	James Hamilton of Aikenhead.
Dumfreis.	Sir John Johnston of Westraw,
	--- Douglas of Dornock,
	--- Fergusson of Isle,
	--- Sharp of Hoddon.
Air.	Mr. Francis Montgomery of Gissen,
	Mr. William Dalrymple,
	--- Cathcart of Carelton,
	John Crauford of Kilberny,
	Sir William Cunningham of Cunninghamhead,
	Sir Alexander Home of Lessnock.
	3 last Controv.
Dumbarton.	Honourable James Campbell,
	Mr. William Cockran of Kilmarannock,
	--- Colquhon of Luss,
	Maxwell of Kilmaken.
	3 last Controv.
Renfrew.	Sir John Houston of Houston,
	John Stewart of Blackhall,
	--- Hamilton Jun. of Orbistone,
	Robert Pollock of Pollock.
	2 last Controv.
Stirling.	--- Rolle of Pouhouse,
	--- Graham of Killairne,
	--- Graham of Bucklivie.
Perth.	John Hadden of Glenagles,
	Sir Patrick Murray of Auchtertire,
	William Oliphant of Gask,
	Mango Graham of Gorthee.
Bamff.	Alexander Duff of Braceo,
	Ogilvie of Boyne, Jun.
Sutherland.	--- Gordon of Gartie,
	David Sutherland of Kinnald.
Kincardin.	Sir Thomas Burnet of Leyes,
	Sir John Falconer of Phesdo,
	--- Bennerman of Elsick.
	All Controv.
Aberdeen.	William Seaton of Pelmedden, Jun.
	--- Gordon of Petlurg,
	--- Woodney of Woodney,
	James More of Stonnywood.
Inverness.	Lodovick Grant of Grant,
	Laird of Grant, Jun.
Navin.	Hughaoss of Kilraock,
	George Brodie of Asisk.
Berwick.	Sir John Home of Blocader,
	Sir Robert Sinclair of Longformacus,
	George Baily of Jerviswood.
Fife.	Sir William Anstruther of Anstruther,
	Sir Patrick Murray,
	--- Beaton of Balfour,
	Major Balfour of Dunbeg.
Forfar.	Mr. James Cornegre of Finhaven,
	--- Lyon of Achterhouse,
	--- Halyburton of Pitcut,
	--- Graham of Fentre.

Commissioners of Burghs.

Edinburgh.	Lord Provost Johnston.
	Robert Inglis.
Perth.	Alexander Robertson.
Dundee.	John Scrimger.
Aberdeen.	Provost Allardes.
Stirling.	Captain John Erskin.
Lithgow.	--- Stuart of Parkdovan.
St. Andrews.	--- Watson of Athernie.
Glasgow.	Hugh Montgomery.
Air.	Robert Mure.
Hadington.	Provost Edgar.
Dysert.	David Chrystie.
Kircaldy.	Capt. Osal and Boswald Controv.
Montross.	Provost Renald and --- Miller Controv.

A.D.1703.

Cowper.	--- Bruce of Bonzeon.
Anſtruther Eaſt.	Sir Robert Anſtruther.
Dumfeis.	Provoſt Johnſton.
Burnt Iſland.	Sir John Erskin of Aloſa.
Innerkeethin.	--- Spittle of Lenchers.
Kinghorn.	Hon. James Melvil.
Brechen.	Francis Molliſon.
Irwin.	Thomas Boil.
Jedburgh.	Walter Scot.
Kircudbright.	Sir Andrew Home.
Dumfermlin.	Sir James Halkett of Pitferrin.
Pittlenweem.	George Smith Jun. of Gilliſton.
Selkerk.	Ballie Scot.
Dumbarton.	Sir James Smollet.
Renfrew.	Colin Cambel.
Dunbar.	Baillie Kellie.
Lanerk.	William Carmichael.
Arbroth.	Provoſt Hutcheſon.
Elgen.	--- Sutherland, Son to the Lord Duffus.
Peebles.	Provoſt Sheels.
Crail.	George Moncreiſe.
Culroſs.	Sir David Dalrymple.
	Colonel Erskir Controv.
Bamf.	Sir Alexander Ogilvie of Forglen.
Forfar.	John Lion.
Rothſay.	--- Dugal Stuart.
Nairn.	--- Roſs of Bradlie.
Forres.	--- Dumbar of Grant-hill.
Ragland.	Provoſt Spence.
North Berwick.	Lord Preſident of the Seſſion.
Anſtruther, Weſt.	Sir John Anſtruther.
Cullen.	Patrick Ogilvie.
Lawder.	Sir David Cunningham.
Kintore.	--- Alladers of Alladers.
Annan.	William Johnſton.
Lockmahen.	John Caruthers.
New Galloway.	David French, Writer.
Kilrenie.	--- Bethum Jun. of Balfour.
Forteroſe.	George Mackenzie of Aſſint.
Dingwell.	--- Bayne of Tullock.
Dornoch.	Roderick Mackenzie, Secretary to the African Company.
Queensferry.	Lord Whitelaw.
Inverary.	Robert Forbes, Advocate.
Kirkwall.	Robert Douglaſs.
Inverbervy.	Alexander Arbuthnot, Advocate.
Strathraes.	George Dalrymple.
Campbel Town.	David Campbel.

As imperfect as this Liſt is, I was willing the Reader ſhould ſee it, not only becauſe it is that of the laſt Scots Parliament before the Union of the two Kingdoms, but alſo becauſe the Falſity of the pretended Lockhart's Characters will be the more Apparent; that Libeller aſſerting that the Jacobite and Epiſcopal Party in this Parliament would have been the Majority, if Places and Penſions, and the Hopes of them had not drawn off ſeveral of the Members to vote againſt their Conſciences: For tho' ſome of them were doubtleſs angry enough with the Court on Account of the Darien Buſineſs, and not at all ſweeten'd by the Behaviour of High Church in England; yet none but the downright Jacobites, ſuch as Lockhart, Grandſon to that pious Presbyterian, Philip Lord Wharton, were for Epiſcopacy and the Pretender. 'Tis true, Duke Hamilton and other Malecontent Lords did their utmoſt to ſeduce the diſguſted Presbyterians with Hopes of having all the Scots Grievances redreſt, if they join'd heartily againſt the Court; and by that means many of the Church of Scotland, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, nay ſome that were rank Republicans, as Fletcher of Salton, fell in with thoſe that meant the Pretender and Popery, or a Prelacy as bad as Papal, ſuch as Bancroft's, Laud's, Sheldon's, &c. and would not be content with a true Proteſtant Epiſcopacy, ſuch as Grindal's, Abbot's, Tillotſon's, Tenniſon's, Wake's, Hoadley's, &c. The Diſſenting Clergy in Scotland, as Queen Anne call'd them in her Letter to the Privy-Council, drew up an Addreſs, which was preſented to the Queen by Dr. Skeene and Dr. Scot, introduc'd by the Duke of Queensberry and Viſcount Tarbat. The Subſtance of it was, to implore her Majeſty's Compaſſion; and they did it with an Air that ſeem'd rather to demand than deſire it; for notwithſtanding her Majeſty had call'd them Diſſenters, they did not ſtick in that Addreſs to ſtile themſelves the National Church. The Queen in her Anſwer aſſur'd them of her Protection, and Endeavours to ſupply their Neceſſities as far as conveniently ſhe cou'd; and recommended to them to live in Peace and Chriſtian Love with the Clergy who were by Law inveſted with the Church Government there. Theſe Scots Epiſcopalians, preſum'd ſo much on the Favour and Aſſiſtance of the Engliſh High Church, that a Toleration was the leaſt of their Expectations; and truly if they had render'd themſelves worthy of Indulgence, by their dutiful and affectionate Submiſſion to the Government, as the Diſſenters did in England, I cannot think of one Reaſon why they ſhould not have been put on the ſame Foot with the reſt of their Countrymen, as far as they could in Conſcience comply: But beſides ſeveral Exceptions to their particular Characters, there was a very great one to their general one, which was Diſaffection and inveterate Hatred to the Government; inſomuch, that after many reconciling Schemes to induce them to deſerve a full Liberty, they were ſo incorrigible, that the Chief of them, the Archbiſhop of Glaſgow, whom the Lord Commiſſioner ſent to Court to inform the Queen of the true State of that Affair, told her, the Duke of Queensberry found them ſo diſaffected to her Intereſt, that to ſhew them Favour, would be to encourage her Enemies; adding with Tears in his Eyes, ſhe might depend upon the Truth of this Information, ſince it came from him who could be no Gainer, but on the contrary was a great Loſer by their being kept under. For which the Scots Memoir Writer abuſes this old Biſhop unmercifully, ſays, "he was extreamly proud and haughty, "deſtitute of all the Virtues that ſhould adorn the "Life and Converſation of one ſo highly exalted "in the Church, and that he accepted of a Pen-"ſion of 400 l. a Year, to betray the Cauſe of "the Epiſcopal Clergy; which Penſion was paid "him out of the Biſhops Lands." The pretended Lockhart adds, The Queen and Prince George were confounded to hear him talk ſo; which was confirm'd by the Earl of Balcarras, an ungrateful Wretch, ſays the ſame Libeller, who had no farther Ambition than how to get as much Money as to make himſelf Drunk once or twice a Day; which I hope is ſufficient to let the Reader into the Merit of the ſham Lockhart.

The Scots Parliament met the 6th of May, and the Duke of Queensberry, her Majeſty's High Commiſſioner, having taken his Seat on the Throne, the Queen's Letter to them was read; wherein ſhe recommended to them to raiſe a Supply for the Forces, to encourage Trade, and to proceed with Wiſdom, Prudence, and Unanimity. Then the Lord High Commiſſioner and the Earl of Seafield, Lord Chancellor, made Speeches enlarging upon the Heads of the Queen's Letter; after which Duke Hamilton offer'd the Draught of an Act for Recognizing and Aſſerting her Majeſty's Authority, and her undoubted Right and Title to the Imperial Crown of Scotland; which being read once, was unanimouſly order'd a ſecond Reading, May 15th. When the Queen's Advocate offer'd a Clauſe, by which it ſhould be Treaſon to Impugn or Quarrel

A.D.1703. Scots Diſſenters Petition the Queen.

The Archbiſhop of Glaſcow tells the Queen it was dangerous to encourage the Epiſcopalians.

The vile Character of Lockhart's Memoirs.

Scots Parliament meets.

A.D.1703 her Majeſty's Right and Title to the Crown, or her Exerciſe of the Government, from her actual Entry on the ſame; and after a warm Debate, it was agreed, that the Clauſe ſhould be added to the Act, which had the Royal Aſſent, May the 19th. The Motion for the Supply was made by the Earl of Hume, one of the Heads of the Cavalier Party, as the Memoir Writer terms the Jacobites; and it was ſo conſtru'd, that her Majeſty might ſee how ready they were to promote her Intereſt, though at the ſame Time they were as deep as they could be in a Plot, or Plots, to Dethrone her, and impoſe a Popiſh Pretender on her Proteſtant Kingdoms. In this Debate, a Reflection was caſt upon the Influence of Foreign Counſels; which the Lord Commiſſioner taking rightly, he ſaid, I have heard a Member expreſs ſomething that pointed at the Treaſurer of England; I own the Honour of his Lordſhip's Acquaintance, but I have the Honour likewiſe to ſerve a great Queen, whoſe Commands alone I obey; and I can further give all poſſible Aſſurance, that the Treaſurer of England neither has meddled, nor does meddle in the leaſt with Scotiſh Affairs. The Marquis of Twedale made the Overture for the Act of Security. The Duke of Argyle offer'd an Act for ratifying the Revolution, and all the Acts following thereupon; Mr. Fletcher, An Act for ſeveral Limitations upon the Succeſſor after her Majeſty's Death.: The Earl of Rothes propos'd an Act, That no Perſon coming to the Crown of Scotland, being at the ſame Time King or Queen of England, ſhould, as King or Queen of SCOTLAND, have Power to make Peace or War, without Conſent of Parliament: And that good Briton, and good Proteſtant, the Earl of Marchmont made the Overture for an Act for ſecuring the true Proteſtant Religion, and PRESBYTERIAN Government.

The Lord Commiſſioner vindicates the Lord Godolphin.

Propoſals for Acts.

Mem. p. 353. Earl of Strathmore's traiterous Practices.

On the 1ſt of June, the Earl of Strathmore, an abandon'd Jacobite, who having taken the Oaths to Queen Anne, ſign'd a traiterous Paper for inviting the Pretender to Scotland, preſented an Act for a Toleration to the Epiſcopal Clergy. It is fit Poſterity ſhould know what Metal the Conſciences of theſe Men were made of, who aſſerted ſo much Zeal for Religion, under the Name of Church, both in England and Scotland: Had the Proteſtant Diſſenters in England ſhewn the Thouſandth Part of that Diſaffection to the Government, which the Diſſenters in Scotland were notorious for, I believe no good Engliſhman would ever have open'd his Lips, to have ſaid a Word in Favour of them. The Aſſembly's Repreſentation againſt this Scotch Toleration, diſtinguiſhes much the Merit of our Diſſenters from that of theirs: In Scotland, the People had no Scruple in their Conſciences againſt Communion and Worſhip with the legal ESTABLISH'D CHURCH, 'till, of late, in ſome Places, they had been practiſed upon, and divided by Prelatick Miniſters. Difference in Opinion about Church Government, is not a ſufficient Reaſon for Separation. To grant a Toleration to that Party, in the preſent Circumſtances of Church and State, muſt unavoidably ſhake the Foundation of our preſent happy Conſtitution; overthrow the Scheme upon which it is ſettled; needleſsly diſturb that Peace and Tranquility which the Nation has enjoy'd ever ſince the late Revolution; diſquiet the Minds of her Majeſty's beſt Subjects, increaſe Animoſities, Confuſions, Diſcords, and Tumults, enervate Diſcipline, open a Door to Vice, Popery, and other Errors, and bring the Nation into the ſame, or worſe Miſeries and Miſchiefs from which it has been mercifully deliver'd, &c. The Reading of this Repreſentation had ſo good an Effect, that the Jacobites dropp'd their Toleration; and the Act for ſecuring Presbyterian Government, paſs'd; not, as the Sham Lockhart belies the Fact, by a Majority of ſixteen Voices only: For of Two Hundred and Forty Members, there were but eighty that voted againſt it; and of his Eighty-two Members that were Silent, Non-Liquets, as he calls them, they muſt be ſorry Churchmen, if, as he affirms, they were all Epiſcopalians, and would not beſtow a Word for Epiſcopacy, when they ſaw their Church in ſo much Danger. Duke Hamilton voted for ſettling Presbytery; ſo did the Earl of Eglington, and others, that were not look'd upon as Revolutioners. The Memoir-Writer informs us, that ſeveral Speeches were made againſt this Bill, particularly by Sir David Cunningham, whom he calls a Man of Metal, Who urg'd, it was uncharitable to affirm, that none were of the Church of Chriſt, except Presbyterians; which probably was not affirm'd in ſuch general Terms; but he ſays it, to make Room for putting ſomething weaker ſtill, in the Mouth of the Marquis of Lothian, That he was ſure the Presbyterian Government was the beſt Part of the Chriſtian Religion; which he adds, ſet all the Houſe in a merry Temper. If the Phraſe had been Chriſtian Diſcipline, it would have been a Subject more proper for their Reaſon, than their Raillery. And we find that this Mettleſome Sir David Cunningham, in one of the Debates about this Bill, was ſo affected with the rattling of Rain on the Leads of the Parliament Houſe, that he ſaid with equal Wiſdom and Intrepidity, It is apparent Heaven declares againſt your Procedure. A.D.1703

Duke Hamilton votes for Presbytery.

The Aſſembly's Reaſons againſt Tolerating Epiſcopacy.

In this Seſſion of Parliament there were ſeveral Attempts made to try their Tempers, with Relation to the Houſe of Hanover, which were all unſucceſsful: And every one ſaw, whatever Good Scotchmen deſir'd and intended, they reſolv'd to have the Differences with England accommodated, before they conſented to put themſelves under the Government of the ſame Prince, after the Death of the Queen. The Jacobites in England and Scotland flatter'd themſelves with the Hopes of ſome Advantage to their deſperate Cauſe by the Backwardneſs of the Scotch in the Affair of the Succeſſion; but their Hopes have always deceived them, and their Folly was both their Shame and their Puniſhment. The Queen's Advocate offer'd an Act for Reſcinding the ſecond Act of the third Parliament of King Charles II. ſo far as the ſame was inconſiſtent with the Claim of Right, and the preſent Settlement made in King William's Time. Againſt which it was urg'd, that by the Claim of Right, all Popiſh Succeſſors being excluded, they ſhould by this Reſcinding, determine the Succeſſion to be lodg'd in the Family of Hanover, who were the neareſt Proteſtants of the Royal Blood. And, ſays the Sham Lockhart, Though the Presbyterians, and all the Miniſters, except three, Marquis of Athol, Viſcount Tarbat, and Roderick Mackenzie, Lord Juſtice Clerk, preſs'd to have the Act read the firſt Time, yet it was order'd to lie on the Table. On the 9th of July, when a Clauſe of the Act of Security was in Debate, theſe Words being propos'd to be added, A Succeſſor of the true Proteſtant Religion, as by Law eſtabliſh'd in Scotland: It was urg'd for it, "That ſince the Wiſdom of this "Houſe had thought fit to exclude Papiſts, who "profeſt the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation, from "having any Acceſs to the Scotch Government, "there was no Reaſon why the Lutherans, who "profeſt the Doctrine of Conſubſtantiation, ſhould "not be excluded; but it was not carry'd, though the Cavalier and Epiſcopal Party were forward enough to offer Indignities to the Proteſtant Succeſſion; and the Pretender was more than once ſpoken of in the Houſe as Prince of Wales, without any Adjunct to denote his Incapacity by Birth and Law. Another Clauſe was offer'd, That no Engliſhman, or Foreigner, having a Scotch Title, and not Attempts for the Houſe of Hanover.

A.D.1703. not One Thouſand Pounds Sterling a Year in Scotland, ſhall have a Place in Parliament in the Succeſſor's Time. To this the Marquis of Athol ſaid, it ſhould not exclude Scotchmen by Birth, who had not One Thouſand Pounds a Year; which was alſo mov'd by the Duke of Argyle. The Act of Security occaſion'd many warm Speeches and Debates, inſomuch that the Lord High-Commiſſioner was not free from Apprehenſions of Mutiny, it having been ſaid in Parliament, They would demand it Sword in Hand. However, his Grace continu'd firm in Obedience to her Majeſty's Inſtructions, and refus'd to give the Royal Aſſent to that Act, though the Supply Bill was loſt by it for that Seſſion, to which he put a Period the 16th of September. He gave the Royal Aſſent to an Act anent Slanderers: An Act for ratifying the turning the Meeting of the Eſtates into a Parliament: An Act anent Peace and War: An Act anent the Publick Accompts; the Commiſſioners were, the Earl of Galloway; the Earl of Northesk; the Earl of Balcarras; the Earl of Dunmore; Viſcount Stairs; Lord Arniſton; Lord Fountainhall; Laird of Glenegies; —— Ogilvie of Boyne; Seaton, Junior, of Pitmedden; Mr. Dougal Stuart; Mr. John Campbel; Sir David Cunningham; Mr. John Pennicook; Mr. Robert Fraſer. An Act allowing the Importation of Wines, &c.

Soon after the Parliament was adjourn'd, her Majeſty conferr'd ſeveral Titles of Honour on ſuch Members as had either ſerv'd her in the laſt, or ſeem'd inclinable to ſerve her in a future Seſſion: The young Marquis of Douglas was created Duke of Douglas; the Marquis of Athol Duke of Athol; Viſcount Stair Earl of Stair; Viſcount Tarbat Earl of Cromarty; Lord Boyle Earl of Glaſcow; James Stewart of Bute Earl of Bute; Charles Hope of Hopetoun Earl of Hopetoun; John Cranford of Kilbirrnee Viſcount of Jarnock; and Sir James Primroſe of Carrington Viſcount of Primroſe.

Dr. Drake's Book burnt by the Hangman.

Before the Parliament broke up, they order'd a Book publiſh'd by the Title of Hiſtoria Anglo Scotica, by James Drake, M. D. and dedicated to Sir Edward Seymour, containing many falſe and injurious Reflections upon the Sovereignty and Independency of the Crown of Scotland, to be burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman, at the Market-Croſs at Edinburgh.

The Earl of Rocheſter ſtill put off his going to Ireland from Time to Time, and at laſt was ſuperſeded in that Government, by her Majeſty's appointing the Duke of Ormond to be Lord Lieutenant; and he was receiv'd there with more than ordinary Marks of Affection and Reſpect. Soon after his Arrival in that Kingdom, he iſſu'd Writs for chuſing a new Parliament, which met the 21ſt of September, and having made Choice of Allan Broderick, Eſq; Sollicitor-General, to be Speaker, whom his Grace approv'd: He ſpoke to this Effect:

Duke of Ormond's Speech.

"THAT it were to be wiſh'd they were in a "Condition to provide for ſuch Fortifications as would much conduce to the Safety of the "Kingdom, and particularly at Limerick; and "for building Barracks in Dublin, and where elſe "they were wanting: But that which her Majeſty "expected at that Time, was only that the Publick Debts be diſcharg'd, and the Revenue made "equal to the Expence of the Government; "which was much increas'd by the Charge of the "Barracks, which were found ſo uſeful, and ſo "great an Eaſe to the Country, that they ought "not to be neglected. That he had order'd all "the Accounts to be laid before them, by which "they would perceive that the Government had A.D.1703. "expended a very conſiderable Sum towards "building thoſe Barracks, more than was given "by the Parliament for that Purpoſe: And that "when they were fully inform'd of Particulars, "he doubted not but they would give as great Teſtimony of Reſpect and Affection to her Majeſty, as had been given to any of her Royal Predeceſſors.

The firſt Thing both Houſes went upon, was the framing and preſenting Dutiful and Affectionate Addreſſes to the Queen, and Lord Lieutenant: And the Houſe of Lords wrote alſo a Letter to her Majeſty, Returning her their Thanks for her happy Choice of James Duke of Ormond, to be her Lieutenant, and Chief Governor over that Kingdom. To all which Compliments her Majeſty, and his Excellency, return'd very gracious Anſwers. But the Warmth of their Affections for the latter abated a little, when they ſaw that he was capable of receiving Impreſſions from the Tory Miniſters in England, as we ſhall ſee preſently. The Houſe of Commons order'd Colonel Eyre, Mr. Tenniſon, Sir Francis Blundel, and Alderman Singleton, to bring in a Bill to prevent the Growth of Popery, and to prepare Heads of a Bill, to prevent Papiſts from Inheriting.

The Truſtees for the Sale of the Forfeited Eſtates, having by the Succeſs of their Truſt, made good whatever had been ſaid againſt the employing of them in it, eſpecially as to the Nett Produce of their Sales, and the extraordinary Expence and Trouble that whole Kingdom would be put to by their Vexatious and Arbitrary Proceedings; the Parliament of Ireland took Cogniſance of their Conduct, and by their Reſolutions and Repreſentations, confirm'd the Judgment that had been made of them in England, and what has been ſaid of them in the laſt Reign; for which I doubt not I have been enough cenſur'd for Partiality.

Iriſh Truſtees condemn'd by Parliament.

One of the firſt Things the Houſe of Commons in Ireland did, was to take that Matter into Conſideration. After which they Reſolv'd, "That "all the Proteſtant Freeholders of that Kingdom "had been falſly and maliciouſly miſrepreſented, "and traduc'd and abus'd, in a Repreſentation "made of them in a Book, entitled, The Report "of the Commiſſioners appointed to enquire into the "Iriſh Forfeitures; in which are theſe Words; "And indeed it does appear, that the Freeholders "of this Kingdom, through Length of Time, "and by embracing new Friendſhips with the "Iriſh, or by interpurchaſing with one another, but chiefly through a general Diſlike "of the Diſpoſitions of the Forfeitures, are unwilling to find any Perſon guilty of the Rebellion, even upon full Evidence. And it appearing to the Houſe, that Francis Anneſley, Eſq; a Member of the Houſe, and that John Trenchard, Eſq; Henry Langford, Eſq; and James Hamilton, Eſq; were the Authors of the ſaid Book: They Reſolv'd, That Francis Anneſley, Eſq; Henry Langford, Eſq; and John Trenchard, Eſq; had ſcandalouſly and maliciouſly miſrepreſented and traduc'd the Proteſtant Freeholders of that Kingdom, and had thereby endeavour'd to create a Miſunderſtanding and Jealouſy between the People of England, and the Proteſtants of that Kingdom; and thereupon they expell'd Mr. Anneſley the Houſe; with this particular Mark of Diſgrace, that no Warrant be iſſu'd this Seſſion, to elect a new Member for Down-Patrick, in the Room of Mr. Anneſley, lately expell'd." They put no Queſtion about Mr. Hamilon, that Gentleman being lately dead, and Mr. John Trenchard, who had this Vote of Votes againſt Mr. Trenchard.

*A.D.*1703. of Parliament upon him, for having ſcandalouſly and maliciouſly abus'd the Proteſtants of Ireland, was got ſafe into England; where ſoon after he ſet himſelf up as the Britiſh Cato, to Cenſure all Abuſes, and to reform the Government. The Houſe of Commons in Ireland, not content with theſe Reſolves, purſu'd thoſe Commiſſioners in a Repreſentation to the Queen, wherein they ſaid, That whereas her Majeſty's Royal Predeceſſors, of Bleſſed Memory, had always had the Glory of being Kings and Queens of a Free People, diſtinguiſh'd from the reſt of Europe, by the eminent Privilege of being govern'd by their own Laws, and of enjoying Liberties under the Dominion of a Sovereign Prince, according to the moſt equal and juſt Model of Government that ever was fram'd; yet the Conſtitution of Ireland had been of late greatly ſhaken, the Lives, Liberties and Eſtates of the Subjects thereof being call'd in Queſtion, and try'd in a Manner unknown to their Anceſtors. That when they conſider'd the Charge which the Subjects of that Kingdom had been UNNECESSARILY put to by the late Truſtees, in defending ſuch their juſt Rights and Titles, as had, after many and expenſive Delays, been allow'd by the ſaid Truſtees, exceeded, in Value, the Current Caſh of the Kingdom; they had but too great Reaſon to believe, that this had been principally occaſion'd through falſe and malicious Reports and Miſrepreſentations made of the Proteſtants of that Kingdom, by Deſigning and Ill-meaning Men, in order to create Miſunderſtandings between England and Ireland, and to promote beneficial Employments for themſelves, &c.

The Commons of Ireland Addreſs againſt the Truſtees.

It will be worth the Reader's While to turn back to the Reſumption of the Iriſh Grants, three or four Years before this, to judge by the Effect of the Wiſdom and Honeſty of the Perſons who puſh'd that Matter at all Hazards, inſtead of taking into Conſideration the great Danger the Spaniſh Monarchy was in, of falling into French Hands. Theſe moſt excellent Iriſh Commiſſioners, in order to promote beneficial Employments to themſelves, as the Parliament of Ireland explain it, Reported the Forfeited Eſtates to be worth 2685130 l. beſides many other Articles, amounting to an immenſe Sum, to much more than the Amount of the Commiſſioners Sales 1050000 l. out of which was deducted about 150000 l. for Incumbrances; ſo then the Produce will be 900000 l.; out of which, if we deduct the yearly Charge of the Truſt, about 50000 l. a Year, then there will remain 700000 l. which we cannot but allow for the Current Caſh of Ireland; and as much as that was expended on ſetling the Titles that were allow'd only; and the Expence of the Titles that were not allow'd, muſt be plac'd to the Account of the Truſtees, to their Debt, or their Credit; for by this Calculation it appears to be all that was made of their Truſt; the Glory of a High-Church Majority. We muſt not forget the Addreſs of this Houſe of Commons to the Queen, at the opening of the Seſſion: Wherein, having congratulated her Majeſty's happy Aceſſion to the Throne, they ſaid, They could not but with the deepeſt Concern take Notice to her Majeſty, that her Enemies, by many groundleſs and malicious Calumnies, had miſrepreſented them; the ſad and ſevere Effects whereof, they too ſenſibly felt; and eſpecially, as if they thought themſelves, or deſir'd to be, independant of the Crown of England. That therefore, to vindicate themſelves from ſuch foul and unworthy Aſperſions, they declar'd and acknowledg'd, that the Kingdom of Ireland was annex'd and united to the Imperial Crown of England; and by the Laws and Statutes of that Kingdom, was declar'd to be juſtly and rightfully depending upon, and belonging, and for ever united to the ſame; and that it never enter'd into their Thoughts to wiſh the contrary, the Happineſs of that Kingdom entirely depending on a ſtedfaſt Duty paid to the Crown of England, and a good Correſpondence with her Majeſty's Subjects of that Kingdom; and they unanimouſly aſſur'd her Majeſty, that they would, to the utmoſt of their Power, Support and Maintain her Majeſty's Rightful and Lawful Title to the Crown of this Realm, and the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, as the ſame was ſettled by the Acts of Parliament in England. It is obſervable, That the Parliament of Ireland miſs no Opportunity of expreſſing their grateful Senſe of their Deliverance by King William, and their firm Attachment to the Succeſſion in the Royal Houſe of Hanover.

Iriſh Parliament declare Ireland to be dependant on Englane.

The Truſtees huddled up the Diſpatch of their Truſt, before the Meeting of this Parliament; and ſome London Merchants, underſtanding there were good Pennyworths to be had, ſent Agents over to Dublin, to purchaſe in a Lump, what was left unſold. To do it as a Corporation, they examin'd the Powers in the Charters of ſeveral Companies in London, that they might purchaſe under one, by which the Company was impower'd to buy Lands without Stint, or at leaſt a very large one; ſuch was the Charter to the Sword-Blade Company, erected and incorporated to ſet up that Manufacture in Cumberland, or one of the Neighbouring Counties, for the Uſe of the Army, on the breaking out of the firſt Confederate War. They were enabled to Purchaſe Lands to build Mills upon the Rivers, and to provide for the Reception and Entertainment of a great Number of Manufacturers from Germany; which not turning to Account, the Sword-Cuttlers ſold their Charter to thoſe London Merchants, who purchas'd about Twenty Thouſand Pounds a Year of the Forfeited Eſtates, and ſome of the beſt of thoſe Eſtates, for a Sum not much greater than it was ſaid the Grantees, or thoſe that held of them, offer'd, without putting the Publick to a Penny Charge: And theſe Merchants, by the Stile of the Governor and Company for making the Sword-Blades in England, pray'd, that Heads of a Bill might be brought in, for enabling them to take Conveyances of Lands in Ireland. But the Parliament were ſo little diſpos'd to Guaranty the Bargains of the Truſtees, that their Petition was order'd to lie upon the Table; and there it lay with others that had no better Succeſs. The Sword-Blade Company ſold their Eſtates afterwards to Mr. Edwards of London, who had them cheap enough to have made a quick and a good Market. The Houſe expell'd John Aſgil, Eſq; who was at the ſame Time a Member of the Houſe of Commons in England, for an unaccountable Book of his, to prove out of Scripture, that a true Chriſtian Believer ought to have ſo great a Stock of Faith, as to be tranſlated to Heaven without Dying. I knew Aſgyl; and his Whims ſeem'd to qualify him more for Bedlam, than a Houſe of Commons: Indeed his Conduct was no Credit to his Syſtem, for he had as Agent to the Sword-Blade Company in England, offer'd to lend Money to the Publick in Ireland, at Six per Cent. on Condition the Parliament would paſs an Act to confirm their Purchaſe of the Forfeited Eſtates; but the Company diſown'd him in that Offer, and being ſummon'd to appear before the Houſe, to anſwer for his prevaricating with them, he pleaded his Privilege as a Member of the Houſe of Commons in England. Stephen Ludlow, Eſq; was Chairman of the Committee for the Supply, which was granted to Satisfaction; and Robert Moleſworth, Eſq; afterwards Lord Moleſworth, was Chairman of the Committee for the State of the Nation, who drew up the Repreſentation above-mention'd, about the Iriſh Truſtees, and other Grievances. Major Clayton was order'd to carry Sword-Blade Company has Iriſh Forfeitures incorporated.

Aſgil pleads Engliſh Privileges.

A.D.1703.

A Bill for the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

carry to the Lord Lieutenant, Heads of a Bill, To make it High-Treaſon in this Kingdom, by Word or Writing, to impeach the Succeſſion to the Crown, as limited by ſeveral Acts of Parliament; and to deſire the ſame might be tranſmitted to England in due Form. The Houſe voted Thanks to their Committee appointed to inſpect the Publick Accounts, who had ſav'd the Kingdom 103,368*l.* which by Miſrepreſentation had been charg'd as a Debt upon the Nation. This was doing Buſineſs to the Purpoſe; whereas High-Church Commiſſioners in England directed their ſtricteſt Search againſt Errors in Men who were not of their Side, and not againſt Things; and we are at a Loſs to direct where any one may find that ſuch Commiſſioners ever ſav'd England ſuch a Sum as 103000*l.*

Good Management of Iriſh Commiſſioners of Accompts.

On the 16th of October, the Lord Lieutenant gave the Royal Aſſent to An Act for an additional Exciſe on Beer, Ale, &c. an Act for the Importation of Iron and Staves; an Act to prevent Popiſh Prieſts coming into the Kingdom: And having appointed the Commons to attend him two Days after at the Caſtle, he acquainted them with her Majeſty's moſt gracious Anſwer to their laſt Addreſs, which was, That her Majeſty was extreamly pleas'd with the Aſſurance they gave her of their Duty to her, and of their Affection and due Regard to the Crown of ENGLAND; that they ſhould find by her Readineſs to advance the Good of that Kingdom, that ſhe had receiv'd no ill Impreſſion of them; and did not doubt but they would, upon all Occaſions, ſhew ſuch Reſpect to her, as to deſerve the Continuance of her Majeſty's Favour to them, and ſhould therefore give ſuch Diſpatch to the Publick Affairs, as the Condition of that Kingdom requir'd. Tho' this was term'd a moſt gracious Anſwer; yet People who knew Court Language, judg'd otherwiſe, and that by its Coldneſs, the Influence of ſuch Men as How, Harcourt and Harley, had depriv'd it of that Grace which was ſaid to have been in it: For though Harley and Harcourt had been bred in the rankeſt of Presbyterian Schools, they had ſome how or other, got themſelves the Credit of being Pillars of the Church, and conſequently could have no Good-will to thoſe that behav'd with any Moderation towards Diſſenters, as did all who lov'd the Memory of King William, and wiſh'd well to the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

Tories againſt Naturalization.

The Tory Party in England, now prevalent, have always had an Abhorrence for Bills of Naturalization, to encourage Foreign Proteſtants to bring their Manufactures and Subſtance to England, which is the ſureſt Way to enrich and ſtrengthen the Nation, as is allow'd by all Thinking People in the Univerſe in the like Situation. To this no ſtronger Argument is brought by them, than the Safety of the Church; as if a Proteſtant Church need be afraid of Proteſtants. But where ſober Reaſon is heard, a Name without other Support, will not carry a Point againſt it; and therefore the Houſe of Commons of Ireland went through the Heads of a Bill for Naturalizing all Proteſtant Strangers. On the 3d of November, the Houſe being reminded, That the next Day was the Birth-Day of the late King William, of Glorious Memory, their Deliverer from Popery and Slavery; and that the fifth was the Commemoration for the Diſcovery of the Gunpowder-Plot, they thereupon adjourn'd to the ſixth of the ſame Month. I am ſatisfy'd the Reader will not think it impertinent to ſee a Liſt of ſo many Patriots as this Parliament of Ireland conſiſted of: It is not plac'd in due Order, nor ſo perfect as I cou'd wiſh it, but it is the beſt I had by me, and will anſwer the End.

A.D.1703.

Liſt of the Parliament of Ireland.

County of Dublin.
John Allen, Eſq;
Joſeph Dean, Eſq;
City of Dublin.
John Forſter, Eſq; Recorder.
Benjamin Burton, Eſq; Alderman.
Univerſity of Dublin.
Right Hon. Edward Southwell, Eſq; Secretary of State.
Sir William Robinſon, Vice-Treaſurer.
County of Cork.
Allen Broderick, Eſq;
City of Cork.
——— Rogers, Eſq;
Swords.
Right Hon. Robert Moleſworth, Eſq;
Jacob Peppard, Eſq;
Bleſſington.
John Jephſon, Eſq;
William Crow, Eſq;
Bandon.
Francis Barnard, Eſq;
Hon. Colonel Gorge.
Ardſert.
Andrew Young, Eſq;
Henry Roſe, Eſq;
City of Limerick.
Major-General Ingoldſby.
Robert Haſel, Eſq;
Athboy.
John Wade, Eſq;
Robert Johnſon, Eſq;
Trion.
James Naper, Eſq;
William Naper, Eſq;
Kilmalock.
James Ormesby, Eſq;
Robert Oliver, Eſq;
Fermanagh.
John Curry, Eſq;
Dr. Irwin.
Drogheda.
Right Hon. Lord More.
Edward Singleton, Eſq;
Alderman.
Roſcommon.
Henry Sandford, Eſq;
Robert Sands, Eſq;
Lanesborough.
Hon. Colonel Sankie.
Henry Fox, Eſq;
Carlingford.
Hon. Charles Deering, Eſq;
Arthur Hill, Eſq;
Monnaghan County.
Hon. Robert Ecklen, Eſq;
——— Barton, Eſq;
City of Waterford.
Meinhard Chriſtian, Eſq;
Alderman Chriſtmas.
Coleraine.
Sir Arthur Longford.
Hon. Colonel Gorge.
Newry.
Robert Echlen, Eſq;
Adam Swift, Eſq;
Dancer.
Henry Tennijon, Eſq;
Blaney Townesly, Eſq;
Wexford County.
Right Hon. Philip Savage, Eſq;
Matthew Forth, Eſq;
Foear.
Thomas Smith, Eſq;
Walter Pollard, Eſq;
Rothcoronack.
Colonel Barry.
Daniel Gayſtan, Eſq;
Duleke.
Robert Curtis, Eſq;
Charles Wallis, Eſq;
Clonmel.
Thomas Medlicote, Eſq;
Robert Hamerton, Eſq;
Wexforn Town.
Cadwalader Edwards, Eſq;
James Stoppard, Eſq;
Athy.
Richard Meredith, Eſq;
Maurice Keightin, Eſq;
Enneſcorphy.
John Aſgill, Eſq;
Morly Sanders, Eſq;
Londonderry County.
William Connelly, Eſq;
Hercules Rowly, Eſq;
Lisburn.
Michael Harriſon, Eſq;
Richard Nutly, Eſq;
Knocktopher.
Francis Harriſon, Eſq;
——— Tentwarth, Eſq;
Kildare County.
Right Hon Thomas Keightley, Eſq;
Sir Kildare Burrows.
Boultinglaſs.
Edward Stratford, Eſq;
Charles Rickiſy, Eſq;
Mac Reading.
Hugh Eccles, Eſq;
Thomas Burrows, Eſq;
Roſs.
Hon. Arthur Anneſley, Eſq;
——— Craford, Eſq;
Lifford.
Hugh Hamil, Eſq;
David Creahton, Eſq;
Mullingaor.
Sir Patrick Dunks.
Henry Edgwork, Eſq;
Wicklow.
Chriſtopher Carelton, Eſq;
John Price, Eſq;
Dungannon.
Thomas Knox, Eſq;
Oliver St. George, Eſq;
Ballimalec.
Arthur Edgworth, Eſq;
John Achmoouty, Eſq;
Downe.
John Magil, Eſq;
Michael Price, Eſq;
Donegall.
Hon. Brigadier Hamilton.
Hon. Brigadier Cunningham.
Killebegs.
Hon. Frederick Hamilton, Eſq;
——— Hamilton, Eſq;

A.D.1703.

Letrim County.
Theophilus Jones, Eſq;
William Gore, Eſq;
Jameſtown.
John Mahon, Eſq;
John King, Eſq;
Antrim Town.
Thomas Bell, Eſq;
Hugh Montgomery, Eſq;
Navan.
Arthur Meredith, Eſq; Colonel Thomas Meredith.
Kles.
Charles Meredith, Eſq;
——— Butler, Eſq;
Newtown Lemevally.
Benjamin Parry, Eſq;
William Cairnes, Eſq;
Goery.
Abel Ram, Eſq;
John Chicheſter, Eſq,
Omey.
Audly Mervin, Eſq;
Richard Stuart, Eſq;
Athlone.
William Hancock, Jun. Eſq;
——— Jones, Eſq;
Clo.
Walter Bunbury, Eſq;
James Butler, Eſq;
Down-Patrick.
Francis Anneſly, Eſq;
——— Ford, Eſq;
Queen's County.
John Weaver, Jun. Eſq;
Dudley Cosby, Eſq;
Marlborough.
St. Leger Gilbert, Eſq;
Robert Paget, Eſq;
Granard.
Stephen Ludlow, Eſq;
John Percival, Eſq;
Lowth County.
Thomas Bellingham, Eſq;
Henry Tenninſon, Eſq;
Tulkes.
William Neve, Eſq;
——— Gardiner, Eſq;
Kerry County.
Edward Denny, Jun. Eſq;
John Blenner Haſſet, Eſq;
Tralee.
John Morrice, Eſq;
Arthur Hide, Eſq;
Dingal.
Hon. William Fitzmorrice, Eſq;
Francis Brewſter, Eſq;
Atterdee.
James Tiſdal, Eſq;
Robert Chambers, Eſq;
Dundalk.
Henry Bellingham, Eſq;
James Somervil, Eſq;
Carlow County.
Sir Thomas Butler, Bart.
Peirce Butler, Eſq;
Sligo.
Samuel Walton, Eſq;
Piercy Geething, Eſq;
Carlow Town.
Captain Wolſeley.
Col. Welden, } Double
Capt. Howard, } Return.
Kilkenny County.
Sir Henry Wemes.
Colonel Ponſonby.
Aſeating.
Chicheſter Philips, Eſq;
Robert Taylor, Eſq;
Charleville.
Colonel Evans.
Robert Fitzgerald, Eſq;
Carrick-Fergus.
Henry Davis, Eſq;
Edward Lindon, Eſq;
Philips-Town.
George Monk, Eſq;
John Moor, Eſq;
Taghman.
Anderſon Sanders, Eſq;
Richard Sanders, Eſq;
Fethard.
Sir Richard Bulkely, Bart.
Major Palliſer.
Roſcommon County.
Sir George St. George, Bart.
Sir Edward Graſſon, Bart.
Galway County.
John Earl, Eſq;
John French, Eſq;
Kilbeging.
Charles Lambert, Eſq;
Patrick Fox, Eſq;
Clare County.
Sir Donald Obrian, Bart.
Lucius Obrian, Eſq;
Ennis.
Francis Burton, Eſq;
Simon Purdon, Eſq;
Tipperary County.
Sir John Mead, Bart.
Colonel James Dawſon.
Ardmagh County.
Sir Hans Hamilton.
Arthur Brownlow, Eſq;
Belfaſt.
William Cairnes, Eſq;
William Keames, Merchant.
Londonderry City.
Alderman James Lennox.
Charles Norman, Eſq;
Antrim County.
Hon. Clotworthy Skeffington, Eſq;
Clotworthy Upton, Eſq;
Wicklow County.
William Wickſted, Eſq;
Richard Edwards, Eſq;
King's County.
Sir William Parſons.
Sir Francis Blundell.
Caſtle-Martin.
Rt. Hon. Thomas Keightley, Eſq;
Joſeph Dean, Eſq;
Ballyſhannon.
Richard Warburton, Sen. Eſq;
Richard Geting, Eſq;
Port-Arlington.
Thomas Carter, Eſq;
Richard Warburton, Jun. Eſq;
Carégdrumrueske.
Sir George St. George.
Oliver St. George, Eſq;
Hilsborough.
Right Hon. Thomas Keightley, Eſq;
Samuel Warren, Eſq;
Naas.
James Barry, Eſq;
Richard Nevill, Eſq;
Youghal.
Henry Luther, Eſq;
John Hayman, Eſq;
Ballenakill.
John Barington, Eſq;
Arthur Gore, Eſq;
Harriſtown.
Robert Dickſon, Eſq;
Captain Fitz-Patrick.
Kelleleigh.
Hans Stephenſon, Eſq;
John Heltrick, Eſq;
Bangor.
James Hamilton, Eſq;
Henry Maxwell, Eſq;
Waterford County.
Hon. Richard Stuart, Eſq;
Sir John Maſon.
Kildare Town.
Richard Lock, Eſq;
Thomas Jones, Eſq;
Tallow.
Major Maynard.
Richard Cox, Eſq;
Dungarvan.
Colonel Barry,
Roger Poor, Eſq;
Randles Town.
Edmund Stafford, Eſq;
——— Dickſon, Eſq;
Caſtlebar.
William Palmer, Eſq;
——— Cuffe, Eſq;
Mayo County.
John Bingham, Sen. Eſq;
John Bingham, Jun. Eſq;
Sligo County.
Edward Windfield, Eſq;
Hugh Morgan, Eſq;
Augher.
James Moughtray, Eſq;
John Hamilton, Eſq;
Clanahilty.
——— Freake, Jun. Eſq;
Captain Freake.
Clogher.
——— St. George, Eſq;
——— St. George, Eſq;
Banuagher.
Thomas Leſtrange, Eſq;
George Eyre, Eſq;
Donnegal.
Richard Jones, Eſq;
Ralph Gore, Eſq;
Caſhel.
Samuel Green, Eſq;
Matt. Pennyfeather, Eſq;
Donengale.
Sir Francis Brewſter.
William Philips, Eſq;
Gowran.
Patrick Weems, Eſq;
Robert Maude, Eſq;

A.D.1703.

And that theſe Gentlemen might not be thought the worſe Churchmen, for the Reſpect they paid to the Memory of their Deliverer, King William, it muſt be noted, that when they took the Penſions into Conſideration, and voted Seventeen Thouſand Six Hundred Thirty-four Pounds to be unneceſſary; One Thouſand Two Hundred Pounds a Year of it, was granted to the Presbyterian Miniſters in the North of Ireland, by Patent from King Charles II. in Conſideration of their Loyalty and good Services to the Crown; and this was done, probably, to make the lopping off ſo many other Penſions, go down the better with the Court.

People began to murmur at the great Indulgence ſhewn to Papiſts, who amus'd the Government with Offers of ſerving even in the War againſt France, any where but in that Kingdom or the Netherlands. This was carried ſo far, that the Earl of Limerick, the Lord Kilmore, Colonel Purcel, and ſeveral other Iriſh Gentlemen came to England, and had the Honour to kiſs the Queen's Hand, on the 1ſt of November, and it was ſaid the Lord Limerick was to command in the Confederate Army in Portugal, as Lieutenant General.

The

A.D.1703. A.D.1703.

The Penſions voted Unneceſſary were as follows.

	£.
To the Presbyterian Miniſters in Ulſter.	1200	per Annum.
To the Duke of St. Albans.	800
To the Earl of Ranelagh, for 21 Years from 1699.	300
To George Rodney Bridges, Eſq; during the Life of the Earl of Rocheſter.	1600
To Edward Prodgers, Eſq;	200
To Colonel O Donnel.	500
To Lieutenant Colonel Freke of Lieutenant General Erle's Regiment.	127	15
To Lieutenant General Montargis.	273	15
To Lieutenant Colonel Guillims.	109	10
To Major Monjoy.	81	5
To Lieutenant Philips.	36	10
To the Half-Pay-Officers.	3814	5
To the Counteſs of Dorcheſter.	5000
To the Lord St. Albans.	1642	10	3 $\frac{6}{7}$
To the Lord Viſcount Dillon.	455	13	10 $\frac{5}{7}$
To Sir Valentine Browne.	701	17	3 $\frac{1}{2}$
To the Earl of Fingal.	267	1	9
To Thomas Browne.	279	7	6
To Dudley Bagnal, Eſq;	245	6	4
	17634	17	0 $\frac{1}{2}$

King James's enormous Grant to the Counteſs of Dorcheſter.

The Penſions appear to have been given to Papiſts, and probably were in Conſideration of ſome Demands upon the Grants of their Eſtates; but that enormous one to the Counteſs of Dorcheſter, King James the IId's Miſtreſs, whatever the Pretence was for paying it, deſerv'd not a Place in a Liſt of Penſions, at the Head of which were the Presbyterian Miniſters of Ulſter. As to the Half-Pay-Officers, the Houſe addreſs'd the Lord Lieutenant that they ſhould be provided for. The Repreſentation reported by Mr. Moleſworth, when it was perfected and preſented to his Grace, met with a cold Reception, and Mr. Secretary Southwell acquainted the Houſe, that the Lord Lieutenant would take ſuch care of it as might moſt conduce to the Service of the Nation. Among ſo many notable doings of the Iriſh Truſtees, a ſmall Incident is hardly worth mentioning, but it was brought before the Parliament in a Petition of the Widow of Francis de la Rue, one of the Diſcoverers of the Aſſaſſination Plot, ſetting forth that the Diminicle which found the Lands to be forfeited that had been given to her Husband, as a Reward for his good Service in that Diſcovery, was loſt by the Truſtees; the Houſe order'd a Bill to be brought in to ſupply that loſs.

Bill againſt Popery bears hard on Diſſenters.

On the 23d of November the Houſe of Commons with their Speaker, attended the Lord Lieutenant, and preſented to him Heads of a Bill to prevent the further Growth of Popery; and alſo Heads of another Bill to encourage the Linnen Manufacture of that Kingdom, on which occaſion the Speaker made a Speech to his Grace, importing, "That they look'd on the firſt of theſe two Bills "to be of ſuch Importance to their future well "Being, that they had begg'd leave to attend his "Grace in a Body with it, and not ſend it, as in "Caſes of leſs Weight is uſual, by particular "Members. That the Oppoſition conſtantly "made in England, by the Papiſts in Ireland, "againſt whatever might tend to the Security of "her Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, induced the "Commons to lay theſe Heads of a Bill in this "ſolemn Manner before his Grace. That they "thought it now more particularly neceſſary, "being well inform'd, and fully convinc'd, that "great Sums of Money had been lately rais'd "among them to oppoſe the Paſſing of a Bill of "this Nature in England; yet they doubted not "but the Right of the Thing, and Juſtice of "their Deſires would be ſo effectually laid before "her Majeſty by his Grace, that all Obſtacles "would be ſurmounted, and an Opportunity "given them of Aſſenting to the paſſing into a "Law, what they conceiv'd would be the greateſt "Security to the Proteſtant Religion and Intereſt "there; and then the Speaker mention'd the "other Act". The Lord Lieutenant in his Anſwer aſſur'd the Houſe he would take care to tranſmit theſe two Bills, which were ſo much for the Benefit of the Nation, and recommend them in the moſt effectual Manner, according to their deſire, and do all that was in his Power to prevent the Growth of Popery. But whatever Practice ſucceeded in it, ſo it was, that in the very Bill, which was to ſecure the Proteſtants of Ireland againſt Popery, there were ſome Clauſes that bore hard on the Proteſtant Diſſenters in that Kingdom. Three Days after, the Houſe of Commons voted a Book, printed and publiſhed by Brocas and Maloane, entitled, The Memoirs of the late King James the Second, &c. Seditious, and order'd it to be burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman at the Change and before the Parliament Houſe. They alſo order'd that Brocas the Printer, Maloane the Bookſeller, and one Euſtace, who brought the ſaid Memoirs of King James from England, and gave them to Maloane to print, be proſecuted by the Attorney General. When the Motion was made for burning the Book and proſecuting the Printer, a Member ſet forth the great Danger the Proteſtants were in in ſome Parts of Ireland, particularly in the County of Limerick, where the Iriſh were beginning to form themſelves into Bodies, and to plunder the Proteſtants of their Arms and Money; adding that the Diſaffected held a Correſpondence with thoſe in England, and were not out of Hopes of reſtoring the pretended Prince of Wales. Euſtace fled at firſt, but afterwards ſurrender'd himſelf, and deny'd his bringing the Book from England; which was further prov'd againſt him by another Popiſh Bookſeller, Luke Dowling; and Popiſh Agents upon Examination confeſt that great Sums of Money had been collected to be employ'd in England and Ireland for preventing the Bill about the Growth of Popery. In one of the Riots they committed in the County of Limerick, the Iriſh Tories, ſo the Robbers and Ruffians are

*A.D.*1703. are ſtil'd in Ireland, kill'd one Mr. Green a Gentleman of ſome Note; and the Duke of Ormond iſſu'd a Proclamation for the Apprehending of the Murderers; and indeed the Impudence of the Papiſts in Ireland was intolerable, they aſſuming too much on the Hopes of Impunity, while the Tories in England were in Employment.

A Vote againſt the Pretender.

The Houſe of Commons having maturely conſider'd theſe things, Reſolv'd, "That it appear'd "to them, that the Papiſts of that Kingdom ſtill "retain'd Hopes of the coming in of the Perſon "who went by the Name of the Prince of Wales "in the Life of the late King James, and now "by the Name of James the Third." But the ſame Day Mr. Secretary Southwell, by command of the Lord Lieutenant, acquainted the Houſe that it was his Grace's Pleaſure they ſhould adjourn till the 11th of January, which was accordingly done; and this ſudden Adjournment, ſays a Writer at that time, when the Houſe was on a hot Scent againſt Popery, afforded Matter of ſiniſter Reflections againſt the Lord Lieutenant; and in truth his Lordſhip's Character ſuffer'd ſo very much by his Behaviour on this Occaſion, that he loſt ground extremely in the Affections of the more valuable Part of the two Kingdoms; which was but ill made up to him in Popularity and Flattery among the lower Orders of Men of both Nations, which were no cheap Purchaſe to him, and at laſt ended, as falſe Popularity generally does, in Diſgrace and Ruin.

The Parliament adjourn'd by the Duke of Ormond.

He loſes the Affections of the ſober Part of both Kingdoms.

Acts paſt in Ireland.

The Acts which had the Royal Aſſent this Seſſion, beſides thoſe already mention'd, were,

An Act for 2 Shillings in the Pound on Penſions, for building Barracks at Dublin.

An Act to make it High Treaſon to impeach the Succeſſion to the Crown as limited by ſeveral Acts of Parliament.

An Act to prevent the further Growth of Popery.

An Act to prohibit Butchers from being Graſiers.

An Act for Regiſtring the Popiſh Clergy.

An Act for Naturalizing all Foreign Proteſtants in this Kingdom.

An Act for reducing Intereſt to 8 per Cent.

An Act for quieting Poſſeſſions, aud diſpoſing the Undiſpoſed and Plus Acres.

An Act for Building of ſeveral Pariſh Churches.

An Act for continuing two Acts againſt Tories, Robbers and Rapparees.

It muſt not be forgot, that Dr. Pooley Biſhop of ——— in Ireland refus'd to take the Oaths when the other Peers did it, pretending there was no Act of Parliament for it in that Kingdom. One Pooley, a Parliament Man in England, was the next Year much talk'd of for being concern'd in the High Church Memorial.

The Military Affairs this Year did not anſwer the great Expectations which had been rais'd by the Glory of the Laſt; but it was far from giving the French juſt Occaſion for ſinging Te Deums, which as they manag'd it, were rather ſo many Acts of a Farce than of Devotion.

Mr. Methuen concludes the Treaty with Portugal.

Mr. Methuen, her Majeſty's Ambaſſador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary in Portugal, brought his Negotiations at that Court to a happy Iſſue, and concluded a Treaty with the King of Portugal, by which he enter'd into the grand Alliance againſt France; and by the 21 Article of the Treaty between the Emperor, England, Portugal and Holland, it was expreſsly ſtipulated, That no Peace or Truce ſhall be made but by the mutual Conſent of all the Allies; neither ſhall there be at any time a Peace concluded, whilſt his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's ſecond Grandſon by the Dauphin, or any other Prince of French Extraction ſhall continue in Spain. Let us not forget this when we come to the Negotiations at London and Utrecht.

Sir Cloudſley Shovel, with a Fleet of 35 Engliſh, and 17 Dutch Men of War, appear'd off the Rock of Lisbon the 24th of July, and diſpell'd the Apprehenſions the Portugueſe were under of being inſulted by a French Squadron. Sir Cloudſley ſent Sir Stafford Fairborne to Lisbon, with Compliments to the King of Portugal and to the Queen Dowager of England, by whom he was receiv'd with all imaginable Marks of Reſpect and Eſteem. The Fleet being in want of Water, it was reſolv'd to put into Altea on the Coaſt of Valencia, and to Land the Marines to facilitate the Watering, and have an Opportunity of diſperſing a Manifeſto, ſhewing they were not come thither as Enemies but as Friends, to deliver the Spaniards from the Tyranny and Oppreſſion of France. But as they would give their Aſſiſtance to theſe of the Spaniſh Nation, who remembring their Obligations to the Houſe of Auſtria, ſhould endeavour to throw off the Yoke of France, ſo they would deſtroy the Perſons, Houſes, and Goods of ſuch as ſhould oppoſe the Efforts that ſhould be made for the Deliverance of that valiant and glorious Nation. This Manifeſto only made the Spaniards the leſs afraid of them. Before Brigadier General Seymour landed the Marines, the Lord Baſil Hamilton in the Eagle, with the Hampton-Court Man of War drew near the Shoar, but were fir'd upon from a Tower where were two Guns only, which he eaſily diſmounted. Five and Twenty Hundred Marines landed without Oppoſition, and form'd a Camp, which the Country People ſupplied with Plenty of all Refreſhments and Proviſions, for which they were paid in ready Money; but they did not then ſhew any greater Diſpoſition to favour the Archduke Charles, than by drinking his Health. From thence the Fleet ſail'd to Leghorn, Sir Cloudſley Shovel having detach'd the Pembroke, Captain Harris, and the Tartar, Captain Cooper, to enter the Gulph of Narbonne, and bring Word what could be done for the Releaſe of the poor Cevennois French Proteſtants in that part of Languedoc, call'd the Cevennes, who had been provok'd by the Diabolical Cruelties of Baſville, Intendant of the Province, Broglio, Commander of the Forces, and the Abbot Chiela, rather a Butcher than a Prieſt, to take Arms, as preferring Death in their own Defence, to the bloody Execution of thoſe execrable Maſſacrers. Chiela gelt all the Men that were accus'd of aſſiſting at the religious Aſſemblies of the Reform'd, and one condemn'd to that horrid Execution, was reſcu'd by 40 young Men, his Friends, who open'd the Priſon Door, deliver'd him thence, ſeiz'd the Abbot, and inflicted on him the Puniſhment he deſign'd for the other; but that was not ſufficient to ſatisfy their juſt Revenge, ſo they hang'd him up to prevent his committing the like Barbarities for the Future. They then went through the Villages, brandiſhing their Swords and crying Liberty, Liberty, which in a little time drew a great many other young Men after them, and form'd a Body of 4 or 500, which the Intendant could not ſuppreſs, and thinking to have the Game the longer in his Hands, did not attend it ſo much as he might have done. The French Court knew nothing of it till the Cevennois were increaſed to 2000, and dividing themſelves into 4 Bodies, they made Excurſions into the Plain, burnt Churches, and put the Popiſh perſecuting Prieſts to the Sword; Upon which the Court of France diſpatch'd the Sieur Julian, infamous for his Apoſtacy from the Proteſtant Religion, with 5000 regular Troops, to reduce the Rebels, as they call'd them; but theſe Forces not being able to ſtem a Torrent which gather'd Strength daily, the Marſhal de Montrenil was ſent againſt the Cevennois with 12000 Men, and he by his ill Conduct exaſperated the Country

*A.D.*1703.

Engliſh Manifeſto diſperſ'd in Spain.

The Cevennois driven to Arms.

A.D.1703. Country ſo much, that the Numbers of the Malecontents continu'd to increaſe; the King's Troops were defeated ſeveral times in the Field, and had the Cevennois been powerfully aſſiſted, the Diverſion they would probably have made would have diſtreſs'd the French King more than the maintaining of 50000 Men in Flanders. The Marquis de Miremont, and other Noble Refugees, repreſented the deſperate Condition of the Proteſtants in Languadoc, and the Advantage of giving them Aſſiſtance to the common Cauſe, ſo judiciouſly and pathetically to the Queen of England, and Prince George of Denmark, that thoſe excellent Princes propos'd the relieving of them in Council: But the Earl of Nottingham objected, that it was of dangerous Conſequence to aſſiſt Rebels againſt their Natural Prince; ſo doubtleſs it is, but then it is as certain, that a Prince who ſuffers his Subjects to be tortur'd and butcher'd for the conſcientious Diſcharge of their Duty to Almighty God, can no more juſtly be call'd their natural Prince, than a Hangman can be call'd a Phyſician. 'Tis true the Cevennois were Presbyterians, and could not well expect good Offices from a High-Church Miniſtry: But the Queen's and Prince's Sentiments prevail'd; and it was agreed, that ſince all Ways to relieve the Cevennois were ſhut up by Land, the Fleet under Sir Cloudeſly Shovel ſhould endeavour to carry them a Supply of Arms, Ammunition and Money. The Marquis de Miremont ſent Mr. David Flotard, and two other Refugees, to the Cevennois, to give and to get Intelligence; the former had the good Fortune to penetrate into the Country and to return; the others were taken at the Paſſage of Pont d'Eſprit, and either broken upon the Wheel, or ſent to the Galleys. Three Refugee Gentlemen, Monſieur Portales, Captain La Billiere and Monſieur Temple, were commiſſion'd to go on board the Engliſh Fleet, to aſſiſt with their Advice, and in what elſe they could towards the Relief of their Brethren in Languedoc, who were call'd Camiſars; and before the Pembroke and Tartar Men of War were detach'd from the Fleet, Monſieur Portales was ſent for to the Council of War, held on board the Triumph the 29th of Auguſt, wherein it was debated how to put this Enterprize in Execution; and Sir Cloudeſly Shovel told him, That the Seaſon being ſo far advanc'd, and the Gulph of Narbonne and Lyons ſo dangerous, they did not think it prudent to hazard her Majeſty's Fleet on a Coaſt unknown, and which had ever been ſo dreadful to the Engliſh Seamen, that in order to avoid it, they often choſe to go 100 Leagues out of their way: That he was very ſorry he could not perform himſelf ſo great a Service to the brave Cevennois, but that purſuant to the Reſult of their Conſultation, they would order two Men of War to go upon that Attempt with a good Quantity of Arms, Ammunition and Money; and that if they had the good Fortune to ſpeak with their Friends, and to deliver them theſe things, it would be eaſy for them to concert Meaſures with the Cevennois for their further Supply. The Pembroke and Tartar ſail'd in ſight of Narbonne, Uias, Beſiers, Agde, and Fort Breſcou, on the 17th of September, and being in the Evening come before Port Cette, they made the Signal as directed from Court, under the Earl of Nottingham's own Hand; but not being anſwer'd from Shore, they did not think it ſafe to continue in that dangerous Sea any longer, and ſo made the beſt of their way to the general Rendezvous at Leghorn, where Sir Cloudſley Shovel came the 19th of September, and the Town ſaluting him with 5 Guns only, he made no Return, and refus'd to accept the ordinary Preſent that was ſent him by the Governor; who ſending to know the Reaſon of it, the Engliſh Admiral made him ſenſible of his Miſtake, and at the ſame time ſent a Meſſage to the Great Duke of Tuſcany, inſiſting on a Royal Salute, as having the Union Flag, the moſt conſiderable of England. After ſome Diſpute, the great Duke was forc'd to order the Town to ſalute with 11 Guns, which Sir Cloudſley anſwer'd, and receiv'd the extraordinary Preſents that had been prepar'd for the Count de Thouloufe, the French King's Son, Admiral of France, who was expected there before the Engliſh Fleet; but who never durſt come out of the Harbour of Thoulon, as long as Sir Cloudſley Shovel remain'd in the Mediterranean.

Earl of Nottingham againſt aſſiſting them.

Sir Cloudſley Shovel's Conference with a French Refugee.

He ſends two Engliſh Men of War to aſſiſt the Cevennois.

A.D.1703.

Count Lamberg, the Imperial Ambaſſador at Rome, came aboard the Admiral in the Road of Leghorn, and acquainted him that the Archduke Charles, had been proclaim'd King of Spain at Vienna, by the Name of Charles III; upon which every Ship in the Fleet fir'd 15 Guns; and it muſt be a mortifying Buſineſs for a Monarch who pretended to give Laws to all Chriſtendom, to have his own Fleet skulking in Harbour, while that of the Confederates ſtruck Terror in all his Coaſt-Provinces, and made his maritime Power, rather the Scorn than the Dread of Nations. After this, Sir Cloudſley Shovel return'd to England, and arrived in the Downs the 17th of November, and ſome Stragglers of his Fleet took a French Man of War of 52 Guns and 500 Men coming from Newfoundland.

I ſhall but juſt mention Foreign Affairs, and thoſe particularly where the Engliſh Troops were engag'd. Theſe Forces conſiſted of the following Regiments.

Horſe.	Dragoons.	Foot.
Lieutenant General Lumley's.	Brigadier Roſs's.	1 Battalion of Guards.
Brigadier Wood's.	Lord Raby's.	2 Battalions of the Earl of Orkney's.
Major General Wyndham's.	Lord Tiviot's.	Lieut. Gen. Stewart's, Col. Web's.
Duke Schomberg's.		L. North and Gray's, E. of Barrymore's.
Earl of Arran's.		Earl of Derby's, Colonel How's.
		Sir Matthew Bridges, Col. Row's.
		Major Gen. Ingoldsby's, Col. Leigh's.
		Duke of Malborough's, Col. Ferguſon's.
		Col. Frederick Hamilton, L. Portmore.

Forces in England.

Horſe.	Dragoons.	Foot.
Three Troops of Guards.	Earl of Eſſex's.	Two Regiments of Guards.	Engliſh Forces abroad and at home.
Troop of Horſe Grenadiers.	Brigadier Lloyd's.	Lieutenant General Churchill's.
Royal Regiment of Horſe.		Brigadier Seymour's.
		Royal Regiment of Fuſileers.
		Lord Lucas's.

*A.D.*1703.

Marines.
Colonel Sanderſon's.
Colonel Holt's.
Colonel Mordaunt's.

Marines.
Colonel Villiers's.
Colonel Fox's.
Lord Shannon's.

*A.D.*1703.

In Ireland.

Horſe.
Colonel Harvey's.
Colonel Cadogan's.
Lord Windſor's.
Colonel Langſton's.

Dragoons.
1 Squadron Colonel Echlin's.
Brigadier Roſs's 1 Squadron.
Colonel Cunningham's.

Foot.
Col. Tidcomb's, Col. Stanhope's.
Col. Fairfax's, Lord Mountjoy's.
Col. Brudenel's, Col. Gibſon's.
Col. Farrington's, Col. Coot's.
Col. Meredith's, Col. Stringer's.
Lord Mohun's, Sir Richard Temple's.

In the Weſt-Indies.

Foot.
Colonel Handaſide's.
Colonel Liveſey's.
Colonel Whetham's.

Foot.
Lieutenant General Erle's.
Brigadier Hamilton's.
Lord Charlemont's.

Foot.
Lord Donnegals.
Brigadier Columbine's.

Duke of Marlborough

In all about 7000 Horſe and Dragoons, and 30000 Foot; the reſt of the Forces in Engliſh Pay were Foreign hir'd Troops, and Augmentations were made to both the one and the other in the Courſe of this War. His Grace the Duke of Marlborough, Captain General of the Confederate Army, began the Operations of the Campaign with the Siege of Bonne. On the third of May the Trenches were open'd, and the Governor ſent the Duke a Letter, importing "That an Agree-"ment had been made between the Electors "Palatine and of Cologne, that the Cities of "Duſſeldorp and Conne ſhould not be bombarded, "in order to preſerve the Churches, Palaces and "other Publick Buildings, the Performance of "which he was order'd to requeſt from his Grace; whoſe Anſwer was, That it was neither his Cuſtom nor his Inclination to deſtroy Cities or Publick Buildings, out of prepenſe Malice or Deſign, provided the Enemies Conduct did not put him upon ſuch a Neceſſity. The Attacks were carry'd on with ſo great Vigor and Succeſs, that the next Day after the Beſiegers had lodg'd themſelves on the Counterſcarp, the beſieg'd beat a Parley, and the Governor, Monſieur de Alegre ſurrender'd the Town May the 15th, on honourable Conditions.

takes Bonne.

In the mean time the Marſhals de Villeroy and Boufflers, with 40000 Men came into the Neighbourhood of Tongeren; where were two Battalions, that of Elſt and that of Portmore, who defended themſelves with extraordinary Bravery for 28 Hours, and were then made Priſoners of War; but their brave Reſiſtance gave the Confederates an Opportunity to draw together before Maeſtricht, where General Auverquerque drew them up in Order of Battle, in which Order the two Marſhals gaz'd upon him a whole Day, and then march'd back the ſame way they came.

After the Surrender of Bonne, my Lord Duke return'd to the Confederate Army in the Netherlands, which conſiſted of 139 Squadrons and 59 Battalions, with which he march'd againſt the Enemy, who abandon'd and blew up Tongeren, and retir'd within their Lines, which were forc'd by General Cohorn and Baron Spaar the 26th of June; but the Publick Joy for it in Holland was very much allay'd by News of the Defeat of Monſieur Opdam, which he wrote the States in a Letter from Breda; but the Truth was, he himſelf had been cut off from the Army under his Command, by a Body of French, and did not know that his Troops had made ſo good a Stand againſt the Enemy, that the Advantage was pretty near equal on both ſides.

Monſieur Opdam defeated.

The Duke of Marlborough us'd all poſſible Stratagems to draw the French to an Engagement, but failing in them all, he laid a Scheme to force their Entrenchments. His Grace attended with ſeveral General Officers, and a Guard of 4000 Horſe and Dragoons, went to view them; Lieutenant Benſon of the Engliſh Royal Regiment of Dragoons being detach'd with about 30 Engliſh, fell in with one of the Enemies Guards of 40 Horſe, who after one Diſcharge retir'd, and were chaſed by the Engliſh to the very Barrier of their Entrenchments, which gave the Confederate Generals an Opportunity to view them within Musket-ſhot; but the Execution of the Duke's Scheme being induſtriouſly put off from time to time by the Field Deputies of the States General, to his Grace's great Diſſatisfaction, the Siege of Huy was reſolv'd upon, and the Trenches were open'd the 16th of Auguſt, and on the 27th the Gariſon ſurrender'd themſelves Priſoners of War, to remain ſo till the two Battalions taken by the French at Tongeren were releas'd.

The States Deputies againſt fighting.

In the mean time a great Council of War was held at the Confederate Camp at Val. Notre Dame, wherein were preſent, the Duke of Marlborough, the Deputies of the States General, Monſieur de Auverquerque, Monſieur Slangenburgh the Lieutenant Generals, and ſeveral Major Generals. The Queſtion in Debate was what Undertaking ſhould be gone upon after the taking of Huy. The Siege of Limburgh was propos'd, but the Generals of the Engliſh, Danes, Lunenburghers and Heſſians, gave their Opinions rather for attacking the French Lines, between the Mehaign and Leuwe, as an Enterprize that would contribute much more to the Glory and Advantage of the Arms of the high Allies. Their Reaſons were oppos'd by the States Deputies, with others that wanted not Weight; they ſaid it would hazard their Troops in an Action which was at the beſt very dubious, and which, if attended with Succeſs would yield no further Advantage than to find the Enemy retir'd into their fortify'd Towns; whereas on the contrary, ſhould the French get the Victory, the United Provinces would remain expos'd to their Incurſions. As little as there was to be ſaid againſt this, the Backwardneſs of the Dutch to run the Hazard of ſuch Excurſions, was the Subject of ſome Clamour in England.

Duke of Marlborough takes Huy

On the 15th of September Limburgh was inveſted by Lieutenant General Bule, with 24 Squadrons of Horſe and Dragoons; the Duke of Marlborough, with the Troops intended to carry on the Siege being come up, and the Batteries at Work, the and Limburgh.

A.D.1703. the Beſiegers ſoon made themſelves Maſters of the lower Town, and by the 27th the Breach was ſo wide, that his Grace gave Orders for a general Aſſault; to prevent which the French beat a Parley, and ſurrender'd themſelves Priſoners of War, to the Number of 1400 Men; and my Lord Duke having appointed the Baron de Rechteren to be Governor, this Conqueſt put an End to the Campaign on that Side.

Guelder ſurrender'd.

The Town of Guelder had been block'd up ſome Months by the Pruſſians, and was ſurrender'd to Count Lottum the 17th of December.

Elector of Bavaria's Rebellion.

The dilatory Counſels and Proceedings of the Germanick Body, gave the Elector of Bavaria great Advantages in carrying on his Rebellion againſt the Emperor, which ſhew'd the real Malignity of his Heart, in his joining with the French King. Something might be ſaid for his betraying the Truſt which the Confederates had procur'd for him in the Government of the Netherlands, which the Tories in England would not let King William ſend Troops to defend againſt the Armies the French King had ſent to take Poſſeſſion of thoſe Provinces: But the Elector's raiſing an inteſtine War in Germany, ſeizing Ratisbonne and Augſburgh, and threatning the Hereditary Countries of the Houſe of Auſtria, were Acts of Treaſon and Ingratitude, which will leave an eternal Blot upon his Memory, otherwiſe worthy the Character of a Great and Gallant Prince. The Mareſchal de Villars, who commanded the French Army on the Side of Germany, behaving too haughtily towards a Prince haughty enough himſelf, was recall'd, and the Count de Marſin made a Mareſchal of France, and ſent to Command there in his Stead. The Elector of Bavaria, and the Duke of Vendoſme, who commanded the French Army in Lombardy, made an unſucceſsful Attempt to join Forces in Tyrol, which muſt have been fatal to the Emperor's Affairs, but were hindred by the Fidelity and Courage of the Tyrolians, who did Wonders in the Defence of their Country. After the Diſappointment in Tyrol, the Elector march'd with a good Army of Bavarians and French, to fall upon Count Styrum, whom Prince Lewis order'd to croſs the Danube, to favour the Proſecution of his Deſigns. The Count coming up with eighteen Battalions, and fifteen Squadrons of French, under the Marquis de Uſſon, near Levinghem, September the 20th, routed them; but at the Inſtant the Elector came up with him with a ſuperior Force, and though Count Slangenburgh, General of the Saxons, with Styrum, ſtood the firſt Brunt of the Enemy with wonderful Bravery, yet a Regiment of Bareith giving Ground, Count Styrum retreated in good Order to Nardlingen, leaving his Baggage, Artillery, and 2000 of his Men behind him. The Loſs of the French in the two Actions was as great, as to the Number of Men kill'd, but being Maſters of the Field, they had a better Pretence to ſing Te Deum for this, than moſt of their other Victories.

One needs but little Acquaintance with the Hiſtory of Lewis the XIVth, to know how ſafely and eaſily he became Maſter of his Conqueſts, and that it was chiefly by Surprize and Treachery. The Town of Landau was taken by the King of the Romans laſt Year, and the French ſtill keeping Intelligence with ſome Traytors in it, the Duke of Burgundy went in Haſte to the Mareſchal de Tallard's Army, in Expectation of having the Place betray'd to him; but the Traytors being diſcover'd and ſeiz'd, the Duke of Burgundy, and the Mareſchal were forc'd to retreat to the Neighbourhood of Strasburgh; and the Imperialiſts having more than their Hands full with the Work the Elector of Bavaria and the French Generals cut them out in Tyrol, and on the Danube, Count Tallard found himſelf at Leiſure to attack Old Briſac, which ſurrender'd to him in fourteen or fifteen Days, and the Governor was ſhot to Death for Treachery or Cowardice. The Duke of Burgundy being preſent at the Surrender of this Town, laid Claim to this Conqueſt, and return'd in Triumph to Verſailles; and Count Tallard, having Monſieur Vauban, the Famous Engineer, with him, and all Things neceſſary for a Siege, little us'd in that of Old Briſac, inveſted Landau the 7th of October. The Duke of Marlborough, and the other Confederate Generals in the Netherlands, being ſenſible of the Importance of the Place, order'd a Detachment of twelve Battalions, and twenty-nine Squadrons, under the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe Caſſel, to attempt the Relief of it; and the French Generals were not backward on their Part, but haſten'd away Monſieur Pracontal, with Ten Thouſand Men, after the Prince, to obſerve him, and he march'd with ſo much Diligence and Secreſy, that they join'd Tallard before the Confederates knew any thing of it; with which Reinforcement the Enemy was ſo animated, that they fell upon the Prince of Heſſe's Body near Spire, when the Germans were in their Cups, celebrating the Feaſt of St. Leopold, in Honour of the Emperor; and notwithſtanding the Prince of Heſſe did every Thing that could be expected from a wiſe General, and a valiant Soldier, oblig'd him to retreat, after he had had three Horſes ſhot under him. Monſieur Pracontal, and ſeveral of the beſt Officers the French had, fell in this Action; as did on the Side of the Confederates, the Prince of Heſſe Homberg, Major-General Tettan, and other Officers of Diſtinction. The Count de Frizo, who had defended Landau 'till then with equal Reſolution and Succeſs, deſpairing of further Relief, ſurrender'd the Place on the ſame Conditions that had been granted the Year before to Monſieur Melac, the French Governor. A.D.1703.

Battle of Spire.

Prince Ragotski takes Arms in Hungary.

During theſe Diſtractions in the Empire, the Malecontents in Hungary, ſpirited by French Counſels, and French Money, took Arms under Prince Ragotski, poſſeſs'd themſelves of ſeveral Places, and were advanc'd within two Leagues of Presburg, whither Count Schilk, the Imperial General, was forc'd to Retreat. The Obſtinacy and Stupidity of Bigots are equally ſurprizing. Prince Ragotzki, and his Adherents, publiſh'd a Manifeſto, proteſting, "That they did not intend to withdraw "themſelves from the Allegiance they ow'd to "the Emperor, provided they might have the "free Enjoyment of their Religion, Liberties, "Eſtates and Privileges, and that the Government "of Hungary be in the Hands of the Natives of "that Country." And what was there ſo unreaſonable in all this, that it cou'd not be granted? though at a Juncture, when not only the Imperial, but all the other Crowns, were tottering on the Emperor's Head, when every Hundred Men that cou'd be ſent againſt the Bavarians and French, now threatning Auſtria, and his Hereditary Countries, were welcome Recruits to the Imperial Army, and could hardly be ſpar'd for any other Uſe. Was this a Time to give Ear to the Cry of the Jeſuits, that their Church would be in Danger, if the Hungarian Presbyterians had their Religion, Liberties, Eſtates and Privileges granted them? But ſo it was. And notwithſtanding the Engliſh, Dutch, Saxons, Pruſſians, Heſſians, Lunenburghers, Danes, and almoſt the whole Strength of the Confederacy, without the Imperialiſts, were Proteſtants, yet did the Counſels at Vienna risk every Thing, rather than diſoblige the Pope, and his Prieſts, by doing Juſtice to the Hungarians. It is well that the Proteſtants were wiſer Ill Conduct of the Emperor towards the Hungarians.

*A.D.*1703. wiſer than to hazard the general Ruin, out of Compaſſion to their Brethren in Hungary; but had they taken Example by the Papiſts, and refus'd to ſupport the Common Cauſe 'till their particular one was accommodated, What muſt the Emperor, What muſt all Europe have paid for his giving Ear to the Cry of his Prieſts, and being Deaf to that of his Confederates, and of his own Subjects in Hungary, of the ſame Religion with the beſt of his Allies?

Archduke Charles proclaim'd King of Spain.

We have hinted that the Archduke Charles was proclaim'd King of Spain the 12th of September, and a Week after he ſet out from Vienna, in his Journey to Holland, being very much preſs'd to haſten it, by the Admirante of Caſtile's Memorial publiſh'd in Portugal, ſhewing the Neceſſity of his Preſence in that Kingdom. This Admirante was one of the moſt Puiſſant and Wealthy Grandees of Spain, who having been order'd to go Ambaſſador to France, retir'd with the Preparations he had made for a moſt magnificent Appearance there, to Lisbon; and was very aſſiſting to Mr. Methuen in his Negotiations at the Court, to bring the King of Portugal into the Grand Alliance; an Affair of ſo great Difficulty, that a Miniſter leſs able, and leſs experienc'd than Mr. Methuen, could not have gone through with it ſo happily.

The Admirante of Caſtile declares for him.

His Catholick Majeſty lay the firſt Night at Hailbron, where he began the Cuſtom of cauſing the Duke of Mansfield, as Prince of Funde, the Marquis del Vaſto, the Duke of Caſetta, and the Prince of Litchtenſtein, to be cover'd in his Preſence, as Grandees of Spain. The next remarkable Place he came to was Hamel, a City belonging to the Elector of Hanover, where he was ſplendidly entertain'd by that Court, who were come thither for that Purpoſe. Here he receiv'd the Compliments of the Miniſters of Pruſſia, Zell, and Wolfembuttle; and two Hours after Dinner, his Electoral Highneſs of Hanover paid his Catholick Majeſty a private Viſit, which the King return'd a little while after. His next Remove was to Duſſeldorp, where he was receiv'd by the Elector Palatine, at the Head of the Nobility of the Dutchies of Berg and Juliers: And here the Duke of Marlborough, in the Name of the Queen of Great Britain, congratulated his Majeſty on his Acceſſion to the Spaniſh Throne; theatrical Steps, but neceſſary on ſuch Occaſions. The King having had Notice of the Duke's coming, put on a fine rich Sword, with which he preſented his Grace in a very obliging Manner; for while they were both in Diſcourſe, his Majeſty took it from his Side, and giving it into the Duke's Hand with a graceful Air, ſaid in French, I am not aſham'd to ſay, I am but a poor Prince, Je n'ay que la Cape & L'Epee, I have only my Cloak, and my Sword; the latter may be of Uſe to your Grace, and I hope you will not think it the worſe for my wearing it one Day. His Catholick Majeſty arriv'd at the Hague on the 3d of November, accompany'd by my Lord Duke of Marlborough, and ſeveral other Perſons of Quality.

King Charles treated by the Court of Hanover.

The Duke of Marlborough waits on him.

The King of Spain comes to the Hague.

Mention has been made of the Duke of Savoy's ſiding with France in the beginning of this War. Beſides the ſame Reaſon which the Elector of Bavaria urg'd for his ſo doing, his Frontiers being crowded with French Troops, ready to overrun his Country before any Aſſiſtance cou'd come to him, he might have pleaded the Intereſts of his Family, his two Daughters being married to the French King's two Grandſons, the Dukes of Burgundy and Anjou: However, the Duke of Savoy having much of the Hero in him, could not brook the Dependance he had thrown himſelf into upon France; and being a Prince of as great Foreſight as Courage, he ſaw plainly that Lewis the XIVth would never be able to carry the Point he aim'd at, Univerſal Monarchy; and that in the End, he ſhould be able to make better Terms with the Emperor, and his Allies, though it might diſtreſs him at firſt, if he declar'd for them, than he could hope to have of the French King, ſhould he prevail over them: He was in theſe Sentiments when Lewis the XIVth demanded to have the Town of Verceil, and the Citadel of Turin deliver'd up to him: Which Demand being communicated to Count Aversberg, the Emperor's Miniſter in Italy, he went Incognito to Turin, to make ſome Propoſals in the Emperor's Name. The French King having Notice of it, order'd the Duke of Vendoſme to ſeize and diſarm the Troops of Savoy that were in his Army, and to demand the Fortreſſes of Verceil, Verjus and Suſa, to be put into his Hands; at which his Royal Highneſs of Savoy was ſo provok'd, that he order'd ſeveral French Officers, who happen'd to be then at Turin, and even the French Ambaſſador himſelf, to be put under Confinement. The Ambaſſador, ſurpriz'd at this Order, ſaid arrogantly to the Captain of the Guard who was ſent to ſeize him, That the Duke being in the King his Maſter's Pay, his Majeſty might as lawfully, and of Right, not only ſeize his Forces, but alſo the Perſon of the Duke himſelf, for his Treachery. That his Maſter alſo would be reveng'd, a Stile much in Uſe with that Grand Monarch, 'till the Duke of Marlborough made it look ridiculous; and not only harraſs him with a Foreign War, but raiſe Inteſtine Broils in the Heart of his Dominions: Which ſeems to be a very fooliſh Declaration, whatever the Intention was.

*A.D.*1703.

The Duke of Savoy quits the French Intereſt.

French Miniſter's inſolent Saying, when he was ſeiz'd in Savoy.

The Officer having repeated theſe inſolent Expreſſions to the Duke, his Royal Highneſs ſtepp'd forth into his Antichamber, which was crowded with Nobility and Gentry, and made the Officer repeat theſe inſulting Words two or three Times. The whole Court reſented the Affront to that Degree, that they unanimouſly reſolv'd to live and die with their Sovereign the Duke of Savoy, who immediately ſent the chiefeſt among them into the Country, with Commiſſions and Money to raiſe new Forces. And having acknowledg'd the Archduke as King of Spain, he ſent the Count de Tarini to Vienna, with the Treaty concluded between him and Count Aversberg, and gave Notice of all his Proceedings to the Queen of Great Britain, and the States-General, who aſſur'd his Royal Highneſs of their Friendſhip and Protection. The Queen diſpatch'd Mr. Hill, and the States-General Mr. Vandermeer to the Duke; and both theſe Miniſters ſet out together in their Journey, to make the Duke thoſe Aſſurances, and to concert Meaſures with him for carrying on the War in Italy.

As England did not as yet concern her ſelf ſo much in the Affairs of the North, as ſhe was oblig'd to do afterwards, we have ſaid nothing of the Troubles there, occaſion'd by the King of Sweden, whoſe firſt Entrance into War, flattering his natural Diſpoſition to it, by repeated Succeſſes, he could not eaſily be brought to hearken to Terms of Accommodation, which the Confederates earneſtly deſir'd; the Northern War being a great weakning to one of them, the King of Poland, as Elector of Saxony, and obliging the King of Pruſſia, another, to be upon his Guard at Home, when his Troops would have contributed much to a Deciſion of the War with France, if more of them could have been ſpar'd to the Armies of the Allies. Dr. Robinſon, the Divine, the Queen of England's Miniſter in Sweden, being order'd to attend that King, then in Poland, Count Piper, the Swediſh Prime Miniſter, ſent to him at Warſaw not to come to his Maſter's Camp, for he would

*A.D.*1703. would give no Audience there to any Publick Miniſter; but Dr. Robinſon anſwer'd, I am but a Courier intruſted with a Letter from her Majeſty of Great Britain, which I am order'd to deliver to the King of Sweden, and therefore I am going to his Head Quarters to perform my Commiſſion. Accordingly, in the beginning of April, he had Audience of that King in the open Field for above an Hour, both the King and the Doctor being uncover'd; but his Majeſty deferr'd hearing him concerning the Peace, 'till Matters were on a better Foot in Poland.

Dr. Robinſon the Engliſh Reſident in Sweden, has Audience of that King without Effect.

The Miniſtry in England continues ſtill in the ſame Hands; and Promotions and Preferments are ſtill engroſs'd by the Perſons that had all along clamour'd againſt them, and gave it not over 'till they were preferr'd and promoted. Her Majeſty, in the beginning of this Year, appointed John How, Eſq; Sir Chriſtopher Wren, Colonel Hales, Commiſſary Crawford, and Charles Fox, Eſq; to be Commiſſioners for Chelſea Hoſpital; Captain Silver was made Maſter-Gunner of England; Lord Cheyney Maſter of the Pipe Office. On the 13th of March, his Serene Highneſs the Elector of Hanover, by his Proxy, the Lord Mohun, the Duke of Bedford in Perſon, and the Duke of Marlborough by his Proxy, Sir Benjamin Bathurſt, were inſtall'd Knights of the Garter at Windſor. About the ſame Time the Marquis of Normanby was created Duke of Buckinghamſhire; John Granville, Eſq; Baron Granville of Potheridge in Devon; Heneage Finch, Eſq; Baron of Guernſey; Sir John Leviſon Gower, Baron Gower of Setingham in Yorkſhire; Francis Seymour Conway, Baron Conway of Ragley in Warwickſhire; John Harvey, Eſq; Baron Harvey of Ickworth in Suffolk; the latter was not reckon'd to be in the good Graces of High-Church, and his Advancement caus'd the more Speculation, it being at a Time when that Party were more Predominant than ever they had been, till then, or than ever they were at all, 'till the Nation ran a Madding after Sacheverel. Jervaſe Pierrepoint, Eſq; was created Baron Pierrepoint of Ardglaſs in Ireland; the Earl of Rutland Duke of Rutland; the Archbiſhop of York, the Earl of Thanet, and the new Lord Guernſey, were ſworn of the Privy-Council; and Edward Harley, Eſq; was made Auditor of the Impreſt, by the Merits of his Brother, Robert Harley. The Marquis of Carmarthen Vice-Admiral of the White, was made Vice-Admiral of the Red Squadron of her Majeſty's Fleet: John Graydon, Eſq; Rear-Admiral of the White, was advanc'd to be Vice-Admiral of the ſame Squadron; John Leake, Eſq; Rear-Admiral of the Blue, was made Vice-Admiral of the ſame Squadron; and a very acceptable Officer, George Byng, Eſq; was appointed Rear-Admiral of the Red; Thomas Dilks, Eſq; Rear-Admiral of the White; and Bazil Beaumont, Eſq; Rear-Admiral of the Blue. Sir John Verney, of Penley in Hertfordſhire, was created Viſcount Fermanaugh, in the Kingdom of Ireland. Dr. George Hooper was made Biſhop of St. Aſaph; Dr. Bincks, one of the Champions of High-Church, Dean of Litchfield and Coventry. John Anſtis, Eſq; a Member of Parliament, Deputy to the Auditors of the Impreſt; Dr. Davenant, Inſpector-General of the Cuſtoms; his Son, Mr. Henry Davenant, Reſident at Frankfort; Sir Charles Shuckburgh, Maſter of the Queen's Stag and Buck-hounds; Thomas Maurice, Eſq; Paymaſter of the Forces that were to ſerve in Portugal; Emanuel Scroop How, Eſq; Edward Brereton, Eſq; Robert Yard, Eſq; George Morley, Eſq; Anthony Duncomb, Eſq; William Goſlin, Eſq; Alexander Pendarves, Eſq; John Anſtis, Eſq; were made Principal Commiſſioners for Prizes. It was remarkable, as we have hinted, that the Gentlemen of the Party then prevalent, who had made the greateſt Clamour againſt Parliament Men who had Places, did themſelves, in the like Circumſtances, crowd to get into them as faſt as they conceiv'd any Hopes of it. Nay, William Campion, Eſq; ſubmitted to be a Sub-Commiſſioner of Prizes at Plymouth, under Alexander Pendarvis, and John Anſtis, Eſq; Corniſh Burgeſſes, who were Principal Commiſſioners; which teaches us to examine the Morals and Views of ſuch Clamourers, before we are impos'd upon by their ſpecious Pretences to publick Spirit and Patriotiſm.

Elector of Hanover made Knight of the Garter.

Creations of Peers.

Promotions and Preferments.

*A.D.*1703.

On Wedneſday, the 18th of Auguſt, her Majeſty, and his Royal Highneſs Prince George, ſet out from Windſor for the Bath, where ſhe arriv'd the Friday following; and was receiv'd every-where, as ſhe had been the Year before, with Acclamations of Affection and Joy. The Magiſtrates of Briſtol, William Lewis, Eſq; Mayor, Abraham Elton, Eſq; and Chriſtopher Shuter, Eſq; Sheriffs, with ſeveral of the Aldermen, and Town-Clerk, waited on the Queen and Prince, to congratulate their Arrival in their Neighbourhood, which her Majeſty took very kindly, and conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on the Mayor.

The Queen goes to Bath.

While her Majeſty was at the Bath, the Duke of Scomburgh was inſtall'd a Knight of the Garter at Windſor; and on the 30th of October, the Duke of Marlborough arriv'd from Holland. The Queen and Prince ſtay'd at Bath ſeven Weeks, and return'd to Windſor the 9th of October.

On the 4th of November, the Parliament met at Weſtminſter, and her Majeſty, in her Speech to both Houſes, told them:

Queen's Speech.

" SHE hop'd ſhe had improv'd the Confidence " they repos'd in her laſt Year, to their Sa- " tisfaction, and the Advantage of us and our " Allies, by the Treaty with the King of Portu- " gal, and the Declaration of the Duke of Savoy, " which in a great Meaſure might be imputed to " the Chearfulneſs with which they ſupported her " in this War, and the Aſſurance with which they " truſted her in the Conduct of it. And they " could not ſufficiently acknowledge the Goodneſs " of Almighty God, who was pleas'd to afford " them ſo fair a Proſpect, as we had now, of " bringing it to a glorious and ſpeedy Conclu- " ſion.

" She then deſir'd the Commons to grant her " ſuch Supplies as ſhould be requiſite to defray the " Charge of the War in the next Year, with Re- " gard not only to our former Engagements, but " particularly to our Alliance lately made with the " King of Portugal, for recovering the Monarchy " of Spain from the Houſe of Bourbon, and re- " ſtoring it to the Houſe of Auſtria; which Trea- " ty being in it ſelf of the higheſt Importance " imaginable, and requiring all poſſible Diſ- " patch in the Execution of it, had neceſſarily " occaſion'd a great Expence, even in this pre- " ſent Year, though not ſo much as it would re- " quire, and for which ſhe hop'd we ſhould be " amply recompens'd in the next.

" The Subſidies which would be immedi- " ately requir'd for the Aſſiſtance of the Duke " of Savoy, would likewiſe occaſion a farther ne- " ceſſary Charge; ſhe muſt take Notice to them, " that though no particular Proviſion was made " in the laſt Seſſions, either for the Charge of our " preſent Expedition to Portugal, or for that of " the Augmentation-Troops deſir'd by the States- " General, yet the Funds given by Parliament " had held out ſo well, and the Produce of the " Prizes had prov'd ſo conſiderable, that they " would find the Publick would not be in Debt, " by reaſon of either of thoſe additional Services.

A.D.1703. "She might farther obſerve to them, that tho' "the Funds for the Civil-Government were di- "miniſh'd by the War, ſhe had, in Conjunction "with the States-General, contributed out of her "own Revenue, towards ſome publick Services, "and particularly the Support of the Circle of "Swabia, whoſe firm Adherence to the Intereſt of "the Allies, under the greateſt Preſſures, did very "well deſerve our ſeaſonable Aſſiſtance. And "ſhe would ſtill be careful not to engage her ſelf "in any unneceſſary Expence of her own, that "ſhe might have the more to ſpare towards the "Eaſe of her Subjects.

Then having preſs'd Diſpatch to them, her Majeſty concluded thus:

Recommends Union. I want Words to expreſs to you my earneſt Deſire of ſeeing all my Subjects in perfect Peace and Union among themſelves. I have nothing ſo much at Heart, as their Welfare and Happineſs. Let me therefore deſire you all, that you would carefully avoid any Heats or Diviſions that may diſappoint me of that Satisfaction, and give Encouragement to the Common Enemies.

The Commons conforming themſelves in Words, at leaſt, to her Majeſty's Speech, had one Paragraph in their Addreſs, which the Tory Majority, in the Time of the Harleian Miniſtry, had no manner of Regard to; We are truly ſenſible of your Majeſty's Endeavours to bring the War to a glorious and ſpeedy Concluſion, of which you have given us ſo fair a Proſpect, by your great Wiſdom and Conduct, in engaging the King of Portugal and Duke of Savoy in your Alliance, for recovering the Monarchy of Spain from the Houſe of Bourbon, and reſtoring it to the Houſe of Auſtria. Again, We crave further to aſſure your Majeſty, that according to your Deſire, we will carefully avoid any Heats and Diviſions that might give Encouragement to the Common Enemies: As they ſhew'd a few Days after, by ordering that the Bill againſt Occaſional Conformity be brought in; whereas every-body underſtood that her Majeſty intended the diſcouraging any ſuch Attempt, by that Paſſage in her Speech againſt Heats and Diviſions. The Queen told them in her Anſwer, November the 11th, She was pleas'd with their Aſſurance of ſupporting her in the preſent War, and their kind Acknowledgments of her Endeavours to bring it to a happy Concluſion; and they might aſſure themſelves, ſhe ſhould always purſue the true Intereſt of the Kingdom, and omit nothing that might promote the true Intereſt of her People.

There is a Spirit, and Truth, in the Addreſs of the Houſe of Lords, which renders every Word of it worth treaſuring up in our Memory.

The Lords good Addreſs. "WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal "Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Tem- "poral in Parliament Aſſembled, do offer up our "hearty Acknowledgments to Almighty God for "the Preſervation of your Royal Perſon, ſo eſ- "ſential to the Happineſs of your People, and the "Safety of Europe.

"We ſee, with the greateſt Satisfaction, the "Zeal with which your Majeſty eſpouſes the "publick Intereſt, which carries you even beyond "the Obligations of your Treaties, in Defence of "the Houſe of Auſtria, againſt all the Uſurpa- "tions of the Houſe of Bourbon, and the Glo- "rious Reſtoration of that Family to the Monar- "chy of Spain; which we have great Reaſon to "expect, from the late Alliance with the King of "Portugal, will be chiefly owing to your Maje- "ſty's Arms and Aſſiſtance.

"Your Majeſty may depend upon Security at "Home, in the Love of your People. Our Per- "ſons and Fortunes ſhall ever be ready to defend "you upon all Occaſions, and your Majeſty may "therefore, with the greater Safety and Glory, "ſend your Fleets and Armies Abroad in the De- "fence of your Allies. A.D.1703.

"The happy Declaration of the Duke of Savoy "for the common Intereſt, gives your Majeſty a "favourable Opportunity to ſhew your Compaſ- "ſion and Concern for thoſe Proteſtants in the "South of France, who lie under the heavieſt Per- For aſſiſting the Cevennois. ſecution and Oppreſſion.

"We lament for our ſelves, and others, the "unavoidable Expence of War, but have Reaſon "to thank God, and your Majeſty, that we are "free from all the other Calamities of it, having "almoſt nothing elſe to wiſh for, BEING SE- "CUR'D OF A PROTESTANT SUCCES- "SION, but your long and happy Reign over "us: And we ſhall moſt willingly pay our Pro- "portion of Taxes, encourag'd by your Royal "Generoſity for the Eaſe of your People, and by "the frugal Management of what is given; being "ſenſible there is no better way to ſave the "Wealth of the Nation, than by carrying on the "War at this Time with the utmoſt Vigor. "Your Majeſty may expect from us a moſt rea- "dy Compliance with all your Deſires, ſo juſtly "merited by your Care of the general Welfare "and Happineſs of your People, extended even "to the pooreſt and meaneſt of your Sub- "jects.

"This appears yet more eminently, in that "earneſt and preſſing Recommendation to your "Parliament, of Union and Peace among them- "ſelves: And we in the moſt ſolemn Manner "aſſure your Majeſty, that we will not only "Avoid, but Oppoſe whatever may tend to create "any Diſquiet or Diſſention amongſt your Sub- "jects.

"We ſhall never be wanting in any Part of "our Duty, towards the ſupporting your Majeſty's "Honour, and your Allies, not doubting but "Almighty God will proſper your Majeſty's "Arms, ſo gloriouſly employ'd to protect all "thoſe whom the Ambition of the French King "would oppreſs.

Such was the Senſe, ſuch the Language of that Auguſt Aſſembly, with Reſpect to Lewis the XIVth's uſurping the Monarchy of Spain; and ſuch were they always, 'till a new Appearance there brought amongſt them, other Hearts, and other Tongues. The Queen's Anſwer was:

My LORDS,

Queen's Anſwer. I Am extreamly ſenſible of the particular Concern you expreſs for me in this Addreſs, and of your great Zeal for the Common Cauſe of Europe: I rely very much upon the Aſſurance you give me of your Duty and Affection, and ſhall uſe my beſt Endeavours to eſtabliſh the Safety and Happineſs of the Kiugdom.

On the 27th of November, the Commons voted 40000 Men to act in Conjunction with the Allies, 10000 Augmentation-Troops for the next Year's Service, 1704; and 7000 Foot, and 1000 Horſe and Dragoons for Portugal: And that 1801000 l. be granted for thoſe Forces, Guards and Gariſons, and Payments to the Allies. Two Days after, they voted 40000 Seamen, including 5000 Marines, for the Sea Service, 1704. Mr. Secretary Hedges acquainted the Houſe, November the 30th, that her Majeſty had been pleas'd to give this Anſwer to their Addreſs about ſtopping all Correſpondence with France, That ſhe thought the Continuance of the ſtop of all Poſt Letters, Trade, and all other Correſpondence,

A.D.1703. reſpondence with the Enemies, ſo neceſſary for the publick Good, that ſhe would forthwith give Orders to her Miniſter at the Hague, to inſiſt upon it with the States-General, as the Commons deſir'd. The ſame Day the Houſe Voted an Addreſs to her Majeſty, aſſuring her, They would provide for the making good ſuch Alliances as her Majeſty had made, or ſhould make, with the Duke of Savoy.

The Great Storm. On the Friday before, the 26th of November, between eleven and twelve a Clock at Night, there was the greateſt Tempeſt in the Weſtern and Southern Parts of England, and in ſome Parts of the Eaſtern, that was ever known or heard of. The Wind blew Weſt, South-Weſt, and grumbled like Thunder, accompany'd with Flaſhes of Lightning. It threw down ſeveral Battlements and Stacks of Chimnies at St. James's Palace; tore to Pieces tall Trees in the Park, and kill'd a Servant in the Houſe. The Guard-Houſe at Whitehall was much damag'd, as was the Banquetting-Houſe. A great deal of Lead was blown off Weſtminſter-Abbey; and moſt of the Lead on Churches and Houſes either roll'd up in Sheets, or looſen'd. Many Houſes of the Nobility in the City and Liberties of Weſtminſter were very much ſhatter'd, as was Chelſea-College: And in a word, few Houſes in London eſcap'd, without ſome terrible Marks of the Fury of the Storm. In the River of Thames, the Severn, and at Sea, the Wrecks that were made by it were a diſmal Spectacle every-where, and the Loſs amounted to Millions. Sir Cloudeſley Shovel, who was then in the Downs with ſome of the Men of War that came from the Mediterranean, put to Sea as ſoon as the Storm began, and for many Days was miſſing. Rear-Admiral Beaumont, who was on Board the Mary, which he quitted when the Ship was breaking, got upon a Piece of her Quarter-Deck, but was ſoon waſh'd off, and drown'd; a Sailor on board this Ship, the only Man that was ſav'd out of the Mary, was toſt by the Waves into the Sterling-Caſtle, which periſh'd immediately, and he was as miraculouſly ſav'd a ſecond Time, as I heard him tell the Story himſelf, but have forgot the Circumſtances of his laſt Eſcape. The pious and learned Prelate, Dr. Richard Kidder, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, and his Lady, were kill'd by the Fall of part of the Old Epiſcopal Palace at Wells. The Biſhop of London's Siſter, Lady Penelope Nicholas, was kill'd in a like Manner at Horſely in Suſſex, and Sir John Nicholas, her Husband, grievouſly hurt. Sir Cloudeſley Shovel arriv'd in the River in Safety, and the Ships that were with him, having rid out the Remains of the Tempeſt on the Coaſts of Holland. The Damage in the City of London only, was computed at near two Millions; and at Briſtol, at not much leſs than Two Hundred Thouſand Pounds. I had this Account of it from a Phyſician of that City, "Great was the "Loſs ſuſtain'd by the City of Briſtol, in Ships, "Goods, Houſes and Churches; particularly the "College, or Cathedral, and St. Stephen's Church "on the Key, which had three of its fine Pinacles "on the Tower blown down through the Roof "and Body of the Church; but the greateſt Da-"mage that City ſuffer'd, was by the Inundation "of Water driven up the Avon from the Severn "Channel, by the Violence of the Hurricanes, "which meeting with the Freſhes in Frome and "Avon Rivers, then more than uſual, by Reaſon "of late Rains, it flow'd into the Cellars, Shops "and Streets in Ratcliff-Street, and along the "Backs and Keys, and was two Foot high at "the Bridge End. A Boat might have "ſwimm'd in Temple-Street from one end to the "other. It was two Foot and half high at Temple-Gate, and at the end of Baldwin-Street. Great "alſo was the Damage done on the Coaſts both "of Somerſetſhire and Wales; particularly in "the Marſh Country in the County of Somerſet; "as at Berrow, Barnham, Brent, and Huntſpil, "where abundance of Cattle and Sheep were car-"ry'd away, ſome Perſons drown'd, and many "ſav'd, as by Miracle. The Inhabitants were "forc'd to get all into their Upper-Rooms, and "the uppermoſt ſcarce high enough. Some climb'd "Trees, and could not come down with Safety, "'till they were reliev'd: For which Purpoſe "Boats were haul'd away in Waggons from Bri-"ſtol twenty Miles off.

A.D.1703. Biſhop of Bath and Wells kill'd.

The Storm at Briſtol.

A miraculous Eſcape.

A LIST of the Ships of War loſt in the Storm in November, 1703.

Men of War loſt.

Vanguard,

Northumberland, Capt. Greenway, — A ſecond Rate, 90 Guns, 640 Men, loſt in Chatham Harbour, no Men nor Guns aboard.

Sterling-Caſtle, Captain Johnſon, — A third Rate, 446 Men, 70 Guns, loſt on the Goodwin-Sands, no Men ſav'd.

Reſtoration, Capt. Emms, — A third Rate, 446 Men, 70 Guns, loſt on the Goodwin-Sands, 63 Men ſav'd, with the Captain, three Lieutenants, and Chaplain.

Reſolution, Captain Liſle. — A third Rate, 446 Men, 70 Guns, loſt on the Goodwin-Sands, no Men ſav'd.

Mary, Rear-Admiral Beaumont, Capt. Edward Hopſon. — A third Rate, 446 Men, 70 Guns, loſt on the Coaſt of Suſſex, all the Men ſav'd.

York, Captain Smith, — A fourth Rate, 346 Men, 64 Guns, loſt on the Goodwin-Sands, Captain and Purſer aſhore, and but one Man more ſav'd.

Newcaſtle, Captain Carter, — A fourth Rate, 332 Men, 60 Guns, loſt at Harwich, all the Men ſav'd but four.

Reſerve, Captain Anderſon, — A fourth Rate, 274 Men, 54 Guns, loſt at Spithead, the Carpenter and 23 Men more ſav'd.

Litchfield Prize, Capt. Chamberlain, — A fourth Rate, 226 Men, 48 Guns, loſt at Yarmouth, the Captain, Surgeon, and 21 more ſav'd.

Arundel, Captain Deering, — A fifth Rate, 155 Men, 32 Guns, loſt on the Coaſt of Suſſex, all the Men ſav'd.

Mortar Bomb-Ship, Capt. Raymond, — A fifth Rate, 145 Men, 32 Guns, loſt at Briſtol, all the Men ſav'd.

Suffolk, Hoſpital, Capt. Watkins, — A ſixth Rate, 65 Men, 12 Guns, loſt on the Goodwin-Sands, all the Men drown'd.

A ſixth Rate, 80 Men, 10 Guns, loſt at Briſtol, all the Men ſav'd.

Eagle

A.D.1703. Eagle Advice-Boat, Capt. Boſtock. { A ſixth Rate, 54 Men, 10 Guns, loſt on the Coaſt of Suſſex, all the Men ſav'd. A.D.1703.

Veſuvius, Fire-Ship, Capt. Paddon. { A ſixth Rate, 45 Men, 8 Guns, loſt at Spithead, all the Men ſav'd.

Canterbury Store-Ship, Capt. Blake. { A ſixth Rate, 40 Men, 8 Guns, loſt at Briſtol, 13 Men ſav'd.

Addreſs of the Houſe of Commons upon it.

On this diſmal Occaſion the Houſe of Commons unanimouſly Reſolv'd, That " An Addreſs be " preſented to her Majeſty, expreſſing the great " Senſe the Houſe had of the Calamity fallen upon " the Kingdom by the late violent Storm, and " that they could not ſee any Diminution of her " Majeſty's Navy, without making Proviſion to " repair the ſame: Wherefore they beſought her " Majeſty, that ſhe would immediately give Dire- " ctions for repairing this Loſs, and for Building " ſuch Capital Ships as her Majeſty ſhould think " fit ; and to aſſure her Majeſty, that at their next " Meeting the Houſe would effectually make good " that Expence; and would give Diſpatch in " raiſing the Supplies already voted, for making " good her Majeſty's Treaties with the King of " Portugal, and all her Majeſty's other Allies, and " would conſider of effectual Ways for promoting " of Trade, for managing her Majeſty's Navy " Royal, and for encouraging the Seamen." The Queen's Anſwer was very gracious, and two or three Days after was iſſu'd her Majeſty's Proclamation for a general Faſt, which was obſerv'd throughout England on the 19th of January enſuing, with more ſigns of Devotion and Sincerity than ever I ſaw any thing of that Kind, the Terror the Tempeſt had left on the Peoples Minds, contributing much to their affectionate Diſcharge of that religious Duty.

A Faſt.

The Dutch had their Share of the dreadful Effects of the Storm; Churches, Houſes and other Buildings in Holland, and the other United Provinces, receiv'd great Damage; the Dykes in Frieſland were broke down, and a fourth Part of that Province laid under Water; Admiral Allemond who was arriv'd ſome Days before with his Squadron from the Streights, rid out the Storm, loſing only the Maſts of ſome of his Ships. Sir George Rook, who was then in Holland to convoy his Catholick Majeſty to England, went from the Hague to the Brill, to give Directions for repairing the Damage the Ships of his Squadron had ſuſtain'd; which being done with great Expedition, and the Dutch Squadron that was to join him ready, the King of Spain embark'd and ſail'd for England the 23d of December. The States General before he went, deliver'd up to him the Civil Government of the Province of Limburgh, lately reduc'd, as he was the lawful Heir of the Spaniſh Monarchy, and the King appointed Count Zinzendorf to take Poſſeſſion of it in his Name.

The King of Spain embarks in Holland.

Charles III, King of Spain, now Emperor of Germany, arriv'd at Spithead on the 26th of December, and had all poſſible Honours paid him both from the Fleet and the Town of Portſmouth. Our Court had Advice of his Majeſty's being at Sea, in his Paſſage thither, before News came of his Arrival, and the Duke of Somerſet, Maſter of the Horſe, with other chief Lords, haſted to Portſmouth to compliment him in her Majeſty's Name as ſoon as he arriv'd, which was done accordingly. His Grace waited on the King on Shipboard, with her Majeſty's Letter, acquainting him, That ſhe was come to Windſor in order to receive the Viſit his Majeſty intended to make her. His Majeſty lay the firſt Night after his Arrival on board the Royal Catherine. The Duke of Marlborough came to Portſmouth ſoon after his Majeſty, who went from thence to Petworth in Suſſex, where the Duke of Somerſet has a princely Palace, and where his Royal Highneſs was come to meet the King. On the 29th of December, about ſeven in the Evening, the King of Spain arriv'd at Windſor. The Duke of Northumberland, Conſtable of Windſor Caſtle, the Duke of St. Albans, Captain of the Band of Penſioners, and the Marquis of Hartington, Captain of the Yeomen of the Guard, receiv'd his Catholick Majeſty at his alighting out of the Coach, and the Earl of Jerſey, Lord Chamberlain of her Majeſty's Houſhold, lighted him to the Stair-Head, where the Queen receiv'd him with great demonſtrations of Reſpect and Affection. After he had made his Compliment to her Majeſty, acknowledging his great Obligations to her for her generous Protection and Aſſiſtance; he led her Majeſty into her Bedchamber, where the Queen preſented to him about 40 Ladies of the firſt Quality, who in their richeſt Dreſs, and with their beſt Looks and Airs, made an Appearance, of which his Majeſty was ſo ſenſible, that the Pleaſure he took in that ſight was viſible to the Spectators, and he expreſs'd it to them. He did particular Honour to the Dutcheſs of Bolton, Daughter to the unfortunate Duke of Monmouth; the King kiſs'd all theſe Ladies, and one of them in a diſtinguiſhing Manner. After a ſhort Stay in the Queen's Bedchamber, the Prince of Denmark conducted the King to the Apartment prepar'd for him; he ſupp'd that Night with her Majeſty, who gave the King the Right Hand at the Table, which he with great Difficulty admitted, the Prince ſitting at the end of the Table on the Queen's ſide: The next Day, having notice that the Queen was coming to make him a Viſit, he met her at her Drawing-Room-Door, endeavouring to have prevented her, but her Majeſty went on to his Apartment, from whence he led her Majeſty to Dinner.

Sees the Queen at Windſor.

Could one then imagine that after ſuch Endearments, after he had been entertain'd and own'd, as if he had been an adopted Son, that in this very Reign his Intereſts would be ſacrific'd to thoſe of France, an implacable Enemy to her Majeſty, and the Protector and Supporter of the Pretender to her Crown, and of all that ever rebell'd againſt her? But it was the doing of High Church, and the Blame ought always to lie there.

The Spaniſh Merchants waited on his Catholick Majeſty at Windſor, and being introduc'd by the Duke of Marlborough, addreſs'd themſelves to him by their Spokeſman in the Spaniſh Tongue.

Arrives at Spithead.

Complimented by the Duke of Somerſet and the Prince of Denmark.

S I R,

Spaniſh Merchants Addreſs to the King.

WE the Subjects of her Majeſty of Great-Britain, who have had our Houſes and Traffick in Spain, are come to put ourſelves at the Royal Feet of your Catholick Majeſty, and to welcome you into this Kingdom, as alſo to wiſh your Majeſty a happy Voyage and good Succeſs; hoping in God, after a little time, to have our Houſes and Trade again under the Protection of your Majeſty in your own Kingdom. We pray God to preſerve your Majeſty's Royal Perſon for the good of Chriſtendom.

The King of Spain receiv'd theſe Merchants very favourably, and ſaid, Eſtimo La Gracia y favor, which is the higheſt Compliment the Spaniſh Language admits in their Sovereign. After Dinner the ſame Day, there were ſeveral Performances of Muſick, with Dancing and other courtly Diverſions, every thing was elegant and ſplendid, and ſo

A.D.1703. fine an Appearance was never ſeen in the Court of England, or perhaps any other. After Supper his Catholick Majeſty would not be ſatisfy'd till he had prevail'd with the Dutcheſs of Marlborough to give him the Napkin which ſhe held to her Majeſty when ſhe waſh'd, and in returning the ſame to her Grace, his Majeſty put his Diamond Ring in it as a Mark of his great Eſteem for that Lady. Supper being over he led the Queen to her Bedchamber, where, after ſome Stay he took his leave of her, reſolving to depart next Morning, which he did accordingly, after having made ſeveral Preſents to ſeveral Ladies attending her Majeſty's Perſon, and by his Majeſtick, but affable engaging Behaviour, approv'd himſelf a moſt accompliſh'd Prince, and gain'd the Hearts of all that were Witneſſes of it. On Friday 31ſt of December, the King of Spain ſet out from Windſor for Portſmouth, attended by the Duke of Somerſet, Count Wratiſlau, the Ambaſſador of Portugal, and other Perſons of Quality. His Majeſty din'd at the Whitehart Inn in Guilford, and Sir Richard Onſlow, High Steward of the Town, in behalf of the Mayor and Corporation, preſented him with a Cake, and explain'd that Ceremony to him. The King lay that Night at Petworth, and the next Day, January 1, came to Chicheſter, with his Grace the Duke of Somerſet High Steward of that City. At their entrance into it, the Mayor and Aldermen in their Scarlet Gowns, and the Common Council in their Formalities attended them, and Mr. Covert, one of the Common Council, made a Speech to his Majeſty in Latin in the Name of all the Citizens, which he clos'd thus.

His preſent to the Dutcheſs of Marlborough.

The King at Chicheſter.

Optantque ſine dubio ſperantes quod eadem Providentia Borbonois evertet inimicos, teque per Mare, per Terras, quam diutiſſime ſervet incolumem, quodque Fideles Subditi in Brachiis Extenſis voce una recipiant in Regna tua, ubi in perpetuam Coronata Triumphet AUSTRICÆ ſpes Magna Dei.

His Majeſty din'd at the Biſhop's Palace, and then went to Portſmouth. The Corporation attending him in Chicheſter through Ranks of arm'd Citizens, who made Bonfires and joyful Acclamations, which the King took very kindly. In the Evening, January 2, his Majeſty arriv'd at Portſmouth, and went on board the Royal Catherine, which had been made extreamly commodious for the Reception of himſelf and numerous Retinue. Two Days after he came a-ſhore incognito to ſee the Dock, and honour'd with a Viſit Admiral Callemberg who was lately come to Spithead with the Dutch Squadron and Tranſports. The 5th of January Sir George Rook ſail'd for Lisbon with a fair Wind, which Wind drove him within 60 Leagues of Cape Finiſtre, and a violent Storm enſu'd, which diſpers'd the Fleet and ſo damag'd the Ships, that Sir George was oblig'd to return to Spithead. The King of Spain on this Occaſion gave ſignal Proofs of his ſteady Courage and Reſolution; for when the Tempeſt was at the Height he continued upon Deck, and diſregarding his own Danger, expreſs'd only a Concern for others. The Admiral deſiring him to go down into his Cabin, he reply'd, No, Sir, I will ſtay to be an Eye Witneſs of your Diligence, and of the Labour that you and your Officers undergo for my Service. As ſoon as Boats could go off, the Duke of Somerſet went on board the Royal Catharine to compliment the King of Spain in her Majeſty's Name and invite him on Shore, aſſuring him her Majeſty had given ſuch Orders for the Fleet, that the ſame ſhould be ready to Sail in a few Days: Upon which his Majeſty landed at Portſmouth, and lay at the Houſe of Mr. Puffield an eminent Apothecary, where great Preparations were made for his Reception.

Puts to Sea and is driven back to Spithead.

A.D.1703. On the 21ſt of January the Queen came to the House of Peers, and having given the Royal Aſſent to the Malt Bill, ſhe mention'd the King of Spain's being put back by contrary Winds, and earneſtly recommended to them the greateſt Diſpatch in the Buſineſs of the Seſſion. A.D.1703.

By the 1ſt of February the Fleet was ready to put to Sea again; which Expedition was in great Meaſure owing to his Grace the Duke of Somerſet's Overſight and Care; but the Winds ſtill continued contrary till the 13th, when Sir George Rook having the King of Spain on board, ſail'd from St. Helens to Portugal, and on the 25th gain'd the Rock of Lisbon. As ſoon as he caſt Anchor, Mr. Methuen, Envoy Extraordinary, in the Abſence of his Father who was ill of the Gout, went on board, and had Audience of the King to welcome him in her Majeſty's Name. He was very graciouſly receiv'd by his Catholick Majeſty, who had all the Honours paid him at his coming to, and Reſidence in the Court of Portugal that was due to a King of Spain.

The King arrives at Lisbon.

The Duke of Schomberg and the Forces deſign'd for the Portugal Expedition, as well Dutch as Engliſh, arriv'd there 3 or 4 Days after; and the French Ambaſſador, Monſieur Chateauneuf, thinking he ſhould make but an indifferent Figure at the Court of Lisbon, after the King of Spain was arriv'd, took his leave of the King of Portugal and retir'd into Spain.

An Obſervation was made in the Reign of King Charles the II, that the Five Mile Act which baniſh'd Presbyterian Miniſters five Miles from the Towns where they had preach'd before they were turn'd out of their Churches, was brought into the Houſe in a time of Plague and War; and it was now obſerv'd, that the High-Church Party were in the Heat of their Zeal for the Occaſional Conformity Bill, when the dreadful Calamity of the Storm had ſet every Heart a trembling. The two Houſes had not ſat long before the Occaſional Conformity Bill, which had miſcarry'd the laſt Seſſion, was again ſet a-Foot among the Commons, and we are told by whom, in the Hiſtory of Queen Anne, by the zealous Sticklers for the Church of England, who about this time began to diſtinguiſh themſelves by the Name of High Church. For though the Enemies to our preſent Happy Conſtitution, founded upon the Revolution, have without regard to Truth and Humanity, labour'd hard to fix the Character of Partial upon my Hiſtory, becauſe I was under a Neceſſity of uſing the Terms, Tory and High-Church, to diſtinguiſh the unſound Part of the Nation from the ſound, yet it is moſt certain, that High-Church was a Denomination firſt made uſe of by the Friends to the Pretender and Perſecution. Leſly the Jacobite Prieſt was the firſt that writ himſelf in the Title of one of his ſeditious Libels, By a High Church-Man; and the Majority that ſo furiouſly puſh'd this Occaſional Bill, did not, and do not diſown him as one of their Party. The Hiſtorian proceeds: " This was not unforſeen nor unexpected " by the Heads of the Low Church or Moderate " Party, and it was by the Encouragement, and " with the Approbation of the Lord Halifax, " that Dr. Davenant publiſhed a Book, entitled, " Eſſays upon Peace at home and War abroad, " wherein he enforc'd what her Majeſty had " lately recommended from the Throne, and " endeavour'd to bring all ſorts of Men to throw " aſide their Heats and Animoſities, and to unite " in their own Defence againſt the common Dan- " ger. This Book being principally deſign'd to " diſſuade the bringing in of the Bill to prevent Oc- " caſional Conformity, very ſharp Cenſures were " paſt upon it by the Party, which the Author

High Church carry on Perſecution in the Storm.

They affect that Denomination.

*A.D.*1703. " ſeem'd to have forſaken, and a great Promoter " of that Bill did not ſtick to reflect on him as a " Profligate Scribbler." A Reflection he deſerv'd while he was writing Grants and Reſumptions, Balances of Trade, &c. but ſhould not have had it from that Set of Men whom he ſo highly oblig'd.

D'Avenant leaves them.

Sir Humphrey Mackworth cenſur'd for Fraud, writes againſt the Diſſenters.

Sir Humphry Mackworth, the ſame whom the Houſe of Commons not long after ſet a Mark upon for fraudulent and ſcandalous Practices in Money Matters with which he was entruſted, put out a Treatiſe in Defence of the Occaſional Conformity Bill; and Sir John Packington, a Name of moſt Note in King Charles IId's Reign, for a Plot againſt ſeveral Diſſenting Miniſters in Worceſterſhire, which would have ſent them all to the Gibbet had it not been detected in time, made a warm Speech in behalf of the Bill, which was the ſame in Subſtance now as before, and yet in ſeveral things it differ'd. The Preamble againſt Perſecution for Conſcience ſake only, was now left out; and truly with good Reaſon, it being very odd to declare againſt Perſecution in the Preamble of the Bill, and in the Body to Enact it; for it is Nonſenſe to ſay that the obliging a Man to ſtated Communion or ſtated Poverty, is not Perſecution; that to load his Conſcience with a Burden he can neither bear nor avoid without Starving is not to Perſecute. The former Bill began with mentioning the Act of Indulgence, ſaying, That that Act ought to be inviolably obſerv'd, whereas this took not the leaſt Notice of it; the other Alterations were as little for the better as theſe are, and all help to ſhow the moſt ingenuous as well as Chriſtian Temper of the Muſgrave's, the How's, the Bromley's, the Harcourt's, the Seymour's, the Granvill's, and other Sticklers for the Cauſe of High-Church.

Sir J. Packington's Speech for the Bill.

Packington's Speech being the ſmarteſt for the Bill, ſomething more particular muſt be ſaid of it. He alledg'd: " Her Majeſty ſufficiently ſhew'd her " deſire to ſee it ſucceed the laſt Seſſions, by the " Prince of Denmark's conſtant Attendance upon " it; and that he believ'd the Reaſon why ſome " Perſons oppos'd it, was becauſe the Queen " ſeem'd to eſpouſe it.

Whereas in Truth the Queen at that time ſeem'd to do the quite contrary; however he goes on with the ſame Strength of Reaſoning:

" The Bill was loſt becauſe two or three noble " Lords were by turns to be Abſent; and he " complain'd that the Miſcarriage of the Bill was " imputed to their want of Attendance, when at " the ſame time they were deſir'd to be out of the " way. He repreſented it as ſhameleſs there ſhould " be ſuch Trimming in a Bill to prevent Hypocriſy.

The ſame Underſtanding might have directed him to have call'd it Adultery. Is not the Church of England as by Law eſtabliſh'd Proteſtant? Is not the Church of Scotland as by Law eſtabliſh'd Proteſtant? Cannot a Church of England Man receive the Communion at Edinburgh, nor a Member of the Kirk at London, without being Hypocrites? Again,

" He ſaid when Members of Parliament and " Miniſters of State ſtand Neuter in Matters that " nearly concern the Intereſt of the Church of " England, and have not Courage to own their " Opinion, they very well deſerve to be turn'd " out. He banter'd the Archbiſhop of Canter- " bury as oppoſing the Bill, becauſe my Lord " Somers told him it ought not to paſs, and intima- " ted that none of the reſt of the Biſhops againſt " the Bill could give a better Reaſon. He talk'd " of moving for leave to bring in a Bill in favour " of Epiſcopacy." For, adds he, Since they are of the ſame Principles with the Diſſenters, it is but juſt they ſhould ſtand on the ſame Foot. " He argu'd, " that it could not be more unſeaſonable to paſs a " Law for the farther Defence of the Church of " England, than it was for Scotland laſt Seſſions to " paſs an Act for the Security of the Kirk there; " and whereas it was pleaded the Bill would create " Diviſion, he queried whether a Schiſm was " to be allow'd to avoid Diviſion. *A.D.*1703.

This exquiſite Nonſenſe of his, is worthy the Cauſe it ſupported: If the Religion of all the Reform'd Churches in Chriſtendom, except the Church of England is Schiſmatick, then the Presbyterians are Schiſmaticks, and not otherwiſe; and if the Presbyterians were Schiſmaticks, they were already allow'd by as good an Act as that of Conformity, and were not to be diſallow'd by the Act in Debate. But let us have ſome more of it.

He ſaid, " One Diſſenter in Place was capable " of doing more Miſchief to the Church of Eng- " land than ten out of it; and he aſſerted that the " Practice of Occaſional Conformity, eluded the " Force of one of the beſt Laws made in the " Church of England's Defence, and that it was " Scandalous and Knaviſh in itſelf; and he might " pretend to foretell, that by the Benefit of this " Occaſional Conformity, the Diſſenters would come " to be the Majority in the Houſe of Commons, " and then he dare venture to pronounce the Days " of the Church of England few; and that he " might not ſee ſuch diſmal Effects of a pretended " Moderation, he heartily wiſh'd Succeſs to the " Bill.

The Blunderer in the laſt part of this Oration, deſerv'd Rebuke from thoſe that wiſh'd as he did: For if the Diſſenters were ſo conſiderable as he makes them, as to be likely in 7 or 8 Years to have a Majority in the Houſe of Commons; it was a very good Argument not to make them more uneaſy at a time we were engag'd in a Confederacy with the Foreigners of their Religion againſt its implacable Enemy. This Bill with all its Infirmities, had a quick Paſſage in the Lower Houſe, and was order'd to be carry'd to the Upper, December the 7th. It met there with ſo cold a Reception, that it was hardly allow'd a ſecond Reading. Dr. Burnet Biſhop of Salisbury made a very eloquent Speech againſt it, which had a great Influence on that Auguſt Aſſembly.

Biſhop of Sarum's Speech againſt the Bill.

" He ſaid, he was ſenſible it was a Diſadvantage, " eſpecially to one of his Bench to ſpeak againſt " any thing which in the Sound and firſt Appea- " rance ſeem'd to be intended for the Service of " the Church, and that if he was not fully convin- " ced that this Bill was not ſo, he could not have " a Heart or Face to ſpeak againſt it. That he " look'd upon himſelf as bound up in this reſpect, " by his Promiſe in the Addreſs at the Beginning " of the Seſſion. That the Biſhops had been " indecently reflected on, becauſe they could not " think this Bill for the Service of the Church; " But that they appeal'd to the World and their " Dioceſes, as to their true Zeal for the Church, " and were above ſuch Calumnies. That the " capital Proceedings in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, " and the ſevere Act in her 35th Year, that " puniſh'd Meetings with Impriſonment, Baniſh- " ment and Death, was a Blemiſh even of that " glorious Reign. That the Repeal of that Act " paſt in both Houſes, and 'tis well known by what " Management it was not tender'd to the Royal " Aſſent. That the Queen's Treaſurer was known " to be a Church Papiſt, or Occaſional Conformiſt, " and yet continu'd in that great Poſt 14 Years " till his Death. She encourag'd Occaſional Con- " formity, and no body was uneaſy at it.

" That the Severities of King James's Reign " caſt a Blot upon it, and the Proceedings in the " Star-Chamber and High-Commiſſion not a little " contributed to the Miſeries of the Civil-War.

That

A.D.1703. " That the Proceedings in King Charles's Reign " were ſevere, and ſet on with bad Deſigns. " That after the Reſtoration, it had been a very " eaſy Thing to have made up all Differences " among us, but the Deſign was to inflame them. " That all the Severities of that Reign could not " bring the Diſſenters to petition for a general To- " leration. But that the whole Management with " relation to Diſſenters, was an Artifice to ad- " vance a Popiſh Intereſt. That by the Tolera- " tion Act, the Heat rais'd againſt Diſſenters was " much allay'd. But that this Bill alarm'd them, " who apprehended the Toleration was aim'd at, " and that it was a Step that would be follow'd " by more. That this would make Men jealous, " was very unſeaſonable in a Time of War, " when all was at Stake. And that to raiſe " Diſcontents and Apprehenſions in great Num- " bers at ſuch a Time, might have very ill " Effects. That any Thing which divides and " weakens us, muſt give our Allies a melancholy " Proſpect.

" That Things are ſuſpicious, when the Men " that promote them, and write for them with- " out Doors, are known and avow'd Enemies of The Jacobites for the Bill. " the Government. That Leſley, that High- " Church Man, had written two famous Books for " this Bill. That he knew one of the emi- " nenteſt Papiſts ſay, he was of the Church of " England, as by Law eſtabliſh'd. And that be- " ing ask'd how ſuch a Profeſſion could agree " with Sincerity, he anſwer'd, that he look'd " upon all the Laws of Queen Mary as yet in full " Force. That the Fury with which this Mat- " ter was driven, heighten'd the Jealouſy.

" That it was hard that they who had all " their Lives been building up the Church, muſt " now be defam'd as undermining it, becauſe " they could not comply with other Men's No- " tions. That he own'd he began the World " upon Principles of Moderation, which he had " carry'd down through his whole Life, and in " which he hop'd he ſhould continue to his Life's " End. That he could not in the general con- " demn Occaſional Conformity. That he had him- " ſelf practis'd it in Geneva and Holland, and " would do ſo again, if there was Occaſion. That " ſuppoſing the Diſſenters Miſtake, yet he did " not ſee why they might not be Tolerated in it. " That the Diſſenters have all along been call'd " on to come as near the Church as they could. " He added in the Cloſe, after ſeveral other " Reaſons againſt the Bill, that he thought it " ought not to be now entertain'd, but that the " Subject Matter of it ought to be left to be con- " ſider'd at a proper Time.

The Lord Haverſham alſo ſpoke againſt the Bill, and told the Lords, that whether the Poſture of Affairs was conſider'd at Home or Abroad, by Sea, or by Land, in Court or Camp, he could never think this a proper Time for ſuch a Bill. And The Lord Mohun ſaid, Tack the Pretender to it. the Lord Mohun ſaid, If they paſs'd it, they had as good tack the pretended Prince of Wales to it. A Saying that has more Weight in it, than the whole Tract of a late Writer, who without the leaſt Charity to Diſſenters, or Regard to their unalterable Zeal for the Proteſtant Succeſſion, endeavour'd to prove, that no Time can be proper to relieve them. The Duke of Devonſhire, the Earl of Pembroke, the Lord Ferrers, the Lord Wharton, and ſeveral other Noble Lords, ſpeaking againſt the Bill, the Lord Wharton, to ſhew the Unſeaſonableneſs of any Thing that led to perſecuting their Proteſtant Brethren, took Notice of the diſtracted State of Scotland, and of the Inſolence of the Papiſts in Ireland; adding, they ought rather to imitate the Parliament of the latter Kingdom, in their Zeal againſt Popery, than to frame Laws to increaſe Diviſions here. There was a full Houſe when the Bill was brought up, which was what the Majority in the Lower-Houſe did not ſeem to intend; for the Bill was order'd to be carry'd up to the Lords the 7th of December, and was not carry'd up 'till a Week after. The Lord Marquis of Hartington mov'd in the Houſe of Commons, the 9th of December, to know the Reaſon why the Bill was not ſent up according to Order, which occaſion'd a very hot Debate: 'Twas reported that the Pro's and the Cons appeal'd to Mr. Harley, the Speaker, for a Precedent; and that he ſhould declare, he never read nor heard of any. At length the Queſtion was put, whether the Houſe ſhould Adjourn 'till Tueſday the 14th, and it being carry'd in the Affirmative, the Bill was then ſent up to the Lords; who, after a ſecond Reading, rejected it by a Majority of twelve Voices. The Lords reject the Bill.

Noes in Perſon,	59	Yeas in Perſon,	42
Proxies,	12	Proxies,	17
	71		59

Which, ſays a late Hiſtorian, occaſion'd an univerſal Joy in the City of London: Not a Joy of Tumult and Uproar, ſuch as that of a Rabble, but of Contentment and Satisfaction in the Diſappointment of the Enemies to Union and Peace.

I have hinted more than once, that I am oblig'd to make Uſe of Hiſtories, that have no other good Quality to recommend them but Simplicity, and an Air of Truth, which are my ſureſt Defence againſt the Charge of Partiality: And my French Hiſtorian furniſhes me with ſome natural and juſt Reflections upon the Fate of this Bill.

Ala verite Les Cat. Rom. & Les Nonjurants, fondoient de grands Deſſeins ſur le ſuccez de cette Affaire. " 'Tis certain the Papiſts and Nonjurors " had founded great Deſigns on the Succeſs of this " Affair. They wrote in Favour of the Bill, " and the Hopes of ſeeing a Prince of their Reli- " gion on the Throne, reviv'd in Proportion to " the Proſpect they were flatter'd with of the Bill's " paſſing; but the Whig Party had a conſiderable " Majority in the Upper Houſe. The Duke of " Marlborough was accus'd as well as my Lord " Godolphin, of ſolliciting the Members ſecretly to " vote againſt the Bill, and at the ſame Time " voted for it themſelves; for which they were " often call'd, Gens qui nagent entre deux eaux; " Men who ſwam between two Waters. Al- " moſt all the Biſhops voted with the Whigs, and " this Affair, which made ſo much Noiſe, fell in " this ſecond Attempt, and the Tory Party with " it. Their Behaviour had been ſo turbulent, and Tories are inſupportable. " ſo ſeditious, that it was become inſupportable. " There appear'd in their Speeches in Parliament, " in their Converſation, and their Libels, ſo much " Inveteracy againſt Proteſtant Diſſenters, ſo great " Inclination to the Pretender, and ſo little Re- " ſpect to the Houſe of Hanover, that they loſt " their Friends and Protectors. The Queen, " frighted at ſo much Outrage in their Proceed- " ings, ceas'd to put Confidence in them; " and my Lord Godolphin, who 'till then had been " of their Party, left them entirely. One can Inſult the Queen. " hardly expreſs the Noiſe and the Tumult made " by the Tories, when they found they were tum- " bling. The Heads of them threaten'd and in- " ſulted the Queen: The Cry was, the Church is " utterly undone: Her Majeſty, my Lord Trea- " ſurer, my Lord Marlborough, and even the Bi- " ſhops,

Pag. 248. A French Hiſtorian's Reflections on it.

*A.D.*1703. " ſhops, have forſaken it, and are turn'd Fana-
" ticks. l' avoient quittee & embraſſe le Fanati-
" ciſms: The Pulpits reſounded with Invectives
" againſt Moderation: And all thoſe that would
" not puſh Things as far as they would have done,
" were call'd the Church's Enemies.

Duke of Marlborough and Lord Godolphin's Conduct in it.

It was believ'd the Lord Treaſurer, and my Lord Marlborough, acted as above; that they influenc'd ſeveral Members to vote againſt the Bill, and voted for it themſelves. Nay, they went ſo far as to enter their Diſſent, with about twenty other Lords, when it was rejected. Theſe Lords were then at the Head of Affairs, and it was abſolutely neceſſary, for preſerving Confidence with the Allies, that the Bill ſhould not paſs; and it was as neceſſary for keeping fair with the then Majority in the Houſe of Commons, that they ſhould appear for it, which is the moſt that can be made of their Management.

A Conſpiracy in Scotland for the Pretender.

We have obſerv'd that Lord Wharton, ſpeaking againſt the Occaſional Bill, mention'd the Diſtreſſed State of Scotland, which his Nephew Lockhart of Carnwarth, contributed to as much as any other Jacobite in that Kingdom; and a Diſcovery was now made of a Traiterous Correſpondence carry'd on there with the Outlaws at St. Germains, in order to bring in the Pretender. I will make no Uſe of the Sham Lockhart's Memoirs on this Subject, the whole being one continu'd Lye, invented to abuſe the Government's beſt Friends in that Kingdom: Where, long before there was any Talk of it in England, the Privy-Council had ſufficient Reaſon to ſuſpect that the Diſaffected were deeply engag'd in a Conſpiracy for a Rebellion. About the middle of July, three Letters in Cyphers were ſent from London to Edinburgh, under Cover to Mr. David Lindſey, Merchant; and there being two of that Name Merchants, the Perſon for whom thoſe Letters were not intended took them, as directed to him; and opening the Packet, found three Letters, one of them addreſs'd to my Lord the Third, another to my Lord the Seventh, and the third to Phileutherius. He open'd one of the Letters, which was all in Cyphers, except a few Spaniſh Words: He carry'd that, and the other two Letters to the Lord Advocate, who acquainted the Lord Commiſſioner, and the Lord Chancellor with it, and the three Letters were laid before the Privy-Council, who receiv'd no great Satisfaction by their Enquiries concerning them. But that there was ſuch a Treaſonable Correſpondence carrying on, was confirm'd by the ſubſequent Diſcoveries in England. On the 24th of December, the Earl of Scarborough produc'd a Letter from his Brother, acquainting his Lordſhip that ſeveral ſuſpected Perſons, Relations to the Duke of Berwick, were come over, and ſeiz'd in Suſſex; one of them was ſaid to have been the Duke of Berwick's Aid de Camp; but Boucher own'd himſelf to have been in the late King James's Service ſince the Year 1688: Major Mahone, and two or three Perſons more, were taken; as was alſo Sir John Maclean, and his Lady, at Folkſtone in Kent. Other Gentlemen, and ſome Women, who were alſo come from France without Licence, were ſeiz'd in other Places. Theſe Perſons were ſent up to London under a ſtrong Guard; and after having been examin'd by the Earl of Nottingham, Secretary of State, were moſt of 'em committed to the Cuſtody of Meſſengers only. The Lords giving ſtrict Attention to the Earl of Scarborough's Information, the Lord Nottingham told their Lordſhips, The Matter was already before the Queen, and would in a few Days be laid before both Houſes. What follows, ſhews in what an Unroman Age we live, that an Hiſtorian muſt have a Care how he meddles with Truth, when it touches not only the Perſons of ſome Men, when they are Living, but even their Blood, after they are Dead; for can any one think I would otherwiſe uſe the Words of Abel Boyer? " Nevertheleſs, the Ma" jority of the Lords, whether out of an eager
" Zeal for the Safety of the Queen's Perſon and
" Government, or rather, becauſe they did not " think it Prudence to leave the Enquiry of ſo im-
" portant an Affair, in the Hands of a Perſon
" whoſe Affection to the Revolution Settlement had
" been queſtion'd, Reſolv'd to appoint a Committee of their own Members to examine into it; and order'd that Sir John Maclean be brought to their Houſe the next Day. The Duke of Devonſhire, Lord Steward, having on that Day, December the 16th, acquainted the Lords from the Queen,
" That the Examination relating to Sir John
" Maclean was a Matter of that Nicety and great
" Importance, that ſhe thought it would be incon-
" venient to take it out of the Method of Exami-
" nation it was now in, and that her Majeſty
" would in a ſhort Time communicate it to the
" Houſe: Their Lordſhips acquieſced, and or-
" der'd the Lords with the White Staves to attend
" the Queen, to deſire her Majeſty, that Sir John
" Maclean might be committed to cloſe Cuſtody."
The next Day the Queen coming to the Houſe of Peers to paſs the Land-Tax Bill, made a Speech to both Houſes; wherein ſhe acquainted them:

*A.D.*1703.

The Queen tells the Parliament that a Plot was diſcover'd.

THAT ſhe had unqueſtionable Information of very ill Practices and Deſigns carried on in Scotland, by Emiſſaries from France, which might have prov'd extreamly dangerous to the Peace of theſe Kingdoms, as they would ſee by the Particulars, which ſhould be laid before them, as ſoon as the Examination could be fully perfected, and made Publick without Prejudice. And that in the mean Time, ſhe doubted not but by this ſeaſonable Diſcovery, ſhe ſhould be able to give ſuch Directions, as would effectually prevent any ill Conſequences from theſe pernicious Deſigns.

Lords chuſe a Secret Committee.

On the 13th of December, the Lords proceeded by Ballotting, to the Choice of their ſelect Committee, which fell on the Duke of Devonſhire, Duke of Somerſet, Earl of Sunderland, Earl of Scarborough, Lord Somers, Lord Townſhend, Lord Wharton. The Lords voted an Addreſs of Thanks to her Majeſty for her late Speech: In which they ſaid, We deſire not to let our Thoughts go beyond your Majeſty's Perſon to a future Security, but as it is neceſſary for your Majeſty's Preſervation, as well as for ſettling the Minds of all your good Subjects, who look on the Proteſtant Succeſſion as your Majeſty's beſt Security, as well as our own. The Church of England, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, was not forgotten in the Lords Addreſs, nor in the Commons Addreſs upon her Majeſty's laſt Speech, nor in the Queen's moſt gracious Anſwer: Though theſe Addreſſes being about the Scotch Plot, as this was call'd, the mentioning the Church of England did not ſeem to be a Matter, nè de Sujet, as the French ſay, born of the Subject.

Declare the Proteſtant Succeſſion her beſt Security.

The Majority in the Houſe of Commons, who did not like the Lord Nottingham the worſe for being againſt the Revolution Settlement, and did not queſtion but the ſelect Committee of Lords was appointed on purpoſe to bring the Examination of the Plot from the Secretaries Office into the Houſe of Peers, preſented an Addreſs of Reſentment for that Invaſion of her Majeſty's Prerogative. They ſaid,

The Commons Addreſs againſt the Committee.

" WE are therefore ſurpriz'd to find, That
" when ſeveral Perſons ſuſpected of Trea-
" ſonable Practices againſt your Majeſty, were " taken into Cuſtody by your Meſſengers, in or" der

A.D.1703. " der to be examin'd, the Lords, In Violation to " the known Laws of the Land, have wreſted them " out of your Majeſty's Hands, and without your " Majeſty's Leave and Knowledge, in a moſt extraordinary Manner taking the Examination of " them ſolely to themſelves, whereby a due En- " quiry into the evil Practices and Deſigns againſt " your Majeſty's Perſon and Government, may in a " great Meaſure be obſtructed.

It is ſtill very well remember'd, that their Lordſhips taking the Examination to themſelves, was thought by every Soul out of the Majority, to be the only way to hinder that Enquiry's being obſtructed.

The Lords in a former Inſtance complain'd of want of Decorum in an Expreſſion of the Commons relating to them, and it was thought a very ſtrong one now, where they ſaid their Lordſhips acted in Violation of the known Laws of the Land; a Stile not ſurprizing, when one knows that Mr. Henry St. John was Chairman of the Committee for the Addreſs of Thanks, which was accompany'd with a Vote in the Earl of Nottingham's Favour: But the Queen's Anſwer to it, when it was preſented to her, ſhew'd that his Lordſhip was not like to ſupport himſelf at Court, by the good Opinion the High-Church Party had of him then, though afterwards they went from it without any Reaſon. Her Majeſty reply'd coldly enough, I am glad to find you are well ſatisfy'd with the Earl of Nottingham, who is truſted by me in ſo conſiderable a Poſt. The Vote was, That the Earl of Nottingham, one of her Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, for his great Ability and Diligence in the Execution of his Office, for his unqueſtionable Fidelity to the Queen and her Government, and for his ſteady Adherence to the Church of England, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, had highly merited the Truſt her Majeſty had repoſed in him. A Perſon who had been an Officer in the late King James's Army, had lately been ſeiz'd at Berwick, and was diſcharg'd by the Earl of Nottingham's Allowance; which the Houſe having Information of, occaſion'd a very warm Debate two Days ſucceſſively; in which ſevere Reflections were caſt upon the Earl; and this Vote did not entirely take off the Impreſſion they made on the Minds of many.

The Vote in Favour of the Earl of Nottingham.

Queen Anne's Hiſtorian makes theſe homely Remarks upon it: " It was Matter of Wonder " to many to ſee that the Commons, whoſe pro- " per Province it is to take Care of the Liberties " of the Subject, ſhould now appear ſuch zealous " Aſſerters of the Royal Prerogative, and in Op- " poſition to the Houſe of Lords, who are the " natural Defenders of it. But this was entirely " owing to a Party Pique. The Tories, or High- " Church Party, who were the Majority in the " Houſe of Commons, laying hold of all Oppor- " tunities both to ingratiate themſelves with the " Queen, whom they knew to be fond, if not of " the Thing it ſelf, at leaſt of the Sound of Pre- " rogative, and to thwart the Whigs, who had the " Majority in the Houſe of Lords. To this we " may add, that the Tories receiv'd no ſmall En- " couragement from Perſons in High Stations, " who were ready enough to Countenance thoſe " who endeavour'd to ſtifle the Scotch Conſpiracy; as the Earl of Rocheſter, the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, the Earl of Jerſey, the Earl of Nottingham, &c. " On the other Hand, the Lords " highly reſented the Reflections caſt upon them " by the Commons in their laſt Addreſs to the " Queen: Wherefore, to vindicate their Houſe, " and aſſert their Privileges, their Lordſhips Re- " ſolv'd and Declar'd, January the 12th and 13th.

Pag. 109.

A.D.1704. The Lords vindicate themſelves againſt the Commons Addreſs.

That by the known Laws and Cuſtoms of Parliament, they had an undoubted Right, whenever they conceiv'd it to be for the Safety of her Majeſty, and the Kingdom, to take Examinations of Perſons charg'd with Criminal Matters, whether they be in Cuſtody or not; and to order that Perſons to be examin'd, be taken into Cuſtody of her Majeſty's ſworn Officer attending their Houſe. And,

That the ſaid Addreſs of the Commons is Unparliamentary, Groundleſs, without Precedent, and highly injurious to the Peers, tending to interrupt the good Correſpondence between the two Houſes, and create an ill Opinion in her Majeſty of the Houſe of Peers, and of dangerous Conſequence to the Liberties of the People, the Conſtitution of the Kingdom, and Privileges of Parliament.

A Repreſentation upon this Reflection was preſented to the Queen January the 14th, who anſwer'd thus:

My LORDS,

Queen's Anſwer.

I Am very ſorry for any Miſunderſtandings that happen between the two Houſes of Parliament, which are ſo inconvenient for the publick Service, and ſo uneaſy to me, that I cannot but take Notice with Satisfaction, of the Aſſurance you give me, that you will carefully avoid all Occaſion of them. I thank you for the Concern you expreſs for the Rights of the Crown, and for my Prerogative, which I ſhall never exert ſo willingly, as for the Good of my Subjects, and the Protection of their Liberties.

The natural Conſequence of Endeavours us'd by Perſons in Power, to ſtifle the Diſcovery of the Scotch Plot, is the perplex'd and dark Account of it which one meets with. The Sham Lockhart's Memoirs prove ſufficiently, that the Jacobites in Scotland never ceas'd plotting the Reſtoration of the Abdicated King, or his Mock-Heir, from the Abdication to the French intended Invaſion in 1708; and it is monſtrous to think, that the only Interval of their Innocence, was when they were diſcover'd. The Earl of Nottingham deliver'd to the Houſe of Lords ſome Papers relating to the Plot, on the 29th of January, but the Lords preſented an Addreſs for more, which her Majeſty was pleas'd to term preſſing of her.

There were two or three Things in the Conduct of the Earl of Nottingham, which occaſion'd much Speculation.

Three Things charg'd upon Nottingham.

One was the Diſcharge of the Perſon ſeiz'd at Berwick; another was the giving Ear to the Information of that prodigious Villain, Ferguſon, whom the ſuſpected Perſons made Uſe of to clear them of the Treaſon they were in danger of being charg'd with; and a third was, the permitting the Duke of Athol, one of the Perſons nam'd by Sir John Maclean to have had Intelligence with St. Germains, to have Sight of all the Papers concerning the Plot, before they were ſhewn to the Lords, which enabled him to draw up a plauſible Memorial in his Defence, and as Ferguſon had contriv'd, to make the whole turn upon the Duke of Queenſberry, as a ſham Conſpiracy of his making, to ruin the Dukes of Hamilton and Athol, and others; who, if Lockhart's Memoirs were to be credited, had done enough to ruin themſelves.

The Villain Ferguſon truſted.

This Memorial of the Duke of Athol, was read by him to the Scotch Council, the Queen preſent, the 18th of January. I ſhall only repeat the Concluſion of it, on which the Duke laid great Streſs; His Grace, as well as the Duke of Hamilton, were mention'd by Sir John Maclean, the laſt Perſon who came from St. Germains; and

Duke of Athol's Memorial againſt the Plot.

A.D.1704. ſaid, he had Inſtructions to ſound or try both their Graces. But this was rather a Vindication; for ſince they were to be ſounded, they were not engag'd, or had Correſpondence there: By all which the World might judge of the reſt of the malicious Calumnies. Let it go upon that Iſſue; Maclean comes to England with Inſtructions to engage the Scots to raiſe a Rebellion. The Scheme of it is form'd at St. Germains; he comes over into England, in order to get into Scotland over Land, and carry on the Work there. Would he attempt to ſound theſe Dukes, if he was not ſure that he might do it ſafely? Or would the St. Germains People ſend him to Perſons in whom they had not entire Confidence, and in whoſe Power it was to knock that and all ſuch Deſigns on the Head with a Breath, if they did not approve them? Pag. 111. " By this Ma-
" nagement it manifeſtly appears, ſays the Hiſto-
" rian quoted laſt, that the Duke of Athol, one of
" the principal Perſons ſuſpected, had either the " Peruſal or Information from the Secretary of " State, of the Contents of the Letters, Declara-
" tions and Examinations relating to the Scottiſh
" Conſpiracy, before the ſame were communi-
" cated to the Houſe of Lords. A Circumſtance
" which ſhews that the ACCUSED were more
" countenanc'd than the Accuſers; ſo that it was
" no difficult Matter for the former to put a Slur
" upon the Plot.

The Villain Ferguſon's Declaration has ſo little of his former Cunning in it, that it could have impos'd on no body that was not very willing to be impos'd upon. " One of the chief Reaſons that
" may be aſſign'd for the Conduct of the Court
" in this and other like Occaſions, is, that the " Queen, and thoſe ſhe entruſted with her moſt
" intimate Thoughts, took for current Coin,
" what Mr. Ferguſon ſolemnly declar'd." His very firſt Words are ſuch a Parcel of barefac'd Lies, that if the wicked Wretch had not deſerv'd to be hang'd for Treaſon, he ſhould have been laſh'd for his Impudence. There is not a Nonjuror, or one reckon'd a Jacobite, engag'd in a Plot againſt her Majeſty and the Government: And it is ſo far from giving them Uneaſineſs, that they heartily bleſs'd God, execrable Miſcreant! the Monarchy is preſerv'd againſt the Deſign of the Republicans; and that one of the Serene Family of the Stuarts poſſeſſes the Sovereignty, in ſpite of all the Endeavours of ſuch as would have ſupplanted her, had the late King William liv'd, or would have brought either the Princeſs Sophia of Hanover, or the Prince, her Son, into England or Scotland, during her Reign, ſince his Deceaſe. Was ſuch Stuff as this fit for her Majeſty to hear, or for the Lord Nottingham or Lord Rocheſter to Countenance? His Declaration is all of a Piece, and intended chiefly to invalidate the Evidence of Captain Simon Frazer, Lord Lovat, who was driven out of Scotland by a Commiſſion of Fire and Sword, for a Rape committed on the Body and Goods of the Lady Dowager Lovat, the Duke of Athol's Siſter, who kept Poſſeſſion of the Lord Lovat's Eſtate, to which Captain Frazer laid Claim, and thought to have made the Poſſeſſion of it the eaſier, by poſſeſſing himſelf firſt of the Perſon of the Lady, which was done in an unwarrantable Manner; and a Commiſſion of Sword and Fire iſſu'd out againſt him as an Outlaw, impowering Brigadier James Maitland Governor of Fort-William, Captain William Grant, and other Officers and Soldiers, in Caſe of Reſiſtance, to purſue to the Death, the ſaid Simon Frazer, to purſue and aſſege Houſes or Strengths, raiſe Fire, and uſe all Force, &c. which I Particularize, becauſe it is the ſame ſort of Commiſſion that was iſſu'd againſt Glenco in King William's Time, and the ſame that is always iſſu'd againſt ſuch Outlaws, as Glenco was.

Ferguſon's impudent and abſurd Lies.

A.D.1704. Captain Frazer went to the Court of St. Germains, and getting Intelligence of what was contriving there againſt the Queen and Government, gave Information of it to the Duke of Queensberry; all which Intelligence the Duke of Athol endeavour'd to quaſh, by the Character of Frazer; but it being a Family Caſe, the inſiſting upon it was with the leſs Decency, if not with the leſs Juſtice. To get him the more Credit at St. Germains, Captain Frazer went to the Highlands in Scotland, to confer with Sir Ewin Cameron, Sir Donald Macdonal, Stuart of Apin, and other Heads of Clans, who aſſur'd him they would riſe in Arms with Ten Thouſand Men, if the French King would ſupply them with Money, Arms, and Five Thouſand Soldiers from Dunkirk. Frazer apply'd to Maclean when he came to France, who introduc'd him to the Queen Dowager Abdicate, and he gave her an Account of his Negotiations in the Highlands; but the Execution of the Plot was deferr'd, becauſe the French King could not ſpare Men, nor had a Fleet in a Condition to oppoſe the Engliſh. Maclean own'd all this, and Frazer had communicated a great deal of it to the Duke of Queenſberry; which Information coming from ſeveral Perſons, and not in Concert, admits of no Doubt, as to the Truth of it. Add to this, Mr. Stanhope, her Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary in Holland, wrote a Letter to Secretary Hedges, July the 9th, importing, " He had re-
" ceiv'd a Letter, dated as from Amſterdam, the
" Contents of which were of ſuch Concern, that
" he thought it his Duty to tranſmit it to Mr.
" Secretary:" Theſe Contents were, That there was ſomething againſt the Queen and Government working in England, Scotland and Ireland; for there, at Amſterdam, were great Remittances of Money from Paris, and from Liſle; to the Duke of Hamilton 50000 Piſtoles; to Sir Robert Hamilton 25000 Piſtoles, moſt of which Money was already drawn for. A Letter alſo was laid before the Houſe of Lords, from the late King James's Queen, dated May the 20th, when theſe Projects were on the Anvil at St. Germains, the Contents as follows:

Captain Frazer diſcovers the Plot.

YOU may be ſure that when any Concerns require the Help of my Friends, you are one of the firſt I have in View: I am ſatisfy'd you will not be wanting for any Thing that may be in your Power, according to your Promiſe; and you may be aſſur'd of all ſuch Returns as you can expect from me and mine. The Bearer, who is known to you, will tell you more of my Friendſhip to you, and how much I rely on yours for me, and thoſe I am concern'd for.

Queen Dowager Abdicati's Letter.

There was no intelligible Directions to this Letter, only to L. M. Y. But it proves beyond Queſtion, that ſhe and her Emiſſaries had their Irons in the Fire; and it behov'd the French King, who was diſtreſs'd by the Deſertion of the King of Portugal, and Duke of Savoy, to ſet 'em a working as well as he cou'd.

The Lords on the 15th of February, the Duke of Bolton in the Chair, reſolv'd on an Addreſs to the Queen to have ſtill more Papers laid before them, and ſay, among other good Things,

WE are deeply ſenſible that your Majeſty and your People cannot be ſafe, while the Deſigns of the Emiſſaries of France, and the Abettors of the pretended Prince of Wales in any part of your Dominions, are not thoroughly ſearch'd into and diſcover'd; and that an imperfect partial Enquiry into them, will rather encourage than prevent them.

It is upon this Account, that with ſo much dutiful Zeal, which we are ſure will be always acceptable

A.D.1704. to your Majeſty, we deſire to have all the Information we can before we proceed to offer to your Majeſty our humble Advice of what may beſt contribute in the preſent Juncture, to the Honour and Safety of your Majeſty, and the Security and Tranquility of your Dominions.

And upon this Occaſion we preſume to renew to your Majeſty the Promiſe made in our Addreſs of the 16th of January laſt; That no Dangers nor Reproaches, nor Artifices whatſoever, ſhall deter or divert us from uſing our utmoſt Endeavours from time to time in diſcovering and oppoſing all Contrivances and Attempts againſt your Royal Perſon and Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, as by LAW ESTABLISH'D. All the Papers not being ready, her Majeſty told them they ſhould have a particular Anſwer with all convenient ſpeed.

On the firſt of March the Lords order'd Major Richard Bowcher, Sir Thomas Stewart, alias Lord Belkasky, and Mr. Jackſon of Gray's-Inn to be taken into Cuſtody in order to Examination; and on the 20th of March, his Grace the Duke of Somerſet reported from the ſecret Committee the Examinations of Sir John Maclean and his Lady, Colin Campbel, William Keith, David Lindſay, Mr. Fox, Thomas Clarke, Mr. Corbuſier, Capt. Meers, Mr. Patrick Oliphant, Mr. Ogleby, Sir Thomas Stewart, and Robert Fergu ſon, with Remarks upon them, and the Subſtance of four Giberiſh Letters which were interpreted by a Perſon who offer'd himſelf to do it for the Reward of 500 l. publiſh'd in the Queen's Proclamation for that purpoſe at the Requeſt of the Lords, on Condition alſo that no body but the Queen and the Lords of the Committee ſhould be made acquainted with his Key. The Report of the Secret Committee of Lords being taken into Conſideration by the Houſe, March 22, their Lordſhip's Reſolv'd, Vote of the Lords about the Plot.

I. That it did appear to the Houſe, that there had been a dangerous Conſpiracy carried on for raiſing a Rebellion in Scotland, and invading that Kingdom with a French Power, in order to the ſubverting of her Majeſty's Government, both in England and Scotland, and the bringing in the pretended Prince of Wales. II. That it was the Opinion of this Houſe, that nothing had given ſo much Encouragement to this Conſpiracy, as that the immediate Succeſſion to the Crown of Scotland, after her preſent Majeſty and the Heirs of her Body, was not declar'd to be in the Princeſs Sophia, and the Heirs of her Body being Proteſtants. III. That the Queen would be pleas'd to uſe her endeavours, by ſuch Methods as ſhe ſhould think moſt proper, to have the Succeſſion of the Crown of Scotland declar'd to be ſettled on the Princeſs Sophia, and to take ſuch Meaſures as might beſt conduce to the Diſappointing and Fruſtrating of the Deſigns of her Enemies, who were engag'd in this Conſpiracy againſt her Majeſty and her Government. IV. That her Majeſty be aſſur'd, that when her Endeavours ſhall take Effect, for ſettling of the Succeſſion, this Houſe would do all in their Power to promote the entire Union between the two Kingdoms for their mutual Security and Advantage. Theſe Reſolutions were order'd to be drawn into an Addreſs, and the Lord Keeper by order, gave the Lords Committees the Thanks of the Houſe for their Exactneſs, Care and Fidelity in the Examination of the Scotiſh Conſpiracy. They recommended Sir John Maclean to the Queen for Pardon and Subſiſtence, though he afterwards ill deſerv'd it. In the Debate about him the Earl of Nottingham's Conduct was again call'd in Queſtion, but it was clear'd by a Majority of 11 Voices. Fergu ſon's Declarations, there being two of them, which were ſaid before to be taken for current Coin by that Lord and other Miniſters, were voted to be Falſe, Scandalous and Seditious, contriv'd to ſtifle the Conſpiracy, tending to create an ill Opinion in her Majeſty of her good Subjects, and to promote the Intereſt of the pretended Prince of Wales. A late Author writes, "Then the Houſe taking "notice, that either through the Negligence or "Connivance of ſome Miniſters, Mr. Fergu ſon "was not as yet cenſur'd for the ſaid Papers deli- "ver'd by him to the Cabinet Council; it was "Reſolv'd, That the not paſſing a Cenſure upon "Mr. Robert Fergu ſon's two Papers, nor ordering "him to be taken into Cuſtody, was a great En- "couragement to her Majeſty's Enemies, and of "dangerous Conſequence to the Government and "the Proteſtant Succeſſion as ESTABLISH'D "by Law." They order'd Sir Edward Northey, Attorney General, to proſecute him, and committed him cloſe Priſoner to Newgate. But nothing was done to him; and nothing in the World can be more certain than on this Occaſion, and all others, where the Jacobite Traytors have been brought into Danger by their treaſonable Practices againſt the Government ever ſince the late King James was forefaulted in Scotland; High-Church has endeavour'd to deliver them, to ſcreen them from Puniſhment; and ever ſince the Proteſtant Succeſſion was eſtabliſh'd by Law, to ſhew their Averſion to it by repeated Marks of Diſregard and Indignity.

A.D.1704.

The Lords order Ferguſon to be proſecuted.

Every one believ'd that the true Source of the Miſunderſtandings between the two Houſes was the Lords rejecting the Occaſional Conformity Bill, and their putting a Slur on the Conduct of a Miniſter who had been ſo highly approv'd by them for his Zeal to the Church; a Word ſacred and venerable in itſelf, but us'd by the Tories to ſignify Places, Power and Perſecution; and whatever her Majeſty ſaid to preſerve a good Underſtanding between Lords and Commons, the Majority in the Lower-Houſe ſeem'd determin'd to follow their Blow to the end of the Seſſion, if not to the end of the Parliament, as they did, particularly in the Ayleſbury Buſineſs.

The Caſe was this.

The Aylesbury Buſineſs.

One Matthew Aſhby commenc'd and proſecuted an Action at Common Law againſt William White Conſtable of Ayleſbury, a Borough where Sir John Packington was Lord of the Manor, and the Conſtable of his or his Tenants making, who had refus'd to admit Aſhby's Vote at the Election of Burgeſſes to ſerve in Parliament; and Aſhby by Direction of my Lord Wharton, and at his Expence brought this Action againſt White for having by Contrivance, fraudulently and maliciouſly hinder'd him to give his Vote at the Election for Burgeſſes for Ayleſbury, where Sir John Packington ſtood Candidate, as he did alſo for Worceſterſhire; and his ſtanding at Ayleſbury was to make room for Mr. Simon Harcourt, Clerk of the Crown, who attended Jefferys as his Clerk in the Weſtern Butchery. In this Action a Verdict was found for Aſhby in the Country, but Judgment was given againſt him in the Court of Queen's Bench, which was revers'd upon a Writ of Error brought in the Houſe of Lords, where he obtain'd Judgment to recover his Damages, and afterwards had Execution upon that Judgment. The 5 other Inhabitants of Ayleſbury, John Paty, John Oviat, John Paton, Henry Baſs and Daniel Horn, follow'd the Example of Aſhby, and brought Actions againſt White and other Ayleſbury Conſtables, in order to recover their Damages. But Packington and Harcourt being in ſo fair a way to be thrown out of Ayleſbury for ever, High-Church took the Alarm at thoſe Proceſſes and got the Majority, then at Variance with the Lords, to interpoſe in the Matter. Accordingly, the five Ayleſbury Men were ſummon'd to appear at the Bar of the Houſe of Commons; their Actions were voted, January 26, to be ſo many Breaches of Privilege, and the five Men

That the Scots Crown might be ſettled on the Houſe of Hanover.

The Lords Committees thank'd.

*A.D.*1704. Men were sent to Newgate, where they were maintain'd chiefly at Lord Wharton's Charge, who gave them Cloaths and Money, and the Fellows behav'd with great Cunning and Resolution. Their Council, Mr. Lechmere, afterwards Lord Lechmere, Sir James Montagu, afterwards Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, Sir Francis Page, Sir Alexander Denton, both Judges at this time, mov'd the Court of Queen's Bench for a Habeas Corpus for them, and pleaded their Cause to the Satisfaction of my Lord Chief Justice Holt; but three other Judges, Judge Gould, Judge Powel, and Judge Powis, gave their Opinion that the Aylesbury Men were not Bailable, being committed by the House of Commons; upon which they were remanded to Newgate: And John Paty and John Oviat, petition'd for a Writ of Error to bring the Cause before her Majesty in Parliament. The Commons voted an Address to the Queen, that she would not grant such a Writ; and Resolv'd, That the Aylesbury Men's Council had been guilty of a Breach of Privilege, and should be taken into Custody of the Serjeant at Arms. They order'd their Serjeant to fetch the Aylesbury Men from Newgate, lest they should get out by a Writ of Error; and that Order was executed at Midnight with such Circumstances of Severity and Terror as have been seldom exercis'd towards the greatest Offenders. Let us remember the Terror and Severity exercis'd towards the five Kentish Petitioners, by a High-Church Majority; and let us observe how impossible it is for a persecuting Spirit to prevail and not shew itself in Acts alike severe and terrible. The Lord Wharton got Petitions in Behalf of the Aylesbury Men presented to the House of Lords, who came to several Resolutions in their favour.

The Commons unheard of Severities against the Aylesbury Men.

Particularly, That a Writ of Error is not a Writ of Grace, but of Right: That the Denial of it is an Obstruction of Justice; and that the House of Commons in their Votes against the Prisoners Council, has deny'd them the necessary Assistance to procure their Liberty. This Difference between the Lords and Commons occasion'd a free Conference. The Managers for the Lords, were the Duke of Devonshire, the Earl of Sunderland, the Bishop of Salisbury, the Lord Halifax and the Lord Wharton. The Managers for the Commons, Sir Simon Harcourt, Mr. Bromley, and others of the same Stamp, who took hold of all Occasions to reflect on my Lord Wharton, whom they look'd upon as the main Actor in this Affair. And though his Lordship did not appear in it openly, yet they turn'd the keenest of their Weapons against him, as in particular in Answer to a Resolution of the Lords, That neither House of Parliament hath any Power to create themselves any new Privilege. Sir Simon Harcourt said, The Lords had assum'd an Incroachment in Judicature, in their unwarrantable Proceedings upon the Petition of Thomas Lord Wharton, complaining of an Order of the Court of Exchequer, bearing Date the 15*th of* July 1701, for filing the Record of a Survey of the Manor of Richmond, and Lordship of Middleham in the County of York; an Attempt, which contrary to the ancient legal Judicature of Parliament heretofore excercis'd for the Relief of the Subject oppress by the Force of great Men of the Realm, was in favour of one of their own Body. The Lords obsery'd in their Replication, That the Managers for the Commons went off to Foreign Matters, of which they would then take no notice; one of those Managers said, he believ'd Ashby had been spirited up and supported in this Prosecution as well as the other five Aylesbury Men. They ask'd Why such an Action had not been brought before? and were answer'd, Few Men had such a true English Spirit as Ashby. Mr. Bromley call'd it a Spirit of Faction, which was the Language of all Tory Addressers against the Liberties of English Men in King Charles IId's Reign. He added, Ashby or somebody else for him, has expended in this Suit above 100*l. more than the Damages he receiv'd from* White came to. This Conference and others on the same Matter, ending without Success, the Lords petition'd the Queen for a Writ of Error for the Men of Aylesbury; and the Queen in her Answer said, she should have granted it, but that the sudden End of the Session would necessarily discharge them. In which Expression her Majesty confirm'd the Judgment of the House of Lords, as opposite as it was to the Majority in the then House of Commons. *A.D.*1704

Differences about them between the two Houses.

Sir Simon Harcourt reflects on Lord Wharton.

The Richmond and Middleham Business just mention'd was brought into the House by Charles Bathurst, Esq; and a Vote past against it January the 7th. Abel Boyer, says the Commons took Occasion to carp at the Proceedings of the Lords. On the 27th of March the Lords Resolv'd and Declar'd, " That the House of Commons taking it upon " them by their Votes, to condemn a Judgment of " the House of Lords, given in a Cause depending " before this House in the last Session of Parliament, " upon the Petition of Thomas Lord Wharton, " and to declare what the Law is, in Contradiction " to the Proceedings of the House of Lords, is " without Precedent, Unwarrantable, and an Usur- " pation of a Judicature to which they have no sort " of Pretence.

Among these arduous Affairs, amidst those of the most dangerous War England was ever concern'd in, considering the Stake she had in it, the same Majority found Leisure to fall upon John Tutchin, Author of the Observator which came out Weekly, for presuming to make some Remarks upon Sir John Packington's Speech; and order'd him, How the Printer, and Bragg his Publisher, to be taken into Custody of their Serjeant at Arms: But they all kept out of the way, the House not being likely to sit long; and the Proclamation the Queen publish'd upon an Address of the House for apprehending them, did not answer the Charge and Trouble of it.

Some Days before this, the Queen sent a Message to the House of Commons in favour of the Poor Clergy, That she would not only remit the Arrears of their Tenths, but for an Augmentation of their Maintenance would make a Grant to them of her whole Revenue of First Fruits and Tenths. They who have liv'd thirty Years after, can make a better Judgment of what follows in that Message, than could be done before any Experiment. And if the House of Commons could find any proper Method by which her Majesty's good Intentions to the Poor Clergy might be made more effectual, it would be a great Advantage to the Publick and acceptable to her Majesty, The Commons return'd her Majesty Thanks in an Address, February 11, and promised to do their utmost to make her Majesty's charitable Intentions most effectual; it being so much for the Advantage of the Publick. The Commons unanimously Resolv'd upon an Address, acknowledging her Majesty's great Goodness in communicating the Papers relating to the Conspiracy, of which they say not a word more in their Address. But in answer to the Lords Representation touching it; they Address'd again in Vindication of her Majesty's Prerogative, and desire her to take to herself the Examination of that Conspiracy. Their Reason for it was, That the establishing a Committee of seven Lords for the sole Examination of the said Conspiracy, was of dangerous Consequence, and might tend to the Subversion of the Government, which no body dream'd of without Doors, but those that were within the Pale of High-Church.

A.D.1704. The Lords having made an Enquiry into the preſent Condition of the Navy, order'd the Obſervations they had made to be put into an Addreſs, wherein they ſaid, That by Reaſon of the great want of Men, the allow'd Complement for the whole Number of Ships, neceſſary for the Defence of the Kingdom, could not be depended upon; they thought it a Duty incumbent on them to make an humble Application to her Majeſty, deſiring that ſhe would be pleas'd to give ſpeedy and effectual Orders, that ſuch a Number of Ships, proper for the home Service, might be forthwith got ready and mann'd. I do not ſee why this ſhould be thought a Side-Wind Reflection upon his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Denmark, as Lord High-Admiral, and not rather a direct Reflection on Sir George Rook, and George Churchil, Eſq; who were known to be the Chief Directors of the Affairs of the Navy. The Queen anſwer'd, She was glad they found no greater Number of Seamen wanting at this Seaſon of the Year; and ſhe hop'd ſuch Meaſures were already taken that no Service ſhould be diſappointed either at home or abroad which was neceſſary for the Security and Advantage of the Kingdom, or the Protection and Encouragement of Trade. Beſides their Lordſhips former Vote againſt Admiral Graydon, they Reſolv'd, March 23, to Addreſs her Majeſty to remove Admiral Graydon from all Places of Truſt in the Government, for Impreſſing Servants in the Weſt-Indies on board his Squadron, to the Ruin and Deſtruction, and againſt the Laws of thoſe Iſlands; and that her Majeſty would be pleas'd to order her Attorney-General to proſecute him at Law for the ſame. But it muſt be own'd, that the Addreſſes of this nature, if they came not from Tories, had very little effect in the Beginning and End of this Reign. The next Day the Lords took into Conſideration the Report of the Commiſſioners of the Publick Accounts in what related to the Earl of Orford, as late Treaſurer of the Navy, and Reſolv'd, That he had made up his Accounts very fairly.

Lords Addreſs againſt Admiral Graydon.

They Vote that the Earl of Orford had made up his Accounts fairly.

After the Houſe of Lords had voted the Reſolutions of the Commons in the Caſe of Richmond and Middleham Record to be unwarrantable, &c. their Lordſhips paſt ſeveral Votes in Oppoſition to thoſe of the Commons about the Affair of Aſhby and White. They addreſs'd the Queen, March 31, to put none into the Commiſſion of the Peace but Men of Quality and Eſtates, and of known Affection to her Majeſty's Title and Government and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, &c. It was ſuppos'd that the whole Addreſs had eſpecial Regard to the Succeſſion of the Houſe of Hanover, whoſe Enemies have always been countenanc'd when High-Church has been at the Helm, and moſt aſſuredly always will be till they are reconcil'd to Principles of Liberty and Moderation. The ſame Day their Lordſhips laid before the Queen a Repreſentation, in Anſwer to the Commons Addreſs againſt their Proceedings, in relation both to the Scots Plot and the Aylesbury Men: The Concluſion of which was the expreſſing the juſt Senſe they had of that virtuous and truly Royal Moderation, which her Majeſty had ſhewn upon this Occaſion, in not ſuffering herſelf to be prevail'd upon to do any thing to the Prejudice of the Conſtitution, from whatſoever Hands the Invitation came. Her Majeſty's Anſwer was, I hope none of my Subjects have any deſire to leſſen the Prerogative, ſince I have no Thoughts of making uſe of it but for their Protection and Advantage: And I look upon it as a great Misfortune, when any Miſunderſtandings happen between both Houſes of Parliament, which cannot be without ſo much Prejudice to the Publick, that I ſhall never omit any thing in my Power to prevent the Occaſion of them. What a glorious Stand the Lords made againſt the Violence of High-Church in the firſt Parliament, of which Mr. Robert Harley was Speaker, and in this, of which he was alſo Speaker, has been ſet in a full Light before us; and the Hopes of all good Britons will always center in their Lordſhips; if ever ſuch Men ſhould again ſo far impoſe upon the People as to be entruſted by them.

A.D.1704. The glorious Conduct of the Lords.

We have only to mention the moſt important Acts paſt by her Majeſty on the 24th of February and 3d of April. As,

An Act for granting an Aid to her Majeſty by ſelling Annuities.

An Act for the Increaſe of Seamen, the better Encouragement of Navigation, and the Security of the Coal Trade.

An Act for Regiſtring of Deeds in the Weſt-Riding of the County of York.

An Act for granting to her Majeſty an additional Subſidy of Tonnage and Poundage.

An Act for the better Regulating the Duty upon Salt.

An Act for the more regular paying the Annuities to the Bankers.

An Act for the Augmentation of the Maintenance of the Poor Clergy.

The Clergy Act paſt.

An Act for raiſing the Recruits for the Land Forces and Marines.

When this Bill was depending, there was a Project offer'd to raiſe Men, by obliging the ſeveral Pariſhes to furniſh ſuch a Number; which was dropp'd becauſe the Practice was ſo in France and the Government there was Deſpotick. A Speech was made againſt it in the Houſe of Commons, compos'd of many ſuch weighty Reaſons, and concluding thus, As promoting this Bill in general does directly tend to ſubject the Rights of the Commons of England to an illegal and arbitrary Power, therefore I deſire it may be left to be the Act of a more arbitrary King or Queen, and a more ſervile Houſe of Commons. However, many thought that the ridding the Country of looſe, idle and diſorderly Perſons, who are a Poſt and Burthen to a Commonwealth, was a Buſineſs which the Magiſtrates and Pariſh Officers were the moſt proper Judges of; and that when a Law was made to impower them to ſend away ſuch to the Army, it could not juſtly be call'd Arbitrary; and that the French doing it, could be no more an Argument againſt it, than their laying aſide Pikes, and uſing Muskets and Bayonets inſtead of them, was a Reaſon for our not doing ſo.

Her Majeſty made a ſhort Speech at the Cloſe of the Seſſion, April 3, in which was this remarkable Paragraph.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Queen's Speech.

At the opening of this Seſſion I did earneſtly expreſs my Deſires of ſeeing you in perfect Unity among your ſelves, as the moſt effectual Means imaginable to diſappoint the Ambition of our Enemies, and reduce them to an honourable and laſting Peace; and tho' this has not met with all the Succeſs which I wiſh'd and expected; yet being fully convinc'd, that nothing is ſo neceſſary to our Common Welfare, I am not diſcourag'd from perſiſting in the ſame earneſt Deſires, that you would go down into your ſeveral Countries, ſo diſpoſed to Moderation and Unity, as becomes all thoſe who are join'd together in Religion and Intereſt.

Remarkable Paragraph in it.

This I am perſwaded will ſoon make you ſenſible, that nothing, next to the Bleſſing of God, can ſo much contribute to our Succeſs abroad, and to our Safety at home.

The Queen having ended her Speech, the Parliament was prorogu'd to the 4th of July.

The Duke of Marlborough and Lord Godolphin, who had been all their Life-time of the Party of High-Church, till being at the Head of Affairs, they found it was impoſſible to carry on the War with a

A.D. 1704. Sett of Men who were in no manner of Credit either abroad or at home, either for Honesty or Capacity, for their Concern to preserve the Protestant Religion or the Liberties of Europe, or for any thing but themselves and Church, though most of their Leaders were seldom seen within the Doors of it: These great Ministers, supported by the Encouragement of Prince George of Denmark, and the continual Insinuations of a Lady, then neareſt the Queen's Person and Heart, overcame her Majesty's strong Inclination to the Cause for which she had so often heard it said in the Pulpit, her Royal Grandfather was a Martyr; and prevail'd with her to put her Affairs into such Hands as her Allies and her best Subjects could confide in. The Exhortation to Peace, Union and Moderation from the Throne, alarm'd the Enemies to the Protestant Religion and Succession, and they doubted not but their Day would be short; yet as moderate Counsels were inconsistent with their Character, they knew not how to bring themselves into Temper, and suffer'd the Frenzy to grow upon them to such a Degree that the Queen herself grew weary and afraid of them. La Reine effrayee de Voir des Conseils si ont reez neut plus de Confiance eu eux. And My Lord Godolphin, qui jusque alors avoit eu de l' Inclination pour ce Party, l'abandonna entirement. Il etoit difficile de raconter les Clameurs & les Tumultes que les Torys eleverent quandils se voyent echouer La Reine fut menacee & insutee par quelques Chefs de Party, &c. " The Queen was frighted at such " furious Proceedings, and had no more Confi- " dence in them. My Lord Godolphin, who till " then inclin'd to that Party abandon'd them " entirely. 'Tis hard to tell what Clamours and " Tumults were rais'd by the Tories when they " found themselves tumbling. The Queen was " threaten'd and insulted by the Heads of them." Another Historian of the same Nation expresses himself thus upon it.

Queen grows uneasy with High Church.

Their Clamour.

" By this time the Queen's Favourite and her " Prime Minister, perceiv'd that the High-Church " Party were grown headstrong and unmanageable, " and that in Conjunction with the avow'd Friends " to the pretended Prince of Wales, they promoted " Designs, which either they themselves were " averse to, or which at least they thought incon- " sistent with their present Schemes; hereupon, " though with some Difficulty, the Queen was " perswaded to lay aside the Earl of Nottingham, " Principal Secretary of State, the main Support " of the High-Church Party. The Person pitch'd " upon to succeed him, was Robert Harley, Esq; " a Gentleman of an ancient Family but moderate " Fortune, &c. I cannot go farther into that Character without breaking in upon the Gravity and Decency of History; so I leave it to those that Delight in such Pictures, and content myself with the Sketches of it to be met with in the Writings of others. And of this same Person, Mr. Maynwaring who knew him perfectly well, writes, The Superiority of his Genius consists in nothing else but an inexhaustible Store of Political Fictions; he had another Term for it; which he plentifully distributes every Minute he speaks, and by an unparallel'd Generosity forgets, and consequently contradicts in the next half Hour. He never yet consider'd whether any Proposition was true or false, but whether it were convenient for the present Minute or Company to affirm or deny it; so that if you think to refine upon him, by interpreting every thing he says as we do Dreams, by the contrary, you are still to seek, and will find yourselves equally deceiv'd whether you believe him or no. And in this Light you must look upon the Zeal his profest for the Succession of the House of Hanover, which made his Advancement at this time the more acceptable. He valu'd himself so much upon his having promoted the Act of Succession, that he caus'd his Picture to be drawn with the Label of the said Act in his Hand; but afterwards, not only conniv'd at Sir Patrick Lawless being admitted Access in the Court of England, tho' an Irish Outlaw'd Papist in the Pretenders Service, but had warm Words in the House of Lords with the Earl of Wharton, who made a Motion for an Address to the Queen to use her most pressing Instances for removing that Sham Prince, not only out of Lorrain, but out of all Dominions whose Princes were in Amity with her Majesty. Yet it was the Opinion the well affected had of his good Will to the Protestant Succession, and a Notion of the Dissenters, that as he was bred in their Schools and Academies, he would remember old Kindnesses, which made People to be generally pretty well pleas'd with his Promotion to an Office, for which those, who were really fit did not think him so. The last cited Historian, pretends that one of the Conditions upon which he accepted the Seals, was, that Mr. Henry St. John should be made Secretary at War in the Room of Mr. Blaithwayte; which is likely enough to be true from the Agreement between these two Gentlemen in Morals as well as Politicks. But it is not true in Fact; for the above-mention'd Mr. Maynwaring, who had the greatest Share of any Man in the Friendship and Confidence of the Duke of Marlborough and the Lord Godolphin, tells us, speaking of this Mr. Henry St. John, He had very great Obligations to his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, to whose Favour he in a great Measure ow'd the Distinction he had in the World, and had a double Salary allow'd him; yet notwithstanding this, and several other Obligations, did he in his Libels treat their Graces the Duke and Dutchess of Marlborough, as Plagues, Furies, &c. One would think, adds Mr. Maynwaring, this foul-mouth'd Writer had receiv'd some particular Injuries, either from this great Lady, or from her Husband, &c. Such were these two Ministers, who set out in the World together in the Ministry; and we shall see hereafter into what a miserable State this poor Nation was brought by them, when there was none but the Queen to be a Check upon their Conduct. Mr. Harley, continues the same Historian with the same Truth, insisted also that his Friend and Countryman, Thomas Mansel, Esq; should be made Comptroller of the Queen's Household in the Room of Sir Edward Seymour, who was turn'd out for his Arrogance and Turbulency; and being at the Bath when he heard of it, said he would send the Queen his Staff by the Carrier. The Earl of Jersey was remov'd from being Lord Chamberlain, and his Staff given to the Earl of Kent, who with Mr. Mansel and Mr. Harley was sworn of the Privy-Council about the Beginning of May.

A.D. 1704. Mr. Robert Harley made Secretary of State.

Mr. Henry St John's Ingratitude to the Duke of Marlborough who rais'd him.

Whigs Examination.

Earl of Nottingham remov'd.

Removes and Promotions. Sir Edward Seymour turn'd out for his Arrogance.

Upon the breaking up of the Parliament, a Pamphlet was publish'd, entitled, Legions humble Address to the Lords; wherein the Proceedings of the Commons, with relation to the five Aylsbury Men, and the Examination of the Scotch Plot, were reflected on with great Freedom, and with what Truth, let the Reader determine. The throwing the Aylesbury Men into Gaol, was tax'd as Arbitrary, Illegal, contrary to the Liberties of Englishmen, destructive of the Rights of Elections, and an Invasion of the Nations Judicature. And as to the other, it was suggested, That the caressing her Majesty with the Title of a Queen sitting on the Throne of her Ancestors, by Right of Succession from her Father, when at the same Time they knew her Right depended upon the Validity of Parliamentary Limitations, and was built on the Foot of the late Revolution and the Act of Settlement, was a barbarous Treachery to the whole Nation, an insolent Affront to Medley VIII.

Legions Address against the present Majority.

A.D.1704. to her Majeſty, an Inſinuation of the Title of the pretended Prince of Wales, and was conſequently High Treaſon by their own Act of Parliament: And that to Addreſs her Majeſty to extend her Prerogative, and thereby to embroil her with the Privilege of the Peers, was the moſt aggravated Piece of Treachery that ever Houſe of Commons was, or could be guilty of; the ſame being an Affront to her Majeſty, a malicious Deſign on her Perſon, by perſuading her to enter on that very Thing, the exorbitant Practice whereof was the Ruin of her Father and Grandfather, an unprecedented Attempt upon the Liberties of the People, and a meddling with that they have no Power or Right to touch. They heartily acknowledge their Lordſhips Zeal, Courage and Fidelity, both in vindicating their own undoubted Rights, invaded by the Houſe of Commons; in their diligent Care for the Safety of her Majeſty's Perſon, in ſearching after the deeply laid Contrivances of her Enemies in the late Plot; and in their aſſerting the Liberty and Rights of the People of England, againſt the Invaſion and Uſurpation of the Houſe of Commons, &c. The beſt Anſwer that was made to this, was a Repreſentation of the Glouceſterſhire Juſtices to the Queen, put upon it by Mr. John How, that the Pamphlet was of dangerous Conſequence; upon which a Proclamation was iſſu'd, promiſing One Hundred Pounds for the Author, and Fifty Pounds for the Printer, which had no Effect.

Proclamation againſt the Printer.

When News of Captain Frazer's Correſpondence with the Duke of Queensberry came to Paris, Frazer was clapp'd up in the Baſtile; the Fugitives at St. Germains, however, gave not over their Deſigns againſt the Government, and ſeveral of 'em paſt into Britain without Licenſe. Mr. David Lindſay, who had been Secretary to the Earl of Middleton, and was privy to all their Machinations, came over from France into England, though Secretary Hedges had poſitively deny'd to grant a Paſs for him, was ſeiz'd, try'd upon the Act againſt correſponding with France, and condemn'd to be hang'd. But there were ſtill ſome Perſons in the Miniſtry, who were better Friends to the Pretender, than to let the Cauſe ſuffer by any Diſcovery he might make. He had been ſullen in his Behaviour before the Committee of Lords, and would diſcover nothing; and for fear he ſhould endeavour to purchaſe his Life by a Confeſſion in Newgate, after Condemnation, it was intimated to him that he ſhould be repriev'd if he held his Tongue, as it was generally ſaid and believ'd; and being carry'd to Tyburn, the Sheriff told him he muſt expect no Mercy, unleſs he made an ingenious Diſcovovery of what he knew of the Plot; but he ſtill continu'd obſtinate and mute, and was repriev'd, but kept in Newgate ſome Years, and being baniſh'd the Kingdom, dy'd very miſerably in Holland.

David Lindſey try'd and condemn'd.

He is let go.

James Boucher, Aid de Camp to the Duke of Berwick, was condemn'd to be hang'd for the ſame Crime, and by the ſame good Law, as my Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt explain'd it to him before paſſing Sentence. The Lords addreſs'd the Queen to Reprieve him, to encourage him to make a Diſcovery; which was done, but he dy'd a few Days after in Newgate, having either thro' Sickneſs, or Artifice, avoided anſwering the Ends of his Reprieve.

Boucher condemn'd and repriev'd.

Two or three Months after the end of the Seſſions, freſh Information was given Secretary Harley, by Captain Lacan, who had been an Enſign in Dunbarton's Regiment in King James's Reign, "That Sir George Maxwell, Captain Levingſton, "Captain Hayes, and ſeveral other Scotch Officers, "who came from the Court of St. Germains, "near a Year and half before, after having "had ſeveral private Conſultations in Holland; "and Sir George, having in vain endeavour'd "to get a Paſs from Mr. Stanhope the Queen's "Envoy, were all embark'd for Scotland, to "the Number of fifteen or ſixteen." Orders were upon this ſent to Scotland, to ſeize Sir George Maxwell, and his Followers, which was done accordingly, juſt upon their Landing; and though by what had already appear'd before the Committee of Lords, it was certain they came with a Deſign to raiſe Commotions in Scotland, yet they were ſoon after ſet at Liberty; and Sir George Maxwell, was not only permitted to come to London, but highly careſs'd by ſome, whoſe Duty it was to have done their utmoſt to bring him to Puniſhment. Captain Lacan, whoſe Services were at firſt highly extoll'd, and who ſince he came over to England, had ſeiz'd in St. James's-Park a young Iriſh Gentleman, a Retainer to the Court at St. Germains, after he had attended daily at Secretary Harley's Office three Months, and conſum'd his ſmall Subſtance, was ſent back without any other Recompence than empty Promiſes. The Iriſh Youth, who to ſave his Life, readily diſcover'd all he knew, and among other Particulars, acquainted the Secretary with the conſtant Correſpondence Duke Hamilton had with the Traytors at St. Germains, was alſo ſent after Lacan upon a frivolous Errand, Leſt he ſhould blab, ſays the Annaliſt, and reveal how eaſily he came off, and what little Streſs was laid on his Diſcoveries: What follows in the ſame Hiſtory has the Air of a Novel, but was the Talk of the Town at that Time: "'Tis true that both the Treaſurer "and the Secretary had then a better and more "agreeable Informant, one of the Daughters of "Sir Theophilus Oglethorpe, who being come from "France without a Paſs, lay at the Mercy of the "Government; but who by her Wit and Beauty "ſoon gain'd the Favour, if not the Hearts of "the two Miniſters." The reſt of this Story is ſtill more Romantick and Incredible. "Nay, ſome "pretend that the Secretary having by his Addreſs "gain'd a greater Share in her Confidence, this "rais'd ſuch a Jealouſy and Reſentment in the "Treaſurer, as in Time grew to an irreconcilable "Enmity." Whoever was acquainted with the Secretary's Phyſiogmony and Air, muſt think he was no more form'd for a Gallant Man, than he was qualify'd by his Experience and Application for a Prime Miniſter; and the Lord Godolphin had other-gueſs Conqueſts in his Head, than that of Mrs. Oglethorp's Heart.

A.D.1704.

Pag. 127.

Mr. Secretary Harley's Intrigue with Mrs. Oglethorpe.

Having no Conception that Convocation Hiſtory is, what Biſhop Kennet entitles it, The State of Religion, I enter very little into it; and indeed I find nothing more done by them this Year, than a Complaint againſt Heretical and Atheiſtical Books, which the Lower Houſe laid before the Upper; and intimated their Deſires that the Biſhops would make Uſe of their Intereſt with the Government to put a ſtop to ſo growing an Evil. They alſo laid before their Lordſhips, the Inconveniencies to which they were liable, for want of a more effectual way of recovering Rates; and deſir'd they might have Leave to prepare a Bill for Raiſing Rates in the moſt effectual Manner, conſiſtent with the Ancient Liberties of Holy Church. The moſt Ancient are thoſe of the Apoſtles, but I believe they met with few Precedents concerning Rates in the Apoſtolical Writings. What her Majeſty did in publiſhing an Order, that Nothing contrary to Religion, or good Manners, ſhould be acted in either of the Play-Houſes, and that no Perſon whatever be ſuffer'd to go behind the Scenes, nor come on the Stage, nor any Woman wear a Mask in the Houſe, may much more properly come under the Head of the State of Religion, than the raiſing Money by Rates. The Houſe of Lords order'd their Thanks to be given to her Majeſty, for her Royal Care to regu-

The Convocation would raiſe Money.

As the Right of Holy Church.

A.D 1704.

Orders against lewd Plays and Players.

regulate the Play-Houſes; the Lewdneſs and Profaneneſs of the Plays having been the chief Topicks which the moſt celebrated Divines, particularly the Biſhops of Glouceſter and Oxford enlarg'd upon as the crying Sin that brought down the terrible Judgment of the late Storm, in their excellent Sermons on the Faſt Day.

The Order of the Thiſtle reviv'd.

Having mention'd the moſt conſiderable Preferments in the Change of the Miniſtry, we are only to add, that Edward Knatchbull, Eſq; was made Commiſſary-General of the Muſters of the Marines. That her Majeſty reviv'd the ancient Order of the Thiſtle in Scotland, and the Duke of Argyle, Duke of Athol, Marquis of Anandale, Earl of Orkney, Earl of Dalkeith, and Earl of Seafield, were made Knights of it. The Lord Stawel was made Lord of the Bedchamber to his Royal Highneſs; though his Lordſhip was before that, and has been ſince, very far from ſhewing himſelf fond of the Revolution Settlements.

The Duke of Marlborough and Sir David Mitchel went to Holland in January, to concert Matters with the Miniſters of the States-General, for the Operations both by Sea and Land, in the enſuing Campaign; which having done, his Grace return'd to acquaint her Majeſty with the Negotiations; and in the middle of April his Lordſhip again embark'd for Holland, to put thoſe Counſels in Action, where he was to Command in Perſon. The Relation of which we poſtpone, that the Wonders he perform'd in this glorious Campaign being contracted into one View, as near as may be, our Hiſtory may receive an Ornament, that no Hiſtory of England was capable of, 'till the Duke of Marlborough's Victories and Conqueſts furniſh'd the Materials of Immortal Glory to himſelf, and Infamy immortal to that vile Faction, that depriv'd his Country of the Fruits of them, and ſo ungratefully dealt towards him who did it ſo much Service and Honour.

Count Staremberg's firſt March in Italy.

Upon the Duke of Savoy's declaring for the Grand Alliance, Count Staremberg, who commanded the Imperial Forces in Germany, ſent a Detachment of One thouſand five hundred Horſe, under the Conduct of Count Viſconti, to his Aſſiſtance. This Handful of Men were ſeveral times diſturb'd in their March, but having bravely fought their way through the Enemy, moſt of them got ſafe into Piedmont. General Staremberg knowing the Duke of Savoy would not be able to ſupport himſelf without being join'd by a greater Body of Forces, reſolv'd, as difficult as the Enterprize ſeem'd, to attempt ſuch a Junction. In order to it, he made a Motion towards the Mincio, to amuſe the Duke de Vendoſme, as if he intended to retreat towards Germany; but turn'd on a ſudden, paſs'd the Secchio on the 26th of December, and directed his March through the Countries of Parma and Placentia. He divided his Forces, conſiſting of Sixteen thouſand Men, into three Bodies; the firſt was commanded by the young Prince of Vaudemont; the ſecond by General Vaubonne; and the third, which form'd the Rear-Guard, by General Staremberg in Perſon. Having defeated two French Parties at Brimo and Stradella, the Germans paſs'd that River the 4th of January, leaving One hundred and fifty Dragoons in the Intrenchments at Stradella, as if they intended to reſt in that Place. In their March further, they met with, and routed a French Party of Five hundred Horſe. In the mean Time the Duke de Vendoſme, who follow'd the Imperialiſts with Five thouſand Foot, and One thouſand five hundred Horſe, drove the One hundred and fifty German Dragoons from the Entrenchments at Stradella. The whole Imperial Army being join'd, march'd towards Parma, and finding ſome Troops poſted on the other Side that River, to oppoſe their Paſſage, while the Duke de Vendoſme attack'd them in the Rear, General Vaubonne ſwam over with ſome choice Squadrons, and beat the Enemy from that advantageous Poſt. To improve this Succeſs, the Germans laid a Bridge on that River, over which moſt of the Army paſs'd; but that Bridge being made in Haſte, of old rotten Boats, it unfortunately broke down, before the Rear, commanded by the Prince of Lichtenſtein and Count Solari could all get over. Upon this the French Army attack'd thoſe Troops, and a ſharp Diſpute enſu'd, wherein thoſe two brave Generals were kill'd; but the Imperial Horſe ſwimming once more over the River, reſcu'd the Foot, and the Bridge being repair'd, the whole Army paſs'd, and on the 13th of January join'd the Duke of Savoy, not having loſt above Four hundred Men in this Memorable March: By which Count Staremberg out-general'd the Duke of Vendoſme ſo much, that it extreamly ſunk that Duke's Character. Prince Eugene of Savoy, who commanded the Imperial Army in Italy, was then at the Court of Vienna, ſolliciting Reinforcements for that Army, of which what remain'd after the March of Count Starembergh, was in the Mantuan, under the Command of Count Leiningen. But the Elector of Bavaria being become, by Supplies of Men and Money from France, ſo powerful in the Heart of the Empire, that he threaten'd no leſs than to march to Vienna on one Side, while the Hungarian Malecontents under Prince Ragotski, Count Caroli, and Count Berezem, did the ſame on the other, there was no Hope of Help from the Emperor for the Duke of Savoy, and but little of his being able to defend Auſtria, and his Hereditary Countries. Things being in this diſtreſs'd Condition in Germany, for which the Emperor Leopold might in a great Meaſure thank himſelf, and his Compliance with the ſanguinary and ruinous Counſels of perſecuting Prieſts, who by their Cruelties drove the Hungarians to Arms; Count Wratiſlaw, the Imperial Ambaſſador, preſented a Memorial to the Queen April the 2d, containing a lively Repreſentation Of the preſſing Neceſſities of the Empire, by the breaking in of a conſiderable Army of French into Bavaria; which, together with the Inſurrection in Hungary, had reduc'd the Imperial Hereditary Countries into an incredible Perplexity and Confuſion; ſo that it was to be fear'd an entire Revolution and Deſolation of all Germany would follow, if ſome ſpeedy Aſſiſtance were not applied, proportionable to the great Danger they were now threaten'd with. This the Envoy thought himſelf oblig'd to lay before her Majeſty, that out of the ſame Zeal for preſerving the Liberties of Europe, for which the Queen was ſo much fam'd, ſhe would be pleas'd to order the Duke of Marlborough, her Captain-General, ſeriouſly to conſult with the States-General, of the ſpeedieſt Method of aſſiſting the Empire; or at leaſt to conduct part of the Troops in her Majeſty's Pay beyond Sea, to preſerve Germany from a total Subverſion. It being neither juſt in itſelf, nor advantageous to the common Cauſe, that her Majeſty's Troops ſhould tarry on the Frontiers of Holland, which were not in the leaſt threatned by the Enemy, and were defended by great Rivers, and ſtrong Places, whilſt the Empire was deſtroy'd by the French Troops with Fire and Sword. Her Majeſty return'd Anſwer by Mr. Secretary Hedges, That the Duke of Marlborough had Orders from her to take the moſt effectual Methods with the States-General, to ſend a ſpeedy Succour to his Imperial Majeſty and the Empire, to preſs the States to take the neceſſary Meaſures to reſcue Germany from the imminent Danger it was now expos'd to.

A.D. 1704.

The Elector of Bavaria threatens Vienna.

The Emperor's Envoy's Memorial to the Queen for Succour.

It

A.D.1704. It is believ'd that this Memorial was only a Matter of Form, to prepare the Way for the Well-Reception of a Reſolution that had been taken to anſwer the Contents of it. The Project is ſaid to have been the Duke of Marlborough's own, and that he communicated it only to the Queen, the Prince of Denmark, and two Miniſters of State in Holland, keeping it from the Knowledge of the Imperial Court till it was ready to be put in Execution.

The Duke of Marlborough forms the Scheme of his March to Germany.

On the 21ſt of April the Duke of Marlborough arriv'd at the Hague, accompany'd by General Churchill, Lieutenant General Lumley, the Earl of Orkney, and other General Officers. On the 2d of May, his Grace had a long Conference with the Deputies of the States General, wherein he open'd to them the Project he had concerted; the Execution of which was oppos'd by ſome Members of their Aſſembly; upon which the Duke deſir'd to confer with their High Mightineſſes themſelves and with the Council of State, wherein he made a very lively Repreſentation of the imminent Danger that threaten'd the whole Empire, and indeed all Europe, if an immediate Check was not given to the Progreſs of the French and Bavarians in Germany; adding, That their High Mightineſſes, being entire Maſters of the Maeze and of all the Spaniſh Gelderland, a ſmall Number of Forces were now able to ſecure their Frontiers.

He prevails with the States to conſent to it.

Theſe Reaſons ſupported by the Reputation of him that deliver'd them, and back'd by the Influence of thoſe he had entruſted with the Secret, made ſo great Impreſſion on the Minds of the whole Aſſembly, that his Grace's Scheme was approv'd, and the manner of executing it then agreed upon. After which the Duke took his Leave of the States, and ſet out from the Hague May the 5th, having before given Orders to General Churchill to march with the Engliſh Forces and Train of Artillery to Bedbourgh, where they encamp'd, and his Grace join'd them with Brigadier-General Ferguſon's Detachment, and five Squadrons of Dutch Horſe, the 18th of May. This Camp not being far from Cologne, the Duke was there waited upon by ſeveral of the Noble Canons of that Chapter, by the Prince of Saxzeits, Biſhop of Raab, by the Prince of Heſſe, and other Princes and Generals. But I ſhall not enter into the Detail of ſo long and difficult a March, it will be ſufficient to mention the moſt remarkable Occurrences.

The Duke's March towards Bavaria.

The French Generals in Flanders thinking his Grace deſign'd to open the Campaign with the Siege of Traerbach, and to endeavour to advance into France along the Moſelle, detach'd Five thouſand Foot, and two thouſand Horſe towards that River, giving out they intended to Beſiege Huy: But my Lord Duke, ſuperior to ſuch petty Stratagems, took no Notice of their Movements, well knowing that Monſieur Auverquerque, who commanded the Confederate Forces that were left in Flanders, was ſtrong enough to defeat any Attempt of the Enemy on that Side. At Kerpen his Grace receiv'd certain News, May the 23d, that the Recruits for the French Troops in Bavaria, and other Reinforcements, had join'd that Elector at Villengen; and that the Court of France had ſent poſitive Orders to the Mareſchal de Villars to march towards the Moſelle with thirty-five Squadrons, and forty-ſix Battalions, ſtill conjecturing that his Lordſhip intended to act on that Side. Upon which he order'd the Forces to march with all Expedition, and on the 25th of May he came to the Camp at Newdorf, near Coblentz, where Count Wratiſlaw waited on him, to ſettle all Things for the further March of his Army to join that in Germany, under Prince Lewis of Baden. The French Court was puzzled, if not ſtunn'd, when they receiv'd News of his Grace's Progreſs in Germany. On the 26th of May, the Horſe and Dragoons paſs'd the Rhine; and while they were ſo doing, the Duke din'd with the Elector of Triers, at his Caſtle of Ehizenbreſtein, and after Dinner march'd with his Forces to Braubach, a Town belonging to the Landgrave of Heſſe Darmſtadt, who paid his Grace a Viſit. At Schwalbach he receiv'd an Expreſs from the States-General, to aſſure him, that according to his Deſire, they had given Orders for a Reinforcement to be ſent after him; and accordingly Monſieur Auverquerque had appointed ſixteen Squadrons of Horſe, five of Dragoons, ſeven Battalions of Daniſh, and one of Heſſian Foot, for that Service; which Reinforcement reach'd him before any Engagement. On the 29th of May, my Lord continu'd his March and came to Caſſel on the Rhine, over againſt Mentz, where his Lordſhip, and his Retinue, were magnificently entertain'd at Dinner by that Elector. In this Camp the Duke allow'd his Troops a Days Reſt, and viſited the Fortifications of Mentz, as he had done thoſe of Bonne. He paſs'd the Maine the laſt Day of May, and the Neckar the 3d of June. He encamp'd on the River Side, over againſt Ladenburgh, and halted three whole Days, to give his weary'd Troops ſome Refreſhment. The Surprize of the French was increas'd, when they perceiv'd that his Grace bent his March towards the Danube: For when they were diſabus'd as to their Conjecture that he would act on the Side of the Moſelle, they imagin'd he would advance to the Upper-Rhine, and Beſiege Landau. Upon this Suſpicion Mareſchal Tallard repaſs'd that River at Alltenheim, in order either to join the Mareſchal de Villeroy, or to oppoſe the Duke of Marlborough's paſſing the ſame River. But my Lord Marlborough, who however had a watchful Eye on every Motion of the Enemy, continu'd his March with as much Tranquility, as if it had been to a Review only; and on the 9th of June came to Mildenheim; where the next Day, about three in the Afternoon, Prince Eugene, accompany'd by Count Wratiſlaw, arriv'd at the Duke's Quarters; and after Dinner, the remaining Part of the Day was ſpent in Conferences between the Prince and the Duke, wherein the mutual Eſteem they had before for each other, grew into a ſtrict Friendſhip and Confidence. The next Day Prince Eugene march'd with the Duke of Marlborough to Great Heppach, where he order'd his Army to be drawn up in Battalia, and the Prince expreſs'd his Surprize to find them in ſo good Condition, after ſo long and ſo quick a March. His Grace being inform'd by Count Wratiſlaw, that Prince Lewis of Baden was coming Poſt to meet him, the Duke ſent Colonel Cadogan with a Compliment to his Highneſs, whom he found at Eſſingen, with Prince Lobcowitz, his Nephew, and conducted him to Great Heppach; where, among other Expreſſions of Civility which paſs'd between Prince Lewis of Baden and the Duke of Marlborough, the Prince ſaid, The Duke was come both to ſave the Empire, and to give him an Opportunity to vindicate his Honour, which he was ſenſible was in ſome manner at the laſt Stake. The next Day, June the 14th, the Horſe march'd from Great Heppach, where his Grace entertain'd Prince Lewis and Prince Eugene at Dinner. After which the former return'd to his Army on the Danube, and Prince Eugene went Poſt to Phillipsburgh, to command the Army on the Rhine. A Week after, June the 21ſt, the Duke of Marlborough, having been reinforc'd in his March by the Troops of Lunenburgh, Hanover, and Heſſe, join'd Prince Lewis of Baden at Weſterſtettem; the Daniſh Foot, ſent by Monſieur

Prince Eugene meets him.

Prince Lewis of Baden's Saying to him.

A.D.1704. Averquerque from Flanders, being come as far as Frankfort, receiv'd Orders from his Grace to reinforce Prince Eugene, for the Defence of the Lines of Stolhoffen, and the Paſſage of the Rhine. The next Day the Prince of Baden, and my Lord Duke encamp'd at Elchingen, near the Danube, where they halted three Days, and on the 28th of June, continuing their March, they came to Herbrechling, and Gingen, on the River Brentz, within two Leagues of the Elector of Bavaria's Army. The next Day a Council of War was held, in which it was reſolv'd to draw near Donawert. Accordingly the Confederate Army march'd from Gingen to Lanthauſen, and on the firſt of July encamp'd at Amerdingen. The Elector of Bavaria concluding by theſe Motions, that the Confederates intended to attack Donawert, he ſent a conſiderable Detachment of his beſt Troops to reinforce Count de Arco, who was poſted at Schellenberg, on a Riſing Ground, where he had already caſt up great Entrenchments to cover Donawert. The Duke of Marlborough reſolving to drive the Enemy from ſo important a Poſt, gave the neceſſary Orders to the Army, and the next Day, July the 2d, advanc'd at three in the Morning, with Six thouſand Foot, and Three thouſand Engliſh and Dutch Horſe, the Prince of Baden following with the reſt of the Army; but the Ways being bad, his Grace could not reach the River Wernitz, which runs by Donawert, 'till about Noon, and it was three a Clock before his Troops could get over the River. The Duke paſs'd it at the Head of the Cavalry, view'd the Intrenchments, and diſpos'd every Thing for the Attack. The Engliſh and Dutch Artillery play'd furiouſly on the Bavarians and French, who fir'd briskly from their Batteries. The Engliſh and Dutch Foot, commanded by Lieutenant-General Goor, and Brigadier-General Ferguſon, began the Attack, but met with ſuch a vigorous Reſiſtance, that they were entirely repuls'd; the Troops being alſo extreamly gall'd by the Enemies Artillery. Prince Lewis of Baden coming up with the Imperialiſts, forc'd the Intrenchments on the weaker Side, and the Confederates made a terrible Slaughter of the French and Bavarians, whom they purſu'd to the very Danube, which Count Arco, and ſeveral other General Officers took, and ſav'd themſelves by Swimming, but many of the Soldiers endeavouring to do the ſame, were drown'd. The Bavarians left behind them fifteen Pieces of Cannon, with all their Ammunition, Tents, Baggage, thirteen Colours, Count Arco's Plate, and other rich Booty. The Engliſh Guards, and the Regiments of Orkney and Ingoldsby, who march'd to the Intrenchments without Faſcines, ſuffer'd a great deal more than the Germans; who, according to their Cuſtom, went on with more Caution. The Enemies Loſs was computed at Five thouſand Men, nor was that of the Confederates much leſs; which however, was abundantly made up by the gaining ſo compleat a Victory, follow'd with the Surrender of Donawert, and a free Entrance into the Elector of Bavaria's Country. Prince Lewis of Baden was wounded, but he told General Hompeſch, his Wound was more painful than dangerous: General Thungen, the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe Caſſel, Major-General Wood, Major-General Pallandt, Brigadier Bedmar, were ſlightly wounded; Lieutenant-General Goor, the Prince of Homburgh, the Prince of Beveren, Count Van Erbach, Count Schuylemburg, and Major-General Beinham, were kill'd; as was alſo Major Morden of Colonel Stanley's Regiment, and the brave Count Styrum dy'd not many Days after of his Wounds. About Four hundred Engliſh and Scotch were kill'd in this Battle, and about One thouſand woundded, Battel of Schellenberg.

The French and Bavarians routed.

Three Days after the Fight, the whole Confederate Army paſs'd the Danube, and encamp'd at Mertingen in Bavaria; here it was that the Elector began to account for his Treachery and Ingratitude. He rerir'd under the Canon of Augsburg, and his Country was abandon'd to the Mercy of thoſe whom he had deſerted and betray'd. The Duke of Marlborough reſolving to improve the Advantage, before the Enemy recover'd the great Conſternation they were in, order'd the Count de Frieze, with Four thouſand Men, and twelve Pieces of Cannon, to prepare the Bridges for the Army to paſs the Lech, which the Prince effected, and took Poſt farther ſtill in the Electorate of Bavaria; being join'd by Six thouſand Men more from the Army, which came up more leiſurely, and encamp'd near Giaderkingen. Upon theſe Motions the Gariſon of Newbourg, one of the Elector's beſt Towns, left the Place, and retir'd to Ingolſtadt. The Count de Frieze, with his Body, beſieg'd Rain, another Town of the Elector's, which defended it ſelf four or five Days, and then Capitulated. His Grace receiving Advice by an Expreſs from Prince Eugene, that the Mareſchals Villeroy and Tallard, had paſs'd the Rhine, giving out, that they intended to Succour the Elector of Bavaria, which his Highneſs doubted not one or both of 'em would endeavour to do, the Duke ſent a Detachment of thirty Squadrons of Imperial Horſe to join Prince Eugene, and enable him to ſtand his Ground, if either of the French Generals ſhould attack him. A.D.1704.

In the mean Time the Emperor, who could not but be extreamly ſenſible of this happy Turn in the State of Affairs; and to find in ſo ſhort a Space of Time, his Enemy in greater Pain for his Capital, than himſelf had been for Vienna, wrote a Letter of Thanks to his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, "Wherein his Imperial Majeſty "aſcrib'd in a ſpecial Manner, the Succeſs of "the Victory at Schellenberg to my Lord's Con- "duct, and the Valour of the Engliſh Troops; "not doubting but his Grace, in Conjunction "with Prince Lewis of Baden, and the other "Imperial Generals, would uſe their utmoſt En- "deavours to finiſh the Work as glorioufly as they "had begun it, and put an End to the War which "the Elector of Bavaria had rais'd in the Heart of "the Empire; which would be an eternal Monu- "ment and Trophy of the higheſt Glory to the "Engliſh Nation, and her moſt Serene Majeſty, "whoſe Anceſtors had never before carry'd their "victorious Arms into Upper Germany." Count Wratiſlaw told his Grace, after he had deliver'd the Letter, That the Emperor deſir'd he would accept of the Honour he intended him, of the Title and Dignity of a Prince of the Empire. Upon which my Lord Duke pray'd the Count to repreſent to the Emperor, That he was extreamly ſenſible of his Imperial Majeſty's Goodneſs towards him, beyond any Thing he could deſerve; but that his Ambition was entirely bounded in the Queen's Grace and Favour, whoſe abundant Kindneſs had been already extended towards him, beyond whatever he could have aim'd at, and that he muſt refer himſelf to her Majeſty's Pleaſure. Upon which the Emperor wrote a Letter to the Queen with his own Hand, wherein, after congratulating the late Victory over the French and Bavarians, which he expreſs'd much in the ſame Manner as in the Letter to the Duke of Marlborough, the Emperor deſir'd the Queen to lay her Commands on his Grace to accept a Teſtimony of his Imperial Majeſty's Acknowledgment of his Service; ſince the Duke himſelf, when Count Wratiſlaw intimated to him his Maſter's Intention, made ſome Difficulty to admit it. Monſieur Hoffman, the Imperial Reſident, alſo told her Majeſty, He had Orders from his

The Emperor's Letter to the Duke of Marlborough.

Offers to make him a Prince of the Empire.

The Duke's Anſwer.

A.D.1704. his Maſter earneſtly to preſs with all Reſpect, that her Majeſty would be pleas'd to require his Grace to make no farther Scruple in that Matter. The Queen was at laſt prevail'd upon to comply with the Emperor's Deſire; but before it was known in Germany, the Duke of Marlborough had by a new and more deciſive Victory deſerv'd of the Empire, of his own Country, and of all Europe that lov'd Liberty, as great Honours as Power and Gratitude could pay him.

The Queen conſents to it.

On the 22d of July his Grace croſt the River Paer, and march'd to view the Ground for a Camp near Freidberg, where the Enemy had put a Gariſon of 200 Foot and 200 Horſe, who quitted the Place as ſoon as the Duke came within ſight, and he put 400 Foot and 100 Horſe into it, under the Command of Lord North and Grey. The next Day his Grace march'd again and encamp'd within a League of Augsburgh, by which means the Elector of Bavaria's Communication with his own Country was cut off. Here the Confederate Generals receiv'd Advice from Prince Eugene, that Mareſchal Tallard arriv'd at Willengen the 18th of July, and that he was obſerving him with 20 Battalions and 60 Squadrons. The Duke of Marlborough in this Camp declar'd the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe Caſſel, not yet quite recover'd of his Wounds, General of the Engliſh and Dutch Horſe. Tallard batter'd the little Town of Willengen 6 Days and then march'd to Dutlingen: Prince Eugene obſerving him on the other Side of the Danube.

The Elector of Bavaria's new Treachery.

The Elector of Bavaria's Diſtreſs had brought him to Reaſon a little, and he approv'd the Articles of Accommodation agreed on between Count Wratiſlaw and his Miniſter Monſieur Prilmeyer, and had promis'd to come in Perſon to the Confederate Camp to ſign them; but as ſoon as he heard Mareſchal Tallard had paſt the Black Foreſt to come to join him, he ſent Mr. Prilmeyer to Count Wratiſlaw to acquaint him, That ſince the King of France made ſuch powerful Efforts to ſupport him, he thought himſelf oblig'd in Honour to remain firm in his Alliance; which new Treachery ſo juſtly provok'd the Confederate Generals, that the Duke of Marlborough join'd Prince Lewis of Baden, who was about to form the Siege of Ingoldſtat, the ſtrongeſt Town in Bavaria, and commanded the Count de La Tour, General of the Imperial Horſe, and Count de Frieze with 30 Squadrons of Horſe and Dragoons to plunder and burn the Country to the Gates of Munich the Elector's Capital and Place of Reſidence. The Inhabitants of ſeveral Places ſent Deputies to the Duke of Marlborough, offering to pay ſome Contributions to prevent Military Execution, but his Grace told them, The Forces of the Queen of England were not come into Bavaria to get Money, but to bring their Prince to Reaſon. The Duke of Wirtemberg join'd the Count de la Tour with 2000 Horſe and Dragoons, and the General's Commands as to Plundering and Burning were executed to the full.

His Country plunder'd.

On the 4th of Auguſt Marſhal Tallard, with about 22000 Horſe and Foot, and the Elector of Bavaria with about 35000 join'd Forces at Bibrah not far from Augsburg. The Duke of Marlborough order'd the Prince of Wirtemberg with 28 Squadrons of Imperial Horſe, and General Churchil with 20 Squadrons of Engliſh and Dutch to join Prince Eugene's Forces at Munſter not far from Schellenburgh, which the Elector of Bavaria ſeem'd to have a Deſign to attack. It had been reſolv'd in a Council of War, at which Prince Eugene who was come to the Duke of Marlborough's Camp, to give notice of the Enemies Motions, and Prince Lewis of Baden, together with his Grace and the other Generals, aſſiſted, that Prince Lewis ſhould carry on the Siege of Ingolſtadt, and the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene cover it, by obſerving the Motions of the French and Bavarian Armies. The Duke of Marlborough made ſo long and ſo quick a March with his Army, that he join'd Prince Eugene in the Evening the ſame Day that General Churchil join'd him the Forenoon, Auguſt the 11th. Early the next Morning the Confederate Generals went to view the Enemy, whom they found to be in Motion, and their Horſe marching forward, but took notice that their advanc'd Squadrons ſtopp'd ſhort after they had perceiv'd thoſe that attended the Prince and Duke. At one a Clock in the Afternoon the Enemies Quarter-Maſters mark'd out a Camp from Blenheim to Lutzingen, which Camp would have been ſo advantageous to them, that the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene reſolv'd to attack them in it before they were well ſettled; and having given the neceſſary Directions in order to it, about three a Clock the next Morning the Confederate Army began to move; by ſix they were advanc'd into the Plain under a Hill which the French and Bavarians had poſſeſs'd themſelves of. Here they were drawn up in Battalia, upon which the Enemy call'd in their Foragers and ſet ſeveral Villages on Fire, as they attempted to do two Water-Mills near Blenheim; but my Lord Cutts with two Brigades took Poſſeſſion of them; and the Enemy poſted 28 Battalions and 12 Squadrons of Dragoons in the Village of Blenheim, to prevent the Confederates ſeizing it, which were ſo many loſt to them in the Center of their Army, and contributed very much to their Defeat. There was a Rivulet between the two Armies, and the Lord Cutts with the two Brigades juſt mention'd was the firſt that paſt it; which done, he poſted himſelf in a Bottom near the Village of Blenheim, and for ſeveral Hours with wonderful Reſolution ſtood the Fire of ſix Pieces of Cannon planted on the Height above that Village; on which account it was, that in and out of the Army his Lordſhip was ever after call'd the Salamander that lives in Fire. About three Quarters after twelve his Grace gave orders for the general Attack, which began on the Left where the Duke commanded, as Prince Eugene did the Right; Major General Wilks made the firſt Onſet with five Engliſh Battalions, How, Ingoldsby, Row, Marlborough, North and Gray, and four Battalions of Heſſians, ſupported by the Lord Cutts and Major General St. Paul, with eleven other Battalions, and fifteen Squadrons of Horſe under the Command of General Wood. The five Engliſh Battalions commanded by Brigadier Row aſſaulted the Village of Blenheim with ſo much Intrepidity, that they came up to the very Muzzles of the Enemies Muskets, and ſome of the Officers exchang'd Thruſts of Swords with the French through the Palliſadoes, but being expos'd to a Fire much ſuperior to theirs, they were forc'd to retire with the Loſs of near a third Part of their Number; they were purſu'd by 13 Squadrons of the French Genſdarmerie, and had certainly been cut in Pieces, had not the Heſſian Infantry ſtopt the Career of the Enemy by the great Fire they made, which forc'd the French to fly in their turn, and they were purſu'd by two Squadrons of Engliſh Horſe; but ſome freſh Brigades of the Enemy coming up, and giving them time to rally, the Engliſh Horſe were hard put to it; and here again the Heſſian Foot perform'd notable Service, putting the Enemy again to the Rout by their continual Fire. Whilſt Row's Brigade rally'd, that of Ferguſon, commanded by himſelf, attack'd the Village of Blenheim on the Left with no better Succeſs, and it was found impoſſible to force the Enemy in that Poſt without Artillery. In the mean time the Horſe of both Wings having all paſt the Rivulet, drew up in order of Battel without any Diſturbance from the Enemy, who kept themſelves quiet,

A.D.1704.

Lord Cutts call'd the Salamander, and why.

The Battle of Blenheim.

A.D.1704. quiet, and their General Tallard is ſaid to have ſpoken thus contemptibly of the Allies, Let them come, the more there is of them the more we ſhall kill. The Cavalry of the Confederates Left marching up towards the Hill, the Enemies Horſe began to move at laſt, and charg'd them very briskly, and the French Infantry in Blenheim making a terrible Fire on their Flank, they were put into ſuch Diſorder, that part of the firſt Line retir'd even beyond the Rivulet; which Lieutenant General Buleau, who commanded the Hanover and Lunenburgh Troops, obſerving, he brought his own Regiment of Dragoons from the ſecond Line, with thoſe of Major General Villars and Brigadier Bothmar, who charg'd the Enemies Horſe with ſo much Vigor, that they broke them entirely and drove them to the very Hedges of the Village of Blenheim. This gave time to the Confederate Horſe that had given ground, to rally, and to form a ſecond Line behind thoſe Regiments, and others that had join'd them. Thus thoſe Hanover and Lunenburgh Dragoons continu'd in the firſt Line all the remaining time of the Action; and now the Confederate Horſe advanc'd leiſurely to the top of the Hill, and charg'd the Enemies Horſe ſeveral times. They routed them at every Charge, but they ſtill rally'd every time, though at a greater Diſtance, which gave the Confederates Opportunity to gain ground, animated them in every attack, and diſpirited the Enemy. Tallard perceiving the Battel began to turn there, ſent 10 Battalions to advance and fill up the Intervals of his Cavalry, as a laſt Effort, which the Prince of Heſſe Caſſel, Lieutenant General Lumley, General Buleau, Baron Hompeſch, and Lieutenant General Ingoldsby obſerving, they caus'd three Battalions of the Troops of Zell to come up to ſuſtain the Horſe. This done, the Confederates return'd to the Charge; but the Fire of the ten Battalions intermixed with the French Horſe, put their firſt Line into ſome Diſorder, inſomuch that they ſhrunk back and remain'd ſome time at about 60 paces Diſtance from the Enemy, neither Party advancing againſt the other. At laſt the Confederates renew'd the Charge with ſo much Vigor, that having broke and routed the Enemies Horſe, the ten Battalions they abandon'd were entirely cut to Pieces; Marſhal Tallard rally'd his broken Cavalry behind ſome Tents, and ſeeing things in this deſperate Condition, he reſolv'd to draw off the Troops in Blenheim Village. To which end he ſent one of his Aids de Camp to Mareſchal Marſin, to deſire him to face the Confederates with ſome Troops from the Village of Overklaw, one of thoſe to which they had ſet Fire; but Marſin ſaid he had too much to do in the Front of his Village where the Duke of Marlborough acted againſt him in Perſon, to ſpare any Troops, if he could maintain his Ground with thoſe he had. In the mean time Lieutenant General Ingoldsby, made the Prince of Heſſe, Lieutenant General Lumley, and Baron Hompeſch ſenſible how eaſy it would be entirely to defeat the French Cavalry, by charging them on their right Flank; which Advice being vigorouſly executed, the Enemy were entirely routed; part of them endeavour'd to gain the Bridge on the Danube between Blenheim and Hochſtet; the other Part, among whom were the Gens de Armes, were ſo cloſely purſu'd by the Dragoons of Bothmar, that thoſe who eſcap'd being kill'd threw themſelves into the Danube, where moſt of them were drown'd: Thoſe who fled towards Hochſtet rally'd once more, making a ſhew to ſuccour the reſt; but the Regiment of Bothmar forc'd them and kept them in awe ſome time, and being at length join'd by ſome other Regiments, the Enemy fled full gallop towards Hochſtet. The Mareſchal de Tallard was ſurrounded with the Runaways and taken near a Mill, behind the Village of Sonderon, not far from the Danube, by M. de Boinenbourg a Lieutenant Colonel of the Troops of Heſſe, and the Marquiſſes de Montperous, General of the Horſe, de Seppeville, de Silly, and de Lavaliere, Major Generals, and ſeveral other Officers of Note were alſo made Priſoners in this Rout. A.D.1704.

Hanover Troops do great Service.

The Rout of the French.

The Brigade of Bezenſdorf, conſiſting of ten Battalions, was order'd by his Grace to attack Overklaw, Mareſchal de Marſin's Quarters; accordingly the Prince of Holſtein Beck, who commanded that Brigade as Major General, paſt the Rivulet at the Head of 2 Battalions, the Imperial Cavalry which was to have ſuſtain'd him, being within two Musket-Shots of him; he was hardly got over, when 7 or 8 Battalions fell on him with great Fury before he could form his Men; ſo that the Regiment of Goor was almoſt entirely cut to pieces, and the Prince himſelf deſperately wounded and taken Priſoner; the reſt of the Brigade ſuſtain'd by ſome Daniſh and Hanoverian Horſe, charg'd a ſecond time, though with no better Succeſs; but the third time the Duke of Marlborough having himſelf brought up ſome Squadrons, which were ſupported by others from the Body of Reſerve, made them advance with ſome Battalions beyond the Rivulet; upon which the Enemy began to retire, and it was in this Inſtant that Mareſchal de Tallard ſent to Mareſchal de Marſin for Aſſiſtance. As ſoon as the Duke had perform'd this Service, he repair'd to the Center, where finding the Action decided for the Confederates, he caus'd part of his victorious Cavalry to halt, to obſerve the Motion of that part of the Enemy which by this time was drawn up beyond the Moraſs of Hochſtet. During this halt, the Elector of Bavaria was perceiv'd making his Retreat from the Village of Lutzingen; upon which General Hompeſch, who with ſeveral Squadrons was purſuing the Enemy towards Merſelingen, was order'd to face about and march to join thoſe that halted, as well to prevent the Elector's falling upon Hompeſch's Rear, as to form a Body in order to charge that Elector, who march'd full ſpeed, but in pretty good order, with his Squadrons on the Left and his Battalions on the Right. Before General Hompeſch return'd from the Chace, the Right Wing of the Confederate Army was perceiv'd at ſome Diſtance behind the Elector, and appearing to be part of his Army, and marching in ſuch a Manner, as might eaſily have flank'd the Duke of Marlborough if he had immediately charg'd the Bavarians; his Grace with great Prudence ſent out a Party to view them, during this time the Elector continu'd marching off with great Precipitation, till he reach'd the Moraſs of Morſelingen. The French Horſe being entirely defeated, and the Confederate Troops Maſters of the Ground between the Enemies Left and the Village of Blenheim, the 28 Battalions and 12 Squadrons which were in that Village, found themſelves cut off from the reſt of their Army, and deſpairing of being able to make their Eſcape, after a weak Attempt to defend themſelves, and being ſurrounded with the Confederate Infantry, they capitulated at laſt, laid down their Arms, deliver'd their Colours and Standards, and ſurrender'd themſelves Priſoners of War, on Condition that the Officers ſhould not be ſearch'd; ſo that very few Men eſcap'd of the 40 Battalions the Mareſchal de Tallard brought with him, all which were the Choice of the French Infantry. A.D.1704.

The French lay down their Arms at Blenheim.

Prince Eugene in the Right, after two brave but unſucceſsful Attacks, wherein his Cavalry were repuls'd, obtain'd the Victory by the Valour of his Infantry, though much inferior in Number to that of the Elector of Bavaria and the Mareſchal de Marſin. The Prince finding his Horſe made no Impreſſion on the Enemy, put himſelf at the Head of his Foot, who were prevailing over the French

A.D.1704. and Bavarian Infantry, and ſoon after entirely routed them, chaſed them for above an Hour's March, and then cauſing his Foot to halt, gave his Cavalry, who had rally'd a great way behind, time to rejoyn them, after which the whole Wing continued the Chace during an Hour as far as the Village of Morſelingen. As ſoon as the Action was ended in the Left Wing, my Lord Duke of Marlborough diſpos'd himſelf to march with part of the Troops to ſuccour his Highneſs Prince Eugene, who had ſent one of his Aids de Camp, who met his Grace on the way, to inform him there was no need of it: That the Enemy after having burnt the Villages of Overklaw and Lutzingen, were flying every where before his victorious Troops. Compariſon would be equally Vain and Odious, in diſtinguiſhing theſe two Generals as to the Merit and Glory of this Victory. 'Tis acknowledg'd by all, that they both gave their Commands with all the Clearneſs and Compoſedneſs imaginable, expoſing their Perſons wherever their Preſence was neceſſary, with the greateſt Unconcernment, and preſerving their Temper in the greateſt Hurry of Action and the moſt imminent Dangers. The Duke of Marlborough very narrowly eſcap'd being kill'd by a Cannon Ball, which graz'd under his Horſe's Belly, and cover'd him with Dirt. The other Generals of the Confederate Army behav'd with great Prudence, Activity and Valour; particularly the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel, the Prince of Hanover, Lieutenant General Lumley, Baron Hompeſch, Lieutenant General Bulau, the Lord Cutts, the Earl of Orkney, Major General Wood, Major General Villars, Lieutenant General Ingoldsby, the Prince of Holſtein Beck, Major General Wilks, Major General St. Paul, Brigadier Row, Brigadier Ferguſon, Brigadier Berenſdorf, whoſe Names ought to live with Honour as long as Hiſtory can preſerve them. The beſt Computation, as to the Number of the Kill'd, Wounded and Taken, muſt be extracted from ſeveral different Accounts. A.D.1704.

The Princes of Hanover and Heſſe diſtinguiſh'd themſelves.

The Mareſchal de Marſin in his Letter to the French King owns —— 10000 kill'd.

There were taken in the Village of Blenheim.

	Dragoons,	Squadrons.	Infantry,	Battalions.	Infantry,	Battalions.	Infantry,	Battalions.
French Regiments made Priſoners.	Meſtre de Camp Gen,	3	De Navarre,	3	Languedoc,	1	Boulonnois,	1
	La Reine,	3	De Santerre,	2	Bleſois,	2	Moron,	1
	Vaſai,	3	Gredre Allemand,	2	Argentois,	1	Montfort,	2
	Roven,	3	Ouiſe,	2	Surlauben Swiſs,	2	Royal,	2
		12	Artois,	2	St. Segonde,	2		6
			Provencois,	2	Loiſſois,	1		9
				13		9		13
								28

General Hompeſch in one of his Letters to the States General writes,

As ſome of the Enemies Battalions were not compleat, and we reckon them but at 400 Men, it makes them ſtill ſuperior to us in Foot 7320; and we exceeding them in Horſe 31 Squadrons, at 100 Men in a Squadron, they were 4220 Men ſuperior to us in the whole. Thus theſe 28 Battalions make 11200 Men, and the 12 Squadrons 1200 Men, together 12400. The ſhorteſt Account of the Priſoners taken in the Rout is 3000, and the Duke of Marlborough in his ſecond Letter to the States General ſays, 3000 of the Enemies Troops had liſted in the Confederate Army, and 7000 of their wounded were in the Hoſpitals at Ulm. By all which Calculations, allowing nothing for Deſerters that did not Liſt, and eſcap'd in the Rout, the whole Loſs of the French Army will ſtand thus.

The Loſs of the French.	Kill'd,	10000
	Taken,	15400
	Liſted in the Army of the Allies,	3000
	Wounded,	7000
		35400

The Kill'd and Wounded on the Side of the Allies were computed at about 4000.

The Chief Officers of the French that were kill'd in the Battle, or drown'd, or dy'd of their Wounds ſoon after, were,

French General Officers kill'd.

The Count de la Verue, General of the Horſe.
Monſieur de Buſen, Lieutenant General.
The Count de Clerembaut, Lieutenant General.
The Marquis de Blainville, Lieutenant General.
Monſieur Surlauben, Major General.
Monſieur de Marillac, Brigadier General.
The Duke de Humieres, Brother to the Duke D'Aumont.
The Marquis de Arpajou.
The Marquis de Hautefort.
The Marquis de Beringhen.
The Marquis de la Baulme, only Son to the Mareſchal de Tallard.

The Chief of the Priſoners were,

The Mareſchal de Tallard, General of the French Army.
The Marquis de Monperooux, General of the Horſe. Taken.
The Marquis de Hautefeville, General of the Dragoons.
The Marquis de Marivaux, Lieutenant General.
The Count de Blanzac, Lieutenant General.
The Marquis de Valſeme, Major General.
The Marquis de la Valiere, Major General.
The Chevalier de Croiſſy, Major General.
The Marquis de Silly, Brigadier General of Horſe.
The Marquis de Sepville, Brigadier General of the Gens d'Armes.
The Marquis de Saſſenage, Son-in-law to Mareſchal Tallard.
The Marquis de St. Pouange, Colonel of Horſe.
Monſieur de la Meſſiliere, Brigadier General of the Gens d'Armes.
Monſieur de St. Second, Brigadier of Foot.
Monſieur Deſnonville, Brigadier of Foot.
Monſieur de Amigni, Brigadier of Foot.
Monſieur de Signey, Brigadier of Foot.
Monſieur de Montfort, Brigadier of Foot.
Monſieur de Jolly, Brigadier of Dragoons.
The Chevalier de Ligondals, Colonel of Horſe.
The Baron de Heyden, Colonel of Horſe.
The Marquis de Vaſſey, Colonel of Dragoons.
The Marquis de Aurival, Colonel of Dragoons.
Monſieur de Prie, Colonel of Dragoons.
Prince Maubeeg of Lorraine, Capt. of Horſe.

A.D. 1704. The Marquis de Auvet, Captain of the Gens de Armes.
Monſieur Joug, Major of the Regiment of Orleans.
The Chevalier de Rocheplate, Colonel of the Gens de Armes.
The Marquis de Carman, Lieutenant of the Gens de Armes.
Monſieur de Ovilars, Enſign of the Gens de Armes.
Monſieur Suiſſac, Guidon of the Gens de Armes.
The Sieur de Brevil, Commiſſary of the Artillery.
The Sieur de la Marcelaire, Commiſſary of the Artillery.
The Marquis de Marguon.

Colonels of Foot.

Marquis de Nonan.
Monſieur de St. Maurice.
The Count de Lionne.
The Marquis de Laſſay.
The Baron de Elſen.
Monſieur de Palincourt.
Monſieur de Saulvebeauf.
Monſieur de Montenay.
The Count de Gallard.
Monſieur de Creſſy.
The Count de Tavannes.
The Count de Schacq.

Beſides the Priſoners, the Confederates got many other Marks of the moſt compleat Victory, as near 100 Pieces of Canon.

24 Mortars.
129 Colours.
171 Standards.
17 Pair of Kettle-Drums.
3600 Tents.
300 Laden Mules.
34 Coaches.
24 Barrels and 8 Casks of Silver.

The Confederates loſt but two or three General Officers, as the Prince of Holſtein Beck, and Brigadier General Row, who died of their Wounds.

Of the Engliſh and Scotch Officers were kill'd,

Engliſh Officers kill'd and wounded.

Colonel Philip Dormer of the Guards, immediately upon his having expos'd himſelf with very great Gallantry, Major Frederick Cornwallis, Lieutenant Colonel Dalyel, Lieutenant Colonel Featherſtonhaugh, Major Creed, Colonel John White, Lord Forbes, Major Chenwix, Sir John Sands, Captain Cavendiſh, Captain Tankered, Captain Stretton, Sen. Captain Stretton, Jun. Captain Campbel, Captain Fitzſimons, Captain Baily, and Henry Blount, Eſq; Son of Charles Blount, a young Gentleman of great Hopes, Captain Oliver Luke, Captain Wanclin, Captain Henry Browne, Captain Rolliſton, Captain Thomas Burton, Captain Warner Dawes, Captain Coghlane.

Engliſh and Scotch Officers wounded.

Lord Mordaunt had his left Arm ſhatter'd, Lord North and Gray loſt his right Hand, Colonel Hamilton, Lieutenant Colonel Lumpton, Lieutenant Colonel Payton, Major Glanville, Major George Morgan, Lieutenant Colonel Britton, Major Armſtrong, Major Kelley, Captain Shute, Captain James Dormer, Captain Pocock, Lieutenant Colonel, Peyton, Captain Hesketh, Captain Fleming, Captain Horn, Major Cane, Captain Huſſey, Captain Crawford, Captain Fairlee, Captain Cockman, Captain Tichburne, Captain Pollexſen, Captain Gardiner, Captain Windham.

A.D. 1704. The Emperor's ſecond Letter to the Duke of Marlborough.

A Fortnight after this Battel, the Emperor wrote a Letter to the Duke of Marlborough beginning thus: Moſt Illuſtrious Couſin, and Moſt Dear Prince: "And then his Imperial Majeſty told him "he had freely, and of his own accord admitted "him among the Princes of the Holy Empire, "not ſo much in Conſideration of his Noble "Family, as upon Account of his perſonal Merit "and his great Deſerts towards the Auguſt Houſe "of Auſtria, and the Holy Roman Empire. I "have been willing, added his Imperial Majeſty, "that the ſupreme Honour in Germany, which I "with ſo much Juſtice conferr'd on you, ſhould "remain as a Monument, that it may the better "appear to all the World, as I freely acknow-"ledge it, how much my ſelf, and all the Em-"pire are indebted to the moſt Serene Queen of "Great Britain, for having ſent her powerful "Succours as far as Ausburg and Bavaria, when "my own Affairs, and thoſe of the Empire were "ſo much ſhaken and diſorder'd by the perfidious "Defection of the Bavarians to the French: And "to yourſelf, under whoſe Conduct things have "been ſo prudently, ſo vigorouſly and ſo ſucceſs-"fully tranſacted, that not only common Fame, "but the Generals of my Forces, the Companions "and Sharers of your Labours and Victories, "attribute the latter chiefly to your Counſels, and "the Valour and Bravery of the Engliſh and other "Forces who fought under your immediate Com-"mand. Theſe Actions are ſo great, particularly "that of Hochſtet, Ages paſt having never ſeen the "like Victory obtain'd over the French, that we "may rejoice to ſee, not only the moſt pernicious "Efforts of the Enemy repuls'd, and the Affairs "of Germany, which were in a tottering Conditi-"on, or rather thoſe of Europe, ſecur'd and "re-eſtabliſh'd, but likewiſe that it may be reaſo-"nably hop'd, that the full and perfect Liberty of "the Chriſtian World ſhall be reſcu'd from the "Yoke with which it was threaten'd by the Power "of France.

The States General having had this Victory notify'd to them by a Letter from my Lord Duke of Marlborough, which his Grace ſent by Colonel Panton:

Their High Mightineſſes ſent the following Anſwer.

My Lord,

States General Letter to the Duke of Marlborough.

COlonel Panton has deliver'd the agreeable Letter which your Excellency wrote to us the 14*th Inſtant, from the Camp at* Hochſtet; and he has alſo given us a very exact Recital of what paſt at the famous Battle fought the Day before.

We thank your Excellency with much Affection and Acknowledgment, for being pleas'd to import ſuch good News to us ſo early. After the Action of Schellemberg, which we look on as the firſt Fruits of this Campaign, we had ground to expect ſomething yet more great, but we dar'd not to extend our hope to a Victory ſo compleat as that which your Excellency has now obtain'd with the Confederate Army: This Battel ſets the Grandeur of your Enterprizes in a ſhining Light. A Battel! the Praiſe of which may be envy'd you by the greateſt Captains of former Ages. We Congratulate your Excellency thereupon, and heartily wiſh a Continuation of your Succeſs. We are extreamly glad at the Reputation you have hereby acquir'd, as well as at the Advantage which will reſult from it to the common Cauſe. This Action will let France ſee that her Arms are not always Victorious, and has given her ſuch a Blow as the preſent King has not had the like, during the whole Courſe of his Reign. We alſo return Thanks to God for his Goodneſs in giving a Bleſſing to your glorious Enterprize, and we pray that

A.D 1704. that he may more and more proſper your great Deſigns; aſſuring you, that none can be with more Eſteem and Sincerity than we,

Given at the Hague,
Auguſt 22, 1704. My LORD, &c.

Duke's Letter to his Dutcheſs.

Eight Days after the Battel Colonel Parks, the Duke of Marlborough's Aid de Camp, arriv'd at London with this Letter from his Grace to my Lady Dutcheſs, I have not Time to ſay more, than to beg of you to preſent my humble Duty to the Queen, and to let her Majeſty know that her Army has had a glorious Victory: Mareſchal Tallard, and two other Generals, are in my Coach, and I am following the reſt. The Bearer, my Aid de Camp, Colonel Parks, will give her Majeſty an Account of what has paſt: I ſhall do it in a Day or two by another, more at Large.

Auguſt the 13th,
1704. MARLBOROUGH.

His Grace wrote this Letter on Horſeback, with a Leaden Pencil; and it is not to be conceiv'd, much leſs expreſs'd, with what Joy the News was receiv'd by all good Britons in London, when Colonel Parks brought it, Thurſday, Auguſt the 10th, O. S. and afterwards all over the whole Iſland. High-Church, and even the Jacobites, were forc'd either to join in the general Exultation, or to ſhut themſelves up in Holes and Corners, abandoning themſelves to Grief and Deſpair. Colonel Parks was the firſt that brought the News to Holland, for which the States-General rewarded him with a Gold Chain and Medal of One thouſand five hundred Florens Value; and the ſame Preſent they made Colonel Panton. Her Majeſty receiv'd Colonel Parks's moſt welcome Meſſage, as became a Chriſtian and Proteſtant Princeſs, by ordering a Day of Publick Thankſgiving throughout the Kingdom a Month after, September the 7th.

The good Conſequence of the Victory.

As to the immediate Advantages of this glorious Victory, it will be ſufficient to ſay, that Bavaria became an entire Conqueſt to the Emperor. That Ratiſbon, Augsburgh, Ulm, Memmingen, and other Imperial Cities, recover'd their Liberties: That Peace was reſtor'd to the Circles of the Empire, and the Campaign on that Side crown'd with the taking of Landau, after a memorable Siege, where the King of the Romans commanded in Perſon. The Duke of Marlborough made the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for recovering Triers and Traerback from the Enemy: And after he left the Army, went to Berlin, and finiſh'd a Treaty that was negotiating with the King of Pruſſia, for Eight thouſand Men to ſerve in Italy, under Prince Eugene of Savoy. His Grace went from thence to the Court of Hanover; and his Reception at both Courts was ſuch, as ſo well-deſerving a General might have expected from ſuch hearty and puiſſant Confederates.

Duke of Marlborough at Berlin and Hanover.

If the Succeſſes in Germany, chiefly owing to the Conduct and Courage of the Duke of Marlborough, and the Bravery of the Britiſh Officers and Soldiers, had not caſt a Light that dazled all Beholders, the Actions perform'd by the Confederate Fleet and Forces at Sea, would have been very ſhining, and adorn'd the Annals of which they were a Part.

Gibraltar taken.

On the 17th of July, the Engliſh and Dutch Fleet under Sir George Rooke and Admiral Calemberg, being about ſeven Leagues to the Eaſtward of Tetuan, a Council of War was held, wherein it was reſolv'd to make a ſudden Attempt upon Gibraltar: Four Days after, the Fleet got into the Bay, and the Prince of Heſſe Darmſtadt landed with One thouſand eight hundred Engliſh and Dutch Marines, on the Neck of Land to the Northward of the Town, to cut off any Communication with the Country. His Highneſs having thus poſted his Men, ſummon'd the Governor to ſurrender the Place for the Service of his Catholick Majeſty, which he refus'd with Obſtinacy. The next Day the Admiral order'd the Ships that had been appointed to Cannonade the Town under Rear-Admiral Byng, and Rear-Admiral Vanderduſſen, as alſo thoſe which were to batter the South-Mole-Head, commandeded by Captain Hicks, of the Yarmouth, to range themſelves accordingly. The Canonading was perform'd with great Fury, about Fifteen thouſand Shot being made in four or five Hours Time, which ſoon beat the Enemy from their Guns from the South-Mole-Head. Captain Whitaker, with all the Boats, was order'd to attack the Fortification, which he perform'd with great Expedition; but Captain Hicks, and Captain Jumper, who lay next the Mole, had got aſhore with their Pinnaces before the other Boats could came up; upon which the Enemy ſprung a Mine, that blew up the Fortifications upon the Mole, and kill'd two Lieutenants, and above forty Men, and wounded about ſixty: However, the Engliſh kept Poſſeſſion of the great Platform, and Captain Whitaker landing with the reſt of the Seamen, they advanc'd, and took a Redoubt, half way between the Mole and the Town, and poſſeſs'd themſelves of many of the Enemies Cannon; upon which the Governor deſir'd to Capitulate, and ſurrender'd upon honourable Terms. The Marines were left in Gibraltar to Gariſon the Place, and the Fleet made over to Tetuan, to Wood and Water.

A.D. 1704.

On the 9th of Auguſt, the Centurion, one of their Scouts, brought Advice ſhe had made the French Fleet, ſixty three or ſixty-four Sail, coming down the Streights before the Wind: Upon which the Confederate Admirals form'd their Line, conſiſting of forty Engliſh, and twelve Dutch Men of War.

On the 12th of Auguſt, one of the Enemies Scouts, a Fifty-Gun Ship, finding ſhe could not Weather the Confederate Fleet, ran aſhore, and ſoon after blew up.

Sea Fight off Malaga.

About four that Afternoon, the Confederates diſcover'd the French Fleet, and made all the Sail they could to come up with them, but it was ten a Clock the next Day Forenoon, before they could engage them. About two Hours after the Battel began, the French Admiral obſerving their ſmaller Ships in the Line did little or no Service, and were like to be miſerably beaten, they were tow'd quite out of their Line from their great Ships, of which they had twice the Number, that the Engliſh and Dutch had: The French Line was ſo ſhorten'd by it, that not above four or five of the Dutch Ships could engage. About two in the Afternoon, the French Admiral order'd one of their ſeventy Gun Ships to board the Monk, a Ship of ſixty Guns, as was ſuppos'd to diſcover how the Engliſh were Mann'd, which ſhe did, and was beaten off three times with Loſs, and every time was remann'd from their Gallies, of which they had one and twenty. About four their Van bore away from ours, where moſt of the Engliſh great Ships were: Their Center and Rear ſtood more firm 'till ſeven at Night, when both Fleets gave over Firing, as if by Conſent. The Confederates kept in their Line all Night, in order to receive the Enemy next Morning; when the Wind veering Weſtward, they had the Weather-Gage of the Engliſh, but they kept about two Leagues to Windward. On the 15th, by another ſhift of Wind, the Engliſh diſcover'd them to be Leward four Leagues. The reſt of the Account is needleſs, ſince the two Fleets never met again.

The two Fleets leave off Firing.

But

A.D.1704. But that we may not be thought to derogate in the leaſt from the Glory of this Action, I ſhall repeat the Words of the Letter brought by Captain Trevor, Commander of the Triton, whom Sir George Rooke ſent Expreſs from Cape St. Vincent, the 27th of Auguſt.

" We bore down upon the Enemy in Order of " Battel, a little after ten a Clock, when being " about half Gun-ſhot from them, they ſet all " their Sails at once, and ſeem'd to intend to " ſtretch a-Head, and Weather us; then our Ad- " miral put out the Signal, and began the Battel, " which fell very heavy on the Royal Catherine, " the St. George, and the Shrewsbury. About two " in the Afternoon, the Enemies Van gave Way " to ours, and the Battel ended with the Day, " when the Enemy went away by the Help of " their Gallies. The Enemy had a Superiority of " Six hundred great Guns, and alſo the Advan- " tage of cleaner Ships, being lately come out of " Port; not to mention the great Uſe of their " Gallies in towing on or off their great Ships, " and in ſupplying them with freſh Men.

The Accounts from France were Word for Word the Reverſe of our own Accounts: And though that Nation is a Scandal to all others for falſifying Facts without the leaſt Regard to Probability or Decorum; and the French King was as guilty of as many Enormities that way as his Flatterers; particularly in his Letters to his Couſin, the Archbiſhop of Paris, to mock God with Te Deums for his Mock Victories: Yet as to this Sea Fight off of Malaga, one may gueſs, by what he ſays in his Letter for Thankſgiving, that our Addreſſers in England, who affect to put the Glory we obtain'd by it, on a Par with the wonderful Victory at Hochſtet, did very much overdo the Matter in Favour of Sir George Rooke, whoſe Health they drank, by the diſtinguiſhing Term of the Church-Admiral. The French King, to whom thoſe Addreſſers prov'd ſeven Years afterwards ſuch good Friends, ſaid,

The French King's Account of the Fight.

COUSIN,

THE Fleet which I have aſſembled in the Mediterranean, under the Command of my Son, the Count de Tholouze, Admiral of France, has not only diſappointed the Deſigns which the joint Fleets of England and Holland had upon the Coaſts of Catalonia, but has alſo put a glorious End to the Campaign, by a general Engagement, which iſſu'd wholly to my Advantage, though the Enemies were conſiderably more in Number, and had a favourable Wind. Their firſt Efforts were ſuſtain'd, and repuls'd with ſo much Valour, by all the Officers and Equipage of my Ships, animated by the Example of their General, that the Enemies could think of nothing during the Fight, which laſted ten Hours, but how to defend themſelves; how to avoid being boarded ſeveral times by my Ships, and to ſecure themſelves by a Retreat; and though the Count de Thoulouze did all he could the two following Days to come up with them, he could not bring them to a ſecond Engagement. This happy Succeſs obliges me to return Thanks to God by Publick Prayers.

In Sir George Rooke's Account we Read;

" In the Morning the Enemy was got five " Leagues to the Windward of us; but a little " before Noon we had a breeze of Wind Eaſterly, " with which we bore down on them 'till four " a Clock in the Afternoon: It being too late to " engage, we brought to. On the 16th, in the " Morning, the Wind being ſtill Eaſterly, hazy " Weather, and having no Sight of the Enemy, " we bore away to the Weſtward.

In a Relation of it printed at Paris, 'tis ſaid, The Enemy continu'd to ſtand off. The Battel ceas'd on the Van about five; on the Center at ſeven; and on the Rear at Night. The French Fleet purſu'd them, having all their Lanthorns out; whereas the Enemy had none but thoſe on their Flag Ships. On the 15th, the Wind turning Weſt, the Enemy retir'd to the Coaſt of Barbary, ſo that at Night we loſt Sight of them. On the 16th, in the Morning, we ſaw them at four Leagues Diſtance, the Wind being again turn'd Eaſt; the Enemy had a good Occaſion to renew the Fight, but did not. Since then we have no News of them. A.D.1704.

If we take the middle Way between theſe two Extremes, we may perhaps be pretty near the right. A late Writer expreſſes it thus: " The " Sea Fight, though very bloody, was far from " being deciſive, not a Ship being loſt on either " Side. 'Tis certain the Enemy were ſuperior to " us both in Weight and Number; and however " many among us blam'd the Conduct of the " Admiral, he came off, when all Things " are impartially conſider'd, much better than " could have been expected. Both Sides claim'd " a Victory, which in Truth neither of 'em " had; Let us remember this when we come to " High-Church Addreſſes upon it; both pretending " to ſeek out the other, and to come to a ſecond " Engagement, for which neither of them car'd; " and the want of ſufficient Ammunition on our " Side, argu'd a Weakneſs, to ſay no worſe, and " ought not eaſily to be pardon'd." In a Letter from an Officer on board the Fleet in this Engagement, are theſe Words: All the while we were daring the Enemy, we went on the Careen, by Turns, to ſtop our Shot-Holes; ſo that had they engag'd a ſecond Time, we muſt have engag'd them Board and Board, and either have carry'd them, or ſunk by their Sides. In a word, we were oblig'd to leave them, leſt they ſhould ſuſpect our Weakneſs, and force us to be deſperate. We left the Prince of Heſſe at Gibraltar, with a Gariſon of Two thouſand five hundred Men, of which Two thouſand are Marines, the reſt Gunners and Carpenters. Det. 187. A more impartial Account.

During the Action, which happen'd on the very ſame Day that my Lord Marlborough beat the French and Bavarian Armies at Hochſtet, were kill'd and wounded of the Engliſh Two thouſand three hundred fifty eight; of the Dutch Four hundred: Sir Andrew Lake, Captain of the Grafton, Captain Cow of the Ranelaugh, Lieutenant Jennings of the St. George, the third Lieutenant of the Shrewsbury, and the firſt Lieutenant of the Lenox, were all the Officers of their Rank that were kill'd; Captain Mymgs, Captain Baker, Captain Kirkton, Captain Jumper, Captain Myghels, Lieutenant Edisbury, Lieutenant Leſtock, were wounded, as were two Lieutenants of the Barfleur, and the Chaplain, ſeven or eight Lieutenants more, three Maſters, and about as many Boatſwains and Carpenters.

The Loſs on both Sides.

On the French Side were kill'd the Bailly of Lorraine, Commodore of a Squadron, and the Count de Thoulouſe's Second; five Captains, of which three were Knights, a Commiſſary of Marines, ſix Lieutenants, and five Sea Enſigns: Among the latter, the Mareſchal de Chateauregnault's Son, and the Sieur de Boulem Villers, the Count de Thoulouſe's Gentleman; the Count himſelf was wounded in the Forehead, Shoulder and Thigh; the Count de Relingnes had his Leg ſhot off; the Marquis de Herbault, Intendant of the Fleet; Monſieur du Caſſe, Commodore of a Squadron; Monſieur de Chateauregnault; the Count de Philepeaux, the Count de Cominges, Monſieur de Valincourt, the Count de Thoulouſe's Secretary, ſeven Captains, eight Lieutenants, and about One hundred and fifty other Officers were wounded; which

A.D.1704. which ſufficiently proves that the French had no great Reaſon to boaſt of their Succeſs; and though the Tory Party, to leſſen the Glory and Merit of the Duke of Marlborough's Victory, did compare Sir George Rooke's with it, as will be ſeen preſently; yet it would be unjuſt and ungrateful not to allow that that Admiral behav'd in the Fight at Malaga with great Courage and Conduct.

We have mention'd the Duke of Schomberg's being made Captain-General of all her Majeſty's Forces in Portugal; where his Father, the great Mareſchal Schomberg had commanded the Portugueſe Army againſt the Spaniards, and wreſted the Crown of Portugal from them forty Years before. But now ſome wrong Steps taken by the King of Portugal, as the putting the Dutch General, Monſieur Fagel, on a Level in the Command with Duke Schomberg, the dividing the Engliſh and Dutch Forces, and quartering them in different Provinces, contrary to that Duke's Advice, who was for keeping them together; the little Concurrence of Councils and Deſigns, which was the Conſequence of the Jealouſy between the Confederate Generals; and the Influence of the Duke of Cadaval, who was himſelf influenc'd by a French Woman, over Affairs in that Kingdom, kept Things backward there, and gave King Philip, and his General, the Duke of Berwick, Opportunity to invade Portugal, and take ſeveral Towns. The Duke of Berwick paſt the Tagus, and inveſted Portalegre, the Inhabitants of which Place forc'd the Gariſon to Surrender at Diſcretion; and amongſt them an Engliſh Regiment of Foot, commanded by Colonel Stanhope. From thence King Philip, and the Duke of Berwick brought this victorious Army before Caſtel-Davide, which though almoſt an open Town, yet refus'd to open her Gates. The Gariſon being encourag'd to defend themſelves, by the Reſolution of the Engliſh Regiment of Lieutenant-General Stewart, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Huſſey, whom I mention with the greater Pleaſure, becauſe he was my Friend, and I was not a little inſtrumental towards his taking to the Trade of Arms; when his Family, though of Diſtinction, as to Quality and Fortune, would have had him take to that of Linnen. The Marquis das Minas, to make a Diverſion, enter'd Caſtile with Fifteen thouſand ſeven hundred Men, and took Fuente Grinaldo by Storm. This had the Effect intended ſo far, that the Duke of Berwick march'd with a ſtrong Detachment to make Head againſt him. But the Marquis das Minas puſhing his Conqueſts, ſuch as they were, no farther, the Duke return'd to the Camp before Caſtel Davide, which Colonel Huſſey ſtill held out againſt the French and Spaniſh Army, commanded by the French King's Grandſon, and our late King James's Son: And now he propos'd to the Portugueſe to retire into the Caſtle, and defend it to the laſt Extremity; but the Militia open'd the Gates to the Spaniards, and ſo the whole Gariſon was made Priſoners of War about the latter end of June. After which the King of Spain, and the Duke of Berwick, raz'd the Walls of Portalegre, and Caſtle Davide, and return'd in Triumph into Spain, to Quarters of Refreſhment.

Ill Condition of the Portugueſe.

Colonel Huſſey's Bravery.

The Annaliſt, in his Account of Duke Schomberg's leaving Portugal, imputes it falſly to Intrigues between the Earl of Galway and the Lord Godolphin; whereas an Author who wrote of the Affairs of Spain and Portugal, from the moſt authentick Memoirs, tells us, "The Enemies Suc-
"ceſs gave us no ſmall Uneaſineſs in England;
"and the Duke of Schomberg finding his Advice
"had not that Weight it deſerv'd with the Portu-
"gueze, was deſirous to quit a loſing Game.
"Upon which the Queen reſolv'd to ſend the "Earl of Galway: Who in his Narrative laid
"before the Houſe of Lords, ſays,

A.D.1704.

In June, 1704, being retir'd into the Country, Hampſhire, I receiv'd the Queen's Commands to attend her Majeſty at Windſor, where ſhe was pleas'd to order me to go and take upon me the Command of her Troops in Portugal: I deſir'd to be excus'd from accepting an Employment, which I did not think my ſelf equal to; but the Queen ſeeming fix'd in her Reſolution, I obey'd.

Earl of Galway made General in Portugal.

Upon my Arrival at Lisbon, I found the two Kings of Spain and Portugal already marching for Abeira, and join'd them upon their Rout: But the Seaſon was much advanc'd, and it being thought impracticable to attack the Enemy there, it was reſolv'd to retire into Winter-Quarters.

As to the Earl of Portmore's loſing this Command upon a Jeſt of his Wife, the Counteſs of Dorcheſter, upon the Marlborough Family, as the Annaliſt expreſſes it, it was only the Chat at Tea-Tables, and unworthy a Place in Hiſtory.

Spaniards beſiege Gibraltar.

The Duke of Berwick, after his Troops were gone into Winter-Quarters, ſent a conſiderable Body to join the Marquis of Villadarias, who was going to beſiege Gibraltar, which he actually inveſted; and when that Reinforcement came up, beſieg'd it in Form. The Duke of Anjou was ſo far impos'd on by the French Accounts of the Count de Tholouſe's Victory over Sir George Rooke, That he wrote to the Count, his Unkle, I owe to you the Preſervation of the Coaſts of Spain, of which you deſerve to be ſtil'd the Deliverer; but I expect ſtill greater Things from your Services, by the Reduction of Gibraltar, which wou'd be entirely due to your Aſſiſtance. There is ſomething ridiculous in this Monarch's deſiring the Aſſiſtance of an Admiral, who thought himſelf happy in having his Ships ſafe in Harbour. And a ſmall Squadron of Engliſh Men of War, under Sir John Leake, was ſufficient to drive the French Admiral Pointis out of the Bay of Gibraltar, as will be ſeen hereafter.

Duke of Aujou's pleaſant Letter to the Count de Tholouſe.

To make the ſurer of the Reduction of Gibraltar, a Mareſchal of France, Monſieur de Theſſe, who had a grand Fame in Italy, was ſent with more Forces to carry on the Siege. The Prince of Heſſe-Darmſtadt's being likely to be hard preſs'd, my Lord Galway ſent him four of his beſt Battalions, and two Dutch Regiments, with a good Supply of Stores and Ammunition from Lisbon; which Relief arriv'd ſo happily, as not only to preſerve Gibraltar, but alſo to contribute to the entire Ruin of the Enemies Infantry. The Mareſchal, after ſix Months Toil, and fruitleſs Attacks, was at laſt forc'd to raiſe the Siege, by the reſolute and gallant Defence of the Engliſh Gariſon, and their Confederates the Dutch, under the Conduct and Command of the Vigilant, Indefatigable and Couragious Prince of Heſſe Darmſtadt.

Galway's Memorial, p. 15.

Mareſchal de Theſſe raiſes the Siege of Gibraltar.

The French overpower'd the Duke of Savoy this Year, and took Verceil, Ivres, and after the Place was reduc'd to a heap of Rubbiſh, Verue.

The Mediation of the Queen of Great Britain and the States-General, by their Miniſters, Mr. Stepney, and Monſieur Bruyninx, was not ſucceſsfully receiv'd in Hungary, occaſion'd by the Flatteries and falſe Promiſes of Monſieur Verville, the French Envoy with Prince Ragotski, Head of the Malecontents, and the Stiffneſs of the Emperor's Commiſſioners, too much under the Influence of Prieſts and Jeſuits.

We muſt now return into England, where we ſhall find the People every where expreſſing their

*A.D.*1704. Joy for the Succeſs of her Majeſty's Arms under the Duke of Marlborough, and as the Tories would needs have it Sir George Rooke too; which ſome of the Addreſſers jumbled together with ſo mnch Affectation, that they turn'd their Compliment into a Jeſt, as in this Addreſs from Rocheſter.

The Tories compare Sir George Rooke's Victory with the Duke of Marlborough's.

PErmit us, moſt Gracious Sovereign, humbly to addreſs your Majeſty upon the late glorious VICTORIES, wherewith God has bleſs'd your Arms, in the entire Overthrow and Ruin of the French and Bavarian Armies in Germany, and in the late SIGNAL Defeat of the united Powers of France by Sea.

As the firſt of theſe, a Victory ſo incomparably Great and Compleat, ſo highly conducing to the Advantage of the Common Cauſe, cannot but be allow'd to have advanc'd the ancient Glory of the Engliſh Nation to the utmoſt Height; and the latter to have convinc'd your Enemies that your Fleet can now be VICTORIOUS, even when inferior in Force; and that as no Difficulties or Diſadvantages are too great, to be ſurmounted by the undaunted Courage and Bravery of your Engliſh Seamen; ſo they ſeem to conſpire moſt eminently to juſtify your Majeſty's great Wiſdom in the Choice you was pleas'd to make of the Duke of Marlborough, and Sir George Rooke, to be the Commanders of your Army and Navy, who by their own Perſonal Bravery and Conduct, have contributed ſo much to the obtaining theſe Glorious Succeſſes; and have thereby made it evident to the World, that your Majeſty does never beſtow extraordinary Favours, but where you have firſt diſcern'd a more than ordinary Merit.

Lord Granville's Adareſs in Praiſe of Lord Godolphin.

'Twould be ſurfeiting to mention any more of theſe Addreſſes; let me only add a Word out of the Addreſs from the Mayor, &c. of Fowey in Cornwal, preſented by George Granville, Eſq; one of their Repreſentatives, introduc'd by the Lord Granville, becauſe they imputed the Duke of Marlborough's Victory in Germany, to her Majeſty's Care of the Church of England: And becauſe they not only congratulated her on the happy Choice of a General, but alſo on that of the Lord Treaſurer, then my Lord Godolphin, in theſe Words; Nor do we eſteem it a leſs Happineſs, that the ſame Providence has furniſh'd your Majeſty with a Perſon from amongſt us to be entruſted with your Majeſty's Revenues, whoſe frugal and faithful Adminiſtration has appear'd to be ſuch in that high Station, and in your Councils, that your People might always believe themſelves in full Peace at Home, were it not for the Fame of your Victories Abroad. Theſe Things will be fit to be remember'd hereafter. *A.D.*1704.

Both Parties join in the Proceſſion to St. Paul's.

I ſhall take no farther Notice of the Royal Cavalcade to St. Paul's Church on the Thankſgiving Day, September the 7th, than as there was in the Proceſſion ſome ſuch kind of Mixture of Parties, as there was on a like Occaſion of Yorkiſts and Lancaſtrians in the Reign of Henry the VIth.

James Vernon, Eſq; Secretary of State.
Henry Boyle, Eſq; Chancellor of the Exchequer.
Lord Halifax.
Lord Somers.
Lord Paget.
Lord Wharton.
Biſhop of St. Aſaph.
Earl of Grantham.
Earl of Berkeley.
Earl of Kent.
Duke of Bedford.
Duke of St. Albans.
Duke of Richmond.
His Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.
Sir Edward Northey, Attorney-General.
Sir Thomas Trevor, Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas.
Robert Harley, Eſq; Speaker of the Houſe of Commons.
Lord Granville.
Lord Powlet.
Earl of Arran.
Biſhop of Rocheſter.
Earl of Abingdon.
Earl of Nottingham.
Earl of Feverſham.
Duke of Northumberland.
Duke of Ormond.
Duke of Buckingham.
Sir Nathan Wright, Lord Keeper.

To theſe muſt be added the Lord Brooke, the Earl of Pembroke, and the Lord Godolphin: The latter, Lord High-Treaſurer, was but young in the Whig Party, and as yet did not own that Denomination, which his Lordſhip did afterwards in a very ſolemn Manner; as in his Letter to the Queen, before ſhe made that fatal Change in her Miniſtry ſix Years after.

THE

THE HISTORY OF ENGLAND, &c.

During the REIGN of Queen ANNE.

CHAP. II.

From the Battel of Blenheim, to the Treaty of the Hague.

The Space of Four Years, Eight Months.

A.D.1704. ON the 23d of October, the Parliament met at Weſtminſter, and her Majeſty made a Speech to both Houſes; Wherein having ſpoken of the remarkable Succeſs with which God had bleſs'd our Arms this Summer, and deſir'd the neceſſary Supplies for the next Year's Service by Sea and Land, and for performing our Treaties; her Majeſty added,

Queen's Speech to the Parliament.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I Cannot but tell you how Eſſential it is for attaining theſe great Ends Abroad, of which we have ſo hopeful a Proſpect, that we ſhould be entirely united at Home. It is plain our Enemies have no Encouragement, but what ariſes from their Hopes of our Diviſions. 'Tis therefore your Concern not to give the leaſt Countenance to thoſe Hopes.

My Inclinations are to be kind and indulgent to you all. I hope you will do nothing to endanger the Loſs of this Opportunity which God has put into our Hands, of ſecuring our ſelves and all Europe; and that there will be no Contention among you, but who ſhall moſt promote the publick Welfare.

Such a Temper as this in all your Proceedings, cannot fail of ſecuring you both at Home and Abroad.

This would make me a happy Queen, whoſe utmoſt Endeavours ſhall never be wanting to make you a happy and flouriſhing People. A.D.1704.

The two Houſes immediately voted Addreſſes of Thanks; and in that of the Lords it is ſaid, Lords good Addreſs.

" WE, &c. beg Leave to return our humble " and hearty Thanks to your Majeſty " for your moſt gracious Speech to your Parliament.

" The Kindneſs and Indul ence your Majeſty " hath expreſs'd for all your Subjects; your Care " to create a perfect Union amongſt us, by fore- " warning us of the Miſchiefs of Diviſions; your " Goodneſs in declaring your own Happineſs to " depend upon that of your People; your Deſire " to ſee that Happineſs ſettled upon a laſting " Foundation; your ſtrict Regard to Treaties; " your Juſtice to publick Engagements Abroad, as " well as at Home, and your Noble Concern for " the Support of the Liberties of Europe, com- " prehend all the Royal Qualities that can be de- " ſir'd in a Sovereign; and when they are all ſo " manifeſtly united in your Royal Perſon, we, " and the whole Nation, ſhould be inexcuſable to " God, and to the World, to this Age, and to " Poſterity, if we ſhould not endeavour effectually " to accompliſh all thoſe great and excellent De- " ſigns

*A.D.*1704. " ſigns which your Majeſty hath ſo wiſely and " graciouſly recommended.

" Upon this Occaſion of approaching your " Majeſty, we deſire humbly to congratulate the " great and glorious Succeſs of your Majeſty's " Arms, in Conjunction with thoſe of your Al- " lies, under the Command of the Duke of " Marlborough. We can never enough admire " your Wiſdom and Courage, in ſending that " ſeaſonable and neceſſary Aſſiſtance to the " Empire: And we cannot too much recom- " mend the Secrecy, Diſpatch and Bravery with " which your Orders were executed.

My LORDS,

Her Majeſty's Anſwer.

I Am very ſenſible of the great Duty and Affection you have expreſs'd in the ſeveral Particulars of this Addreſs.

I return you my hearty Thanks for your Congratulation of our great Succeſs, and for the Aſſurance of your Readineſs to concur in proſecuting it effectually.

The Commons in their Addreſs hook'd in the Sea-Fight off Malaga; but promiſe fair Things, as to the Supplies, to uſe the Words of a Writer of that Time. They ſay,

" WE beg Leave to congratulate your Maje- " ſty upon the great and glorious Suc- " ceſſes with which it hath pleaſed God to bleſs " your Majeſty, in the entire Defeat of the united " Force of France and Bavaria, by the Arms of " your Majeſty and your Allies, under the " Command, and by the COURAGE and " CONDUCT of the Duke of Marlborough; " and in the VICTORY obtain'd by your Maje- " ſty's Fleet, under the Command, and by the " COURAGE and CONDUCT of Sir Geargе " Rooke,

The Reader will perceive there is not a Word, no not a Letter difference, in the Praiſe and Merit of the Duke of Marlborough's and Sir George Rooke's Victories, tho' the Duke's was the greateſt and moſt glorious that ever was obtain'd by the Engliſh Arms Abroad, and the Knight's was no better nor worſe than a drawn Battel.

Her Majeſty return'd them many Thanks for the Aſſurances they gave her of diſpatching the Supplies, and avoiding all Diviſions; both which, as they were extreamly acceptable to her, ſo they would be advantageous to them.

The Annaliſt writes thus upon both the Addreſſes.

" The Lords Addreſs was univerſally applauded, " but abundance of Perſons were SHOCK'D " with that of the Commons; particularly with " their uſing the ſame Terms to commend " the Duke of Marlborough's Victories, and " the Advantages gain'd by Sir George Rooke. " It was alſo obſerv'd, that the Promiſe the Com- " mons made to the Queen of uſing their ut- " utmoſt Endeavours to prevent all Diviſions, was " in a manner reſtrain'd, by the Addition of all " proper Methods, which many look'd upon as " ominous; and that it was intended to give the " Queen to underſtand that they did not take the " dropping their Occaſional Bill, to perſecute Diſ- " ſenters, to be a proper Method; or indeed, that " Perſecution ought to be accounted a Diviſion." The ſame Author proceeds, 'Twas generally wiſh'd, and indeed expected, both in the Court, the City, and the Country, that the Bill which afforded Matter of Contention in the two former Seſſions, would not have been ſet on Foot again at this Juncture, " When all Parties ought, at " leaſt, to have ſuſpended their Animoſities, and " join'd in one Voice to celebrate the Triumphs of " her Majeſty's Arms. But notwithſtanding all " the Endeavours us'd by the Miniſters, to engage " the leading Men of the High-Church Party to " contain their PRETENDED Zeal for the " CHURCH 'till ſuch an Opportunity, as the " ſame might not appear to be a Deſign to obſtruct " the publick Buſineſs; the Parliament had not " ſate long, before Mr. William Bromley mov'd " for Leave to bring that Bill in: However, ſo " much Notice was taken of the Sailors and Sea- " men who had behav'd themſelves ſo gallantly, that a " Vote was put to deſire the Queen to beſtow her " Bounty upon them:" And by the 9th of December, the Land-Tax Bill was ready for the Royal Aſſent; and the Supplies granted by that Time for Land and Sea Service, amounted to Four Millions, ſix hundred thouſand Pounds. *A.D.*1704.

Her Majeſty having paſs'd the Land-Tax Bill, made a Speech to both Houſes, for making good the Aſſurances they gave her in their Addreſſes, of their Zeal and Affection to promote the publick Buſineſs; and ſhe particularly thanked the Commons, for their early Diſpatch of the neceſſary Supplies, which ſhe look'd upon to be a ſure Pledge of their Affection for her Service.

As there was ſomething very ridiculous, as well as malicious, in the confounding the Victory at Malaga with that at Blenheim, ſo was it very raſh and perverſe maugre all Forewarnings from the Throne, to puſh on the Occaſional Bill as furiouſly, as if the whole Conſtitution was in danger of Deſtruction, and there was no other way of ſaving it. Mr. William Bromley's Motion for bringing it in, was oppos'd by all the Moderate Party; and Mr. Boyle, Chancellor of the Exchequer, ſpoke ſtrenuouſly againſt it; however, it was carried in the Affirmative. This third Bill had a Preamble, which was a Copy of the Wiſdom and Sincerity of the Framers of it; for it intimated, That the Act of Indulgence ought to be inviolably obſerv'd, and the reſt of the Act notoriouſly invaded it. Notwithſtanding it was ſo carry'd in the Houſe of Commons, there were ſeveral Debates in the Tory Clubs, whether it ſhould be brought in or no. Thoſe Clubs conſiſted chiefly of Country Gentlemen, better known afterwards by the Appellations of October Men, and Fox-hunters; who when they were at Home, had moſt of their Converſation with the Rural Clergy, from whom they could not but learn many excellent Leſſons againſt Schiſm, which they were aſſur'd was ſynonimous with Presbyterianiſm, and conſequently muſt think they were in a very good Way, when they were doing ſo great Service to the Church, as to endeavour to pluck it up by the Roots. The Bill being reſolv'd upon in theſe Clubs, was brought into the Houſe the 23d of November, read the firſt Time, and after many long and warm Debates, order'd a ſecond Reading. This ſecond Struggle againſt the Bill, even in this Houſe of Commons, made thoſe who puſh'd it forwards, juſtly apprehenſive that it would never paſs by it ſelf through the Houſe of Lords: And therefore, after a long Conſultation in their Chief Club, that of the Vine Tavern in Long-Acre, it was reſolv'd to attempt the Tacking of it to the Land-Tax Bill. The Annaliſt tells us, it was done by the Suggeſtion of Mr. Robert Harley, In whom, ſays he, they ſtill repos'd great Confidence, but who deſign'd to decoy them into a Snare; for which one ſees by the Hiſtory, their Heads were well enough prepar'd: Accordingly at the ſecond Reading of the Conformity Bill, Mr. William Bromley, again,

Mr. William Bromley's Motion for the Bill againſt Proteſtant Diſſenters.

The October Clubs for it.

They propoſe the Tacking the Bill. Pag. 161.

A.D.1704. again, made a long Speech, which muſt be very long indeed, if the reſt of it had no more in it, than that Writer gives us of it: That the Practice of Occaſional Conformity was ſuch a ſcandalous Hypocriſy, as was no way to be excus'd upon any Pretence whatſoever. That it was condemn'd even by the better Sort of Diſſenters themſelves. That the employing Perſons of a different Religion from that eſtabliſh'd by Law, had never been practis'd by any wiſe Government, and was not allow'd even in Holland. All of it falſe Reaſoning, and falſe Fact. The conforming occaſionally is not Hypocriſy, Dr. Bates and Mr. Baxter practis'd and encourag'd it, and yet were not charg'd with being Hypocrites for it. The Religion of the Presbyterians is the Reform'd Religion, ſo is the Religion of the Church of England, and conſequently not different: But it appears by this Speech, that Mr. Bromley, Repreſentative for the Univerſity of Oxford, knew no more of Religion, than to make it conſiſt in Diſcipline, and not in Faith. As to what he ſays of the better Sort of Diſſenters condemning the Conforming Occaſionally, it ſhews that he was ignorant as well of their Opinion as their Practice, as appears by the Inſtances juſt mention'd of Mr. Baxter, and Dr. Bates; and I could give Hundreds of other ſuch Inſtances out of Dr. Calamy's Ejected Miniſters, and other Treatiſes, as alſo within my own Knowledge. This Mr. Bromley, writ and printed a Book of his Travels, which was ſo full of Trifles and Impertinences, that the Book was call'd in almoſt as ſoon as publiſh'd, if ever it had a regular Publication. Mr. Robert Harley being apprehenſive of his Rivalling him in the Speaker's Chair, by a ſuperior Intereſt in High-Church, having one of thoſe printed Copies by him, reprinted it upon that Occaſion; and to all that came to his Houſe about that Time, he ſaid, Have you not ſeen Mr. Br——y's Travels? Being anſwer'd in the Negative, he went into a back Parlour, where this Impreſſion of it lay, fetch'd it out, and gave every one a Copy, 'till that Matter was made up, and his Election ſecur'd. It is no wonder, therefore, if Mr. Bromley was no better inform'd in his Travels, than to aſſert that the Dutch employ'd none in their Service, but Perſons of their own Religion: They had Generals of their Armies, and Admirals of their Fleets, who were Papiſts. Witneſs a Saying of one of their Admirals, My Conſcience is God's, but my Sword is their High-Mightineſſes. Mr. Bromley ſaid farther in his Speech, The Sacramental Teſt was appointed by the Wiſdom of the Legiſlature to preſerve the eſtabliſh'd Church, not from Proteſtants, but Papiſts; which Church ſeems in as much Danger from the Diſſenters at this Time, as it was from Papiſts when the Act was made. And this Law being ſo neceſſary, and having been twice refus'd in the Houſe of Lords, the only Way to have it paſs, is to tack it to a Money-Bill. It has been an ancient Practice to tack Bills that were for the Good of the Subject, to the Money-Bills; it being reaſonable, that while grievous Taxes are laid upon the People for Support of the Crown, the Crown ſhould in return paſs ſuch Laws as are for the Benefit of the People. The great Neceſſity there is for the Money Bills paſſing, is rather an Argument for than againſt this Proceeding; for what danger can there be that the Lords who pretend to be ſuch great Patriots, ſhould rather loſe the neceſſary Supplies, than paſs an Act ſo requiſite for Preſervation of the Church? However, if we ſhould ſuppoſe them ſo unreaſonable, the Matter is not ſo bad, for it is only but Proroguing the Parliament for a few Days, and then the Commons might paſs the Land Tax again without the Tack; and ſo he concluded with Moving, That the Occaſional Conformity Bill might be tack'd to the Land-Tax Bill. Would one take this Gentleman to be ſo great in Politicks as to come to be a Miniſter of State, he being made Principal Secretary when his good Friend Mr. Harley was High Treaſurer? But if ſuch Stateſman will not go down, High-Church has no better to give us. A.D.1704.

Mr. Robert Harley puts a Trick upon Mr. William Bromley.

Mr. Bromley's Oration againſt Proteſtant Diſſenters.

Moves for the Tack.

The Lord Cutts loaden with the Laurels he won in the Service of his Queen and Country at Blenheim, ſaid things which Mr. Bromley was not capable of ſaying. The Engliſh Nation is now in the higheſt Conſideration abroad, and if any Diviſions ſhould happen between the two Houſes, it will caſt a Damp upon the whole Confederacy, and give the French King almoſt as great an Advantage as we had gain'd over him at Bienheim. The Right Honourable Henry Boyle, Member of Parliament for the Univerſity of Cambridge, as Mr. William Bromley was for Oxford, ask'd, Whether any wiſe Man would venture his whole Eſtate upon a Vote? And anſwering himſelf in the Negative, added, And ſhall we now venture the Safety of all England nay of all Europe upon this Vote? Mr. Secretary Hedges, as good a Churchman certainly as Mr. Bromley, repreſented, "That the Duke of Marl-"borough had lately concluded a Treaty with the "King of Pruſſia for 8000 of his Men to be em-"ploy'd towards the Relief of the Duke of Savoy, "who was now in the moſt imminent Danger: "That theſe Troops were actually on their "March, upon a Credit of a Vote of this Houſe, "That they would make good her Majeſty's Treaties; "and that the Obſtructing the Money Bill, "which the Tacking would infallibly do, would "put an immediate ſtop to the March of thoſe "Troops, and thereby occaſion the entire Ruin "of the Duke of Savoy." Sir John Hawles, the learned Sollicitor General in King William's Reign, perceiving that many Members were aſham'd of Mr. Bromley's Motion, and ſays the Annaliſt had left the High Church Party, wittily expos'd them, by ſaying, "That for his own Part, "he had been againſt this Bill from the Beginning, "but he wonder'd that thoſe Gentlemen who had "all along pretended the Church of England was "on the Brink of Ruin, unleſs ſuch a Bill ſhould "paſs, did not purſue the only Method that might "ſecure the paſſing of that Bill. I put it to the "Conſcience of thoſe Gentlemen who are come "over to us, added he, whether they were before "ſatisfied as to the Reaſonableneſs and Neceſſity "of this Bill, ſince they now deſert their own "Friends: I wiſh they had voted on our ſide two "Years ago, for it would have ſav'd us a great "deal of Trouble, the greateſt Part of the Nation "a great deal of Uneaſineſs, and themſelves the "Confuſion of abandoning their Party at a Pinch." Sir Thomas Littleton, the late Speaker ſaid, Gentlemen, by the Tacking of this Bill, we mean to throw a Neceſſity upon the Lords to paſs it; but ſuppoſe the Lords think fit to Untack what we have Tack'd, and to acquaint us that they are ready to paſs the Money Bill, but will conſider of the other: Pray whoſe fault will the Nation account it to be, that the Queen's Service is retarded? Little was or could be ſaid to theſe Arguments, and ſtill leſs to the ſtrong one, that the Tacking it was a Breach of the Conſtitution, as it took from the Lords their ancient and undoubted Right of a Negative upon any Bills from the Commons, Money Bills only excepted. But according to the Notions of High Church, we have no Conſtitutions but Church, as they underſtand the Term, and not as it was underſtood in the Primitive Times, and will be always underſtood by ſuch as take it in a Goſpel Interpretation. Some of them cannot be ſo ignorant, but they did and do know it; and therefore Lord Cutts's Speech againſt the Bill.

And Mr. Boyle's.

Sir Charles Hedges.

1628. Sir John Hawles.

Sir Thomas Littleton.

A.D.1704. when they have got another Word to do their Business with, they keep Church in Petto for some other Occasion. If the Tacking Question had been carry'd in the Affirmitive, the Parliament had been dissolv'd, and all the Wheels of the great Machine, the War, stopp'd at once, and the Liberties of England and all Europe, the Protestant Religion, the present Age and the Future, would have been sacrific'd to France, for a Dream of the Church's Danger, under a Queen who was one of its most zealous Members. When it came to a Push, near 120 Members fell off from the Tories, and voted with those who were in the true Interest of their Country; and upon the Question, whether the Bill should be Tack'd or not, it past in the Negative: Yeas 134, No's 251. Those unhappy 134 became so odious to the Nation, that near 50 of them were thrown out at the next Election. I shall here insert the Lists of those Members that voted for the Tack, and were thence by way of Reproach call'd Tackers all over England, and of those who voted against the Tack.

The dreadful Consequences of this Bill.

Members desert the High-Church Party.

For the Tack.	Against the Tack.
Bedfordshire. Not One.	Bedfordshire. Lord Edward Russel, Sir William Gostwick, William Spencer, Esq; Edward Carteret, Esq;
Berkshire. Sir John Stonehouse.	Berkshire. Richard Neville, Esq; Lord Fizharding, Richard Topham, Esq; Sir Owen Buckingham, Tanfield Vachel, Esq; William Jennens, Esq; Thomas Renda, Esq; Sir Simon Harcourt.
Bucks. Sir Henry Parker, John Drake, Esq; Sir Samuel Garrard, Sir James Etheridge.	Bucks. Sir Richard Temple, Sir Edmund Denton. Roger Price, Esq; Charles Godfrey, Esq; Fleetwood Dormer, Esq; Richard Hampden, Esq; Richard Crawley, Esq; James Chace, Esq;
Cambridgeshire. Granado Piggot, Esq; Arthur Annesley, Esq;	Cambridgeshire. Sir Rushout Cullen, Right Hon. Henry Boyle, Esq; Sir Henry Pickering, Anthony Thompson, Esq;
Cheshire. The whole Number. Sir George Warburton, Sir Roger Mostyn, Sir Henry Bunbary, Peter Shakerley, Esq;	Cheshire. Not One.
Cornwall. John Buller, Esq; Sir Richard Vivian, John Hoblyn, Esq; William Cory, Esq; William Pole, Esq; Henry Poley, Esq; Charles Seymour, Esq; Sir Henry Seymour, Francis Scobel, Esq; John Manley, Esq;	Cornwall. William Bridges, Esq; Thomas Dodsou, Esq; Russel Roberts, Esq; Sir John Molesworth, Henry Vincent, Esq; Francis Roberts, Esq; Francis Godolphin, Esq; Sidney Godolphin, Esq; Thomas Carew, Esq; James Craggs, Esq;

For the Tack.	Against the Tack. A.D.1704.
Joseph Sawle, Esq; John Anstis, Esq; James Praid, Esq; John Spark, Esq;	Alexander Pendarves, Esq; Hugh Boscowen, Esq; William Hooker, Esq; John Hicks, Esq; Henry Flemming, Esq; Renatus Bellot, Esq; Francis Basset, Esq; Sir Nicholas Morrice, Samuel Rolle, Esq; William Coryton, Esq; Sir John Pole.
Cumberland. Wilford Lawson, Esq;	Cumberland. Thomas Stanwix, Esq; James Stanhope, Esq; Thomas Lamplugh, Esq;
Derbyshire. John Curzon, Esq;	Derbyshire. Thomas Coke, Esq; James Harpur, Esq; Thomas Stanhope, Esq;
Devonshire. Sir Edward Seymour, John Snell, Esq; William Seymour, Esq; Thomas Coulson, Esq; Arthur Champneys, Esq; Nathaniel Herne, Esq; Frederick Herne, Esq;	Devonshire. Sir William Courtney, Robert Rolle, Esq; Charles Trelawney, Esq; John Woolcomb, Esq; Sir Simon Leach, Thomas Northmore, Esq; Nicholas Hooper Serjeant at Law. Richard Edgecombe, Esq; Richard Hale, Esq; Sir Walter Young. John Bulteel, Esq; Henry Maunton, Esq; Sir Thomas Lear, Richard Keynel, Esq; William Cowper, Esq; Sir Peter King, Thomas Bere, Esq; Robert Burridge, Esq;
Dorsetshire. Thomas Strangeways, Esq; Thomas Chaffin, Esq; Henry Thynne, Esq; John Banks, Esq; Richard Bingham, Esq; Richard Fownes, Esq;	Dorsetshire. Sir William Phippard, William Jolliffe, Esq; Nathaniel Napier, Esq; Henry Henly, Esq; John Burridge, Esq; Anthony Henly, Esq; Charles Churchil, Esq; Alexander Pitfield, Esq; Sir John Cropley, Edward Nicholas, Esq; Sir Thomas Ernle, Thomas Erle, Esq;
Durham. Sir Henry Bellasis.	Durham. Sir Robert Eden, Sir William Bowes, Thomas Conyers, Esq;
Essex. Sir Charles Barrington, William Fytch, Esq; John Comyns, Esq;	Essex. Sir Francis Masham, Sir Isaac Rebow, Sir Thomas Cook, Sir Thomas Daval, John Ellis, Esq;
Gloucestershire. Not One.	Gloucestershire. Maynard Colchester, Esq; William Trye, Esq; John Hanbury, Esq; William Master, Esq; Richard Dowdeswell, Esq; Edmund Bray, Esq;

A.D. 1704.

For the Tack.	Against the Tack.
Herefordſhire.	Herefordſhire.
Henry Gorges, Eſq;	James Brydges, Eſq;
Thomas Price, Eſq;	Thomas Foley, Eſq;
	Lord Coningsby,
	Edward Harley, Eſq;
	Henry Cornwall, Eſq;
Hertfordſhire.	Hertfordſhire.
Ralph Freeman, Eſq;	Thomas Hale, Eſq;
John Gape, Eſq;	George Churchill, Eſq;
Charles Cæſar, Eſq;
Richard Goulſton, Eſq;
Huntingtonſhire.	Huntingtonſhire.
Not One.	John Dryden, Eſq;
	William Naylor, Eſq;
	Earl of Orrery,
	Anthony Hammond, Eſq;
Kent.	Kent.
Sir Francis Leigh,	Sir Thomas Hales,
William Cage, Eſq;	Henry Lee, Eſq;
Heneage Finch, Eſq;	George Sayer, Eſq;
Robert Crawford, Eſq;	Edward Knatchbull, Eſq;
	Thomas King, Eſq;
Lancaſhire.	Lancaſhire.
Thomas Leigh of Lyme, Eſq;	Richard Aſhton, Eſq;
Orlando Bridgman, Eſq;	Richard Fleetwood, Eſq;
	Charles Stanley, Eſq;
	Sir Cyril Wyche,
	Robert Heyſham, Eſq;
	Sir William Lowther,
	Sir Roger Bradſhaigh,
	Thomas Stringer, Eſq;
	Ambroſe Pudſay, Eſq;
	William Clayton, Eſq;
	Sir Thomas Johnſon.
Leiceſterſhire.	Leiceſterſhire.
Sir George Beaumont,	John Verney, Eſq;
James Winſtanley, Eſq;	John Wilkins, Eſq;
Lincolnſhire.	Lincolnſhire.
Lewis Dymocke, Eſq;	Sir Edward Irby,
Sir John Thorold,	Sir Edward Huſſey,
William Cecil, Eſq;	John Chaplain, Eſq;
Charles Bertie, Eſq;	Arthur Moore, Eſq;
	Sir William Ellis,
	Richard Ellis, Eſq;
Middleſex.	Middleſex.
Warwick Lake, Eſq;	Sir Gilbert Heathcot.
Hugh Smithſon, Eſq;
Sir Walter Clarges.
Monmouthſhire.	Monmouthſhire.
Not One.	John Morgan, Eſq;
Norfolk.	Norfolk.
Thomas Palgrave.	Sir John Holland,
	Sir Jacob Aſtley,
	Thomas Blofield, Eſq;
	Robert Walpole, Eſq;
	Benjamin England, Eſq;
	John Nicholſon, Eſq;
Northamptonſhire.	Northamptonſhire.
John James, Eſq;	Sidney Wortley Mountague, Eſq;
	Sir Gilbert Dolben,
	Sir Matthew Dudley,
	Francis Arundel, Eſq;
	Charles Egerton, Eſq;
	Thomas Wentworth, Eſq;

A.D. 1704

For the Tack.	Against the Tack.
Northumberland.	Northumberland.
Bertram Stote, Eſq;	Sir Francis Blake,
	Sir Henry Liddel,
	William Carr, Eſq;
	Emanuel How, Eſq;
	Sir John Delaval,
	Samuel Ogle, Eſq;
	Jonathan Hutchinſon, Eſq;
Nottinghamſhire.	Nottinghamſhire.
Sir Willoughby Hickman,	John Thorhough, Eſq;
William Levinz, Eſq;	Sir Francis Molyneux,
	George Gregory, Eſq;
	William Pierrepoint, Eſq;
	Sir Matthew Jenniſon,
	James Saunderſon, Eſq;
Oxfordſhire.	Oxfordſhire.
To a Man.
Sir Robert Jenkinſon,
Sir Edward Norreys,
Sir William Whitlocke,
William Bromley, Eſq;
Thomas Rowney, Eſq;
Francis Norreys, Eſq;
James Bertie, Eſq;
Sir William Glynne,
Charles North, Eſq;
Rutland.	Rutland.
Richard Hatford, Eſq;
Salop.	Salop.
Sir Edward Acton.	Roger Owen, Eſq;
	Richard Corbett, Eſq;
	John Kynaſton, Eſq;
	Richard Mytton, Eſq;
	Sir Humphrey Briggs,
	Sir Thomas Powys,
	Francis Herbert, Eſq;
	George Weld, Eſq;
	Charles Maſon, Eſq;
	Henry Brett, Eſq;
Somerſetſhire.	Somerſetſhire.
William Coward, Serjeant at Law.	Nathaniel Palmer, Eſq;
Henry Portman, Eſq;	Sir Philip Sydenham,
Sir Jacob Banks,	Robert Yate, Eſq;
James Anderton, Eſq;	Sir William Daines,
	William Blaithwate, Eſq;
	Alexander Popham, Eſq;
	Sir Francis Warr,
	Edward Clarke, Eſq;
	Sir Thomas Wroth,
	George Balch, Eſq;
	Alexander Lutterel, Eſq;
	Sir Francis Wyndham,
	Sir Thomas Travel,
	John Hunt, Eſq;
Southampton.	Southampton.
Henry Holmes, Eſq;	Richard Norton, Eſq;
Leonard Bilſon, Eſq;	George Pitt, Eſq;
William Stephens, Eſq;	Lord William Pawlet,
Francis Gwynn, Eſq;	George Rodney Brydges, Eſq;
	Frederick Tilney, Eſq;
	Adam de Cardonnel, Eſq;
	William Gifford, Eſq;
	Sir George Rooke,
	Anthony Morgan, Eſq;
	Robert Mitchel, Eſq;
	Lord Cutts,
	Anthony Burnaby, Eſq;
	Henry Killegrew, Eſq;

Sir

A.D.1704

For the Tack.	Against the Tack.
	Sir Thomas Hopſon,
	John Leigh, Eſq;
	William Ettrick, Eſq;
	Thomas Dore, Eſq;
	Paul Burrard, Eſq;
	Richard Woolaſton, Eſq;
	John Schrimpton, Eſq;
	John Smith, Eſq;
	Francis Shepheard, Eſq;
Staffordſhire.	Staffordſhire.
Richard Dyot, Eſq;	Henry Paget, Eſq;
Joſeph Girdler, Serjeant at Law.	Edward Begot, Eſq;
	Sir Michael Biddulph,
	Thomas Foley, Eſq;
	Walter Chetwynd, Eſq;
	John Crew Offley, Eſq;
	Rowland Cotton, Eſq;
	Thomas Guy, Eſq;
Suffolk.	Suffolk.
Earl of Dyſert,	Sir Dudley Cullum,
John Bence, Eſq;	Serjeant Whitaker,
Sir Charles Blois,	Sir George Elways,
Robert Kemp, Eſq;	Spencer Compton, Eſq;
Sir Edmund Bacon,	Sir Joſeph Jekyl,
Sir Edward Turner,	Sir Thomas Felton.
George Daſhwood, Eſq;
Sir Robert Davers.
Surrey.	Surrey.
Leonard Weſſel, Eſq;	Sir Richard Onſlow,
Sir John Parſons,	Charles Cox, Eſq;
George Vernon, Eſq;	John Cholmly, Eſq;
Thomas Heath, Eſq;	John Ward, Eſq;
	Sir Robert Clayton,
	Henry Harvey, Eſq;
	Morgan Randyl, Eſq;
	Denzill Onſlow, Eſq;
	Maurice Thompſon, Eſq;
	Thomas Onſlow, Eſq;
Suſſex.	Suſſex.
John Toke, Eſq;	Thomas Pelham, Eſq;
William Elſon, Eſq;	Henry Lumley, Eſq;
	John Miller, Eſq;
	Henry Cowper, Eſq;
	John Wicker, Eſq;
	John Lewkener, Eſq;
	Lawrence Alcock, Eſq;
	Sir Nicholas Pelham,
	Richard Baine, Eſq;
	John Perry, Eſq;
	Nathaniel Gould, Eſq;
	Samuel Sambroke, Eſq;
	John Aſgil, Eſq;
	Sir Edward Hungerford,
	Charles Goring, Eſq;
	John Conyers, Eſq;
	Edmund Dummer, Eſq;
	Carew Weekes, Eſq;
Warwickſhire.	Warwickſhire.
Sir John Mordaunt,	Not One.
Sir Chriſtopher Hales,
Thomas Gery, Eſq;
Francis Greville, Eſq;
Algernon Greville, Eſq;
Weſtmoreland.	Weſtmoreland.
Not One.	William Fleming, Eſq;
	Henry Grahme, Eſq,
	Lord Pierrepoint,
	James Grahame, Eſq;
Wiltſhire.	Wiltſhire.
Sir Richard How,	Robert Eyre, Eſq;

A.D.1704.

For the Tack.	Against the Tack.
Robert Hyde, Eſq;	Sir John Hawles,
Charles Fox, Eſq;	John Gauntlett, Eſq;
Sir James How,	Sir James Aſh,
Robert Bartie, Eſq;	Thomas Jerviſe, Eſq;
Henry Chivers, Eſq;	Edward Aſh, Eſq;
William Harvey, Eſq;	William Monſon, Eſq;
Henry Pinnel, Eſq;	Henry Bertie, Eſq;
	Sir Charles Hedges,
	Francis Merryweather, Eſq;
	John Methuen, Eſq;
	Lord Mordaunt,
	James Mountague, Eſq;
	Thomas Bowcher, Eſq;
	Edward Pauncefort, Eſq;
	Thomas Webb, Eſq;
	Samuel Barker, Eſq;
	James Bruce, Eſq;
	Edmund Webb, Eſq;
	John Webb, Eſq;
	Francis Stonehouſe, Eſq;
	Charles Mompeſſon, Eſq;
	Henry St. John, Eſq;
	Robert Bruce, Eſq;
	Edward Jefferys, Eſq;
Worceſterſhire.	Worceſterſhire.
Sir John Packington,	William Walſh, Eſq;
Hugh Parker, Eſq;	Samuel Swift, Eſq;
	Thomas Wylde, Eſq;
	Edward Foley, Eſq;
	Charles Cox, Eſq;
	John Rudge, Eſq;
	Salway Winnington, Eſq;
Yorkſhire.	Yorkſhire.
Robert Byerley, Eſq;	Lord Hartington,
James Darcy, Eſq;	Sir John Kay,
Sir Bryan Stapelton.	Sir William Robinſon,
	Tobias Jenkins, Eſq;
	Sir William St. Quintin,
	William Maiſter, Eſq;
	Chriſtopher Stockdale, Eſq;
	William Thompſon, Eſq;
	John Hungerford, Eſq;
	John Sharp, Eſq;
	Sir William Huſtler,
	Thomas Yorke, Eſq;
	Henry Guy, Eſq;
	Sir Henry Goodrick,
	Sir William Strickland,
	William Palmes, Eſq;
	Sir Godfrey Copley,
	Sir Thomas Frankland,
	Robert Monckton, Eſq;
	William Jeſſop, Eſq;
	Sir Charles Hotham,
	William Gee, Eſq;
	Robert Dormar, Eſq;
	John Aiſlaby, Eſq;
	Sir John Bland,
	William Lowther, Eſq;
Cinque-Ports.	Cinque-Ports.
John Mitchel, Eſq;	William Aſhburnham, Eſq;
	John Pulteney, Eſq;
	Matthew Aylmer, Eſq;
	Philip Papillon, Eſq;
	Sir Henry Furneſe,
	Sir Philip Boteler,
	John Boteler, Eſq;
	Walter Whitfield, Eſq;
	John Brewer, Eſq;
	Thomas Fagg, Eſq;
	Edward Southwel, Eſq;
	George Clarke, Eſq;
	James Hodges, Eſq;

Sir

A.D.1704.

For the Tack.	Againſt the Tack.
	Sir William Thomas,
	William Loundes, Eſq;
Wales.	Wales.
Sir Humphry Mackworth,	Lord Bulkeley.
Thomas Bulkeley, Eſq;	Coningsby Williams, Eſq;
Henry Lloyd, Eſq;	John Jefferys, Eſq;
Sir John Wynne,	Sir Jeffrey Jeffereys,
Sir Thomas Hanmer,	Griffith Rice, Eſq;
Thomas Maſtyn, Eſq;	Richard Vaughan, Eſq;
Edward Vaughan, Eſq;	Sir Richard Middleton,
John Vaughan, Eſq;	Edward Brereton, Eſq;
	Thomas Manſel, Eſq;
	Sir Arthur Owen,
	John Langhorn, Eſq;
	Thomas Harley, Eſq;
	Robert Harley, Eſq;

Mr. William Bromley's Bill being ſent to the Lords, upon its being Read, the Archbiſhop of York declar'd, He was for ſo much of it as concern'd the Church. The Earl of Peterborough ſaid, He was glad to hear that learned Prelate make a Diſtinction between the Eccleſiaſtical and Political Part of the Bill, and he hop'd that all the Lords, who in their Conſciences were ſatisfy'd, as his Grace ſeem'd to be, that this Bill was fram'd to ſerve a Temporal as well as Spiritual End, would vote againſt it. Many other Speeches were made for and againſt the Bill, the Queen being Preſent. But the Queſtion being put, whether it ſhould be read a ſecond Time, it was carry'd in the Negative, by a Majority of Seventy-one Voices againſt Fifty, the Majority increaſing nine this Year beyond the laſt. —Which, ſays my Author, is no Wonder, ſince, beſides Mr. William Bromley, the Archbiſhop of York, &c. within Doors, the Roman Catholicks publickly, both by Speaking and Writing eſpous'd the Bill, as if they had ſome certain Benefit in View, of which many well-meaning Gentlemen were not aware.

Det. 190.

Lord Haverſham, a Presbyterian, for the Bill.

About this Time the Lord Haverſham, who had been a zealous Presbyterian, one of Mr. How's Congregation at Haberdaſher's-Hall, if he was not ſtill ſo, began to let his Reſentment for real or imaginary Slights break out; though his Lordſhip had had no great Reaſon to complain, 'till towards the latter End of King William's Reign, when the Tories were taken into the Miniſtry; and now, like other Gentlemen who were diſguſted with the Adminiſtration becauſe they were not in it, he deſerted his old Friends, and join'd with his old Enemies; Speaking and Voting as the Earl of Rocheſter, the Earl of Nottingham, and others of the High-Church Stamp did. The firſt Speech he made on their Side was very ill Tim'd, it being on the Inſtant when the Court was crowded with Addreſſes from all Quarters of the Kingdom, to congratulate her Majeſty, not only on the glorious Succeſſes of her Arms, but on thoſe of her Councils alſo. From this Time the Lord Haverſham ſeldom fail'd of having a Speech ready at the opening of every Seſſion of Parliament, as he ſeldom fail'd of having ſome Grievance or other to complain of.

Deſerts the Whigs.

The Speech he made November the 29th, was introduc'd with great Pomp; his Lordſhip acquainted the Houſe three Days before, that he had Matter of great Importance to lay before them, but deſir'd it might be in a full Houſe: Upon which all the Lords in Town, and in the Neighbourhood, were ſummon'd to attend the Thurſday following, when his Lordſhip ſpake what he had prepar'd for that Occaſion; which I ſhall not inſert at Large, but mention only the moſt remarkable Paſſages.

I would be far from detracting or leſſening any Man's juſt Praiſe, and do verily believe that the WONDERFUL VICTORY obtain'd over the French, under the Conduct of Prince Eugene and the Duke of Marlborough, if conſider'd in all its Circumſtances, eſpecially the unuſual Secrecy with which the Orders were executed, is the greateſt any Hiſtory can ſhew us. A.D.1704.

It was objected againſt this, when the Speech was printed, that the naming Prince Eugene before the Duke of Marlborough, was derogatory to the Duke's Glory, in the Mention of an Action in which that Prince acted but a ſecond Part.

I cannot indeed congratulate Sir George Rooke's entire Victory over the French, but I can, and do heartily, his ſafe Deliverance from them.

Let us ſee now how this Expreſſion would have look'd in one of our Tory Addreſſes: We will make Uſe of that of the County of Cornwal, preſented by Sir Richard Vivian and James Buller, Eſquire, Knights of the Shire, introduc'd by the Lord Granville.

But 'tis not enough that your Majeſty triumphs by Land, to compleat your Glory your Forces by Sea have likewiſe done Wonders, in Sir George Rooke's ſafe Deliverance from the French; which gives a very ridiculous Turn to the Addreſſes, but a very true and juſt one. Lord Haverſham again:

Let our Victories be what they will Aſhore, while France is thus powerful at Sea, and more ſo daily, not only by his new Additions, but by our too eaſy Conceſſions, as were thoſe of St. Chriſtophers, Newfoundland, and Hudſon's Bay; while our Trade, if thus neglected, and your Lordſhip's faithful and provident Advice baffled, by the dark Counſels of no body knows who, England, in my Opinion, can never be ſafe.

Lord Haverſham having been ſome Time one of the Lords of the Admiralty, muſt not only have Knowledge of the Affairs of the Navy, but be well enough pleas'd to find that thoſe that came after him at that Board, gave him Occaſion to diſcredit their Conduct.

Another Thing that I ſhall take Notice of, is the preſent State of the Coin; and I dare venture to ſay, that if ſuch vaſt Exportations be much longer continu'd and allow'd, we ſhall have very little left at Home; France may be beaten, but England will be beggar'd. The beaten and beggar'd, as much a Jingle as it was, took mightily with High-Church. The Earl of Rocheſter ſeconded the Lord Haverſham; ſo did the Earl of Nottingham: And the Lord Godolphin, Lord High-Treaſurer, who took what was ſaid of the Coin, to be a Side-Wind Reflection upon himſelf, ſaid, Though it would not be difficult to demonſtrate, that there never was ſo great a Plenty of Money in England as at preſent, yet there is a ſure way to increaſe that Plenty, and prevent the Exportation of Coin, and that is, by clapping up a Peace with France; but then I leave it to the Conſideration of any wiſe Man, whether we will not thereby be in Danger of loſing not only all our Coin, but all our Land to boot?

Lord Haverſham ſeconded by Lord Rocheſter.

Lord Godolphin anſwers them.

The reſt, and greateſt Part of the Lord Haverſham's Speech, related to the Affairs of Scotland, where he ſaid there was a Motley Miniſtry; that what hinder'd the ſettling the Proteſtant Succeſſion there, was a receiv'd Opinion, That it was never ſincerely and cordially intended, either by the Miniſtry in Scotland, or by thoſe that manag'd the Scotch Affairs in England. He then complain'd of the Act of Security which was paſs'd in Scotland, and by which all the Heretors and Burghs there were to be Arm'd and Diſciplin'd; and this he apprehended would be an Inducement to England to keep Forces up to be a Guard on the Borders. His Lordſhips Words were:

A.D.1704.

Lord Haverſham's Saying goes by his Name.

Beſides this, my Lords, I take it to be of the laſt Danger to England, that there ſhould be the leaſt Shadow or Pretence of a Neceſſity to keep up Regular and Standing Troops in this Kingdom in Time of Peace: For I ſhall always be of the ſame Opinion, that what has been, may be: A Saying very old and common, but it now goes by the Name of the Lord Haverſham. It is good to obſerve, that the Enemies to the Government, whether Diſaffected or Diſguſted, whether Jacobites or Grumblers, have ever ſince the Revolution, made Uſe of the ſame Topicks to declaim upon. Lord Haverſham brings into his Speech the great Loſſes at Sea, Neglect of Trade, Exportation of Money, and a Standing Army: So did Seymour and How, in King William's Time; ſo Trenchard, &c. in King George the Firſt's Reign; ſo P—— and W—— in King George the Second's; ſo will every Enemy to the Adminiſtration, whether out of Malice or Reſentment, as long as there is an Adminiſtration, of which they are not a Part.

Earl of Nottingham reflects on King William.

The Lords appointed the 29th of November to conſider of the Scotch Buſineſs; and the Queen came to the Houſe Incognita, both to hear the Debates about that important Matter, and to allay, by her Preſence, any Heats that might ariſe; and it was ſoon ſeen that her being preſent was very neceſſary: For the Earl of Nottingham, reflecting on the late King William, who had beſtow'd ſo much of his Favour on the Earl, as to diſguſt all that were Friends to the Revolution Settlement: The Lord Somers took him up with great Spirit and Reaſon, ſaying It was unbecoming a Member of that Houſe to ſully the Memory of ſo great a Prince; and he doubted not but a Man who could reflect on King William before his Succeſſor, would do the ſame by her preſent Majeſty when ſhe was gone. As to the Treaty of Partition, which was the Subject of the Earl of Nottingham's ſullying King William's Memory, my Lord Somers added, That there was a Noble Lord there preſent, meaning the Earl of Jerſey, who was the principal Agent and Plenipotentiary in that Treaty, and whoſe Duty, as well as Intereſt it was, to vindicate both the Memory of his late moſt gracious Maſter, and his own Conduct. The Lord Mohun conſulted with ſeveral Peers, whether they ſhould move to ſend the Earl of Nottingham to the Tower? And the Annaliſt gives no other Reaſon for not making the Motion, than That being the firſt Time the Queen did the Houſe the Honour to come to hear their Debates, they thought fit to decline that Motion, out of meer Reſpect to her Majeſty.

Anſwer'd by Lord Somers.

Earl of Nottingham in danger of the Tower for it.

The Buſineſs of the Day was chiefly the Debate upon the Act of Security in Scotland: The ill Conſequences of which were urg'd by the Earl of Rocheſter, and others, who were thought to be animated in their Zeal for the Safety of England, by their Enmity to the Lord Treaſurer, whom they would have charg'd with being the Adviſer in the Paſſing of that Act by her Majeſty; and in the main, there were ſome Clauſes in it which good Engliſhmen did not digeſt, who were far from any Pique againſt the Miniſtry, and thoſe joining with the Earl of Rocheſter, and his Party, the Houſe of Lords came pretty unanimouſly to ſome Reſolutions, which the Scotch Nation did not generally take well: As firſt, That the Queen be enabled by Act of Parliament, on the Part of England, to name Commiſſioners to treat about an Union with Scotland, provided that theſe Powers be not put in Execution, 'till Commiſſioners be nam'd on the Part of Scotland, by the Parliament there. This was ſuggeſted by the Lord Wharton. Secondly, That Scotchmen ſhould not enjoy the Privileges of Engliſhmen, except ſuch as are ſettled in this Kingdom, in Ireland, and the Plantations, and ſuch as are, and ſhall be in our Land and Sea Service, until an Union be had, or the Succeſſion ſettled as in England. This Motion was made by the Lord Halifax. Third, That the bringing of Cattel from Scotland into England, be prevented. This Motion was made by the Lord Ferrers. Fourth, That the Lord Admiral, or Commiſſioners of the Admiralty for the Time being, be requir'd to give Orders to her Majeſty's Ships to take ſuch Ships as they ſhall find trading from Scotland to France, or to the Ports of any of her Majeſty's Enemies, and that Cruizers be appointed for that End. This was mov'd by Arthur Herbert, Earl of Torrington, who notwithſtanding he was outed of his Poſt of Admiral of the Fleet, and try'd by a Court-Martial, was ſo far from deſerting to the Diſaffected out of Reſentment, as too many have done out of a narrow and baſe Spirit, that he continu'd firm in the Intereſt of his Country, as long as he liv'd, and did nothing to diſturb or offend the Government. Fifth, That the Exportation of ENGLISH Wool into Scotland be carefully hinder'd. This Motion was made by the Lord Mohun: And theſe Reſolutions being approv'd by the Houſe, the Judges were order'd to reduce them into Bills: And the Lords ſeconded them by an Addreſs for putting the Town of Newcaſtle into a Condition of Defence, and for ſecuring the Port of Tinmouth, as alſo for repairing and ſtrengthning the Fortifications of Berwick, Carliſle and Hull. They beſought her Majeſty to cauſe the Militia of the Four Northern Counties to be Diſciplin'd, and to order the neceſſary Care to be taken for providing them with Arms and Ammunition, that they might be in a Readineſs for Service upon Occaſion. And further, humbly adviſ'd, that a competent Number of her Regular Troops might be order'd to be kept upon the Northern Borders of England, and in the North Parts of Ireland; and to direct the Laws to be effectually put in Execution againſt all Papiſts, in reſpect to their Arms and Perſons; and to order a particular Account of what was done in Execution of her Commands, to be laid before her Majeſty in Council without Delay to the End it might appear what Perſons had done their Duty therein. To which Addreſs her Majeſty return'd the following Anſwer.

A.D.1704.

Earl of Torrington's Patriotiſm.

Lords Addreſs about Scotland, and the Diſaffected.

My LORDS,

The Queen's Anſwer.

I Shall direct a Survey to be made of the ſeveral Places mention'd in this Addreſs, in order to be laid before the Parliament.

What Forces can be ſpar'd from their Attendance here, ſhall be quarter'd upon the Borders, as they were laſt Year. I ſhall likewiſe give the neceſſary Directions upon the other Particulars of your Addreſs.

Lords Reſolution againſt the Scotch Act of Security.

The Commons Reſolutions upon it, much the ſame as the Lords.

The Reſolution of the Commons in Relation to Scotland, were only different from the Lords in the Article about Scotch Cattle, which was dropp'd, and another added, That Proviſion be made to prevent the Importation of Scotch Linnen into England or Ireland: That immediate Proviſion be made to prevent the Conveying of Horſes, Arms and Ammunition from England or Ireland into Scotland: That all the Proteſtant Freeholders of the ſix Northern Counties of England be permitted to furniſh themſelves with Arms. The Commons order'd theſe Reſolves to be put into a Bill, which paſs'd their Houſe, and the Houſe of Lords, without any Amendment, February the 5th.

A.D.1705.

While the Scotch Affairs were in Conſideration, his Grace, the Duke of Marlborough, having concerted Meaſures with the Deputies of the States, towards the Operations of the next Campaign, embark'd

A.D.1705. bark'd for England on board one of the Queen's Yatchs, under the Convoy of ſeveral Men of War, bringing over with him the Mareſchal de Tallard, with twenty-ſix other Priſoners of Note, as Trophies of his late Victory. On the 14th of December, the Yatchs and Men of War enter'd the River of Thames, and the Duke having reach'd Greenwich, his Grace went into the Admiralty Barge through Bridge to Whitehall, and thence privately in a Chair to St. James's Houſe, where he was receiv'd by the Queen and Prince of Denmark, with all poſſible Marks of Grace and Favour. The next Day the Duke went to the Houſe of Peers, where the Lord Keeper made him the following Compliment.

My Lord Duke of MARLBOROUGH,

Lord Keeper's Speech to the Duke of Marlborough.

THE happy Succeſs that hath attended her Majeſty's Arms, under your Grace's Command in Germany the laſt Campaign, is ſo truly great, ſo truly glorious in all its Circumſtances, that few Inſtances in the Hiſtory of former Ages can equal, much leſs excel the Luſtre of it.

Your Grace has not overthrown young, unskilful Generals, raw and undiſciplin'd Troops, but your Grace has conquer'd the French and Bavarian Armies; Armies that were fully inſtructed in all the Arts of War; ſelect Veteran Troops, fluſh'd with former Victories, and commanded by Generals of great Experience and Bravery.

The glorious Victories your Grace obtain'd at Schellenbergh and Hochſtet are very great, very illuſtrious in themſelves, but they are greater ſtill, in their Conſequences to her Majeſty, and her Allies.

The Emperor is thereby reliev'd, the Empire it ſelf freed from a dangerous Enemy in the very Bowels of it, the exorbitant Power of France is check'd, and I hope a happy Step made towards reducing of that Monarch within his due Bounds, and ſecuring the Liberties of Europe.

The Honour of theſe glorious Victories, great as they are, under the immediate Bleſſing of Almighty God, is chiefly, if not alone, owing to your Grace's Conduct and Valour. This is the unanimous Voice of England, and all her Majeſty's Allies.

My LORD,

This moſt Honourable Houſe is highly ſenſible of the great and ſignal Services your Grace has done her Majeſty this Campaign, and of the immortal Honour you have done the Engliſh Nation, and have commanded me to give their Thanks for the ſame.

And I do accordingly give your Grace the Thanks of this Houſe for the great Honour your Grace has done the Nation, and for the great and ſignal Services you have done her Majeſty and this Kingdom, the laſt Campaign.

The Duke of Marlborough ſaid in Anſwer,

My LORDS,

Duke of Marlborough's Anſwer.

I Am extreamly ſenſible of the great Honour your Lordſhips are pleas'd to do me: I muſt beg on this Occaſion to do Right to all the Officers and Soldiers I had the Honour of having under my Command: Next to the Bleſſing of God, the good Succeſs of this Campaign is owing to their extraordinary Courage.

I am very ſure it will be a great Satisfaction, as well as Encouragement to the whole Army, to find their Services ſo favourably accepted.

The ſame Day a Committee of the Houſe of Commons waited upon his Grace, to give him the Thanks of the Houſe, "As well for the eminent Services he had perform'd to her Majeſty "and the Kingdom, in the glorious Victories "which had been obtain'd under his Command, "as for his prudent Negotiations with ſeveral "Princes and States, and to congratulate his Ar-"rival." His Grace anſwer'd, It is a great Satisfaction to me, to find that my faithful Endeavours in diſcharging my Duty to the Queen, and to the Publick, are ſo favourably accepted: I beg Leave to take this Opportunity of doing Juſtice to a great Body of Officers and Soldiers who accompany'd me in this Expedition, and all behav'd themſelves with the greateſt Bravery imaginable: And I am ſure this Honour done us by the Houſe of Commons, in taking ſo much Notice of it, will give a general Satisfaction and Encouragement to the whole Army. A.D.1705.

Mareſcal de Tallard and the French Priſoners brought to England.

The Inſolence of the French in the beginning of this War, deſerv'd a juſt Reſentment from all the Allies, as Opportunity offer'd for them to ſhew it. Her Majeſty had a fair Occaſion, upon the Arrival of the Mareſchal de Tallard, and the other French Priſoners who were at her Diſpoſal; and it could not be forgotten how haughty and contemptuous was the Carriage of the French Commiſſioners appointed to ſettle a Cartel with the Confederate Commiſſioners, in refuſing to allow the Lord Cutts the Title of Lieutenant-General of the Queen of England's Forces; which with other Indignities offer'd to her Majeſty and the Engliſh Nation, made it neceſſary to make the French ſenſible of the Weakneſs as well as Arrogance of their Behaviour, by returning eſſential Mortifications in the Perſons of the Priſoners which the Rout at Blenheim had put into the Hands of the Engliſh.

They are mortify'd.

It was order'd they ſhould be two Nights on board the Catharine, and William and Mary Yatchs, and no Perſon of Diſtinction to have Acceſs to them. The Earl of Feverſham having ask'd the Duke of Marlborough whether he might not go and ſee his Old Friend the Mareſchal de Tallard? The Duke reply'd, He believ'd the Queen would not refuſe his Lordſhip her Leave, if he ask'd it of her; which the Earl took for a gentle Denial, and dropp'd it.

Order'd for Nottingham and Litchfield.

On the 16th of December, the Mareſchal, and the other French Priſoners, landed at Blackwall, from whence they went to Barnet in ſeveral Coaches, and from thence they proceeded to Nottingham and Litchfield, where her Majeſty thought fit they ſhould reſide.

At Nottingham.	At Litchfield.
The Mareſchal de Tallard.	Marquix de Marivaux.
Marquis de Montperoux.	Monſieur de Meſſiliere.
Count de Blauzac.	Monſieur Joly.
Marquis de Hautefeuille.	Monſieur d' Amigny.
Marquis de Valſeme.	Monſieur de St. Maurice.
Marquis de Seppeville.	The Count de Lionne.
Marquis de Silly.	Marquis de Laſſey.
Marquis de la Valiere.	Baron d' Elſt.
Marquis de Vaſſey.	Monſieur de Balincourt.
Chevalier de Croiſſy.	Monſieur de Saulveboeuf.
Monſieur de St. Segonde.	Monſieur de Montenay.
	Monſieur de Gallart.
	Monſieur de Creſſy.
	Monſieur de Ligondais.
	Monſieur de Aurival.
	Baron de Heyder.
	Monſieur de Prie.

They were accompany'd by General Churchil, and attended by a Detachment of the Royal Regiment of Horſe-Guards, who were alſo order'd to guard them at Nottingham and Litchfield, as Priſoners, but with Allowance of all manner of Freedom both in thoſe Places, and ten Miles round about.

Standards and Colours put up in Weſtminſter-Hall.

On the 3d of January, the Standards and Colours taken from the French at Blenheim, were brought in great Military Pomp from the Tower, through

*A.D.*1705. through the City, the Strand, and Pall-Mall, to St. James's, through the Meuſe there into the Park, where her Majeſty ſaw them paſs from my Lord Fitzharding's Lodgings. Thence they proceeded through the Horſe-Guards, King-ſtreet, and the New-Palace-Yard, to Weſtminſter-Hall, where the ſaid Standards and Colours were put up, to remain there as Trophies of the Honour which her Majeſty's Subjects gain'd in the Victory at Blenheim, not to be parallel'd in the Hiſtory of many Ages. Three Days after, the Duke of Marlborough having been invited by the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen to dine with them in the City, his Grace went thither about Noon, accompany'd by the Lord Treaſurer, the Prince of Heſſe, and the Duke of Somerſet, in one of her Majeſty's Coaches, and follow'd by a great Train of other Coaches, in which were the Foreign Miniſters, and ſeveral Perſons of Quality, the Generals, and other Chief Officers of the Army, who were ſplendidly entertain'd at Goldſmith's-Hall. The City-Marſhal receiv'd them at Temple-Bar, and attended them both going and returning, the People all along making great Acclamations as they paſs'd: Not the Acclamations of a pack'd Mob, ſuch as at Sacheverel's Sedition, and ſuch as have been all the Cries of a factious Rabble of late, but the joyous and grateful Voice of well-affected Citizens in Gladneſs, but Sobriety of Thinking.

Duke of Marlborough invited into the City.

The Annaliſt remembers that Dr. Delaune, Vicechancellor of Oxford, accompany'd by ſeveral Heads of Houſes, the two Proctors, and other principal Members of the Univerſity, attended the Queen with a very Noble Preſent, an Addreſs, and a Printed Copy of the Speeches and Verſes ſpoken in the Theatre; of which I ſhall only mention Marlburius Germanicus, and Rookius Invidia Major; becauſe he tells us, Moſt People at Court were not pleas'd with an Addreſs that ſet the Action of the Admiral upon the ſame Level with thoſe of the Captain-General. And her Majeſty in her Anſwer to this Oxford Addreſs, gave the Addreſſors ſo good Advice, that had they paid ſo much Deference to Queen Anne's Wiſdom as to have taken it, we ſhould no more have heard of Occaſional or Schiſm Bills, High-Church Memorials, &c. ſhe took kindly this Inſtance of their Zeal; adding, That as they might be aſſur'd of her Protection, ſo She would not doubt of their Care to encourage thoſe Principles, which would promote the Peace and Welfare of her ſelf, and all her Subjects.

The Queen's good Advice to the Oxonians.

A ridiculous Compariſon between the Duke of Marlborough and Sir George Rooke, by the Tories.

It happen'd that the Panegyrick on Sir George Rooke, and his Victory, was brought to the Queen unluckily, at the very Inſtant it was reſolv'd to lay him Aſide; for two Days after it was publickly declared that the Lord High-Admiral had appointed Sir Cloudeſly Shovel to be Rear-Admiral of England, and Admiral and Commander in Chief of the Fleet; for neither Court nor Country were well pleas'd with the Compariſon which High-Church affected to make between the delivering the Empire from the French Armies, with Sir George Rooke's delivering himſelf from the French Fleet, as Lord Haverſham ſaid; and that Admiral's countenancing ſuch Flattery, and ſome Exceptions to his Conduct, gave Men of Foreſight Reaſon to believe that he would not long have the Preference of ſo popular an Admiral as Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, in the Navy: Sir John Leake was made Vice-Admiral of the White Squadron, Sir George Bing Vice-Admiral of the Blue, Sir Thomas Dilks Rear-Admiral of the Red, William Whetſtone, Eſq; Rear-Admiral of the White, Sir John Jennings Rear-Admiral of the Blue, in the Room of Sir James Wiſhart, who was remov'd, or reſign'd; and happy had it been for England, and happy for the poor abandon'd, maſſacred Catalans, had he never again been truſted with a Flag.

Admiral Wiſhart remov'd.

*A.D.*1705

The Commons being now better diſpos'd to take the Duke of Marlborough's Services into Conſideration, than they were when Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave ſpoke warmly in a former Seſſions, againſt a Motion for rewarding them; they unanimouſly reſolv'd to preſent an Addreſs to her Majeſty, expreſſing The great Senſe the Houſe had of the glorious Victory obtain'd by the Forces of her Majeſty, and her Allies, under the Command of the Duke of Marlborough, and humbly deſiring her Majeſty to conſider of ſome proper Means to perpetuate the Memory of the great Services perform'd by his Grace. The Writer of this Reign informs us how this Vote came to paſs ſo unanimouſly; Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave was now made eaſy, and ſilenc'd, by a Promiſe of a Place for his Son; which is the more worth Notice, becauſe this good High-Church Knight was always one of the loudeſt in the Clamour againſt Places and Penſions. One cannot doubt but this Motion was made with the Knowledge and Conſent of the Queen and her Miniſters; however, her Majeſty took a few Days to conſider of this Addreſs, and on the 17th of January, Mr. Boyle, Chancellor of the Exchequer, deliver'd to the Commons this Meſſage.

Commons Addreſs to Reward the Duke of Marlborough.

Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave made eaſy.

ANNE R.

HER Majeſty having taken into her Conſideration the Addreſs of this Houſe, relating to the great Services perform'd by the Duke of Marlborough, does incline to grant the Intereſt of the Crown in the Honour and Manor of Woodſtock, and Hundred of Wootton, to him and his Heirs; and deſires the Aſſiſtance of this Houſe upon this extraordinary Occaſion.

The Queen's Anſwer, with a Grant of Woodſtock.

The Lieutenancy and Rangerſhips of the Parks, with the Rents and Profits of the Manor and Hundred being granted for two Lives, her Majeſty thinks it proper that Incumbrance ſhould be cleared.

The Commons order'd a Bill to be brought in, to enable the Queen to make a Grant of the ſaid Manor and Hundred to the Duke of Marlborough, and his Heirs; and reſolv'd to Addreſs her Majeſty to advance the Money for clearing the Incumbrances above-mention'd; the Chief of which was to Benedict Leonard Calvert, Eſq; afterwards Lord Baltimore, then a Roman Catholick, who married Lady Charlotte, Daughter of the Counteſs of Litchfield, Daughter of the Dutcheſs of Cleveland, by King Charles the Second. Her Majeſty not only made this Grant, but order'd the Comptroller of her Works to build in Woodſtock Park a moſt ſtately Palace, or Caſtle, to be call'd Blenheim Houſe. Sir John Vanbrug, the Architect, as well as Comic Poet, form'd the Plan of this Magnificent Building, in which he ſeems to have ſtudy'd Extent and Stability, more than Art and Beauty.

Blenheim Houſe order'd to be built there.

On the 14th of February, the Baron de Spanheim, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the King of Pruſſia, had Publick Audience of her Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs, to notify the Death of her late Majeſty, the Queen of Pruſſia. The Court, who were then in Mourning for the Dutcheſs Dowager of Holſtein, Siſter to his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Denmark, who died the 30th of October, went out of it the 18th of February, to go into Mourning for the late Queen of Pruſſia, who dy'd at Hanover the 31ſt of January, N. S. of a Swelling in her Throat, after having been ill three or four Days only. It is impoſſible to expreſs the Grief of the two Courts of Berlin and Hanover, for the Loſs of ſo incomparable a Princeſs,

The Queen of Pruſſia's Death.

A.D. 1705. ceſs, Daughter of her Highneſs the Princeſs Sophia, Daughter of the pious and amiable Princeſs the Queen of Bohemia. The deceaſed Queen of Pruſſia left no other Iſſue than the Prince Royal, Frederick William, his preſent Pruſſian Majeſty, who was then in Holland ready to embark for England when that afflicting News oblig'd him to return to Berlin. As imperfect as the Character of the Queen of Pruſſia is in a late Hiſtory, I am ſatisfied the Reader will ſee Beauties enough in the Picture to be infinitely pleas'd with it. " She was " a Princeſs equally reſpected, admir'd and belov'd " by all who either had the Honour to approach " her, or hear Diſcourſe of her from thoſe that had. " She was the firſt of thoſe of her Rank in Beauty, " and yielded to none in the juſtneſs of Thought, " the delicacy of Expreſſion, or the graces of " Converſation. Her Perſon was of the middle " Size, all her Features extreamly regular, her " Complexion fair and lively, her Eyes blue, and " her Hair coal-black; her Reading was infinite, " and ſhe was converſant in all manner of Subjects; " nor was ſhe more admir'd for her Amiable- " neſs, than for her exact Knowledge of the " moſt abſtruſe Parts of Philoſophy: Nobody " ever better underſtood the Art of giving an im- " proving Reliſh to all Entertainments; but her " favourite Diverſion was Muſick, in which ſhe " excell'd both in the Performance on the Harp- " ſicord and the Compoſition; ſhe lov'd to ſee " Strangers and to inform herſelf of all that's " worthy or remarkable in their ſeveral Countries; " and ſhe had ſo juſt an Idea of Government, " that all over Germany ſhe was ſtil'd the Repub- " lican Queen.

That Time had no Parallel for ſo Divine a Princeſs; but ours, and this Nation in particular, is happy in one ſo nearly related to her, as to be the Royal Conſort of a King of her own Blood, our preſent Gracious Sovereign. Six Days before the Notification of the Death of the Queen of Pruſſia, the Houſe of Commons took into Conſideration the Treaty lately concluded by the Duke of Marlborough, and unanimouſly Reſolv'd, " That an hum- " ble Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, return- " ing the Thanks of this Houſe to her Majeſty, " for concluding the late Treaty with the King of " Pruſſia, which was ſo ſeaſonable a Support to " the Duke of Savoy, and ſo great an Advantage " to the Common Cauſe; and alſo to aſſure her " Majeſty, that her faithful Commons would " effectually enable her to make good the Treaty " with the King of Pruſſia, who upon ſo many " Occaſions hath ſignaliz'd his Zeal for the Pro- " teſtant Religion and Liberty of Europe. Her Majeſty return'd them many Thanks for the Aſſuran- ces they had given her in their Addreſs, and was very well pleas'd to find they had ſo juſt a Senſe of the King of Pruſſia's Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion, and the Liberty of Europe. There were two Rea- ſons why the Majority of this Repreſentative, tho' they were Tories, did fall in ſo agreeably with her Majeſty's and the Nations Sentiments, for vigorouſly proſecuting the War with France; the one, and probably the main one, was an Apprehenſion of a Diſſolution; and the beſt way to recommend themſelves to the Favour of the Electors, was by appearing zealous for carrying on ſo glorious a War; the other was, that as yet many of their own ſide were not ſo abandon'd to their own Intereſts, their Piques and Paſſions, as to ſacrifice the Publick Intereſt to them in Favour of France. The High-Church Prieſts had not yet worn out all Impreſſion of the Danger the Proteſtant Religion and Liberty were in from the French King's exorbitant Power, nor ſtamp'd on the diſtemper'd Minds of the Populace, the Danger of the Church in its ſtead; ſuch Madneſs, and the dire Effects of it, could only happen in a long Series of ſeditious Lectures and Cabals, when ſuch Men as Meſſ. Harley, St. John, &c. had got the Reins of Government into their Hands, and had no way to ſave themſelves but by deſtroying their Country. A.D. 1705.

The Commons extol the King of Pruſſia's Zeal for the Common Cauſe.

Why they came unto a better Temper.

The Commons before they were diſſolv'd, preſented another good Addeſs to the Queen, That her Majeſty would be pleas'd to uſe her Intereſt with her Allies, that they might the next Year furniſh their ſeveral compleat Quotas both by Sea and Land, according to their reſpective Treaties; and to continue her Endeavours for an Accommodation between the Emperor and his Subjects, now in Arms in Hungary, in order to the better and more effectual carrying on the preſent NECESSARY War. Her Majeſty was pleas'd to Anſwer, I will continue to uſe my beſt Endeavours to obtain a Compliance from the Allies, with what is deſired in the Commons Addreſs; and as to the Accommodation with the Malecontents in Hungary, I have made Application to the Emperor ſeveral times upon that Point, and ſhall continue to preſs him in it with all the Earneſtneſs imaginable.

So much has been ſaid already about the Aylesbury 174. Men, that we ſhall enlarge no farther upon it, but conclude with the Obſervation of the Annaliſt. " The Truth is, the Leaders of the High-Church " Party were ſo crafty as to engage the Majority of " the Houſe of Commons warmly to eſpouſe a " Controverſy which they had ſtarted up only " to ſhew their Reſentment for the Loſs of the " Occaſional Conformity Bill. He adds, the Tory " Party who prevail'd in the Houſe of Commons, " both to make themſelves popular by a Self- " denying Act, and to mortify ſome eminent Mem- " bers who had left them, and were now in Places " of Profit and Truſt, brought in a Bill, January " 16, for excluding out of the Houſe of Commons, " all Perſons in any Offices or Employments, erected " ſince the 6th Day of February, 1684, when " King Charles II dy'd, or to be erected." This Bill paſt through the Houſe of Commons in a Week's time, and being ſent to the Lords, was ſo alter'd by their Lordſhips, that the Commons rather choſe to loſe their Bill than agree to the Lords Amendments. Another Bill was promoted by High Church, who were as unfortunate as raſh in all their Schemes for perplexing the Government as long as the People continu'd in their Wits, and did not run themſelves into the utmoſt real Danger to keep the Church out of an imaginary one. This Bill was to prevent Perſons who are entitled by their Offices to receive any Benefit by Publick Annual Taxes to be granted, from being Members of Parliament while they are in ſuch Offices; which would have affected many worthy Members who ſerv'd the Nation by Sea and Land, and was thrown out at the third Reading. The ſame Party, which conſiſted chiefly of Country Gentlemen in the coarſeſt Interpretation of the Term, look'd with an evil Eye on thoſe Merchants and Wealthy Tradeſmen, who acted as Juſtices of Peace in Cities and Towns, where they had great Influence in Elections, and knew thoſe Gentry too well to deſire to be Repreſented by them in Parliament. Therefore to uſe the Annaliſt's Words again, " The " Tory Party thought it neceſſary to procure an " Act, whereby the Commiſſions of the Peace " ſhould be lodg'd in the Hands of Men of Eſtates. That is, the Juſtice was to have 5 or 600 Acres of Land, no matter whether he ow'd 5 or 6000 l. upon them, and the Merchant worth 50 or 60000 l. was to loſe his Juſticeſhip, becauſe ſuch Men knew the Value of Liberty and Property too well to truſt them with High-Church. The Lords rejected this Bill, and paſt an Act for the further preventing the Growth of Popery. But there is ſo little Diffe-

The Place Bill.

Clog'd by the Lords and drop'd.

The Tories againſt Merchants being Juſtices.

*A.D.*1705. rence between a Popiſh and a Perſecuting Spirit, that High-Church reſolv'd either to quaſh this Bill or turn the Edge of it againſt Proteſtant Diſſenters as they had done the Teſt Act, intended at firſt only againſt Papiſts. To this end they inſerted the following Clauſe, as an Amendment to the Lords Bill to prevent the Growth of Popery. Provided always, That all Perſons who by Virtue of this Act ſhall be oblig'd to take the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and ſubſcribe the Declaration, ſhall, at the ſame time declare himſelf to be a Member of the Church of England, as now by Law eſtabliſh'd; ſuch Declaration to be enter'd on the ſame Roll, where the ſaid Oaths and Declarations ſo to be taken and ſubſcrib'd are to be enter'd. And in caſe any ſuch Perſons, ſhall, after their taking ſuch Oaths, and making ſuch Declarations as aforeſaid, knowingly or wilfully reſort to, or be preſent at any Conventicle, Aſſembly or Meeting, under Colour or Pretence of any Exerciſe of Religion, in other Manner, than according to the Liturgy and Practice of the Church of England, in any Place within this Kingdom, ſhall forfeit the Sum of one hundred Pounds for every time he ſhall be preſent at ſuch Aſſembly, Conventicle or Meeting. The Pagan Idolaters were wont to call the Churches of the Primitive Chriſtians Conventicles, and our Modern Perſecutors, as if their Religion was the better for the Extent and Finery of their Church, beſtow the ſame contemptuous Appellation on Congregations of Proteſtants, even in ſuch grave things as their Statutes. This Clauſe came little ſhort of the Occaſional Conformity Bill; and Strangers and Poſterity that hear of theſe Men, muſt needs take them to be very anxious about other Mens Salvation, by making and endeavouring to make ſo many Laws for the Welfare of their Neighbours Souls; whereas in Truth theſe Men took ſo little care of their own, that the Leaders of them were remarkable for Irreligion and Riot, and this with a very few Exceptions. But the real Truth was, that Seymour, How, Harcourt, &c. confounded the Churches Intereſt with their own, and us'd her ſacred Name as a Blind for their Reſentment, Avarice and Pride.

A Clauſe againſt Proteſtant Diſſenters in a Bill againſt Papiſts.

Complaints againſt Admiral Churchil.

There were now very great and juſt Complaints of Miſmanagements in the Navy; People put a Reſtraint on their Tongues out of Reſpect to his Royal Highneſs, who was Lord High Admiral; but they let them looſe againſt Mr. George Churchil, the Duke of Marlborough's Brother, who had Appointments,

	£.	s.
As Prince's Council of Admiralty,	1000	a Year.
Penſion for Loſs of Time,	500
It was ſaid to be in the Grant,
As Admiral of the Blue,	1277	10
For his Table, though not at Sea,	365
	3142	10

Miſmanagements in the Navy.

The chief Articles of Miſmanagement, mention'd in an Addreſs of the Lords, were Deficiency of Seamen and Cruizers, for which Proviſion had been made by Parliament. That there were ten Flags in Pay, three of which were not at Sea. That Mr. Churchil had not been at Sea in any Year of this War. That Mr. Graydon had been aſhore all the laſt Year, and that he had been employ'd, notwithſtanding a former Addreſs for his Diſcharge. That Sir James Wiſhart, though a Rear Admiral, had the laſt Year been Sir George Rook's Captain. That Sir John Munden, though he had not done his Duty, had a Penſion of 319 l. a Year, &c. Tho' the Queen could not be very well pleas'd with an Addreſs, which reflected on the Supineneſs of her Royal Conſort, yet ſhe conceal'd her Diſlike, and anſwer'd, February 5, Your Addreſs contains many Obſervations, which I will conſider particularly, and give ſuch Directions upon them as may be moſt for the Advantage of the Publick Service. *A.D.*1705.

On the 14th of March the Queen came to the Houſe of Lords and gave the Royal Aſſent to

An Act for continuing Duties on Low-Wines, Coffee, Tea, &c.

An Act for granting to her Majeſty a further Subſidy on Wine and Merchandiſes.

An Act for the better enabling her Majeſty to grant the Honour and Manor of Woodſtock, with the Hundred of Wootton to the Duke of Marlborough and his Heirs, in Conſideration of the eminent Services by him perform'd to her Majeſty and the Publick.

An Act for the Encouraging the Exportation of Naval Stores from America.

An Act for the effectual ſecuring the Kingdom of England from the apparent Dangers that may ariſe from ſeveral Acts lately paſt in the Parliament of Scotland.

An Act for the better Payment of Inland Bills.

An Act to permit the Exportation of Iriſh Linnen Cloth to the Plantations, and to prohibit the Importation of Scots Linnen into Ireland.

An Act for the prohibiting all Trade and Commerce with France.

An Act to prevent all traiterous Correſpondence with her Majeſty's Enemies, &c.

Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

Then her Majeſty in her Speech acknowledg'd, they had made good their Aſſurances, and that their Diſpatch would be a real Advantage to the Publick; ſhe told them ſhe perſuaded herſelf ſhe ſhould always have their chearful Aſſiſtance in the Proſecution of the preſent War, till our Enemies were oblig'd to ſuch a Peace as ſhould be a laſting Advantage and Security to us and our Allies; and clos'd her Speech thus:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

We have by the Bleſſing of God, a fair Proſpect of this deſirable End, if we do not diſappoint it by our own unreaſonable Humour and Animoſity; the fatal Effects of which we have ſo narrowly eſcap'd this Seſſion, that it ought to be a ſufficient Warning againſt any dangerous Experiments for the Future. I conclude therefore with exhorting you to Peace and Union, which are always commendable, but more particularly neceſſary at this time when the whole Kingdom being ſhortly to proceed to new Elections, it ought to be the Care of every body, eſpecially ſuch as are in publick Stations, to carry themſelves with the greateſt Prudence and Moderation; nothing will contribute more to our Reputation Abroad, and our Security at Home.

Cenſures Mr. William Bromley's Tack.

High-Church enrag'd.

Her Majeſty's recommending Peace and Union, Prudence and Moderation, was highly reſented by the Tories, as will be ſeen by the villanous Libel, entitled, the Memorial of the Church of England, which was ready to be diſpers'd all over the Kingdom to influence the Elections; but the Rage in it was ſo ſhocking to all ſober Minds, that it had an effect quite contrary to what was intended.

As full as the People were of a juſt Senſe of the Duke of Marlborough's high Deſerts from the Publick, the Conduct of one of his Grace's Family began to cauſe Murmurings among both Whigs and Tories; my Lord Duke, and General Churchill had no part in them; but Admiral Churchill

A.D.1705. Admiral Churchil reflected upon.

Churchill was ſeverely and generally reflected upon. And now Envy, that reach'd indeed, but cou'd not affect his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, vented her Poiſon on his illuſtrious Relations; and thoſe very Men who applauded the Princeſs Anne of Denmark's Choice of a Confident and Favourite, in that of the Lady Churchill, now ſpar'd not the Queen in the Licentiouſneſs of their Language, for heaping her Favours on the Dutcheſs of Marlborough, who had ſo long and ſo faithfully ſerv'd her, and whoſe only Crime was the juſt Confidence her Majeſty had in her, and the juſt Reward of her Services. The Lord Treaſurer's Son having marry'd Lady Harriet, the Duke's Daughter, the Tories ſaid, All Offices civil and military, and the Wealth of the Nation, depend upon one ſingle Perſon; which was as falſe as malicious, eſpecially with reſpect to the Treaſurer. For as no body in the Kingdom knew the Buſineſs of the Treaſury better than my Lord Godolphin, ſo no body knew better how to keep it from depending on any one but himſelf while he was at the Head of it.

The vulgar Opinion that my Lord Godolphin induc'd the Queen to change Hands in the Miniſtry, only to engage the Whigs to ſupport him againſt the Tories, who threaten'd what ſhould be done to him for adviſing the paſſing the Act of Security in Scotland, was groundleſs and viſionary; for it was viſible enough, that the Queen before that Act paſt, was convinc'd that ſhe could not carry on the War with Vigor, while the Adminiſtration was in the Hands of thoſe who were againſt entering into it, and in whom the Allies had no Confidence: Whereas the Whigs were for cloſing with the Elector of Bavaria's Propoſal to defend Flanders againſt the French by the help of England, before King William dy'd, and when they were all out of Employment, expos'd to the Inſults and Oppreſſion of the Tories, they conſented heartily to eſpouſe the Common Cauſe againſt France, and to give readily and chearfully all the Aſſiſtance that was in their Power; it was for this Reaſon that the Duke of Marlborough and the Lord Godolphin prevail'd with her Majeſty to take the chief of them into the Adminiſtration; and the Succeſs of their Counſels anſwer'd the End their Lordſhips propos'd, a vigorous and glorious Proſecution of the War, which would have ended in an honourable, advantageous and laſting Peace, had not the Tories ſpirited up an Incendiary to ſet the whole Nation in a Flame, to drive the War out of their Heads, and bring the Church and France together out of Danger.

Whigs always hearty in the Common Cauſe.

Why they were employ'd.

We are told that the Queen was very loth to part with the Duke of Buckinghamſhire and Normanby; and it was inſinuated, that her Majeſty could not forget the Marks of particular Zeal and Devotion ſhe formerly had receiv'd from that Lord, but that Story has too much of Romance in it to make any Impreſſion on the Reader; it contains further, that her Majeſty being unwilling to ſtand an Argument about it with my Lord Treaſurer, employ'd Prince George to diſſuade his Lordſhip from inſiſting upon the Removal of the Duke of Bucks, and to aſſure him, as was done more than once, that the Queen would ſtand by him at all Events, if the Scots Security Act was brought into Queſtion againſt him. At laſt the Lord Treaſurer told the Prince, That neither the Queen nor his Royal Highneſs, nor any body elſe can tell what a Parliament can do. My Lord Godolphin having carry'd his Point, the Privy Seal which the Duke of Buckinghamſhire had the keeping of, was given to the Duke of Newcaſtle, March 27. About the ſame time, the Earl of Peterborough and Monmouth, and the Lord Cholmondely, were ſworn of the Privy Council; the Lord Cutts was appointed Commander in chief of the Forces in Ireland, under the Duke of Ormond, a Command which his Lordſhip would gladly have chang'd for an equivalent in the Service abroad; Colonel Frederick Hamilton, Colonel Tidcomb, the Lord Windſor and the Lord Raby, afterwards Plenipotentiary of Utrecht, were made Major-Generals from Brigadiers; and Colonel Stanhope, Colonel Mordaunt, Colonel Blood, were made Brigadier Generals. Some time before this, the Lord Godolphin had been inſtall'd Knight of the Garter with great Solemnity, in which the Duke of Buckinghamſhire was one of the principal Aſſiſtants. On the 4th of April the Lord Treaſurer was made Lord Lieutenant of Cornwall, in the Room of the Lord Granville; and the Duke of Grafton, Lord Lieutenant of Suffolk, in the Room of the Earl of Dyſert; the Duke of Newcaſtle Lord Lieutenant of the North-riding of Yorkſhire; Earl Rivers, Lord Lieutenant of Eſſex; Lord Rockingham, Lord Lieutenant of Kent.

A.D.1705.

On Thurſday April 10, her Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs went from St. James's to Newmarket, having 5 Days before caus'd a Proclamation to be iſſu'd for Diſſolving the Parliament. Two Days after her Majeſty came to Newmarket, Dr. Ellis, Vice-Chancellor of the Univerſity of Cambridge, waited on her with ſeveral Heads of Houſes, Doctors, and other Members of that Univerſity, in whoſe Name the Vice-Chancellor made a Speech full of Expreſſions of their Duty and Affection for her Majeſty's Perſon and Zeal for her Government; to which the Queen return'd a Gracious Anſwer, and accepted of their Invitation to dine with them, which ſhe did the Monday following. She was receiv'd a Mile out of the Town by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council in their Formalities, the Earl of Orford their High Steward, and Sir John Cotton their Recorder, at their Head. In the Regent Walk her Majeſty was receiv'd by his Grace the Duke of Somerſet, Chancellor of the Univerſity in his Habit at the Head of the Doctors, and Mr. Ayloffe, the Publick Orator made her a Speech full of Loyalty and Obedience; after which the Queen went up into the Regent Houſe, where Degrees in ſeveral Faculties were by her Majeſty's Command conferr'd upon Perſons of high Nobility and diſtinguiſhing Merit. Dr. James the Queen's Profeſſor in Divinity open'd that Ceremony with a very learned Speech, and then Mr. Moſs, Chaplain in waiting to her Majeſty, and Mr. Talbot Chaplain to his Grace the Duke of Somerſet were created Doctors in Divinity, and immediately after the noble Perſons following were admitted Doctors in Law.

The Queen at Newmarket.

At Cambridge.

Duke of Devonſhire,	Lord Byron,
Duke of Grafton,	Lord Halifax,
Duke of Bolton,	Lord Harvey,
Marquis of Hartington,	Lord Allington,
Earl of Kent,	Lord Sherrard,
Earl of Kingſton,	Sir Thomas Hanmer,
Earl of Sunderland,	Sir John Jacob,
Earl of Orford,	Sir John Tyrwhit,
Earl of Albemarle,	William Fielding, Eſq;
Lord Wharton,	John Noel, Eſq;
Lord Lovelace,

Doctors of Law made.

Mr. Pellet, Mr. Arbuthnot, Mr. Vernon, } were made Doctors of Phyſick.

Removes and Promotions.

Her Majeſty was entertain'd at Dinner in Trinity College Hall with equal Magnificence and good Order. She there Knighted James Montagu, Eſq; Council for the Univerſity, John Ellis, Eſq; Dr.

False Report about the Duke of Buckingham.

of

*A.D.*1705. of Phyſick, the Vice-Chancellor, and Iſaac Newton, Eſq; formerly Mathematical Profeſſor and Fellow of that College.

A New Parliament call'd.

On the 21ſt of April the Queen and Court return'd to St. James's, and two Days after a Proclamation was publiſh'd for calling a new Parliament, the Writs returnable on the 14th of June. Great was the Struggle all over the Kingdom between High-Church and Low-Church; the former made a doleful Cry of the Danger of the Church, the latter had on their ſide the merrier Note of Tackers, Sneakers, &c. But as the pretended Danger of the Church was a mere Vapour, it was blown away by the Voice of the ſound Part of the People, and the Major Part of the Elections went in Favour of the Whigs.

Before her Majeſty went to Cambridge ſhe was pleas'd to give the See of Lincoln, vacant by the Death of Dr. Gardiner, to the pious and learned Dr. Wake, who in the moſt difficult Times had ſhewn his Zeal for the Proteſtant Cauſe, and by the eſpecial Recommendation of his Grace, Dr. Tenniſon Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to promote the very learned Dr. Bull to the Biſhoprick of St. David, in the Room of Dr. Watſon, depriv'd for his Enormities; and not long after ſhe created Ralph Mountagu, Marquis of Mounthermer and Duke of Montagu. About the middle of May, Francis Godolphin, Eſq; Son to the Lord Treaſurer, was appointed Warden of the Satnnaries in the Room of the Lord Granville, and Abraham Stanyan, Eſq; Envoy Extraordinary to the Swiſs Cantons in the Room of Dr. Aglionby. Sometime after the Earl of Sunderland was ſent Envoy Extraordinary to the Emperor Joſeph, with Compliments of Condolance on the Death of his Father the Emperor Leopold, and of Congratulation on his Imperial Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne; both which had been notify'd to our Court by Count Gallas, the Imperial Envoy Extraordinary, upon which ſomething happen'd worth remembering. It was debated in Council, whether the Queen and the Court ſhould go into Mourning for the late Emperor, and the Majority of the Council gave their Opinion for the Negative; becauſe the Emperors of Germany aſſuming too great a Superiority over other crown'd Heads, had hitherto refus'd to mourn for the Monarchs of Great-Britain. But Count Gallas, having in his Maſter's Name promis'd, that for the Future the Emperor would mourn for the Kings and Queens of England, her Majeſty went into Mourning for the late Emperor.

Biſhop Watſon depriv'd.

A remarkable Paſſage about Mourning for the Emperor.

On the 21ſt of April, Letters came from Sir John Leake, dated in the Bay of Gibralter the 31ſt of May, containing in Subſtance, That on the 6th of March he ſail'd from Lisbon with the Confederate Squadron under his Command. The 9th he got Sight of Cape Spartel, but not having Day enough to reach Gibraltar, he lay by to prevent being diſcover'd from the Spaniſh Shoar, to the end he might ſurprize the Enemy in the Bay early the next Morning.. The Weather continued fair till after Midnight. Then the Wind ſhifted from the Weſt N. W. to the S. W. with much Rain and thick Weather, which hinder'd his making Sail ſo ſoon as he intended. About half an Hour paſt five in the Morning, the Squadron got within two Miles of Cape Carbaritta, and diſcover'd only two Sail making out of the Bay, at whom a Gun was fir'd from Europa Point, upon which concluding that the Gariſon was ſafe, they gave Chace to thoſe five Ships, which prov'd to be the Magnanimous a French Man of War of 74 Guns, the Vaiſſeau of 86 Guns, the Ardent of 66 Guns, the Arrogant of 60 Guns, and the Marquis of 56 Guns. At firſt they made for the Barbary Shoar, but ſeeing our Fleet gain'd upon them, they ſtood for the Spaniſh Shoar. At 9 a Clock Sir Thomas Dilkes, on board the Revenge, together with the Newcaſtle, Antelope, Expedition, and a Dutch Man of War, got within half Gunſhot of the Arrogant, and after a very little Reſiſtance ſhe ſtruck, the Newcaſtle's Boat getting in firſt on board her. Before one a Clock the Ardent and Marquis were taken by two Dutch Men of War, and the Magnanimous and the Vaiſſeau ran aſhore a little to the Weſtward of Marbella; the former, which the Baron de Pointi was on board of, ran aſhore with ſo much Force, that all her Maſts came by the Board as ſoon as ſhe ſtruck upon the Ground, and only her Hull from the Taffrill to the Midſhip remain'd above Water, which the Enemy ſet fire to in the Night, as they did to the Vaiſſeau the next Morning. On the ſame Day that this Letter of Sir John Leake's was publiſh'd, the Publick was entertain'd with an agreeable piece of News from Sir George Byng in theſe Terms. *A.D.*1705.

Sir George Byng ſail'd the latter end of January from Plymouth with a Squadron of Cruiſers, and a great Fleet of rich outward bound Merchant Ships, which after he had ſeen in Safety out of their Soundings, he directed the Squadron as he judg'd beſt for annoying the Enemies Privateers, which were troubleſome in the Soundings and Mouth of the Channel, and by his well ſtationing his Cruiſers has already taken from the Enemy,

Sir George Byng's Succeſs againſt the French.

Privateers.

	Guns.	Men.
The Thetis, a Man of War of,	44	250
Deſmaria,	36	240
Philippo,	22	220
Conſtable,	30	210
Volear,	28	210
Royal,	26	200
Beringhen,	24	160
Sanſpareil,	20	135
Minerve,	16	92
Marveilleaux,	14	85
Poſtboy,	10	70
Bonaventure,	10	70
Admirable,	12	75

As alſo 7 French Merchant Ships, moſt of them richly laden from the Weſt-Indies.

The Duke of Ormond continuing in the Government of Ireland, held the Parliament there, who on the 5th of March voted 150000*l.* for the Support of the Eſtabliſhment; and a few Days after the Convocation of the Clergy at Dublin being inform'd of a Clauſe in the Hempen and Flax Manufacture Bill for aſcertaining of Tythes of Flax and Hemp, preſented a Memorial to the Houſe of Commons, deſiring that the ſaid Clauſe might not paſs in the ſaid Bill, being as they apprehended very prejudicial to the Rights and Properties of the Clergy of Ireland, with the Care of which they were intruſted. Inſtead of appointing a Time for hearing the Reaſons they had to offer upon it, the Commons of Ireland without more Ceremony, voted that the Actuary who brought the Meſſage from the Convocation ſign'd by the Prolocutor, was guilty of a Breach of the Privilege of that Houſe, and order'd him to be taken into Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms. They alſo Reſolv'd, That it "appear'd to them that the Convocation in pretend- "ing to have the Care of the Civil Rights of the "Clergy, were guilty of a Contempt and Breach "of the Privilege of that Houſe." The Commons expected the Convocation ſhould make a Submiſſion, but inſtead of ſubmitting, the Synod ſent

Sir John Leake deſtroys Pointis's Ships in the Bay of Gibralter.

The Houſe of Commons in Ireland reſent the Proceedings of the Convocation.

A.D.1705. sent them a Letter, wherein they justify'd their Memorial, as no ways encroaching upon the Privileges of the House of Commons; who upon this voted, That all Matters relating to the Memorial should be raz'd out of the Convocation Journals: And they would certainly have made an Example of this Synod, to deter others from the like Encroachments, if the Duke of Ormond had not prevented it, by a Message to both Houses to adjourn; which they did to the first of May: And in that Interval, the Duke made a Progress into the North of Ireland, to view the Fortifications of the Towns in those Parts, where the Lord Lieutenant was receiv'd every-where with joyful Demonstration of the People's Loyalty and Affection to the Queen, and of Respect and Esteem for his Grace. Among the rest, the Presbyterians, who are numerous in that Country, waited on his Grace, to clear themselves of the Aspersions cast upon them, on Account of some late Transactions in Scotland; they presented him a Dutiful Address at Antrim, Londonderry, and other Places, and were favourably receiv'd; but that did not hinder the Convocations inveighing against them very grossly in a Resolution pass'd by them not long after.

Upon the Duke of Ormond's Return to Dublin, the Parliament sat again; and the House of Commons taking Notice of the restless Endeavours of the Enemies of the Publick Peace, to create Divisions among the Protestants of that Kingdom, thereby to strengthen the Interest of the pretended Prince of Wales, and obstruct the Succession in the Protestant Line, came to the following unanimous Resolutions, May the 25th.

Vigorous Resolutions of that Parliament.

I. That endeavouring to create or promote a Misunderstanding between the Protestants of this Kingdom, tends to the Advantage of the Papists.

The Resolution of the Convocation above-mention'd, not only tended to create a Misunderstanding, but an inveterate Enmity, as will appear presently. And the weakening the Protestant Interest, is seditious, and of dangerous Consequence to her Majesty's Government, and the Succession in the Protestant Line, as by Law establish'd.

II. That by writing or dispersing Pamphlets, or otherwise to insinuate Danger to the establish'd Church, from the Succession by Law establish'd, tends to promote Popery, and the Interest of the pretended Prince of Wales.

III. That it is the indispensable Duty of all Magistrates in this Kingdom, to put the Laws strictly in Execution against the Persons who shall be guilty of such pernicious Practices.

IV. That to suggest by Words or Writing, that the establish'd Church is not well-affected to the Succession of the Crown in the Protestant Line, as settled by Acts of Parliament, or any ways inclin'd to countenance Popery, is a false and malicious Aspersion, and tends to create a dangerous Division among Protestants, and to promote the Designs of Papists and Traytors, in Favour of the pretended Prince of Wales.

V. That the erecting and continuing any Seminaries for the Instruction and Education of Youth in Principles contrary to the establish'd Church and Government, tends to create and perpetuate Misunderstandings among Protestants.

IV. That saying Mass, preaching or teaching in separate Congregations, by Persons who have not taken the Oath of Abjuration, and hearing, maintaining and countenancing such Persons, tends to defeat the Succession of the Crown in the Protestant Line, and to encourage and advance the Interest of the pretended Prince of Wales.

VII. That all Judges and Magistrates are under the highest Obligation to make most diligent Enquiry into all such wicked Practices, and to their utmost endeavour to discover and punish the Authors of them; and such as wilfully neglect the same, ought to be look'd upon as Enemies to her Majesty's Government, and the Prosperity of the Kingdom. A.D.1705.

These vigorous Resolutions were chiefly owing to Mr. Molesworth, afterwards Lord Molesworth; and the Attorney-General was in the Chair of the Committee when they pass'd.

The Convocation also pass'd several Resolves, to clear themselves of the Aspersion of being Enemies to the Protestant Succession.

Votes of the Convocation in Honour of King William's Memory.

" That this Church and Nation having lately
" been in the utmost Danger of being over-run
" by Popery and Tyranny, were happily deliver'd
" from both, by Means of the late Revolution,
" brought about, under God's Providence, by his
" late Majesty, King William the third, of Glo-
" rious Memory.

" That the Continuance and Improvement of
" these Blessings are due, next under God, to the " auspicious Reign, and happy Government of
" her Majesty Queen Anne, whom Almighty God
" long preserve.

Of the Protestant Succession.

" That the future Security and Preservation of
" the Church and Nation depends wholly, under
" God, on the Succession of the Crown, as it is
" now settled by Law in the Protestant Line.

" That if any Clergyman of this Church shall,
" either by Word or Writing, declare any Thing
" in Opposition to the foregoing Resolutions,
" which we hope will never happen, we shall
" look upon him as a Sower of Divisions among
" the Protestants of the establish'd Church, and as
" an Enemy to our Constitution. And after this
" publick and solemn Declaration, we hope no
" Person or Persons will be so unjust, and uncha-
" ritable, as to declare or insinuate that the Clergy
" of the Church of Ireland, as by Law esta-
" blish'd, were not entire in their Affections for
" the late King William, of Glorious Memory, or
" are not in the true Interest of the present Go-
" vernment; or that they are any way disaffected
" to the Succession in the Protestant Line, as by " Law establish'd.

Now comes the Cream of all their Resolutions, which had no more Relation to the Matter in Hand, than to the Treaty of Utrecht.

And against Schism.

That for any Person to Teach, or Preach against the Doctrine, Government, Rights and Ceremonies of this Church; or to keep up and maintain Schools and Seminaries for the Education of Youth in Principles contrary to those of the establish'd Church, is a Contempt of the Ecclesiastical Laws of this Kingdom, is of pernicious Consequence, and serves only to continue and widen the unhappy SCHISMS and Divisions in the Nation.

On the 16th of June, the Duke of Ormond gave the Royal Assent to An Act for an additional Duty on Beer, Tobacco, Callicoes, Muslins, &c.

An Act for Registering the Popish Clergy.

An Act for improving the Hempen and Linnen Manufactures.

An Act to prevent the engrossing of Coals in Dublin, &c.

And then the Parliament was Prorogu'd to the 13th of June, 1706.

Not many Days after the Duke of Ormond embark'd for England, leaving the Administration of the Government of Ireland in the Hands of Sir Richard Cox, Lord Chancellor, and the Lord Cutts, General of the Forces, who were appointed Lords Justices during the Duke's Absence.

*A.D.*1705. Scotch Affairs.

The Sham Lockhart pretends the Design of the Union between England and Scotland, was not out of Affection or Regard to the House of Hanover, so much as it was to secure the Lord Godolphin in the prime Ministry in England, and to prevent his being call'd to Account for advising the Queen to give the Royal Assent to the Act of Security in Scotland; whereas in Truth the Lord Godolphin, and the other Ministers in England, were then so zealous for the accomplishing the Union, purely to settle the Protestant Succession in Scotland, as it was already settled in England: And the Scotch, ever since the Darien Business, had been in so ill a Humour with the English, that whatever Attempt was made to procure the same Settlement, had hitherto had so many Difficulties laid in its Way, that it was plain the Scotch would never settle their Succession as the English had done, by a particular Act, but must be brought to it, as it was an Article of the Union between the two Kingdoms.

Ministers in Scotland removed.

Among other wild extravagant Schemes in the Memoirs, preparatory to the Union, is the Agreement between the Dukes of Queensberry and Argyle, that the former should be set aside as High-Commissioner in the Session of Parliament that was to set the Union on Foot, and the Duke of Argyle be Lord High-Commissioner in his Place. Which the Memoir Writer boldly affirms in this, as in other Cases, to resolve all the Proceedings in Scotland, for the Support of their Religion and Liberty into the Intrigues of ambitious, designing Men, for their own Advancement or Interest. But it is monstrous to represent that the Marquis of Twedale, the Earl of Rothes, the Earl of Roxburgh, the Earl of Selkirk, Mr. Bailie of Jerviswood, and Mr. Johnstoun, were remov'd from their several Offices, to make Room for others, who had the Protestant Succession more at Heart; when every one knows that those Great Men were some of the best Friends to the Revolution and Protestant Succession that were in Great Britain, and had serv'd both with the greatest Wisdom, Fidelity and Success: And it was no good Proof that the Earl of Seafield was more ready to come into Measures for the Hanover Succession, who upon this Remove was made Lord Chancellor, because he afterwards fell in with those of the Harleian Ministry, so far as to be one of the Scotch Peers in both their Parliaments.

On the 23d of June the Scotch Parliament met, and his Grace the Duke of Argyle's Commission being read and recorded, a Commission to James Earl of Seafield to be Chancellor, Commissions to William Marquis of Anandale, and Hugh Earl of Loudon to be Secretaries of State; a Commission to David Earl of Glascow to be Lord Treasurer Depute; a Commission to Sir James Murray of Philiphaugh, to be Clerk Register, and a Commission to Adam Cockburn of Ormistoune to be Lord Justice Clerk, were all severally Read and Recorded; and there being many Members absent, the Lord Commissioner did not think fit to read the Queen's Letter, or to make any Speech, but adjourn'd them to Tuesday, July the 3d, when her Majesty's Letter was read; of which the most remarkable Paragraphs were as follow:

The Queen's Letter to the Scotch Parliament.

IN your last Meeting we recommended to you with the greatest Earnestness, the settling the Succession of that our ancient Kingdom in the Protestant Line; and several Things having since happen'd, which shews the great Inconveniency of this Matter's continuing in Suspence, we cannot but at present most seriously renew the Recommendation of this Settlement, as being convinc'd of the growing Necessity thereof, both for the Preservation of the Protestant Religion, and the Peace and Safety of all our Dominions; and for defeating the Designs and Attempts of all our Enemies. And to prevent any Objections to the said Settlement, that can be suggested from the Views or Fears of future Inconveniencies that may happen to that our Kingdom from thence, we shall be ready to give the Royal Assent to such Provisions and Restrictions, as shall be found necessary and reasonable in such a Case. And therefore we must still leave it upon you as most necessary for all the Ends above-mention'd, that you go to the Settlement of the Succession, before all other Business. A.D.1705. Earnestly recommends the Protestant Succession.

We are fully satisfied, and doubt not but you are, that great Benefit will arise to all our Subjects by an Union of Scotland and England; and nothing will contribute more to the composing of Differences, and extinguishing the Heats that are unhappily raised and fomented by the Enemies of both Nations, than the promoting of every Thing that tends to the procuring the same. Therefore we earnestly recommend to you to pass an Act for a Commission to set a Treaty on Foot between the Kingdoms, as our Parliament of England has done, for effectuating what is so desirable, and for such other Matters and Things as may be judg'd proper for our Honour, and the Good and Advantage of both Kingdoms for ever, in which we shall most heartily give our best Assistance. And Union.

We have nam'd the Duke of Argyle to be our Commissioner, and have fully impower'd him to declare our firm Resolutions to maintain the Government both in Church and State, as by Law establish'd, and likewise to consent to such further Laws, as shall be thought needful for that End.

Hook comes to Scotland from the Pretender. Lockhart, p. 157.

The Lord Commissioner and Lord Chancellor made Speeches to the same Purpose; and notwithstanding all the Opposition the Treaty for a Union met with from the Duke of Hamilton, the Duke of Athol, Earl Marishal, Earl of Errol, Viscount Stormont, Lockhart of Carnwarth, and Andrew Fletcher of Saltone, one of Monmouth's Captains, Henry Maule, a Rank Jacobite, and others of the like Stamp, the Parliament pass'd An Act about treating of an Union with England; and it is remarkable, that at the same Time Andrew Fletcher of Saltone was haranguing the Parliament against the Union, a Companion of his, one Hook, who was the Duke of Monmouth's Chaplain, came from France to Scotland in August, and brought Letters from the French King, and his mock King, the Pretender, to the Duke of Hamilton, the Earl of Errol, Earl Marshal, the Earl of Hume, and all that Treasonable Confederacy. One may see what rare Patriots Fletcher and Hook were; for in the Case of the Opposition to the Union, they were equally Enemies to the true Protestant Interest, and the Liberty of their Country. Hook was impower'd to make Proposals to them from the Great King and the Mock-King, in order for a Rebellion; but the Routs at Ramellies and Turin, disabled Lewis the XIVth from making good those Proposals, which he attempted two or three Years after. There's no Room left us to doubt, what was the wicked Purpose of those that were the main Sticklers against the Union; for if Fletcher, and a few others, dream'd of a Commonwealth, by their obstructing the Settlement of the Protestant Succession, the Chief, and the Bulk of the Enemies to the Union, were Enemies to the Revolution, and the Government founded upon it: Nay, this same Hook was so impudent as to propose to the Jacobites, and their Abettors in Parliament, that they should own his King's Interest, and move his Restoration, instead of settling the Crown on the House of Hanover. For it seems he was admitted into the Cavalier Club, as they call'd themselves, who rendezvous'd to concert their Measures every Day before

A.D.1705. before the Parliament met; and the Memoir Writer owns, that the Country Party, of which was Fletcher of Saltone, uſually met with them.

I am ſenſible there were many Noble Perſons in Scotland, who out of a true Scottiſh Principle to maintain the Independency of their Kingdom, and the Rights and Prerogatives annex'd to it, were againſt the Union, and would willingly have come into any other Meaſure for the Settlement of the Crown in the Royal Houſe of Hanover; but theſe worthy Perſons were by no Means equal in Number to the Jacobites and diſguſted Whigs who oppos'd the Treaty; and their Oppoſition would have given little Trouble, without a Coalition with the two Factions juſt mention'd; which will appear in a better Light, by ſome of the Names of thoſe Members of the Scotch Parliament that were Sticklers againſt the Union. To which muſt be added, the Names of thoſe that proteſted againſt ſettling the Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, inſerted when we mention the Debates upon the ſecond Article of the Union.

Scotch Lords and Gentlemen againſt the Union.

Earl of Kincardie.
Earl of Selkirk.
Earl of Galloway.
Lord Oliphant.
Lord Balmerino.
Lord Blantire.
Lord Duffus.

Sir James Fowles of Collington.
Sir Robert Sinclair of Longformanus.
J. Sharp of Haddoon.
John Sharp of Houſton.
Sir Edward Home of Renton.
J. Sinclair of Stevenſon.
Sir Hugh Colquhua of Luſs.
Sir Patrick Murray of Struan.
D. Beaton of Balfour.
William Sutherland.
John Stuart of Kilgumlock.
Sir Patrick Murray of Auchtertyre.
Alexander Migghie of Palgoun.
Sir Thomas Burnet of Leyes.
Alexander Gordon of Pitburg.
James Dunbar of Hempings.
Alexander Robertſon.
John Blaire.
James Bethune.
Sir David Cunningham.
William Johnſton.
John Black.
John Forbes of Colledon.
Hugh Balfour of Dunborg.
Sir R. Anſtruther.
A. Watſon.
William Stuart.
George Spence.
R. Johnſton.
Sir John Lauder of Fountanhall.
Alexander Mackenzie of Palgowan.

Dr. Chamberlain and Mr. Robert Harley Projectors.

When the Parliament of Scotland was upon the State of the Nation, there were two Perſons who made Propoſals to ſupply the National Money by a Paper Credit. The one was Dr. Hugh Chamberlain, who aſſiſted Mr. Robert Harley in that admirable Project of the Land Bank; which though it was ſo ſhort-liv'd, that it could not do the Kingdom ſo much Miſchief as other Projects from the ſame Hand did, yet it liv'd long enough to ruin the Projector; who having built the Hopes of repairing his decaying Fortune by the ſaid Bank, and being diſappointed, was forc'd to fly out of England, and thought to have impos'd on the Scotch, as he had done on Mr. Harley and his Party in England; but he had otherguеſs Politicians to deal with, and his Project and he ſoon vaniſh'd. The other Projector was the famous Mr. John Law, who oblig'd the French with the Miſſiſippi Scheme. He was the Son of a Goldſmith in Edinburgh, who having ſpent the ſmall Eſtate that was left him, liv'd, if the Memoir Writer can ſpeak Truth, by Gaming and Sharping; but the Parliament of Scotland would have nothing to do with him, and paſs'd a Reſolution, that the eſtabliſhing any kind of Paper Credit, ſo as to oblige it to paſs, is an improper Expedient for this Nation; and if ſo, I humbly conceive Paper Credit to be a very improper Expedient for every Nation upon Earth, that has little or no Silver; and where then it can be expedient at all, will be hard to find out. A.D.1705.

Flies to Scotland.

Mr. Law the Projector.

Duke Hamilton Trims.

The Scotch Act for a Treaty of Union with England, empower'd the Queen, after a great Struggle in the Houſe between the Proes and Cons, to nominate the Commiſſioners; and the Duke of Hamilton, who diſputed the Ground for the Independency againſt the Union Inch by Inch, was the Perſon that made the Motion for leaving the Nomination of the Commiſſioners with her Majeſty; which was the more inconſiſtent with his Oppoſition to the Treaty, inaſmuch as it was the ſureſt way for it to take Effect, after ſhe had recommended it ſo often and ſo earneſtly to them.

We muſt paſs over to the Continent, and take a ſhort View of the Military Affairs there.

The Duke of Marlborough goes to Holland and Germany.

On Friday, the 31ſt of March, his Grace, the Duke of Marlborough, embark'd on board one of her Majeſty's Yatchs at Harwich, and ſail'd for Holland, under Convoy of a Squadron of Men of War, commanded by the Marquis of Carmarthen, Vice-Admiral of the Red: But being kept back by contrary Winds, he arriv'd not in Holland 'till the 3d of April. His Grace ſtaid at the Hague 'till the 23d of April, and then having finiſh'd his Conferences with the States and their Generals, he proceeded to Maeſtricht. At Ruremond he review'd the two Regiments of Foot, commanded by Lieutenant-General Ingoldsby, and Colonel Tatton, which had been in Gariſon there during the Winter. The Duke of Marlborough ſtaid ſome Days at Maeſtricht, to iſſue Orders for the March of his Troops towards Triers.

The French' Army in Motion.

On the 8th of May, his Grace arriv'd at Schelenbergh, where he found the Landgrave of Heſſe-Caſſel, by whom his Grace was very honourably receiv'd; and on the 9th of May he arriv'd at Radſtat, where he was receiv'd by Prince Lewis of Baden, with extraordinary Marks of Friendſhip and Eſteem. The next Day the Duke went to view the Lines of Bielk and Stolhoffen, and having concerted Meaſures with Prince Lewis, he join'd his Army, which were aſſembled between the Moſelle and the Saar; he paſs'd the latter, and march'd with great Expedition towards Sirk, in order to engage the Enemy, who having taken Huy, were marching towards Liege; but upon the Approach of his Grace, they retir'd to Retel, where they intrench'd themſelves behind a River. Upon which his Grace encamp'd at Elſt, expecting the Arrival of the Troops from Prince Lewis of Baden's Army, and thoſe of Pruſſia; which not coming up ſo ſoon as was concerted, the Mareſchal de Villeroy inveſted the Citadel of Liege, which drew the Duke of Marlborough nearer the Maeſe, to put a ſtop to Villeroy's Progreſs. Prince Lewis of Baden was to have come in Perſon to act in Conjunction with his Grace in the Siege of Saar-Louis, which would have open'd a Gap into the very Bowels of France; but the Prince was taken ill in his March of a Diſtemper that however put him under no other Neceſſity of a Cure, than the Waters of Schlangenbergh; and the German Troops being countermanded as they were marching towards the Moſelle, the Deſign to attack France on that Side prov'd abortive. The Elector of Bavaria, and the Mareſcal de Villeroy, thought not fit to ſtay for the Duke of Marborough's coming up to them before Liege, but drew off from thence

The Germans diſappoint the Duke.

The French quit the Siege of Liege on the Duke's Approach.

A D. 1705. thence the 15th of June, when the Duke of Marlborough arriv'd at Maeſtricht, as did his whole Army the 19th: From whence he march'd to Haneff, having ſent a Detachment to recover Huy, which after a ſhort Reſiſtance, was ſurrender'd by the Governor, Monſieur de St. Pierre, a Brigadier-General, who had the ſame Terms granted him, as the Confederate Gariſon had a Month before, when the French took it. The Duke of Marlborough diſpatch'd Colonel Durel from Triers to Vienna, with an Account of the Reaſons which had induc'd him to return towards the Maeſe, and the Colonel brought a very obliging Anſwer back from the Emperor. And two Days after his Return to the Duke of Marlborough's Camp at Lieu de Beguinnes, he was ſent Expreſs to England, with the following Relation of his Grace's great Succeſs in forcing the French Lines; which he attack'd early in the Morning, July the 18th, N. S. near Heſpen and Heyleſhein. My Lord Duke had deſir'd Monſieur d' Auverquerque to paſs the Mehaigne with his Army, and to advance towards the Lines, in order to give the Enemy a Jealouſy that they were to be attack'd on that Side, which would oblige them to draw their Troops to that Quarter; which had the Effect intended, upon its being put in Execution the Day before; and in the cloſe of the Evening, my Lord Marlborough order'd a Detachment of twenty Battalions, and thirty-eight Squadrons, under the Command of Count Noyelles, Lieutenant-General Scholten, and Lieutenant-General Ingolsby; the Horſe that were principally concern'd in this Action, being commanded by Lieutenant-General Lumley, to advance towards the Poſts before-mention'd, which were at leaſt three Leagues from my Lord's Camp; and at ten at Night his Grace follow'd with the reſt of the Army, having given Notice to Monſieur d' Auverquerque, that he might march back again, in order to join and ſecond him.

He recovers Huy.

He forces the French Lines.

By break of Day, the Detachment being come to the Lines, forc'd their Paſſage with little Oppoſition, and got over with ſo much Diligence, that three Regiments of French Dragoons which were encamp'd near the Place attack'd, had not Time to oppoſe them, but were oblig'd to retire to Leeuwe: immediately after Monſieur de Alegre appear'd with a ſtrong Body of Horſe and Foot, computed at fifty Squadrons, and twenty Battalions, and advanc'd with great Reſolution: But his Grace having already got over with a good Part of the Horſe of the Right Wing, and having form'd them, he attack'd the Enemy with ſo much Bravery, that after a hot Diſpute of two Hours, he oblig'd them to retire with conſiderable Loſs; upon which the Duke order'd a Detachment to march to Tirlemont, where they forc'd the Battalion of Montlue, which was in that Place, to ſurrender at Diſcretion.

Another Detachment of Dragoons, which his Grace ſent to purſue the Enemy, had the good Fortune to overtake and ſeize a great Part of their Baggage.

In this Action ſeveral General Officers, and about eighty Inferiors were taken, and about Two thouſand private Soldiers, ten Pieces of Cannon, many Standards and Colours. The Chief of the Priſoners were,

The French and Bavarian Officers taken.

The Marquis d' Alegre, Lieutenant-General.
Count Hoorne, Lieutenant-General.
Monſieur Rivera, Colonel of Spaniſh Horſe.
The Baron de Bergeyck.
The Chevalier d' Oly.
The Baron de Boulars.
Monſieur Menuſy, Lieutenant-Colonel of the Bavarian Guards.

Monſieur de Villerade, Captain of the Elector of Bavaria's Life-Guard. A.D. 1705.
Monſieur D' Eſpina, Colonel of Bavarian Horſe.
Don Andrew Benedittes, Major-General.
The Baron de Montigny, Colonel.
Monſieur de Montaauban, Colonel of the Artillery.
Monſieur de Valence, Aid de Camp to the Marquis de Biron.
Monſieur de Echavarries, Aid de Camp to Monſieur de Benattes.
Monſieur Aquaviva, Aid de Camp to the Elector of Bavaria.
Monſieur Jacques, Aid de Camp to the Count de Courten.
Count Raymont, Count Tanfkerchen, } Lieutenant-Colonels of the Bavarian Guards.
Monſieur d' Eſſendorf, Lieutenant-Colonel.
Monſieur Santoney, Brigadier-General.
Monſieur de Perlata, Brigadier-General.
Monſieur de Montalte.
Monſieur de la Tour.
Don Jeronimo Zoaris, Don Arandes, Signior Aquilara, } Spaniſh Officers.
Monſieur Proneres, Lieutenant-General.
Chevalier de Sairaz, Major.

The next Day the Duke of Marlborough march'd from Tirlemont to Uberbeck, where he encamp'd within a Mile of Louvain. The French having march'd all the Night before, paſs'd the Dyle, and encamp'd at Bethlehem, but their Rear-Guard was not quite over, when our advanc'd Squadrons appear'd; upon which they immediately took up their Bridges, leaving behind them a great Number of their Foot, which the Parties ſent out by his Grace, brought in. The Enemy quitted Dieſt, and drew off the two Battalions they had in Gariſon there; upon which the Magiſtrates deputed two of their Body to wait upon the Duke, and beg his Protection. His Grace ſent Colonel Richards, one of his Adjutants to the Emperor, and Lieutenant-General Hompeſch to the States-General, with an Account of this great Advantage obtain'd over the Enemy; which had it happen'd in any other Campaign, but that immediately after that glorious one of Blenheim, would have made a more ſhining Figure in Hiſtory.

All the Confederate Troops behav'd gallantly in the Attack of the French Lines: And among the Horſe, the Regiment of Brigadier-General Cadogan diſtinguiſh'd themſelves, having had the Honour to charge firſt. They defeated four Squadrons of Bavarian Guards, and drove them through Battalions of their own Foot.

Leeuwee taken without firing a Gun.

The Conſternation of the French Court upon the News of the Duke of Marlborough's forcing the Lines is inexpreſſible, being equal to that they were in upon the Rout of their Armies in Germany laſt Campaign. The Siege of Leeuwe being reſolv'd on, the Duke of Marlborough order'd Lieutenant General Dedem, with 15 Battalions and as many Squadrons, to take Poſt before the Place; but no ſooner was the Artillery intended for the Siege mounted on the Batteries, than the Governor, Brigadier General Dumont, ſent a Letter to General Dedem, deſiring to know what Terms he might capitulate for; whoſe Anſwer was, that the Gariſon, the firſt Battalion of Tilly, were to be Priſoners of War, and they ſurrender'd accordingly and deliver'd up their Arms before a Gun was fir'd at the Town or Citadel, in which were ten pieces of Braſs Canon, 8 of Iron, 2 Braſs Mortars, a good ſtore of Bombs and Grenado's, 200 Barrels of Powder, 2000 Muskets, and a great Quantity of

A.D.1705. of Proviſion and Neceſſaries of all ſorts. Part of Monſieur Dedem's Detachment were order'd after the Surrender of Leeuwe to poſſeſs themſelves of Arſchat which the French had quitted, and the Duke of Marlborough encamp'd there, September 24, N. S. His Grace had a Conference with Monſieur Buys, Penſionary of Amſterdam, whom the States General had ſent to the Army for that purpoſe; but it did not appear by the Effects, that any thing was agreed upon by them, tending to a greater Coup de Eclat before the Seaſon for Action was over. The Duke employ'd no leſs than 5000 Pioneers in demoliſhing the French Lines at Leeuwe, and laying all the Country they had cover'd open, which very much forwarded the Operations of the next Campaign. The Duke having given Orders for attacking Sanvliet, in which was a Gariſon of 1000 French, Batteries were rais'd before the Place the 26th of October N. S. and the next Morning they capitulated. My Lord Duke receiv'd very preſſing Letters from the Emperor, inviting his Grace to Vienna to concert Meaſures for the further carrying on a vigorous War againſt the common Enemy. Upon which his Grace left the Army the ſame Day that the Trenches were open'd at Sanvliet, and came to Duſſeldorp the 28th of October. The Elector Palatine met the Duke on the Road about 2 Leagues from his Reſidence at Bernſdorff, and entertain'd him magnificently under ſeveral Tents. At Franckfort his Grace was receiv'd by the Magiſtrates with extraordinary Honours; and the Duke of Shrewsbury happening to be there, the Duke of Marlborough and his Retinue were entertain'd by him with a Magnificence equal to both their Qualities. Here alſo Prince Lewis came to compliment and confer with his Grace, who proceeding in his Journey was receiv'd every where with Demonſtrations of Joy, as he was ſo lately the Deliverer of Germany from the Tyranny of France. The Duke arriv'd at Vienna the 12th of November, and ſtaid there eleven Days, having frequent Conferences with the Emperor and his Miniſters, and receiving from all Perſons the greateſt Marks of Honour and Eſteem. The Imperial Court would have defray'd his Expences, and the Prince of Dietrichſtein's Palace had been fitted up for his Reception; but the Duke was pleas'd to decline it. His Imperial Majeſty made him a Grant of Mindleheim in Swabia, not far from Augsburgh, poſſeſt by Duke Maximilian, Uncle to the Elector of Bavaria, and it was erected into a Principality, by which my Lord Duke of Marlborough was from that time diſtinguiſh'd throughout the Empire by the Stile and Title of Prince of Mindleheim; an Honour ſo well deſerv'd by him for the ſignal Services he had done the Emperor and Empire, that no Prince in Germany could hold his Dignity and Poſſeſſions by a better Title, and none but the moſt ungrateful and unworthy of all Mankind, would have contributed to his being depriv'd of it in favour of a Prince who had forfeited his Eſtates by Treaſon, and the good Will of all Men of Honour and Juſtice by his Deſertion and Treachery. The Earl of Sunderland took his Audience of Leave of the Emperor, in order to accompany the Duke his Father-in-law in his return home. Count Zinzendorff waited on their Lordſhips the firſt Days Journey to Telowitz, and entertain'd them in his Caſtle there. The Duke of Marlborough and Earl of Sunderland arriv'd at Berlin, December 1 N.S. and ſupp'd at Night with the King of Pruſſia. They were ſplendidly entertain'd during their ſtay at that Court, which they left the 4th of December, and came to Hanover the 6th, his Grace lodg'd at Monſieur Buleau's Houſe. The ſame Evening the Duke and the Earl waited upon his Electoral Highneſs and the Electreſs Dowager, by whom they were receiv'd with extraordinary Marks of Diſtinction; their Lordſhips ſtaid at Hanover 4 Days, and arriv'd at the Hague the 14th of December; but the Men of War that were to be the Duke's Convoy, not being come from England, his Grace did not embark till the 27th. At the ſame time embark'd alſo the Duke of Shrewsbury, the Earl of Sunderland, the Earl of Rochford, Monſieur Buys Envoy Extraordinary from the States General, the Count de Horne, and ſeveral other French Officers, who were taken Priſoners at the forcing the Enemies Lines. The Marquis de Alegre had leave upon his Parole to go to France. The Duke of Marlborough came to St. James's the laſt Day of the Year. Prince Lewis of Baden by the taking of Haguenau in Alſace, and Prince Eugene by his Succeſs at Caſſaro in Italy, made this Campaign a very honourable one to the Confederates, though ſhort of the Triumphs of the laſt; to which if we add the putting Charles III in poſſeſſion of Barcelona, and the beſt Towns in Catalonia, the beſt Part of the Spaniſh Dominions, it muſt be own'd that the Confederates had Encouragement enough to proſecute the War with Vigor. We Engliſh-Men were too much concern'd in the Expedition to Catalonia, not to be well pleas'd with a more particular Account of it, and we are the more inclin'd to do ſo, becauſe it will ſet the hideous Picture of thoſe execrable Counſellors, that put the Queen upon abandoning the Catalans to Slaughter, Chains and Beggary, in a juſt Light. The Earl of Galway improving the Opportunity of the ill-condition the French Infantry on the Frontiers of Portugal was reduc'd to by the brave Defence of the Engliſh Troops in Gibraltar, open'd the Spring Campaign on that ſide with attacking Valencia de Alcantara, which was taken by Storm, and Albuquerque by Capitulation, May 22; and before his Forces were gone into Quarters of Refreſhment, the Earl of Peterborough and Sir Cloudſley Shovel arriv'd at Lisbon.

A.D.1705.

Duke of Marlborough goes to Vienna.

Duke of Shrewsbury entertains him at Franckfort.

The Duke of Marlborough made Prince of Mindleheim.

He and the Earl of Sunderland arrive at Berlin. And at Hanover.

The Succeſs of the Confederates this Seaſon.

Catalonia recover'd for Charles III.

There was in London a Merchant who had liv'd ſeveral Years in Barcelona, as Factor for London Merchants, his Name was Mitford Crow, whom I knew well when he was Prentice to Alderman Tillard of that City in my Juvenile Days. Crow being in London when the Talk was of ſending Charles III to Spain, gave the Miniſters ſuch Information of the good Diſpoſition of the Citizens of Barcelona and the Catalans, that he was ſent thither to induce them to an Inſurrection in favour of that Prince, upon promiſe of Aſſiſtance ſolemnly given them in the Name of the Queen of England, as appears by the Terms of Mr. Crow's Credentials.

ANNE, &c.

We have with great Satisfaction been inform'd, that as you were ever zealous for aſſerting your Liberties, ſo at this time you brook with juſt Indignation the French Yoke impos'd upon you, and are determin'd as becomes Men of Reſolution to ſhake it off.

For doing which her Miniſters, when the Treaty was at Utrecht, ſuch as Meſſ. St. John, Bromley, and if not, ſuch as Mr. Harley, were ſuffer'd not only to call them Rebels, but to deliver them up after they had been thus tempted to ſhake off the French Yoke, to the Revenge and Rage of both French and Caſtillians.

To ſupport Crow's Negotiations, the Earl of Peterborough was ſent to Catalonia, about the latter end of April with 7500 Men, Engliſh and Dutch, and 2000 Marines,

From England.	From Ireland.
Col. Southwell's Regᵐᵗ.	Lord Charlemont's,
Colonel Elliot's,	Brigadier Gorges,
Colonel Hamilton's.	Colonel Caulfield's.

A.D.1705. Dutch under Monſieur Scrattenback 2500.

To theſe muſt be added, two Regiments of Dragoons, and four of Foot, which the Earl of Galway conſented the Earl of Peterborough ſhould take with him from Portugal in that Expedition, which made the whole Number of Lord Peterborough's Troops near 10000 Men; and ſo good a Strength tempted the King of Spain to put himſelf aboard the Fleet when it ſail'd from Lisbon, and puſh the War on in Catalonia or other Maritime Provinces of Spain.

The Fleet ſail'd from Lisbon the 28th of July, and having firſt ſet Major General Ramas Baſſet aſhore at Denia to begin the Conqueſt of the Kingdom of Valencia, arriv'd before Barcelona about the 12th of Auguſt, O. S. And his Catholick Majeſty receiving daily freſh Aſſurances from the People of Catalonia, of their entire Affection for his Service, was very preſſing to have the Forces landed and the Siege undertaken, which was done accordingly on Sunday the 12th of Auguſt. There was no Oppoſition, and the People in the neighbouring Towns and Villages, look'd upon the Engliſh and Dutch Troops as Friends. The Siege of Barcelona advanc'd ſlowly till after Fort Montjuic was taken. It was attack'd by the Earl of Peterborough and part of the Army, September 3, and the Outworks carried in the firſt Aſſault. On the 6th a Magazine in the Caſtle blew up, and the Engliſh and Dutch in the Outworks taking the Opportunity of the Confuſion of the Enemy, forc'd into the Caſtle and poſſeſt it, making all the Gariſon Priſoners of War. In the Attack made on the Outworks, the Prince of Heſſe Darmſtadt, who was a Volunteer in this Action was ſlain, and his Brother Prince Henry narrowly eſcap'd the ſame Fate, having receiv'd a ſhot in his Hat. The Earl of Peterborough's Men began to give ground upon the Prince of Heſſe's being kill'd, of which his Lordſhip having notice, he came immediately and rally'd them. The Attack on Barcelona was carry'd on after the taking of Montjuic, on that ſide of the Town next the Fort. To forward the Siege, Sir Cloudſley Shovel, joint Admiral of the Fleet with the Earl of Peterborough, landed 58 Pieces of Canon, which being planted on Batteries, made a very large Breach; behind which the Enemy caſt up a conſiderable Entrenchment; yet ſeeing Matters diſpos'd by the Beſiegers for a general Aſſault, they thought fit to beat a Parley, upon which Hoſtages were exchang'd the 23d of September, a Major-General from the Beſieg'd, and Brigadier-General Stanhope from the Beſiegers; the Treaty laſted five Days, and being ſign'd the 28th of September, the Confederate Troops were put in Poſſeſſion of one of the Gates; when the Gariſon was about to march out on the 2d of October, the Citizens, who had been long exaſperated by the Severities of the Spaniſh Viceroy, Don Velaſco, having a Jealouſy that he intended to carry ſome of thoſe he had in Priſon away with him, roſe up in Arms againſt the Gariſon, and rung their Bells, as deſiring Aſſiſtance; upon which the Earl of Peterborough march'd in with the Army at the Breach, and compoſing this Diſorder, ſav'd both the Town and the Gariſon, to the great Satisfaction of both Parties: The greateſt Part of the latter took this Opportunity to come over to the Confederates; and out of the Five thouſand Men of which it conſiſted at the time of the Surrender, ſcarce One thouſand continu'd in the Service of the Duke of Anjou. Terragona was taken by a Body of Catalans, aſſiſted by a Detachment of Marines from the Fleet. Gironne, on the Frontiers of Provence, Tortoſa and Lerida, all ſtrong Towns, open'd their Gates to the King of Spain, and in a word, the whole Province of Catalonia, except Roſes, ſubmitted to him. Several Places in Arragon, declar'd alſo for his Catholick Majeſty; as did Denia and other Towns of Note in the Kingdom of Valentia, where Major General Baſſet took the Oaths of Fidelity of the chief Magiſtrates, and the Gariſon he left in Denia repuls'd the Troops the Duke of Anjou's Generals ſent to recover it. A.D.1705.

Prince of Heſſe d' Armſtadt kill'd.

Barcelona taken.

Three Weeks after the Reduction of Barcelona, the Council of that City ſent the Queen of England a very reſpectful Letter of Thanks, deſiring the Continuance of her Protection. The Earl of Galway, after the Engliſh Fleet was ſail'd from Lisbon, prevail'd with the Portugueſe to beſiege Badajox, but it was October before the Portugueſe Army took the Field. On the 2d of that Month the Marquis des Minas who commanded that Army having joyned my Lord Galway, the Earl paſt the Caya, as he did the Xevera by degrees, and then paſſing the Guadiana alſo inveſted Badajox, which is eſteem'd one of the fineſt Marches that has been made, thus, to paſs three Rivers, and inveſt a Town of that Conſequence in one Day, all which was perform'd with great Order, Secrecy and Expedition. Some of the Enemies Squadrons were in Sight when the Confederates paſt the Guadiana, but retir'd before they could come up with them. The Mareſchal de Theſſe was encamp'd within two Leagues of them, near Talavara, with the French and Spaniſh Army. The Trenches were open'd the 4th of October, by the Marquis de Montandre, who did very great Service. On the 11th a Battery of 30 Twenty four Pounders, and another of 14 Mortars, were finiſh'd and play'd furiouſly upon the Town; but ſome Powder of the great Battery taking Fire, and occaſioning a Diſorder, the Earl of Galway went thither immediately to give the neceſſary Directions to prevent any ill Conſequences from that Accident; while the Earl was there, he had the Misfortune to have his Right Hand ſtruck off above the Wriſt by a Canon-Shot from the Town, upon which the Mareſchal de Theſſe found means to throw Relief into the Place; for the Diſpoſitions his Lordſhip had made for carrying on the Siege, were not purſu'd in the Manner he intended; if they had, de Theſſe would not have been able to have reliev'd the Town. However, the Siege was carried on, and a practicable Breach being made, the Confederates were preparing on the 13th to give an Aſſault that Night; but receiving Intelligence that the Enemies Forces were paſſing the Guadiana, it was reſolv'd in a Council of War to march againſt them; accordingly part of the Army being left to guard the Attacks and Batteries, the reſt paſt the Guadiana the next Morning, and drew up in order of Battel. The Enemy in the mean time had paſt the Xevera, and form'd their Troops on the other ſide of that River, which was between the two Armies, only 10 or 12 Squadrons of their Dragoons remain'd on a riſing Ground on the ſame ſide with the Confederate Army, whom Lieutenant General Windham attack'd with 7 Squadrons, and puſh'd them into the River with great Diſorder and Loſs on their ſide. The two Armies cannonaded each other about two Hours, but there being no Engagement, we ſhall only add, that the Confederates thinking it not proper to continue the Siege, drew off their Artillery and march'd back with it to Elvas, without Interruption from the French and Spaniards. The King of Portugal being inform'd of the ſad Accident that happen'd to the Earl of Galway, ſent him the following Letter.

The Earl of Galways fine March

His Arm ſhot off.

King of Portugal's Letter to the Earl of Galway upon it.

My Lord Galway,

I the King, &c. The Marquis des Minas of our Council of State, and Governor of Arms of the Province where you are, giving us an Account in his Letter

A.D.1705. Letter of the 12th Inſtant, That as you were advancing with great Zeal for our Service, and the Common Cauſe, it happen'd that you were wounded with a Cannon-Ball of the Enemies, which ſtruck off your Right Hand: We think fit to let you know the great Concern we had upon the Notice of that Accident; as well by Reaſon of the particular Eſteem we have of your Perſon, as of the great Want there will be of you in the Army, during the Time of your Cure: Aſſuring you, that we ſhall ever have your great Valour and Conduct in our Memory; and we order our Envoy at the Court at London, to repreſent to the Queen of Great Britain, our dear Siſter and Couſin, the great Satisfactiou we have in your Perſon.

Given at Alcontares, the 14th of October, 1705.

It was ſaid, and believ'd, that the Queen ſent a Letter to my Lord Galway, all of her own Hand-Writing, upon the ſame Subject: But what Returns the Tory Miniſtry made his Lordſhip for his great Services and Loſſes ſuſtain'd in them, when they got the Queen to employ them, will be ſeen in the Hiſtory of their abominable Adminiſtration.

We have ſpoken of the Elections in England for a New Parliament, in which were vehement Struggles for Superiority, both by Whigs and Tories; but the Behaviour of the latter had undeceiv'd ſo great a part of the Nation, as to the Honeſty of their Intentions, that it was plain the Whigs would have the Major Vote; which muſt needs be a great Satisfaction not only to good Engliſhmen at Home, but to the Allies Abroad, who never were, nor ever will be convinc'd that High-Church will heartily eſpouſe their Intereſts againſt France.

There was not only a Thankſgiving-Day order'd by her Majeſty, for the Duke of Marlborough's forcing the French Lines, and his glorious Victory over the Forces within thoſe Lines; but the Archbiſhops and Biſhops were order'd to make a Prayer ſuitable to the Occaſion, to be us'd in all Churches on the 23d of Auguſt, when her Majeſty went to St. Paul's with great Solemnity, to return Thanks to God for theſe his ſignal Mercies and Bleſſings. Five Days after, the Queen and Prince George ſet out from Windſor for Wincheſter; a Place the more agreeable to them, probably, becauſe part of their Honey-Moon was paſs'd there, after their Marriage. While they were in that City, they were attended by Colonel Gibſon, Lieutenant-Governor of Portſmouth, and William Gifford, Eſq; Commiſſioner of the Navy at Portſmouth, on whom ſhe was pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood. Her Majeſty, and his Royal Highneſs, ſtay'd ten Days at Wincheſter, where ſhe receiv'd all the Marks of Duty, Love and Joy, which a happy People could pay to a good and gracious Prince; and ſhe remain'd in the Poſſeſſion of their Hearts, a more glorious Dominion than that of three Kingdoms, as long as ſhe appear'd, as ſhe did now, to be entirely in their Intereſts; of which ſhe could not give a better Inſtance, than in her committing the Cuſtody of the Great Seal to William Cowper, Eſq; one of her Council in the Law, with the Title of Lord Keeper, October the 11th; and two Days after ſhe appointed the Earl of Mar, who diſcover'd not his Treaſonable Purpoſes 'till ten Years after, Secretary of State for Scotland.

The Queen goes to St. Paul's on the Thankſgiving-Day.

At Wincheſter.

William Cowper, Eſq; made Lord Keeper.

John Smith choſen Speaker.

On the 25th of October, the Parliament met at Weſtminſter, and the Commons choſe John Smith, Eſq; to be their Speaker. He was oppos'd by William Bromley, Eſq; the ſame Gentleman that had with ſo much Heat puſh'd on the Occaſional Bill and the Tack; which made it the more ſtrange that he ſhould expoſe himſelf to a Rebuff about the Speaker's Chair, he having ſo little Reaſon to expect any Thing better from the Majority of this Repreſentative. A.D.1705.

On the 27th of October, the Queen made this very agreeable Speech to both Houſes.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Queen's Speech to the new Parliament.

I Have been very deſirous to meet you as early as I thought you ought to be call'd together, without Inconvenience to your ſelves.

And it is with much Satisfaction I obſerve ſo full an Appearance at the beginning of the Parliament, becauſe it is a ground for me to conclude, you are all convinc'd of the Neceſſity of proſecuting the juſt War in which we are engag'd, and therefore are truly ſenſible that 'tis of the greateſt Importance to us to be timely in our Preparations.

Nothing can be more evident, than that if the French King continues Maſter of the Spaniſh Monarchy, the Balance of Power in Europe is utterly deſtroy'd, and he will be able, in a ſhort Time, to engroſs the Trade and the Wealth of the World.

No good Engliſhman would at any Time be content to ſit ſtill and acquieſce in ſuch a Proſpect: And at this Time we have great Grounds to hope, that by the bleſſing of God upon our Arms, a good Foundation is laid for reſtoring the Monarchy of Spain to the Houſe of Auſtria; the Conſequence of which will not only be ſafe and advantageous, but glorious for England.

I may add, we have learnt by our own Experience, that no Peace with France will laſt longer than their firſt Occaſion of dividing the Allies, and of attacking ſome of them with Advantage.

All our Allies muſt needs be ſo ſenſible this is the true State of the Caſe, that I make no doubt but Meaſures will be ſoon ſo concerted, as that, if we are not wanting to our ſelves, we ſhall ſee the next Campaign begun offenſively on all Sides againſt our Enemies, in a moſt vigirous Manner.

I muſt therefore deſire you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, to grant me the neceſſary Supplies that will be requiſite for carrying on the next Year's Service, both by Sea and Land; and at the ſame Time to conſider, that the giving all poſſible Diſpatch, will make the Supplies it ſelf much more effectual.

The Firmneſs and Conduct which the Duke of Savoy has ſhewn, amidſt extream Difficulties, is beyond Example.

I have not been wanting to do all that was poſſible for me, in order to his being ſupported.

I ought to take Notice to you, that the King of Pruſſia's Troops have been very uſeful to this End: Your Approbation of that Treaty laſt Seſſions, and the Encouragement you gave upon it, leaves me no doubt of being able to renew it for another Year.

I take this Occaſion to aſſure you, that not only whatever ſhall be granted by Parliament for bearing the Charge of the War, ſhall be laid out for that Purpoſe, with the greateſt Faithfulneſs and Management; but that I will continue to add out of my own Revenue, all I can reaſonably ſpare, beyond the neceſſary Expences for the Honour of the Government.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

By an Act of Parliament paſs'd the laſt Winter, I was enabled to appoint Commiſſioners for this Kingdom, to treat with Commiſſioners to be impower'd by Authority of Parliament in Scotland, concerning a nearer and more complete Union between the two Kingdoms, as ſoon as an Act ſhould be made there for that Purpoſe. I think it proper for me to acquaint you, that ſuch an Act is lately paſs'd there, and

A.D. 1705. and I intend in a ſhort Time, to cauſe Commiſſions to be made out, in order to put the Treaty on Foot, which I heartily deſire may prove ſucceſsful, becauſe I am perſuaded, that an Union of the two Kingdoms will not only prevent many Inconveniences which may otherwiſe happen, but muſt conduce to the Peace and Happineſs of both Nations; and thereofore I hope I ſhall have your Aſſiſtance in bringing this great Work to a good Concluſion.

There is another Union I think my ſelf oblig'd to recommend to you in the moſt earneſt and affectionate Manner, I mean an Union of Minds and Affections amongſt our ſelves: It is that which would, above all Things, diſappoint and defeat the Hopes and Deſigns of our Enemies.

I cannot but with Grief obſerve, there are ſome amongſt us, who endeavour to foment Animoſities, but I perſuade my ſelf there will be found very few, when you appear to aſſiſt me in diſcountenancing and defeating ſuch Practices.

I mention this with a little more Warmth, becauſe there have not been wanting ſome ſo very malicious, as even in Print to ſuggeſt the Church of England, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, to be in Danger at this Time.

I am willing to hope not one of my Subjects can really entertain a Doubt of my Affection to the Church, or ſo much as ſuſpect that it will not be my chief Care to ſupport it, and leave it ſecure after me; and therefore we may be certain, that they who go about to inſinuate Things of this Nature, muſt be Mine and the Kingdom's Enemies; and can only mean to cover Deſigns, which they dare not publickly own, by endeavouring to diſtract us with unreaſonable and groundleſs Diſtruſts and Jealouſies.

I muſt be ſo plain as to tell you, the beſt Proofs we can all give at preſent, of our Zeal for the Preſervation of the Church, will be to join heartily in proſecuting the War againſt an Enemy, who is certainly engag'd to extirpate our Religion, as well as to reduce this Kingdom to Slavery.

I am fully reſolv'd, by God's Aſſiſtance, to do my Part.

I will always affectionately Support and Countenance the Church of England, as by Law eſtabliſh'd.

I will inviolably maintain the Toleration.

I will do all I can to prevail with my Subjects to lay aſide their Diviſions, and will ſtudy to make them all ſafe and eaſy.

I will endeavour to promote Religion and Virtue amongſt them, and to encourage Trade, and every Thing elſe that may make them a flouriſhing and happy People.

And they who ſhall concur with me in carrying on theſe good Deſigns, ſhall be ſure to find my Kindneſs and Favour.

It will be fit to compare this Speech with ſome in the latter Part of this Reign, about reſtoring the Spaniſh Monarchy to the Houſe of Auſtria, and the inviolable maintaining of the Toleration.

The Commons Addreſs about the Union with Scotland, and ſettling there the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

The Lords and Commons addreſs'd her Majeſty, as uſual, upon her Speech to them, adapting their Sentiments to the Queen's; and the Commons ſoon after preſented her with another Addreſs of Thanks for her great Care and Endeavours to ſettle the Succeſſion of the Kingdom of Scotland in the Houſe of Hanover, for Preſervation of the Peace, and promoting the Union of the two Kingdoms; and to aſſure her Majeſty they would, to the utmoſt of their Power, aſſiſt her Majeſty to bring that great Work to an happy Concluſion. They alſo deſir'd that ſhe would be graciouſly pleas'd to direct, that the whole Proceedings of the laſt Seſſions of Parliament in Scotland, relating to the Union of the two Kingdoms, and the Settlement of the Succeſſion of Scotland in the Houſe of Hanover, might be laid before that Houſe. A.D. 1705.

Lord Haverſham moves the inviting the Princeſs Sophia to England.

The Lord Haverſham, who, as my Author writes, was call'd by ſome the Annual Speechmaker, did now make a long Speech in the Houſe of Peers; and among other Things, pleaded for the bringing over the preſumptive Heir to the Crown, as what would conduce more than any Thing, to our Security, which was the moſt reaſonable Part of his Lordſhip's Harangue; and indeed we found afterwards by ſad Experience, that we risk'd every Thing dear to Proteſtants and Engliſhmen, in not falling in with ſo ſafe and reaſonable a Meaſure; which was not comply'd with out of Complacency to the Queen, who could not bear to hear Mention of bringing over any one of the Houſe of Hanover; being juſtly apprehenſive that ſuch a one, whether Prince or Princeſs, would ſoon have a good Share of the Peoples Affections and Hopes. However, the Lords paſs'd the Regency Bill, for the better Security of the Succeſſion in that illuſtrious Houſe; and both Lords and Commons join'd in one Addreſs to the Queen, to uſe all poſſible Endeavours to preſerve a good Correſpondence between all the Allies; and to excite them according to her own Example, to exert their utmoſt Vigor in the Proſecution of the War. To which ſhe anſwer'd, Your Opinion is of the greateſt Weight with me, and I do not queſtion but it will meet with a juſt Regard from all our Allies.

The Lords at the ſame Time perceiving that High-Church, by Pamphlets, and otherwiſe, were every-where inſinuating the Danger of the Church, their Lordſhips enter'd into a Debate about it, and agreed upon an Addreſs to her Majeſty, in which the Commons alſo join'd; aſſuring her,

Lords and Commons Addreſs againſt High-Church Sedition

" That as ſhe had been pleas'd to expreſs juſt
" Indignation againſt all ſuch WICKED Per-
" ſons, they will be always ready, to the utmoſt
" of their Power, to aſſiſt her in diſcounte-
" nancing and defeating their Practices; humbly
" beſeeching her to take effectual Meaſures for the " making the ſaid Reſolution Publick; and alſo
" for puniſhing the Authors and Spreaders of theſe
" Seditious and Scandalous Reports; to the End
" that all others may, for the future, be deterr'd
" from endeavouring to diſtract the Kingdom
" with ſuch unreaſonable and groundleſs Diſtruſts
" and Jealouſies.

The Reſolution referr'd to in the Addreſs, was this:

Their Reſolution on that Occaſion.

RESOLV'D, By the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in Parliament Aſſembled, That the Church of England, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, which was reſcued from the extremeſt Danger by King WILLIAM the Third, of Glorious Memory, is now, by God's Bleſſing, under the happy Reign of her Majeſty, in a moſt ſafe and flouriſhing Condition: And that whoſoever goes about to ſuggeſt and inſinuate that the Church is in Danger under her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, is an Enemy to the Queen, the Church and Kingdom.

Vote the Church not to be in Danger.

And it will appear by the Obſtruction this Reſolution met with in the two Houſes, who the Perſons were whom the Parliament of England declar'd to be Enemies to the Queen, Church and Kingdom. The Queen's Speech about Animoſities, and the Church's Danger, and the Lords and Commons Addreſs, had all Reference to that execrable Libel, entitled, The Memorial of the Church of England, humbly offer'd to the Conſideration of all true Lovers of our CHURCH, &c. which as we have hinted, was prepar'd by the Tories

A.D.1705. Tories to influence the Elections for Parliament in their Favour, and had the quite contrary Effects. It had been preſented by the Grand-Jury of the City of London, for which the Court of Aldermen order'd their Thanks to be given them, " for their Duty and Loyalty to the Queen's Ma-
" jeſty, and their hearty Concern for the Peace
" and Tranquility of this Nation, as well as their
" tender Care, and good Affection to the Church
" of England, ſo ſenſibly expreſs'd in their Pre-
" ſentment deliver'd to that Court, againſt a no-
" torious Libel, intituled, The Memorial, &c. re-
" flecting upon her Majeſty, and her good Govern-
" ment, both in Church and State: And further,
" they order'd that the ſaid Libel ſhould be forth-
" with BURNT in the Sight of the Court then
" Sitting; and on the Tueſday following, at two
" a Clock in the Afternoon, before the Royal-
" Exchange, and that the Sheriffs of this City
" ſhould ſee the Order executed." Accordingly, September the 1ſt, this infamous Libel was burnt by the Hands of the Common-Hangman, in open Court, and before the Royal-Exchange, the Sheriffs attending with their Officers, and an innumerable Multitude of People; not the Scum of the Rabble, as in Sacheverel's Sedition, and all the Tory Riots ſince, who were poſſeſs'd by the Evil Spirit that rais'd it, but a numerous Appearance of well-affected Citizens aſſembled on that Occaſion, to ſhew how heartily they agreed with their Magiſtrates in their Loyalty to the Queen, and their Love to their Country. The Execution of this Order with ſo much Solemnity and Applauſe, was a terrible Mortification to the Faction; and their News-Writer, to keep up their Spirits, aſſerted a moſt impudent Lie in his Letter, that ten of the Grand-Jury were Diſſenters, whereas there were not two of them who might properly be called ſo; and had there been more, the Court of Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, who made the Order for burning the Libel, and the Sheriffs who executed it, were well known to be Members of the Eſtabliſh'd Church.

The High-Church Memorial preſented by the Grand-Jury of London.

Burnt in Sight of the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, &c.

'Tis very likely that this vigorous Proceeding in the City againſt the High-Church Memorial, contributed not a little to the Cenſure paſs'd upon it in the Queen's Speech, and the Parliament's Reſolve. And that they were both juſt and reaſonable, will be ſeen by this Extract out of the Libel.

Villanous Calumnies in the Memorial.

If the Diſſenters will be diſoblig'd if they are not put into Place and Authority, and the Church of England will be diſoblig'd if they are, Whence may the greateſt Inconvenience ariſe? Perhaps OUR WISE Men think themſelves ſecure in the PASSIVE Principles of the Church, againſt any Reſentments on that Side, and therefore bend all their Application to gain t'other, whoſe Temper and Principles are more mutinous.

This is the greateſt Inſult on Modeſty and Truth, that even that Faction could be guilty of. Let the World judge of the Paſſive Temper of High-Church, not only by this Memorial, and Heaps of Pamphlets and Sermons in the ſame Sentiment and Stile, but alſo by their Practices in the Inſurrection at Sacheverel's Trial, and the ſeveral Inſurrections and Rebellions after his late Majeſty King GEORGE's Acceſſion to the Crown.

If this be their true Motive, continue the Memorialiſts, they may be ſimple, well-meaning Men, but muſt be wretched Politicans. The Principles of the Church of England will diſpoſe Men to bear a great deal, but he's a Madman that tries how much. For when Men are very much provok'd, Nature is very apt to Rebel againſt Principle, and then the Odds are vaſt on Nature's Side. Whether the Provocations given to the Church of England may not, if continu'd, be ſtrong enough to rouze Nature, ſome of our Stateſmen would do well to conſider in Time. For though the Church is not to be wrought up to Rebellion, yet they may be ſo alarm'd as to ſecure themſelves, the Nonſenſe, as well as the Treaſon and Inſolence, at the Expence of thoſe Miniſters who gave them the Alarm. As if any private, or particular Perſons or Aſſociations, could make War upon the Adminiſtration, without being wrought up to Rebellion againſt the Prince, who is the Head of it. Nor is it to be expected that they ſhould long bear to be thus us'd, and ſee a Party, that they know ſeek their Ruin, courted at their Expence. This whole Memorial was indeed a plain Threatning of the Queen and Miniſtry. Enquiry was made after the Author, but without any ſatisfactory Diſcovery.

A.D.1705.

The Debates about the Danger of the Church, began in the Houſe of Lords, December the 6th. The Earl of Rocheſter, ever foremoſt in ſuch Work, declar'd himſelf afraid the Church was in Danger. Let every High-Church Man put his Hand on his Heart, and if it is not harden'd againſt all Truth, declare whether he does really think the Earl of Rocheſter had any ſuch Fear upon him; which his Lordſhip attributed to the Act of Security lately paſs'd in Scotland, by which the People were arm'd; And ſo had a Power given them to invade England, where they had a great Party of Friends, who never wanted Will to deſtroy the Church. Which being the Reverſe of the Fact, when his Lordſhip was one of the High-Commiſſion Court ſet up by King James purpoſely for its Deſtruction, and the Diſſenters refuſing to comply with the Papiſts to that End, it is ſtrange the Earl ſhould offer ſuch an Argument to ſo auguſt an Aſſembly. And what he ſaid further about the Proteſtant Succeſſion, is every whit as extraordinary; for there was not a Man in England, who had any Knowledge of the Earl himſelf, or his Character, but did very well know that he never did entirely renounce his Attachment to the Abdicated King, and his pretended Son's Intereſt. He thought the Heir of the Crown ought to be preſent, in order to be fully acquainted with our Conſtitution, and enabled to prevent evil Deſigns upon Church and State. This affected Concern for the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Tories was ſo ridiculous, that every one knew and deſpis'd it as Grimace; which they did not ſtick to own, when afterwards the Whigs were ſo earneſt for the Preſence of his Highneſs, the Duke of Cambridge, now our moſt Gracious Sovereign, in the Houſe of Peers, where it was as much his Right to Sit and Vote, as it was the Prince of Denmark's. His Lordſhip alſo thought the Occaſional Bill ſo reaſonable in it ſelf, and the Church's Requeſt in it ſo ſmall, that the Induſtry for oppoſing it, gave the greater Ground of Suſpicion. The Lord Halifax ſaid, " The Act of " Security in Scotland was wholly foreign to the " Church's Affairs: That the Abſence of the Prin-
" ceſs Sophia was a Danger to the Church but lately
" ſtarted; and that he hop'd the Act for Lords Ju-
" ſtices had made ſuch Proviſion, that he thought no
" Evil could happen to the Church, after the Queen's
" Death, before her Arrival. That a Clergyman
" in a Company of Convocation-men, as he could
" prove, had ſaid that the Princeſs was an unbap-
" tized Lutheran; and therefore he wonder'd how
" her Coming ſhould now be reckon'd ſuch a
" Security. That it appear'd to that Houſe,
" when they canvaſs'd the Occaſional Bill, that
" it would not prove a Security to the Church,
" but rather the contrary. That there had been " Times when the Church was in Danger; as
" when King Charles the Second reign'd, who

Earl of Rocheſter declares the Church in Danger.

For inviting the Princeſs Sophia to England.

He is anſwer'd by the Lord Halifax.

*A.D.*1705. was a Papiſt, and yet the Church thought her ſelf then ſecure; and thoſe Patriots who ſtood up in Defence of it, and endeavour'd to prevent the Evils that might enſue from a Popiſh Succeſſion, were diſcountenanc'd and puniſh'd. This doubtleſs refers to the Earl of Rocheſter's oppoſing ſo vehemently as he did, the Bill of Excluſion, eſpous'd by the Noble and Pious Lord Ruſſel, the Lord Cavendiſh, afterwards Duke of Devonſhire, Sir Henry Capel, afterwards Lord Capel, &c. That when that Succeſſor came to the Throne, and the Church was apparently in the greateſt Danger, ſome could ſit in the High-Commiſſion-Court, &c. as that very Earl of Rocheſter, the Earl of Mulgrave, then Duke of Buckingham-ſhire, and a principal Patriot in the Memorial, as ſhall be ſhewn hereafter. That after the Succeſſion of King William to the Crown, the Cry of the Church's Danger, began, and was continu'd all his Reign, but he could not tell upon what Ground. That upon her Majeſty's Succeſſion, the Complaint was ſilent for a Time, bnt reviv'd upon her making ſome Alterations in the Miniſtry, without any juſt Reaſon." The Biſhop of London had a very good Argument for the Church's Danger, and it were to be wiſh'd it had been hearken'd to ſo much by the Memorialiſts, and their Emiſſaries, as to have prevented its being ſtill as good an Argument, with Reſpect to them, as well as others: His Lordſhip urg'd for it, the preſent Profaneneſs and Irreligion, and the Licentiouſneſs of the Preſs: What he added afterwards, wanted a great deal of Explanation and ſoftning, to make it paſſable, or indeed pardonable, That Sermons were preach'd, in which Rebellion was authoriz'd, and Reſiſtance to the Higher Powers condemn'd. He referr'd here to a Sermon of Mr. Hoadly's, before the Lord-Mayor, printed about that Time. But there is not in that Sermon, nor in any Sermon of Mr. Hoadley's, now the Learned and Right Reverend Biſhop of Wincheſter, any Reſiſtance authoriz'd, comparable to that of this very Biſhop of London, who laid the Biſhop by, and put on the Soldier againſt the Higher-Powers, if King James the Second may be ſo call'd. Dr. Burnet, Biſhop of Sarum, anſwer'd that Prelate to the ſame Effect, That if the Doctrine of Mr. Hoadly's Sermon was not good, he did not know what Defence his Lordſhip could make for his Appearance in Arms at Nottingham: He imputed all the preſent Clamour to the Ambition and Diſcontent of particular Men. We ſhall know who they were preſently, He added, The Church would always be ſubject to the Enmity of Prophaneneſs and Irreligion, and reflected on ſome Sermons preach'd at Oxford upon publick Occaſions. The Archbiſhop of York, who when he was Miniſter of St. Giles's, was ſo popular for his Zeal for the true reform'd Religion, and brought himſelf, and the Biſhop of London alſo by it, into no ſmall Peril, was now "as apprehenſive of Danger from "the Increaſe of Proteſtant Diſſenters, and their "Academies; and mov'd, that the Judges might "be conſulted what Laws were in Force for Per-"ſecution," he ſaid, againſt ſuch Seminaries, and by what Means they might be deſtroy'd; he ſaid, ſuppreſs'd. The Lord Wharton mov'd, for conſulting the Judges about Means of ſuppreſſing the Schools and Seminaries of Nonjurors, &c. And added, "That after all the Cry of the Church's "Danger, he could find nothing in it but the "Duke of B———, Earl of R———, "and the Earl of N———, were out of "Places, &c." The Biſhop of Ely mov'd, For conſulting the Judges about the Power of the Queen to Viſit the Univerſities, the want of which the Nation has ſo long groan'd under: He complain'd of the Heat and Paſſion of the Doctors and Maſters, which they inculcated upon their Pupils, who brought the ſame Fury with them to the Pariſhes when they came Abroad, to the great Diſturbance of Publick Charity. This is ſo true, ſo univerſally known, and that it is the Foundation of all our Diſturbances, that 'tis amazing to ſee the Continuance of the Evil, without any Attempt to remedy it. The Biſhop of Ely complain'd alſo of the Undutifulneſs of the Clergy to their Biſhops, and the Difficulty they had to govern them regularly. The Biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield added another Complaint againſt the Clergy, For the opprobrious Names they gave the Biſhops, and the Calumnies they laid on them, as if they were in a Plot to deſtroy the Church, and had compounded to be the laſt of their Order; and when that Plot was ripe, were to reſign their Biſhopricks, and accept of a Penſion for Life, or to have their Spiritual Lordſhips and Revenues turn'd into Temporal ones; as Dr. Drake told me with great Aſſurance, was their Deſign: And it is confirm'd by this Expreſſion in the Memorial, So far has the Corruption ſpread, that Lawn Sleeves are become no ſure Sign of a Churchman. Dr. Hooper, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, complain'd of the Terms of High-Church and Low-Church, but he was not ſo impartial as to obſerve which Denomination firſt made Uſe of it. The Duke of Leeds, who had the Misfortune to have been under two or three Impeachments, was ſo careful of the Church, that he declar'd he could have no Belief of its being ſafe, without the Act againſt Occaſional Conformity. In what he ſaid after, there ſeems to be more Truth than was agreeable to the Meaſures of the Court at that Juncture; The Queen has in Diſcourſe with me declar'd her ſelf of that Opinion; which is very natural and agreeable to her future Conduct. The Lord Somers ſaid, For Men to raiſe groundleſs Jealouſies at this time of Day, could mean no leſs than an Intention to embroil us at Home, and to defeat all our glorions Deſigns Abroad. Upon the whole, the Reſolution abovemention'd, was carry'd in the Houſe of Lords by a Majority of Sixty-one againſt Thirty: And Twenty-eight Lords enter'd their Proteſt againſt it, with their Reaſons, ſign'd by,

Biſhop of London's Speech gives Offence.

He is anſwer'd by Biſhop Burnet.

Biſhop of Ely for viſiting the Univerſities.

Debates about the Church's Danger.

Duke of Buckingham.	Lord Guernſey.
Earl of Northampton.	Earl of Thanet.
Earl of Carnarvon.	Earl of Scarſdale.
Lord Viſcount Weymouth.	Earl of Rocheſter.
Lord Osborn.	Lord Conway.
Earl of Denbigh.	Lord Howard of Eſcrick.
Biſhop of Bath and Wells.	Henry Biſhop of London.
Lord Granville.	Duke of Leeds.
Duke of Beaufort.	Lord Guilford.
Earl of Winchelſea.	Earl of Abingdon.
Earl of Nottingham.	Lord Haverſham.
Lord North and Gray.
Earl of Angleſea.
Lord Craven.

Begun by Mr. William Bromley in the Houſe of Commons.

On the 8th of December the Commons debated the ſame Point in a full Houſe; Mr. William Bromley, Member of Parliament for the Univerſity of Oxford, which the Biſhop of Ely would have had viſited, began it, urging the ſame Arguments to prove the Church to be in Danger, as had been inſiſted on in the Houſe of Peers. He was ſeconded by Sir John Packington, who was outed at the Election for Aylesbury in this Parliament, but ſerv'd for Worceſterſhire. However, upon the Queſtion it was carried, that the Church was ſafe by 50 Voices; Yea's 212, No's 162, more than was expected from the Reaſon of the thing, and the Diſpoſition of the Court and Miniſtry. The two Houſes agreed to lay their Reſolution jointly before her Majeſty, made an Addreſs accordingly, and begg'd her Majeſty

*A.D.*1705. jeſty to take effectual Meaſures to make it Publick, which ſhe did by a Proclamation, in which it is inſerted Verbatim as before recited, and the Memorial declared to be Malicious and Seditious.

Some time before this Matter came into Debate, the Queen communicated to the two Houſes the Advices ſhe had receiv'd from Spain, in the Speech which follows.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Queen's Speech about the Succeſſes in Spain.

HAVING newly received Letters from the King of Spain and the Earl of Peterborough, which contain a very particular Account of our great and happy Succeſſes in Catalonia, and ſhewing at the ſame time the Reaſonableneſs of their being immediately ſupported, I look upon this to be a matter of ſo much Conſequence and ſo deſirable to you, that I have order'd a Copy of the King of Spain's Letter to myſelf, a Letter from the Junto of the Military Arm of Catalonia, and another Letter from the City of Vich, as alſo an Extract of the Earl of Peterborough's Letter to me, to be communicated to both Houſes of Parliament.

Earneſtly preſſes for Aid to recover that Monarchy for the Houſe of Auſtria.

I recommend the Conſideration of them to you Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, very particularly, as the ſpeedieſt way to reſtore the Monarchy of Spain to the Houſe of Auſtria; and therefore I aſſure myſelf you will enable me to proſecute the Advantages we have gain'd in the moſt effectual Manner, and to improve the Opportunity which God Almighty is pleas'd to afford us of putting a proſperous End to the preſent War.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I will not loſe this Occaſion of deſiring you to give as much Diſpatch to the Matters before you, as the Nature of them will allow, that ſo our Preparations for next Year may be early, which cannot fail of being of great Advantage to us.

The Commons fully anſwer'd her Majeſty's Expectations, and gave 250000 l. for proſecuting the Succeſſes in Spain, and for the whole Service in Spain this Year, including the Sum juſt mention'd, 726740 l.

*A.D.*1706. On the 21ſt of January 1706, Secretary Harley acquainted the Commons, that her Majeſty in Purſuance of the Addreſs of both Houſes, put out a Proclamation, in which was an Encouragement for a Diſcovery of the Author or Authors of The Memorial of the Church of England, &c. The Printer of which Book being in Cuſtody, and other Perſons being examin'd, in whoſe Depoſitions there appear'd the Names of ſome Members of that Houſe, her Majeſty's Tenderneſs for any thing which had the Appearance of their Privilege, had inclin'd her to command him to acquaint the Houſe therewith, before ſhe directed any farther Proceedings in the ſaid Examination. Upon which the Commons order'd the Serjeant to go with the Mace into Weſtminſter Hall and the Court of Requeſts and Places adjacent, and Summon the Members to attend the Service of the Houſe. The Serjeant being return'd, the Houſe Reſolv'd: "That an "humble Addreſs ſhould be preſented to her Ma- "jeſty, returning the Thanks of that Houſe for "her gracious Meſſage that Day, and to deſire "that ſhe would be pleas'd to give Orders for a "farther Examination into the Authors of the "Libel mention'd in the ſaid Meſſage." Which Addreſs being preſented accordingly, her Majeſty was pleas'd to Anſwer; I am glad to find the Houſe expreſs ſo much Reſentment againſt the Libel mention'd in my Meſſage, and take very kindly the Confidence you repoſe in me, which I will make the beſt uſe of for the Advantage of the Publick. David Edwards the Printer, having abſconded a long time, and being left without any Support by the Faction that had employ'd him, was, by his own Conſent taken into Cuſtody the 15th of January, upon a Promiſe in Writing from Secretary Harley, that he ſhould have his Pardon, provided he diſcover'd the Author or Authors of that Pamphlet. Being three Days after examin'd before the ſame Secretary, he pretended he could fix it upon three Gentlemen, Members of the Houſe of Commons, Mr. Poley, ſince dead, Mr. Ward, and Sir Humphry Mackworth; and related that a Woman with a Mask, with another Woman bareſac'd, brought the Manuſcript to him and made a Bargain with him for 250 Copies of the Book when printed, which he deliver'd to four Porters, ſent to him by the Parties concern'd. But though the Woman that came to Edwards without a Mask, and ſome of the Porters were found out, and taken up, yet it was impoſſible to carry on the Diſcovery any farther; whether the Secretary ſcreen'd the Criminals, or their Crime was ſo deeply laid there was no coming to the Bottom of it, the Party was ſo ſure of the Matters ſtopping where it did, that Mr. Poley ſaid in the Houſe of Commons, It was not uſual for Members of their Houſe to be accus'd of being concern'd in any thing to the Prejudice of the Government without mentioning their Names. This ſame Gentleman's Name was mention'd by the Printer, but the Fellow having it from the third and fourth Hand, no legal Accuſation could be grounded upon it, but doubtleſs he was guilty. Luke Milbourn, the renown'd Thirtieth of January Preacher, aſſur'd me the Memorial was penn'd by Dr. Drake, with the Aſſiſtance of Mr. Poley in Matters of Law, and one of the diſcarded Miniſters, the D. of B---, E. of R---- or E. of N---- for Politicks; this Drake confeſt to a Confident of his employ'd in the Secretaries Office, and that Clerk told it Mr. Milbourn, and that part of the Memorial was written fair in the Secretaries Office, not by Greg, who was then a Clerk there, and afterwards hang'd, but by another. Edwards, who had before ſtood in the Pillory, and was the fitter Tool for ſuch Workmen, was continu'd in Priſon a great while, in expectation that the Diſcovery might at laſt be fully made out; but he was at length diſcharg'd, and the real Authors of the Memorial, are to this Day unknown; though ſome then thought the Style to be like Dr. Drake's, eſpecially where he calls Low-Church a Prick-ear'd Faction, and that his little Skill in Hiſtory, ſo falſely quoted by him, confirm'd the Conjecture.

Mr. Secretary Harley's Meſſage from the Queen about the High-Church Libel.

We have hinted, that we ſhould come at the Perſons who were in the Secret of this Libel, or at leaſt were thoſe for whoſe ſake it was ſo daringly printed and publiſh'd. In the Beginning of it we read, If Enquiry be made why the Staves were taken from the Earl of Jerſey and Sir Edward Seymour, or why ſo able and faithful a Miniſter as the Earl of Nottingham was expos'd to the Malice of a Faction, and he, as well as the Earl of Rocheſter, turn'd out of their Poſts; it would be found they were inflexible Men, Opiniators, whoſe Conſciences got the better of their Places, &c. And towards the latter end,

When the great Patrons and Aſſerters of the Intereſt of the Church, the Duke of Buckingham, the Earl of Rocheſter, the Earl of Nottingham, the Earl of Jerſey, the Earl of Winchelſea, Sir Edward Seymour, Lord Granville, Lord Gower, Sir George Rook, turn'd out without the leaſt Pretence or Colour of Offence. Again,

They were reſolv'd to admit no Sharers with them in the Queen's Favour, not ſo much as the Church; therefore the Earls of Rocheſter, Nottingham, &c. This is ſuch overdoing it, that 'tis a Wonder thoſe Lords

*A.D.*1706. Lords were not the firſt to complain of and cenſure an Invective, which ſet them up for the Church itſelf, and made their Intereſt to be the very ſame thing as the Intereſt of the Church, which was very ludicrous as well as abſurd.

A Month before this, December 21, Her Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent,

To the Land-Tax Bill.

To an Act to repeal ſeveral Clauſes in the Act paſt laſt Year concerning Scotland.

Princeſs Sophia and her Heirs Naturaliz'd.

To an Act for the Naturalization of the moſt Excellent Princeſs Sophia, Electreſs and Dutcheſs Dowager of Hanover, and the Iſſue of her Body.

After which her Majeſty ſpoke thus to both Houſes.

Queen's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

THE Unanimity of your Proceedings in this Parliament, has already had ſo good an Effect all over Europe, that I cannot but take notice of it to you with great Satisfaction.

The good Diſpoſition you have ſhewn in doing your Parts ſo fully towards an Union with Scotland, is alſo very acceptable to me, and I hope it will prove for the Advantage and Quiet of both Kingdoms.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

I muſt not omit to take this Occaſion of returning you my hearty Thanks for the great Diſpatch of this ſeaſonable Supply. I look upon it as a ſure Pledge, that the ſame Zeal and Affection for my Service, and the good of the Kingdom will carry you through all the neceſſary Parts of the Publick Buſineſs in this Seſſion.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

In caſe you now think of ſome Receſs, as is uſual at this Seaſon, I make no doubt you will afterwards return with the ſame good Diſpoſitions to give all poſſible Diſpatch to the Publick Affairs ſtill depending, and bring this Seſſion of Parliament to a happy Concluſion.

Notice has been taken of the Abſurdity of the Zeal of the Tories for the Safety of the Church, and their great Diſregard of their Biſhops; an Inſtance of which was publiſh'd in the Gazette a few Days before the Memorial was cenſur'd in Parliament. The Gentleman nam'd in it was a Tacker, and always Staunch in his Votes as a Member of the Houſe of Commons, when there was an Opportunity for him to bear his Teſtimony againſt Moderation and Charity. The Fact is this.

Mr. Chivers of Wiltſhire abuſes the Biſhop of Salisbury.

Henry Chivers of Quemerford in the County of Wilts, Eſq; having very often and in divers Places reported things diſhonourable of the Lord Biſhop of Salisbury his Lordſhip brought againſt him an Action of Scandalum Magnatum, which was appointed to be tried on the 30th of this Inſtant November; but his Lordſhip hath forgiven the ſaid Mr. Chivers and diſcharg'd the ſaid Action on his giving a Bond to pay 50 l. to the Uſe of the Poor, and ſigning a Paper in the Words following.

Nov. 19th, 1705.

Owns it, and begs his Pardon.

I Henry Chivers, have reported on many Occaſions and in many Companies, that I with ſome others had ſeen the Biſhop of Salisbury in an infamous Place and in a ſcandalous Deportment. I declare it was Groundleſs and Falſe; for which I humbly beg God and his Lordſhip's Pardon, and do conſent that this be printed and publiſhed in what Manner the ſaid Biſhop ſhall think fit. *A.D.*1706

Signed by the above Henry Chivers in the Preſence of Hen. Chivers.

Michael Geddes,
Henry Blaake,
John Hoskins.

The Parliament was very intent upon a Bill to prevent the further Growth of Popery; but it having been obſerv'd, that conſidering our Alliances and the Circumſtances of Affairs, ſuch an Act would not be ſeaſonable, the Matter ended in an Addreſs of the Lords, to which the Queen gave this Anſwer; I am fully convinc'd that the inſolent Behaviour of the Papiſts hath made what you adviſe neceſſary to be done for the Safety of my Perſon and Government, and the Welfare of my People. I thank you for your Care in this Matter, and will give as ſoon as poſſible the neceſſary Orders for every thing you deſire of me in this Addreſs.

Several Bills being ready for the Royal Aſſent her Majeſty gave it, and made a Speech to both Houſes, February the 16th.

Sir. R. Gwynn's Letter to the Earl of Stamford for bringing over the Princeſs Sophia. Lords and Commons Addreſs upon it.

A Complaint being made to the Houſe of Commons of a Letter from Sir Rowland Gwynn, who was then at Hanover, to the Earl of Stamford, wherein many Arguments were us'd for bringing the Princeſs Sophia over into England; they came to ſeveral Reſolutions upon it, which they commu nicated to the Lords; and both Houſes join'd in an Addreſs, ſetting forth, That the ſaid Letter or Pamphlet was a ſcandalous, falſe and ſeditious Libel, tending to create a Miſunderſtanding between her Majeſty and the Princeſs Sophia, and highly reflected upon them both, and upon the Proceedings of both Houſes of Parliament; and they humbly deſire her Majeſty would be pleas'd to give ſuch Order for the Diſcovery of the Author, Printer and Publiſher, that they might be brought to condign Puniſhment. The Queen expreſs'd herſelf pleas'd with their Concern that there ſhould be a good Underſtanding kept up between her and the Princeſs Sophia, and their care to defeat the Artifices of deſigning and malicious Men; ſhe alſo promiſed to give Orders that their Addreſs ſhould be comply'd with in the moſt effectual Manner. The Whigs in this Proceeding ſhew'd themſelves Dupes to the Court. The Miniſtry had ſo many publick and private Reaſons for carrying on the War, that they would not ſuffer the Queen to be in the leaſt put out of Humour, as ſhe would have been by any Meaſures for bringing over the Proteſtant Succeſſor, which all good Engliſh-Men who had no Views but for the Publick heartily wiſh'd, and were not at all pleas'd with the Conduct of the Miniſtry on this Occaſion. Beſides, there was an Inſincerity in it unworthy the Character of the Perſons then in the Adminiſtration, and more ſuitable to that of their Succeſſors: For they not only knew that Sir Rowland Gwynn's Letter was genuine, but that her Serene Highneſs the Princeſs Sophia had her ſelf written a Letter to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury on the ſame Subject. However, they were ſo very fearful of loſing their Hold of the Queen, that they would rather venture the loſing the Proteſtant Succeſſion; for which they paid dearly enough, when Mr. Harley had thruſt himſelf in between her and them. Sir Rowland Gwynn's Letter was publiſh'd by Charles Gildon, better known as a Retainer to the Stage, and the Miniſtry order'd him to be proſecuted with the utmoſt Severity; inſomuch, that had it not been for Mr. Maynwaring's Interpoſition, he had certainly ſtood in the Pillory. He was fin'd above 100 times as much as he was worth, no leſs than 100 l.

Miniſters miſtaken in it.

Charles Gildon proſecuted for it.

*A.D.*1706. 100 l. Sterling, which was alſo remitted by the good Offices of the ſame worthy Gentleman. To ſettle Matters after this little Shock between the Courts of St. James's and Hanover, his Highneſs Prince George Auguſtus Electoral Prince of Brunſwick Lunenburgh, was elected Knight of the Garter, and it was reſolv'd to ſend the Lord Halifax to Hanover, not only to inveſt his Highneſs with that Order, but to confer with the Electreſs Dowager and the Elector her Son, on what had happen'd in England with relation to the Contents of Sir Rowland Gwynn's Letter.

The Electoral Prince of Hanover choſen Knight of the Garter.

On the 19th of March her Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to

An Act for further Duties on low Wines, &c. in which was a Clauſe to enable her Majeſty to diſpoſe of the Effects of William Kidd the Pyrate for the Uſe of Greenwich Hoſpital.

An Act for the better Security of her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and of the Succeſſion to the Crown of England in the Proteſtant Line.

An Act for the Increaſe of Seamen.

An Act for the Amendment of the Law, and ſome other Publick Acts, and ſeveral Private ones.

After which the Queen clos'd this Seſſion with a Speech, the laſt Paragraph of which was,

Queen's Speech againſt the Sedition of the Tories.

At the Opening of this Parliament I recommended with great Earneſtneſs an entire Union of Minds and Affections, among all my Subjects, and a ſincere Endeavour to avoid and extinguiſh all Occaſions of Diviſion and Animoſity. I am much pleas'd to find how entirely your Sentiments have agreed with mine; your Unanimity and Zeal, which I have obſerv'd with great Satisfaction throughout this whole Seſſion, againſt every thing that tends towards Sedition, doth ſo much diſcourage all ſuch Attempts for the Future, and hath ſet ſuch an Example to the whole Kingdom, that when you are return'd into your ſeveral Countries I doubt not but you will find the Effects of it every where, and aſſure myſelf you will make it your Buſineſs and Care to improve and perfect that good Work you have ſo far advanc'd here, and by continuing to ſhew a juſt Diſlike of all factious and turbulent Proceedings, and reſolving to Diſcountenance the Encouragers and Promoters of them, you will ſoon make the whole Kingdom ſenſible of the good Effects of ſo prudent and happy a Conduct.

Her Majeſty's and the Parliaments Endeavours to ſuppreſs ſcandalous and ſeditious Libels, pretended by the Libellers to be out of Zeal for the Church, did not hinder the continuing of them by the Faction, as appears by this Notice in the Gazette.

William Pittis pillory'd for it.

Weſtminſter April 27, William Pittis being convicted of Writing, Printing, and Publiſhing a Falſe, Scandalous and Seditious Libel, reflecting upon her Majeſty and Government, entitled, The Caſe of the Church of England's Memorial fairly ſtated, was fin'd for the ſame by the Court of Queen's Bench 100 Marks, and to ſtand in the Pillory at Charing-Croſs, and near the Royal Exchange. This High-Church-Man had been a Fellow of New-Colledge, Oxon, and had by Profuſion and Debauchery reduc'd himſelf to Beggary, but his Zeal was not the leſs acceptable to the Party. A few Days after Pittis's Puniſhment, Mr. William Stephens, Vicar of Sutton in Surrey, who has been already mention'd for a Sermon he preach'd before the Houſe of Commons on the 30th of January, was convicted of Writing a falſe, ſcandalous and ſeditious Libel, entitled, A Letter to the Author of the Memorial of the Church of England, and fin'd 100 Marks and to ſtand in the Pillory twice. This Vicar muſt be own'd to be no High-Church-Man, he was rather of the contrary Party, but having taken ſome Diſguſt againſt the Duke of Marlborough, he did in this Pamphlet ſhew it in very indecent Terms. It was with ſome Difficulty that the Pillory part of the Sentence was remitted. *A.D.*1706.

Mr. Stephens the Miniſter ſentenc'd to be pillory'd.

And par-don'd.

We muſt now open the Campaign and follow the Engliſh Armies into the Field, where we find them firſt in Portugal, and the Earl Galway's Account of the Tranſactions when he commanded the Confederate Army in Chief, will be moſt ſatisfactory.

Earl of Galway's Account of his Actions in Spain.

" About a Month after the Siege of Barcelona " was rais'd, News came that the Mareſchal de " Theſſe had march'd with the beſt Part of the " Forces quarter'd on the Frontiers of Portugal, " in order to join the Duke of Anjou and beſiege " Barcelona again.

" Upon this I reſolv'd to propoſe to the Portu- " gueſe to march to Madrid, concluding that " either the Duke of Anjou would by this means " be oblig'd to quit the Siege of Barcelona, or elſe " that we could meet with no Oppoſition in our " way. For this purpoſe I took a Journey to " Lisbon, even while my Wound upon the cutting " off my Arm was full open, and had ſuch Succeſs " with the King of Portugal, that his Troops took " the Field the following Spring, by the 26th of " March N. S. under the Command of the Mar- " quis des Minas, with Intention to beſiege " Alcantara, and march that way to Madrid. " Mean time the Duke of Berwick who had been " ſent to command on the Frontiers of Portugal " in Mareſchal Theſſe's ſtead, had thrown ten Re- " giments of Foot into Badajox, and march'd " with ſeven more and a Body of 4000 Horſe " towards Alcantara, in order to reinforce that " Gariſon, by the Addition of thoſe ſeven Regi- " ments, which he had accordingly left there, and " then came back to Brocas with his Cavalry, " where we ſurpriz'd him, beat his Rear-Guard, " purſu'd him a conſiderable way, and took " Poſſeſſion of the Caſtle of Brocas, in which " Place we left a Gariſon to cover our Foragers " during the time we ſhould lie before Alcantara.

" After this we continu'd our March to " Alcantara, which ſurrender'd to us in a very few " Days; we took ten good Battalions Priſoners of " War there, and found above 60 Pieces of Canon " in the Place, with great ſtore of ſmall Arms and " Ammunition.

" After the ſurrender of Alcantara we croſt the " Tagus there, and having taken in ſome Places of " ſmall Note upon our March, and forc'd a Paſs " at Maſſigina, where the Enemy had entrench'd " themſelves; we advanc'd as far as the Bridge of " Almaras.

" But here the Portugueſe reſolv'd unanimouſly " to return home again, notwithſtanding all the " Arguments the Generals of the Allies could offer " to the contrary; which happen'd very unfor- " tunately, for had the Army march'd directly " thence to Madrid, in all Probability we muſt " have arriv'd there at the ſame time with the " News of the Duke of Anjou's being return'd to " France, the Dutcheſs muſt have been oblig'd to " have eſcap'd alone, and the Tribunals being ſtill " there, 'tis very likely the War would have been " over.

" Some of the Portugueſe were willing to go " back and beſiege Badajox, which was entirely " laying aſide all Thoughts of Madrid, but " others for attacking Ciudad Rodrigo, and by " joining with theſe I engag'd them, after the taking " of that Place, to go to Madrid. But the time " which was loſt on this Occaſion had given the " Duke of Anjou an Opportunity of returning " from France to Madrid, from whence he " withdrew the Court and all the Tribunals

The Confederate Army at Madrid.

*A.D.*1706. " before our Army could reach that Place; ſo upon " our Arrival there, we found Madrid an open " Village, and the Troops having been extreamly " weaken'd by ſo long a March were not above " 4000 Horſe and 10000 Foot.

The Duke of Anjou had been oblig'd to raiſe the Siege of Barcelona and to retire into France before the Earl of Galway could get to Madrid. The French and Spaniſh Army came before Barcelona the latter end of March, when the King of Spain, his preſent Imperial Majeſty, was in the Place, and his Reſolution in that perilous Juncture deſerv'd the Crown for which he was contending. This will appear by the Letter he ſent to Sir John Leake, Commander of the Engliſh and Dutch Squadrons at Gibraltar, to haſten to his Releif.

King Charles IIId's Letter to Sir John Leake.

Admiral Leake,

" I Am diſpos'd to take upon me this Occaſion " to adviſe you the high Risk this Principality " and my Royal Perſon are found in, for I make no " doubt that before the Morrow the Enemy will " moleſt us. They have already blockaded me " with a Squadron of their Ships, and their Army " is now almoſt in ſight of this City, and by their " quick Marches have obtain'd ſome Poſts, which " if they might have been prevented, would very " much have hinder'd their Deſigns.

" I am reſolv'd, though I find myſelf with " ſuch a ſmall Gariſon as 1000 Men of regular " Troops, and 4000 Horſe, not to leave this " Place; for in the preſent Conjuncture I have con- " ſider'd, that my going hence will be the Loſs of " the City, and conſequently of all the other Places " which the happy Succeſs of the laſt Campaign " hath reduc'd to my Obedience; for which " Reaſon it is my Opinion to risk all, and venture " the Caſualties that a Siege is incident to, putting " juſt Truſt and Confidence in your known Zeal " towards the great forwarding the common Cauſe " and making no doubt of your having contributed " all that was requiſite to be in a readineſs to bring " me Succours. I hope in a few Days you will " appear before this Place, where may your Ho- " nour, Valour and Activity meet with a glorious " Succeſs, for which I ſhall again conſtitute you the " Credit of my Royal Gratitude.

Given at Barcelona the 31ſt of March, 1706.

I the King.

The next Day after the Date of this Letter, the Gariſon of Barcelona made a vigorous Salley, but were not numerous enough to improve the Advantage they had of the Enemy, Upon Sir John Leake's receiving this Letter, a Council of War was held at Gibraltar, April 6th O. S. wherein it was reſolv'd, that the Fleet ſhould proceed to Altea, and thence directly to Barcelona, though Sir George Byng was not join'd, and for Expedition ſake to take the Soldiers out of the Tranſports and put them aboard the Men of War, as they did the Royal Regiment of Fuzileers, and Colonel Breton's Regiment. Orders were left at Gibraltar for the Convoy expected from Ireland with Lord Mohun's, Lord Dungannon's and Colonel Toby Caulfield's Regiments to follow. Sir John Leake arriv'd at Altea in his way to Barcelona, the 18th of April O. S. and the farther Particulars of the Relief of that City are taken from the Account of it brought by Captain Delaval, whom the Earl of Peterborough ſent Expreſs with it. The Engliſh and Dutch Men of War, commanded by Sir George Byng, join'd thoſe commanded by Sir John Leake, the 20th of April O. S. in the Bay. Two Days after they were join'd by Commodore Walker, with ſeveral Men of War and Tranſports, ſo that the Fleet conſiſted of 37 Engliſh and 13 Dutch, in all 50 Ships of the Line of Battel, beſides 8 Frigates, Fire-Ships, &c. On the 26th of April the Fleet came off of Ferragous, where the Earl of Peterborough came on board, who had been ſome time in Valencia to finiſh the Reduction of that Kingdom, ſo happily begun and carryed on by Major General Ramas and Colonel Nebot who had left the Duke of Anjou's Service. The Earl hoiſted the Union Flag on the main Top, as Admiral of the Fleet, which on the 27th in the Morning came off Cape Monjuic, and about Noon anchor'd in Barcelona Bay, to the inexpreſſible Joy of the Inhabitants, who were hard preſs'd by the Duke of Anjou's Army. The French Fleet under the Command of the Count de Tholouſe, who came in Perſon to the Aſſiſtance of his Nephew the Duke of Anjou, retir'd the Night before. Sir John Leake ſays in his Letter, if it had pleas'd God that the Wind had continu'd that brought Sir George Byng to me, I believe I ſhould have been able to have given you a much better Account of the Strength of the Enemy. The Earl of Donnegal, who commanded in Fort Monjuic defended that Fort above 20 Days, and had he not been kill'd, it probably would have held out till Succours arriv'd, which they did four Days after. On the 30th of April, about one a Clock in the Morning the Mareſchal de Theſſe march'd off with the French and Spaniſh Army, in a Manner unexpected, leaving behind him near 200 Braſs Battering Guns, 30 Mortars, a great Quantity of Bombs, Shot, Shells, Working and other warlike Stores, 10000 Sacks of Corn, above 3000 Barrels of Powder, and all their ſick and wounded Men, whom the Mareſchal de Theſſe recommended by a Letter to the Earl of Peterborough's Clemency; and which is moſt remarkable they left every thing untouch'd as if it had been for the Uſe of their Friends, and not for their Enemies. They retir'd towards France, being purſu'd by the Miquelets and very much harraſs'd by the Gariſons of Lerida and Tortoſa. They loſt 5000 Men before the Place, and near half as many by Skirmiſhes and Deſertion in their Retreat. The Duke of Anjou, as has been obſerv'd, got to Madrid through Navarre, and carry'd off with him the Tribunals upon his ſecond Flight into France. It is plain, that had Meaſures been rightly taken for his Catholick Majeſty's March to Madrid, immediately after the raiſing the Siege of Barcelona, that Capital would have continu'd in Obedience to him and the Spaniſh Monarchy have ſubmitted to its lawful Sovereign. How the Reſolutions of the Council of War at Barcelona the 10th of May, for the King's Marching to Madrid by way of Valencia came to be alter'd, and the Troops intended for that Service were put upon other, and who was to bear the Blame of it, I leave to be decided by thoſe who have read Dr. Friend's Hiſtory of the Earl of Peterborough's Conduct in Spain, and alſo the Earl of Galway's Conduct in another hiſtorical Account, which is the Reverſe of Doctor Friend's in many Places; though the Doctor is ſaid to have ſworn to the Truth of it, I ſhall follow the State Memoirs as the ſureſt Guide.

A.D.1706.

Mareſchal de Theſſe raiſes the Siege of Barcelona.

Duke of Anjou flies twice into France.

Sir John Leake relieves Barcelona.

On the 2d of July, his Catholick Majeſty, King Charles the Third, was proclaim'd at Madrid, both the Nobility and People expreſſing their Joy for their happy Deliverance from Foreign Tyranny, and the Solemnity was perform'd with great Magnificence. The ſeveral Tribunals being ſhut up, by reaſon of the Duke of Anjou's carrying away ſeveral of the Judges, and other Officers belonging to them, thoſe who remain'd at Madrid, and thoſe who had made their Eſcape from King CharlesIII proclaim'd at Madrid.

A.D.1706. from the Duke of Anjou, were directed to open tne Courts again. An Agreement was made with the Corrigidor of the City for Thirty thouſand Rations of Bread every Day for the Army. The Marquis das Minas, the Portugueſe General, receiv'd Letters from ſeveral of the Grandees, informing him, they had left Madrid, and were retir'd to their Country Houſes, becauſe they would not be oblig'd to attend the Duke of Anjou; but they would return, and wait upon his Catholick Majeſty, as ſoon as they ſhould hear of his being in that City. The Marquis alſo receiv'd Letters from the Queen Dowager of Spain, who was at Toledo, expreſſing her great Satisfaction to ſee the Catholick King, her Nephew, reſtor'd to the Throne of his Anceſtors. And even Cardinal Porto Carrero, the Traytor who had been the Chief Promoter of the Will in Favour of the Duke of Anjou, ſent Letters alſo, containing many Expreſſions of his Duty to his Majeſty, Charles the Third. The Marquis das Minas march'd the next Day to Ponte Diveros, three Leagues from Madrid, and the next to Alcales de Henaras, whereby he had a greater Conveniency of ſupplying himſelf with Forage. The News from Barcelona, of the 4th of July, imported, that the King of Spain departed thence the 23d of June for Valencia; but having receiv'd Advice that the City of Sarragoſa, with all the Kingdom of Arragon, had declar'd for him; and having alſo by ſeveral Couriers had Intelligence, that on the Approach of the Earl of Galway, with the Forces under his Command, the Duke of Anjou was retir'd to Pampeluna, the King thought fit to change his Reſolution, to go directly to Sarragoſſa, and proceed from thence to Madrid; which not being done in Time, and the Earl of Peterborough, with the Forces from Valencia, adding little to the Strength of the Confederate Army, the Duke of Anjou found Means to get together an Army much ſuperior to that of the Allies; which after the King of Spain and my Lord Peterborough had join'd, could not make good their Ground in Caſtile, but were oblig'd to retire to Valencia; in which Kingdom they Canton'd and Quarter'd. The taking of Carthegena, Alicant, and other Towns on the Coaſts of Spain, did not compenſate for the want of the Troops that were employ'd in it, at the Camp near Madrid.

King Charles's Miſtake in not going to Madrid.

Duke of Marlborough goes to Holland.

On the 14th of April, the Duke of Marlborough landed at Rotterdam, together with the Lord Marquis of Mounthermer, the Lord Halifax, and other Perſons of Diſtinction, and had the next Day a Conference with the Deputies of the States-General, upon the neceſſary Meaſures to be taken for opening the Campaign. His Grace continu'd his Conferences with thoſe Deputies, and others at the Head of Affairs, 'till the 28th of April, when he went to Utrecht, accompany'd by Monſieur Auverquerque; they arriv'd at Maeſtricht the 1ſt of May. The Army of the States having join'd the Forces that were encamp'd at Borchloen, as did the Engliſh Troops the ſame Day; and his Grace having Intelligence that the French had drain'd all their Gariſons, paſs'd the Dyle, and poſted themſelves at Tirlemont, with the Gheet before them; the Duke reſolv'd to advance towards them. Accordingly, on the 11th of May, O. S. the Confederate Army march'd to Corſwaren, where my Lord Duke had Advice, that the French Army being join'd by the Horſe from the Mareſchal de Marſin's Camp, were come out of their Lines, depending on the Superiority of their Numbers, and had made a Motion, putting their Right towards Judoigne.

The Battel of Ramelies.

His Grace, and my Lord de Auverquerque, relying on the Goodneſs of their Troops, advanc'd towards them; and on Sunday, the 12th of May, about three in the Morning, the Army march'd in eight Columns toward Ramelies, a Village, where the Gheete takes its Source, that they might avoid the Inconveniency of paſſing that River; and when they came near that Village, they found the Enemy getting into the Camp of Mount St. Andre, and placing their Right to the Mehaigne. A.D 1706.

This River flows about half a League from Ramelies, the Ground between them being open and level. The Gheete runs from Ramelies to Autreghefe, through Marſhy-Ground; and beyond Autreghefe, the River is wide, and the Ground impaſſible.

The Enemy had poſted a Brigade of Foot next to the Mehaigne, and fill'd the Space between that and Ramelies, with upwards of One hundred Squadrons, among which were the Troops of the French King's Houſhold. At Ramelies they had above twenty Battalions of Foot, and a Battery of about twelve Pieces of treble Cannon: From thence to Autreghefe, they had form'd a Line of Foot along the Gheete, with a Line of Horſe at ſome Diſtance behind them.

The Duke of Marlborough judging by the Situation of the Ground, that the Streſs of the Action would be on the Left, order'd the twenty Daniſh Squadrons to be poſted there, over and above the Number of Horſe belonging to that Wing. It was two a Clock in the Afternoon, before the Confederate Army could be form'd in Order of Battel, and then they began the Attack on the Left with four Battalions, which puſh'd the Brigade of Foot above-mention'd, from their Poſt on the Mehaigne. My Lord Auverquerque about the ſame Time charg'd with the Horſe of that Wing. The Succeſs was doubtful for about half an Hour, which the Duke of Marlborough perceiving, order'd the reſt of the Horſe of the Right Wing, except the Engliſh, who were ſeventeen Squadrons, to ſupport thoſe on the Left.

The Duke of Marlborough in great Danger.

Here, while his Grace was rallying ſome, and giving his Orders for others to Charge, he was in very great Danger, being ſingled out by ſeveral of the moſt reſolute of the Enemy, and falling from his Horſe at the ſame Time, had either been kill'd, or taken Priſoner, if ſome of his Foot that were near at Hand, had not come very ſeaſonably to his Aſſiſtance, and oblig'd the Enemy to retire. After this his Grace had ſtill a greater Eſcape, a Cannon-Ball having taken off Colonel Bringfield's Head, as he was remounting him.

The Village of Ramelies was attack'd by a Detachment of twelve Battalions of Foot, commanded by Lieutenant-General Schultz, which enter'd at once with great Vigor and Reſolution. My Lord Duke haſten'd the Line of Foot thither to ſupport them; which though it was at a great Diſtance, yet came up ſoon enough to beat the Enemy quite out of the Village, and at the ſame Time charg'd the reſt of their Foot that were poſted behind the Gheete.

By this Time the Enemies Right Wing of Horſe being entirely defeated, the Horſe of the Duke's Left fell upon the Foot of their Right, of whom they ſlew great Numbers, cutting to Pieces about twenty of their Battalions, whoſe Colours and Cannon they took. The reſt of the Enemies Foot were entirely broke; the Horſe of their Left Wing ſeem'd to make a Stand, to gain Time for their Foot to retire; but were charg'd ſo quick, and with ſo much Bravery, by the Engliſh Horſe, that they abandon'd the Foot, and the Confederate Dragoons puſhing into the Village of Autreghefe, made a terrible Slaughter of them. The French King's own Regiment of Foot, call'd,

Le

A.D.1706. Le Regiment du Roy, begg'd for Quarter, and deliver'd up their Arms and Colours to the Lord John Hay's Dragoons.

The French Army entirely routed.

The Victorious Troops purſu'd the French all Night, by the way of Judoigne, as far as Meldre, five Leagues from the Place of Battel, and two from Louvain, where Colonel Richards, the Duke of Marlborough's Aid de Camp, whom he ſent Expreſs with this Account of his Victory, left the Army on Monday, the 13th of May.

Kill'd and taken.

A right Judgment could not be made of the exact Number of the Slain, by reaſon the Troops made no Stop on the Field, but it was generally ſuppos'd that the French had Eight thouſand kill'd; among whom were the Prince of Manbauſon, and Prince Maximilian de Rohan, and ſeveral other Perſons of Note. About Eight thouſand Priſoners were taken, and among them Monſieur Palaviciani, and Monſieur Mezieres, Major-Generals; the Marquis de Barre, Brigadier-General; the Marquis de la Baume, Son to the Mareſchal de Tallard, a Nephew of the late Duke of Luxembourg, a Nephew of the Lord Clare, and ſeveral other Officers of Diſtinction. All the Enemies Artillery, all the Baggage they had with them, and all their Bread-Wagons were taken, beſides a great Number of Standards, Colours, and Kettle-Drums, and a great Part of their heavy Baggage was ſeiz'd by the Troops of the Allies at Judoigne. My Lord Duke, to improve his Victory, advanc'd towards the Dyle, reſolving to force his Paſſage, but Advice coming that the Enemy had quitted Louvain, and retir'd towards Bruſſels, his Grace put Five hundred Men into Louvain, and march'd to the Camp at Bethlem, in his Way to Bruſſels, which the Enemy alſo quitted, as they did Mechlin, and retir'd towards Aloſt. The ſame Day my Lord Duke had Letters from the Governor of Bruſſels, intimating, that the States of Brabant were deſirous to wait on him, which they did the next Day, and by ſeveral Inſtruments, the States, the Sovereign Council, and the Magiſtrates of the City, made their Submiſſion in Form to his Catholick Majeſty, Charles the Third. The Magiſtrates of Mechlen did the ſame, and Colonel Darel was ſent with Two thouſand Horſe to take Poſſeſſion of the Town. The Magiſtrates of Lierre follow'd their Example, and the City of Antwerp was ready to do the ſame, as ſoon as the Allies would give them an Opportunity.

Almoſt all Brabant and Flanders reduc'd.

Thus in the Compaſs of five Days, was almoſt all the Province of Brabant reduc'd under the Obedience of his Catholick Majeſty. The Enemy, in their Flight, rather than Retreat, abandon'd the Places as faſt as the Duke of Marlborough drew near them. The Magiſtrates of Ghent in Flanders ſent to Compliment his Grace upon his entring that Province, and made their Submiſſion: The ſame did Bruges and Oudenarde: The latter, upon the Approach of ſeven Battalions, wieh four Pieces of Canon, to give a better Grace to the Surrender. Fifty Dragoons ſent by Major-General Roſs took Poſſeſſion of Denaine; and Fort Bavier, being quitted by the Enemy, the Major-General took Poſſeſſion of it, to haſten the Approach to Oſtend, which defended it ſelf eight Days only, though ſo famous for a three Years Siege. Dendermond made a much better Defence, and was almoſt reduced to Aſhes by the Bombs the Confederates flung into it; and it being thought moſt adviſable to waſte no more Time on the Ruins, ſome Troops were left to Blockade it, and the Army inveſted Menin, a City in French Flanders. The Trenches were open'd the 4th of Auguſt, O. S. and the Enemy gave out that the Duke de Vendoſme, who was ſent for from Italy, to command the French Army in the Netherlands, in the Room of the Mareſchal de Villeroy, who was recall'd, would attempt to relieve it. Such a Gaſconade was very natural to the French, and eſpecially to the General; but he was more diſcreet in his Motions, and the Duke of Marlborough remain'd very eaſy in his Camp at Helchin, to cover the Siege. His Grace had the Honour of a Viſit there from the Prince Royal of Pruſſia, who having ſeen the Army Review'd in the Camp, the Duke accompany'd him to the Siege, and ſhew'd him the Batteries and Approaches before Menin. The King of Pruſſia, his Royal Highneſs's Father, was then in Holland, to confer with the States-General, about the Succeſſion to the Eſtates of King William, and it had been well if that Matter had been then determin'd; probably the Houſe of Naſſau would have had a more equal Portion of it, than was agreed upon between the Miniſters of the preſent King of Pruſſia, and his Highneſs the Prince of Orange. The Gariſon of Menin being very numerous, they made a reſolute Defence for almoſt three Weeks, but Capitulated the 23d of Auguſt, and deliver'd up the Bruges Gate to his Grace the Duke of Argyle. Two Days after they march'd out, conſiſting of twelve Battalions of Foot, and three Squadrons of diſmounted Dragoons, making in all Four thouſand three hundred Men.

A.D.1706.

Menin ſurrender'd to the Duke of Marlborough.

The Duke of Marlborough's grand Reception at Antwerp.

The Duke of Marlborough made a ſhort Tour to the Hague, before this Siege was attempted, to concert Meaſures for that, and other Enterprizes, with the States-General; and as he return'd to the Army, he was met at Merxeus, two Leagues from Antwerp, by the Magiſtrates of that City, attended by the Clergy, both Secular and Regular, who aſſur'd his Grace of their inviolable Loyalty and Affection to King Charles the Third, and the Houſe of Auſtria; acknowledging, at the ſame Time, his Grace to have been the glorious Inſtrument of their happy Deliverance from the Tyranny of France, under which they had labour'd ever ſince the Death of Charles the Second. The Margrave of Antwerp, with the Burgo-Maſters, and the reſt of the Chief Magiſtrates, attended my Lord Duke at ſome Diſtance from the City, where the firſt Penſionary, in the Name of the City, made a Speech, and preſented his Grace with the Keys of the Town, telling him, they had never been deliver'd up to any Perſon, ſince the Great Duke of Parma, and that after a Siege of twelve Months. My Lord Duke, at his Entry into the Town, receiv'd all the Honours and Ceremonies uſually paid to Sovereign Princes; One hundred and fifty of the Principal Citizens went in Proceſſion before his Coach with lighted Flambeaux, and conducted him to the Biſhop's Palace, where he was ſplendidly entertain'd, and lodg'd that Night. The Marquis of Terracena, Grandee of Spain, Governor of the Citadel, who had declar'd for King Charles the Third, waited on his Grace during the whole Solemnity, and the Streets were crowded with infinite Numbers of People, continually repeating the greateſt Marks of Joy and Satisfaction.

The Duke of Marlborough inveſted in the Principality of Mildenheim.

While my Lord Duke was receiving theſe Honours here, a grateful Acknowledgment of his unparallel'd Services in the Common Cauſe, he, by his Proxy, receiv'd ſtill greater in Germany, where he was ſolemnly inveſted with the Principality of Mildenheim in this Manner. The Emperor having in November laſt erected that Lordſhip into a Principality of the Empire, and conferr'd the ſame on the Duke of Marlborough; and the Queen of England having allow'd Mr. Stepney, her Envoy Extraordinary at the Imperial Court, to take Poſſeſſion of it in his Highneſs's Name; the Title given him in the London-Gazette of the 3d of June,

A.D.1706. June, 1706. The Ceremony was perform'd in the Town-Hall at Mindelheim, on the 13th of May, the Day after he obtain'd the Glorious Victory at Ramelies. The Officers, Magiſtrates, Burghers, and other Subjects of that Principality, attending there, Count Coningſegg, one of the Emperor's Privy-Council, and firſt Commiſſioner for this Act, declar'd to them, that his Imperial Majeſty had transferr'd on the Duke, in Conſideration of his important Services, all his Right to the ſame Principality; in Teſtimony whereof, a Secretary of the Feudal Court read the Lehn-Brief, or Letter of Inveſtiture, and then a Patent, whereby the ſaid Officers and Subjects were firſt diſcharg'd from the Obedience and Vaſſalage which they ſwore a Year ago to his Imperial Majeſty, upon the Death of Maximilian, late Duke of Bavaria, and afterwards were directed to take a new Oath of Homage to the Duke of Marlborough, as Prince of Mindelheim, which was adminiſter'd to them accordingly, by Mr. Stepney's Order, in the Preſence of Count Coningſegg, and two other Imperial Commiſſioners, Baron Volnar, and Baron Imhoſt, who had lately joint Adminiſtration of that Principality. The whole Ceremony was perform'd with a great deal of Decency, and the People in general gave all Demonſtrations of their Satisfaction in being under his Highneſs's Protection. Mr. Robert Harley was Secretary when this Gazette was publiſh'd, and conſequently muſt approve, if not direct the Paragraph which gives his Grace the Stile of Highneſs twice in a few Lines: Yet four or five Years afterwards, he ſuffer'd his Hungerfords and Sh———ns within Doors, his Swifts, Oldiſworths and Roper without, to inſult the Duke, and his illuſtrious Family with the very Dregs of Language and Calumny, and to treat him with as much Rudeneſs and Contempt as he and his Aſſociates juſtly deſerv'd from an injur'd People.

The Duke of Marlborough has the Title of Highneſs in the London Gazette. Rudely treated by the Tories in England.

I ſhall not enter into the Particulars of the Diſtreſs to which the Duke of Savoy was reduc'd, before Prince Eugene came to his Relief: 'Tis enough to ſay he had loſt almoſt all his Towns in Piedmont: That his Dutcheſs, and the Princeſſes were retir'd to Genoa, and himſelf ſhut out of his Capital by the French Army, which had puſh'd the Siege of Turin with great Vigor, and would ſoon have been Maſters of it, had not the Confederate Forces come as they did, juſt in Time, to relieve it. The Duke of Orleans, who commanded the French Army in Italy, after the Departure of the Duke de Vendoſme, left the Duke de la Feuillade to carry on the Siege of Turin, and march'd himſelf to oppoſe Prince Eugene, whoſe Diligence and Activity were too much for him; and that Prince having ſurpriz'd Stradella, join'd the Duke of Savoy the 27th of Auguſt; and the Duke of Orleans having alſo join'd the Duke de la Feuillade, the Duke of Savoy and Prince Eugene attack'd them in their own Lines, between the Dora and Stura. The Troops of Pruſſia, commanded by the Prince of Anhalt, were the firſt that forc'd the Enemies Intrenchments, whoſe Horſe charg'd them, but they being ſupported by the Confederate Horſe, and the reſt of the Troops of the Allies, beating the French from their Works, they were entirely routed, and fled, leaving behind them all their Artillery, Tents, Ammunition and Baggage. The Mareſchal de Marſin, who commanded under the Duke of Orleans, was taken Priſoner, and dy'd of his Wounds: The Duke of Orleans was wounded. The Slain were computed at above Ten thouſand; for the Rout being perfect, the Slaughter was great; above Four thouſand five hundred French were taken Priſoners. The Duke of Orleans retir'd in the utmoſt Diſor-

The Battel of Turin.

The French routed.

der, with the Remains of the French Army, to Pignerol, but not reckoning them ſafe there, he retreated into Dauphine; and in Conſequence of this Victory, the French were driven quite out of Italy, where they had neſted ever ſince the Duke of Anjou's Uſurpation in Spain.

A.D.1706. The Duke of Orleans retreats into France.

Thr Duke of Marlborough having oblig'd the Gariſons of Dendermond and Aeth, conſiſting in all of about Four thouſand five hundred Men, to ſurrender Priſoners of War, finiſh'd this glorious Campaign, crown'd with more Conqueſts than ever were known in one Summer's War, by one General, againſt Armies ſuperior in Numbers to his own.

Duke of Marlborough takes Dendermond and Aeth.

If Lewis the XIVth's Soul, which his Flatterers made ſuperior to Alexander or Cæſar's, had not been callous and harden'd againſt Defeats and Diſgraces, he muſt ſurely have had a terrible Load on his Mind when he conſider'd what Loſſes and Shame he had brought upon himſelf and Family, by his raſh Breach of the Partition Treaty, and his Arrogant and Vain owning the Pretender as King of England.

The French King's Raſhneſs and Diſgraces.

This Year his Grandſon the Duke of Anjou was driven out of Spain: His Son, the Count de Thoulouſe, who ventur'd out to Sea with his Fleet, ſhamefully got into Harbour again, at the Approach of Sir John Leake. His Nephew, the Duke of Orleans, after the moſt entire Rout that an Army could meet with, fled with the ſhatter'd Remains of it into France; and nearer to his own Door, the Duke of Marlborough, after having kill'd, taken, and diſpers'd the Armies he ſent to oppoſe him, advanc'd into his own Country, quarter'd part of his Troops there, and left a ſtrong Gariſon on his Frontiers. On this laſt, the ſurprizing Revolution in the Netherlands, and the Duke of Anjou's Flight out of Spain, his Envoy in Swiſſerland, the Marquis de Puiſieux, a fine ſpoken Perſon, made a Speech to the Cantons, which has ſome pleaſant, as well as florid Things in it; as theſe:

It is not uſual for Miniſters of my Character themſelves to declare the Misfortunes of their Sovereigns; but the King, my Maſter, is unacquainted with theſe mean Politicks, to deceive his Allies, and his People, by falſe Reports. His Arms have been unſucceſsful in Catalonia and Flanders. The Courage of the French has hurry'd them with too great Eagerneſs into the midſt of Enemies they were not enough acquainted with, and whoſe Numbers have triumph'd over their Valour. The Breath was juſt out of his Mouth, that ſaid, his Maſter ſcorn'd falſe Reports; and the firſt Words of the Letter Colonel Richards, the Duke of Marlborough's Aid de Camp brought, with Advice of the Defeat of the French at Ramelies, are, The Enemy depending on the Superiority of their Numbers.

Before we return to England, we muſt remember that the Lord Halifax was ſent in the beginning of Summer to Hanover. On the 17th of May, his Lordſhip arriv'd at Diepnau, where he was welcom'd into the Elector's Teritories by the Governor of the Caſtle; who immediately diſpatch'd an Expreſs to Hanover, to notify his Lordſhip's Arrival. Lodgings, and a noble Entertainment, were prepar'd that Evening for his Lordſhip, and his Retinue, by the Elector's Officers. The next Day my Lord proceeded to Hanover, and found every-where upon the Road, Horſes and Carriages in a Readineſs for him, by the Elector's particular Order. At Stolftenau, the firſt Gentleman to the Electreſs Dowager, waited upon his Lordſhip with a Compliment from her Electoral Highneſs, and entertain'd him at a very ſplendid Dinner. My Lord arriv'd late in the Evening at Hanover, and was receiv'd at a Houſe

A.D.1706. prepar'd for him by a Gentleman of the Bedchamber, and another Gentleman of the Court; who acquainted his Lordſhip they had Orders from the Elector to attend him, and to do the Honours of the Houſe. The next Morning my Lord had Audience of the Electreſs Dowager, the Elector, the Electoral Prince, and the Princeſs; and in the Afternoon of the Princeſs, the Elector's Daughter, and of Prince Erneſt, his Brother: In all which Audiences, beſides the uſual Ceremonies, his Lordſhip receiv'd very particular Marks of Diſtinction; and nothing was omitted to let him ſee the great Reſpect that the Elector and Electreſs, with the whole Electoral Family paid to her Majeſty, and their Affection and Eſteem for the Engliſh Nation; with their grateful Acknowledgment for what the Queen and Parliament had done, towards ſecuring the Succeſſion of their Family to the Crown of England. On Sunday, the 2d of June, his Highneſs, the Prince Electoral of Brunſwick and Lunenbourg, was inveſted with the Order of the Garter, with the uſual Ceremonies. My Lord Halifax ſtaid a Week after, having been very inſtrumental in confirming the good Underſtanding between the Courts of England and Hanover. In his Return homewards, he paid a Viſit to the Duke of Marlborough, at his Camp in Flanders, before he embark'd in Holland.

The Lord Halifax highly honour'd at Hanover.

The Queen at St. Paul's on the Thankſgiving-Day.

On the 27th of June, the Day appointed for a Thankſgiving throughout England, for the Succeſſes of her Majeſty's Arms, under his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, ſhe went in a very ſolemn and pompous Manner to St. Paul's Church. Her Majeſty aſcended a Throne erected at the Weſt End of the Church, oppoſite to the Altar; the Biſhop of London ſat on his Throne next to the Altar, and the Lords, Ladies, and Gentlemen, were plac'd on Seats, or in Stalls, according to the Account given of it by the State-Writers. It is certain the Queen was then extreamly delighted with this ſort of triumphal Cavalcade and Appearance; and as long as this Shew was made Yearly, there was no Clamour againſt delighting in War; a Term given afterwards to all ſuch Britons that were for beating the French again and again, 'till they were brought to accept of ſuch a Peace as the Allies thought fit for them. And that probably they would have come to, had not Mr. Robert Harley, Mr. Henry St. John, Mr. Simon Harcourt, &c. made her Majeſty believe that the Church was in more Danger than the French, and that the one could not be ſav'd, without ſaving the other by a Peace, ſuch as France ſhould think fit for the Allies.

Mr. Harley, &c. puts an End to her Triumphs.

Two Addreſſes only printed.

The Congratulatory Addreſſes to the Queen upon the Victory at Ramelies were ſo numerous, that there was not Room for them in the Gazette: And only two of them were favour'd to have the Subſtance of what they contain'd inſerted in it; which two were, that from the Univerſity of Cambridge, and that from the Diſſenting Miniſters in and about London: The Univerſity of Cambridge congratulate her Majeſty, "Upon the late "ſignal and glorious Victory of her Majeſty's "Forces, and her Allies, under the moſt excel-"lent, and truly heroick Conduct of his Grace "the Duke of Marlborough, which is ſo Surpri-"zing and Great, that no Words are ſufficient to "expreſs it, for it has even prevented their moſt "forward Hopes and Expectations. They ac-"knowledge that the Glory of reducing the ex-"orbitant Power of France, and ſettling the Ba-"lance of Europe, ſeems, by divine Providence, "reſerv'd for her Majeſty, by whoſe wiſe Counſels "at Home, and the aſtoniſhing Progreſs of her "Arms Abroad, the arbitrary Invader of his "Neighbours Territories, is brought to ſo low an "Ebb, that he muſt henceforward be anxious to A.D.1706. "preſerve his own. They farther take this Oc-"caſion humbly to offer their repeated Aſſurances "of a moſt inviolable Fidelity to her Majeſty's "Sacred Perſon, and the firmeſt Adherence to "her Juſt and Rightful Title to the Imperial "Crown of theſe Kingdoms, as alſo to the Suc-"ceſſion in the Proteſtant Line; beſeeching the "great God, by whom Kings Reign, that her "Majeſty may long continue, as ſhe is, the "brighteſt Example of ſincere, unaffected Piety; "the Security and Ornament of the eſtabliſh'd "Church, the Safeguard of the State, the Delight "of her Subjects, the Terror of her Enemies, "the Support of her Allies; and that her Reign "over us may be laſting and proſperous, as to "them, and all good Men, it is dear and de-"ſirable.

That from the Univerſity of Cambridge.

The Diſſenters of the Three Denominations, with Mr. Spademan at their Head, preſented their Addreſs to the Queen at Windſor, the 17th of June, of which having a Copy, I ſhall not make Uſe of the Extract in the Gazette.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

That from Proteſtant Diſſenters.

THE late ſurprizing Progreſs of your Majeſty's Forces, and thoſe of your Allies in Flanders, under the Command of the moſt illuſtrious Prince the Duke of Marlborough; and of thoſe in Spain, commanded by the Noble Earls of Peterborough and Galway, happily ſupported by your Royal Navy, under the Conduct of your prudent and valiant Admirals, engages us humbly to congratulate your Majeſty on ſo glorious an Occaſion.

The ſignal Anſwer it has pleas'd God to return to thoſe devout Prayers which your Majeſty, and your People by your pious Direction addreſs to Heaven, inſpires us with a Joy equal to the Mortification it gives your Enemies. And while your Majeſty aſcribes your many Victories to the Arm of the Almighty, and repeats your Royal Commands to your People to offer him ſolemn Thankſgiving, we cannot but look upon your Majeſty's Piety as a hopeful Pledge of the like future Succeſſes.

As the important Conſequences of your Majeſty's Triumphs make a daily Acceſſion to your Glory, ſo they give us an agreeable Proſpect of the ſpeedy Reduction of the Power of France to its juſt Limits; the Reſtitution of Liberty and Peace to Europe, the effectual Relief of the Reformed Churches Abroad, and the Security and Proviſion the Law has made for a Proteſtant Succeſſion to the Crown of this Kingdom.

We gratefully acknowledge the Share we have in the Bleſſings of your Majeſty's auſpicious Reign, which preſerves to us both our Civil and Religious Liberties; and take this Occaſion to renew to your Majeſty, the Aſſurance of our inviolable Fidelity, to which not only our Intereſt and Inclination, but the ſacred Ties of Gratitude and Conſcience oblige us. And we ſhall uſe our utmoſt Endeavours, in our ſeveral Stations, to promote that Union and Moderation among your Proteſtant Subjects, ſo often recommended by your Majeſty, as highly neceſſary to the common Safety.

May the divine Providence that has made your Majeſty not only Head of the Proteſtant INTEREST, but Chief in the Confederacy for the glorious Cauſe of common Liberty, give your Majeſty the Satisfaction of ſeeing both more firmly eſtabliſh'd than ever, by the Influence of your Counſels, and the Succeſs of your Arms.

May your Majeſty's exemplary Piety, Zeal for the Reformation of Manners, and Parental Care of all your People, even thoſe of the remoteſt Colonies, be eminently rewarded by the great God, with the con-

A.D.1706. conſtant Proſperity of your Government; may your Reign be honour'd with an happy Union of your two Kingdoms of Great-Britain; may your Royal Conſort the Prince enjoy a confirm'd Health; may your Majeſty continue to rule in the Hearts of your People, and be late advanc'd to a Throne of Glory in the Kingdom of Heaven.

Her Majeſty being impower'd by the Acts paſt in England and Scotland to name Commiſſioners for a Treaty of Union between the two Kingdoms, ſhe was pleas'd to appoint,

For England.

Engliſh Commiſſioners for the Union.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury,
Archbiſhop of York,
William Cowper, Eſq; Lord Keeper,
Lord Godolphin Lord High Treaſurer,
Earl of Pembroke Lord Preſident of the Council,
Duke of Newcaſtle Lord Privy Seal,
Duke of Devon Steward of the Houſhold,
Duke of Bolton,
Earl of Sunderland,
Earl of Kingſton,
Earl of Carliſle,
Earl of Orford,
Lord Viſcount Townſhend,
Marquis of Hartington,
Marquis of Granby,
Lord Wharton,
Lord Paulet,
Lord Grey,
Lord Somers,
Lord Halifax,
John Smith, Eſq; Speaker of the Houſe of Commons,
Sir Charles Hedges, Secretary of State,
Robert Harley, Eſq; Secretary of State,
Henry Boyle, Eſq; Chancellor of the Exchequer,
Lord Chief Juſtice Holt,
Lord Chief Juſtice Trevor,
Sir Edward Northey, Attorney General,
Sir Simon Harcourt Sollicitor General,
Sir John Cooke Advocate General,
Stephen Waller, LL. D.
Secretary to them, George Dodington, Eſq;

For Scotland.

Scottiſh Commiſſioners for the Union.

The Earl of Seafield Lord Chancellor,
Duke of Queensberry Lord Privy Seal,
Earl of Marr Secretary of State,
Earl of Loudon Secretary of State,
Earl of Sutherland,
Earl of Moreton,
Earl of Weem,
Earl of Leven,
Earl of Stairs,
Earl of Roſeberry,
Earl of Glaſgow,
Lord Archibald Campbel,
Viſcount Duplin,
Lord Roſs,
Sir Hugh Dalrymple Preſident of the Seſſion,
Adam Cockburn of Ormiſton, Juſtice Clerk,
Robert Dundaſs of Arniſton,
Robert Stuart of Tullicultry,
Sir Alexander Ogilvie of Forgleu,
Mr. Francis Montgomery of Giffin,
Sir David Dalrymple,
Sir Patrick Johnſton Provoſt of Edinburgh,
Sir James Smallet,
George Lockhart of Carnwarth,
William Moriſon of Preſton Grange,
Alexander Grant the Younger of Grant,
William Seton the Younger of Pitmedden,
John Clerk the Younger of Pennycooke,
Hugh Montgomery Provoſt of Glaſgow,
Daniel Campbel,
Daniel Stuart,
Secretary to them, Sir David Nairne.

A.D.1706.

Theſe Commiſſioners met the firſt time in the little Council Chamber at St. James's, the 16th of April, where the Lord Keeper of England and the Lord Chancellor of Scotland, made introductory Speeches, and then the Lord Keeper Cowper deliver'd theſe Preliminaries.

" That all Propoſals be made in Writing, that " no Point ſhall be obligatory till all Matters be " adjuſted in ſuch Manner as will be proper to be " laid before the Queen and the Parliaments of " England and Scotland for their Approbation. " That a Committe be appointed to reviſe the " Minutes before the Secretary enter them in their " Book. That all Proceedings be kept Secret.

There is ſo much Folly mix'd with Impudence and Falſhood in the ſham Lockhart's Memoirs of theſe Tranſactions, that no uſe can be made of them for Information; he opens this Scene as if he had a Pack on his Back rather than a Pen in his Hand. The Engliſh before they open'd their Pack to ſhew the golden Ware the Scots were to get from them, firſt proceed to demand and ſecure what they wanted of the Scots, and for that end made the following Propoſals.

Lockhart's Memoirs falſe and impudent.

" That the two Kingdoms of England and " Scotland, be for ever united into one Kingdom " by the Name of Great-Britain. That the " United Kingdom be repreſented by one and the " ſame Parliament, and that the Succeſſion of the " Monarchy of the United Kingdom be accord- " ing to the Limitations in the Act of Parliament " made in England in the 12th and 13th Years of " the Reign of King William, entitled, An Act for the further Limitation of the Crown, &c. All the Commiſſioners, adds the Sham Lockhart, except Mr. Lockhart of Carnwarth, who had orders from his Party to ſit ſilent and make his Obſervations, poſitively declar'd for this Scheme of an entire incorporating Union as the Engliſh term'd it. If theſe Commiſſioners had not come together with a Reſolution to agree upon that Scheme, there never had been a Meeting of them. All the World knew that England intended principally if not ſolely the ſettling the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, to prevent the Scots Jacobites letting in their Pretender by their Back-door; and that if the Proteſtant Succeſſion had been ſettled on the Foot of the Revolution Settlement in both Kingdoms, England wou'd have been as cool in the Affair of the Union, as it had always been when the Propoſal has come from Scotland ever ſince the two Kingdoms were under one King. The Scots knew this, and that the Engliſh had that Succeſſion ſo much at Heart, that there was a Propoſal of their making an Advantage of it, before they came into the ſame Settlement. This Proceeding ſeems to be ſomething like that of thoſe Traffickers, who knowing the Neceſſity or ſtrong Inclination others have for their Commodities, keep up the Price and reſolve to make them pay for them if they have them. The Memoir Writer owns Lockhart would not accept of the Offer to be one of the Commiſſioners, which was made him as a Compliment to Lord Wharton his Unkle, without the Conſent of the moſt notorious Jacobites; to gain which, he conven'd together the Earl of Hume, the Earl of Strathmore, the Viſcount of Stormont, Mr. Cochran of Kilmaranock, Mr. Henry Maul of Kelly, all of them zealous Adherents to the Intereſt of the abdicated King and his pretended Son, and Mr. Fletcher of Saltone, who was an errant Republican in King Charles the IId's time, who was for the Duke of Monmouth in King James's

The Proteſtant Succeſſion a Preliminary Article.

Lockhart of Carnwarth a Spy.

A.D.1706. James's time, who was for King William after the Revolution, and being diſguſted becauſe he had not the Place he had cut out for himſelf, as Ferguſon was becauſe he was not made Secretary of State, join'd in as zealouſly as the moſt zealous of the Faction, againſt all the Revolution Governments. There is this farther remarkable in Fletcher's Conduct; for in the Debate about Scotch Repreſentatives, he ſaid the Commiſſioners were guilty of a Breach of Truſt; the Earl of Mar one of thoſe Commiſſioners took him up, and Fletcher beg'd pardon, though Mar not long after rebell'd to break that Union which himſelf in Conjunction with his Brethren had made. Theſe Jacobites telling Lockhart he might do ſingular Service as a Spy among the other Commiſſioners perſuaded him to appear at their Meetings, to ſit ſilent and obſerve; and this traiterous Contrivance was fully anſwer'd by him; for one Stratton, whom the Jacobites in Scotland were about ſending to France, ſtaid till Lockhart return'd from the Treaty, and having a full Account from him of what had paſt, ſail'd from Leith and arriv'd ſafely in France; ſuch were the Men whom Fletcher confederated with, and what Opinion can good Britons have of ſuch a Man's affected Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion and Liberty? As I had ſome Knowledge of him, I do very well remember he was hot, poſitive, obſtinate, Opiniatre, and we have a Sample of it in a very rude Expreſſion of his, even in Parliament, after he had preſented a Scheme of Limitations: The Tenth Article of which was, That no general Indemnity or Pardon for any Tranſgreſſions ſhall be valid without conſent of Parliament. The Earl of Stairs having ſpoken againſt his Scheme, Fletcher in juſtification of it, when he came to this Article, ſaid, It is no wonder his Lordſhip is againſt it, for had there been ſuch an Act his Lordſhip had long e'er now been hang'd for the Murder of Glencoe, &c. Now it is moſt certain, that Fletcher himſelf murder'd an honeſt Farmer at Lyme, when the Duke of Monmouth landed there, whoſe Horſe he had taken out of a Stable without his conſent, and upon the Man's endeavouring to get it from him again, he ſhot him dead, and had he not immediately ſhip'd himſelf for Spain or Portugal, his fellow Rebels, as they were then call'd, wou'd have beaten his Brains out, or have torn him to pieces. I have had this Account from Perſons on the Spot, and being the Farmers Countryman have had many Opportunities to have it confirm'd. This Mr. Fletcher was the Hero of the Oppoſition to the Union, and it was fit his Character ſhould be a little better known than it can be by the Panegyrick upon him in Lockhart's Memoirs.

Fletcher of Saltone changes Sides.

Earl of Mar zealous for the Union.

Lockhart ſends an Account of the Treaty of Union to France. 199.

Fletcher's Character.

156.

The Treaty was pretty well advanc'd by the 1ſt of May, when the Queen went to the Council Chamber where the Commiſſioners met, and ſpoke thus to them.

Queen's Speech to the Commiſſioners.

My Lords,

I Am ſo much concern'd for the Union of the two Kingdoms, that I could not ſatisfy myſelf without coming before I went out of Town to ſee what Progreſs you had made in the Treaty; and I recommend very earneſtly to you the bringing it to a happy Concluſion, with as much Diſpatch as the Nature of it will admit; not doubting of the general Satisfaction which my Subjects of both Kingdoms will receive in finding you overcome all Difficulties to obtain ſo great and publick a Good.

When her Majeſty had done ſpeaking, the Lord Keeper Cowper deſir'd to know if ſhe would be pleas'd to hear the Propoſals made on either Side, and the Reſolutions hitherto taken thereupon, read by the reſpective Secretaries, which ſhe was pleas'd to allow of, and then withdrew. About a Month after ſhe gave the Commiſſioners another Viſit, and told them ſhe came thither once more to ſee what farther Progreſs they had made in the Treaty, and to preſs a ſpeedy Concluſion of it, in regard her Servants of Scotland could not without great inconveniency be much longer abſent from that Kingdom. Theſe Royal Viſits were to quicken their coming to a Determination upon the Matter, for while it hung, there were ſuch canvaſings of the Articles, as far as they could be known, and ſuch caballings to oppoſe them, that thoſe who wiſh'd well to the Union, did not think themſelves ſure of it till they were ratified by both Parliaments. A.D.1706.

After the Memoir Writer has told us all the Scots Commiſſioners, except Lockhart, poſitively declar'd for an incorporating Union; he tells us they all agreed to propoſe a fœderal Union, to which the Engliſh Commiſſioners anſwer'd, ſays he, in a ſaucy Manner They did not incline to take it into Conſideration, becauſe the incorporating Union was the Scheme which all who were for the Treaty in both Kingdoms, look'd upon as the fundamental Preliminary. The Engliſh Commiſſioners propos'd thirty eight Commoners to be the Repreſentatives for Scotland in the Parliament of Great-Britain, the Scots inſiſted upon forty five, and it was agreed upon; and ſixteen Lords to be elected in Scotland to be of the Houſe of Peers in every Parliament of Great-Britain. No good Briton thinks this Number too many, that has any Affection for the common Intereſt of Great-Britain, but whatever complaining againſt it we find in the Memoirs and other ſuch Libels as too few, it is not difficult to make it appear that the Proportion is to the full, if Scotland had not the Advantage. The turn the Sham Lockhart gives to the Equivalent, is equally falſe and villanous. He calls it a Bribe to buy off the Scots Members of Parliament. How can any Man in his Wits imagine that England could ever get 400000 l. out of Scotland, which within a Trifle, was the Sum propos'd to be given the Scots in ready Caſh, and a ſufficient Part of it was to be appropriated to make good the Loſſes of their African Company. The ſame Libeller obſerves, it was to be paid back again in a few Years, by Scotland bearing a Share of the Taxes of England. That is, the Scots when a Part of the ſame United Kingdom, ſhould pay Taxes as well as the Engliſh. The Articles for an incorporating Union, for the ſettling the Succeſſion, for the Repreſentative of Scotland, for the Scots paying Taxes, and for the Equivalent being ſettled; thoſe relating to the Regulation of Trade, Laws, and the others of leſs Conſequence were determin'd with more eaſe, and on the 22d of July the Commiſſioners Sign'd and Seal'd all the Articles of Union, and the next Day, they in a Body waited on the Queen, when the Lord Keeper, in the Name of the Lords Commiſſioners of England, and the Lord Chancellor of Scotland, in the Name of the Lords Commiſſioners of that Kingdom, did reſpectively preſent to her Majeſty a Tranſcript of the ſaid Articles, each making a Speech to her, who was pleas'd to expreſs herſelf as follows.

Chuſe Articles of the Treaty of Union.

The Treaty concluded.

The Articles preſented to the Queen.

My Lords,

I Give you many Thanks for the great Pains you have taken in this Treaty, and am very well pleas'd to find your Endeavours and Applications have brought it to ſo good a Concluſion. The Particulars of it ſeem ſo reaſonable, that I hope they will meet with Approbation in the Parliaments of both Kingdoms; I wiſh therefore that my Servants of Scotland may loſe no time in going down to propoſe it to my Subjects of that Kingdom; and I ſhall always look upon it as a particular Happineſs, if this Union, which will

Her Speech upon it.

A.D.1706. will be ſo great a Security and Advantage to both Kingdoms, can be accompliſh'd in my Reign.

Lockhart correſponds with the Scots Tories in England. P. 200. Sends Advice of it to the Pretender.

We cannot part with this Subject without taking notice after the Memoirs, That beſides the Inſtructions the Scots Jacobites gave Lockhart of Carnwarth to go to London as a Scots Commiſſioner, and to act the noble Part of a Spy, which he readily accepted; they alſo inſtructed him to pump the Tories in England, and ſee how they ſtood affected to the King, the Impoſtor at St. Germains; and accordingly he found Means to underſtand the Sentiments of the Duke of Leeds, the Lord Granville, and ſeveral others, which he communicated to Stratton, when he came back to Scotland, that he might inform the Pretender; but the News he was to carry was good only by halves, for the Tories were not for a Rebellion till the Hanover Succeſſion was to take effect. The ſame Writer tells us, the Archbiſhop of York was nam'd one of the Commiſſioners for the Treaty, merely out of Reſpect to the Dignity of the Office he bore, but he would not be preſent ſo much as once at the Treaty, inſinuating that he and Lockhart were of the ſame Party.

The Tories will only rebel againſt the Houſe of Hanover.

The Duke of Queensberry, whom the Queen had appointed her High Commiſſioner, and the other Scots Lords and Gentlemen who had Seats in the Parliament of that Kingdom, went down to Edinburgh, where the Duke of Queensberry arriv'd the 18th of September, accompany'd by moſt of the Nobility and Gentry in and about that City, who met his Grace at ſeveral Miles diſtance; which ſhews he was not ſo obnoxious to that People as to be in Danger of his Life, the falſe Suggeſtion of the Memoir Writer.

On the 3d of October the Scots Parliament met, and her Majeſty's Letter to them was read; I ſhall only repeat two or three Paragraphs of it, to ſhew with what Reſpect to the Queen, and what Regard to Truth, the Diſaffected in Scotland proceeded in their Oppoſition to the Union, and the Accounts they gave of it.

Queen's Letter to the Scotch Parliament.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

SInce your laſt Meeting we did nominate Commiſſioners to treat of an Union betwixt our two Kingdoms of Scotland and England, and by their great Care and Diligence a Treaty is happily concluded and laid before us.

We have call'd you together as ſoon as our Affairs could permit, that the Treaty may be under your Conſideration, in purſuance of the Act made in the laſt Seſſion of our Parliament there, and we hope the Terms will be acceptable to you.

This Union has been long deſir'd by both Nations, and we ſhall eſteem it as the greateſt Glory of our Reign to have it now perfected, being fully perſuaded that it muſt prove the greateſt Happineſs of our People.

An entire and perfect Union will be the ſolid Foundation of a laſting Peace; it will ſecure your Religion, Liberty and Property, remove the Animoſities among yourſelves, and the Jealouſies and Differences betwixt our two Kingdoms; it muſt encreaſe your Strength, Riches and Trade, and by this Union the whole Iſland being join'd in Affection, and free from all Apprehenſions of different Intereſts, will be enabled to reſiſt all its Enemies, ſupport the Proteſtant Intereſt every where, and maintain the Liberties of Europe.

We do upon this Occaſion renew the Aſſurances we have formerly given you, of our Reſolution to maintain the Government of the Church as by Law eſtabliſh'd in Scotland, and the Acts of both Parliaments upon which this Treaty proceeded, having reſerv'd their reſpective Governments of the Church in each Kingdom, the Commiſſioners have left that Matter entire; and you have now an Opportunity for doing what may be neceſſary for Security of your preſent Church Government after the Union, within the Limits of Scotland. A.D.1706.

The Duke of Queensberry Lord High Commiſſioner, and the Earl of Seafield Lord Chancellor, made Speeches to the ſame Effect; and the Sham Lockhart owns, The Union at firſt took generally with the Scots-Men, even to the very Meeting of the Parliament; if ſo, what a Miracle was wrought on the Minds of the People by the Jacobite Faction, who upon reading the Articles at Edinburgh, ſet themſelves all at once ſo generally againſt it, that, adds the Libeller, had it not been rainy Weather it wou'd have been impoſſible to have kept the Country from coming to a Head from the fartheſt Parts of the Kingdom, and tearing in Pieces all thoſe that promoted it. Such rare Judges were the Inhabitants of the Mountains, and the Iſles of Scotland, of the Articles, and ſo ſoon cou'd they take the moſt abſtruſe things when there was Occaſion.

The firſt Queſtion in the Scots Parliament about confirming the Treaty, was, whether to Proceed or Delay, and it was carry'd to Proceed by a Majority of 64 Voices.

Before the Sham Lockhart proceeds farther, he Glories in the Riots with which the Parliament were diſturb'd, as ſoon as the Union came into Debate, the Lord Commiſſioner he ſays, was inſulted, the Duke of Hamilton Huzza'd; but he ſpoils all by ſaying it was by Mob and Boys, who were unconcern'd; and is it from Boys and Mob that we are to learn the Senſe of the Nation? They are the Tools indeed that Jacobites and Tories in England and Scotland have lately work'd with, when they have got ſome word to put into their Mouths, as High-Church and Ormond in England, Hamilton and no Union in Scotland. The Leaders of the Faction in both Kingdoms meant the Pretender only, and the poor ignorant Rabble were ready to do what they were ſet upon, though it was to bring in Popery to ſave the Church of England, and Slavery to ſave the Liberty of Scotland.

Duke Hamilton's Arguments, or rather Queſtions againſt the Union.

The firſt Article of the Treaty about the incorporating Union being taken into Conſideration, the Memoiriſt tells us, the Duke of Hamilton outdid himſelf in theſe excellent Arguments. What, ſays he, ſhall we in half an Hour yield what our Forefathers maintain'd with their Lives and Fortunes for many Ages? Are none of the Deſcendants here of thoſe worthy Patriots who defended the Liberty of their Country againſt all Invaders, who aſſiſted the great King, Robert Bruce, to reſtore the Conſtitution and revenge the Falſhood of England, and the Uſurpation of Baliol? Where are the Douglaſſes and the Campbell's? Where are the Peers, where are the Barons, once the Bulwarks of the Nation? Shall we yield up the Sovereignty and Independency of this Nation, when we are commanded by thoſe we repreſent to preſerve the ſame, and aſſur'd of their Aſſiſtance to ſupport us? This was blowing the Trumpet and ſounding to Arms; and we ſhall ſee preſently that the Duke of Hamilton, and his Adherents, depended not ſo much on their fine Reaſoning, as on the more forcible Arguments of Sword and Piſtol, by which, however, they would doubtleſs have periſh'd themſelves, if they had not been reſerv'd for another Death.

The firſt Article being approv'd by a Majority of 33 Votes, the others paſs'd with leſs Difficulty.

The ſecond Article being that for ſettling the Succeſſion as in England, in the Houſe of Hanover, the Diſaffected durſt not directly, or in plain Terms oppoſe it, otherwiſe than by inſiſting to have the Limitations on the Succeſſor's Govern-

*A.D.*1706. ment firſt Settled and Enacted: This was the Pretence, but the real Motive of the Oppoſition to this Article was the Intereſt of the Pretender: Accordingly, after it was approv'd, the Earl Marſhall, now an attainted Fugitive for the ſame Cauſe, proteſted againſt it: And to do as much Honour to him, and his Adherents, as their Deſign againſt the Religion and Liberty of their Country deſerves, here is,

A LIST of thoſe Members of the Scotch Parliament, who voted againſt ſettling the Succeſſion on the Houſe of Hanover.

A Liſt of thoſe that voted againſt it in Scotland.

The Earl Marſhal.
Duke of Hamilton.
Duke of Athol.
Earl of Errol.
Earl of Wigton.
Earl of Strathmore.
Viſcount of Stormont.
Viſcount of Kylſythe.
Lord Salton.
Lord Semple.
Lord Bargeny.
Lord Colvil.
Lord Kinnaird.
George Lockhart of Carnwarth.
William Cochran of Kilmaranock.
J. Graham of Bucklivy.
J. Ogilvie of Boyne.
G. Mackenzie of Inchailer.
Andrew Fletcher of Salton.
A. Ferguſon of Iſle.
J. Graham of Killearn.
J. Briſbane of Biſhopton.
R. Rollo of Powhouſe.
J. Murray of Strawan.
J. More of Stonnywood.
J. Hope of Rankeiller.
P. Lyon of Auchterhouſe.
J. Carnegy of Phinhaven.
D. Graham of Fintree.
J. Sinclair of Steniſter.
A. Edgar.
J. Oſwald.
A. Duff.
J. Moliſon.
G. Smith.
K. Scott.
R. Kellie.
J. Hutchinſon.
A. Shields.
J. Lyon,
J. Carruthers.
G. Home.
J. Baine.
R. Frazier.

By this it appears, that ſome who oppos'd the Union, did not do it out of Oppoſition to the Houſe of Hanover, but out of Regard to the ancient Sovereignty and Independency of Scotland, and to their Conſtitution, the Eſtates in Parliament. Theſe without doubt had the Honour and Intereſt of their Country at Heart, as well as thoſe that were for the Union, though in Purſuit of them they miſtook the Way. As to the Addreſſes againſt the Union from the Barons and Burroughs, we in England know full well what Streſs to lay upon them. The Hiſtory of our Addreſſes ſince the Reſtoration, ſhews us that all our Counties, Cities, and Burroughs have, in their Turns, addreſs'd for and againſt the ſame Men, and the ſame Things; and we cannot compliment our Neighbours ſo much, at the Expence of our own Underſtandings, as to think their Judgment more ſolid, or their Inclination more conſtant. The third Article of the Union, relating to the Parliament of the united Kingdom, the Sham Lockhart, and others, complain'd, that the Scotch would not have a ſufficient Number of Repreſentatives in the Parliament of the United Kingdom, Sixteen Lords, and Forty-five Commoners, not being an equal Proportion to that of England. But how could theſe Men calculate better than the Commiſſioners did, for the Intereſt and Honour of Scotland; ſure the moſt equal and juſt way is to proportion the Repreſentative by the Property. By the IXth Article of the Treaty of Union, when England paid 1997763 l. 8 s. 4 d. half-penny Land-Tax; Scotland was to pay 48000 l. which is but little more than a Fortieth Part of the whole Burthen upon Land, at Four Shillings in the Pound; whereas Forty-five Members in Five hundred fifty-eight, are above an Eleventh of the Whole: And one can have no better Meaſure to go by in laying of Taxes, than that thoſe who lay them ſhould have Votes proportion'd to the Burthen they bear; but that would not have been ſufficient in this Caſe, to have anſwer'd to Numbers of People alſo, therefore the Commiſſioners put in both Scales whatever ought to be weigh'd, and agreed upon the Balance with great Juſtice and Reaſon. *A.D.*1706. The Number of the Scotch Repreſentatives well proportion'd to the Engliſh.

I ſhall not enter farther into the Articles of Union here, they will be ſpoken of again, when we ſpeak of the Proceedings in the next Seſſion of Parliament in England. They were all approv'd by Act of Parliament in Scotland, notwithſtanding the Menaces and Outrages of the Diſaffected, who publickly burnt the Articles at Dumfrees, and privately fomented a Rebellion, to ſuppreſs the Parliament, under Pretence of ſaving the Conſtitution.

There was one Cunningham, a great Promoter of the Revolution, who had been a Major in King William's War, and was broke when the Tories got the Forces disbanded after the Peace of Ryſwick, for fear of a Standing-Army: Having no Employment at Home, Cunningham went to Darien to ſeek better Fortune; but that being an ill Place for his Purpoſe, he return'd full of the Reſentment which generally attends Diſguſt and Poverty; finding this Oppoſition to the Union was become faſhionable, he too fell in with it; and being pretty much hearken'd to in the Weſtern Shires, he invited them to take Arms, and March to Edinburgh, to break up the Parliament. A Plot againſt the Scotch Parliament.

Briſbane of Biſhopton, in the above-mention'd Liſt, was one of his Confederates: To him he diſcover'd what he was doing; and, ſays he, There's no other way of ſaving the Nation, but by raiſing the Parliament, and declaring for King James. Briſbane communicated the Deſign to Cockran of Kilmaronock, and Lockhart of Carnwarth, who encourag'd Cunningham to perſevere in his Traiterous Deſigns. They gave him Fifty Pounds, and promis'd, if he was kill'd, or hang'd, to take Care of his Wife and Children: But before he went farther, he was deſirous to know what Part the Dukes of Hamilton and Athol would bear; and becauſe this Secret could not but be well known to the Memoiriſt, I will repeat what he ſays, "Mr. Cockran was ſent to acquaint the "Dukes of Hamilton, and Mr. Lockhart told "Mr. Murray of Strawan, and the Duke of "Athol, of what had paſs'd: The former ap- "pear'd ſomewhat ſhy in making any Promiſe, "and engaging, but ſeem'd to approve the Mea- "ſure, and he inſinuated he would do every "Thing an honeſt Man could deſire. Pray mind: What a Notion theſe Men have of Honeſty: Duke Hamilton had taken the Oaths to the Government, and afterwards abjur'd the Pretender, but now he is for encouraging Rebellion againſt Queen and Parliament, out of a Punctilio of Honeſty: The other frankly undertook that his Highlanders ſhould ſecure the Paſs of Sterling, and ſo open a Paſſage for a Communication with the Northern Parts. Mem. p. 280. The Traitors. The Dukes of Hamilton and Athol acquainted with the Plot.

Cunningham pretended he had Seven or Eight thouſand Men ready, and well arm'd. Hamilton was to be the Place of Rendezvous, from whence he was to March with them to Edinburgh: But juſt as Matters were ripe for Execution, Duke Hamilton ſent Expreſſes privately through the whole Country, ſtrictly requiring them to put off their Deſigns at that Time. I ſhall not enquire into the Duke's Reaſons for ſo doing; one of them ſuggeſted by the Sham Lockhart is enough; "He thought the Nation was by no Means in a Duke Hamilton baulks the Plotters. P. 284.

" State fit for ſuch an Enterprize at that Time, " becauſe the Engliſh had ſent their Troops to " the Borders, and more Forces would be wafted " over from Holland, and ſo the Nation be un- " done, and all that join'd cut to Pieces.

Let us now ſee how the People of England ſtood affected to this Union: As to the Tories, there's no need of explaining their Sentiments or Conduct; it was ſufficient for them to oppoſe it, that the Church of Scotland, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, was ſecur'd, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion ſettled in the Houſe of Hanover. Dr. Calamy's Account of it is very fair: " The Commiſſioners " of the Two Kingdoms having adjuſted the moſt " material Points, the Articles agreed on were " firſt paſs'd by the Parliament of Scotland, and " then by the Engliſh Parliament. Some of both " Nations were zealous for it, hoping that ſuch " an Union would much add to our common " Strength and Safety, and diſappoint ſome obvi- " ous Deſigns of our Enemies. Others were as much " againſt it: On one Hand, through a Jealouſy of " Trade, and through the Fondneſs of Indepen- " dency on the other: And it was obſerv'd, that " as many were againſt it in North Britain, out " of Fear it would ruin the Church of Scotland; " ſo were others in South Britain apprehenſive it " would ruin the Church of England: In order " to the giving Satisfaction on both Sides, an Act " paſs'd in Scotland, previous to the Union, con- " firming the Worſhip, Diſcipline and Govern- " ment of the Church there, and providing for the " Continuance of it, without any Alteration to " the People of North Britain, in all ſucceeding " Generations. An Act alſo paſs'd in England, " for ſecuring the Church, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, " effectually and unalterably; by which it was " enacted, that the Act of the 13th of Elizabeth, " for the Miniſters of the Church to be of a " ſound Religion; and the Act of Uniformity, " paſs'd in the 13th of Car. II. and all and ſin- " gular other Acts of Doctrine, Worſhip, Diſci- " pline and Government thereof, ſhould remain, " and be in full Force for ever: And it was en- " acted, that both theſe Acts ſhould for ever be " holden and adjudg'd to be Fundamental and " Eſſential Parts of the Treaty of Union between " the two Kingdoms, and both were accordingly " inſerted in expreſs Terms, in the Act for rati- " fying the Union, and declar'd to be eſſential and " fundamental Parts thereof.

England and Scotland take Care of their two Churches, as by Law eſtabliſh'd.

It was the beginning of the next Year, January the 16th, 1697, before the Act of Ratification paſs'd. It was approv'd by a Majority of One hundred and ten Voices. The next Buſineſs was, to ſettle the Manner of electing the Sixteen Peers, and Forty-five Commoners. As to the Peers, it was mov'd that they might all have their Turns, but it was carry'd for Election: An Act for electing the Repreſentatives of Scotland paſs'd the 5th of February, and on the 13th, the three Eſtates made Choice of,

For the LORDS,

The firſt Scotch Repreſentatives the Parliament of Great Britain.

The Duke of Queensberry, High-Commiſſioner.
Earl of Seafield, Lord Chancellor.
Marquis of Montroſe, P. S. C.
Marquis of Twedale.
Marquis of Lothian.
Earl of Mar.
Earl of Loudon.
Earl of Crawford.
Earl of Sutherland.
Earl of Roxburgh.
Earl of Wemys.
Earl of Leven.
Earl of Stair.
Earl of Roſeberry.
Earl of Glaſgow.
Earl of Ilay.

For the BARONS.

William Nisbet of Dirleton.
J. Cockburne of Ormiſtoun, Younger.
Sir William Ker of Greenhead.
Sir J. Swintoun of that Ilk.
William Bennet of Grubbet.
Archibald Douglas of Cavers.
Mr. J. Murray of Bowhill.
Mr. J. Pringle of Haining.
William Morriſon of Preſtoun-Grange.
George Baillie of Jerviſwood.
Sir J. Johnſtoun of Weſterhall.
Mr. J. Stuart of Sorbie.
Mr. F. Montgomery of Griſtan.
William Dalrymple of Glenmure.
Sir R. Pollock of that Ilk.
John Halden of Glenagies.
Mungo Graham of Gorthie.
Sir David Ramſay of Balmain.
Sir Thomas Burnet of Leys.
William Seaton, Younger, of Pitmedden.
Alexander Grant, Junior, of that Ilk.
Hugh Roſs of Kilravock.
Sir K. Mackenzie of Cromarty.
Mr. J. Campbel of Mammore.
Sir J. Campbel of Auchinberk.
James Campbel of Arkinglaſs.
James Halyburton of Pitcur.
A. Abercrombie of Glaſſock.
A. Douglas of Eagleſhaw.
John Bruce of Kinroſs.

For the BURROWS.

Sir Patrick Johnſtoun.
Lieutenant-Colonel John Erskine.
Hugh Montgomery.
James Scot.
Sir John Erskine.
Mr. P. Moncrief of Ready.
Sir Andrew Home.
Sir Peter Halket.
Sir James Smollet.
Sir David Dalrymple.
Mr. John Clerk.
Mr. Patrick Ogilvie.
George Allardice.
Daniel Campbel, Eſq;
Mr. Alexander Maitland.

We have hinted ſomething of the Addreſſes to the Parliament of Scotland againſt the Union, which were maliciouſly urg'd by the Diſaffected, as an Argument that the Scots were generally averſe to it; and that was induſtriouſly improv'd, to create the like Averſion in the Minds of the Engliſh; whereas in Truth of thirty-four Shires in Scotland, only thirteen addreſs'd; and of all theſe, the better, and more ſubſtantial Part of the Gentlemen, refus'd to join with the reſt. Of Sixty-ſix Burrows, only Seventeen Addreſs'd. Of Sixty-eight Presbyteries, three only, Hamilton, Lanerk and Dumblaine, addreſs'd. Of Nine hundred thirty-eight Pariſhes, only Sixty addreſs'd againſt an Union; and that by the viſible Influence of ſome great Men who remain'd in Parliament; ſome, and the greater Part, out of Hatred to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and ſome out of Hatred to the Miniſtry.

In

*A.D.*1706. In the Act of Ratification, there was this Clauſe, That the Parliament of England might provide for the Security of the Church of England, as they ſhould think expedient to take Place within the ſaid Kingdom of England, and not derogating from the Security provided for the Church of Scotland: Againſt which that Church Remonſtrated; alledging, That the Clauſe ſeem'd to them not only to be like a Blank put into the Hands of the Parliament of England, to exact what they ſhould think fit for ſecuring the Hierarchy and Ceremonies of their Church, &c. wherefore they beſought the High-Commiſſioner, and the Eſtates of Parliament, that there be no ſuch Stipulation or Conſent for the Eſtabliſhment of that Hierarchy and Ceremonies, as they would not involve themſelves, and the Scotch Nation, in Guilt, &c. but nothing was done in it farther; and as ſoon as Meſſieurs Harley, St. John, and Harcourt, were got into the Miniſtry in England, High-Church procur'd two or three Acts to be paſs'd by the Britiſh Parliament, which were plain Invaſions of the Act for the Security of the Church of Scotland.

Motions againſt the Engliſh Hierarchy.

Before we proceed in the Affair of the Union, when it was under Conſideration of the Engliſh Parliament, we muſt remember ſome other Remarkables of this Year.

We mention'd in the beginning of it, the Lords Addreſs to the Queen about the Inſolence of the Papiſts, and her Majeſty's Anſwer; in Purſuance of which, ſhe iſſu'd a Proclamation, dated the 11th of April, wherein it is ſaid, Proclamation againſt Papiſts in England.

It is HIGH-TREASON for any Perſon or Perſons to put in Practice to abſolve, perſuade, or withdraw any of our Subjects of this Realm of England from their natural Obedience to us; or to reconcile them to the Pope, or See of Rome; and their Procurers, Counſellors, Aiders and Maintainers, knowing the ſame, are alſo guilty of High-Treaſon: And alſo to be willingly abſolved, or withdrawn in Manner aforeſaid, or to be willingly reconcil'd to the Pope, or See of Rome, or to procure, Aid or Maintain ſuch Offenders, knowing the ſame, is thereby likewiſe made High-Treaſon; referring to Acts of Parliament in Queen Elizabeth, and King James the Firſt's Reign.

In what Popery is High-Treaſon by Law.

The Queen inſulted by the Tories, and at Oxford.

The Tories had ſo far forgot all Duty, and even Decorum towards the Queen at this Time, that a Weather-Cock was ſet up in ſome Part of Oxford, with her Majeſty's Motto, Semper Eadem, under which they wrote in one of their Libels, Worſe and Worſe, as a Tranſlation of it; and one of their Libellers, who call'd himſelf a Doctor of Phyſick, Joſeph Brown, publiſh'd a Falſe, Scandalous, and Malicious Libel againſt the Miniſtry; entituled, The Country PARSONS Advice to that judicious Lawyer, and worthy Miniſter of State, the Lord-Keeper; for which he was fin'd forty Marks only, and order'd to ſtand in the Pillory at the Royal-Exchange, May the 31ſt; which had ſo little Effect upon him, that about ſix Months after he was again convicted of writing and publiſhing another Scandalous and Seditious Libel, entitled, A Letter to the Right Honourable Mr. Secretary Harley, occaſion'd by his late Commitment to Newgate, together with his Interpretation of that Paper, call'd, the Country Parſon's Advice to my Lord Keeper, which highly reflected upon the great Officers of State, and ſeveral of the Nobility; for which he was fin'd, November the 14th, forty Marks, and again order'd to ſtand in the Pillory at Charing-Croſs, and at the Royal-Exchange. At the ſame Time one Edward Ward, a High-Church Poet, who afterwards kept an Alehouſe in Moorfields, was convicted of writing and publiſhing

Dr. Joſeph Brown twice Pillory'd for two High-Church Libels.

Edward Ward, the Mob Poet, Pillory'd for a High-Church Libel.

Hudibras Redivivus, A Burleſque Poem on the Times, highly reflecting on the Queen and Government, in Words too filthy to be repeated; for which he was fin'd forty Marks, and order'd to ſtand in the Pillory, November the 20th, at Charing-Croſs, and the Royal-Exchange; yet were theſe two Wretches great Pretenders to Loyalty, and Haters of Revolution Principles; nay, Admirers of the Politicks of Secretary Harley; when he was Prime Miniſter, ſo ready were they to forgive him the Shame he juſtly brought them into, upon his eſpouſing the Cauſe they had themſelves always eſpous'd. *A.D.*1706.

Lord Raby and Dr. Robinſon rejoice at the routing the French.

The Lord Raby, afterwards Earl of Strafford, and one of the Engliſh Plenipotentiaries at the Treaty of Utrecht, came to the Duke of Marlborough's Camp at Rouſſalear, to congratulate his Grace on his Victory at Ramelies; and Dr. Robinſon, afterward Biſhop of Briſtol, and the other Engliſh Plenipotentiary at Utrecht, then Envoy to the King of Sweden, treated no leſs than Five or Six hundred People at Dantzick with a Collation, Wine and Muſick, upon the Occaſion of the late glorious Succeſſes of her Majeſty's Arms, theſe two moſt extrordinary Ambaſſadors being then of the Party who delighted in theſe Succeſſes, which they afterwards taught the Queen to call delighting in War.

When the Duke of Marlborough return'd from Flanders to the Hague, the States-General deſir'd the Miniſters of the Allies then there, to be preſent at an extraordinary Congreſs, the 21ſt of November, when, to their great Satisfaction, the Deputies of the States notify'd to them, "That "France had formerly, by ſome private Perſons, "made general Intimations of their Willingneſs "to treat of Peace; and that laſt Winter the "Marquis d' Alegre had preſented to the States a "formal Memorial on the ſame Subject; the Sub-"ſtance of which was read to the Congreſs." That they had given no Ear to theſe Advances, nor communicated them to the Allies, becauſe they did not judge them worth imparting to them: But that in October laſt, the Elector of Bavaria had written a Letter to the Duke of Marlborough, and another to the Field-Deputies of the States; which two Letters, and the Anſwers that had been return'd to them, were alſo communicated to the Congreſs.

French Propoſals of Peace communicated to all the Allies.

The Elector of Bavaria's Letter to the Duke of Marlborough for Peace, and the Duke's Anſwer.

The Elector, in the Name of the French King, had propos'd the holding of Conferences in ſome Place between the two Camps, or between Mons and Bruſſels, to treat of a Peace; the Duke of Marlborough return'd Anſwer, November the 15th, That having communicated to the Queen, his Miſtreſs, that his Electoral Highneſs had done him the Honour to write to him, ſhe had commanded him to acquaint his Electoral Highneſs, that as ſhe had receiv'd with Pleaſure, this Notice of the King's Inclination to agree to the making of a ſolid and laſting Peace with all the Allies, being the ſole End that oblig'd her Majeſty to continue this War 'till now, ſo ſhe would be very glad to conclude it in Concert with all her Allies, on ſuch Conditions as might ſecure them from all Apprehenſions of being forc'd to take up Arms again, after a ſhort Interval, as had ſo lately happen'd. That her Majeſty was alſo willing he ſhould declare, that ſhe was ready to enter jointly with all the High Allies, into juſt and neceſſary Meaſures for attaining of ſuch a Peace; her Majeſty being reſolv'd not to enter upon any Negotiations, without the Participation of her ſaid Allies. But the way of Conferences that was propos'd, without more particular Declarations on the Part of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, did not ſeem to her to be proper for obtaining a truly ſolid and laſting Peace. That the States-General were of the ſame

A.D.1706. ſame Opinion; wherefore his Electoral Highneſs would rightly judge, that other more ſolid Means muſt be thought on to attempt ſo great an End, to which her Majeſty would contribute, with all the Sincerity that could be wiſh'd, having nothing ſo much at Heart as the Reliof of her Subjects, and the Tranquility of Europe. The Letter the Elector wrote to the States Field-Deputies, and their Anſwer to it, were much to the ſame Effect; and both being read, the Deputies of the States declar'd to the Congreſs, "That their High-Mightineſſes "were reſolv'd not to enter into any Negotiation "of Peace, but jointly with their High Allies, "and faithfully to communicate to them the Propo- "ſals that might be made to them, expecting that "the ſaid High Allies would do no leſs on their "Part." But France deſpis'd all theſe Reſolutions and Declarations, as ſoon as ſhe heard that the Adminiſtration in England was in the Hands of Meſſieurs Harley, St. John, and the Tory Faction, who, ſhe was ſure, would have no Regard to Honour or Decency, in their Behaviour to the Confederates.

Duke of Marlborough arrives in England.

The Duke of Marlborough having ſettled ſeveral other important Affairs Abroad, particularly the continuing the Heſſian Troops in Italy, according to the Duke of Savoy's Deſire, his Grace ſail'd from the Maeſe the 26th of November, N. S. landed at Margate the next Day, and on the 29th arriv'd in London.

Six Days after, the Duke coming to the Houſe of Lords, the Lord Keeper, by Direction, made the following Speech to him.

Lord Keeper's Speech to him.

My Lord Duke of Marlborough,

"I Am commanded by this Houſe to give your "Grace their Acknowledgment and Thanks "for the eminent Services you have done ſince "the laſt Seſſion of Parliament, to her Majeſty, "and your Country, together with their Confede- "rates in this juſt and neceſſary War. Though "ſome former Succeſſes againſt the Power of "France, while it remain'd unbroken, gave moſt "reaſonable Expectation that you would not fail "to improve them; yet what your Grace has "perform'd this laſt Campaign, has far exceeded "all Hopes, even of ſuch as were moſt Affectio- "nate and Partial to their Country's Intereſt, and "your Glory. The Advantages you have gain'd "againſt the Enemy, are of ſuch a Nature, ſo "conſpicuous in themſelves, ſo undoubtedly owing "to your Courage and Conduct, ſo ſenſibly and "univerſally beneficial in their Conſequences to "the whole Confederacy, that to attempt to "adorn them with the colouring of Words, "would be vain and inexcuſable, and therefore I "decline it; the rather, becauſe I ſhould certainly "offend that great Modeſty, which alone can, "and does add Luſtre to your Actions; and "which, in your Grace's Example, has ſucceſſ- "fully withſtood as great Trials as that Virtue has "met with in any Inſtance whatſoever. And I "beg Leave to ſay, that if any Thing could "move your Grace to reflect with much Satiſ- "faction on your own Merit, it would be this, "that ſo auguſt an Aſſembly does, with one "Voice, praiſe and thank you: An Honour, "which a Judgment ſo ſure as that of your "Grace's to think rightly of every Thing, can- "not but prefer to the Oſtentation of a publick "Triumph.

My Lord Duke anſwer'd,

The Duke's Anſwer.

I Eſteem this a very particular Honour, which your Lordſhips are pleas'd to do me. Nobody in the World, can be more ſenſible of it than I am, nor more deſirous to deſerve the Countenance of your Favour and good Opinion. A.D.1706.

The Day before a Committee of the Commons attended his Grace with the Thanks of their Houſe; and his Lordſhips Anſwer was, If any Thing could add to my Satisfaction in the Services I have endeavour'd to do to the Queen, and my Country, it would be the particular Notice which the Houſe of Commons is pleas'd to take of them, ſo much to my Advantage.

The Lords' Addreſs to ſettle his Honours on his Poſterity.

Not many Days after, the Lords waited on the Queen with an Addreſs, importing, "That ha- "ving conſider'd the many great Actions which "the Duke of Marlborough had perform'd in her "Majeſty's Service, ſuch Actions as the wiſeſt and "greateſt of People had rewarded with Statues and "Triumphs; they were extreamly deſirous to "expreſs the juſt Senſe they had of his Merit, in "a peculiar and diſtinguiſhing Manner; and in "order to perpetuate the Memory thereof, to ſet- "tle and continue his Titles and Honours, with "his Right of Precedency in his Poſterity, by an "Act of Parliament: But having a juſt Regard to "the Prerogative of the Crown, they thought it "their Duty, in the firſt Place, to have Recourſe "to her Majeſty for her Royal Allowance, before "any Order given for bringing in a Bill of ſuch "a Nature; and to deſire her Majeſty to let the "Houſe know in what manner it would be moſt "acceptable to her, that theſe Titles and Honours "ſhould be limited.

The Queen's Anſwer was;

ANNE R.

Queen's Anſwer.

NOthing can be more acceptable to me than your Addreſs. I am entirely ſatisfy'd with the Services of the Duke of Marlborough, and therefore cannot but be pleas'd you have ſo juſt a Senſe of them.

I muſt not omit to take Notice, that the reſpectful Manner of your Procedings, in deſiring Allowance for bringing in the Bill, and my Directions for the Limitation of the Honours, does give me great Satisfaction.

My Intention is, that after the Determination of the Eſtate, which the Duke of Marlborough now has in his Titles and Honours, the ſame ſhould be limited to his eldeſt Daughter, and the Heirs Male of her Body, and then to all his other Daughters, ſucceſſively, according to their Priority of Birth, and the Heirs Male of their reſpective Bodies; and afterwards in ſuch Manner as may effectually anſwer my Deſign and yours, in perpetuating the Memory of his Merit, by continuing, as far as may be done, his Titles, and Name, to all his Poſterity.

I think it would be proper that the Honour and Manor of Woodſtock, and the Houſe of Blenheim, ſhould always go along with the Titles, and therefore I recommend that Matter to your Conſideration.

The Duke of Marlborough ſpoke himſelf to the Lords on this Occaſion, as follows:

Duke of Marlborough's Speech to the Lords upon it.

My LORDS,

"I Cannot find Words ſufficient to expreſs the "Senſe I have of the great and diſtinguiſhing "Honour which the Houſe has been pleas'd to do "me in their Reſolution, and their Application "to her Majeſty. The Thoughts of it will be "a continual Satisfaction to me, and the higheſt "Encouragement; and the thankful Memory "of it muſt laſt as long as any Poſterity of "mine.

A.D.1706. " I beg Leave to ſay a Word to the Houſe, in " Relation to that Part of her Majeſty's moſt gra- " cious Anſwer, which concerns the Eſtate of " Woodſtock, and the Houſe of Blenheim: I did " make my humble Requeſt to the Queen, that " thoſe might go with the Titles; and I make " the like Requeſt to your Lordſhips, that after " the Dutcheſs of Marlborough, upon whom they " are ſettled in Jointure, that Eſtate and Houſe " may be limited to go always along with the " Honours.

Which was readily comply'd with, and the Bill the Lords order'd to be brought in upon it, had a quick Paſſage through both Houſes. Little could one think a General, ſo greatly and deſervedly in the Favour of the Queen and Parliament, ſhould, in two or three Years Time, during which he continu'd doing Services and Honours to his Country, be abandon'd to the Inſults of Envy and Faction, and be worry'd within Doors, and without, by the Invectives of worthleſs, inſolent Speechmakers and Libellers.

To put what related to the Duke of Marlborough together, we poſtpon'd mentioning the Meeting of the Parliament, December the 3d, when her Majeſty ſpoke to both Houſes in this Manner:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Queen's Speech to the Parliament.

I Hope we are all met together at this Time, with Hearts truly thankful to Almighty God for the glorious Succeſſes with which he has bleſs'd our Arms, and thoſe of our Allies, through the whole Courſe of this Year, and with ſerious and ſteady Reſolutions to proſecute the Advantages we have gain'd, 'till we reap the deſir'd Fruit of them, in an honourable and a durable Peace.

The Goodneſs of God has brought this happy Proſpect ſo much nearer to us, that if we be not wanting to our ſelves, we may, upon good Grounds, hope to ſee ſuch a Balance of Power eſtabliſh'd in Europe, that it ſhall no longer be at the Pleaſure of one Prince to diſturb the Repoſe, and endanger the Liberties of this Part of the World.

A juſt Conſideration of the preſent Poſture of Affairs, of the Circumſtances of our Enemies, and the good Diſpoſition of our Allies, muſt needs excite an uncommon Zeal, and animate us to exert our utmoſt Endeavours at this critical Conjuncture.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

As I am fully perſuaded you are all of this Mind, ſo I muſt earneſtly deſire you to grant me Supplies ſufficient for carrying on the War next Year in ſo effectual a Manner, that we may be able to improve every-where the Advantage of this ſucceſsful Campaign: And I aſſure you, I ſhall make it my Buſineſs to ſee all you give apply'd to thoſe Ends, with the greateſt Care and Management.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

In Purſuance of the Powers veſted in me by Act of Parliament, both in England and Scotland, I appointed Commiſſioners to treat of an Union between the two Kingdoms; and though this be a Work of ſuch a Nature, as could not but be attended with great Difficulties, yet ſuch has been the Application of the Commiſſioners, that they have concluded a Treaty, which is at this Time before the Parliament of Scotland; and I hope the mutual Advantages of an entire Union of the two Kingdoms will be found ſo apparent, that it will not be long before I ſhall have an Opportunity of acquainting you with the Succeſs which it has met with there.

Univerſally applauded.

Your Meeting at this Time being later than uſual, I cannot conclude without earneſtly recommending to you to give as much Diſpatch to the publick Affairs, as the Nature of them will admit; it being of the greateſt Conſeqnence that both our Friends and our Enemies ſhould be fully convinc'd of your Firmneſs, and the Vigour of your Proceedings. A.D.1706.

This Speech met with univerſal Applauſe; and two Days after the Lords and Commons, each in a Body, attended the Queen with their Congratulatory Addreſſes. The Lords in particular took Notice of the Nations Joy and Satisfaction upon the publick Declaration which her Majeſty, in Concert with the States-General, made to the Miniſters of the other Confederate Powers, that no Negotiations of Peace ſhould be enter'd into, but in Conjunction with all the Members of the Grand Alliance; which generous Method would prevent the indirect and dangerous Practices of the Common Enemy, put a Stop to clandeſtine and corrupt Tranſactions, and muſt not only remove all preſent Jealouſies from the Allies, but create in them a laſting Confidence and Reliance on her Majeſty's Honour and Juſtice. The Expreſſion, Clandeſtine and Corrupt Tranſactions was an Intimation of what was to be fear'd, if ſuch Men as Mr. Harley, or Mr. St. John ſhould ever have the Queen's Ear; as it was now ſuſpected Mr. Harley was endeavouring, by Means of one Mrs. Abigal Hill, a diſtant Relation of the Dutcheſs of Marlborough, who had taken her firſt into her own Service, and afterwards recommended her to the Queen's. Not to trouble our ſelves about her Parentage and Education; it is certain ſhe was a Servant in a private Gentlemen's Family, before the Dutcheſs, at the earneſt Sollicitations of her Kindred, took her into her own. This Mrs. Hill was ſoon very acceptable to the Queen, and being akin to Mr. Harley, ſhe watch'd her Opportunities ſo well, to give her Majeſty favourable Impreſſions of him, that by her Inſinuations, and his own Craft, he ſcrued himſelf, as the Annaliſt ſays, very deep into the Queen's Confidence, and endeavour'd to ſet her againſt the War, notwithſtanding the earneſt Profeſſions ſhe made for continuing it. The Commons ſhew'd, by their great Praiſes of the Miniſters then about the Queen, that they ſuſpected there were Intrigues a-foot to ſupplant them. The Experience we have had, ſay they, of the prudent Adminiſtration, and the GREAT CARE and MANAGEMENT in the Application of the publick Aids, encourage us to aſſure you Majeſty, that we will chearfully give ſuch ſpeedy and effectual Supplies, as by the Continuance of God's Bleſſing upon yours, may eſtabliſh the Balance of Power in Europe, by a ſafe, honourable, and laſting Peace. Accordingly, they voted all the Supplies for the Fleet and Army in leſs than a Week, and the four Shillings in the Pound Land-Tax, and the Malt-Tax Bills, were ready for the Royal Aſſent December the 21ſt. John Smith, Eſq; Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, made a Speech to her Majeſty, when he preſented the Money-Bills, importing, " That as the glorious Victory obtain'd by the Duke of Marlborough at Ramelies was " ſo ſurprizing, that the Battel was fought before " it could be thought the Armies were in the Field, " ſo it was no leſs ſurprizing, that the Commons " had granted Supplies to her Majeſty, before her " Enemies could well know that her Parliament " was Sitting. The Queen in her Speech to both Houſes on this Occaſion, repeated to them her great Satisfaction in their ſeveral Addreſſes, in the Zeal they expreſſed in them for her Service, and the Common Cauſe of Europe, and in the Notice they had taken of the eminent Services of the Duke of Marlborough. And probably at that very ſame Time was Mr. Robert Harley, by Means of Mrs. Abigal Hill, leſſening the Merit of thoſe eminent Services in her Majeſty's Opinion, and preparing the way for rewarding them with Diſgrace and Re-

A Reflection on Mr. Robert Harley.

Mrs. Abigal Hill's Riſe.

She aſſiſts Mr. Robert Harley.

The Commons approve the Conduct of the Miniſtry.

A.D.1706. Reproaches. The House of Commons a few Days after, presented an Address to the Queen, that they also might be permitted to express their sense of so distinguishing a Merit as the Duke of Marlborough's, and their ready Disposition to enable her Majesty to make some Provision for the more honourable Support of his Dignity; with which the Queen express'd herself extreamly well pleas'd, and soon after sent them a Message by Secretary Harley, that the 5000 l. a Year Pension out of the Post-Office might be settled on him and his Posterity in the same Manner as the Town of Woodstock and House of Blenheim, for which the Commons order'd a Bill to be brought in. On the 19th of December the Duke of Marlborough din'd in the City upon Invitation of the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen: He was accompany'd to Vintners Hall by the Lord High Treasurer, the Dukes of Somerset and Ormond, several of the Nobility, Foreign Ministers and other Persons of Quality; and at the same time the Colours and Standards taken at Ramelies, were brought from Whitehall in Military Pomp through the Park, where the Queen saw them from Lady Fitzharding's Lodgings, and so along Pall-Mall, the Strand, &c. to Guildhall, where they were put up as Trophies of that Victory. On the 29th of the Month it was declar'd publickly that her Majesty had been pleas'd to create,

Peers created.

Robert Earl of Lindsey Lord Great Chamberlain of England, Marquis of Lindsey in the County of Lincoln.

Evelyn Earl of Kingston, Marquis of Dorchester in the County of Dorset.

Thomas Lord Wharton, Earl of Wharton in the County of Westmoreland.

John Lord Pawlet, Earl Pawlet.

Sidney Lord Godolphin, Earl of Godolphin in the County of Cornwall.

Hugh Lord Cholmondeley, Earl of Cholmondeley in the County of Chester.

Henry Lord Walden, Earl of Bindon in the County of Dorset.

William Cowper, Esq; Lord Keeper, Lord Cowper, Baron of Wingham in the County of Kent.

Sir Thomas Pelham, Bart. Lord Pelham, Baron of Laughton in the County of Sussex.

The last Day of the Year being by Proclamations appointed a Day of general Thanksgiving for the wonderful Successes of her Majesty's Arms, and those of her Allies the last Campaign, her Majesty went to St. Paul's Cathedral, attended by both Houses of Parliament, which made this Cavalcade more August than any of the Former, the great Officers of State and other Lords and Gentlemen of Distinction. The Queen as has been observ'd, took so much delight in this sort of Triumph, that she gave her Subjects the Spectacle twice this Year, and indeed her Glory was now at the Height, for from this time, till she acted without any manner of Reserve, in an Interest contrary to what she had hitherto espous'd, there was a great deal of Affectation in her Zeal for a vigorous Prosecution of the War, which the Persons that were working themselves into her Favour brought not long after to so inglorious an End.

A.D.1707. On the 14th of January the Earl of Nottingham in a set Speech represented to the Lords, "That "the Union of the two Kingdoms of England "and Scotland, was a Matter of the highest Im- "portance, and a Work of so much difficulty, "that all the Attempts that had been made towards "it in the last Century had prov'd ineffectual. But the Attempt that was then a-Foot had prov'd so effectual, that the Treaty was actually agreed on by Commissioners of both Nations; but his Lordship's chief Care was as usual for the Safety of the Church. The Parliament of Scotland having thought fit to secure the Presbyterian Church Government in that Kingdom, it became the Wisdom of the Parliament of England to provide betimes against the Dangers with which the Church by Law establish'd was threaten'd in case the Union was accomplish'd. The Earl of Rochester and the Duke of Buckinghamshire spoke to the same Purpose; and the Earl of Godolphin said, This Affair is not yet ripe for us to debate, and we need not doubt but her Majesty will communicate to the Parliament of England, as is desir'd, all the Proceedings relating to the Union, as soon as that of Scotland have gone through with it. The Lords Wharton, Somers and Halifax spoke on the same Side. A.D.1707.

Lord Nottingham's Care of the Church of England with respect to the Union.

The House of Commons on the 13th of January voted the Money for the Duke of Savoy, King Charles III, and the Expedition under Earl Rivers to have been rightly apply'd. On the 28th the Queen past the Bill for settling the 5000 l. yearly Pension out of the Post-Office upon the Duke of Marlborough, and then her Majesty spoke thus to both Houses.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

HAving acquainted you at the Opening of this Session, that the Treaty for an Union between England and Scotland, which had been concluded here by the Commissioners appointed for that Purpose, in Pursuance of the Powers given by the Parliaments of both Kingdoms, was then under the Consideration of the Parliament of Scotland; I can now with great Satisfaction inform you that the said Treaty has been ratifi'd by Act of Parliament in Scotland with some Additions and Alterations.

I have directed the Treaty agreed to by the Commissioners of both Kingdoms, and also the Act of Ratification from Scotland, to be laid before you, and I hope it will meet with your Concurrence and Approbation.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons.

It being agreed by this Treaty, that Scotland is to have an Equivalent for what that Kingdom is oblig'd to contribute towards paying the Debts of England, I must recommend to you, that in case you agree to the Treaty, you would take care to provide for the Payment of the Equivalent in Scotland.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

You have now an Opportunity before you of putting the last Hand to a happy Union of the two Kingdoms, which I hope will be a lasting Blessing to the whole Island, a great Addition to its Wealth and Power, and a firm Security to the Protestant Religion.

The Advantages which will accrue to us all from an Union, are so apparent, that I will add no more, but that I shall look upon it as a particular Happiness if this great Work, which has been so often attempted without Success can be brought to Perfection in my Reign.

The Commons being return'd to their House, the Lord Coningsby by the Queen's Command presented to the House the Articles of Union agreed upon by the Commissioners, the Act of Ratification past by the Parliament in Scotland, and a Copy of the Minute Book of the Commissioners Proceedings, for which the House voted an Address of Thanks. The same Communication being made to the House of Lords, the Archbishop of Canterbury mov'd for bringing in a Bill for the Security of the Church of England, which had a quick Passage through both Houses.

Bill for the Security of the Church past.

The

A.D 1707.

Mr. Charles Cæſar's Objections to the Union.

The next Day the Commons in a Committee of the whole Houſe, Spencer Compton, Eſq; in the Chair, conſider'd the Articles of Union; and Mr. Charles Cæſar open'd the Debate, with Objections againſt it. He was ſeconded by Sir John Packington, who was ſo ſtaunch a High-Church-Man, that he could not without ſome Horror think of being united with Presbyterians. He ſaid, The incorporating Union was like marrying a Woman againſt her Conſent; an Union that was carry'd on by Corruption and Bribery, for which he had like to have been call'd to the Bar; but he excus'd it by ſaying, He was told they ſaid in Scotland it was carry'd by Bribery and Force. The ſmarteſt Part of his Speech is about the Church, which had but 513 Members to ſupport it againſt 45, ſuppoſing, which is not true, all the Scots Repreſentatives to be Presbyterians. However, Sir J. Packington ſai'd, " That the Church of England being eſtabliſh'd " Jure Divino, and the Scots pretending only " that their Kirk is alſo Jure Divino; he could not " tell how two Nations that claſh'd in ſo eſſential a " Point could Unite, and therefore he thought it " proper to conſult the Convocation about it. Colonel Harry Mordaunt reply'd, " He knew of no " other Jure Divino but God Almighty's Per- " miſſion, in which Senſe it might be ſaid, that the " Church of England and the Kirk of Scotland " were both Jure Divino, becauſe God Almighty " had permitted that the firſt ſhould prevail in " England, the other in Scotland; and that the " Member who ſpoke laſt might if he thought fit " conſult the Convocation for his own particular In- " ſtruction, but that it would be derogating from " the Rights of the Commons of England to " adviſe on this Occaſion with an inferior Aſſembly " who have no ſhare in the Legiſlature." As much a Whim as Sir John Packington's Motion ſeem'd to be to Men of Senſe, the High Church Party laid great ſtreſs upon it, and having mov'd that the firſt Article for an incorporating Union ſhould be poſtpon'd till the other Articles had been conſider'd, upon its paſſing in the Negative, ſeveral of them went out of the Houſe, and the firſt four Articles were read and approv'd without Oppoſition, which the Negatives call'd Riding Poſt; and Sir Thomas Littleton reply'd in the ſame Allegory; we do not ride Poſt but a good eaſy Trot, and for my own part as long as the Weather is fair, the Roads good, and our Horſes in Heart, I am of Opinion we ought to jog on and not ſtay till 'tis Night. The Debates about the Union began the 4th of February, and the whole Treaty was approv'd the 11th, and a Bill order'd to be brought in to ratify it.

Sir John Packington charges it with Bribery and Corruption

Would have the Convocation conſulted.

The Tories leave the Houſe.

Bill for ratifying the Treaty paſſes the Houſe of Commons.

Two Days after the Queen gave the Royal Aſſent to the Act for ſecuring the Church of England as by Law eſtabliſh'd; and on the 15th of February the Treaty of Union was debated in the Houſe of Lords, the Queen preſent as a private Perſon. The Lords having reſolv'd themſelves into a Committee of the whole Houſe, the Earl of Sunderland call'd upon the Biſhop of Salisbury to take the Chair; the Earl of Rocheſter open'd the Debate on the firſt Article, and the Earl of Angleſey mov'd it might be poſtpon'd; Dr. Hooper Biſhop of Bath and Wells, ſpoke for conſidering the reſt of the Articles before they touch'd upon the incorporating Union; the Earl of Nottingham excepted againſt the Name of Great-Britain, which he alledg'd totally ſubverted all the Laws of England; but the Judges being conſulted, unanimouſly declar'd that it did not. The Lord Haverſham made a long Speech, of which I ſhall only inſert the laſt Paragraph. Now there is a great deal of Zeal for this Union, and I wiſh from my Soul that the Advantages may attend it of Tranquility and Security, Power, Peace and Plenty, as is intended by it; but yet it is poſſible Men may be miſtaken; I won't ſay they will ever repent it, but I will take leave to ſay what I have formerly ſaid in this Place, what has been, may be.

Lord Haverſham's ſaying us'd by him again.

The Negative being put on the poſtponing Motion by a Majority of 72 to 22, the firſt ſix Articles were read and approv'd. On the 10th of February the Conſideration of the Treaty was reſum'd. The Lord North and Grey, who afterwards openly declar'd for the Pretender, objected to the IXth Article, that the Scots who paid not ſo much to the Land-Tax as Wales ſhould yet have almoſt twice the Number of Repreſentatives in the Parliament of the United Kingdom. This was anſwer'd by the Lord Halifax, who was more than a Match for Lord North and Grey, and all his Coadjutors in ſuch Calculations, and ſaid, That the Number of Repreſentatives was no Rule to go by, ſince there was the County of Cornwal in England that paid not near ſo much towards the Land-Tax as that of Glouceſter, and yet ſent five times as many Members to Parliament as the latter did; that it was true the Quota of Scotland was very ſmall and unequal in Compariſon to what was paid in England, but that the Engliſh Commiſſioners could not induce the Scotch one's to agree to more, upon account of ſeveral Impoſſibilities on their ſide; that we could not expect to reap the like Advantages of every Article in the Treaty; and that if they had the better of us in ſome few, we were infinitely recompens'd by the many Advantages which did accrue to us from the whole. Here again the Houſe divided 70 Contents, 23 not Contents. The Earl of Rocheſter, the Lord North and Grey, the Lord Leigh, the Lord Guilford, enter'd their Proteſts againſt this Article.

A.D 1707.

Lord Nottingham oppoſes the Equivalent.

The Debate being reſum'd in the Houſe of Peers, the Earl of Nottingham objected to the 15th Article about the Equivalent, urging, " it was highly un- " reaſonable that the Scots who paid ſo little to- " wards a moſt expenſive bloody War, ſhould have " alſo 398085 l. given them for coming into this " Treaty; and that part of it which the Darien " Company was to have, was ſo order'd, as that it " might be ſwallow'd up by a few Perſons without " any particular Regard to the indemnifying every " private Sufferer in that unhappy enterprize. The Lord Halifax anſwer'd, That this Equivalent could not be look'd upon as a Gift, but as an actual purchaſe of the Scotch Revenue and Cuſtoms, which by this Union were to be apply'd to the Payment of the Debts of England; and that they were no more Gainers by it than the Engliſh were by the Sale of Annuities at 16 or 17 Years Purchaſe; that as to the Diſpoſal of the Money, it being their own, it was but reaſonable they ſhould have the Liberty of applying the ſame as they thought moſt convenient, the Engliſh Commiſſioners being no way concern'd therein, whoſe Care nevertheleſs, and great Prudence, had been ſuch, that they made Proviſion it ſhould not be diſpos'd of but by certain Commiſſioners, who ſhould be accountable for the ſame to the Parliament of Great-Britain.

Lord Halifax for it.

The Earl of Rocheſter, the Lord North and Grey, the Lord Guilford and Lord Leigh proteſted againſt this Article.

Then the 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th Articles were approv'd; but when the 20th came under Conſideration, February 24, the Earl Thanet acquainted their Lordſhips, " That himſelf having " an heretable Office here in England by being " perpetual Sheriff of the County of Weſtmoreland, " he would be glad with their Lordſhips leave to " have the Opinion of the Judges about the Pre- " ſervation of that his Right, there being no Pro- " viſion made in this Article for heretable Offices " in England." The Lord Great Chamberlain ſeconded him in that Motion, ſaying, " He had " the

A.D.1707. " the Honour likewiſe of having ſuch an heretable " Office, about the Preſervation whereof, he had " the very ſame Doubts and Scruples with the " noble Peer that ſpoke laſt; whereupon it was agreed, that the Judges ſhould deliver their Opinion about it, which they accordingly did, and their Anſwers were near the ſame with what they had declar'd to the Houſe concerning the firſt Article, That all Laws of England would remain entire, except ſuch as were contrary to the Union.

After Reading the 22d Article, the Earl of Rocheſter declar'd, " He look'd upon it as incongruous, " contradictory to, and inconſiſtent with itſelf, that " there were 16 Peers to be return'd to the Houſe " of Lords in the Parliament of Great-Britain, " who were Peers and no Peers; that being all " Peers by right of Inheritance, they were never- " theleſs made Elective, which he took to be " diveſting them of their Peerage; becauſe not " being ſure of being always elected to every Par- " liament of Great-Britain, they conſequently muſt " loſe, when left out, the Benefit of ſitting in " Parliament, which was ever deem'd an inſepera- " ble Right of the Peerage; that the reſt of the " Nobility of Scotland, to the Number of above a " Hundred, were thereby manifeſtly injur'd; and " that for his part, he wonder'd very much how the " Scotch came to accept of ſuch unreaſonable Con- " ditions, or how their Lordſhips could entertain " the Thoughts of permitting ſuch Peers by Electi- " on to ſit among them." The Earl of Nottingham, the Lord Guernſey, and the Lord North and Grey, brought the Church into the Argument, alledging, " That as one might very well ſuppoſe " that thoſe Scotch Peers would be ſuch as were " addicted to the Kirk, it might prove of DAN- " GEROUS conſequence to the Church of Eng- " land". The Earl of Wharton reply'd, That though they were all never ſo much of the Kirk Party, yet there was no Reaſon to fear but they would alſo be very well diſpos'd for the Church of England, and ſtand up in its Defence on all Occaſions, ſince there were even ſome ſitting among their Lordſhips, who would venture their Lives for the Church of England, and yet openly declar'd themſelves to be Occaſional Conformiſts. The Lord Haverſham rightly judging he was meant here, inform'd the Houſe what he underſtood by an Occaſional Conformiſt, in which Explanation he appear'd to be very much perplex'd; for after having made a long Encomium on the Epiſcopal Order, which he took to be the beſt and moſt conformable to Primitive Chriſtianity, he gave no leſs Commendations to all the Proteſtant Churches abroad, and to the Kirk of Scotland itſelf in particular, which he ſaid was a true Proteſtant Church, as no doubt it is, and ſo are the Presbyterians in England a true Proteſtant Church, and ſo is the Epiſcopal Church of England a true Proteſtant Church; and what a ſtir is made about the one and the other, when all the while they are both of the ſame Religion. I would have ask'd Lord Haverſham, when he ſaid the Epiſcopal Order was moſt conformable to Primitive Chriſtianity, whether that Order among the Primitive Chriſtians were endow'd with Temporal Baronies, with Courts of Judicature holden in their own Names, with immenſe Revenues and Riches, magnificent Palaces, pompous Titles, and high Dignities. If he could not have made out that at a time when the Chriſtians were under the Tyranny of Pagan Emperors, and almoſt always in the Hands of bloody Executioners and Tormentors, then I wou'd deſire to know of all ſuch as talk as his Lordſhip did, whether by the Epiſcopal Order they underſtand ſuch Biſhops as Titus and Timothy, praying, preaching Biſhops, exhorting, admoniſhing, reproving, comforting, overſeeing Biſhops; if ſo, why were there ſuch dire Apprehenſions of the Danger threatning the Church from the Paſtoral Order beyond Tweed, which by this Meaſure will be found to be moſt conformable to Primitive Chriſtianity? Thoſe that know any thing of Primitive Chriſtianity and ancient Hiſtory, muſt be well ſatisfy'd, that the Chriſtian Preachers in the three firſt Centuries, might be as well call'd Emperors and Kings, as Archbiſhops and Biſhops, in a High-Church Acceptation of the Terms. The Biſhop of Bath and Wells declar'd, " That for his part he " was altogether againſt this Union, which he " could compare to nothing better than to the " mixing together ſtrong Liquors of a contrary " Nature in one and the ſame Veſſel, which " would go nigh being burſt aſunder by their " furious Fermentation; that their Bench was " always reckon'd the dead Weight of the Houſe, " but that the ſixteen Scotch Peers being admitted " to ſit therein, would more effectually be ſo, " eſpecially in any future Debates relating to the " Church, towards which they could no ways be " ſuppos'd to be well affected; and therefore he was " humbly of Opinion that ſome Proviſion might " be made for debarring them of their Votes in " any Church Matters that ſhould come in Agita- " tion." I would have deſir'd this Reverend Prelate, had he been in any other Place, to have explain'd what he meant by Church Matters. All the Definitions of a Church which I have met with in ancient and modern Writings center in this; That it is a Congregation of Chriſtians met together to worſhip God in Spirit and Truth. Conſequently all Church Matters muſt conſiſt of Acts of Devotion and Charity, of Praying, Preaching, Adminiſtring the Sacraments, of Almsgiving and the like; if there are any Matters not of this Nature to come into Debate, to call them Church is a Miſnomer and ſome other Terms ſhould in Propriety of Speech be made uſe of; not but the Laws of the Land can annex Rights and Privileges to any Societies or Faculties, and Obedience to the Laws is a Duty where Conſcience is not invaded. All that is meant by this Remark on the Biſhop's Speech, is to ſhew that his Expreſſion of Church Matters cannot refer to Acts of Devotion and Charity; for he could not ſuppoſe the Scots Peers would not be well-affected to ſuch Things, let their Affections be ever ſo little turn'd towards Temporals in Matters Spiritual.

The Church again brought into the Queſtion.

Lord Haverſham of Occaſional Conformity.

The Lord Halifax, the Lord Somers and others, made very pertinent Anſwers to all Objections as to the 22d Article, which was approv'd by a Majority of 71 Voices againſt 22; the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, the Lord North and Grey, the Lord Leigh, the Earl of Rocheſter and the Lord Guilford enter'd their Proteſts againſt this Article.

The three laſt Articles were read and approv'd with little Oppoſition; the Earl of Abington mov'd that the Judges Opinion might be ask'd, what Laws would be repeal'd by this Union, and what would remain in Force; but that Motion was rejected. Then the Earl of Nottingham ſtood up and begg'd their Lordſhips Pardon for having troubled them " almoſt to every Article, excuſing " himſelf however, by urging they were ſuch ma- " terial Objections occurring to him, as in Con- " ſcience he thought himſelf oblig'd to lay before " the Houſe; that as Sir John Maynard made this " Complaint to the late King at the Revolution, " that having buried upon Account of his great Age, " all his Contemporaries in Weſtminſter-Hall, he " was afraid, if his Majeſty had not come in that " Juncture of Time, he might have likewiſe out- " liv'd the very Laws; ſo if this Union did paſs,

Lord Notting- ham's Objections,

A.D.1707. " as he had no reaſon to doubt but it would moſt " certainly paſs, he might with as much reaſon, " and as juſtly affirm, He had outliv'd all the Laws " and the very Conſtitution of England. See how little this agrees with the Opinion of all the Judges given upon the firſt Article: They could not conceive that it any ways alter'd or impair'd the Conſtitution of this Realm, whoſe Laws in their Opinion muſt remain entirely the ſame, as well after as before the Union, except ſuch as were altogether inconſiſtent with, and directly contrary thereto.

Anſwer'd by the Judges.

Three Days after, February 27, the Biſhop of Salisbury reported to the Lords Houſe the Reſolutions of their grand Committee, approving the Treaty of Union, which were agreed to by a great Majority.

The Earl of Abington, the Lord Leigh, the Lord North and Grey, the Lord Guilford, enter'd their Proteſts againſt the laſt Article.

Mr. William Bromley made a Motion in the Houſe of Commons, for a Clauſe to be inſerted in the Bill for the Union to continue the two Univerſities of England for ever, as by Law now eſtabliſh'd, which was agreed to. Sir Roger Moſtyn mov'd that a Clauſe might be inſerted in the ſame Bill in favour of the Convocation as part of the Conſtitution, which Motion was rejected, and put the greateſt Part of the Houſe into a pleaſant Humour.

Sir Roger Moſtyn puts the Houſe in a pleaſant Humour.

The Bill for an Union between the two Kingdoms of England and Scotland paſt the Commons by a Majority of 274 againſt 160 who were for rejecting it, and was ſent to the Lords March 1, by the Honourable Spencer Compton, Eſq;. The Lords gave it a quick Diſpatch; but on the third Reading of it, the Lord North and Grey, out of an Extremity of Zeal for the Church of England, which was transfer'd afterwards to the Pretender, notwithſtanding he had moſt religiouſly abjur'd him, offer'd a Rider to be added to it, importing, that nothing in this Ratification contain'd, ſhould be conſtrued to extend to an Approbation or Acknowledgment of the Truth of the Presbyterian way of Worſhip, or allowing the Religion of the Church of Scotland to be what it was ſtiled, the true Proteſtant Religion. One would not think it poſſible to live many Years in a Chriſtian and Proteſtant Country, and be no better inform'd of the Religion of it than the Lord North and Grey ſeem'd to be. After a Debate the Queſtion was put whether the ſaid Rider ſhould be read a ſecond Time, and it was carry'd in the Negative by 55 Voices againſt 29. Several Members enter'd their Diſſent, as the Duke of Beaufort, Duke of Buckinghamſhire, the Lord North and Grey, the Earl of Winchelſea, the Earl of Angleſey, the Earl of Nottingham, the Lord Granville, the Lord Guernſey, the Lord Guildford, the Lord Stawell, the Lord Weymouth, the Lord Leigh, and one Biſhop, Dr. George Hooper, Biſhop of Bath and Wells.

Then the Queſtion was put, whether the Bill ſhould paſs, which was reſolv'd in the Affirmative by a great Majority, and only theſe following enter'd their Diſſent.

Lords Proteſt againſt the Union.

Duke of Beaufort,	Earl of Scarſdale,
Duke of Buckinghamſhire	Lord Weymouth,
Earl of Nottingham,	Lord Guernſey,
Earl of Angleſey,	Lord Stawell,
Earl of Thanet,	Lord Guilford,
Earl of Winchelſea,	Lord Granville,
Earl of Northampton,	Lord Leigh.

On the 6th of March the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to An Act for an Union of the two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, which done ſhe ſpoke to this Effect.

A.D.1707.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

IT is with the greateſt Satisfaction that I have given my Aſſent to a Bill for Uniting England and Scotland into one Kingdom.

I conſider this Union as a Matter of the greateſt Importance to the Wealth, Strength and Safety of the whole Iſland; and at the ſame time, as a Work of ſo much Difficulty and Nicety in its own Nature, that till now, all Attempts which have been made towards it in the Courſe of above 100 Years, have prov'd ineffectual; and therefore I make no doubt but it will be remember'd and ſpoke of hereafter to the Honour of thoſe that have been inſtrumental in bringing it to ſuch a happy Concluſion.

I deſire and expect from all my Subjects of both Nations, that from henceforth they act with all poſſible Reſpect and Kindneſs to one another; that ſo it may appear to all the World, they have Hearts diſpos'd to become one People; this will be a great Pleaſure to me, and will make us all quickly ſenſible of the good Effect of this UNION. And I cannot but look upon it as a peculiar Happineſs, that in my Reign ſo full a Proviſion is made for the Peace and Quiet of my People, and for the Security of our Religion, by ſo firm an Eſtabliſhment of the Proteſtant Succeſſion throughout Great-Britain.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons.

I take this Occaſion to remind you of making effectual Proviſion for the Payment of the Equivalent to Scotland within the time appointed by this Act; and I am perſwaded you will ſhew as much Readineſs in this particular, as you have done in all the Parts of this GREAT WORK.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The Seaſon of the Year being now pretty far advanc'd, I hope you will continue the ſame Zeal which has appear'd throughout this Seſſion in diſpatching what yet remains unfiniſh'd of the publick Buſineſs before you.

The Articles of the Union are printed in ſo many hiſtorical Collections, and are ſo generally known, that I have enter'd upon them no more than was neceſſary to explain the Debates about them in Parliament. The two Houſes addreſs'd her Majeſty with their moſt hearty Thanks for her gracious Approbation of the Share they had in bringing the Treaty of Union to a happy Concluſion, a Work that ſeem'd deſign'd by Providence to add new Luſtre to the Glories of her Majeſties Reign.

The Commons went immediately upon a Supply for the Equivalent abovemention'd, and a Bill for it was ready for the Royal Aſſent three Weeks after.

The Houſe of Commons addreſs'd the Queen about reſettling the Iſland of Nevis and St. Chriſtophers, which had ſuffer'd much by the French, as by Accounts from thence publiſh'd in the Gazette.

The French came from Martenico with 5 Men of War and 20 Sloops to St. Chriſtophers, and made a Deſcent in March 1706; being repuls'd in their Attack of the Caſtle, they fell in among the Plantations, ſome of which they burnt, and plunder'd the Inhabitants; but the Governor of Barbadoes upon Notice of it ſent down a Sloop to the Governor of St. Chriſtophers, to acquaint him there was a ſtrong Squadron of Engliſh Men of War coming to his Aſſiſtance; which News being convey'd to the French had the intended Effect, for they no ſooner heard of it, than they quitted the Iſland, taking away with them about 300 Negroes. From thence they went to Nevis, where they landed their Troops, and the Inhabitants being over-power'd by Numbers retir'd to the Mountains; the Enemy marching thither too, attacks them, they beat beat a Parley, and a Capitulation was concluded the next Day, March 24, by which they were to be Priſoners of War, but to remain in the Iſland, and procuring a like Number of French Priſoners, to be releas'd by way of Exchange, either in America or Europe; and in the mean time they were to be civilly us'd and their Houſes and Sugar Works preſerv'd; but the French broke the Capitulation in ſeveral Reſpects, treating them moſt barbarouſly, and burning their Houſes and Sugar Works, and by Threats and ill Uſage forc'd many of them to form a ſecond Agreement the 6th of April, promiſing the Enemy in ſix Months time to ſend to Martineco a certain Number of Negroes, or Money in Lieu thereof, after which they left the Iſland. The Commander and other Officers of this Squadron, gave ſo little content to the French Court by their Conduct in this Expedition, that they were put under Arreſt upon their arrival in France.

A.D. 1707. Nevis taken by the French.

The Marquis of Carmarthen having offer'd to go with a ſmall Squadron of Men of War to Madagaſcar, to ſuppreſs the Pyrates there, who were become very troubleſome and dangerous to the Navigation in thoſe Parts, the Commons appointed a Committee to conſider that Matter; and it was Reſolv'd to preſent an humble Addreſs to her Majeſty to take into her Royal Conſideration how the ſaid Pyrates might be ſuppreſs'd; and another that ſhe would be pleas'd to uſe her Endeavours to recover and preſerve the ancient Poſſeſſions, Trade and Fiſhery in Newfoundland.

About a Fortnight after, April the 24th, her Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers and clos'd the Seſſion with this Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I Return you my hearty Thanks for the great Zeal and Affection which you have ſhewn for my Service, and the Publick Good, in the ſeveral Affairs which have been before you, eſpecially in that of the UNION with Scotland, which, I doubt not, will prove a laſting Bleſſing to this Iſland.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

I am to thank you in particular, for the great Diſpatch you have made in providing the largeſt and moſt effectual Supplies that have ever been given to the Crown, for the current Service, in any one Seſſion of Parliament.

I am very much concern'd that the Publick Occaſions require the raiſing of ſuch great Sums from my People. I will take Care they ſhall be apply'd to the Uſes for which they are given; and I hope, by God's Bleſſing, we may obtain Advantages from them, anſwerable to ſo great an Expence.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

It is proper for me, before we part, to communicate to you, that I think it expedient that the Lords of Parliament of England, and Commons of the preſent Parliament of England, ſhould be the Members of the reſpective Houſes of the firſt Parliament of Great Britain, for and on the Part of England; and therefore I intend, within the Time limited, to publiſh a Proclamation for that Purpoſe, purſuant to the Power given me by the Acts of Parliament of both Kingdoms, ratifying the Treaty of Union. And after we have ſo fully compleated this great Work, I aſſure my ſelf, that when you return to your ſeveral Countries, you will omit no Opportunity of making my Subjects ſenſible of the Security, and the other great and laſting Benefits they may reaſonably expect from this happy Union.

This will conduce very much to make it prove ſo, and be a good Preparation to the Succeſs of our next Meeting, when, I hope, we ſhall all join our ſincere and hearty Endeavours to promote the Welfare and Proſperity of Great Britain.

A.D. 1707.

Addreſſes and Thankſgivings for the Union.

The firſt of May, when the Union was to Commence, was, by Proclamation, appointed for a general Thankſgiving for the happy Concluſion of it. To congratulate which, Addreſſes were preſented to her Majeſty from all Parts of the Kingdom.

But Mr. William Bromley, who had taken ſo much Care of his Univerſity of Oxford, as to have it made a Part of the Conſtitution, by a Clauſe in the Act of Union, could not prevail on himſelf, and the Oxonians whom he repreſented, to make her Majeſty any Compliment upon it; which, and the Silence of the Scots, was hinted in the Addreſs from Brackley in Northamptonſhire, wherein are theſe Expreſſions; After the little Notice that had hitherto been taken of the Union, by thoſe who enjoy'd the greateſt Share of it, at leaſt an Equivalent of the Advantage, they had ſome Thoughts of not diſturbing her Majeſty at this Time, in her great Concernments for the Liberties of all Europe, had they not been afraid, leſt the Malice of the World ſhould have unjuſtly tack'd them to ſome of her Majeſty's miſtaken Subjects, who by their Silence in not addreſſing, had ſufficiently declar'd their Diſlike of what her Majeſty had own'd her greateſt Pleaſure and Satisfaction. Major-General Mordaunt was Burgeſs for Brackley, and the Stile of the Addreſs is not unlike his way of expreſſing himſelf in Parliament.

The Men of Brackley blame the Men of Oxford.

French Refugees Addreſs the Queen.

The French Refugees, by private Direction of the Biſhop of Salisbury, and ſome Perſons in Power, preſented an Addreſs and Petition to the Queen, "moſt humbly to beſeech her Majeſty, "that when her Thoughts ſhould be employ'd in "ſettling the great Concerns of Europe, in a "Treaty of Peace, her Majeſty would graciouſly "vouchſafe to take into her Royal Care, the In"tereſt of the poor diſtreſſed Churches of France, "which having been ruin'd by the Superſtition "and Vanity of the Enemy, ſo it would add to "the ſolid Glory of her Majeſty's Reign, to be "inſtrumental in reſtoring the ſame." The Queen was pleas'd to tell them, She always had a great Compaſſion for the unhappy Circumſtances of the perſecuted Proteſtants of France; that ſhe would communicate her Thoughts upon this Matter to her Allies, and ſhe hop'd ſuch Meaſures might be taken, as might effectually anſwer the Intent of their Petition. But notwithſtanding Biſhop Robinſon was one of her Plenipotentiaries for the Treaty of Peace at Utrecht, the Refugees might with as good Reaſon have expected Relief from the Miniſtry in France, as from the Miniſtry in England, at the Time of that Treaty. For though Mr. Henry St. John, then Secretary of State, was the great Grandſon of Oliver St. John, Cromwel's Chief-Juſtice, commonly call'd his Dark Lanthorn, and had been well Lectur'd by his Grandmother, and her Confeſſor Daniel Burgeſs, in the Presbyterian Way, yet no body queſtion'd but he would have ſacrific'd not only the Proteſtants of France, but of England, and all Chriſtendom, to their Perſecutor, Lewis the XIVth, rather than have delay'd the Concluſion of that hateful Treaty one Moment.

The Queen's Anſwer.

Removes. P. 288.

The Annaliſt ſays, "About the middle of "April, the Earl of Stamford, the Lord Herbert "of Cherbury, Robert Monkton, and John Pultney, Eſquires, were made Commiſſioners of "Trade and Plantations, in the Room of the "Lord Viſcount Weymouth, who reſign'd; of "William Blaithwaite, John Pollexfen, and Mat"thew Prior, Eſquires, who were laid aſide, as "too

A.D 1707. " too ſtrongly byaſs'd to High-Church. Sir Simon " Harcourt was made Attorney-General, in the " Room of Sir Edward Northey; Sir James " Montague, Sollicitor-General, in the Room of " Sir Simon Harcourt; and Spencer Compton, Eſq; " Treaſurer, and Receiver-General to Prince " George of Denmark, and Paymaſter to her Ma- " jeſty's Penſioners, in the Room of Mr. Ni- " cholas.

The Queen at St. Paul's on the Union.

On the 8th of May, the Queen went in great State and Solemnity to St. Paul's Cathedral, to celebrate the Thankſgiving for the Union; and three Days after, ſhe in Council declar'd William Lord Cowper, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, and about the ſame Time made theſe Military Promotions.

Lord Cowper made Lord High-Chancellor of Great Britain.

Military Promotions.

The Brigadiers-General How, Mordaunt, Brudenell, Farrington and Shrimpton, were advanc'd to the Poſt of Major-Generals; Colonel Davenport, Thomas Pulteney, Eſq; William Villiers, Eſq; George Kellum, Eſq; Thomas Crowther, Eſq; and Bartholomew Ogilvie, Eſq; were made Brigadiers-General of her Majeſty's Forces.

On the 17th of May, William Douglas, Eſq; Alexander Widderburn, Eſq; John Montgomery, Eſq; and David Roſs, Eſq; were appointed Commiſſioners for the Exciſe in Scotland.

The Queen Mediates for Count Patkul, but in vain.

Andrew Metueof, Ambaſſador Extraordinory from the Emperor of Ruſſia, deliver'd a Letter to her Majeſty from that Monarch, complaining of King Auguſtus's Non-Performance of Treaties with him; particularly in making a diſhonourable Peace with the King of Sweden, and delivering up to him Count Patkul, the Czar's Miniſter, and General, as a Swediſh Deſerter, contrary to the Law of Nations; and deſiring her Britannick Majeſty's good Offices to procure the ſaid Count's Liberty; which the Queen did accordingly make Uſe of, but in vain: For Charles the XIIth of Sweden, caus'd that Count to be broken Alive upon the Wheel; an Act ſo barbarous and bloody, that had his Pretences to Heroiſm been much better founded than they were, they could not have wip'd off the Stain which that unchriſtian and inhuman Action has left on his Memory.

King of Sweden's Cruelty.

As it was ſeveral Years before the Republick of Venice ſent Ambaſſadors to congratulate King William on his Acceſſion to the Throne, ſo was it before they paid the like Compliment to Queen Anne, of whom their Ambaſſadors, the Chevaliers Erizzo and Piſani, had their firſt Publick Audience May the 22d.

Her Majeſty having by her Proclamation of the 29th of April, declar'd, " The Lords and Com- " mons of the preſent Parliament of England, to " be the Members of the reſpective Houſes of the " firſt Parliament of Great Britain, for and on " the Part of England, did by her Proclamation " of the 5th of June, declare her Pleaſure for " holding the firſt Parliament of Great Britain at " Weſtminſter, on the 23d of October next.

On the ſame Day the Duke of Queensbeery was ſworn of her Privy-Council, and on the 6th of June, the following Perſons were made,

Commiſſioners for managing the Equivalent due to Scotland.

Commiſſioners for the Equivalent.

Sir Andrew Hume.
William Dalrymple of Glenmure, Eſq;
Sir Robert Sinclair of Stevenſon.
Sir Thomas Burnet of Leys.
Sir John Arskine of Alvay.
Sir James Campbel of Aberurhill.
Sir John Swinton of Swinton.
Sir James Smollet of Bowhill.
Sir Patrick Johnſtoun.
Sir Francis Grant.
George Baillie of Jerviſwood.
John Halden of Glenargies.
John Bruce of Kinroſe.
William Seton of Pitmeden, Jun.
John Clark of Pennycock, Jun.
Alexander Abercrombie of Glaſſock.
Mungo Graham of Gorthie.
John Pringle of Hayning.
John Graham of Dougalſton.
——— Douglas of Kellhead.
Daniel Campbel of Arntennet, Eſqs;
Sir John Cope.
Jacob Reynardſon, Eſq;
John Bridges, Eſq;
James Houblon, Eſq;

Mr. Walpole, Eſq; made one of the Prince's Council for the Admiralty.

As the Lord Keeper of the Great-Seal of England had been declar'd Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, ſo the Lord High-Treaſurer of England was appointed Lord High-Treaſurer of Great Britain. His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Denmark took the Oath in the Court of Chancery, as Lord High-Admiral of Great Britain, and by a new Commiſſion, appointed Sir David Mitchel, George Churchil, Eſq; Robert Walpole, Eſq; and Sir Stafford Fairborne, to be of his Council in the Affairs of the Admirilty.

Earl of Pembroke holds a Parliament in Ireland.

The Earl of Pembroke being appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, held the Parliament at Dublin, to whom he made a Speech the 7th of July, importing, among other Things, " That the " Queen conſidering the Number of Papiſts in " that Kingdom, would be glad of any Expedi- " ent to ſtrengthen the Intereſt of her Proteſtant " Subjects. Then having taken Notice of the " Care that ſhould be taken for the Security of " the Kingdom, by ſupplying the Room of the " abſent Regiments with others, and that he did " not doubt but the Commons would provide Sup- " plies for them, and for defraying the Expence " of the Government: He added, he ſhould " think himſelf extreamly happy, if during his " Adminiſtration, all Matters ſhould be conducted " with that Temper and Prudence, as might juſtly " entitle them to the Continuance of her Maje- " ſty's Affections."

The Annaliſt ſays, " Both Lords and Com- " mons preſented their reſpective Congratulatory " Addreſſes to the Queen on the Accompliſhment " of the great Work of uniting England and " Scotland." The Author of the Reign of Queen Anne, a Continuation of Coke, writes, " Both " Lords and Commons hereupon Addreſſing her " Majeſty, I cannot conceive how the firſt of " them ſhould overlook congratulating her upon " the late Union of the Kingdoms of England and " Scotland, a Matter ſhe ſo much valued her ſelf " upon; but the other not only touch'd very " handſomely upon the Glory ſhe had acquir'd by " accompliſhing it, but hinted at a much more " comprehenſive Union." And her Majeſty ſaid in Anſwer, they might be ſure, Nothing ſhould be wanting to make the Union of all her Subjects as extenſive as poſſible. Some imagin'd this Hint in the Commons Addreſs, related to a Comprehenſion in Matters of Religion; but others more reaſonably ſuppos'd, that by their comprehenſive Union, they meant the Uniting of that Kindom, as well as Seotland, with England, and forming the three Kingdoms into one, of Great Britain and Ireland. The Houſe of Commons having appointed a Committee to inſpect the publick Accounts, we ſhall ſee by their Report, what Havock the Iriſh Truſtees made in that Kingdom; and what Service High-Church did the Publick, by ſending Mr. John Trenchard,

A.D.1707. Trenchard and his Brethren into Ireland, to deſtroy all King William's Grants. This Committee having made their Report, the Houſe, Reſolv'd, That this Kingdom hath been put to exceſſive Charge, by Means of great Arrears of Rent return'd by the late Truſtees, to be due out of the Forfeited Eſtates of this Kingdom: And that moſt of the ſaid Arrerages return'd appear to be unjuſt Charges on the Subjects, and falſe Returns. What admirable Cato's are produc'd by Faction and Clamour? by Receipts under the Hand of the Truſtees, or their Receivers or Entries in their own Books.

That an humble Repreſentation be laid before her Majeſty, of the great Charge and Preſſure the Kingdom lies under by the ſaid falſe Returns, and ſeveral other the oppreſſive Proceedings of the late Truſtees.

The Houſe alſo Reſolv'd, That it would greatly conduce to the Relief of the Poor, and the Good of that Kingdom, that the Inhabitants ſhould uſe no other than their own Manufactures in their Apparel, and the Furniture of their Houſes; and all the Members mutually agreed and engag'd their Honours to each other, that they would conform to the ſaid Reſolution.

The Commons having granted the neceſſary Supplies, and the ſeveral Bills they were upon being ready for the Royal Aſſent, the Lord Lieutenant gave it to

An Act for Regiſtring Lands, Deeds, &c.

An Act to explain an Act to prevent Papiſts being Sollicitors.

An Act for explaining and limiting the Privileges of Parliament.

An Act for the more effectual preventing and taking away, and marrying Children againſt the Wills of their Parents.

And ſeveral other Acts publick and private.

Tho' the Campaigns were every-where leſs glorious to the Engliſh, than any one had been yet in this Reign; yet we ſhall find ſome of their Actions, even thoſe that were not crown'd with Succeſs, very well worth the Remembrance of the preſent and future Ages.

About the 8th of February, Earl Rivers arriv'd at Alicant, with the Forces under his Command, conſiſting of,

Earl Rivers arrives at Alicant with his Army.

A Detachment of Brigadier Carpenter and Lord Eſſex's Dragoons.
The French Dragoons.
Colonel Hill's Regiment of Foot.
Colonel Watkins's.
Sir Charles Hotham's.
Lord Mark Kerr's.
Count Naſſau's.
Colonel Sybourg's.
Colonel Bloſſet's.
Major-General Farrington's.
Brigadier Maccartney's.
Lord Mordaunt's.
Two Battalions of Marines.
A Body of Dutch Forces, commanded by Brigadier Liſlemarais.

Making in all 13352 Men, ſuppoſing the ſeveral Corps compleat.

A powerful Reinforcement, and ſuch as might very well encourage the Confederate Generals to reſolve on an Offenſive War. The Earl of Galway, though he had then receiv'd a new Commiſſion to command all the Queen's Forces, both in Spain and Portugal, offer'd Lord Rivers the Command of the Army, for the Reaſons mention'd in the following Agreement, and Earl Rivers ſoon after return'd to England: It being agreed upon between the Earls of Galway and Rivers, Mr. Stanhope being preſent, that it would be better for her Majeſty's Service, that there ſhould be no more than one General, upon which the Earl of Galway generouſly offer'd the Command to Earl Rivers, which he refus'd, in Conſideration of the Earl of Galway's greater Experience, more eſpecially in the Affairs of Spain and Portugal, and therefore willingly reſign'd the whole to the Earl of Galway, in order to return to England. And they farther agreed to the annex'd Liſt of General and Staff-Officers. A.D.1707.

RIVERS.
GALWAY.

At the Council of War, where the Operations of the enſuing Campaign were ſettled, it was unanimouſly agreed to march to Madrid, by the way of Arragon, and the King of Spain promis'd to join the Army there; but as every one thought it unreaſonable to leave the poor Kingdom of Valencia, which had ſhewn ſo much Zeal for his Catholick Majeſty, expos'd, it was reſolv'd, before the Troops began their intended March to Madrid, they ſhould deſtroy all the Enemies Magazines, and ruin their Frontiers bordering upon Valencia, that they might be leſs able to harraſs the Country with their Parties. But the Earl of Galway's Narrative being the beſt Authority we can have for this Affair, we will take it entire.

" For the better Execution of what had been " reſolv'd for our March through Valencia and " Arragon, proper Commiſſaries and Officers " were diſpatch'd, to provide Bread and Forage " ſufficient for the Troops in all Places where it " was deſign'd the Army ſhould paſs. I went " with the Marquis das Minas to the Frontiers, " towards the latter end of March, and we took " the Field the beginning of April.

" We ruin'd the Country bordering on the " Frontiers of Valencia, before the Enemy could " join their Troops; particularly Yecla, where they " had their largeſt Magazines; and judging it ne- " ceſſary to take the Caſtle of Vaillena, to prevent " the Enemy from being Maſters of one of the moſt " conſiderable Inlets into the Kingdom of Valen- " cia, we ſat down before that Place, but it " prov'd ſtronger than we expected; and after " we had ſpent ſome Days there, we had Notice " the Enemy had aſſembled their Troops at " Almanza.

Earl of Galway's Reaſons for fighting at Almanza.

" Upon this Advice a Council of War was " held, where it was unanimouſly reſolv'd to fight " the Enemy; which we were the farther induc'd " to, becauſe it was judg'd impoſſible to ſubſiſt up- " on the Defenſive in the Kingdom of Valencia; " for that Country had already been ſo much ex- " hauſted by our Winter-Quarters, there was not " two Days Proviſion to be had for the Army; " and we could not have been able to have ſub- " ſiſted ſo long as we did, but for the Supplies we " found in the Enemies Magazines at Yecla: Nor " did we think it proper to purſue the once in- " tended March through that Kingdom and Ar- " ragon, leſt Proviſions ſhould be wanting, lea- " ving the Enemy ſo near, and in a Condition to " follow us. For though Commiſſaries had been " employ'd, there was Reaſon to apprehend the " Towns we were to paſs through, would ſhut " their Gates againſt us, whilſt we were cloſely " follow'd by the Enemy, and perſecuted by the " Peaſants of the Country, who growing deſpe- " rate by ſeeing themſelves abandon'd, would na- " turally be up in Arms in the Mountains. Be-

A.D.1707. " ſides, we had certain Advice that there was al-
" ready a Body of French Troops, conſiſting of " Eight thouſand Men in Spain, and upon their
" March to reinforce the Enemy. Thus as the " Army muſt inevitably have periſh'd without
" Fighting, 'twas thought reaſonable to run the " Hazard of a Battel, wherein we had an equal
" Chance to come off Victors.

But though all the Earl of Galway's other Reaſons for engaging are unanſwerable, the laſt was certainly a very raſh one, for the Chance was not equal; the Confederate Army, conſiſting of but Four thouſand five hundred Horſe, and Eleven thouſand Foot, in all Fifteen thouſand ſix hundred; and the Spaniſh and French Army under the Duke of Berwick, were Thirty-nine thouſand.

Confederate Army.

53 Squadrons of Horſe and Dragoons, } not com-
42 Battalions of Foot, } pleat.

French Army.

76 Squadrons, } effective.
54 Battalions, }

The proper Diſpoſitions being made, the Earl of Galway march'd about three a Clock in the Afternoon, April the 25th, N. S. at the Head of the Engliſh Dragoons, to begin the Battel with the Enemies Right Wing of Horſe: And from the beginning to the end of the Fight, the French behav'd like Troops that were ſpirited by the Superiority of their Numbers, being at leaſt two to one of the Confederate Army. The Spaniards having placed ſome Guns on an Eminence, from whence they fir'd upon the Engliſh, Colonel Dormer was detach'd with ſome Dragoons to attack that Battery, which the Spaniards quitted at his Approach. As ſoon as the Engliſh Dragoons were come within a hundred Paces of the Enemies Horſe, they advanc'd out of their Lines to meet the Charge, and the Engagement was very obſtinate and bloody on both Sides. The Spaniards, by the Weight of their ſtronger Squadrons, forc'd the Engliſh to retreat fifty Paces; but Colonel Southwel's and Colonel Wade's Regiments of Foot coming up, gave their Fire on the Enemies Flank and Rear, and the Confederate Cavalry at the ſame Time renewing their Charge on the Front, drove the Enemy in Diſorder through their own Lines, with great Slaughter: By this Time the Engliſh and Dutch Foot, under the Command of Lieutenant-General Erle, and Monſieur Freiſheim, were warmly engag'd in the Center, and broke through the Enemies firſt and ſecond Lines, bearing down all before them, even to the Walls of Almanza: But the Enemies Squadrons of the ſecond Line falling in on the Flank of the Confederate Infantry, drove them back with great Loſs; upon which Colonel Hill's, and Lord Mark Kerr's Regiments, which had been interlin'd with the Horſe, march'd up and attack'd the Spaniards, to favour their Retreat. Hitherto what Advantage was gain'd, was rather on the Confederate Side, than on the French and Spaniards; but the latter obſerving the Portugueſe Cavalry on the Right of the Allies, did not advance with their Left Wing, they detach'd ſome Squadrons to attack them, which they did with ſo much Vigor, that the whole Right Wing of the Portugueſe Horſe being broken with the firſt Charge, made off with Precipitation, and abandon'd their Infantry, who being ſurrounded, were moſt of them kill'd, or taken Priſoners. In the mean time, the Battel continu'd on the Confederate Left Wing, the Spaniards ſtill charging with freſh Squadrons, without Succeſs; for the Engliſh and Portugueſe Horſe, favour'd by the Fire of the Engliſh Battalions, broke the Enemy, who retir'd to a riſing Ground in the Rear of their Lines, but could not be brought to Charge again; upon which the Enemy ſent for nine Battalions, moſt of them French, commanded by the Chevalier d' Hasfeld, who drew them up before the front Line of Horſe, in Oppoſition to the Engliſh Brigades of Foot, which conſiſted of Colonel Southwel's, Colonel Blood's, Colonel Wade's, and Lord Mountjoy's Regiments, reinforc'd by Lieutenant-General Stewart's from the ſecond Line; at the ſame Time the Enemy brought up ſeveral freſh Squadrons, to make another Charge on the Confederate Left Wing of Horſe, who had ſuffer'd very much, and loſt moſt of the Officers that commanded the Squadrons Brigadier Carpenter being the only one that remain'd unhurt. In this Condition the Confederate Horſe were no longer able to ſuſtain the Charge of the Spaniards; and at the ſame Time the nine French Battalions attacking the Engliſh Brigades of Foot in Front and Flank, entirely broke them: The two French Regiments that fell in upon their Flank, being too far advanc'd, Sir Charles O Hara, made Lord Tyrawley, order'd Lieutenant-Colonel Roper, who commanded Major-General Harvey's Horſe, to attack them, which was done with ſo much Bravery, that they broke them, and made them beg for Quarter; but the Spaniſh Cavalry coming up to their Aſſiſtanee, the Enemy had nothing now to do, but to ſurround the Confederate Foot who were broke on the Plain, and to whom, for ſome Time, they gave no Quarter. In this deſperate State Major-General Shrimpton, Brigadier Maccartney, Colonel Britton, Colonel Hill, and ſeveral other Officers, aſſembled the Stragglers of the Engliſh Regiments into a Body, join'd ſome Dutch and Portugueſe, who had been rally'd by Count Dhona, and Don Juan Emanuel, and forming a Body of near Four thouſand Men, retreated to the Hills of Candette, two Leagues from the Field of Battel, though purſu'd by the Enemy's Horſe. The Earl of Galway expos'd his Perſon in this Engagement, more than was commendable in a Commander in Chief, on whoſe Life the Preſervation of the Army he commanded ſo much depended: He was ſo cloſely engag'd with the Enemy's Horſe, that he receiv'd two Cuts in the Face, near the Right Eye, which for ſome Time made him uncapable of acting; but having got his Wounds bound up, he return'd to the Fight, and again expos'd himſelf to the like Peril, amidſt the thickeſt of the Enemy; and the Rewards he had from the Tories in England afterwards, when they had got the Queen on their Side, to which ſhe always inclin'd, were Accuſations, Examinations, Diſgrace and Reproach. His Lordſhip being overpower'd, had been ſurrounded by the Enemy, had he not been forc'd, by thoſe about him, to provide for his own Safety, with a ſmall Party of Carpenter's and Guiſcard's Dragoons: Brigadier Killigrew being wounded in the firſt Onſet, ſtill kept the Field, and was kill'd in a ſecond Charge. Lieutenant-Colonel Roper, of Major-General Harvey's Horſe; Lieutenant-Colonel Laurence, of Brigadier Carpenter's Dragoons; Lieutenant-Colonel Dormer, of Lord Eſſex's, and Lieutenant-Colonel Green, of Lord Peterborough's, were kill'd at the Head of their reſpective Squadrons, after having behav'd with great Intrepidity, Colonel Pierce, and Mr. Hara, Lord Tyrawley's Son, were wounded. Of the Foot, Lieutenant Auſtin of the Guards, Lieutenant-Colonel Mack-Neal, of Colonel Southwell's Regiment; Lieutenant-Colonel Woollet, and Lieutenant-Colonel Withers, of Blood's; Lieutenant-Colonel Ramſey, of Maccartney's;

A.D.1707.

He is defeated there.

Engliſh Officers kill'd and wounded.

A.D.1707. cartney's; Colonel Areskine, and Lieutenant-Colonel Areskine, of Lord Mark Kerr's, were among the Slain; Lord Mark Kerr was wounded in the Arm, and Colonel Clayton in the Body. Of the Dutch, the Regiments of Welderen and Cavalier ſuffer'd moſt; Colonel Cavalier himſelf gave repeated Proofs of that Courage, by which he had before acquir'd great Reputation in the Cevennes: He receiv'd ſeveral Wounds, and having lain ſome Time among the Slain, made his Eſcape, by the Favour of an Horſe given him by an Engliſh Officer. Mr. Prat, his Lieutenant-Colonel, five Captains, ſix Lieutenants, and five Enſigns of his Regiment were kill'd, and moſt of the other Officers wounded, or taken Priſoners.

The Turks, and the Populace generally judge by Succeſs, which is baſe and ungrateful. The Battel of Almanza was as well order'd, and as well fought, as any in this War: And had not the Miſbehaviour of ſome of the Confederate Officers, after it was over, made the Victory entire on the Enemies Side, their Loſs in the Battel would have given the Confederates no Room to object to it.

My Lord Galway ſays in his Narrative, "The "Cavalry of the Allies, and part of the Foot, "join'd again at Alcira, and retir'd to Tortoſa:" Why were they not join'd alſo by Count Dhona, and Major-General Shrimpton, with the Four thouſand Men who retreated to the Hills of Candette? The Annaliſt writes, "The Spaniards would have "had little Reaſon to boaſt of their Victory, had "the Infantry that retir'd to the Hills of Can- "dette, march'd off in the Night, as they might "ſecurely have done; but Count Dhona, and "Major-General Shrimpton, upon a falſe Report "that the Enemy were ſurrounding them, ſent "Major Alexander of Briton's, and Major Petit of "Torſay's Regiment, to the Enemies Camp, with "a Propoſal to ſurrender Priſoners at Diſcretion, "which the Duke of Berwick readily accepted. "Don Emanuel, Brother to the Count de Atalaja, "would have no Share in ſo diſhonourable a Ca-"pitulation; and to ſhew how eaſily it might "have been avoided, retir'd with a few Portu- "gueſe Horſe; as did alſo a Serjeant of Viſonſe's "Regiment, with about eighty Men.

The Earl of Galway retir'd from Alcira, where he left a Gariſon, to Tortoſa, and finding the Enemy had croſs'd the Ebro, his Lordſhip ſays in "his Narrative, I endeavour'd, by oppoſing their "Paſſage over the Cinca, to amuſe them 'till the "latter end of the Campaign: Mean Time, with "great Expedition, I gather'd the broken Remains "of the Foot, out of which I form'd five Batta-lions, and rais'd four more of Catalans, with which he made a Stand againſt a victorious Enemy, and preſerv'd the Principality of Catalonia entire, except Lerida.

The Duke of Orleans came and took upon him the Command of the Spaniſh and French Armies, the Day after the Battel, and marching into Arragon, found no Oppoſition in that Kingdom, which made their Submiſſion; as did Valencia; and both were treated as Frenchmen and Spaniards are wont to treat ſuch as are in their Power, after having endeavour'd to get out of it. The Duke of Berwick march'd after the Earl of Galway towards Tortoſa, but the Earl had caus'd the Bridge there to be ſo well fortify'd, and it was ſo well defended by the Forces he left there for that Purpoſe, that the Duke of Berwick's Army was twice repuls'd with conſiderable Loſs: Nor was there any Thing loſt in Valencia but the open Country, with Alcira and Xativa, two little fortify'd Places.

General Stanhope's good Treaty of Commerce with Spain.

Nothing elſe conſiderable happen'd this Year in Spain, except the Treaty Brigadier-General Stanhope concluded with that King; one Article of which was, That 'the Subjects of Great Britain ſhould have the ſame Privileges, and the ſame Liberty of a free Trade to the Indies, as the Subjects of Spain ſhould enjoy, &c. And, That the Subjects of Great Britain might bring and import into the Dominions of Spain, all Sorts of Goods, Wares, Manufactures and Fruits, the Produce of the Dominions of Morocco, nor ſhould any greater Toll be demanded for them than uſual. There were two or three other Articles of Commerce beneficial to the Engliſh: But the opening to them the Spaniſh Weſt-India Trade, was that which was moſt important, and moſt difficult for the Spaniards to come into, and for other Nations to be pleas'd with. After the ſigning of this Treaty, King Charles was made ſenſible, that the Conceſſions granted therein to the Engliſh Nation were too large, and ſuch as would not go down with his own Subjects, in Caſe he ſhould ever be quietly poſſeſs'd of the Spaniſh Throne, which in Truth this Treaty was not like much to forward; and therefore 'twas not without Reluctance, and merely in Compliance with the Neceſſity of his Affairs, that he confirm'd and ratify'd it. Six Months after it had been concluded and ſign'd, a Copy of it being ſent by a Felucca to Italy, in its Way to Vienna, it fell into the Hands of the French, who fail'd not to make the proper Uſe of it for their Purpoſe. And not doubting but ſuch more than ordinary Privileges granted to the Engliſh Commerce in Spain and the Indies, would ſtir up Jealouſy in the Dutch, they took Care to have the Contents of that Treaty communicated to them. However, Brigadier Stanhope receiv'd in the Council of the Queen of Great Britain, the Applauſe he had merited by a Negotiation ſo advantageous to the Trade of England; and in the next Promotion of General Officers, he was advanc'd to the Poſt of a Major-General, and about the ſame Time appointed her Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to King Charles the third, and Commander in Chief of the Britiſh Forces in Spain.

The Campaign in Germany was no more ſucceſsful than could be expected from the uſual Slowneſs of the Motions of the Germans in Council and Action. The Mareſchal de Villars forc'd their Lines, and exacted great Contributions; which fluſh'd the French ſo much, that they talk'd of reſtoring the Elector of Bavaria to his Dominions: But the Army of the Empire having been ſeaſonably reinforc'd by ſome Saxons in the Britiſh and Dutch Pay, and the Elector of Hanover being prevail'd with to accept the Command of it, and to augment it with ſome of his own Forces, the Face of Affairs began to change on that Side towards the End of the Campaign, when Count Merci, detach'd for that Purpoſe by his Electoral Highneſs, defeated a conſiderable Body of French Troops, commanded by the Marquis de Vivans.

The Elector of Hanover commands in Germany againſt the French.

Upon the Duke of Marlborough's Arrival at the Hague, April the 17th, he had a Conference with the Deputies of the States-General, wherein, among other Particulars, he told them, "That "the Troubles in Saxony occaſioning great Di-"ſturbance in the Empire, which brought infinite "Prejudice to the Common Cauſe, the Queen, "his Miſtreſs, had thought fit to ſend him thither "to pay a Compliment to the King of Sweden, "and endeavour to engage him to remove the "juſt Jealouſies which his long Stay in the Heart "of Germany, gave to ſome of the High-Allies; "for which Purpoſe he had the neceſſary Powers "from her Britannick Majeſty, and deſir'd to "have the ſame from the States." To which they readily concurr'd, and his Grace ſet out the 20th of April, N. S. for Leipſick, by way of Hanover. Monſieur Auverquerque having had ſe-

A.D. 1707. veral Conferences with the Duke of Marlborough, ſet out the ſame Day for Bruſſels, to aſſemble the Confederate Troops, and obſerve the French, who began to be in Motion about Namur.

The Duke of Marlborough goes to the King of Sweden's Camp.

On the 24th of April, the Duke of Marlborough took his Leave of the Court of Hanover, the next Day he came to Halberſtadt. On the 26th he arriv'd at Hall, where he was met by the Reverend Mr. Robinſon, Envoy Extraordinary from her Britannick Majeſty, and Monſieur Crenenberg, the Dutch Miniſter. After Dinner his Grace receiv'd the Compliments of the Magiſtrates and the Univerſity, and then proceeded to Alt-Ranſtadt, the King of Sweden's Head Quarters, accompany'd by the two Envoys abovemention'd.

Voltaire, in his Account of the Duke's Negotiations, tells us, " He apply'd ſecretly, not to " Count Piper, the Prime Miniſter, but to Baron " Gortz, who began to have a Share of the " King's Confidence: He told Gortz, the Deſign " of the Allies was, to propoſe to the King of " Sweden to be once more Mediator between them " and France. By his talking thus, he hop'd to " diſcover in Gortz's Anſwer, what the King's " Intentions were; and it is certain, the Duke had " much rather have had Charles the XIIth a " Mediator, than an Enemy. After this he had " a publick Audience of the King, to whom he " ſaid in French to this Effect:

SIR,

The Duke's Speech to the King.

I Preſent to your Majeſty a Letter, not from the Chancery, but from the Heart of the Queen, my Miſtreſs, and written with her own Hand. Had not her Sex prevented it, ſhe would have croſs'd the Sea to ſee a Prince, admir'd by the whole Univerſe. I am, in this Particular, more happy than the Queen, and I wiſh I could ſerve ſome Campaigns under ſo great a General as your Majeſty, that I might learn, what I yet want to know, in the Art of War.

Voltaire's Account of his Interview.

" He then had a private Audience of above an " Hour, the King talking the German Lan- " guage, and the Duke the French: The latter, " who never made his Propoſals in Haſte, and who, " by long Practice, had got the Art of penetrating " into Mens Minds, and finding out what Agree- " ment there is between their Thoughts and Acti- " ons, even by their Looks, as well as by their " Words, obſerv'd the King of Sweden with great " Attention, as he diſcours'd with him of War in " General. He thought he could perceive in him " a natural Averſion to France, and that he took " Pleaſure in talking of the Conqueſts of the Al- " lies. He mention'd the Czar in his Diſcourſe, " and could ſee the King's Eyes redden at the " Name of him, notwithſtanding there was no- " thing ſaid that exceeded the Moderation of this " Conference. He perceiv'd there was a Map of " Muſcovy on his Table, and he needed no more " to gueſs which way he was about to bend his " March, and that his true Deſign, and his whole " Ambition, was to Dethrone the Czar, as he " had done King Auguſtus. He concluded that " Charles ſtay'd in Germany only to impoſe ſome " hard Conditions on the Emperor of Germany, " which he knew the Emperor could not ſtand " out againſt, and ſo the Matters between them " would be ſoon accommodated; for which " Reaſon he left Charles to follow his natural " Bent, and contenting himſelf with having found " out what it was, made no Propoſal to him.

" 'Twas ſuppos'd every-where that the Duke " of Marlborough's Succeſs with the King of " Sweden, was owing to a great Sum of Money " which he gave Count Piper; but though I have " enquir'd into it very curiouſly, I can't find that " Piper receiv'd any Preſent but a ſmall one " from the Emperor, and that with the King his " Maſter's Conſent. A.D. 1707.

Though Voltaire's Hiſtory of Charles the XIIth, is made up of Collections out of News-Papers, intermix'd with Fictions, and the Adventures of Romance, yet in the Relation of this Event, he ſeems to have come nearer the Truth than the Engliſh Annaliſt, whoſe Hiſtory is little better than the Chat of Clubs and Coffee-Houſes: " The " Duke of Marlborough, ſays he, went directly " to Count Piper, and in a Conference with that " Prime-Miniſter, made gliſter in his Eyes a " Preſent of One hundred thouſand Guineas, " which, according to his ſecret Inſtructions from " Mr. Secretary Boyle, his Grace was not want- " ing to inſinuate, weigh'd more than as many " French Louis d' Ors. The Swediſh Miniſter " catch'd at the Bait, and this Golden Shower " ſmooth'd the Way to his Grace's favourable " Reception, and ſucceſsful Negotiation; which, however, he makes to amount to no more, than that the King of Sweden ſhould ſay to him, He would never do any Thing to the Prejudice either of the Common Cauſe in General, or of the Proteſtant Religion in Particular; which Voltaire is ſo weak as to ſay, he promis'd in the Year 1700. A very ridiculous Story, that the Allies ſhould think there was any Occaſion of having ſuch a Promiſe from the King of Sweden, when they were aſſiſting him by Sea and Land againſt his Enemies.

After dining with his Swediſh Majeſty, the Duke of Marlborough had a ſecond Audience, at which were preſent Count Piper, and Monſieur Hermelin, the two Chief Swediſh Miniſters, and the Reverend Mr. Robinſon. Then his Grace ſpent the whole Evening in Viſits to Count Piper, and the other Miniſters and General Officers. The ſame Afternoon Count Wackerbech, Lieutenant-General of King Auguſtus's Forces, waited upon the Duke, with a Compliment from his Maſter, intimating, he would be that Night at Leipſick, where he ſhould be glad to ſee him. Accordingly his Grace waited on that King, with whom he had a private Conference of about half an Hour, and then return'd to Count Piper's Quarters. The Duke ſupp'd with Velt Mareſchal Reinſchild, and was viſited the next Day by him and Count Piper, ſeveral other General Officers, and Perſons of Quality. After having din'd with Baron Gortz, he had his Audience of Leave of the King of Sweden, and before it was ended, King Staniſlaus came in, and was complimented by his Grace, who went thence to Leipſick, where he made no Stay, but proceeded on his Journey to Berlin, very well ſatisfy'd with his Reception and Negotiation at the Court of Sweden. The King of Pruſſia having ſent Mouſieur Grumkow to deſire his Grace to take Charlottenburgh in his Way, the Duke arriv'd there on the 30th of April, having in two Days ſeen and had Conferences with four Kings. The next Day, being Sunday, May the 1ſt, the Duke went to Divine Service with his Pruſſian Majeſty, who had given particular Orders to his Chaplain, Monſieur L' Enfant, Author of the Hiſtory of the Council of Conſtance, &c. to preach in French on that Occaſion. On the 2d of May, his Grace ſat out from Charlottenberg towards Hanover, where he arriv'd on the 3d, and after a private Conference the Day following, he din'd with his Electoral Highneſs, and in the Afternoon departed for the Hague, where he arriv'd the 8th of May, and communicated to the Deputies of the States-General, the Aſſurances he had receiv'd from the King of Sweden,

Duke of Marlborough with King Auguſtus.

And King Staniſlaus.

And the King of Pruſſia.

A.D.1707. Sweden, which entirely diſſipated the Jealouſies ſome of the Allies had entertain'd of that King's Deſigns, which were induſtriouſly fomented by the Emiſſaries of France.

On the 17th of May, his Grace arriv'd at Bruſſels, and Orders were ſent to the Confederate Troops to Rendezvous at Anderleck, near that City.

The Campaign in Flanders.

The Duke of Marlborough, upon Intelligence that the Elector of Bavaria, and the Duke de Vendoſme, were come out of their Lines, march'd to Soignies, with a Deſign to fight them in the Plain of Flerus. But being inform'd that Vendoſme, and the Elector, had drain'd all their Gariſons to increaſe their Army, not with an Intention to give Battel, but to Plunder the wealthy open Cities of Brabant, in Caſe the Allies ſhould undertake any Siege, the Confederate Generals march'd back towards Bruſſels, and on the 1ſt of June poſted themſelves at Meldert. The French advanc'd to Gemblours, and both Armies continu'd above two Months in their reſpective Camps; and then upon Advice that the French had ſent a ſtrong Detachment from their Army towards Toulon, the Duke of Marlborough march'd from Meldert to Genap, with Deſign to attack the Enemy, who march'd to Senef, and thence to Chievres, with ſuch Precipitation, that they loſt abundance of Men, and did not think themſelves ſafe, 'till they got under the Cannon of Liſle; upon which the Allies advanc'd to Helchin, ſubſiſting all the while on the French Territories. The Duke of Marlborough made a Tour to the Hague, to confer with the Deputies of the States-General, before he went to Germany: Where, a Fortnight after, October the 27th, N. S. he had a Conference with the Electors of Hanover and Mentz; but Count Wratiſlaw, the Imperial Miniſter, not coming thither 'till late, and when he came, having not full Powers to conclude any Thing for a more vigorous Proſecution of the War on the Side of Germany, that Journey of my Lord Duke's had not the deſir'd Effect. Indeed the Court of Vienna's Heads were full of the Expedition to Naples; to proſecute which, they not only neglected the War on their Frontiers towards France, but the great Deſign upon Toulon, which was firſt ſet on Foot by the Duke of Marlborough, with Count Maffey, Envoy from the Duke of Savoy, in Flanders; and finiſh'd in England, with the Counts Maſſey and Briancon. The Emperor never gave into it heartily, though it was certainly the ſhorteſt and ſureſt way of recovering Spain from the Houſe of Bourbon: For if Toulon had been taken, or deſtroy'd, there had been an End of the Maritime Power of France in the Mediterranean, without which the Duke of Anjou could not have maintain'd himſelf in that Kingdom: Beſides, the deſtroying of ſo great a Part of the French Naval Power, would have been of infinite Advantage to England and Holland, who would have been the better able to ſupport the Confederacy, by the Increaſe and Security of their Trade. The Queen of England wrote a Letter with her own Hand to his Imperial Majeſty, to prevail with him to defer the Expedition to Naples. The Earl of Mancheſter was ſent from Italy to Vienna, earneſtly to ſollicit the Continuance of the German Troops deſign'd for it, in the Duke of Savoy's Army, or to ſend part of them to Spain, where the King was hard preſs'd by the Enemy. The Court of Vienna inſiſted, that the Forces of the Allies were ſufficient to carry on both the Enterprizes, Toulon and Naples at once, but the Conſequence prov'd their Error. And the true Reaſon why they ſo obſtinately purſu'd the latter, will appear by a Paragraph of a Pamphlet written by a Perſon of Honour, againſt Mr. St. John's Treaty of Peace with France, three or four Years after. A.D.1707.

Mr. Harley, &c. the Cauſe of the Miſcarriage at Toulon.

"About the Time that Gregg was hang'd, "there were two or three ſtaunch Churchmen, "who grew out of the Corruption of Fanaticiſm, "in the Miniſtry, the Author means Harley, "Harcourt, &c. and they had a Project of Peace "carrying on by themſelves, without conſulting "the chief Managers. Count Gallas, the Imperial Ambaſſador at London, had Notice of it, "and gave Information to the Court of Vienna, "which was the Reaſon that that Court, reſolving to make as ſure of as much as they "could, and knowing that any Peace manag'd "by Tories, would be for the Intereſt of France, "order'd a large Detachment of the Army from "Italy to Naples, to poſſeſs themſelves of that "Kingdom, which was one of the Occaſions "of the Diſappointment of the Expedition againſt "Toulon.

Count Daun reduces the Kingdom of Naples.

Count Daun, who commanded the Detachment, reduc'd the Kingdom of Naples almoſt as faſt as he could march through it. The Capital, the Cities of Capua and Piſcara open'd their Gates to him, and only the Caſtle of Gaeta, which he took by Storm, made any conſiderable Reſiſtance.

The French great Ships at Toulon deſtroy'd.

In the mean Time the Duke of Savoy and Prince Eugene, by Marches and Counter-marches amus'd the Enemy, who imagin'd their Deſign was againſt Dauphine or Savoy, when on a ſudden, having aſſembled all their Forces, they paſs'd the Col de Tende, and by the Aſſiſtance of the Confederate Fleet, under the brave, wiſe and faithful Admiral Shovel, forc'd the French Intrenchments on the Var, paſs'd that River July the 11th, and advanc'd towards Toulon, whither the French Army had got before them, and being Superior in Number, and ſtrongly entrench'd, the Confederates were forc'd to content themſelves with bombarding Toulon; and the Forces having made Way for the Men of War and Bomb Veſſels to advance as far as poſſible, the Bombardment was ſo furious and effectual for a Night and a Day, that half the Town, moſt of the Magazines, and Naval Stores, and the beſt of the Shipping in the Harbour were deſtroy'd. The Names of Eight of the Ships were;

The Duke of Marlborough forms the Deſign againſt Toulon.

	Guns.
Le Sceptre,	90
Le Triumphant,	80
Le Vainqueur,	86
Le Neptune,	76
Le Invincible,	70
Le Serieux,	60
Le Laurier,	60
Le Sage,	54

The Duke of Savoy having caus'd all the Artillery, and the Sick and Wounded to be ſhipp'd off the 21ſt of July, retir'd in very good Order the ſame way he came, without being in the leaſt inſulted by the Enemy, and at his Return concluded the Campaign with the Recovery of Suza, which open'd him a free Entrance into Dauphine. The Loſs the French ſuſtain'd at Toulon was ſo great, that that Harbour, 'till then ſo formidable in the Mediterranean, has been but of little Uſe to them ſince, and the Expence and Labour of the Expedition were more than made good by it; yet the Death of Admiral Shovel, who was Shipwreck'd on the Rocks of Scilly, in his Voyage homewards, made the Loſs of Great Britain greater than any the French had to complain of.

*A.D.*1707. On the 29th of September, Sir Cloudeſley Shovel ſail'd from Gibraltar with fifteen Men of War of the Line of Battel, five of a leſſer Rank, and one Yatch.

The Aſſociation, Admiral.
The Royal Anne, Sir George Byng Commander.
The St. George, Lord Durſley.
The Somerſet, Captain John Price.
The Torbay, Sir John Norris.
The Eagle, Captain Hancock.
The Monmouth, Captain Baker.
The Swiftſure, Captain Hubbart.
The Orford, Captain Cornwall.
The Phœnix, Captain Sanſom.
The Lenox, Sir William Jumper.
The Rye, Captain Vernon.
The Valeur, Captain Johnſon.
The Cruizer, Captain Shales.
The Vulcan, Captain Hickman.
The Grafton, Captain Holden.
The Firebrand, Captain Piercy.
The Weaſel, Captain Gulman.
The Iſabella Yatch, Captain Riddel.

Admiral Shovel Shipwreck'd.

Sir Cloudeſly made an Obſervation the 21ſt of October, and having the next Day's Soundings in ninety Fathom, he brought to, and lay by from twelve, 'till about Six in the Afternoon, the Weather being very Hazy, but then the Wind coming up freſh at South, South-Weſt, the Admiral made the Signal for Sailing. The Fleet ſteer'd Eaſt by North, ſuppoſing they had the Channel open, and the Officers and Seamen being ſo near Home, and, as they thought, ſafe, made merry with plentiful Bowls of Punch, when ſome of the Ships were upon the Rocks to the Weſtward of Scilly, before they were aware of it, about eight a Clock at Night, and made a Signal of Diſtreſs. The Aſſociation, in which Sir Cloudeſly was, having on board more Gentlemen Volunteers, and others, than perhaps he had ever with him in one Ship before, ſtruck on the Rocks call'd the Biſhop and Clerks, and was loſt, with all the Men in it; as were alſo the Eagle and Rye. The Firebrand was daſh'd on the Rocks, and founder'd, but the Captain, and twenty-four Men, ſav'd themſelves in the Boat. Captain Sanſom, in the Phœnix, being driven on the Rocks, ſav'd all his Men, but his Ship was loſt. The Royal Anne was ſav'd by great Preſence of Mind, both in Sir George Byng, and his Officers and Men, who in a Minutes Time ſet her Topſails, one of the Rocks not being a Ships Length to Leward of her, and the other, on which Sir Cloudeſly Shovel was loſt, as near as in a Breach of the Sea. Nor had the Lord Durſley, in the St. George, a leſs miraculous Eſcape, for his Ship was daſh'd on the ſame Ridge of Rocks with the Aſſociation, and the ſame Wave which he ſaw beat out all Sir Cloudeſly's Lights, ſet his own Ship afloat. Sir Cloudeſly Shovel's Body being the next Day after his Misfortune, taken up by ſome Country-Fellows, was ſtripp'd, and bury'd in the Sand; but on Enquiry made by the Boats of the Salisbury and Antelope, it was diſcover'd where he was hid, from whence being taken out, and put on board the Salisbury, the Corpſe was brought into Plymouth, October the 28th, and was afterwards carry'd to London, and decently interr'd in Weſtminſter Abbey, where a coſtly Tomb, with his Effigies in White Marble, was erected in Honour to his Memory.

Sir George Byng's narrow Eſcape.

And Lord Durſley's.

Captain Underdoun deſtroys the French Shipping at Newfoundland.

About this Time the Court receiv'd an Expreſs from Captain Underdoun, Commander of the Faulkland's Expedition againſt the Enemy in North America, where he took from the French two Ships, one of thirty Guns, and One hundred Men; took and burnt one Ship of twenty Guns, and eighty Men; burnt by the Enemy one Ship of thirty-two Guns, another of twenty-ſix; burnt Two hundred twenty-eight Fiſhing-boats, Four hundred and ſeventy Boats and Shallops employ'd in the Fiſhery this Seaſon; twenty-three Stages, and twenty-three Train-fats burnt; taken Seventy-ſeven thouſand two hundred and eighty Quintals of Fiſh, and One thouſand five hundred ſixty-eight Hogſheads of Train-Oil; all which was too inconſiderable to alleviate the Loſs of Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, and of the Men and Ships that periſh'd with him. *A.D.*1707.

Dutcheſs of Nemours dies.

The Dutcheſs of Nemours, Princeſs of Neufchatel and Valangin, dying at Paris on the 16th of June, no leſs than thirteen Competitors laid Claim to that Sovereignty: But the King of Pruſſia, as Heir to the Houſe of Orange, and conſequently to that of Chalons, by whoſe Title the Dutcheſs de Nemours held that Principality, being not only the firſt in Rank, but in Right, Count Metternich, his Miniſter at Neufchatel, put in his Claim in Form; and the Prince of Conti, and other French Competitors, repair'd thither, or ſent their Agents to do the ſame for them.

The King of Pruſſia ſucceeds her in the Principality of Neufchatel.

The French King too, preſerving, amidſt ſo many Diſgraces, the grand Airs with which he had, in his better Days, aw'd all Mankind, order'd Monſieur de Torcy, his Secretary of State, to write to the Magiſtrates of Neufchatel, that he would reſent it, if they admitted a Stranger in Competition with his Subjects. But Count Metternich aſſuring them that the King, his Maſter, would be ſupported by the whole Confederacy; and Mr. Stanyan, the Queen of Great Britain's Envoy Extraordinary in Swiſſerland, vigorouſly ſupporting the King of Pruſſia's Pretenſions, in the Name of his Miſtreſs; in which he was ſeconded by Mr. Runckel, the Dutch Miniſter; and the King of Sweden alſo ſending a Letter to the Magiſtrates, in Behalf of the King of Pruſſia's Claim, the Inveſtiture of Neufchatel was ſolemnly granted to his Pruſſian Majeſty; upon which the French King, according to Cuſtom, order'd a conſiderable Number of Troops to move towards the Frontiers of that Principality; but Count Metternich, in his Maſter's Name, demanding the immediate Aſſiſtance of the Canton of Bern, in Alliance and Comburgherſhip with Neufchatel, they unanimouſly reſolv'd to aſſiſt the latter, and ſent Four thouſand five hundred Men to the Frontiers; upon which, according to Cuſtom, the Frenchmen march'd back again, and there was an End of the Matter.

Firſt Parliament of Great Britain.

On Thurſday, the 23d of October, the firſt Parliament of Great Britain met the firſt Time at Weſtminſter. The Commons rechoſe their Speaker, John Smith, Eſq; and thirteen of the ſixteen Peers of Scotland were admitted to their Places, each being introduced by two Peers of England of the ſame Rank. The Queen did not make her Speech 'till the 6th of November, and it being pretty long, I ſhall only take the Heads of it.

" She began it with humble Thankfulneſs to " God, and entire Satisfaction to her ſelf, that ſhe " met them there in her firſt Parliament of Great " Britain, not doubting but they came with " Hearts prepar'd, as her's was, to make the " Union ſo proſperous, as it might anſwer the " well-grounded Hopes of all her good Subjects, " and the reaſonable Apprehenſions of her Enemies: " And to that End, nothing was ſo material to " convince both Friends and Enemies, that the " uniting their Intereſts had not only improv'd " their Abilities, but alſo their Reſolutons to pro-

" ſecute

A.D.1707. " ſecute the War 'till an honourable Peace could " be obtain'd.

" Then having ſpoken of the Attempt upon " Toulon, and that it had not wholly loſt its Ef- " fect, takes Notice of our Diſadvantages in " Spain, and the Expulſion of the Enemy wholly " out of Italy; as alſo of the Conduct and Au- The Queen ſpeaks of the Elector of Hanover commanding in Germany. " thority of the Elector of Hanover, who com- " manded as General of the Empire that Cam- " paign on the Rhine; and after that of the ne- " ceſſary Supplies for carrying on the War with " Succeſs; She came to the Buſineſs of the late " Union, and ſaid, it was impoſſible but ſome " Doubts and Difficulties muſt have ariſen, which, " however, ſhe hop'd were ſo far overcome, as to " have defeated the Deſign of thoſe who would " have made uſe of that Handle to foment Di- " ſturbances. Then having recommended to their " Conſideration ſeveral Things made liable by the " Articles to the Conſideration of the Parliament " of Great Britain;" She added, " Nothing " ſhould be wanting on her Part, to ſecure to her " People all the Bleſſings that could follow from " that happy Circumſtance of her Reign, and to " extinguiſh the leaſt Occaſion of Jealouſy that " either the Civil or Religious Rights of any Part " of that her united Kingdom could ſuffer, by the " Conſequences of that Union; and ſhe hop'd they " would heartily endeavour to confirm and im- " prove it; and let nothing prevail with them to " diſunite among themſelves, or abate their Zeal " in oppoſing the Common Enemy.

The Commons readily and unanimouſly voted, and preſented an Addreſs of Thanks, wherein they The Parliament for the whole Spaniſh Monarchy. aſſur'd the Queen, That no Diſappointment ſhould diſcourage them from making their utmoſt Efforts to enable her Majeſty, in Conjunction with her Allies, to reduce the whole Spaniſh Monarchy to the Obedience of the King of Spain.

The great Reputation her Majeſty's Arms and Counſels were in, both at Home and Abroad, did naturally raiſe Envy againſt thoſe that had the Conduct of them; and People in England, by Degrees, began to think they were overpaid for their Services, and engroſs'd too much to themſelves. Thoſe who wanted Employments, either out of Ambition, Avarice or Neceſſity, were ready to encourage any Whiſpers, or even Murmurs that were like to make Vacancies; and the Leaders of the Whig Party being all along rewarded with good Looks, and good Words only, ſince the Miniſters and they were reconcil'd, the Tories perceiv'd preſently they were out of Humour, and did what they could to increaſe it, by falling in with their Sentiments, whenever they Whigs diſguſted at Mr. Harley's being employ'd. complain'd of Miſcarriages. The Lord Godolphin would doubtleſs have been pleas'd, if they would have been contented with that Portion of Favour he thought fitting for them; but it was not likely that they would long continue in good Terms with thoſe, who admitted ſuch Men as Meſſieurs Harley, Harcourt, and St. John, into any Part of the Adminiſtration; and it was eaſy to be ſeen, that the Miniſtry muſt part with them, or loſe the Lords Wharton, Halifax and Somers. Indeed the Lord Godolphin was ſo loth to put any Thing to the Venture by ſhifting Hands, that he gave Mr. Harley, &c. Time and Opportunity to eſtabliſh themſelves ſo much in the Queen's Favour and Confidence, by the Help of Mrs. Abigal Hill, beforemention'd, that he was himſelf in more Danger of being remov'd, than thoſe whom the Whigs blam'd him for continuing in Employment. Things being in this unſettled State among thoſe who were, and thoſe who would have been in the Adminiſtration, we do not find any Addreſſes of Thanks from the Houſe of Peers to her Majeſty, upon the Speech from the Throne; but inſtead of it, the Earl of Wharton took Notice " of the great De- " cay of Trade, and Scarcity of Money, which " he had obſerv'd in travelling up and down the " Country, ſo that the Farmers were not able " to pay their Rents to their Landlords. The Lord Somers " enlarg'd on the ill Condition and " Miſmanagement of the Navy, and on the great " Loſſes of the Merchants at Sea the laſt Sum- " mer." The Earl of Stamford mov'd for poſtponing the Conſideration of the State of the Nation, and for an Addreſs for her Majeſty's moſt gracious Speech; which was oppos'd by the Duke of Buckingham, the Earl of Rocheſter, and the Lord Guernſey; and it was order'd that the State of the Nation ſhould be taken into Conſideration the Wedneſday following, when the Queen was preſent, as a private Perſon. The Lord Herbert of Cherbury, being in the Chair, a Petition was given in by the two Sheriffs of London, ſign'd by about Two hundred of the moſt Eminent Merchants, complaining of the great Loſſes they had ſuſtain'd at Sea, for want of Convoys and Cruizers; which being read, the Earl of Wharton began the Debate, by laying open the miſerable Condition of the Nation, and the great Decay of Trade. The Truth is, Nations do not flouriſh much, nor Trade increaſe, in the midſt of expenſive and dangerous Wars. Several Peers ſpoke to the ſame Effect, and the Lord Haverſham made another long Speech, which, I ſuppoſe, no body will be more fond of at this Diſtance of Time, than People were when it was ſpoken.

A.D.1707.

Lord Halifax mov'd for a Committee to receive Propoſals for encouraging Trade and Privateers in the Weſt-Indies; and among others, Mr. John Dennis, the Poet, and Critick, drew up one, for no leſs than Fifty twenty Gun Ships to Cruize off and about Jamaica, and the Leeward Iſlands, &c. which was printed, but went no farther than the Preſs. It was obſerv'd, that as ſoon as the Debate was over, the Duke of Marlborough took the Earl of Wharton aſide, and there paſs'd ſome warm Expoſtulations between them. I know very well that the Merchants of London, and others, did not forbear blaming the Duke of Marlborough, and the Earl of Godolphin, for not adviſing the Queen to put the Admiralty into other Hands; his Royal Highneſs the Prince being too indolent, or too unexperienc'd; and it was generally thought that Mr. George Churchil influenc'd every Thing in the Execution of that Commiſſion, who being neither belov'd nor eſteem'd, brought an Odium on every one that were in the Management of the Admiralty. Mr. Heathcot, Son of Sir Gilbert Heathcot, and Mr. Daviſon, Ruſſia Merchants, ſpoke very boldly in the Houſe of Commons, and ſtuck not to charge the Managers of the Navy with Fraud, Malice and Ignorance, which all bore hard on Admiral Churchil; ſeveral Members interrupting them, Sir Richard Onſlow, Chairman of the Committee, deſir'd them to go on. Whetſton, who commanded the Ruſſia Convoy, and roſe to a Flag, from being Maſter of a ſmall Briſtol Ship, had a Character which ſeem'd to be referr'd to by Mr. Heathcot and Mr. Dawſon, in their Complaint of Fraud, Malice and Ignorance. Theſe Debates and Complaints ended in a Reſolution, That for the better ſecuring of the Trade of this Kingdom, over and above the Ships of War for the Line of Battel, and the Convoys to remote Parts, a ſufficient Number of Ships, afterwards ſettled at Four, be appointed to Cruize in proper Stations.

Duke of Marlborough and Lord Wharton have high Words.

The

*A.D.*1707. The Houſe of Commons reſolv'd on an Addreſs to the Queen, to order her Attorney-General to enter a Noli Proſequi to diſcharge the ſeveral Informations relating to the Goods imported Cuſtom-Free into Scotland, before the firſt of May, which was both juſt and reaſonable, with reſpect to the Merchants of Scotland; but as for thoſe Engliſh Merchants who imported thoſe Goods into Scotland, purpoſely to have them exported to England from thence Cuſtom-Free, it was a Fraud: A Bill was order'd to be brought in to repeal The Act of Security in Scotland, which gave, and was intended to give ſo great Jealouſy to the Engliſh. This ought not to have given the leaſt Diſquiet to the Scotch; for every body knew the Reſcinding of that Act was one of the principal Views of the Miniſtry, in the Proſecution of the Union. Then the Commons conſider'd thoſe Parts of the Queen's Speech, which related to making the Union more compleat; and on the 11th of December, Reſolv'd, Votes about the Union.

That there be but one Privy-Council in the Kingdom of Great Britain.

That the Militia of that Part of Great Britain call'd Scotland, be regulated in the ſame Manner as the Militia of that Part of Great Britain call'd England, is regulated.

That the Powers of the Juſtices of the Peace for preſerving the Publick Peace, be the ſame throughout the whole United Kingdom.

That for the better Adminiſtration of Juſtice, and Preſervation of the Publick Peace, the Lords of Juſticiary be appointed to go Circuits twice in the Year.

That the Writs for electing Members to ſerve in the Houſe of Commons, for that Part of Great Britain call'd Scotland, be directed to the Sheriffs of the reſpective Counties, and that the Returns be made of ſuch Writs, in like Manner as Returns are made of ſuch Writs in that Part of Great Britain call'd England.

A Bill was order'd to be brought in upon theſe Reſolutions: The Houſe alſo paſs'd a Vote againſt the Colluſive Trade of bringing in French Wines, which was a great Diſcouragement to the Portugal Trade, one of the moſt Beneficial Trades to England.

*A.D.*1707. About this Time Mr. John Aſgil's Book was cenſur'd, and order'd to be burnt: Aſgil was expell'd the Houſe, of which he was a Member for Bramber in Suſſex: Many Perſons thought there was too much Honour done his Book, the Subject of which was to prove, that Man may be tranſlated from hence to Heaven, without paſſing through Death: An idle Dream, and ſerv'd only for a Jeſt on the Stage.

Mr. Aſgil expell'd.

On the 18th of December, the Queen came to the Houſe, and paſs'd,

An Act for granting an Aid to be rais'd by a Land-Tax in Great Britain, for the Service of the Year 1708.

An Act for Repealing and Declaring the Determination of two Acts paſs'd in the Parliament of Scotland; the one entitled, An Act for the Security of the Kingdom; the other, An Act anent Peace and War.

An Act for the better ſecuring the Duties upon Eaſt-India Goods.

This done, "She took Notice to the Commons, of their Readineſs and Affection in providing ſo conſiderable a Part of the Supplies, "ſhe looking upon it as a ſure Pledge of their "being diſpos'd to make good the hearty Aſſurances they gave her at the beginning of the "Seſſions. She hinted at the Neceſſity there was "of augmenting the Forces in Spain, Portugal "and Savoy: And then addreſſing her ſelf to the "Lords and Commons, ſhe told them, That there "was nothing more eſſential to her own Quiet, "and the Happineſs of all her good Subjects, than "bringing the War to an honourable and ſafe "Concluſion; and ſhe could not but look on "thoſe who were deſirous to ſupport her in it to "this End, as the moſt proper Objects of her "Favour and Encouragement.

It will be very proper to keep this in Memory, 'till we come to a quite contrary Declaration and the Cenſure of ſuch Perſons as thoſe that Delighted in that very War.

The next Day the Commons, in a grand Committee, came to ſeveral Reſolutions about the Supply: And on the 20th of December, the Queen paſs'd the Land-Tax Bill.

Two Days after, the Commons voted ſeveral other Branches of the Supply: And by the 22d of December, they had given,

	L.
For Forty thouſand Seamen,	2080000
The Ordinary of the Navy,	120000
Forty thouſand Landmen in Flanders,	894272
Additional Ten thouſand Men,	177511
The Proportion of Palatines,	34251
The Proportion of the Saxons,	43251
The Proportion of Bothmar's Dragoons,	9269
Forces in Spain and Portugal,	586671
Subſidies to the Allies,	494689
Duke of Savoy's Augmentation,	500000
Guards and Gariſons, Invalids, and 5000 Men on board the Fleet,	511734
Duke of Savoy's ſpecial Service in 1707,	100000
Compleating the Payment to the Heſſians,	22957
Fortifications of Gibraltar,	12284
One Year one Quarter Intereſt on Debentures,	60334
Storehouſe and Wharfs at Plymouth,	10000
Circulating Exchequer Bills,	3500
Tranſporting Land Forces,	144000
Land Ordnance,	120000
Payment of Captain Roch,	2126

Amounting in all to near Six Milllions.

Upon an Addreſs of the Commons for her Majeſty to uſe her Endeavours with the Emperor to reſtore to her Subjects the Liberty of Trade in Auſtria and Stiria, and to prevent Prohibitions in any Parts of his Hereditary Countries, ſhe was pleas'd to Anſwer, She had given Directions, ſome Time be-

A.D.1707. before, to her Miniſter Abroad upon that Matter, and would continue her Endeavours for the Relief of her Subjects.

On the 13th of November was publiſh'd a Proclamation for a General Faſt, to implore the Bleſſing of Almighty God on the Arms of her Majeſty, and her Allies. A Week after, Charles Lord Viſcount Townſhend, Captain of the Yeomen of the Guard, was ſworn one of the Lords of her Majeſty's Privy-Council; as was alſo Henry Earl of Bindon; and about the ſame Time John Evelyn, Eſq; Thomas Baker, Eſq; Sir Thomas Skipwith, Bart. Matthew Burton, Eſq; and Charles Killigrew, Eſq; were appointed Commiſſioners of Prizes; William Goſſelyn, Eſq; Comptroller, and Anthony Burnaby, Eſq; Secretary. The latter had by a Stratagem got himſelf elected a Burgeſs for Stockbridge, and having, like Meſſieur Harley's, had a Presbyterian Education, became a Tool to High-Church, to patch up his broken Fortune, and with the ſame View left them, when they could no longer ſerve him.

Baron Spanheim, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the King of Pruſſia, had Audience of the Queen November the 28th, to acquaint her with his Maſter's grateful Sentiments for her ſupporting, by her Miniſter at Berne, his Right to the Sovereignty of Neufchatel.

French Prophets.

The Sect of the French Prophets was now much talk'd of. They came from the Cevennes, and their Enthuſiaſm, or rather Frenzy, gave People an ill Idea of theſe Cevennois, who as Proteſtants, the Engliſh would gladly have ſupported againſt the Tyranny of their Perſecutor, Lewis the XIVth. The French Refugees diſown'd theſe Camiſars, as they were alſo term'd, and the Elders of their Church in the Savoy, declar'd them Impoſtors and Counterfeits. They pretended to Inſpiration, which they expreſs'd by Contraction of their Features, and Agitation of their Limbs, by wretched Cant, and a vile Imitation of the Prophetick Stile. Theſe Madmen had their Followers, as well as Naylor, Sacheverel, and other ſuch falſe Prophets; and among others, were ſupported by Sir Richard Bulkely, John Lacy, Eſq; Moult, the famous Chymiſt, and even by Monſieur Facio, the Mathematick Profeſſor at Geneva, then Reſident in England, having loſt his Credit at Home by his Socinian Principles. Theſe Impoſtors were ſo impudently fooliſh, as well as wicked, that they gave out one of their Brotherhood, Dr. Ames, who dy'd then, and was bury'd, would riſe again that Day Fortnight.

So much Notice was taken of this ridiculous Buſineſs, as that Guards were ſet on the Place of his Burial, to prevent their playing Tricks, and carrying on their Impoſture. At laſt Monſieur Facio, Nicholas Facio, John Detude, and Elias Marion, the latter a Camiſar, were proſecuted at the Charge of the French Churches in London, and ſentenc'd by the Court of Queen's-Bench, to ſtand twice on a Scaffold at Charing-Croſs, and the Royal-Exchange, with a Paper, denoting their Offence, as Diſturbers of the Publick Peace, and falſe Propheſiers. The Puniſhment of theſe Offenders effectually put an End to this Short-liv'd Sect, which were put out of Countenance before, by Dr. Ames's lying quiet in his Grave, after he and they had promis'd that he ſhould riſe again, to confirm the Truth of their Predictions.

Sir Jonathan Trelawney tranſlated to the Biſhoprick of Winchester.

It ſhould not be omitted, that in the Summer Sir Jonathan Trelawny was tranſlated from the See of Exeter to that of Wincheſter, and was inveſted Prelate of the Garter, at a Chapter held at Windſor for that Purpoſe, the Sovereign being preſent, as were alſo ſeveral of the Knights Companions of that moſt Noble Order: As,

Prince George of Denmark.
Duke of Somerſet.
Duke of Northumberland.
Duke of Ormond.
Duke of Devonſhire.
Duke of Queensberry.
Earl of Rocheſter.
Earl of Feverſham.
Earl of Godolphin.

A.D.1707.

Biſhops made.

About the ſame Time Dr. John Moor was tranſlated from the Biſhoprick of Norwich to that of Ely; and Dr. Charles Trimnel was declar'd Biſhop of Norwich; Dr. Offspring Blackhall, of an old Puritan Stock, was made Biſhop of Exeter; and Sir William Dawes, Bart. Biſhop of Cheſter.

A.D.1708. Greg, Clerk to Mr. Robert Harley, committed to Newgate.

On the laſt Day of the Year, William Greg, a Clerk in Secretary Harley's Office, whoſe late Correſpondence with the Enemy had been diſcover'd by the Poſt-Maſter of Bruſſels, was taken into Cuſtody of a Meſſenger, and having been examin'd three times by a Committee of Council, was on the third of January committed to Newgate for High-Treaſon; as was alſo Alexander Valiere, alias John Clerk, four Days after, for the ſame Crime.

On the 19th of January, Greg was try'd at the Seſſions-Houſe in the Old-Baily, upon an Indictment, importing, That he had ſent Letters to Monſieur Chamillard, one of the French King's Prime Miniſters, particularly one dated the 28th of November laſt, and others, wherein were inclos'd the Proceedings of both Houſes of Parliament, in relation to the Augmentation of our Forces, a Copy of a Letter from the Queen to the Emperor, private Buſineſs ſent to the Duke of Savoy, &c. to which Indictment Greg having pleaded Guilty, the Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt, and moſt of the Judges, being preſent, the Recorder pronounc'd Sentence of Death upon him, as in Caſes of High-Treaſon; but Execution was deferr'd above three Months, to ſee what Effect Time, and proper Exhortations, would have on him towards a Diſcovery. I muſt confeſs there ſeems to be a little too much Diligence in the Endeavours of that Kind, with a View of tracing the Treaſon to Greg's Maſter, but it was not likely that Mr. Harley would let Greg into a Confidence of ſo dangerous a Nature; and People generally clear'd him of his Clerk's Treaſon; though it was certain, that the negligent Management of the Secretary's Office, in his Time, was a great Temptation to corrupt Minds to make a Market of the Intelligence that was expos'd there; and though it was ſaid in Mr. Harley's Excuſe, that it had been cuſtomary to let State-Papers be there looſe and open, yet it could not be prov'd that ſuch State-Papers as Greg ſent to France was always ſo neglected. The Truth is, Mr. Harley, as much as he affected Buſtle and Buſineſs, was the moſt unfit for it of any Man of his Experiences; a Word he very often made Uſe of in a Religious Senſe; and it was ſaid he kept a ſort of Journal of them, which, as if caſually, he left open in his Cloſet, to be ſeen by ſome Diſſenting Miniſters who attended him after Sacheverel's Sedition, by Invitation, about their demoliſh'd Meeting-Houſes. Mr. Maynwaring, the fitteſt Man for Buſineſs of any Man of his Time and Condition, ſaid of this ſame Mr. Harley to my ſelf, All the World knows there never was a Man employ'd in ſo important and difficult a Service as Chancellor of the Exchequer, who had leſs Application, and leſs Knowledge in ſuch Matters, who immediately let every Thing run to Diſorder and Confuſion, in whatever Poſt he was put in. Beſides this Negligence, he would ſometimes ſolace himſelf with his Friends, and a Bottle; and I have been told by Servants of the Secretary's Office,

Mr. Robert Harley negligent.

A.D. 1708. that when he was in it, he would ſometimes come ſo late, that the Poſt-Houſe has been kept open for the State-Letters above an Hour after the due Time, inſomuch that the Poſtmaſter-General complain'd of it to the Miniſtry.

Votes about Recruits.

A Motion being made in the Houſe of Commons, for raiſing Recruits by the Pariſhes, it ſucceeded as ill as when it was mov'd formerly; and it was reſolv'd to raiſe them out of ſuch Perſons as have no lawful Calling, nor any Real or Perſonal Eſtate for their Maintenance. Sir William Courtney made a notable Speech againſt unfair Methods, by which ſeveral young Officers by Sea and Land were advanc'd, to the Prejudice of others of longer Standing. They voted an Addreſs to the Queen, that all Pariſh-Officers who brought Perſons before the Magiſtrates to be Liſted, ſhould have twenty Shillings for each, and every Perſon that came voluntarily, four Pounds.

On the 29th of January, the Commons took into Conſideration the State of the War in Spain; and the Queſtion being propos'd, that of the 29395 Engliſh Forces provided by Parliament for the Service of Spain and Portugal, in the Year 1707, there was but 8660 Men in Spain and Portugal, at the Time of the Battel of Almanza, a Debate aroſe upon it, which was adjourn'd to the 3d of February, when Mr. Henry St. John deliver'd an Account of the Forces provided for Spain and Portugal in the Year 1707, and it was reſolv'd upon a Queſtion, that out of the 29325 Men, provided as above, there was but 8660 Men in Spain and Portugal, at the Time of the Battel of Almanza: And an Addreſs upon it to the Queen was preſented by the whole Houſe, That ſhe would be pleas'd to order an Account to be laid before them, how it came to paſs that there were no more Engliſh Forces in Spain and Portugal at the Time of the Battel of Almanza, and that ſhe would uſe her utmoſt Endeavours, that the War in Spain might be vigorouſly proſecuted. To which ſhe told them, She would ſend them an Anſwer in a ſhort Time.

Commons Addreſs about Deficiencies of the Soldiers at the Battel of Almanza. Queen's Anſwer.

We have hinted that there was a ſort of Coalition between ſome diſguſted Whigs, and the Tories at this Time, in order to remove the Earl of Godolphin from the Treaſury, and conſequently from the Miniſtry. The Duke of Marlborough knew very well, that this great Stir about the Proſecution of the War in Spain, was purely to leſſen his Command in Flanders, and oblige him to act Defenſively only; than which they could not do their Friend, the French King, a greater Service. When it was preſs'd very much in the Houſe of Peers, to return the Earl of Peterborough Thanks for his eminent Services, it was not oppos'd out of Diſſatisfaction with that Lord's Conduct, but merely becauſe the Party who preſs'd it, intended it as a previous Queſtion towards putting and carrying the main one, for a Defenſive War in Flanders. This was the Tory Deſign by it: The Whigs who voted with them on this Occaſion, had more particular Views, which are the Bane of all ſound Principles, whatever Diſguiſes they appear in.

A Deſign of the Tories to hinder the War in Flanders.

The Earl of Rocheſter, who had never been for any War againſt France, either in Flanders or Spain, ſince the Adminiſtration was in the Hands of thoſe who were in Earneſt, and proſecuted it upon a Principle of Liberty, highly commended the Earl of Peterborough's Courage and Conduct, and enumerated his Services; adding, It has been a conſtant Cuſtom, that when a Perſon of his Rank, who has been employ'd Abroad in ſo eminent a Poſt as his Lordſhip, had return'd home, he had either Thanks given him, or was call'd to an Account; urging, the ſame ought to be done in Relation to the Earl of Peterborough. The Lord Halifax enlarg'd on the Earl's ſucceſsful Services, but wav'd the returning him Thanks, 'till his Conduct had been examin'd, than which the Earl himſelf profeſs'd he had nothing more at Heart. Lord Haverſham, the Presbyterian, could not help reflecting on the Earl of Galway, though of the ſame Religion, ſaying, 'Twas no Wonder our Affairs in Spain went ſo ill, ſince the Management of them had been entruſted with a Foreigner. This appear'd extreamly weak. The Duke of Berwick, a Foreigner to Spain and France, had the Management of the War for the French King, and his Grandſon, at the ſame Time that the Earl of Galway manag'd it for the Allies. Several Members, and even ſome of 'em Tories, ſhew'd the Neceſſity of carrying on the War, 'till King Charles was ſettled on the Throne of Spain. The Earl of Peterborough ſaid, We ought to give the Queen nineteen Shillings in the Pound, rather than make Peace upon any other Terms. The Earl of Rocheſter ſaid, We ſeem to neglect the Principal Buſineſs, and mind only the Acceſſories; adding, he remember'd the Saying of a Great General, the old Duke of Schomberg, that the attacking France in the Netherlands was like taking a Bull by the Horns; and therefore the Earl propos'd, We ſhould ſtand on the Defenſive in Flanders, and ſend Twenty thouſand Men into Catalonia. Beſides, the vaſt Expence of tranſporting Soldiers from Flanders to Spain, which for ſuch an Army, taking in extraordinary, as well as common Occaſions, would come to above Five hundred thouſand Pounds, beſides the Loſs of the Men by Sickneſs and Deſertion, after that Expence, this Argument has no more Strength in it, than that about the employing a Foreigner; for the Duke of Marlborough had by Fact prov'd the contrary; he had taken the Bull by the Horns, and driven the French out of ſo many Towns, that there was not above one or two, and neither of them ſtronger than one of the weakeſt he had reduc'd, between him and Verſailes. The Earl of Nottingham complain'd that Spain was in a manner abandon'd: But the Duke of Marlborough hearing, with a kind of Indignation, Objections made to his Meaſures, by thoſe whom he knew to be little skill'd in the Affairs of War, ſaid, Moſt of the Enemies ſtrong Places in Spain might be kept with one Battalion in each, whereas the great Towns we had conquer'd in the NETHERLANDS, requir'd twenty times that Number of Men for their Preſervation. If our Army there was weaken'd, and the French, by their great Superiority, ſhould gain any conſiderable Advantage, the diſcontented Party in Holland, who were not a few, and bore with Impatience the great Charges of the War, would not fail crying aloud for Peace. The Earl of Rocheſter obſerving his Grace ſpoke with ſome Warmth, ſaid, He wonder'd that Noble Peer, who had ever been conſpicuous for his Calmneſs and Moderation, ſhould now be out of his natural Temper; adding, That there being an abſolute Neceſſity to ſuccour Spain, his Grace would oblige their Lordſhips, if he would let them know where they might get Troops to ſend thither; and the Obligation would be the greater, becauſe the Earl of Peterborough that very Day aſſur'd them, he had heard Prince Eugene ſay, The German Soldiers had rather be decimated than ſent to Spain. The Duke of Marlborough anſwer'd the Reproach of having ſhewn ſome Warmth, by ſaying, The Thing was of too great Conſequence to be ſpoken of without Concernment. And as for the Queſtion propos'd by the Earl, he ſaid, That although it was improper to diſcloſe ſeveral Projects in ſo great an Aſſembly; to which, that Day, many Strangers had been admitted, by Reaſon of the Queen's Preſence, becauſe

A.D. 1708.

Lord Haverſham's Reflection on the Earl of Galway.

Earl of Rocheſter's Speech againſt the Flanders War.

Duke of Marlborough ſpeaks with Warmth.

Earl of Rocheſter anſwers.

Duke of Marlborough replies.

A.D.1708. cauſe the Enemy would not fail being inform'd of them; yet to gratify their Lordſhips, he might aſſure them, that Meaſures had already been concerted with the Emperor, for the forming an Army of Forty Thouſand Men, under the Command of the Duke of Savoy, and for ſending powerful Succours to King Charles, which, it was to be hop'd, Prince Eugene might be prevail'd with to go and Command in SPAIN, and then the Germans would gladly follow him thither. The only Difficulty which might be objected to this Scheme, was the uſual Slowneſs of the Court of Vienna. To which Purpoſe his Grace took Notice, that if the Seven thouſand German Recruits which the Emperor had promis'd for the Army in Piedmont, had arriv'd in Time, the Enterprize againſt Toulon would probably have been attended with Succeſs; but that it was to be hop'd, and he durſt engage his Word for it, that for the future his Imperial Majeſty would punctually perform his Promiſes. This put an End to the Debate, and the Lords preſented an Addreſs to her Majeſty, to return their moſt humble Thanks for her moſt gracious Speech the Day before: Adding, " That " the great Spirit and Reſolution ſhe was pleas'd " to expreſs for the vigorous carrying on the War " in Spain and Portugal, and ſtrengthening the " Army of the Duke of Savoy, who had deſerv'd " ſo well of the whole Confederacy, could not " fail to contribute, in the moſt effectual Manner, " to bring this War to a ſpeedy and happy Con- " cluſion. That her Majeſty's Favour would al- " ways be the higheſt Encouragement to her Sub- " jects, but the Zeal their Lordſhips had for the " Preſervation of her Majeſty's Perſon and Go- " vernment, and the Duty they ow'd to their " Country, always had, and ever would oblige " them to do all that lay in their Power, for ſup- " porting her Majeſty in this juſt War, 'till it " were brought to a ſafe and happy Concluſion. " And as they had ſhewn the greateſt Zeal in " bringing the Union to paſs, and for preventing " every Thing that might diſturb it, ſo they una- " nimouſly promis'd her Majeſty to do all that " was poſſible for them, to make it compleat and " entire.

The Lords vote againſt any Peace without Spain.

The ſame Day their Lordſhips paſs'd this Noble and Wiſe RESOLVE, That no PEACE could be ſafe or honourable for her Majeſty, or her Allies, if Spain and the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies were ſuffered to continue in the Power of the Houſe of Bourbon. They alſo agreed upon an Addreſs to her Majeſty, that ſhe would uſe preſſing Inſtances to the Emperor to ſend powerful Succours to Spain; and to uſe his utmoſt Power and Intereſt for ſtrengthening the Army on the Rhine, which was now happily put under the Command of that Wiſe and Valiant Prince, the Elector of HANOVER, our late Sovereign, of Glorious Memory. The Commons join'd in this Addreſs, and the Queen anſwer'd, December the 23d, She was fully of their Opinion, that no Peace could be honourable or ſafe for them, or for their Allies, 'till the entire Monarchy of Spain be reſtor'd to the Houſe of Auſtria. Compare this with what was ſaid from the Throne two or three Years after. We have obſerv'd, that the Earl of Peterborough was not thank'd at this Time; but when the Harleian Miniſtry influenc'd the Votes in both Houſes, when the War in Spain was in a manner given up, and the Catalans about to be abandon'd to the Revenge of our and their cruel Enemies; the Major Vote was entirely in Favour of that Lord's Conduct, which every one knows his Lordſhip could not be fond of on thoſe Terms.

The Queen joins with them in it.

Whigs have particular Views.

This Oppoſition, in ſo critical a Juncture, made it abſolutely neceſſary for the Miniſtry in England to be all of a Piece, that one might not be pulling back, while another was puſhing forward; and accordingly, the Right Honourable Henry Boyle, Eſq; was made one of her Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, in the Room of Mr. Robert Harley. I ſhall here repeat ſome Paragraphs after the Annaliſt, becauſe I know ſome Parts to be true, and have the better Opinion of the others, as much as they will appear to be Annecdotes, " When the " General and the Treaſurer firſt gave Mr. Robert " Harley a Share in the Miniſtry, 'twas princi- " pally with Deſign to ſecure his Aſſiſtance and " Intereſt in the Houſe of Commons, in order to " retrieve the unlucky Steps that had been made " with Relation to Scotland.

A.D.1708. Mr. Robert Harley diſcarded.

How it comes about.

This was a vulgar Notion: He was admitted into a ſhare of the Miniſtry, to draw him off from High-Church, and bring him into the Union, which was in order to ſecure the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and their uſing him for this Purpoſe, had the Effect intended,

" And they fondly imagin'd, that as to other " grand Affairs, either he would not intermeddle, " having ſo little Knowledge of them, or would " follow blindly their Directions; but they found " not long after, that a Perſon of his prying " Genius, and ambitious Spirit, could not be con- " tent to act an under-Part. A Circumſtance prov'd " very favourable to him: The Dutcheſs of " Marlborough, Groom of the Stole, had, ſome " Years before, preferr'd Mrs. Abigal Hill, her " Kinſwoman, Siſter to Mr. Hill, whom her " Grace got to be one of the Queen's Pages, to be " a Dreſſer and Chamber-woman; and as in Time " the Dutcheſs grew weary, on ſeveral Accounts, " of a cloſe Attendance, ſhe thought ſhe might " ſecurely eaſe her ſelf, by leaving near her Ma- " jeſty a Dependant and Relation, in whom ſhe " entirely confided.

Mrs. Abigal Hill's Riſe.

Here he remarks, ſome pretend the Dutcheſs was extreamly fatigu'd with ſitting up late with the Queen; what he adds is fooliſh enough: Others would have it, that after her Grace's Conſort was made a Prince of the Empire, ſhe look'd upon her ſelf as a Princeſs, and therefore above her Place: As if Perſons of as High Degree as a Princeſs of Mildenheim, was above ſerving in the Court of the Queen of Great Britain. A Gentleman well known among the Great, to be in the ſtricteſt Confidence with the Dutcheſs of Marlborough, as well as my Lord Duke, and the then whole Miniſtry, aſſur'd me, her Grace was weary of her Attendance on the Queen, not only for its taking up ſo much of her Time, but for ſome Circumſtances which a Lady of her extream Delicacy could not delight in; and that her Grace perceiving how well receiv'd her Couſin Abigal Hill was by the Queen, ſhe expreſs'd particular Satisfaction in it to him; for that now her Abſence, be it as long as ſhe pleas'd, was excus'd, and well born with. But that Gentleman told her Grace very frankly, She did not enough conſider what might be the Conſequences of her leaving the Queen to the Suggeſtions and Inſinuations of a flattering Gipſy: It was the Word he made uſe of, and not in its worſt Senſe. Her Grace had no manner of Jealouſy of being ſupplanted by the very Woman ſhe had preferr'd, and went on in her own way, 'till it was too late to take another. The Annaliſt again:

A. M. Eſq; Dutcheſs of Marlborough weary of Attendance at Court.

" Mrs. Abigal Hill diſcharg'd her Duty with " wonderful Aſſiduity, Diligence and Obſequiouſ- " neſs, and having a tolerable ſhare of Wit and " good Humour, ſhe made her ſelf ſo agreeable, " that as the Dutcheſs of Marlborough let ſome- " times a whole Month paſs without waiting on " the Queen, ſo the Queen very eaſily diſpens'd " with her Abſence. On the other Hand, the " growing Favourite, as 'tis uſual with Courtiers, " as eaſily forgot her Benefactreſs; and whether " through

*A.D.*1708. Supplanted by Mrs. Abigal Hill.

" through her own Abilities, or through the Sug-
" geſtions of others, reſolv'd to ſet up for her
" ſelf; her principal Adviſer was Mr. Robert
" Harley, who judging her a proper Inſtrument
" for his Deſigns, apply'd himſelf to her with all
" the Cunning and Addreſs he was Maſter of,
" ſhew'd her more Reſpect than is generally paid
" by a Secretary of State to a Dreſſer; and in-
" fus'd ſuch Notions into her, as taught her to ſet
" more Value on her ſelf than ſhe did before.
" There grew ſuch Intimacy and Confidence be" tween them, that Mrs. Abigal Hill, being
" ſmitten with Mr. Maſham, a comely Youth,
" formerly a Page to the Queen, and afterwards
" an Equery and Gentleman of the Bedchamber
" to Prince George: She did not diſguiſe the " Secret of her Heart to Mr. Robert Harley, whom
" we find now in a Poſt much more conſiſtent with
" Intrigue than that of Speaker of the Houſe of Com-
" mons; who employ'd an old inſinuating Courtier,
" an intimate Companion of Mr. Maſham's, who
" ply'd the latter ſo warmly with the alluring Pro-
" poſals of raiſing his Fortune, that he ſoon con-
" quer'd his Reluctance to marry one, that had
" little beſides the Queen's Favour to recommend
" her. Thus Mrs. Abigal Hill had her Wiſhes,
" and out of Gratitude, became ſhamefully ungrate-
" ful, entirely devoted to the Perſon who had
" contributed to make her happy; ſo that, by her
" Means, Mr. Robert Harley had freer Acceſs to
" the Queen than any other Miniſter. This Ad" vantage he improv'd ſo dextrouſly, by enter-
" taining her Majeſty with diverting Stories of
" the Town; that, on Pretence of Buſineſs, he
" was, at laſt, admitted into her pleaſurable Re-
" tirements, where he had Opportunity not
" only to ſtudy her Inclinations, but alſo to
" inſinuate ſuch Hints of Perſons and Things,
" as were agreeable to his Deſigns. Mr. Robert
" Harley's growing Favour could neither paſs un-
" obſerv'd, nor fail of giving Jealouſy to the Ge-
" neral and the Treaſurer; and the rather, be-
" cauſe upon the Overtures of Peace made by the " Elector of Bavaria, after the Battel of Ramel-
" lies, they found the Queen ſtrongly inclin'd to
" enter upon a Negotiation, which not ſuiting
" with their Notions of the publick Intereſt, they
" reſolv'd to remove him, whom they juſtly ſuſ-
" pected to have ſuggeſted Pacifick Counſels, and
" who beſides had, on ſeveral Occaſions, been
" backward to ſerve them in the Houſe of Com-
" mons. The General and Treaſurer repreſented
" him to the Queen as a dangerous Perſon, who
" neither conſulted her Honour, nor the Intereſt
" of Chriſtendom; and 'twas undoubtedly with an " Eye upon him, that ſhe ſaid in her Speech to
" the Parliament, She muſt think her ſelf oblig'd to
" look upon all thoſe who were willing and deſirous
" to ſupport her in this War, in order to bring it
" to a ſafe and honourable Concluſion, as the moſt
" proper Objects of her Favour and Encourage-
" ment:" For as yet ſhe had not forgot her many Triumphal Cavalcades to St. Paul's, which diſtinguiſh'd her Reign from all others, ſince that of Edward the IIId, for Victory and Glory. She had not yet brought her ſelf to be weary of a War, which made her Arbiter of the Weſtern World, and rais'd her Reputation above that of all Contemporary Princes; and therefore however ſhe might ſuffer Mr. Robert Harley to wheedle her in private, ſhe knew not yet how to throw away all that Applauſe which her Zeal for the Common Cauſe, and her Conduct in the Support of it, had acquir'd Abroad and at Home. In a word, ſhe knew not yet how to part with ſuch Faithful and Able Counſellors, as the Duke of Marlborough and the Earl of Godolphin, and put in their Places ſuch Men as Mr. Henry St. John, and Mr. Robert Harley, whoſe Names, without any Remark, ſpeak more than the ſevereſt Satyriſt could find Words to expreſs. Her Language, in that Speech, was doubtleſs an Effect of the Impreſſion ſhe had receiv'd from the Counſels of the General and the Treaſurer, who inſinuated to her, that though Mr. Robert Harley might not be acquainted with Greg's Treaſon, " Yet a Secretary of State, " like Cæſar's Wife, ſhould not only be innocent, " but unſuſpected: And when ſtill they found a " Reluctancy in the Queen to remove Mr. Robert " Harley, they abſolutely refus'd to come to Court " while he was there: Upon which the Queen " yielded. But though the Seals were taken from " him, yet by the good Offices of his truſty " Friend, Mrs. Maſham, he had ſtill, privately, " free Egreſs and Regreſs to her Majeſty, which " the Dutcheſs of Marlborough's more conſtant " Attendance would have prevented." Had ſhe been ſenſible of ſuch a clandeſtine Correſpondence, ſhe might eaſily have had it nipp'd in the Bud, but it prov'd too firm for her, after ſhe had let it take Root; and what fine Fruit it would bear, might well have been imagin'd, when two ſuch excellent Perſons as Mr. Robert Harley, and Mrs. Abigal Hill, had it in Culture. Mr. Henry St. John being diſcarded as well as Mr. Robert Harley, the Office of Secretary of War was conferr'd on Mr. Walpole, whoſe Abilities to diſcharge it, made that Exchange very agreeable to the Publick. Sir Thomas Manſel of Glamorganſhire, who had been Comptroller of the Houſhold, being remov'd, the Earl of Cholmondeley was put in his Room; and another Boſom Friend of Mr. Robert Harley, the Attorney-General, Sir Simon Harcourt, to ſhew his particular Reſentment of that Gentleman's Diſgrace, threw up a Place he had all the Reaſon in the World to believe he could not keep, and did it with ſo much Oſtentation, as to have his Surrender inroll'd on the 12th of February; as if the publiſhing it in the Gazette was not ſufficient, which would have been done of Courſe, or he was afraid ſome body would have taken his Name and Office upon him, after he had quitted it. The Author of the Detection writes, " Some other " Changes were made, moſt of Harley's Crea-
" tures were diſcarded, but the Heifer with which
" he plough'd, either was ſo inconſiderable at that
" Time, that ſhe was overlook'd, or ſo firmly
" rooted in the Queen's Favour, that there was
" no ſhocking of her. The Treaſon of Greg,
" and the Pretender's Attempt to invade Scotland,
" happening about that Time, help'd much to leſ-
" ſen the Character of the diſcarded Gentlemen,
" and to eſtabliſh their Opponents in their Places;
" and probably Maſham and Harley would never
" have carry'd their Point, had not their Way
" been made eaſier ſtill, by the Death of Prince
" George of Denmark.

*A.D.*1708.

Mr. Henry St. John turn'd out, and Mr. Walpole made Secretary at War.

Her Majeſty being indiſpos'd with the Gout, a Commiſſion was granted to ſeveral Lords to give the Royal Aſſent to ſuch Bills as were ready for it: Accordingly, February the 13th, they paſs'd,

Another Act for the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

An Act for raiſing a further Supply by the Sale of Annuities.

An Act for rendring the Union of the two Kingdoms more Entire and Compleat.

An Act for the Security of her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and of the Succeſſion of the Crown of Great Britain in the Proteſtant Line.

And to other publick and private Bills.

Kerr diſmiſs'd the Service in the Navy.

Upon the Complaints of the Merchants of the Misbehaviour of Commodore Kerr in the Weſt-Indies, the Houſe of Commons having taken the Matter into their Conſideration, preſented an Addreſs

*A.D.*1708. Addreſs to the Queen to diſmiſs Kerr her Service, which was done, and not Puniſhment enough for the Enormities prov'd againſt him.

It were to be wiſh'd, that in all National Acts and Judgments, the ſtricteſt Regard was had to Truth and Sincerity, then the thirty-five Millions which Mr. Harley got to be voted, as ſo much imbezled, though the Term was only unaccounted for, would have been made clear, and then the Publick would have ſeen that every Penny of thoſe Millions had been brought to Account, as faſt as conſiſted with the Nature of paſſing Accounts in the ſeveral Offices. And whereas it was reſolv'd, that of 29395 on the Eſtabliſhment for the Forces in Spain and Portugal, there were but 8660, at the Time of the Battel of Almanza, it would have been very ſatisfactory, If the Liſt of the effective Number of her Majeſty's Forces in Spain, ſome few Days before the Battel of ALMANZA, in the Month of April, 1707, as it was given by the Earl of Galway, had been explain'd, when the Vote concerning it was publiſh'd. *A.D.*1708.

Regiments Preſent at the Battel of Almanza.

Forces in Spain before the Battel of Almanza.

		Number.
HORSE.
Harvey,		227
DRAGOONS.
Killagrew,		51
Pearce,		273
Peterborough,		303
Guiſcard,		228
Carpenter, Eſſex,	by Detachments.	292
		1147
FOOT.
A Battalion of Guards,		400
Lord Portmore,		462
Southwell,		505
Stewart,		467
Hill,		472
Blood,		461
Lord Mordaunt,		532
Wade,		458
Gorge,		616
Lord Montjoy,		508
Maccartney,		494
Breton,		428
Alnut,		412
John Caulfield,		470
Lord Mark Kerr,		429
Count Naſſau,		422
		7536
		8910

Regiments in Quarters, Gariſons and Priſoners.

In Quarters and Gariſons.

DRAGOONS.

Royal at Culera,	302

FOOT.

Royal Fuzileers, and two Battalions of Foot at Girone,	1200
Hotham, Syburgh, and Bloſſet, and a Battalion of Marines in Alicant,	1200
Elliot and Watkins at Gibraltar,	800
A Detachment from the Army in Denia,	200
	3702

PRISONERS.

DRAGOONS.

Part of Cunningham's, afterwards Killigrew's Regiment taken at Elche,	150
A Detachment from the Gariſon of Alicant at Elche,	300
Lord Dungannon's Regiment on their March from Alicant,	400
Several other Priſoners taken at different Times and Places above,	1000
	1850
" To which is to be added the Commiſſion, Non-Common Officers, and the Officers and Servants of the Six Regiments of Farrington, Mohun, Hamilton, Allen, Brudenell, and Toby Caulfield, which were reduc'd a little time before the Battel of Almanza,	1189
	15641

GALWAY.

A.D.1708. Note, " That beſides the 15651 Men mention'd to be in Spain, four Regiments of Foot, making A.D.1708.
" 2900, viz. Pearce, Newton, Sanky, and Stanwix, were embark'd at Cork for Portugal, about the " 28th of April, 1707, which Regiments arriv'd at Lisbon the 4th of June, and were all the Forces
" in the Queen's Pay then in that Kingdom.

The Earl of GALWAY's Reaſons why the reſt were abſent.

The Vote about the Deficiencies at the Battel of Almanza, explain'd.

" The Eſtimate granted for Spain and Portugal for the Service of the Year 1707, } 29393
" amounts to, ——

" To make up which Number, there were in Spain at the Time of the Battel of
" Almanza, according to the Return made by the Earl of Galway to the Houſe of Com- } 13759
" mons, beſides a Battalion of Guards, three of Marines, a Detachment of Carpenter's
" and Eſſex's Dragoons, ——

" To which is to be added, the two Regiments of Foot of Colonel Hill's and Sir Charles
" Hotham's, twice demanded for in the ſaid Eſtimate, and therefore muſt be once deducted, } 1710
" making ——

" The Earl of Barrimore's Regiment, which had been reduc'd by the Earl of Peter- } 876
" borough, and was at the Time of the Battel of Almanza raiſing in England, ——

" The Servants of the Officers belonging to the ſeveral Regiments actually in Spain, and } 1833
" not reduc'd at the Time of the Battel of Almanza, ——

" The Widows Men for all the Regiments then in Spain, as allow'd by Act of Par- } 151
" liament, ——

" The Earl of Galway having already taken Credit in his Account, for the Officers and
" Servants belonging to the Regiments of Farrington, Hamilton, Mohun, Brudenell, Allen
" and Toby Caulfield, that were reduc'd ſome Time before the Battel of Almanza, but } 3741
" ſtill in Spain, there remains to be charg'd in this Account, the private Men only of
" thoſe Regiments whoſe Pay was ſtopp'd, and apply'd to their levying again in England,
" that very Year, ——

" The Non-Commiſſion Officers, and private Men of Bleſſet's Regiment, which make a
" Part of the 29395, and are not charg'd in my Lord Galway's Account of Effectives, be- } 622
" cauſe they were reduc'd by my Lord Rivers, and incorporated into Syburgh's, —— 22692

" So there only remains out of the 29395 Men provided for by Parliament, 6703, either Officers or
" Soldiers to be accounted for by Loſs in Tranſportation, by Death, Deſertion, and by Abſence on " Account of Sickneſs, or Recruiting; to ſupply which Defects, one Battalion of Guards, three of " Marines, and a Detachment of Dragoons were ſent to Spain, and four Regiments of Foot to " Portugal, which were not a Part of the Eſtabliſhment for Spain or Portugal, but were effectually
" 4792 Men.

GALWAY.

The Commons Addreſt twice for an Account of the Forces maintain'd the laſt Year by the Kings of Spain and Portugal; the former was laid before the Houſe; as to the latter, the Queen anſwer'd, " That ever ſince the Treaty with Portugal, her " Majeſty had given Directions to her Miniſters " there, to uſe all poſſible Means that that King " ſhould furniſh the whole Number of Men " agreed to by the ſaid Treaty, and her Majeſty " hop'd thoſe Inſtances had, in a great Meaſure, " had their deſired Effect. At the ſame Time ſhe " obſerv'd, That the Methods of Diſcipline in that " Kingdom, made it impoſſible to know the " Number of thoſe Troops with the ſame Exact- " neſs as is practis'd in other Parts, and conſi- " dering with what Chearfulneſs and Succeſs they " march'd through Spain to Madrid, and the " Loſs they ſuſtain'd, and being very well aſſur'd " that the King of Portugal had lately rais'd, and " was ſtill raiſing a conſiderable Number of For- " ces; her Majeſty had not thought it ad- " viſable to make too nice an Enquiry into the " State of thoſe Troops, eſpecially ſince ſhe was " very ſenſible how diligent the Enemy was in " continual Applications to break an Alliance of " ſo great Importance to the Common Cauſe. " The next Day, February the 24th, the Que- " ſtion being put in the Houſe of Commons, that " the Deficiency of the Engliſh Troops in Spain " and Portugal, at the Time of the Battel of " Almanza, had been chiefly occaſion'd by the " want of timely and effectual Recruits, it paſs'd " in the Negative." And it was Reſolv'd, " That an Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, " returning her the Thanks of the Houſe, for " her taking Meaſures to reſtore the Affairs in " Spain, and for providing Foreign Troops for " that Service." To which ſhe was pleas'd to Anſwer, I have always look'd upon the War in Spain to be of ſo great Importance, that I can never fail of continuing my utmoſt Application to ſupport it in the moſt effectual Manner: And the Satisfaction you have expreſs'd in your Addreſs for my Endeavours in this Matter, is extremely acceptable to me.

The Addreſs about the Miſmanagement of the Navy could not be ſo, becauſe the Prince of Denmark, her Conſort, was Lord High-Admiral, and the Anſwer ſhe made to it was ſoft enough, but evaſive.

The Pretender ſent to Scotland.

The French King's ſending the Pretender to Scotland, in the Spring of this Year, was look'd upon as an Effect of deſperate Counſels, the Effect of ſo many Routs, Diſappointments, Loſſes and Diſgraces. He was doubtleſs inſtigated to that vain and fruitleſs Attempt, by the falſe Accounts ſent him from Scotland, that the whole Kingdom was ſo diſguſted at the Union, that he would meet with little or no Oppoſition. I do not wonder that ſo many Perſons of Quality as the Duke of Hamilton, Duke of ——, the Earl Marſhal, the Earl of Wigtown, Earl of Errol, Lyon of Auchterhouſe, Ogilvie of Boyne, Lockhart of Carnwath, Drummond of Logie, the Earl of Strathmore, Viſcount Kilſythe, Lord Nairne, Lord John Drummond, Fotheringhame of Powric, Viſcount of Stormount, Graham of Fintra, and others, who, according to the Memorialiſt, ſign'd a Paper, to invite their Mock King to Scotland, ſhould forget them-

Scotch Jacobites invite him.

A.D.1708. themſelves and their Country ſo far, as to make a Preſent of their Kingſhip to a Perſon, whom they had greater Reaſon to believe to be Son of a Tyler, than the Son of James the VIIth, their Forefaulted Monarch; for we ſee every Day Faction levels the Great and the Small Vulgar, the Nobile and the Mobile, and makes People ſet up any Idol that will ſerve their Turn, and bring the Rabble together to worſhip it. Hooke, the Duke of Monmouth's Chaplain, now a French Colonel, and Papiſt, came from France the latter end of the laſt Summer, to ſee what could be done there for the French King's Intereſt, who, according to the Sham Lockhart, made uſe of the Pretender as a Tool only; and being furniſh'd with the before-mention'd Paper, return'd to France, to let the Court there know that all Things were ready for a Rebellion in Scotland, if they might have the Aſſiſtance they deſir'd; which Hooke communicated to them, and they thought the Juncture ſo favourable, that the French King reſolv'd to ſend Forces to Scotland in Ships under Convoy of the Count de Fourbin, with a conſiderable Squadron of Men of War. The Count tells us in his Memoirs, that he was ſenſible of the Raſhneſs and Folly of this Undertaking.

The Pretender the French King's Tool.

Count Fourbin diſſuades the Enterprize.

" All the Time I ſtaid at Court, ſays he, I " made ſeveral Attempts to perſuade the Miniſters " to drop an Enterprize, which I ſaw would be " ſo unprofitable: I quite tir'd my ſelf with repre- " ſenting the Inconveniencies of it; I told the " Prime Miniſter again and again, that the beſt " we could make of it, would be an unprofitable " and diſhonourable Cruize; that I was thoroughly " mortify'd at his Majeſty's having made Choice " of me for an Expedition, which had all the " Evidence of being attended with ill Succeſs: " That if a Deſcent was made, the Six thouſand " Men would ſurely be loſt, and the Forces of " the Kingdom diminiſh'd in Proportion, beſides " the Scandal of giving into a Chimerical Enter- " prize, which ought to be look'd upon as a mere " Dream. The Anſwer to all this was, The " Loſs of the Six thouſand Men gives us no Trou- " ble; the King of England, forſooth, ſo they " miſcall'd the Pretender, muſt be ſatisfy'd. I " could never get any Thing elſe out of the Mi- " niſtry. The Night before I ſet out for Dun- " kirk, I went to Court, to take my Leave of " the King: Monſieur Le Count, ſaid his Ma- " jeſty, You are ſenſible of the Importance of your " Commiſſion, I hope you will diſcharge it like your " ſelf. Sir, reply'd I, Your Majeſty does me a " very great Honour, but if you will vouchſafe me " a Moment's Audience, I have ſeveral Things to " repreſent to you concerning this Commiſſion.

The French King's Anſwer to him.

" The King, who had been inform'd by the Mi- " niſter of the Objections I had made to it all " along, only ſaid, Monſieur Fourbin, I wiſh you " a good Voyage, I have Affairs upon my Hands " and cannot hear you now.

The French King, to dreſs up his Poppet for the Purpoſe, not only furniſh'd him with Cloaths and Equipage for himſelf, but alſo for his Guards, when he could get any; and going to St. Germains to bid him Adieu, preſented him with a Sword ſet about with Diamonds, and worth as much as would have maintain'd him, in an honeſt way of Living, many Years; deſiring him to remember that the Sword was French. The Chevalier de St. George, for like other Knights Errant, he muſt have a Nickname for his Adventures, aſſur'd his Brother, King Lewis the XIVth,

And Diſcourſe with the Pretender.

" That if it was his good Fortune to get Poſ- " ſeſſion of the Throne of his Anceſtors, he " would not content himſelf to return him " Thanks by Letters and Ambaſſadors, but would " ſhew his Gratitude by Deeds; nay, he would A.D.1708. " come in Perſon to acknowledge his Majeſty's " Protection and Aſſiſtance. To which the Moſt Chriſtian King reply'd, I hope never to ſee you again. Which whether it is true or not that he ſaid it, I doubt not he thought it; for the keeping of him had coſt, and was like to coſt him, many a fair Million of French Money, without his being a Sous the better for it. Beſides Cloaths, the Chevalier had many rich Tents ſent him, a large Set of Gold and Silver Plate, and many other valuable Moveables: The Expence of which the Pope clubb'd for, as was then reported.

The Preparations made for this formidable Invaſion at Dunkirk gave ſome Uneaſineſs to the Dutch, who ſeem'd to be apprehenſive of a Deſign againſt the Province of Zealand: But Major-General Cadogan, who imitated the Diligence and Activity of his Patron the Duke of Marlborough, got early Intelligence that the Armament threatned Great Britain; which being communicated to our Court, Mr. Secretary Boyle acquainted the Commons, March the 4th, what Advices had been receiv'd the Night before, and that Morning, of great Preparations at Dunkirk for an immediate Invaſion upon England, and that the pretended Prince of Wales was come thither for that Purpoſe: Upon which it was unanimouſly reſolv'd, to preſent an Addreſs to her Majeſty; in which the Houſe of Lords having readily concurr'd, it was preſented the next Day in the following Terms:

Lords and Commons Addreſs on the Invaſion.

" WE your Majeſty's moſt faithful and obedi- " ent Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and " Temporal, and Commons of Great Britain, in " Parliament Aſſembled, do beg Leave to return " our moſt hearty Thanks to your Majeſty, for " being graciouſly pleas'd to communicate to " your Parliament the Intelligence you have " receiv'd of an intended Invaſion of this King- " dom by the pretended Prince of Wales, ſup- " ported by French Power.

" We are ſo ſenſible of the Happineſs we enjoy " under your Majeſty, and are ſo affected with " the dangerous Conſequence of ſuch an Attempt, " both to your Perſon and Government, that " with Hearts full of Concern for your Majeſty's " Safety, we beſeech your Majeſty that you will " take particular Care of your Royal Perſon; and " we, on our Parts, are fully and unanimouſly re- " ſolv'd to ſtand by, and aſſiſt your Majeſty with " our Lives and Fortunes, in Maintainance of " your undoubted Right and Title to the Crown " of theſe Realms, againſt the pretended Prince " of Wales, and all other your Enemies, both at " Home and Abroad.

And for recovering all Spain.

" The Care your Majeſty has taken for the " Defence of your Dominions, and particularly " in fitting out ſo great a Fleet in ſo ſhort a " Time, gives Satisfaction and Encouragement " to all your good Subjects, who are likewiſe very " ſenſible of the Zeal the States-General have " ſhewn upon this Occaſion.

" As a further Inſtance of our Duty, we hum- " bly deſire that you will be pleaſed to order, that " the Laws againſt Papiſts and Nonjurors be put " in Execution, and that Directions be given to " ſeize and ſecure ſuch Perſons, with their Horſes " and Arms, as your Majeſty ſhall have Cauſe " to ſuſpect are diſaffected to your Perſon and " Government.

" And as we doubt not but by the Bleſſing of " God upon the Continuance of your Majeſty's " Care, your Enemies will be put to Confuſion: " So we readily embrace this Opportunity to ſhew " to your Majeſty, and the whole World, that " no Attempts of this Kind ſhall deter us from " ſup-

A.D.1708. " ſupporting your Majeſty in a vigorous Proſecu- " tion of the preſent War againſt France, 'till " the Monarchy of Spain be reſtor'd to the Houſe " of Auſtria, and your Majeſty have the Glory " to compleat the Recovery of the Liberties of " Europe.

The QUEEN's Anſwer,

Queen's Anſwer.

I Have ſuch an entire Dependance on the Providence of God, and ſo much Truſt in the faithful Services of my good Subjects, that I hope this Attempt will prove dangerous only to thoſe that undertake it.

I am extreamly ſenſible of your Concern and Affection for my Government, and ſhall have a very particular Regard to the Advice you give me upon this Occaſion.

I am alſo very well pleas'd with the Juſtice which you have done the States-General, with taking Notice of their timely Care for our Safety, and their Readineſs to give us all poſſible Aſſiſtance.

The firm Reſolution which you expreſs upon all Occaſions, of ſupporting me in bringing this War to a ſafe and happy Concluſion, as it is moſt eſſentially obliging to me, ſo I aſſure my ſelf it will mightily diſhearten our Common Enemies, and give the greateſt Encouragement and Advantage to our Allies.

Habeas Corpus Act ſuſpended.

The Parliament ſuſpended the Habeas Corpus Act, and the Pretender, and his Adherents, were proclaim'd Traytors.

The Pretender proclaim'd a Traytor.

Major-General Cadogan, with Monſieur d' Auverquerque at Bruſſels, and General Lumley at Ghent, concerted proper Meaſures for the March of the Britiſh Troops to be ſhipp'd off for Great Britain; and how to ſupply their Room in the ſeveral Gariſons, Orders were given to ten Battalions to hold themſelves in a Readineſs to march at an Hour's Warning; as a Battalion of Guards, two of Orkney's, one of Argyle's, one of Primroſe's, one of Lalo's, one of How's, one of Ingoldsby's, one of North and Grey's, one of Godfrey's; and Tranſports were provided for them to embark, as ſoon as there ſhould be certain Advice that the twelve French Battalions that were to attend the Pretender, were actually on Board.

Preparations Abroad againſt him.

On the 10th of February, O. S. Sir George Byng, and the Lord Durſley, ſail'd from Deal towards the Coaſt of Dunkirk, with twenty-three Engliſh, and three Dutch Men of War, and one Fireſhip, and about Noon anchor'd in Gravelin Pitts, where Sir George went into a ſmall Frigat, and ſail'd within two Miles of Flemiſh-Road, and the next Day he learn'd from a Fiſherman, the Number and Strength of the Enemies Ships; that about Ten thouſand Men were in Dunkirk and the Neighbourhood, and that the Prince of Wales was come to Gravelin, in his way to Dunkirk, where he arriv'd the Day that Sir George Byng ſail'd from Deal. The French were ſo ſurpriz'd at the Appearance of the Engliſh Fleet, that a Stop was put to the Embarkation of the Troops, and the Count de Fourbin magnify'd the Number of Sir George Byng's Ships, writing to Court, " That " they were thirty-eight, that the Enemies Force " was too much ſuperior to theirs, for them to " attempt to get out in their Sight; and it was " impoſſible for them to Sail, without hazarding " the Loſs of all: That the Engliſh Fleet would " not fail to purſue them, and they having no " Port in Scotland to retire to, 'twas evident, if " the Enemy did but attack them, they ſhould be " entirely at their Mercy; and therefore it was " his Opinion to lay up the Squadron; accord- " ingly, Orders were ſent him to Unrig; but ſe- " veral who were ſure to be gainers by the De- " parture of the Fleet, ſent ſo many Lies to the " Court, and to the Queen Dowager of England, " who was then at Verſailes, as alter'd their Re- " ſolutions; for ſhe made ſuch preſſing Inſtances " to the King, that he granted all ſhe deſir'd, " and I, ſays Fourbin, in his Memoirs, receiv'd " poſitive Order to conform to the King of Eng- " land, that Queen's Nurſling's Will and Pleaſure, " and to obey him in every Thing without diſ- " puting. A.D.1708.

Fourbin ſtill againſt the Enterprize.

" Monſieur Gace, a Lieutenant-General, who " commanded the French Troops, had the Promiſe " of being declar'd a Mareſchal of France, as ſoon " as the Sham Monarch was at Sea, which made " him in a Hurry to have the Pretender on Board, " and the Troops reimbark'd, for which all but him- " ſelf were impatient, when the Engliſh Fleet were " driven from their Station by the High-Winds." The Pretender falling Sick of the Meaſles, retarded them a few Days; but on the 17th of March, N. S. Fourbin ſail'd from the Road of Dunkirk, and the Wind chopping, came to an Anchor in Newport-Pitts, where they continu'd 'till the 19th, and then ſail'd with a fair Wind. Sir George Byng return'd to the Downs, and was reinforc'd to the Number of forty Ships of the Line. On the 17th of March he ſet Sail again, and the next Day, being between Calais and Dunkirk, he receiv'd Intelligence by an Oſtend Ship, ſent out by Major-General Cadogan, of the ſailing of the Dunkirk Squadron from Newport-Pitts; upon which he call'd a Council of War, and it was reſolv'd to go in Purſuit of the Enemy; having firſt made a Detachment of a ſtrong Squadron, under Command of Admiral Baker to Convoy the Troops that were embark'd at Oſtend. The Count de Fourbin writes,

Fourbin's Account of it.

" Two Days after, the Wind turning fair, " we ſet Sail again, and upon the third Day, we " arriv'd upon the Coaſt of Scotland, within " Sight of Land: Our Pilots had made a wrong " Reckoning of ſix Leagues, but they corrected " their Miſtake, and both Wind and Tide " proving contrary, we anchor'd, in the Dusk of " the Evening, before the Frith of Edinburgh, about " three Leagues from Land. Our making of " Signals, kindling of Fires, and diſcharging of " Cannon, was in vain, for no body came near " us. About Midnight Word was brought me, " that five Canons were fir'd towards the South, " and I quickly imagin'd it could be nothing but " a Signal of the Enemy; accordingly, at break " of Day, we diſcover'd the Engliſh Fleet at " Anchor about four Leagues from us." But as Fourbin, and the pretended Lockhart's Accounts of this Expedition, are little better than a String of Lies, we muſt look out for more authentick ones, Sir George Byng's, in his two Letters from on Board the Medway, the 13th and 15th of March, O. S. importing, in his own Words, " According to " the Opinion we had form'd, when we left the " Station of Dunkirk, it has prov'd that the Ene- " my was deſign'd for Edinburgh. This Morn- " ing we ſaw the Fleet in the Mouth of the " Frith, off of which Place we anchor'd in the " laſt Night, and ſent a Boat aſhore to the Iſle of " Mull, from whence we had an Account, that " the French came to an Anchor yeſterday in the " Afternoon. They ſent one Ship up into Leith " Road, which had a Flag at the Main Top- " Maſt Head: They report it a Blue one, but " we are rather of Opinion that it is the Stan- " dard. The People of the Iſland ſay, that by " the Time that Ship could get up before the " Town, they heard ſeveral Guns fire, which " were in the manner of Salute. The Ship

*A.D.*1708. " that went up yeſterday, came down this Morn-
" ing, and is now within two Leagues of us. She " appears to be a Ship of ſixty Guns, but has
" now no Flag on Board. We ſaw this Morn-
" ing when they weigh'd a Flag at the Main-top-
" maſt Head, on Board one of their Ships; they
" ſtood from us, and we after them with all the " Sail we could make: We chac'd them to the " Northward of Buccaneſs, ſometimes with rea-
" ſonable Hopes of coming up with them. The " Dover and Ludlow-Caſtle being the only clean
" ſailing Ships we had, they were the firſt which
The French Fleet, with the Pretender on Board, run away. " came up with part of the Enemies Squadron,
" paſſing by ſome of the ſmaller, to engage ſome
" of the larger Ships, and ſtop them, 'till they " could be reliev'd. They attack'd two or three
" of their Ships, among which was the Saliſ-
" bury; they did not part with them 'till more of
" our Ships arriv'd, but work'd their Ships in a
" handſome manner, to cut 'em off from the reſt
" of their Fleet; but in the Darkneſs of the Night
" they all got out of Sight, except the Salisbury,
" who falling in amongſt our Headmoſt Ships,
" the Leopard enter'd Men on board her; we
" were inform'd by the Officers who were taken,
" that there were twelve Battalions on board their
" Squadron, commanded by the Count de Gace,
" a Mareſchal of France; the pretended Prince
" of Wales, Lord Middleton, Lord Perth, the " Macdonalds, Trevanion, and ſeveral other Of" ficers and Gentlemen, were on board the Mary,
" in which alſo was Monſieur Fourbin, who com-
" manded the Squadron. The Number and
" Strength of their Ships, are very near the Ac-
" count we receiv'd from Dunkirk; nor were
" they join'd by the Breſt Men of War. The " Morning after the Chace, we ſaw but eighteen
" of the Enemies Ships, as far as we could per-
" ceive them from the Maſt-Head, in the Eaſt-
" North-Eaſt of us. Having no Proſpect of " coming up with them, we lay off and on
" Buccaneſs all Day yeſterday, to gather our
" Ships together; and this Day, it blowing hard
" at North-Eaſt, with a great Sea, judging the " Enemy could not ſeize the Shore to make any " Attempt, we bore up for Leith Road, which
" was thought moſt reaſonable, not only to ſe-
" cure it, but to give Countenance and Spirit to
" her Majeſty's faithful Subjects, and diſcourage thoſe
" that could have Thoughts of being our Enemies.

In the mean Time the Parliament of Great Britain proceeded with great Unanimity and Vigor, in their Reſolutions for the Support of her Majeſty's Government, againſt the Pretender, and all his Adherents. They paſs'd a Bill to diſcharge the Clans of Scotland from their Vaſſalage to their Heads, who took up Arms againſt the Queen. This Bill was chiefly owing to Major-General Stanhope, and Sir David Dalrymple; and on the 10th of March, two Bills being ready for the Royal Aſſent, the Queen gave it to,

An Act for the further Security of her Majeſties Perſon and Government:

And An Act to impower her Majeſty to ſecure and detain ſuſpected Perſons.

After which ſhe acquainted them, that the Pretender was ſail'd from Dunkirk, and that Sir George Byng had Notice of it: That the Troops at Oſtend were ready to embark for the North of England, and that ſhe ſhould continue to take all proper Methods for diſappointing the Enemies Deſigns. The Commons unanimouſly voted an hearty Addreſs to the Queen, which was preſented the 13th of March, O. S. and is well worth the Curioſity of the preſent, and all future Times.

The Commons hearty Addreſs.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

" WE your Majeſties moſt Dutiful and Loyal
" Subjects, the Commons of Great Bri-
*A.D.*1708. " tain in Parliament Aſſembled, humbly wait on
" your Majeſty, to expreſs the great Senſe we " have of your Grace and Favour, in communi-
" cating to us from the Throne, the Account of
" the French King's perſiſting to invade your
" Dominions, and to impoſe a Pretender upon
" theſe Realms, over which your Majeſty is
" Rightful and Lawful Sovereign.

" The Number of Ships and Troops with
" which this Project is proſecuted, notwithſtand-
" ing the great Naval Forces your Majeſty hath
" fitted out with ſo much Expedition, as it ought " to be regarded with Contempt, on the one Side,
" ſo on the other, it gives us juſt Cauſe to be" lieve, that their chief Dependance is upon ſome
" of your Subjects, whoſe reſtleſs Paſſions, and
" arbitrary Principles, have, for ſome Years,
" engag'd them in forming Deſigns to undermine
" and deſtroy the moſt happy Eſtabliſhment that
" the Government of this Iſland was ever founded
" upon.

" The Defence of your Majeſties Perſon and
" Government, and the Support of the Proteſtant
" Succeſſion, are Things ſo Sacred to us, and your
" People, that as a Demonſtration of our un-
" feign'd Zeal to Aſſiſt and Support your Majeſty
" to the utmoſt of our Power,

" We do, in the Name of the Commons of " Great Britain, give this Aſſurance, that what-
" ſoever Charge you ſhall be at, by augmenting
" your Troops at Home, and replacing thoſe you
" have recall'd from Abroad, or for ſuch other
" Services as your Majeſty ſhall judge neceſſary
" upon this extraordinary Occaſion, ſhall be ef-
" fectually made good. And as we humbly re-
" commend it to your Majeſty, that the ſevereſt
" Puniſhments may be inflicted upon ſuch as ſhall
" aſſiſt in ſo unnatural a Deſign, as that of be-
" traying your Majeſty, and their Country, ſo
" we do not doubt but you will give ſuitable En-
" couragement to all thoſe who ſhall ſhew their
" Fidelity, by oppoſing the Invader, and his Ac-
" complices, in Scotland, or wherever the Deſcent
" ſhall be.

" Your Majeſty wants no Incitement to a
" ſteady Proſecution of the War, in which you
" are engag'd for the Common Cauſe; yet permit
" us to take this Opportunity to intreat your
" Majeſty, that this Enterprize may no ways
" divert your conſtant Vigor; that all the World
" may ſee, that both your Majeſty, and your
" People, are determin'd to ſupport your Allies
" in all Parts, whatever Attempts are made at " Home.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

" There can be nothing ſo dangerous or fatal to
" the Safety of your Royal Perſon, and the Se" curity of the preſent happy Eſtabliſhment, as
" thoſe Perſons who endeavour to create Diviſions
" and Animoſities among your faithful Subjects,
" or by any artful Methods leſſen the juſt Eſteem
" your Majeſty has for thoſe who have ſo emi-
" nently, and in ſo diſtinguiſhing a Manner,
" commanded your Armies, and manag'd your
" Treaſure, to the Honour and Glory of your
" Majeſty Abroad, and the Entire Satisfaction of
" your People at Home: We therefore humbly
The Commons deſire her Majeſty to continue the Miniſtry. " beg Leave to beſeech your Majeſty to Diſcoun-
" tenance all ſuch Perſons and Deſigns, in the
" moſt remarkable Manner.

No body can doubt but this refers to the Intrigues and Clamours of the Tories, particularly Meſſieurs Harley, St. John, and Harcourt; and we ſhall ſee what Thoughts her Majeſty had of 'em then, by her Anſwer:

A.D.1708.

GENTLEMEN,

I Give you hearty Thanks for this repeated Aſſurance, and certain Proof of your Zeal for me, and for the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

I am glad your Thoughts of the War Abroad, ſo perfectly agree with my firm Reſolutions upon that Subject.

You may depend, that no Apprehenſions farther than are reaſonable, ſhall have any Influence on my Meaſures, while the Cauſe of Religion and Liberty, with the good Affections of my People, are on my Side.

The Queen promiſes it.

I think all who endeavour to make Diviſions among my faithful Subjects, muſt be mine and the Kingdom's Enemies; and I ſhall never Countenance any Perſon who would go about to leſſen the juſt Eſteem which I have for thoſe who have done, and continue to do me the moſt eminent Services.

Mr. Robert Harley's Letter the very Reverſe of both the Addreſs and Anſwer.

It is moſt certain that Mr. Harley had by the Means of Mrs. Abigal Hill, ſecret Acceſs to the Queen, while he was endeavouring with all his Might to create Diviſions among her faithful Subjects; and it is as certain, that in the Patent which was granted for making that moſt excellent Perſon a Lord, the very Treaſurer, whom the Parliament of Great Britain did now ſo highly extol for his good Management, was, two or three Years afterwards, ſtigmatiz'd as a Peculator or Plunderer of the Nation.

The Lords Addreſs was as hearty as that of the Commons, and among other Expreſſions of equal Force, Truth and Affection, their Lordſhips ſay,

The Lords Addreſs to employ none but the Friends of King William.

"WE hope your Majeſty will always have a "juſt Deteſtation of thoſe Perſons, who "at a Time when this Helliſh Attempt was a- "Foot, and ſo near breaking out, were uſing "their Endeavours to miſrepreſent the Actions of "your beſt Subjects, and create Jealouſies in your "Majeſty of thoſe who had always ſerv'd you "moſt eminently and faithfully. And we beſeech "your Majeſty not to give ſo juſt a Cauſe of "Uneaſineſs to your People, as to ſuffer any ſuch "hereafter to have Acceſs to your Royal Perſon. "We hope for this good Effect from ſo unhappy "an Occaſion: That the univerſal Zeal which "will appear for the Preſervation of your Ma- "jeſty's Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſ- "ſion, will unite us to one another, and cure "our Miſtakes and Miſapprehenſions, which have "been ſo induſtriouſly and maliciouſly improv'd. "But nevertheleſs, we moſt humbly offer it to "your Majeſty as our Opinion, that your Ma- "jeſty ſhould principally depend upon, and en- "courage thoſe, who have been ever ſince the "Revolution, moſt ſteady and firm to the Intereſt "of the late King, and of your Majeſty, during "your happy Reign.

The Whigs took hold of this Opportunity of the Queen being under ſome Apprehenſions, which made her think their Support abſolutely neceſſary for her Safety, to get a Declaration from her to confirm Revolution Principles. Againſt which ſuch a heap of Addreſſes was brought to her, and, as the State Paper ſaid, receiv'd graciouſly by her, after Sacheverel's Sedition. However, the Anſwer now was:

MY LORDS,

I Am extreamly ſenſible of your Zeal and Concern for the Safety of my Perſon and Government, and am very well pleas'd to find your Thoughts agree ſo exactly with mine, that no Attempt of our Enemies againſt us at Home, ſhould divert us from proſecuting the War Abroad with the greateſt Vigour; the Hopes of which has probably been one of their principal Motives to ſo preſumptuous an Undertaking. A.D.1708.

As I cannot but wiſh there were not the leaſt Occaſion of Diſtinction among my Subjects, ſo I muſt always place my chief Dependance upon thoſe who have given ſuch repeated Proofs of the greateſt Warmth and Concern for the Support of the Revolution, the Security of my Perſon, and of the Proteſtant Succeſſion. The Queen declares ſhe depends on Men of Revolution Principles.

The Preparations that were made by Sea and Land, for oppoſing the wicked Deſigns of the Jacobites, by inviting the French hither, were ſo ample, and ſo ſoon ready, that this doughty Invaſion was the Jeſt of the more ſanguine People of Great Britain; and though it had many Well-willers in Scotland, under the ſpecious Pretence of recovering their Sovereignty and Independency, yet it is infamouſly falſe to aſſert, as the Memoiriſt does, that all North Britain was impatient to be in Arms at the Heels of the Pretender.

Preparations at Land againſt the Pretender.

Beſides the ten Battalions which Major-General Cadogan ſhipp'd off at Oſtend, and which arriv'd the 20th of March at Tinmouth, the firſt and ſecond Troop of Horſe-Guards, a Squadron of Horſe-Grenadiers, the Royal Regiment of Horſe, call'd Oxford's, the Dragoons of Eſſex and Carpenter, a compleat Battalion draughted out of the firſt and ſecond Regiments of Foot-Guards, and ſeveral Regiments of Foot, were order'd to march towards Scotland; which with the Scotch Forces, would have made an Army of near Two thouſand Horſe and Dragoons, and Thirteen thouſand Foot, more than enough to have driven the Invaders into the Sea, and the Rebels to the Gallows, without any other Draughts from England or Flanders. There was a Deſign to betray Edinburgh Caſtle to theſe Traytors, but the Lord Juſtice Clerk diſcover'd it in Time to prevent its Execution, though it went ſo far, that ſome of the Conſpirators were taken in the Fact.

The Pretender's Britiſh Company in a terrible Pannick.

Fourbin, in his Memoirs, gives a wretched Account of the Cowardice and Dejection of the Engliſh Fugitives who attended their Poppet Prince to Scotland, when they underſtood the Engliſh Fleet was approaching; for beſides being kill'd or drown'd, they had good Cauſe to fear alſo, that they might be hang'd; They quak'd, they look'd upon all as loſt; which Pannick Terror of theirs, made me heartily merry: They grew more and more affrighted, and feign would have perſuaded their King to have run aſhore, and have hid himſelf in a Caſtle belonging to a Nobleman on the Coaſt, but Fourbin would not let him, having a better Head than any of his Renegade Council. He knew the Danger, and the French King having ſtill a Game to play with the Pretender, if he was caught, as in all Probability he would be, they might both, Mock-King and Admiral, go off the ſame Way, the one in Scotland, and the other in France, ſo he carry'd him back to Dunkirk: And the Sham Lockhart thinks he really never had any Orders to Land him, but by ſhewing him on the Coaſt, to induce the Scotch to riſe in Rebellion; and having cut out Buſineſs for the Queen's Forces there, to have his own brought home again for other Services, or only to leave a few to encourage the Rebels.

Some taken on board the Saliſbury.

Aboard the Salisbury were found the Lord Griffin, the Earl of Middleton's two Sons, Colonel Francis Wachop, Monſieur La Vic, a French Major-General, and other Officers, and three or four hundred Soldiers. In neither Griffin, nor Mid-

A.D.1708. Middleton's two Sons, nor Wachop, nor any one of the Conſpirators taken up in Scotland, nor Duke Hamilton, who, according to the Memoiriſt, was the moſt zealous and buſy of all the Scotch Jacobites in this intened Invaſion and Rebellion, were brought to condign Puniſhment, according to the Addreſs of the Parliament, and the earneſt Deſires of all good Britons; inſtead of which Duke Hamilton was only committed to a Meſſenger, and ſoon after let out upon Bail, and ſoon after that made a Miniſter of State.

It having been ſuggeſted that Sir George Byng might have deſtroy'd the whole Dunkirk Squadron, had his Ships been clean, the Commons addreſs'd for an Account of the Number of Ships Sir George Byng had with him, and when the ſame were clean'd; which Account having been examin'd, they Reſolv'd, "That an Addreſs of Thanks be "given to his Royal Highneſs the Lord High-"Admiral, for his great Care in ſo expeditiouſly "ſetting forth ſo great a Number of Ships, "whereby the Fleet, under the Conduct of Sir "George Byng, was enabled ſo happily to prevent "the intended Invaſion:" And order'd that Sir Richard Onſlow, Mr. Secretary Boyle, Mr. Compton, Mr. Scobel, Colonel Byerley, Lord William Pawlet, the Earl of Hertford, Mr. Heyſham, Admiral Churchil, Mr. Bromley, Sir Godfrey Copley, Sir Thomas Hanmer, Sir Thomas Littleton, Sir David Dalrymple, Mr. Montgomery, Mr. Moriſon, Mr. Brewer, Sir John Swinton, Sir John Erskine, Mr. Halden, Mr. Cockburne, Sir John Holland, and Mr. Wortley, ſhould give his Royal Highneſs the Thanks of the Houſe accordingly.

Members of Parliament order'd to thank the Prince of Denmark.

A Run upon the Bank.

There had been upon the Rumour, and afterward the News of the French Invaſion, a great Run upon the Bank of England. I do not ſuppoſe that it was effected to ſo great a Degree by the Endeavours of the Diſaffected to deſtroy the Publick Credit, and by that Means increaſe the Confuſion and Ruin they were contriving to bring us into; but that there were ſuch Endeavours us'd, was apparent by the Vote of the Houſe of Commons, declaring all thoſe who did ſo, were guilty of a High Crime and Miſdemeanour, and Enemies to her Majeſty and the Kingdom. The Truth is, the moſt dangerous Effect of the Enemies intended Invaſion, was the occaſioning great Demands upon the Bank, in which the Credit of the Exchequer was involv'd; and therefore the Lord Treaſurer ſignify'd to the Directors, that the Queen would allow an Intereſt of ſix per Cent. for ſix Months upon their Bills, which before carry'd but three. At the ſame Time his Lordſhip offer'd them a conſiderable Sum of Money, as did alſo ſeveral other Peers, as the Dukes of Somerſet, Marlborough and Newcaſtle, and the Payments in the Chancery and the Exchequer, were order'd to be made to the Bank, which the Goldſmiths who had a great deal of that Money, were not at all pleas'd with. The Directors reſolv'd to call in twenty per Cent. on their Capital Stock; by all which Means they were enabled to pay off their Notes regularly, and then the Run upon them ceas'd gradually. Sir Richard Hoar, a Goldſmith, and a ſtaunch Churchman, was much reflected on, for having, like his Brother Goldſmiths, ſcrap'd together as many Bank Notes as he could get, and then demanding the Money all at once, on purpoſe to ſtreighten and diſtreſs the Bank of England, who had depriv'd them of the greateſt Part of the Trade they drove with other Mens Money lodg'd in their Hands; and this, and the extream Caution of the Money'd Men, as jealous of their Caſh, as fond Lovers of their Miſtreſſes, were the two chief Cauſes of the Streight the Directors were put to; for the Jacobites were a poor miſerable Faction, who had no Money to draw out, or ſo little, that it could not have been miſs'd. A.D.1708.

Sir Richard Hoar againſt the Bank.

On the 20th of March, the Queen gave the Royal Aſſent to,

An Act for aſſuring to the Eaſt-India Company a longer Time in their Fund and Trade, and for raiſing thereby One Million two hundred thouſand Pounds for carrying on the War.

And to ſeveral other publick Acts, and ſix private.

The Commons addreſs'd the Queen for fortifying Portſmouth and Chatham, and the Caſtles in Scotland, and againſt ſuch Commanders of Men of War, or Fortifications in Newfoundland, as ſhould exact any Money of any of her Majeſty's Subjects concern'd in the Trade or Fiſhery there.

A Committee of Lords examine Greg.

The Houſe of Peers appointed a Committee of Lords, among whom the Earl of Sunderland was chief Manager, to examine the Traytor Greg; for their Lordſhips could hardly conceive that the Villain would enter into, and carry on a Correſpondence with Chamillard, the French King's Miniſter, without Encouragement from his Maſter, whoſe Character contributed much to ſuch a Suſpicion, excepting that his Cunning was not conſiſtent with his venturing his Neck on the Fidelity of ſuch a ſorry, indigent Wretch as Greg. The Lords Committees examin'd alſo Alexander Valier, and John Baza, whom Mr. Robert Harley employ'd as Spies, and were both found to be in the French Intereſt. After hearing of Witneſſes, and Peruſal of ſeveral Papers, the Lords Committees made a Report to the Houſe, who preſented an Addreſs to the Queen, containing their Reſolutions.

Mr. Robert Harley employ'd Men in the French Intereſt.

Firſt, That the Crime of which William Greg ſtood attainted, was of ſo heinous a Nature, and attended with ſuch extraordinary Circumſtances, that it might prove of very pernicious Conſequence, if he ſhould not be made an Example. Secondly, And that it plainly appear'd to them, as well by what Alexander Valiere and John Baza had inform'd againſt each other, as by the many Examinations taken concerning them, that they were both in the French Intereſt, and unfit to be truſted or employ'd by any Perſons in her Majeſty's Service; and that the open and publick manner of the Correſpondence manag'd by them with the Governor and Commiſſaries of Calais and Bologne, could tend only to carrying on an Intelligence to the Advantage of her Majeſty's Enemies; and that it was highly probable thereby, the Stations of our Cruizers, the Strength of our Convoys, and the Times of Sailing of our Merchant-Ships had been betray'd to the French.

The Queen ſaid in Anſwer: I am ſorry that any who have been employ'd by thoſe in my Service, ſhould have prov'd falſe to their Truſt, and injurious to the Publick. I doubt not the Example laid before me by your Lordſhips, will be a ſufficient Warning to keep all Matters of Importance as ſecret as may be, and to employ ſuch only, as there ſhall be good Grounds to believe will be Faithful.

Greg at the Gallows clears Mr. Robert Harley.

Greg, who was not hang'd 'till the 25th of April, left a Paper with the Sheriff, wherein he clear'd his Maſter Harley, who, as negligent as he was of State Secrets, was too tenacious of his own, to employ an Under-Clerk in his Office to carry on a Correſpondence with the Enemy. Greg declar'd he did it for Money, which had been but ill paid, and deny'd his having any Inclination to do the Pretender Service; whoſe Title he diſ-own'd

*A.D.*1708. own'd at his Death, as he had always done in his Life Time.

On the first of April, her Majesty came to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to,

An Act for the further directing of the Payment of the Equivalent Money.

An Act for further providing and electing sixteen Peers of Scotland to sit in Parliament, and for the further regulating of Votes in Elections.

An Act for establishing a Court of Exchequer in North Britain.

An Act for better preventing Mischiefs that may happen by Fire.

To several Money, and other Publick, and seventeen Private Acts.

Then her Majesty made a Speech to both Houses, in which having thank'd them for the Supplies, she said,

Queen's Speech against the Pretender.

SHE took them for such undeniable Proofs of their Zeal and Affection for her Service, as must convince every body of their doing her Justice, to believe that all that was dear to them, was perfectly safe under her Government; and must be irrecoverably lost, if ever the Designs of a Popish Pretender, bred up in Principles of the most Arbitrary Government, should take Place.

Shall we not remember this, when we find Abbot Gualtier, and Sir Patrick Lawless, Agents for the Pretender, favourably receiv'd by her Ministers, in the last Years of this Reign? She proceeded, and said;

She was satisfy'd that very false Representations of the true Inclinations and Interest of her People must have been made by some of her Subjects, who had given Encouragement to that desperate Attempt; since without something of that Nature, it seem'd very little consisting with the usual Precautions of her Enemies, to hazard the Expence of so vain and ill-grounded an Undertaking. That nevertheless we must all be inexcusable, if we took not Warning from that Attempt, to compleat what might be necessary for our Security at Home, and the discouraging the like for the future.

Then having recommended to them to put the Laws in Execution against Papists, and all others disaffected to her Government, and in making them pay towards the Publick Taxes, to the full of what the Law requir'd; she added,

And for the Jacobites paying double Taxes.

That there was nothing more reasonable, than that they, who by their Principles and Practices had encourag'd, if not actually fomented such Disturbances, should doubly contribute to the Charge of quieting them, and securing the Peace of the Kingdom.

This was Queen Anne's Opinion, and it was just: Yet when in the Reign of his late Majesty, One Hundred thousand Pounds was to be levy'd on the Papists, the Party that pretended to be Adorers of all her Sentiments in the last Scene of her Life, did violently oppose it, though she had declar'd, that nothing was more reasonable.

The French King acts like one desperate.

Those who will read the History of Lewis the XIVth with Attention, will perceive, that from his breaking the Partition Treaty, and owning the Pretender, he had not acted in one Thing like a Man who had the Use of his former Reason. All his Counsels have been rash and obstinate or mean and trifling Contraries, which are often met with in the Course of unjust and ill-grounded Undertakings. Of this Kind is the Circular Letter he wrote to his Ministers in Rome, Swisserland, Geneva, and other Neutral Places; an insipid Piece, which has nothing to keep Life in it, but the Remains of that mighty Monarch's invincible Vanity. He therein commanded his Envoys to declare in his Name, *A.D.*1708.

His Circular Letter in Favour of the Pretender.

" That he had long been of Opinion, that the " affisting the King of England, He means his " Almsman at St. Germains, to possess the " Throne of his Ancestors, would be for the ge- " neral Good of all Europe. That he believ'd " that a Peace would be the Consequence of its " Success, and that this Prince's Subjects would " esteem themselves equally happy in contributing " to re-establish him in the Place of his Prede- " cessors, and in being deliver'd from those con- " tinual Impositions wherewith they were over- " whelm'd, to maintain a War altogether fo- " reign to them. That as the Scotch have yet " more Reason than the English to be dissatisfied " with the present Government of ENGLAND, " it appear'd to him a convenient Opportunity to " restore to that Nation their Lawful Sovereign, " and to enable the Prince to deliver it from the " Oppression it had suffer'd since the Revolution, " which happen'd under the late King of England, " James the Second. That these were the Rea- " sons which determin'd him to equip a Squadron " of his Ships at Dunkirk, and to furnish the " King of England; What a Farce was he play- " ing with this despicable Head of a few desperate " Fugitives? with a considerable Number of his " Troops to accompany him to Scotland, to sup- " port those his faithful Subjects who should de- " clare for him. That he, the King Errant of " England, left Versailles the 7th of March, N. S. " to go to Dunkirk, in order to embark, and get " with all Expedition to Scotland. That his In- " tention was not to enter the Kingdom by Right " of Conquest, but to oblige them to receive " him as the Legal Possessor of it: That he " would behave himself in like Manner, with " respect to all his other Dominions. Good God! " a Creature that had not a Foot of Ground in " Europe, Asia, Africa, or America, to be told of " his Dominions by a Monarch, who was aspiring " to the Universal Monarchy; who should pay that " Obedience they ow'd him, and his Subjects, " would only be distinguish'd according to the " Zeal and Affection they shew'd for him, with- " out examining what Religion they profess'd, " in which he left them to their entire Liberty. " The French King concluded, he had no " Thoughts of enlarging his Power, by assisting " to re-establish this Prince: 'That 'twas sufficient " he did an Act of Justice, in vindicating the " Honour of Crown'd Heads; What an Affront " was that to all Heads with Crowns on, to put " the Pretender Cheek by Jole with 'em, highly af- " fronted in the Person of the late King, his Fa- " ther; and his Wishes would be entirely accom- " plish'd, if by God's Blessing, the Blasphemy of " it! the Success of his Endeavours became the " Means of procuring a lasting Peace, so necessary " to all Europe." For which he sent his Ministers a begging into Holland before the Year was out.

The French Envoy's Memorial to the Swiss upon it.

Monsieur Puisieux, his Envoy in Swisserland, who valu'd himself upon his glib Tongue, added to this Letter, " That his Most Christian Ma- " jesty having found in Scotland the People ready " to receive their Lawful King, What a Cant " there is amongst 'em? with open Arms, he sent " thither by the Marquis de Nangis, the necessary " Arms for that Expedition; who upon his Re- " turn reported, that the Scotch had publish'd " Placarts, both at Edinburgh, and every where " else, that they were ready to sacrifice all for " their Lawful King, James the VIIIth." There are two French Marquisses concern'd in this Lie, and

A.D.1708. and if it had not been warranted by their Court, they durſt not have told it ſo ſolemnly. Mr. Stanyan, the Britiſh Envoy in Swiſſerland, fail'd not to contradict and expoſe thoſe falſe Repreſentations and Rumours, in a Letter to the Laudable Evangelick Cantons, wherein, among other Reaſons, to ſhew the Preſumption of the Attempt, he urg'd, " That a Nation, which had at all times " ſhewn ſo much Zeal and Reſolution for the " Defence of their Liberties, which they had " the Happineſs to preſerve, at the Expence of " ſo much Blood and Treaſure, muſt in an " Inſtant be ſo baſe as to ſubmit to the Loſs of " them, and to ſet up Tyranny and Deſpotick " Power, at a Time when the miſerable Con- " dition to which the Kingdom of France was " reduc'd by thoſe Maxims, ought to be a ſtand- " ing Example and Warning to all future Ages. " That in ſhort, Contradictions muſt have been " reconcil'd, to favour the Succeſs of that Noble " Enterprize: That out of Gaiety an Enemy " ſhould be ſuffer'd to paſs, when the Means to " prevent it was at Hand. That Men ſhould " forget the moſt ſacred Duties, the Allegiance " they ow'd to the beſt of Queens, the Zeal " they ought to have for their Religion, and the " Reſolution they ought to ſhew for the Liberties " of their Country: That bating theſe Difficul- " ties, that Enterprize was well contriv'd, and " better digeſted, and accordingly its Succeſs an- " ſwer'd the Expectations of all ſenſible Men. " The French Fleet appear'd on the Coaſt of " Great Britain, without daring to Land, or " any one Man ſtirring in their Favour: Where- " upon they bravely took the Reſolution to re- " tire to their Harbour with their twelve miſe- " rable Battalions, which inſtead of conquering " the Kingdom of Great Britain, were now " in the Hoſpitals of Dunkirk, diſabled for Ser- " vice.

Mr. Stanyan's Anſwer.

Parliament diſſolv'd.

On the 15th of April, a Proclamation was iſſu'd for diſſolving the preſent Parliament, and another a Week after, for calling a new one.

Priſoners ſent from Scotland to London.

About the ſame Time Edward Griffin, Eſq; late Lord Griffin; John Lord Clairmont; Charles Middleton, Eſq; two Sons of the Earl of Middleton, and Colonel Francis Wauchope, who were taken on board the Salisbury, were brought up to London, and committed Priſoners to the Tower for High-Treaſon; and the following Iriſh Officers taken on board the ſame Ship were committed to Newgate; as Edward Fitzgerald, Oliver Bourk, Daniel Baily, Stephen Coonnor, Conſtance Liefe, Michael Pendergraſs, Edward Fitzgerald, Teague Mac Mahon, Cleary, —— Fitzmorris, —— O Sullivan, —— Macarty, —— Fannon, —— Denovan, —— Hymes, and Anthony Stanburker.

Sir George Byng preſented with the Freedom of Edinburgh.

Before Sir George Byng left Leith-Road, Sir Patrick Johnſton, Repreſentative for the City of Edinburgh in the laſt Parliament, preſented him, in the Name of the Magiſtracy, with an Inſtrument, whereby he was made a Citizen of Edinburgh. 'Twas incloſ'd in a Golden Box, with a Letter ſign'd by Sir Samuel Maclellan, Lord Provoſt of that City, wherein he deſir'd the Admiral to accept of it as a Mark of their high Reſpect to him, who had been the happy Inſtrument of ſo ſeaſonable a Deliverance to this Iſland, for which his Memory would be honour'd by future Ages.

Sir George Byng returning to England ſoon after, met with a very gracious Reception from the Queen, and her Conſort the Prince, Lord High-Admiral, who were daily congratulated by the Foreign Miniſters, on the Diſappointment of the Pretender's Deſigns on Scotland. The Ambaſſador of Venice was forbidden the Court, on Account of ſome Diſreſpect ſhewn by the Cuſtom-Houſe Officers of that City, to the Livery of the Earl of Mancheſter, the Britiſh Ambaſſador there. This Matter was afterwards accommodated to the Queen's Satisfaction. The Perſons who offer'd the Affront having been condemn'd, and ſent to the Gallies, were immediately releas'd from thence at his Lordſhip's Deſire.

A.D.1708.

The Venetian Ambaſſador forbidden the Court.

A Promotion of Officers by Sea and Land.

There had been a Promotion of Sea Officers before Sir George Byng went in Purſuit of the French Squadron deſign'd for Scotland. Sir John Leake, Admiral of the White, was made Admiral, and Commander in Chief of her Majeſty's Fleet; Sir George Byng Admiral of the Blue; Sir John Jennings Vice-Admiral of the Red; Sir John Norris Vice-Admiral of the White; the Lord Durſley Vice-Admiral of the Blue; Sir Edward Whitaker Rear-Admiral of the Red; John Baker, Eſq; Rear-Admiral of the White. And now there was a Promotion of Land-Officers. Earl Rivers was advanced to the Poſt of General of the Horſe; Henry Withers, Eſq; Cornelius Wood, Eſq; Charles Roſs, Eſq; Daniel Harvey, Eſq; Lord Raby, Earl of Eſſex, Earl of Arran, —— Maine, Eſq; William Seymour, Eſq; Hatton Compton, Eſq; Robert Echlyn, Eſq; the Marquis of Lothian, and —— Tidcombe, Eſq; were declar'd Lieutenant-Generals; Sir William Douglas, Lord Mountjoy, Earl of Crawford, Richard Gorges, Eſq; Nicholas Sankey, Eſq; Henry Holt, Eſq; William Cadogan, Eſq; Thomas Meredyth, Eſq; Francis Palmes, Eſq; James Stanhope, Eſq; Lord Shannon, Lord Charlemont, and the Duke of Northumberland, Major-Generals. Luke Lillingſton, Eſq; Sir Thomas Smith, John Liveſay, Eſq; Edward Braddock, Eſq; Gilbert Primroſe, Eſq; Roger Elliot, Eſq; William Evans, Eſq; Thomas Pearce, Eſq; Joſeph Wightman, Eſq; and John Newton, Eſq; Brigadiers of her Majeſty's Forces. Orders and Commiſſions were iſſu'd for New-raiſing the Regiments of Mountjoy, Gore, Alnut, Mordaunt, Wade, Maccartney, and Lord Mark Kerr, which had ſuffer'd moſt in the Battel of Almanza. Mr. Henry St. John's Place of Secretary of the Marines was given to Mr. Burchett. The Earl of Wemes, and Sir John Leake, were added to the Lord High-Admiral's Council; Philip Meadows, Junior, and Thomas Broderick, Eſquires, were appointed Comptrollers for the Accounts of the Army; Richard Martyn, Eſq; was made a Commiſſioner of the Duty, and Hugh Boſcowen, Eſq; Warden of the Stannaries.

Lords and Gentlemen ſeiz'd, and let go.

Towards the End of April, the State-Priſoners Scotch in Scotland, the Marquis of Huntley, the Earl of Seaforth, the Earl of Errol, the Earl of Nithſdale, the Lord Viſcount Stormont, the Lord Viſcount Kilſyth, the Lord Drummond, the Lord Nairne, James Murray, Eſq; the two laſt Brothers to the Duke of Athol, and Sir George Maxwell, were brought to London: Others were diſcharg'd in Scotland, as Lord Balmerino, the Biſhop of Edinburgh, Sir Walter Bruce, Lieutenant-General Balfour, Mr. Fletcher of Saltone, Dugal Stewart, Brother to the Earl of Bute, Robert Murray of Paling, Eſq; the Lairds of Cardeen and Kerr, the two laſt were committed to Newgate; the Lord Drummond, Sir George Maxwel, and Robert Murray, to the Tower. The next Day theſe other Priſoners were brought up from Scotland; Duke of Gordon, Viſcount Kenmure, Fotheringham of Pourie, Lyon of Auchterhouſe, Lord James Murray, Robinſon of Strowan, Seaton of Touch, Mackdonnald of Kippoch, Edmiſton of Newton, Stuart of Stanachie, Laird of Keppendarvie, Gordon of Gallachy, Stuart of Boyce. And on the 14th of

A.D.1708. June, the Earl Mareſchal, the Earl of Murray, the Earl of Traquair, the Lord Belhaven, the Lord Sinclair, Sir John Maclean, Laird of Lochiel, Laird of Appin, Major-General Buchan, Mr. Campbel of Glenderowick, were brought Priſoners to London; but there was more Oſtentation in it than Security; for though Proof could not have been wanting againſt ſeveral of them, particularly Cardeen and Keir, yet they were in a ſhort Time admitted to Bail, and diſcharg'd: Even the Duke of Hamilton, who was as deep in the Deſign as any one, and though at Aſhton in Lancaſhire, his Wife's Eſtate, had there Notice ſent him of the French Fleet's being ready to Sail, and ſtaid up all Night, expecting an Expreſs of the Landing of the Pretender in Scotland, had no other Guard ſet upon him, but a Meſſenger, from whom he reſolv'd to force his Way, and, as the Memoiriſt ſays, to fight it through England into Scotland, if he met with Oppoſition. Tho' this was a Gaſconade; yet no body doubted but he was in the Secret of the French Invaſion, and had engag'd to aſſiſt the St. Germains King; and if due Enquiry had been made, Evidence of his traiterous Correſpondence with the Queen and Kingdom's Enemies could not have been wanting; yet he was ſuffer'd to take his Journey to London, accompany'd by his Dutcheſs, and the Meſſenger, with as much Liberty, as if he had been travelling for Pleaſure, and had not been long in Town before he was bail'd out. There was no Pretence to juſtify this Conduct, but as was ſuſpected by ſome Perſons, that he had deſerv'd ſuch Clemency, by letting the Government know ſo much of the Conſpiracy, as to take proper Meaſures for preventing it; and three of the Noble Lords who bail'd him, the Duke of Newcaſtle, the Earl of Wharton, and the Lord Halifax, were ſo good Engliſhmen, that one is inclin'd to think he had done ſomething for the Publick Intereſt, which diſpos'd them to do him that Act of Friendſhip. Be that as it will, 'tis certain his Hatred to the Revolution and Proteſtant Succeſſion was inveterate and irreconcilable, a Diſeaſe that was not to be cur'd by Lenitives, which Meſſieurs Harley and St. John knew full well; and yet when, as a Puniſhment for our Sins, they had got the Queen's Ear, they prevail'd with her to give him a Poſt of as much Honour and Truſt, as he cauld have expected from the pretended Son of his Abdicated Maſter, King James, to whom he ſtuck cloſe, as long as he ſtaid in England: In their very firſt Parliament the Duke of Athol, nay, the Viſcount Kilſyth, mention'd ſo often by the Sham Lockhart, as a zealous Enemy to the Government, and eſpecially to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, one of the Priſoners on Account of the French intended Invaſion, were elected to ſit in it for Scotland.

Duke Hamilton's Guilt and Impunity.

The Scotch Privy-Council being diſſolv'd, by Virtue of the late Act, entituled, An Act for rendring the Union of the two Kingdoms more entire and compleat, the Queen being preſent, May the 10th, and the Prince taking his Place at the Council-Board, as uſual, the following Noble Perſons were declar'd to be the Privy-Council of Great Britain, and were ſworn accordingly.

The firſt Privy-Council of Great Britain.

The Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury; William Lord Cowper, Lord High-Chancellor of Great Britain; Sidney Earl of Godolphin, Lord High-Treaſurer; the Earl of Pembroke, Lord Preſident; John Duke of Newcaſtle, Lord Privy-Seal; William Duke of Devonſhire, Lord Steward; James Duke of Ormond; Henry Marquis of Kent, Lord Chamberlain; James Earl of Derby; Thomas Earl of Stamford; Charles Earl of Sunderland, Principal Secretary of State; Charles Bodvile, Earl of Radnor; Charles Earl of Berkley; Francis Earl of Bradford; Hugh Earl of Cholmondeley; Henry Lord Biſhop of London; William Lord Dartmouth; Henry Boyle, Eſq; Principal Secretary of State; Thomas Coke, Eſq; Vice-Chamberlain; Sir John Trevor, Maſter of the Rolls; Sir Thomas Trevor, Lord Chief-Juſtice; Sir Charles Hedges; James Vernon, Eſq; JOHN How, Eſq; and Thomas Erle, Eſq; The ſame Clerks were continu'd. A.D.1708.

On the 15th of May, the Lord Griffin was brought to the Queen's-Bench Bar on his former Outlawry, and a Rule was made for his Execution, againſt which he had no Plea to offer; but the Spirit of the Revolution prevailing ſtill, all the Severity of Juſtice towards him was only the Shortneſs of his Reprieve from Month to Month, till he dy'd. His Son, James Griffin, Eſq; profeſſing a Diſlike of his Father's Principles and Practices, was probably ſucceſsful in his Sollicitations to procure the Continuance of his Father's Life, 'till a natural Death put an End to it in the Tower, about two Years after.

Lord Griffin order'd for Execution.

The Duke of Schomberg, and John Smith, Eſq; Chancellor of the Exchequer, were ſworn of the Privy-Council, the 23d of May, as was the Duke of Somerſet a Week after; and towards the latter End of the ſame Month, the Duke of Queensberry was created Duke of Dover.

In the mean Time the Elections for the enſuing Parliament were carried on in moſt Places, to the good Liking of the Court: But of the ſixteen Peers elected for Scotland, there were ſome, ſays the Annaliſt, that were juſtly ſuſpected of Diſaffection to the Preſent Settlement; which the Reader will better judge of by the Liſt, Duke of Hamilton, Earl of Mar, Earl of Finlater, Earl of Northesk, &c. We are now to enter upon Action Abroad, where the Confederate Arms continu'd to increaſe the Diſgraces, Loſſes and Terrors of the French.

The Duke of Marlborough arriv'd at the Hague the 30th of March, where he found Prince Eugene of Savoy, who came thither two Days before, and both theſe Generals having had ſeveral Conferences with the Deputies of the States, and the Grand Penſionary Heinſius, they afterwards made a Tour to Hanover, to communicate to his Electoral Highneſs the Subject Matter of their Conferences relating to the Armies in Germany and the Netherlands, for his Highneſs's Approbation: For by the Scheme laid down in Holland, the Army on the Rhine would be ſo weaken'd, to ſtrengthen that in the Netherlands, that his Electoral Highneſs would be oblig'd to ſtand on the defenſive, which was not at all agreeable to that Great Prince's Heroick Diſpoſition: However, for the Good of the Common Cauſe, his Highneſs, not without ſome Reluctance, agreed to part with ſeveral Regiments. Then Prince Eugene went to Vienna, taking Dreſden in his Way; and the Duke of Marlborough arriv'd at the Hague the 3d of May, and four Days after he went to Flanders, to put himſelf at the Head of the Confederate Army, which was encamp'd at Billinghen.

Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene at Hanover.

The French Army aſſembled between Mons and St. Giſlain, under the Command of the Dukes de Burgundy and Berry, the French King's Grandſons for the Honour of the Matter, but the Duke de Vendoſme was in Fact the Commander: And for the further Honour of the Matter, the Mock King of St. Germains, who had juſt finiſh'd his Scamper to and from Scotland, was alſo

*A.D.*1708. also one of the Company. In the mean time the Duke of Bavaria, pretended Governor of the Netherlands, and the Count de Bergheic, a Man of Cunning, had found Means to practiſe on the Levity of the Citizens of Ghent, Bruges and Antwerp, who being ſet againſt a Dutch Government, as they call'd it, promis'd to open their Gates to the Forces of the French King, and the Duke of Anjou, at that Time pretended King of Spain; the French King had a Houſe full of ſuch ſort of Gentry to provide for, when he was leaſt able to provide for himſelf.

Ghent and Bruges betray'd to the French.

On the 5th of July, a Party of French, commanded by Brigadiers La Faille and Paſteur, advanc'd, before break of Day, towards Ghent, and at the opening of the Gates, five or ſix Soldiers, that were ſent before, pretending to be Deſerters, were admitted into the Town by the Watch of Burghers; theſe were follow'd by another ſmall Company of French Soldiers, ſent on the ſame Errand, and they amus'd the Burghers with Stories of the March of the Army, 'till Brigadier La Faille, who had ſome time before been High-Sheriff of Ghent, came up, and commanded the Guards to lay down their Arms, which they did without any Reſiſtance, and then he ſummon'd Major La Bene, of Sir Richard Temple's Regiment, Governor of the Caſtle, to Surrender; but though he had no more than Three hundred Men, he anſwer'd, He would defend himſelf to the laſt Extremity; but upon a ſecond Summons, Major-General Murray having, in vain, attempted to relieve him, he accepted of a very honourable Capitulation.

Some Hours after, the Count de la Motte appearing before Bruges, it was ſurrender'd to him, without offering the leaſt Reſiſtance. The ſtealing of theſe two Places ſo ſpirited the French, that they quitted their Camp at Terbunk, broke down the Bridges over the Dender, which River they paſs'd in great Haſte, through the Town of Ninove. The Duke of Marlborough hearing they had alſo ſtolen a March, detach'd a ſtrong Body, under the Command of Sir Richard Temple, to fall upon their Rear, but the French were too nimble, and all that could be done, was to attack a Party that guarded their ſmall Baggage, which Sir Richard Temple, and Major-General Schuylemberg ſoon defeated, aud took a great deal of it. That Night the Confederate Army encamp'd at Ache, where Prince Eugene arriv'd the ſame Evening, having made a ſwift March from the Moſelle. The Duke of Marlborough being then ill of a Fever, the Prince's Arrival was very opportune, to keep Spirit in the Troops, and to forward my Lord Duke's Recovery, which came on ſo faſt, that in four or five Days Time his Grace, and Prince Eugene, march'd with the Confederate Army, and prevented the French in poſſeſſing themſelves of the Camp of Leſſines, aud then with continu'd Diligence paſs'd the Dender and the Scheld at Oudenard, which the French thought either to have ſurpriz'd, or reduc'd, before the Confederates could give them any Diſturbance.

The Battel of Oudenard.

The Dukes de Burgundy and Vendoſme had been at Variance for ſome Days paſt, and were both ſtrangely puzzled what Methods to take, upon the Approach of the Army of the Allies, 'till about three a Clock in the Afternoon, July the 11th, when moſt of the young Commanders joining with the Duke de Burgundy againſt Vendoſme, declaring for an Engagement, Major-General Grimaldi was order'd, with the Horſe of the King's Houſhold, to begin the Attack, and diſlodge Major-General Rantzay from an Eminence on which he was poſted; but finding the Ground about the Rivulet, between him and the Eminence, marſhy, he retir'd without attempting any Thing: Upon which Major-General Cadogan, who had paſs'd the River with twelve Battalions, attack'd the Village of Heynem with ſuch Bravery, that his Troops ſoon made themſelves Maſters of the Village, in which were ſeven Battalions of French, three of which were taken entire, and the greater Part of the other four immediately after. Major-General Rantzay with eight Squadrous, advanc'd into the Plains where the French Horſe were drawn up, between the Villages of Singhem and Mulhem, charg'd their Rear-Guard, and drove them into the cloſe Ground, and Highway. Here the Electoral Prince of Hanover, now our moſt Gracious Sovereign, King George the Second, who ſerv'd as a Volunteer, gave diſtinguiſhing Marks of his Valour and Vivacity, charging, Sword in Hand, at the Head of a Squadron of Bulau's Dragoons, his Highneſs's Horſe being ſhot under him, and Colonel Luſcky, who commanded the Squadron, kill'd, fighting bravely by his Side. *A.D.*1708.

The Prince Electoral of Hanover diſtinguiſhes himſelf in it.

In the mean Time the Confederate Troops continu'd paſſing the Bridges with great Diligence. The two Battalions of Collier and Grumckau, being attack'd very furiouſly by many Battalions of the Enemy, maintain'd their Poſt with great Bravery, 'till the Duke of Argyle came up with twenty Battalions, which were encounter'd by a greater Body of French, who drove ſome Pruſſian Foot from their Poſts; but notwithſtanding the Inequality of Numbers, they retook them Sword in Hand. Count Lottum was by this Time marching up with the reſt of the Foot of the Right, to ſuſtain this Attack. The French Generals finding the Confederates were in a fair way of Succeſs on the Side of the Villages of Mulhem, Heynem, and Hening, to prevent their being attack'd on all Sides, they poſted their Foot very advantageouſly before the Villages of Wanigaen, Lede and Huyſe, having ſeveral Defiles in Front, fenc'd with Hedges, Ditches, or Thickets, and plac'd their Cavalry on the Right, near the Villages of Oyche and Wertegem. As ſoon as the Confederate Foot arriv'd, they form'd themſelves into two Lines before the Horſe, and then attack'd in very good Order, the Villages and Incloſures in their Front, wherein the French were poſted. By ſeven a Clock the Fire grew univerſal, both on the Right and Left, and though in moſt Places the Enemy gave Way, yet being ſuſtain'd by freſh Troops, the Action was maintain'd very obſtinately a good while after. Before the Confederate Left Wing there was a kind of Opening, through which ran a Road that led into the Plain, which the Prince of Orange-Naſſau clear'd, at the Head of the Dutch Foot, with great Vigor and Reſolution. And at the ſame Time the Duke of Marlborough ſent Orders to Velt Mareſchal Auverquerque, and Count Tilly, on the top of the Hill near Oiche, to preſs the French on that Side as much as they could; accordingly they march'd with the Brigades of Waſſenaer and Oudenburgh, which being ſupported by the Daniſh Cavalry, paſs'd through a narrow Defile into a Field, where all the French Houſhold were drawn up, a Band of Men that had got a kind of Character by fighting with Spaniards and Savoyards, but kept it no longer; the Duke of Marlborough made 'em fling away their Arms in the Plain of Hochſtet, and march with their Breeches about their Heels in that of Ramelies; yet they had a Name ſtill; but now, at the Approach of the Confederate Troops, the Houſhold retir'd, and ſhelter'd themſelves under the Prince of Orange-Naſſau's Bravery.

*A.D.*1708. the Hedges, between Wertegem and the Caſtle of Broan; but the Prince of Orange-Naſſau, Father of his Highneſs, Conſort to the Princeſs Royal of England, coming up with four Brigades of Infantry, led them on with great Gallantry, and oblig'd the Enemy to give Way, thoſe that were retiring being forc'd back into the Incloſures in great Diſorder; many French Battalions, and more Squadrons, flung themſelves out in a deſperate Manner, and a great Part of 'em were cut in Pieces: While this was doing, the Duke of Marlborough came thither, having left the Command of the Right with Prince Eugene, who had the Pleaſure and Satisfaction to lead on the Engliſh Troops, who were led with the like Satisfaction and Pleaſure, and to ſee them perform Wonders. In fine, the Enemy were charg'd and born down every-where by the Confederate Forces, and retir'd in the utmoſt Confuſion, leaving great Numbers of their Men Priſoners behind them. Their Dragoons cover'd their Retreat as well as they could, and to ſave the Houſhold Troops, which the Hedges they fled to could not have ſav'd, receiv'd ſeveral Diſcharges of the Confederate Infantry, and were moſt of 'em either ſlain, or taken. Night, which in the laſt French Wars did, on more Occaſions than one, ſave their Army from periſhing on the Spot, coming on, and the Fire being directed ſo many different Ways at once, it was impoſſible to diſtinguiſh Friends from Foes; and the Duke and Prince order'd the Confederate Troops to give over Firing, and rather let the French get off by the Nimbleneſs of their own and their Horſes Heels, than venture putting themſelves into any Diſorder, which put an End to the Slaughter: But had there been only two Hours more of Day-light, the Rout of the French Army was ſo compleat, it is more than probable that their whole Body of Foot, and Right Wing of Horſe, would have been entirely cut to Pieces.

The French routed.

We have ſeen with what Intrepidity and Succeſs his Highneſs, the Electoral Prince of Hanover, now King of Great Britain, at the Head of his Father's Cavalry, charg'd the boaſted Houſhold Troops, and bore down all that oppos'd his Glorious Career. My Lord Duke of Marlborough, and Prince Eugene, behav'd with their wonted Valour and Art Military. Monſieur Auverquerque, Father to the Earl of Grantham, though near worn out with the Fatigues of thirty Campaigns, and now in a languiſhing Condition, exerted his expiring Vigor, and was on Horſeback at the Head of the Troops, in the hotteſt of the Action. Nor can enough be ſaid of the Prince of Orange-Naſſau's Gallantry and Glory, in this well-fought Field. Other illuſtrious Names will be Ornaments to all Hiſtory, where the Battel of Oudenard is remember'd: Among theſe are Count Tilly, the Prince of Wirtemberg, Lieutenant-General Rantzau, Lieutenant-General Natzmer, Major-General Webb, Major-General Cadogan, Brigadier Sabine; and in a word, all the Generals and Officers animated the Soldiers by their Example. The Dutch Accounts ſaid, the Dukes of Burgundy and Berry mounted a Steeple in an adjacent Village, and together with the Pretender, from thence ſaw the Overthrow of their Army; which does not agree with the Paris News, nor indeed with the Duke of Burgundy's Character, but very much with the Pretender's, and not a little with the Duke's of Berry's. The French outdid even themſelves, in the Vanity of their Relations of this Fight, which they aſſerted to be a drawn Battel; though it is certain they ran away, and left the Field with Seven hundred Officers, and Six thouſand private Soldiers upon it, Priſoners to the Allies, who took above One hundred Colours and Standards. And if the French bragg'd that their Baggage and Artillery were ſav'd, it ſhould be known they had none there, having no Baggage, and only four or five Pieces of Cannon with them. *A.D.*1708.

The Dukes of Burgundy and Berry, and the Pretender, in a ſafe Place.

The Dukes of Burgundy, Berry and Vendoſme, the Pretender is not worth naming any where but in a Proclamation, retreated with their broken Troops, and intrench'd behind the Canal between Ghent and Bruges; while the Duke of Marlborough, and Prince Eugene, caus'd all their Lines in French Flanders to be levell'd, and if poſſible to ſhame the French Court, for the vain Boaſt of a drawn Battel, march'd their veteran Army towards Liſle, which on the 13th of Auguſt was inveſted on one Side by Prince Eugene, and on the other by the Prince of Orange-Naſſau.

The Siege of Liſle.

Liſle is a great City, Capital of a large Diſtrict, and for its Trade and Populouſneſs call'd Petit Paris. The French King, who in the Foreſt of Fontainbleau, and the Gardens of Verſailles, was wont to obtain Victories in the Netherlands, Germany and Italy, ſaid of Liſle, it is the fineſt and faireſt of all my Conqueſts; and Millions of his Money had been laid out on the Fortifications of it, under the Direction of the Renown'd Vauban, his Maſter Engineer. Upon Intelligence that the Confederates had a Deſign upon this City, Mareſchal Boufflers threw himſelf into it with twenty Battalions of Foot, ſix Squadrons of Dragoons, and One hundred and forty Horſe, and Eight hundred Invalids yet in a Condition to ſerve for the Defence of a Place that was ſo well fortify'd.

Vendoſme's Saying of it.

Vendoſme well appriz'd of all the Difficulties with which this Siege would be attended, ſaid, He wonder'd ſo wiſe a Captain as Prince Eugene would venture upon ſo raſh an Enterprize.

The Duke of Marlborough cover'd the Siege with the main Confederate Army, and the French Court was in a terrible Surprize at the News of the City's being inveſted. Lewis the XIVth had taken upon him, ſix Months before, to give a King to Great Britain, and to let it be trumpeted by his Agents in Foreign Countries, that his Fleet and Forces were ſail'd on that doughty Expedition: And now the Report in all theſe Countries is, that his favourite Town, a Town, with the Loſs of which he was like to loſe all his Barrier towards Flanders, is about to be raviſh'd from him by the Arms of the Allies. He immediately ſent Orders to his Generals to raiſe the Siege at any Rate; but alas, his Generals, and Army, had not yet recover'd themſelves from the Confuſion their late Overthrow had thrown them into; and he might as well bid himſelf be young again, as bid his Troops be Victorious. General Erle, who with a Body of Troops was embark'd on board a Squadron of Ships, to alarm the Coaſts of France, was order'd for Flanders, and landing at Oſtend, took Poſt at Ooderburgh and Liſſinghem, which open'd a new Communication for Convoys to reach the Camp before Liſle, where all Sorts of Proviſions began to be very ſcarce; and a very great one being on the Way thither, the Count de la Motte march'd with about Twenty-two thouſand Men from Ghent to intercept it; Major-General Webb was order'd to meet that Convoy, with Six thouſand Confederate Troops, who were attack'd by de la Motte in Wynendale; but the Major-General, aſſiſted by Count Naſſau, Son to Monſieur Auverquerque, and Count Lottum, poſted his Men ſo advantageouſly, and ſuſtain'd the Enemies repeated Attacks with ſuch Firmneſs and Vigor,

Major-General Webb beats the French.

*A.D.*1708. Vigor, that Count de la Motte was oblig'd to retire with great Loſs; by which Succeſs, the Convoy reach'd the Confederates, and to-Day's Scarcity was made up with to-Morrow's Abundance.

The London Gazette does that General Injuſtice.

The Account given of this Fight in the London Gazette, not doing Juſtice to General Webb's Valour and Conduct, that General left the Army in Diſguſt, and went to England, to complain of it to the Queen. Indeed the Partiality was a little too flagrant towards General Cadogan, to whom the Glory of that Action was aſcrib'd, without naming General Webb, to whom it was all due, and to his Companions in the Field, Count Naſſau and Count Lottum.

Mr. Steel cenſur'd for it.

Mr. Steel, who wrote the Gazette at that Time, could flatter as well as he could rally; but a Man makes a very ill Figure, when he is oblig'd to eat his own Words, and publickly acknowledge that he has done a publick Injury to one Man's Merit, purpoſely to give publick Honour to another. The French loſt between Six and Seven thouſand Men at Wynendale, and the Confederates Nine hundred and twelve Officers and Soldiers kill'd and wounded. This was one of the ſmarteſt, moſt important, and moſt glorious Actions of the whole War. Major-General Cadogan wanted not another Man's Praiſe to heighten his Reputation; and his getting another Convoy of Proviſions and Neceſſaries through the Water with which de la Motte had afterwards drown'd the Country about Leſſinghem, was a Service to the Confederates, and an Honour that could not be diſputed, and if not of as great Conſequence as the Succeſs of Wynendale, yet it deſerves as well to be remembred in Hiſtory. Vendoſme, enrag'd at the Interruption the little Gariſon in Leſſinghem gave them, order'd it to be beſieg'd, and after ſeveral warm Repulſes, the Seven hundred Men that were in it, ſurrender'd Priſoners of War.

One can hardly believe it poſſible for a Prince, and People to be ſo incredibly vain, yet the French Ambaſſador at Rome, to hide the Diſgrace his Maſter was threatned with at Liſle, gave out, That the Confederate Army was ſo coop'd up, that they would ſoon be famiſh'd, or oblig'd to abandon the Siege: But a few Days after the Duke de Vendoſme's Conqueſt of Leſſinghem, Monſieur de Boufflers, Mareſchal of France, who ſurrender'd the Town of Namur to the Allies, ſurrender'd the Town of Liſle, October the 23d, two Months ten Days after the Trenches were open'd, and retir'd into the Citadel, the Siege of which was carry'd on by Saps, not only to preſerve the Mens Lives, but ſo excellent a Fortification, which lengthen'd it out to the 9th of December, when the Mareſchal de Boufflers ſurrender'd that Fortreſs upon honourable Terms, to prevent his being made a Priſoner of War, before the Allies had fir'd one Cannon againſt it.

Mareſchal de Boufflers ſurrenders Liſle.

The Elector of Bavaria's Diſgrace at Bruſſels.

In the mean Time, the Elector of Bavaria made a fruitleſs Attack on Bruſſels, being repuls'd ſeveral times by the Governor, Monſieur Paſcal, aſſiſted by Major-General Murray, and the Baron Wrangel; and hearing the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene had paſs'd the Scheld, in order to relieve this Place, the French and Bavarians in a Pannick abandon'd their Lines, and the Elector march'd off with Precipitation and Confuſion.

Bruges and Ghent recover'd.

After this the Confederates inveſted Ghent, but as ſoon as the Batteries were rais'd, and the Cannon began to fire upon it, Count de la Motte, who commanded there, capitulated, and march'd away with thirty Battalions of Foot, and nineteen Squadrons of Horſe, an Army of near Twenty thouſand Men. The Governors of Bruges, Plaſſendale and Leſſinghem, follow'd his Example, and thus ended the moſt active, and on the Side of the Confederates, the moſt glorious Campaign, taken in all its Views, that had yet given a Luſtre to the Annals of Queen Anne. *A.D.*1708.

Duke of Savoy Out-generals Villars.

The Duke of Savoy had the Mareſchal de Villars to deal with this Year. This General flatter'd himſelf and was flatter'd by France, as the moſt vigilant, active and fortunate of her Generals; but the Duke of Savoy Out-general'd him; for having with great Labour and Fatigue bent his March towards that Dutchy over Mount Cenis, as if he deſign'd to enter Dauphine, he drew the Mareſchal's Army to that Side, while himſelf turn'd ſhort towards Sezane and Oulx, made himſelf Maſter of the important Fortreſs of Exilles, Fort la Peroiſe, and the Valley of St. Martin and Feneſtrelles; by which Conqueſts he ſecur'd his own Dominions againſt France, and gain'd a free Entrance into the Enemies Country; the French having built a ſtrong Citadel at Feneſtrelles, after the blowing up of Pignerol.

The Duke of Orleans continu'd to command the Spaniſh and French Armies in Catalonia, and much was expected from the Superiority of his Numbers over thoſe of the Allies, whoſe Reinforcements were not yet arriv'd, when the Duke laid Siege to Tortoſa. In the mean while Sir John Leake fell in with ninety Tartanes, laden with Proviſions and Cloathing for the French Troops, of which he took ſeventy, and ſcatter'd the reſt. Tortoſa made a vigorous Defence, and at laſt ſurrender'd on honourable Terms. The Reinforcements for the Confederate Army in Spain, which came from Italy, were Imperial Foot Four thouſand, Imperial Horſe One thouſand, Palatine Foot Six thouſand one hundred forty one, Palatine Horſe one thouſand; in all Twelve thouſand three hundred forty-one, and Count Staremberg was ſent thither to take on him the Command of them.

Admiral Leake takes Sardinia.

Sir John Leake having unladen his Tartane Prizes at Barcelona, took on board his Squadron a few Troops, commanded by the Conde de Cifuentes, and came before Cagliari, the Capital of Sardinia, Auguſt the 12th. The Marquis of Jamaica, the Duke of Anjou's Viceroy of that Iſland, being ſummon'd to Surrender it to his Catholick Majeſty Charles the IIId, boggled at it, 'till a few Bombs were thrown into the City, upon which the Inhabitants compell'd him to ſubmit, and he and his Gariſon ſurrender'd at Diſcretion. After which the Marquis and the Magiſtrates accepted ſuch Terms as Admiral Leake was pleas'd to grant them.

The Reduction of the Iſland of Minorca, was the Project of Major-General Stanhope, who propos'd it to Sir John Leake, but finding him backward to engage in it, he prevail'd with the King of Spain to exert his Power, and to command three Ships of War to whatever Service the Britiſh General ſhould think proper, with which the Admiral readily comply'd.

And Major-General Stanhope Port Mahon.

On the 18th of September, the Tranſports from Barcelona, with One thouſand two hundred Britiſh Troops, Six hundred Portugueſe, and Eight hundred Spaniards, join'd Sir John Leake, who was cruiſing before Port Mahon, in that Iſland, famous for being the beſt and ſtrongeſt Harbour in the Mediterranean. Major-General Stanhope having landed his Forces, all the Inhabitants declar'd for King Charles, except thoſe who were in three Places poſſeſs'd by the Enemy; Ciudadella, the Capital, to the Weſtward of the Iſle; Fort Fornelles, to the Northward, and the Port itſelf, defended by three ſtrong Forts, the two moſt conſiderable of which were Fort Charles, cloſe to the Sea, and Fort Philip above it, a little more into

*A.D.*1708. the Harbour. These two Forts were cover'd by a strong Line from Sea to Sea, made by Stones nine Foot high, and four Towers, within Gunshot of one another, each having four Guns, and the Garison in those Fortifications consisted of One thousand Men. Captain Butler in the Dunkirk, and Captain Fairborne in the Centurion, were order'd to batter Fort Fornelles, before which they Anchor'd the 20th of September, and after a stout Resistance, oblig'd the Garison, fifty or sixty Men, to surrender at Discretion: Two Days after Ciudadella surrender'd to a Detachment of Confederate Troops, the French in it were made Prisoners of War, and the Spaniards to continue at Discretion.

Preparations were all this while making for attacking the Forts at Port Mahon; and tho' the Allies found great Difficulties in landing and transporting their heavy Artillery and Stores through a Country very Rocky, in which there are but few Beasts of Burthen, yet with continual Labour, they did in twelve Days bring up all their Artillery, consisting of forty-two Pieces of Cannon, and fifteen Mortars. On the 28th of September, at break of Day, they mounted nine Pieces of Cannon on Batteries against the two middlemost Towers which supported the Line, and in a few Hours beat them down, and made some Breaches in the Line itself, which General Stanhope intended to have attack'd the next Day: But Brigadier Wade being posted on the Right with two Battalions, at some Distance from Major-General Stanhope, some of his Grenadiers, without Orders, advanc'd to the Line, and got into it; upon which the Brigadier march'd with what Men he could get immediately together, to support them. As soon as the Fire was heard, the Major-General himself took the ordinary Guard of the Battery, and advanc'd to that Part of the Line which was next him. This put the Enemy into so great a Consternation, that they abandon'd the two other Towers. The Loss of the Confederates amounted not to above forty Men, and in the actual taking of the Line, none was kill'd but Captain Stanhope of the Milford Galley, the Major-General's Brother. The next Morning the French in the Castle beat a Parley, and on the 30th of September, Major-General Stanhope took Possession of it, by which Means the English have, from that Time, had the Advantage of a secure Port in the Mediterranean, which had been the Desire of all that traded thither, and to the Levant, ever since the Revolution. It was the Cry of the Merchants in King William's War, Had we but Port Mahon, we should not want so many Squadrons to protect our Trade. From that Time they have had Port Mahon, and the Nation has probably sav'd Millions by having it, in that Article of Squadrons, and the Convenience of the Harbour and Island on other Accounts. This Conquest was owing to General Stanhope, and in about two Years after, the Harleians suffer'd him to be treated at the Election at Westminster, in as vile a Manner, as they themselves deserv'd from the Resentment of an injur'd People. The Major-General stopp'd the French Soldiers in Minorca for the Garison of Xativa, who thereupon were sent back to Catalonia arm'd and cloath'd.

'Twill not be improper to insert in this Place,

A LETTER from the Earl of Sunderland to Major-General Stanhope, on the Reduction of Minorca.

Lord Sunderland's Letter to General Stanhope.

SIR,

I Receiv'd on Monday, the Favour of yours of the 30*th of* September, N. S. by Captain Mayser, with the welcome News of your having taken PORT MAHON, which though it came at the same Time as the News of the taking of Lisle, yet was not at all lessen'd by it; every body looking upon our being in Possession of Port Mahon, as of the last Consequence to the carrying on the War in Spain, besides the other Advantages, which, if we are wise, we may reap from it, both in War and Peace. I cannot express to you the Sense the Queen and every body here have of your Zeal and Conduct in this Affair, to which this very important Success is so much owing. I heartily condole with you for the Loss of your Brother, which indeed is a publick Loss to us all, he was so deserving a young Man. I must not omit telling you, the Queen does entirely approve of your leaving an English Garison in Port Mahon, for the Reasons you mention, though some of them must be kept secret. Her Majesty doth approve also of the Governor you have nam'd, Brigadier Petit, a French Refugee, who was an Engineer, and had done good Service at the taking and Defence of Barcelona. *A.D.*1708.

All the Advantage the French made of their Superiority in Spain, besides the taking of Tortosa, was the Reduction of Denia and Alicant, after a very gallant Defence made by the Confederate Garison; and on the Side of Portugal, the Enemy did not think fit to hazard an Engagement, but suffer'd the Portuguese to put Mouras and Serpa, which they had abandon'd, into a Posture of Defence, and to make a successful Irruption into Andalusia.

The Elector of Hanover's good Conduct.

Prince Eugene, as has been observ'd, had taken with him so considerable a Part of the Confederate Army in Germany, to reinforce that in the Netherlands, that the Elector of Hanover had enough to do with the Troops that were left him, to hinder the Elector of Bavaria's breaking into the Empire, as it was given out he design'd; but his Electoral Highness of Hanover, though with very indifferent Troops, ill paid, and ill provided, not only baffled that Design, but hinder'd his sending further Reinforcements to the Dukes of Burgundy and Vendosme.

Sir Charles Wager destroys the Plate Fleet. The Queens of Spain and Portugal convoy'd by Sir George Byng, and Sir John Leake.

Commmodore Wager, who commanded a Squadron of English Men of War in the West-Indies, came up with the Spanish Plate Fleet, and took and destroy'd most of them. Two other English Squadrons were gloriously employ'd this Year; the one under Sir John Leake, who convoy'd the Queen of Spain, Daughter to the Duke of Wolfembuttle, from Italy to Barcelona; and the other under Sir George Byng, who convoy'd the Queen of Portugal, the Emperor's Sister, from Portsmouth to Lisbon. Her Majesty landed at Portsmouth, and was complimented on her Arrival there, by the Duke of Grafton, and the Lord Delaware, in the Name of her Britannick Majesty, and his Royal Highness the Prince of Denmark. Colonel Godfrey had been sent to the Hague, to attend her Portuguese Majesty, and take Care of her Entertainment during her Voyage from Holland to England.

The Pope frighted by the English Ships.

This Year also spread the Terror of the Naval Power of England, in the Court of Rome, and all over Italy, where the Pope's Dominions could be reach'd by it; for the Emperor having just Reason to resent the Behaviour of that proud stubborn Prelate, with Respect to his Brother, the King of Spain, order'd Count Bonneval, his General in Italy, to seize Commachio, and other Places in the Ferrareze, belonging to the Pope; and the Queen of England took hold of that Opportunity to chastise the Insolence of that Imperial Priest, who had not only sent Money to equip the Pretender for his Scotch Voyage, but had also order'd idolatrous Prayers to be made for the Success of it, which now

A.D.1708. now he began heartily to be ſorry for, fearing to have his chief Port, Civita Vecchia, beaten to Rubbiſh by Sir John Leake. The Pope's Secretary wrote a Letter to be ſhewn at the Court of Vienna, wherein the old Pontiff made a few awkard Excuſes for the Remittances that had been made to France for the Chevalier de St. George's Uſe; but that would have prevail'd little againſt Sir John's poſitive Orders to deſtroy the Pope's Port, which was ſuſpended only by the Interceſſion of the Emperor and Duke of Savoy, and the Differences between thoſe Princes and the Pope were transferr'd to Negotiation.

The Succeſſes of this Year were the Subject of a general Thankſgiving in England, appointed to be celebrated on the 19th of Auguſt, throughout England, and a Week after throughout Scotland. On the 12th of July, Peter King, Eſq; a Gentleman equally eminent for Skill in the Laws, and in divine and human Learning, was made Recorder of London. In the ſame Month the Ambaſſador of Morocco was put under an eaſy Confinement, at Hammerſmith, by way of Repriſal for the Reſtraint put upon Captain Delaval, the Queen's Miniſter in that Country, on the falſe Report of ſome Indignity offer'd to Hamet Ben Hamet Cardenas, the Morocco Ambaſſador in England; but that Matter was ſoon accommodated.

The Muſcovite Ambaſſador arreſted.

The Arreſting of the Count de Metueof, the Czar of Muſcovy's Miniſter, had like to have had worſe Conſequences; and indeed moſt ſober People ſeem'd to wiſh the Laws of England would, in that Juncture, have admitted of ſevere Puniſhment on the Offenders, one Moreton, a Laceman in Covent-Garden, and the Bailiffs he ſet to Work to arreſt the Ambaſſador for Money owing to him for Lace, though a Merchant in the City had appointed a Day to pay him, and all Metueof's Creditors, to whom there was not much above Three hundred Pounds due. Moreton's Bailiffs not only arreſted the Muſcovite Ambaſſador, but according to Cuſtom, us'd him in a raskally Manner, promp'd to it by the Encouragement thoſe Raſcals too often meet with from thoſe who ſhould puniſh them. The Ambaſſador imagining, by their way of aſſaulting him, and by the Fellows ill Looks, that they were Robbers, made Reſiſtance, but was ſoon overpower'd by them, and hall'd away to an Alehouſe, where he was lock'd in, 'till the Earl of Feverſham, and a London Merchant, came to bail him. This villanous Action reflected highly on the Honour and Underſtanding of the Britiſh Nation, though only three or four infamous Wretches were concern'd in it. The Ambaſſador juſtly reſenting it, deliver'd a Memorial, demanding Satisfaction, in which he put the Miniſtry in Mind, that for a leſs Offence, the Cuſtom-Houſe Officers at Venice were ſent to the Gallies, to make Reparation to the Earl of Mancheſter. Moreton, the Bailiffs, and the Attorney that was at the bottom of this Buſineſs, were committed to the Cuſtody of Meſſengers, and order'd to be proſecuted with the utmoſt Severity; but that being no Satisfaction, in the Opinion of Metueof, and in Truth, in the Opinion of all indifferent Perſons of all Characters and Nations, that knew of it, the Ambaſſador left the Kingdom abruptly, and ſtaid in Holland, expecting his Maſter's Orders, who wrote a Letter to the Queen, demanding Capital Puniſhment on the Offenders; to have Moreton, his Attorney, and the Bailiffs hang'd; which would have been a merciful Dealing with 'em, had they once committed a much leſs Crime in Muſcovy; but in England, all that could be done, was for the Attorney-General to exhibit an Information againſt them in the Court of Queen's-Bench, which did by no means anſwer the Czar's and his Ambaſſador's Expectations.

The Satisfaction offer'd not ſufficient.

A.D.1708.

We muſt now take Notice of the Honours and Preferments the Queen beſtow'd on thoſe whom ſhe now favour'd. Sir John Holt, Lord Chief-Juſtice, was ſworn a Privy-Counſellor; as were alſo James Duke of Queensberry; James Earl of Seafield; Richard Earl of Scarborough; Thomas Lord Conningsby; Richard Earl of Ranelaugh. The Earl of Cholmondeley was made Treaſurer of the Houſhold, in the Room of Francis Earl of Bradford deceas'd: Sir Thomas Felton Comptroller, and Edmund Dunch, Eſq; Maſter of the Houſhold; Sir James Montague Attorney-General, and Robert Eyre, Eſq; Sollicitor-General.

Honours and Preferments.

On the 18th of October, Sir Richard Temple, Brigadier of her Majeſty's Armies, arriv'd at Kenſington from the Duke of Marlborough, with an Account of the Surrender of the Town of Liſle, and was receiv'd with particular Diſtinction by the Queen, in regard of the conſiderable Share he had in that Service; but all News that brought with it Joy, ceas'd to have that Effect with her Majeſty, after the Loſs of her dear Royal Conſort, Prince George of Denmark, who having been a long Time in a languiſhing Condition, occaſion'd by an Aſthma, and ſpitting of Blood, fell into a Suffocation, and expir'd about ten in the Forenoon, Thurſday the 28th of October, in the fifty-ſixth Year of his Age. He was a Prince of great Humanity and Juſtice; the beſt of Husbands, of Maſters, and of Friends; he had a great Averſion to Party Heats and Perſons, and an Affection for the Proteſtant Religion, and the Common Cauſe. He was eminently inſtrumental in the happy Revolution, conſtantly attended King William at the memorable Battel of the Boyne, and during all that Year's Campaign, and ſhew'd himſelf upon all Occaſions, zealous for the Britiſh Intereſt. It is not poſſible to expreſs the Grief in which he left the Queen, who had been his affectionate, endearing Wife, above twenty-five Years. Her Majeſty remov'd immediately from Kenſington, where the Prince dy'd, to St. James's. His Royal Highneſs's Corpſe was bury'd a Fortnight after, and the Mourning for him was general, both in Reality and Appearance. The Earl of Pembroke ſucceeded him as Lord High-Admiral, and was ſucceeded by John Lord Somers, as Preſident of the Council. The Earl of Wharton was made Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, who made Mr. Joſeph Addiſon, his Secretary and appointed the Author of this Hiſtory to be one of his Subſtitutes, though his Secretary, at that Time profeſſing Friendſhip, took Care to prevent it. John Lord Archbiſhop of York, Ralph Duke of Montagu, James Duke of Montroſe, Robert Marquis of Lindſey, Hugh Earl of Loudon, Robert Lord Ferrers, Peregrine Bertie, Eſq; Richard Earl Rivers and Algernoon Earl of Eſſex, were ſworn of the Privy-Council, November the 25th; and not long after the Earl of Dorſet was appointed Conſtable of Dover Caſtle, and Lord Warden of the Cinque-Ports.

The Death of Prince George of Denmark.

Earl of Pembroke made Lord High-Admiral.

Lord Somers Lord Preſident.

Earl of Wharton Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

On the 16th of November the new Parliament met, and her Majeſty having granted a Commiſſion to the Lord Chamberlain, the Lord Treaſurer, Lord Steward, and the Maſter of the Horſe, to repreſent her Royal Perſon, the Commons were ſent for to the Houſe of Peers, to hear the ſaid Commiſſion read: After which the Lord Chancellor ſignify'd to them, that they ſhould proceed to the Choice of a Speaker, and when they return'd to their Houſe, Lord William Powlet mov'd to chuſe Sir Richard Onſlow; he was ſeconded by Sir William Strickland; but Major-General Mordaunt, with his uſual Pleaſantry, ſaid, I am for chuſing Mr. Jodrel Clerk of the Houſe, who having been Aſſiſtant to good Speakers, to indifferent ones, and the Lords commiſſion'd by the Queen to hold the Parliament.

Major-General Mordaunt's Jeſt.

A.D.1708. Sir Richard Onslow chosen Speaker.

the worst seems to be as well qualify'd for this Station as any body: But when he had had his Jest, the Major-General supported Lord Pawlet's Motion, and with very great and just Encomiums on his Merit, recommended Sir Richard Onslow to their Choice, who was upon this led to the Chair by Lord William Pawlet, and Sir William Strickland. The Tories expected the Whigs would have been divided between Sir Richard Onslow and Sir Peter King, in which Case they intended to put up Sir Thomas Hanmer, but being disappointed therein, join'd in with the Majority.

On the 18th of November, the Lord High-Chancellor approv'd the Choice of the Speaker; and in the Name of the Lords Commissioners for holding this present Parliament, deliver'd a Speech to both Houses; wherein it was said,

"THAT the extraordinary Length of the "Campaign had oblig'd her Majesty to "defer their Meeting longer than she design'd, "that they might be inform'd with the greater "Certainty, of the State and Posture of the War. "That that necessary Delay had so far shew'd the "Success of Affairs Abroad, that he might with "Thankfulness to God, and Justice to those he "had been pleas'd to use as Instruments in that "great Work, conclude, that upon the whole, "we were brought much nearer than the last "Session, to the End of our undertaking that "War, reducing the dangerous Power of France, "and settling such a Peace, as might secure it self "from being violated. That the Queen had "commanded her Commissioners to assure them, "she had not the least Doubt of their being of the "same Opinion with her last Parliament, as to "the vigorous Prosecution of the War, and the "Ends of it; believing it impossible that a British "Parliament could endure to think of losing the "Fruits of our past Endeavours, and the great Ad-"vantages gain'd, particularly the last Year, by "submitting at last to an insecure Peace.

Three Years after, this very Thing was found so reasonable, that Mesnager, a small Officer in the French Finances, was admitted clandestinely to make Proposals of such a Peace, which the Harleians not only approv'd, but got the Queen also to do so. It is further said in the Speech:

"That nothing could hinder our Success Abroad, "but Divisions at Home, which the Lord Chan-"cellor earnestly recommended to them to avoid. "Then he came to shew the Commons the Ne-"cessity of large Supplies, and a considerable "Augmentation of Troops. He spoke of the "State of the Navy, the remote Services it had "been, and would be upon the Advantages of "Port Mahon, of improving and confirming the "Union, as what the Queen had most at Heart, "of Improvement of Trade and Manufactures, "and of employing the Poor. Topicks which were so often touch'd upon in these Speeches, that they were taken for Things of Course.

Addresses of Condolance and Congratulation.

The Commons immediately resolv'd upon Addresses of Condolance and Congratulation. Mr. William Bromley mov'd for the Address of Condolance; and Sir William Strickland for an Address to congratulate her Majesty on the glorious Successes of her Arms; and to assure her of their utmost Endeavours to enable her to carry on the War, until the Liberties of Europe might be secur'd by a safe and honourable Peace. Both which Addresses, according to the Queen's Desire, were presented to her by such Members as were of the Privy-Council, her Majesty, as yet, not being willing to see much Company. The Land-Tax Bill was brought into the House of Commons, November the 30th, and also a Bill to prevent laying Wagers relating to the Publick.

A.D.1708. Major-General Webb thank'd.

Sir Thomas Hanmer mov'd, that Thanks be given to Major-General Webb, for his great and eminent Services at the Battel of Wynendale, which was carry'd in the Affirmative, as Justice and Honour requir'd; not but that the Tories, who affected to distinguish themselves, by being overforward in this Vote, did it so much out of Regard to that General's Merit, as to give some Mortification, if possible, to a greater General; which appear'd by what Mr. William Bromley said, after the Major-General had thus acknowledg'd the Honour that was done him, in a modest, handsome Manner. I do not disapprove the Custom, said Mr. William Bromley, which of late Years has been introduc'd, of returning Thanks to such Generals as have perform'd eminent Services; especially when they receiv'd those Compliments as modestly as the worthy Member to whom they were now given, had now done; but it is with Grief I observe, that a certain Commander, on whom not only the Thanks of both Houses, but also great Rewards have been bestow'd, appears yet to be unsatisfy'd.

Mr. William Bromley's Speech against the Duke of Marlborough.

Huggins in Newgate.

The House having heard the Merits of the contested Election for the City of Westminster, sent Huggins, then High-Bailiff, to Newgate, for refusing to tender the Oaths of Abjuration; and voted Thomas Medlycot, Esq; who was set up by the Tories, in Opposition to Sir Henry Dutton Colt, to be duly elected for that City, Yeas 154, Noes 142. Several Accidents happen'd to Sir Henry's Disadvantage in that Contest, in which the Whigs, for the most Part, favour'd him, though they did not much esteem or love him, otherwise than as he was a Man of Revolution Principles. Huggins is the same Person that lay lately so long in Newgate for a Criminal Case, in the Exercise of the Office of Warden of the Fleet. On the 23d of December, the Royal Assent was given to the four Shillings Land-Tax Bill by the Lords whom the Queen had Commission'd for that Purpose; and News of the Reduction of Ghent coming over at this Time, both Houses join'd in a congratulatory Address to her Majesty, which was presented the same Day by the Lord Chancellor, and the Speaker of the House of Commons, Congratulating her on the last great Effort of this glorious Year, a Year that would be famous in History, as well as for the entire Disappointment of all the Attempts and Hopes of her Enemies, as for the wonderful Successes with which God had bless'd the Arms of her Majesty, and her Allies; adding, That the unusual Length of the Campaign, the Variety of Events, and the Difficulty and Importance of the Actions, had given many Opportunities to her Majesty's General, the Duke of Marlborough, to shew his consummate Abilities, and all the great Qualities necessary for so high a Trust.

The Lords and Commons join in their Applause of the Duke of Marlborough.

This is the Sense of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons of Great Britain in Parliament. A few Lines above this, you have the Sense of Mr. William Bromley, with respect to the Duke of Marlborough's transcendent Merit, for which, according to him, that illustrious Hero had been over-paid, at a Market Price; for he seems to put Glory to Sale, as his Electors might do a Copy for the Press; particularly this excellent Book, Exequiæ Celsissimo Principi Georgio Principi Daniæ, ab Oxonienſi Academia solutæ; written by the most eminent Members of that famous University, and presented to the Queen by the Duke of Ormond, their Chancellor, on the 19th of December. Three Days after, the Duke of Somerset, Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, presented to her Majesty from that University, a Book of Verses upon the mournful Occasion of the Death of his Royal Highness; which was condol'd by Oxford and Cambridge Verses on the Death of the Prince of Denmark.

A.D.1708. by the Ambaſſadors of the King of Pruſſia, and the States-General, by the Miniſters of the Elector of Brunſwick, King Auguſtus, Elector of Saxony, the Elector Palatine, the Duke of Modena, and other Princes.

On the 30th of December, Proclamations were iſſu'd for a publick Thankſgiving on the 17th of February, throughout the united Kingdom of Great Britain; and the ſame Day Charles Earl of Mancheſter, and John Earl Powlet, were ſworn of the Privy-Council.

A.D.1709. On the 10th of January, Mr. Compton preſented to the Houſe of Commons, A Bill for the ſpeedy and effectual Recruiting her Majeſty's Land Forces and Marines, by encouraging the Pariſhes to provide them. Two Days after, a Complaint was made to the Houſe of a printed Pamphlet, Intituled, Of the Sacramental Teſt; To a Member of this Parliament, who was for the Occaſional Bill in the former, when the Bill was on Foot, &c. Several of which Paragraphs were read, and probably this was one of them; "The Teſt Act is con- Dr. C. p. 720. Of the Sacramental Teſt. "trary to the Rules of Religion, becauſe it re- "quires an End in the receiving the Sacrament "that muſt prophane it, and ſuch as bears no "Proportion to the Original Deſign of it, and "uſurps an Authority, which no Power on Earth "can lay any juſt Claim to, to apply Divine In- "ſtitutions to ſuch Ends, as only ſerve the Intereſt "of Politick Societies, and obliges ſuch as have "any Civil Poſts to take the Sacrament, without "any Regard to the Fitneſs which the Law of "Chriſt requires for that Solemnity. It looks as "if it was no Matter how ill a Character a Per- "ſon bore, if it can be cover'd with the Name "of Churchman; which ſhews that it is not the "Honour of Religion, but the ſecular Intereſt of "a Party that is principally regarded" It was Reſolv'd, That the ſaid Pamphlet is a Scandalous, Seditious Libel: It was order'd to be burnt by the common Hangman, and the Author and Printer to be enquir'd after. The Houſe then reſolv'd to preſent three Addreſſes to the Queen, for Accounts of the Money given for the Duke of Savoy, for the Forces in Spain and Portugal, for Victualling Contracts and Remittances. On the 18th of January, Mr. Secretary Boyle preſented to the Houſe, purſuant to an Addreſs, a State of the Matter of the deſign'd Invaſion of Scotland; of the Proceedings thereupon, and againſt the Lord Griffin, and others, taken in the Rebellion, which in Truth were ſomewhat incomprehenſible; as alſo an Account of ſuch as were taken up upon Suſpicion; and in what a Poſture of Defence the Caſtles and Gariſons of North Britain were at that Time, and at this Time.

The late intended Invaſion conſider'd.

The Houſe of Peers having order'd their Members to attend on the 12th of January, they took into Conſideration the State of the Nation, in relation to the late intended Invaſion of Scotland; and the Lord Haverſham open'd the Debate with his Annual Speech, which ſeem'd to be prepar'd for that Occaſion, and was not without ſome Strokes in it, levell'd againſt the Miniſtry, which were the Strokes that gain'd Attention from ſome, who were by no Means Admirers of his Lordſhip's Principles or Faculties: As this, He among the Apoſtles, who bore the Bag, prov'd the Traytor: Though there was no more Likeneſs in the Alluſion, than would be between Judas and Scanderbeg, yet every one knew whom it was levell'd at; and becauſe Bags hold Treaſure ſometimes, therefore the Treaſurer is a Traytor: Such wretched Quibbles as this, are often the beſt Arguments to ſupport a bad Cauſe: What follows was aim'd at the Earl of Wharton; Do we not ſee thoſe Lords, who the laſt Year eſpous'd the Caſe and Complaint of the Merchants in Parliament, now advanc'd to the greateſt Places of Truſt and Power. Having intimated ſeveral Particulars of Encouragement to the late intended Invaſion, he ſtrings a Set of Interrogatories, exactly like the Heads of the late Oppoſition to the preſent Government, What, my Lords, will no Alarm awaken us? Will the Scales never fall off from our Eyes? Muſt ſome Mens mighty Services prevent our looking into other's great Miſcarriages? And muſt this poor Nation be eternally ſawn aſunder by the Struggles of contending Parties? &c.

Lord Haverſham's Annual Speech.

A.D.1709. Several Noble Lords were for appointing a Committee to enquire into the State of the Nation, in Relation to the intended Invaſion, and a Committee was appointed accordingly; and order'd an Addreſs to the Queen, to deſire that the Papers relating to it, might be laid before them. The Commons preſented an Addreſs, for ſuch Treaties and Agreements as had been made for Contributions; and the ſame Day, January the 23d, unanimouſly Reſolv'd, "That the Commons of Great Britain being high- Commons Thanks to the Duke of Marlborough. "ly ſenſible, not only of the Great and Eminent "Services perform'd by his Grace the Duke of "Marlborough, the laſt ſucceſsful Campaign, ſo "much to the Honour of Great Britain, and Ad- "vantage of all Europe; but alſo of the indefa- "tigable Zeal he perſever'd in, for the Service of "the Common Cauſe, while he might with Rea- "ſon expect to be receiv'd with all the Marks of "Honour and Satisfaction at Home, did, with a "juſt Regard to his glorious Actions, return him "the Thanks of the Houſe, and order'd their "Speaker to tranſmit the ſame to his Grace, "then in the Netherlands; which being done, the Duke return'd an Anſwer from Bruſſels, dated February the 14th, importing, "That he was ex- The Duke's Anſwer. "treamly ſenſible of the great Honour which the "Houſe of Commons had done him, in the Vote "the Speaker had been pleas'd to tranſmit to him "by their Order. That nothing could give him "more Satisfaction, than to find the Services he "endeavour'd to do to the Queen and his Coun- "try, ſo acceptable to the Houſe of Commons: "And he begg'd the Favour of the Speaker to aſ- "ſure them, he ſhould never think any Pains or "Perſeverance too great, if he might, by God's "Bleſſing, be inſtrumental in procuring a ſafe and "honourable Peace for her Majeſty, and his Fel- "low Subjects.

A few Days after an Order had been iſſu'd for leaving out of the Church Service, the Prayer for the Queen's Iſſue, Mr. Watſon, Son to the Lord Rockingham, mov'd in the Houſe of Commons, January the 25th, for an Addreſs to her Majeſty, That ſhe would not ſuffer her juſt Grief ſo far to prevail, but would have ſuch Indulgences to the hearty Deſires of her Subjects, as to entertain Thoughts of a ſecond Marriage. It was ſuſpected that the Tories intended to make this Motion, in hopes the Whigs would have oppos'd it, out of Zeal for the Intereſt of the Houſe of Hanover, which the Queen might not have taken kindly, and the Deſign was to leſſen them by it in her Majeſty's Favour. Mr. Watſon, a Gentleman entirely in the Hanover Intereſt, prevented thoſe that were averſe to it, by making their projected Motion himſelf. Her Majeſty was then four and forty Years Old, and as the Flower of Youth was gone, and the Infirmities of Age were growing upon her, there muſt have been ſuch Diſparity between her and a gay young Prince, that great Allowance was to have been look'd for, in point of Fortune; and had ſhe left a jointur'd Prince upon the Nation, who was likely to live twenty or thirty Years after, Mr. Watſon would have been often remember'd for that Motion of his, which could not with Addreſs for the Queen to Marry.

A.D.1709. Decency be conteſted, after it was once ſtarted: The Addreſs being reſolv'd and preſented by both Houſes, her Majeſty's Anſwer was, The frequent Marks of Duty and Affection I receive from both Houſes of Parliament, muſt needs be very acceptable to me. The Proviſion I have made for the Proteſtant Succeſſion, will always be a Proof how much I have at Heart the future Happineſs of the Kingdom; but the Subject of this Addreſs is of ſuch a Nature, that I am perſuaded you do not expect a particular Anſwer. However, the Commons voted Thanks to her Majeſty for this Anſwer; and preſented an Addreſs to her, for all Papers concerning Greg's Treaſon. The ſame Day, January the 26th, the Lords Commiſſioners paſs'd the Recruiting Bill.

The Supply to be rais'd this Year being very large, the Miniſtry was hard put to it to find out Funds, 'till the Bank of England offer'd to circulate Two Millions four hundred thouſand Pounds in Exchequer Bills for the Government, on Condition the Time for their Continuance was enlarg'd, and their Stock of Two Millions, two hundred and one thouſand, one hundred ſeventy-one Pounds, was doubled, by a new Subſcription: For which the Commons addreſs'd the Queen, to iſſue a Commiſſion under the Great Seal; purſuant to which, Books were open'd at Mercers Hall, London, on the 22d of February, about nine a Clock in the Morning, and about one a Clock, the whole Sum of Two Millions, two hundred and one thouſand, one hundred ſeventy-one Pounds, &c. were compleated entirely: And ſuch was the Crowd of People that brought their Money to this new Fund, that a Million more would have been ſubſcrib'd before Night, if there had been Room, as it was computed by thoſe who were beſt acquainted with the Affair. This was ſuch an Inſtance of the prodigious Wealth of the Nation, and their entire Confidence in the preſent Settlement, that it was equally aſtoniſhing, both at Home and Abroad; and what render'd it more ſo, was an impotent Attempt of the Miniſters in France to erect a Royal Bank, for circulating their Mint Bills, which had no better Succeſs, than Mr. Robert Harley's Project of a LAND BANK, mention'd in the laſt Reign. The two third Subſidy was appropriated for the Intereſt of the Money rais'd by the Bank Scheme.

A prodigious Sum ſubſcrib'd in four Hours.

The Succeſs of the French Bank.

On the 5th of February, the Commons appointed a Committee to conſider of Methods for the effectual Execution of the Laws in Force for excluding from the Houſe of Commons Officers, and ſuch as receiv'd Penſions during Pleaſure. The ſame Day Mr. Wortley Montague made a Motion for the bringing in a Bill for the naturalizing Foreign Proteſtants, and in an eloquent Speech ſhew'd the Advantages that would accrue to the Nation by ſuch an Act; alledging, among other Particulars, "The Example of the King of "Pruſſia, who had not only invited, but furniſh'd abundance of French Refugees with Means "to ſettle in his Dominions, whereby he had render'd an almoſt barren Country fruitful, improv'd Trade, and vaſtly improv'd his Revenue: Adding, That if Foreigners were induc'd "to ſettle under a Deſpotick Government, where "they found Protection and Encouragement, they "would undoubtedly be the more inclin'd to bring "their Effects, and at leaſt their Induſtry into "Great Britain, where they would ſhare the "Privileges of a Free Nation. Mr. Compton, and ſeveral other Members, back'd Mr. Wortley Montague; Mr. Campion ſaying only, If ſuch a Bill were brought in, there ought to be a Clauſe for obliging ſuch Foreigners as ſhould be willing to enjoy the Benefit of that Law, to receive the Sacrament according to the Uſage of the Church of England. The Houſe order'd the Bill to be brought in, and appointed Mr. Wortley Montague, Mr. Gale, Lord William Paulet, Mr. Nevil, Sir Joſeph Jekyl, Sir Peter King, Mr. Lounds, Sir James Montague, Attorney-General, and Robert Eyre, Eſq; Solicitor-General, to bring it in. I ſhall not repeat the many Reaſons urg'd by thoſe that were for the Bill within Doors, and without. I think all that relate to the Trade and Riches of a Country, is well confirm'd by the Words of the Placaert of the States of Holland and Weſt Friſeland, for the general Naturalization of Foreign Proteſtants publiſh'd about this Time; We having taken into Conſideration, that the Grandeur and Proſperity of a Country does in general conſiſt in the Multitude of Inhabitants, and particularly, that this Province is increas'd in Power and Riches, by the Concourſe of unhappy diſpers'd People, who being driven from their own Country, for the Profeſſion of the true Reform'd Religion, have taken Sanctuary in our Provinces, and have a long Time ſince contributed to the Increaſe of Trades, Manufactures, and publick Wealth, do order and direct, that all ſuch Perſons ſhall enjoy the Right of Naturalization. Can we imagine that our Tories in England did underſtand the Intereſt of Trade and Manufactures as well as the States of Holland? Their main Objection was, That this Naturalization would bring the Church into Danger. They ſaid, under this Pretence, the profeſs'd Enemies of our Eſtabliſh'd Church and Religion, might flock over with Deſign to effect its Overthrow. Bleſs the Heads of them! Did they imagine that any one Soul would leave his Country, his Land, if he had any, or his Trade, purely to come into England for the Deſtruction of the Church, where he was ſure to be put to many Streights and Hardſhips, always incident to Strangers. The Naturalization Bill paſs'd the Houſe of Commons, and was ſent to the Lords Houſe on the ſecond of February.

A.D.1709.

Mr. Wortly Montague's Speech for a Naturalization Bill.

The Church in Danger by it.

On the 25th of February, the Lord Haverſham made a longer Speech than his laſt, about Miſmanagements relating to the Affair of the intended Invaſion. The Duke of Buckinghamſhire ſeconded the Lord Haverſham, and the Lords addreſs'd the Queen, that ſhe would be pleas'd to cauſe an Account to be laid before them of the Stores, Gariſons and Fortifications in Scotland, of its Revenues ſince the Union, and the Diſtributions of the Equivalent: They alſo order'd the Judges to bring in a Bill, For improving the Union of the two Kingdoms, to make the Laws concerning Treaſon, and the Trials thereupon, the ſame throughout the United Kingdom, and to inſert a Clauſe for aboliſhing all Torture.

Lord Haverſham ſpeaks again.

There having been ſome Overtures of Peace made by the Emiſſaries of France in Holland, the Dutch were found ready enough to give Ear to them, their State waſting apace by the Continuance of ſo expenſive a War; but as they abhor'd all ſeparate Meaſures, the Duke of Marlborough knew as ſoon as they, what Steps France was taking towards it; though the French Court had a vain Imagination that the Dutch might be wheedled into the Preliminaries of a Negotiation without England, if that Duke was once out of the Way: For which Reaſon Monſieur Rouille, the firſt Perſon that was authoriz'd from France with ſuch Overtures, lay privately at Moerdyke, to feel the Pulſe of the States, before he took upon him any Character; but the Dutch Miniſters communicating whatever they knew or heard of this Matter, to his Grace, my Lord went to England, and brought with him what Propoſals had been made at a Diſtance by the French Agent; which being communicated to the Queen and Miniſters, and the Overtures for a Treaty in Holland.

Brought to England by the Duke of Marlborough.

A.D.1709. the Talk of a Treaty being become general, the Lord Somers mov'd in the Houſe of Peers, that an Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleas'd to take Care at the Concluſion of the War, That the French King might be oblig'd to own her Majeſty's Title, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and that the Pretender might be remov'd out of the French Dominions, which was unanimouſly approv'd. Then the Lord Chancellor, by order of the Houſe, return'd their Thanks to his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, for his eminent Services perform'd the laſt Campaign.

The Motion for the Demolition of Dunkirk.

The Committee appointed by the Lords to draw up the Addreſs, mov'd by Lord Somers, having prepar'd it, and their Lordſhips having approv'd it, it was ſent down to the Commons, and Mr. Secretary Boyle repreſented, "That the Britiſh Na- "tion having been at a vaſt Expence of Blood and "Treaſure for the Proſecution of this neceſſary "War, it was but juſt they ſhould reap ſome Be- "nefit by the Peace; and the Town of Dunkirk "being a Neſt of Pirates that infeſted the Ocean, "and did infinite Miſchief to Trade, he therefore "mov'd that the Demoliſhing the Harbour and For- "tifications of that Town be inſiſted upon in the Ad- "dreſs:" Which being accordingly inſerted, Mr. Secretary Boyle carry'd it back to the Lords. And the next Day, March the third, the Lord Chancellor, on the Part of the Peers, and the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, on the Part of the Commons, preſented the ſaid Addreſs to the Queen, who anſwer'd, I am of the ſame Opinion with my two Houſes of Parliament, in the ſeveral Particulars of this Addreſs, as I have alſo been in all the other which they have made on the ſame Subject; and I aſſure you, no Care ſhall be wanting on my Part, to attain the Ends you have deſir'd. The chief End, in former Addreſſes, was the reſtoring of the entire Spaniſh Monarchy to the Houſe of Auſtria, and here her Majeſty declares it to have been always her Opinion.

I do not enlarge upon the Enquiry into the Miſmanagements of the Miniſtry, with reſpect to the Affair of the intended Invaſion, becauſe it is very plain by the preceding Facts, that not only the Naval Preparations to oppoſe it were ready with the utmoſt Diligence, but that a ſufficient Body of Britiſh Troops was tranſported from Flanders to the Borders of Scotland, with the like Expedition, for which the Management rather deſerv'd Applauſe than Reproach. And as to the Proceedings about the Scotch Priſoners taken up on that Occaſion, it is plain by the Sham Lockhart's Memoirs, that they were almoſt all of 'em in the Secret of that Treaſon. Why the Lord Griffin, Middleton's two Sons, Wachop, and others, taken Aboard the Salisbury, were not dealt with as Traytors, is a Myſtery which could not then, and much leſs at this Diſtance of Time, be accounted for.

Foreign Miniſters conſult about the Ambaſſadors Bill.

The Deficiency of the Laws in Being to puniſh Inſults in the Caſe of Foreign Miniſters, being apparent in that of the Muſcovite Ambaſſador, a Bill was brought into the Houſe of Commons, for preſerving the Privileges of Ambaſſadors, and other Foreign Miniſters. Count Gallas, the Imperial Envoy, having got a Copy of it, communicated it to Baron Spanheim, the King of Pruſſia's Ambaſſador Extraordinary, at whoſe Houſe there was a Meeting of Foreign Miniſters, who being made acquainted with the Contents of the Bill, objected, that in the Preamble Notice was only taken of the Indignity offer'd to the Muſcovite Ambaſſador, whereas the Reaſon of it ſhould have been grounded on the Laws of Nations, on which the Privileges of Ambaſſadors are founded, and which is ſuperior to all Municipal Laws; an Objection ſo very obvious, that it is ſtrange Occaſion ſhould have been given for it. But our common A.D.1709. Lawyers are ſo bound down by our own Cuſtoms, and ſo little affected with the Uſages of other Nations, that ſuch an Eſcape might have been very well expected, and probably that Expectation drew the Foreign Miniſters together, to ſee what was doing; and they agreed to offer theſe Words to be inſerted in the Preamble, Contrary to the Law of Nations, and in Prejudice to the Rights and Privileges which Ambaſſadors, and other publick Miniſters, authoriz'd and receiv'd as ſuch, have in all Times been thereby poſſeſs'd of, and which ought to be kept ſacred and inviolable; to which the Commons aſſented, but added a Clauſe, "That no Perſons ſhould be "proceeded againſt for having arreſted the Servant "of an Ambaſſador, or publick Miniſter, by Vir- "tue of this Act, unleſs the Name of ſuch Ser- "vant be firſt Regiſter'd in the Office of one of "the Principal Secretaries of State, and by ſuch "Secretary tranſmitted to the Sheriffs of London "and Middleſex, who ſhall hang up the ſame in "ſome publick Place in their Offices; which Clauſe Experience has ſhewn the Neceſſity of, for from that Time to this, ſeveral petty Miniſters have abus'd this Liberty, and privileg'd many wicked, profligate Perſons, who under ſuch Protection defraud and deſy their Creditors.

On the 14th of March, the Commons voted One hundred and three thouſand, two hundred and three Pounds, for the Sufferers in Nevis and St. Chriſtophers.

The Lords having paſs'd the Bill, for improving the Union of the two Kingdoms, it was ſent down to the Commons on the 28th of March: The latter order'd a Clauſe for aſcertaining what Offences ſhould be adjudg'd Treaſon, or Miſpriſion of Treaſon, the Method of Proſecution, and the Forfeiture and Puniſhment for ſuch Offences, throughout the United Kingdoms, in ſuch manner as might be more conducive to the Security of her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, the Succeſſion, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, in the Proteſtant Line, and for the attainting of the Pretender. This Bill was warmly debated in a grand Committee; the Scotch Members made ſeveral Speeches againſt the Clauſe that render'd the Scotch, in Caſe of Treaſon, liable to the ſame Forfeiture as the Engliſh, which one would have thought was very reaſonable, both Engliſh and Scotch being ſubject to the ſame Prince, and having the ſame Intereſt in the Preſervation of the Conſtitution. However, the Scots were ſupported by the Tories, a ſure Sign that there was ſomething elſe meant beſides the Obſervance of the ancient Laws of Scotland. When the Scotch Members, the Tories, and what is to be fear'd we ſhall never be rid of, the Diſguſted and Grumblers, join'd together, it is no wonder they prevail'd ſo far, that ſeveral Amendments were made to the Bill, by which the Nature of it was entirely chang'd; for inſtead of ſubjecting the Scots to the Laws of England, in Caſes of Treaſon, it was provided, that no Attainder for Treaſon ſhould extend to the diſinheriting any Heir, nor prejudice the Right and Title of any other than the Offender himſelf, during Life. This Amendment was carry'd by 164 againſt 112. The Bill thus alter'd, being ſent to the Lords, who had no other View in this Act, than to give a farther Security to the Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, by the wiſe Motion of the Lord Somers, their Lordſhips allow'd the Amendment of the Commons, in Relation to Scotland, from the firſt of July, 1709; and in England, only after the Death of the Pretender; and at the end of three Years, after the immediate Succeſſion to the Crown upon the Demiſe of the Queen ſhould take Effect, as the ſame ſtood limited by ſeveral Acts of Parliament.

*A.D.*1709. It is obſerv'd that Judges are ſeldom or never ſent by the Lords on Meſſages, but in Caſes of the greateſt Importance, or wherein the profoundeſt Deference is to be paid to the Crown; and ſo it was, that on the 20th of April, the Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt, and Mr. Baron Lovel, went and acquainted the Commons, from their Lordſhips, that her Majeſty had been pleas'd to ſend a Bill to them, entituled, An Act for the Queen's moſt Gracious, General and Free Pardon, which their Lordſhips had humbly accepted, and paſs'd, and to which they deſir'd the Concurrence of the Commons, who read the Bill, paſs'd it, and ſent it back by Robert Eyre, Eſq; Sollicitor-General. This Bill was made the more neceſſary to quiet the Minds of the People, eſpecially in North Britain, on account of the late intended Invaſion, in which Treaſon many might have incautiouſly been dipp'd farther than they were aware of.

An Act of Grace.

The next Day, the Lords Commiſſion'd by the Queen to give the Royal Aſſent to the Acts that were prepar'd for it, paſs'd,

An Act for enlarging the Capital Stock of the Bank. An Act for improving the Union of the two Kingdoms. An Act to prevent the laying of Wagers relating to the Publick. An Act for preſerving the Privileges of Ambaſſadors. An Act for the publick Regiſtering of Deeds, &c. within the County of Middleſex. An Act for the Queen's moſt Gracious, Free and General Pardon. Sixteen other Publick, and thirty-one Private Acts.

Then the Parliament was prorogu'd to the 19th of May.

Two young Princes, near Relations to the Czar of Muſcovy, arriving in London in January, the Queen gave Orders for their being entertain'd at her Charge, and attended by her Officers; and all little enough to attone for the Uſage the Czar's Ambaſſador met with from the Tradeſmen, the Attorney, and his Crew of Bailiffs. The young Princes, in a grateful Senſe of her Majeſty's particular Favours to them, deſir'd to be admitted to an Audience, to which they were introduc'd by Mr. Secretary Boyle, on Sunday, January the 23d. They made their Compliments to her Majeſty in Latin, acknowledging, with great Reſpect, the ſingular Marks of Kindneſs which ſhe had been pleas'd to heap upon them: They at the ſame Time congratulated her Majeſty on the ſignal Succeſs of her victorious Arms, and wiſh'd her a long Continuation of the ſame. To which the Queen made Anſwer, in a moſt gracious manner, That ſhe had ſo much Eſteem and Friendſhip for his Czariſh Majeſty, that ſhe could not but be very well pleas'd to ſee any ſo nearly related to him in her Kingdom, and having an Opportunity of ſhewing her Kindneſs and Diſtinction to them. She thank'd them for their Congratulations and good Wiſhes, and was pleas'd to add, ſhe would endeavour to make their Stay here as agreeable to them as ſhe could. But all this while, the Satisfaction for the Inſult on Metueof was reduc'd to a Trial at the Court of Queen's-Bench, where Moreton, the Laceman, the Attorney, and his Crew, were found guilty of Arreſting and Impriſoning the Morocco Ambaſſador, hearing which, muſt needs be a great Novelty to Students in the Roman Law; the ſpecial Matter of the Privilege of Ambaſſadors to be argu'd next Term: The Earl of Sunderland, Mr. Secretary Boyle, Lord Halifax, and other Perſons of Quality, were preſent in Court. *A.D.*1709

Muſcovite Princes Speech to the Queen.

Her Anſwer.

About this Time, February the 14th, the Duke of Queensberry was made third Secretary of State, and took for one of his Under-Secretaries Nicholas Rowe, Eſq; famous for his Dramatick Performances, which cannot be ſaid of his other Under-Secretary, Mr. Thomas Scot, though a Pretender to that Art, and Nephew to Mr. Chriſtopher Rich, Manager of the Playhouſe. Duke of Queenſberry made Secretary of State.

The Venetian, Portugueſe, Daniſh and Genoeſe Envoys, came not 'till late with their Condolance; the more remarkable in the Daniſh Envoy, becauſe his Maſter was Nephew to Prince George, and his Country was near enough for ſuch Intelligence.

In the beginning of February, John Duke of Argyle was ſworn of the Privy-Council; as not long after was John Duke of Marlborough, and John Duke of Roxburgh. Major-General Cadogan, Major-General Mordaunt, and Major-General Palmes, were made Lieutenants-General; and Brigadier Ogilvy, who was appointed to ſerve in Portugal, in the room of Major-General Farrel, deceas'd, was advanc'd to the Poſt of Major-General, as were alſo other Brigadiers.

We have hinted that a French Agent, Monſieur Rouille, was come to Moerdyke with Overtures of Peace. The States-General, inſtead of admitting him to come directly to the Hague, as Meſſieurs Harley, St. John, &c. admitted afterwards a much ſmaller Officer, Meſnager, to come directly to London, order'd Monſieur Buys, Penſionary of Amſterdam, and Monſieur Vanderduſſen, Penſionary of Gouda, to go thither to him, and hear what he had to ſay, which they accordingly did; and upon their Report of it to their High Mightineſſes, they permitted Rouille to come a little nearer to Woerden, between Leyden and Utrecht, where the States Deputies had a Conference with him, and he gave ſome more looſe Overtures, which he term'd Propoſals for a Peace. The States-General accordingly gave Notice of theſe Advances to the Emperor, and the Queen of Great Britain, having before caus'd the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene to be acquainted with Rouille's being in Holland, and on what Errand. Prince Eugene going to Vienna, and the Duke to England, thoſe Courts, upon this Information, gave full Power and Inſtructions to thoſe Princes to act in Concert with the State-Deputies. On the 8th of April, Prince Eugene came to the Hague, and the next Day the Duke of Marlborough arriv'd there from England: After which they had a long Conference with the Grand Penſionary Heinſius, Monſieur Buys, and Monſieur Vanderduſſen, wherein the Inſufficiency of the French Propoſals was conſider'd, and Orders given for carrying on the warlike Preparations with all Diligence; and it was reported the Duke of Marlborough ſhould ſay, This Treaty muſt be carry'd on next Summer in France, by One hundred thouſand Plenipotentiaries, The States fair Conduct in communicating the French Overtures.

THE

THE HISTORY OF ENGLAND, &c.

During the REIGN of Queen ANNE.

CHAP. III.

From the Treaty of the Hague to the Treaty of Utrecht.

Containing the Space of Two Years, and Eight Months.

*A.D.*1709 IT IS highly neceſſary to give more than ordinary Attention to the Proceedings of the Britiſh Miniſters in the Negotiations of this Treaty, and that of Gertruydenberg, becauſe thoſe of the Utrecht Treaty will, by ſo doing, be ſeen in the truer Light, and the Inſincerity and the Incapacity of the then Managers will be the more apparent.

M. de Torcy comes to the Hague. Monſieur Rouillé gaining no Ground in Holland by his Tranſactions, the French King, for the ſhew of the Matter, diſpatch'd his favourite Miniſter and Secretary the Marquis de Torcy to the Hague, to try his Fortune in carrying on his Deſign to amuſe, and, if poſſible, to deceive the Confederates. Torcy came thither the 6th of May, N. S. having ſo tim'd his Journey as to arrive while the Duke of Marlborough was in England, whither he went to give an Account of what had paſt in the Conferences between Meſſrs Buys and Vandenduſſen, and Monſieur Rouillé. The Duke came to St. James's the 4th of May, N. S. and four Days after, Torcy came to the Hague, having his Reaſons for not coming before; which the Allies were ſo ſenſible of, that, to prevent all Jealouſy, the great Penſionary declar'd ſolemnly to their Miniſters, That no private Conſideration ſhould ever prevail with the States to ſeparate from the general Intereſt of the Grand Alliance.

*A.D.*1709 The Dutch ſcorn ſeparate Meaſures.

The Negotiations being not diſcontinu'd, the Queen appointed the Lord Viſcount Townſhend to accompany the Duke of Marlborough back to Holland, as her Embaſſador Plenipotentiary for the Treaty, if it went forward. It was with a great deal of Pleaſure that Britons read in their Gazette of the 5th of May, O. S. The Marquis de Torcy arriv'd at the Hague the 6th Inſtant, N. S. and had an Interview with the Penſionary that Evening: The next Day he was admitted to a ſecond Interview.

This the Firſt Miniſter in France, no Financier, no petty Deputy of a Company, as Meſnager was; and yet 'tis reported as an Honour to him, that he was admitted to an Interview with the States Miniſter.

The Glory of the Queen and Confederates at the Height.

Now indeed was the Glory of her Majeſty and her Allies at the Height, and the Pride of the common Enemy humbled to a Degree of Contempt, which the Court of France had not been for many hundred Years expos'd to. So juſt is the good Providence of God, that the ſame Reign which by Surprize and Breach of Treaties had extended that King's Dominions on all Sides, and

*A.D.*1709 given Laws to the Nations round about them, ſhould alſo be diſtinguiſh'd by ſo many Defeats, and ſuch Circumſtances of Mortification, as might deter any future King from the vain Attempt to obtain an Univerſal Monarchy, leaſt it might hazard his own; which Lewis XIV. may very well be ſaid to have done, when the Confederate Armies were ſo near the Banks of the Somme, and he ſcarce thought himſelf ſafe at Verſailles. Such a Proſpect as this will excuſe the ſtepping a little out of the way for it, and make a fine Contraſt to that gloomy one; when the Scene was chang'd by Meſſ^rs Harley and St. John, Torcy purſuing the Deſign of his Maſter, to divide, and then to prevail, did not ſtick at offering the Dutch ſuch a Barrier as he knew neither the Emperor nor the Queen would conſent to. The Miniſters of the States ſaw through it, and took it as a Bait for that Purpoſe, in which the French deceiv'd themſelves, or they would not have chang'd their Tone ſo much. Before the Battle of Blenheim, it was, We will not part with a Windmill of the Dominions of Spain: And now, not only thoſe Dominions, but Part of the French, as the Towns in French Flanders, are contain'd in their Offers.

L. Townſhend Plenipotentiary for the Treaty.

The Duke of Marlborough and my Lord Townſhend arriv'd at the Hague the 18th of May, N. S. where they found Pr. Eugene return'd from Bruſſels, after having made the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for opening the Campaign. The Marquis de Torcy came to the Duke of Marlborough as ſoon as his Arrival was notify'd to him, and was two Hours in Conference with him and my Lord Townſhend. The next Day, May the 19th, the Marquis was at the Duke's Levée, and went with him to Prince Eugene. The ſame Night they had a Conference at the Penſionary's. The 20th of May Prince Eugene, the Duke of Marlborough, and my Lord Townſhend return'd the Marquis de Torcy's Viſit, when he preſented Monſieur Rouillé to them, who had hitherto been with no other Miniſters but Meſſ^rs Heinſius, Buys, and Vanderduſſen. The ſame Morning Meſſ^rs de Torcy and Rouillé declar'd, That their Maſter conſented to the Demoliſhing of Dunkirk. And it was to this Conſent that we muſt attribute the making it an Article of the Utrecht Peace; for as daring as the Harleians were, in breaking in upon the Terms and Conditions of the Grand Alliance, they had not Courage enough to give back that Conſent to the French King, which, no doubt, they would gladly have done to do him pleaſure, had they not been afraid of the Reſentment of the People in Great-Britain, whoſe Hearts were ſet upon the Demolition of that Fortreſs and Harbour. Torcy and Rouillé declar'd alſo, That their Maſter would abandon the Pretender. As touching her Majeſty's Title, 'twas ridiculous to aſk it of him at a Time when if ſhe had aſſerted her Title to France, with the Conſent of the Confederates, I don't ſee how he could have help'd himſelf. The renouncing all Pretenſions to the Spaniſh Monarchy was the Article Sine qua non, and therefore ſoon agreed to by the French Miniſters, as was alſo the Dutch Barrier to be compos'd of Furnes, Ypres, Menin, Tournay, Liſle, Conde, Maubeuge, &c. They offered with regard to the Empire, to demoliſh the Fortifications of Stratſburgh. The Miniſters of the Allies demanded the Reſtitution of Upper and Lower Alſace, to which the French King had no more Right than to the Upper and Lower Hungary; but it being that Part of his Frontiers which was his beſt Defence againſt Germany, the Marquis de Torcy and Monſieur de Rouillé anſwer'd ſullenly, They had no Power to make any farther Conceſſions; and going directly to the Penſionary's, demanded Paſſes to be gone. But, alas! the Duke of Marlborough, Prince Eugene, and the States Miniſters, knew the Diſtreſſes of their King and Kingdom too well to ſhew the leaſt Concern about that; and the two French Miniſters, with ill Grace enough, ſuffer'd themſelves to be prevail'd upon by Monſieur Petkum, the Duke of Holſtein's Reſident in Holland, to ſtay one Conference more, which was held that Evening; and then they yielded not only to deliver up Stratſburgh, but to deliver it with all its Fortifications. This not ſatisfying the Miniſters of the Allies, the French Gentlemen aſſum'd their former Airs, and gave out, They muſt be gone; which only encreas'd the Ridicule upon their ſtaying. They took their Leave of the Duke of Marlborough, and Prince Eugene, and of the Miniſters of the Neutral Princes, but were eaſily prevail'd upon by the latter to ſtay a Conference or two more. The firſt of theſe was held the 23d of May, and laſted ſix Hours. Some Articles were now written down, which look'd a little like doing Buſineſs. The next Day there was another Conference, and Monſieur de Torcy promis'd to write to his Maſter concerning the Difference about Alſace. They then debated the moſt important Article of all, relating to the Security of the Execution of the Points agreed upon, but could come to no Determination, tho' that Conference laſted five Hours, till 11 o' Clock at Night. The Duke of Marlborough, Prince Eugene, and my Lord Townſhend, ſtay'd not ſo late, leaving the Debate to the States Deputies, and going themſelves to pay a Viſit to Count Zinzendorff, the Imperial Plenipotentiary, who arriv'd that Evening. There was another Conference, May the 24th, between the Deputies of the States and the French Miniſters: The former, as ſoon as it was over, went to give an Account of it to the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene, who being taken up in Preparations for the War, could not aſſiſt at it. We ſhall eaſily throw aſide the Veil with which the French Miniſters endeavour'd to conceal their Maſter's baſe Intentions by this Treaty, in reading what a Reverend Prelate of our Church wrote on this Subject: The Inſincerity of the French Court ſoon diſcover'd itſelf, and great Reaſon was given to ſuſpect their chief Aims was to amuſe and divide thoſe they ſeem'd ſo much in haſte to engage with: For it was very obſervable, that they eaſily agreed, and in a very little Time after all theſe Conferences were begun, to all the Demands of England and Holland for themſelves; tho' ſome Articles were contain'd in both, which the French never dreamt of being aſk'd, when the firſt Overtures of Peace were made. All which Time they talk'd of nothing but having Liſle and Menin reſtor'd. Inſtead of this they now conſented to give up as well thoſe Towns as many others, which were no Part of the Spaniſh Netherlands when King Charles II. dy'd: And not only to do all this, but to demoliſh Dunkirk out of Complacency to England. In the mean while great Difficulty was made with reſpect to what was aſk'd for the Emperor and the Duke of Savoy, tho' there was nothing in thoſe Articles but was extreamly reaſonable and neceſſary to ſecure the Dominions of thoſe Princes from the Invaſion they would otherwiſe be expos'd to. There was an Interval of ſeveral Days before the French Miniſters would treat about theſe Articles; nor did they at laſt conſent to them, but with a Re-

The French King conſents to demoliſh Dunkirk.

To abandon the Pretender, and give up Spain,

*A.D.*1709 and Stratſburgh.

A.D.1709 ſerve, and a Declaration that this was beyond their Inſtructions; and that therefore they muſt ſuſpend a full Aſſent till the farther Pleaſure of the King was known. The ſame they ſaid to the 37th Article, which not being agreed to, occaſion'd the breaking off the Treaty, and the Renewal of the War with the ſame Vigour and Succeſs as before. The Preliminary Articles were in all forty, and that which gave the greateſt Trouble was, as much of the 37th as ſtipulated, That the French King ſhould act in concert with the Confederates, to oblige his Grandſon to quit Spain. This the Tories ſaid was very hard: Yes, indeed, very hard! to oblige the French King to perform his Promiſe. As this Point was the Cauſe of the War, the firſt Thing ſettled in the Preliminaries, was a perfect and entire Ceſſion of the whole Spaniſh Monarchy to King Charles III. to be made within two Months from the firſt of June following: And in caſe the Duke of Anjou ſhould make any Difficulty to comply with this, it is expreſly covenanted in the 4th Article, That his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty and the Allies ſhould concert proper Meaſures together to compel him to it; all which were only Words, and ſignify'd nothing, unleſs the Execution of this eſſential Point was effectually provided for; and there was but one way of doing it, which was, to make this Ceſſion one of the Conditions of continuing the Suſpenſion of Arms agreed to in the 37th Article, to the concluding of a general Peace. Quite contrary to this did St. John, and the reſt of them, in the Treaty of Utrecht, haſten the Suſpenſion of Arms, and ſuſpend all Ceſſions till the Confederacy was broken off, and France could receive no Hurt by it. It was ſtipulated in the abovemention'd 37th Article; This Suſpenſion ſhall continue till a general Peace, provided the King of France executes all that is promis'd on his Part in the foregoing Articles, and the whole Spaniſh Monarchy be reſtor'd to King Charles. This Article touch'd home, and diſcover'd plainly, that all the French pretended to conſent to in this fundamental Point, was meer Grimace; and that the beſt Conſtruction which could be put upon their Conduct was, that they meant to draw the Allies into a ſeparate Peace, and leave them to get Spain as they could. The Reverend Prelate, abovecited, tells us, to this Article, They made great Profeſſions of the Sincerity of their King's Intentions, that he would punctually execute all that depended on him, and that he would endeavour to perſuade his Grandſon to a Compliance; but that to force him to it, and that within two Months, was not in his Power: That it would therefore be impoſſible for the King to conſent to this Article, and to conſent to the other Preliminaries; and unleſs the abſolute Suſpenſion of Arms was agreed to, it would be to leave himſelf at the Mercy of the Allies, and put himſelf into a much worſe State than before. To all this the Confederate Miniſters could eaſily anſwer, They were fully perſuaded, if the King really was in earneſt, in this Matter, he might certainly recal his Grandſon without any Difficulty; and provided he acted the fair Part, and did all he could towards it, according to the 4th Article, by which he was to act in concert with the Allies for that End, he might depend upon it the Confederates would take no Advantage of any Words in the 37th Article, to begin the War again upon him, when he had faithfully perform'd the other Parts of it, and ſurrender'd the Places agreed to be deliver'd up to them in the 35th, which were, Namur, Mons, Charleroy, Luxemburgh, Tournay, Condé, Maubeuge, Newport, Furnes, Fort Knocque, and Ypres. At laſt it was propos'd, That France ſhould deliver up ſome Places in the Netherlands, that are to be part of the Barrier, before the general Negotiations of Peace were enter'd upon: But this Expedient was rejected, and the Marquis de Torcy thinking that the Allies inſiſting upon the Duke of Anjou's being recall'd, was a more ſpecious Handle to break off the Treaty upon, than the Refuſal of the Expedient, at laſt agreed to let the 37th Article ſtand, and ſo the whole forty Articles, of which we have given the Subſtance of the moſt important, were engroſs'd, examin'd, and appointed to be ſign'd the next Day, May the 28th, when there was a Conference for that Purpoſe, and the Articles were ſign'd by

A.D.1709

Torcy and Rouillé agree to the Articles.

Eugene Prince of Savoy,
Philip-Lewis Count de Zinzendorff,
The Prince and Duke of Marlborough,
Townſhend.
A. Heinſius,
Bonninea,
Baron de Reede Van Renſwende,
Goſlinga,
Henſius,
Welderen,
Wichers,
Wil. Buys,
Van Duſſen.

But the French Miniſters refuſ'd to ſet their Hands to it, tho' they had poſitively agreed to every one of the Articles, pretending they had no Directions to do it. Had the Allies laid any great Streſs on this Treaty, they doubtleſs would have inſiſted upon their ſhewing their full Powers; but reſolving to loſe no Time in the Preparations for the enſuing Campaign while the Conferences laſted, they let them run out to the Length they did, and ſhew'd themſelves on their Part in Earneſt. The Marquis de Torcy immediately ſet out for Verſailles, deſiring the Confederate Miniſters, at parting, That they would haſten their Ratifications with all the Diſpatch they could, and engaging to procure his Maſter's Ratification of the Articles within ten Days.

There happen'd ſome Things remarkable in the Conferences: The French being ſenſible of the Advantages of Dunkirk, could hardly digeſt the demoliſhing it, and ſpoiling the Harbour, which had coſt them above an hundred Millions of their Money. They urg'd, that having bought the Town of King Charles II. it was very hard that her Majeſty ſhould inſiſt on the Demoliſhing of it; and this occaſioned a pretty warm Debate. It was reported, that Prince Eugene ſaid, I wonder you ſhould ſpend ſo many Words about it; you ought rather to admire the Generoſity of a Princeſs, who having it in her Power to preſcribe them harder Terms, and force them to deliver that, and what other Places ſhe pleas'd, and revive other Pretenſions of the Crown of England, gave an unparalled Example of Moderation.

Prince Eugene's Sayings of the Queen's Moderation, in not demanding France.

The Duke of Marlborough demanded, That the fatal Clauſe foiſted in by a Jeſuitical Contrivance into the Treaty of Ryſwick, between the Empire and France, and which has been ſo prejudicial to the Proteſtant Intereſt in Germany, ſhould be in a particular manner made void. To which the Marquis de Torcy anſwer'd, with ſome Concern, That his Highneſs ought to apply himſelf on that Subject to another. The Miniſters of ſome Princes of the Grand Alliance expreſs'd their Diſſatisfaction at their being excluded from theſe Conferences; but the Duke of Marlborough communicating to them the Reaſons of it, they were ſo convinc'd, that they acquieſced in what had been done. The Marquis de Torcy left Monſieur Rouillé at the Hague,

A.D.1709 Hague, promiſing, if the Ratifications did not come, to return the King's Anſwer in a Week at fartheſt; which, from the Neceſſity of the French King's Affairs, the Point the Treaty was carry'd to, the Marquis's Rank, Character, and Perſonal Merit, was hop'd would be favourable, and the near Proſpect of a good Peace fill'd all People with a Joy that is not to be expreſs'd. But Hopes founded on French Promiſes, may well be call'd Caſtles built in the Air; tho' the Buſineſs being in ſuch Hands as the Marquis's, gave it an extraordinary good Face; for, beſides his principal Share in the Miniſtry, he was one of the French King's principal Favourites; and his avow'd Sentiments were, That the true Felicity and Grandeur of the King and People of France, lie in a wiſe Adminiſtration of the National Power and Riches of that excellent Country, and not in Foreign Conqueſts. The Duke of Marlborough diſpatch'd Horatio Walpole, Eſq; to England for her Majeſty's Ratifications, which were return'd authentically executed with all poſſible Diligence. But on the 5th of June a Courier arriv'd at the Hague with Diſpatches from the French Court to Monſieur Rouillé; upon receipt of which he acquainted the Allies, That his Majeſty could not agree to the Preliminary Articles for treating of a general Peace, as lately ſettled with his Miniſters. The next Day he had a Conference with the Duke of Marlborough, Prince Eugene, Count Zinzendorff, the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, and Penſionary Heinſius, wherein he explain'd at large ſeveral Difficulties his Maſter objected to in the Preliminaries, and that with ſo haughty an Air, as ſurpriz'd the Confederates. The Miniſters of the Allies had immediately after a Conference, and it was reſolv'd to ſignify to Monſieur Rouillé to depart in twenty-four Hours; but the next Morning he made a Viſit to the Duke of Marlborough, and propos'd another Conference, which was held at Night, but nothing material was tranſacted, except that the Allies declar'd to Monſieur Rouillé, They would not recede from any one of the Articles agreed to; and that if his Maſter did not think fit to comply with them, they would not think themſelves bound by them to reſtrain their Pretenſions after the 15th Inſtant. Here again is the Pride of the French Monarch mortify'd ſo far as to find himſelf treated with the ſame Language, and to ſee the ſame Laws given him by the Allies, as he gave them at the Treaty of Nimeguen; where in the High Tone he, by his Miniſters, ſet them a Day to accept of the Conditions he offer'd, and declar'd he would not afterwards be reſtrain'd to them. Rouillé pretending he had receiv'd no Order to make any farther Declaration, it was again ſignify'd to him to depart the Provinces. His Maſter excepted in particular againſt five Articles of the Preliminaries; as to the Tenth he agreed to it ſo far as concern'd the Poſſeſſion of Alſace, according to the literal Senſe of the Treaty of Munſter; but inſiſted that Landau be reſtor'd to him, and Old Briſac alſo, as an Equivalent. He excepted againſt demoliſhing of Hunningen, New Briſac, and Fort-Lewis, according to the Eleventh Article. He referr'd the Twenty-eighth Article, relating to the Places yielded to the Duke of Savoy, to a further Elucidation; he diſlik'd the whole Twenty-ninth Article, whereby the Proceedings of the Emperor againſt the Electors of Bavaria and Cologne are approv'd; but will have it referr'd to a general Treaty, with this Proviſo, That the Upper Palatinate, and the Dignity annex'd to it, ſhall not be confirm'd to the Elector Palatine; he excepted alſo againſt the Thirty-ſeventh Article; A.D.1709 he thought two Months too ſhort a Term for delivering up the Spaniſh Monarchy, but conſented to recal his own Troops from Spain within that Time. This, as has been obſerv'd, was the moſt material Article of all, on which was founded the Security of the Ceſſion of the Spaniſh Monarchy, and therefore the Allies would not allow any Alterations therein upon any Pretence whatſoever: and the French were in ſuch low Circumſtances at that Time, before the three glorious Campaigns of 1709, 1710, 1711, that it was not doubted in Holland, by ſuch as were eſteem'd the beſt Judges, but the Court of France would at laſt conſent to theſe Five Articles; tho' while theſe Preliminaries were negotiating, they us'd all imaginable Endeavours to engage the Duke of Savoy in a ſeparate Treaty; and the Miniſters of that Prince communicated Coppies of a Letter their Maſter receiv'd from Rome, which ſhew'd that the Pope had been indefatigable in his Attempts to draw the Duke of Savoy off from the Grand Alliance, at the ſame Time that he enter'd into Engagements to acknowledge the juſt Rights of Charles III. to the Crown of Spain.

Treachery of the Pope.

After Monſieur Rouillé had inſiſted with much Stiffneſs upon the Objections his Maſter had made to the Articles, and his Departure was fix'd for the 9th of June; he, the Day before, waited on the Penſionary Heinſius, and as an Inſtance of his great Sincerity and Concern that the Treaty might not break off, communicated to him his Inſtructions, by which it appear'd he was impower'd to recede from all the other Points of the Objections if the Thirty-ſeventh Article could be got over. This, ſays the Bp. of C....., ſeems to have been a Maſterpiece of French Artifice; for if the Treaty muſt be broke, 'tis as effectually done by inſiſting upon one Article as upon twenty, and which ever Part the Allies took, the French would find their Account: For if they could be perſuaded to give up that, which in appearance was but one Article, but in effect was the Subſtance of all, or at leaſt of the moſt important ones; then it was in the Power of the French to make Peace without obliging the Duke of Anjou to quit Spain: And if the Allies could not be brought to this, the Point they ſhould break upon was ſo ſpecious, that the French Miniſters hop'd for a double-good Effect from it; that it would incenſe the Populace in Holland againſt their Miniſtry, and ſet the King right in the Affections of his Subjects, which, thro' the continued Misfortune of the War, he began to loſe: and in this laſt Point they ſucceeded perfectly well; there were no Efforts the French were not willing to make, to ſupport a Prince who ſeem'd to prefer their Safety to his own Glory: but their other Point they were much miſtaken in, and the breaking off the Treaty had no other Effect on the Subjects of the States, than to fill them wich the utmoſt Indignation againſt the French.

After Monſieur Rouillé had ſhewn his Inſtructions to the Penſionary, he took his Leave, without propoſing any Expedient in lieu of this important Article; only Mr. Petkum, at whoſe Houſe he lodg'd, propos'd the ſame Day to ſome of the Allies, That France ſhould give two or three Towns as an Equivalent for the 37th Article. This officious Gentleman would needs be the Go-between in theſe Negotiations, and made this Motion as of his own Head, without any Commiſſion from Monſieur Rouillé: And this again is another Mortification to Lewis le Grand, whoſe Miniſter is oblig'd to have recourſe to the Offices of a petty Reſident in Holland, to come

His Pride mortify'd.

The Articles excepted againſt by him.

A.D.1709 at the Ear of the Penſionary. Petkum nam'd no Towns, and if he had, it was to evade and not ſatisfy the Intention of the Article; and in effect nothing elſe but to give a little better Barrier to the Dutch for Spain and the Indies. However, Meſſrs Harley, St. John, and their moſt excellent Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, would have given Spain and the Indies without any Barrier at all, or any one Advantage to any one of the Allies, rather than they would not have ſecur'd themſelves in their ill-got and ill-kept Miniſtry.

In the mean time Monſieur Rouillé ſpent the Day in making Viſits of Leave; when Night was come, and there was no Room to hope for any further Step being made, the Duke of Marlborough ſent to the Penſionary, and the other Miniſters, to deſire a Meeting, to try once more if any thing could be done to ſave the Treaty. Let us remember that this laſt Effort for a Peace, was made by that very Man whom that bad Miniſtry made their Miſtreſs reflect upon, in a Speech from the Throne, for delighting in War.

Conference between the Miniſters of the Allies.

The Miniſters of the Allies met according to the Duke's Deſire, and the Security for delivering the Spaniſh Towns was put into ſeveral Forms; not one of which was, upon Diſcuſſion, found to be ſecure: So that Meeting gave no Occaſion for any farther Talk with Monſieur Rouillé, who the next Day, June the 10th, embark'd at Rotterdam on Board a Yacht for Moerdyke in his Way home. After he was gone, there was a Congreſs of all the Miniſters of the Allies, and the Grand Penſionary gave them a full Account of all the Steps that had been taken towards a Peace, and of the rejecting of the Preliminaries by the French King. And the Preſident of the Committee for ſecret Affairs, ſpoke with a great deal of warmth, deſiring thoſe Miniſters to acquaint their reſpective Maſters with the unfair Proceedings of France, and exhort them to redouble their Efforts againſt the common Enemy, whom Force only can bring to Reaſon. Count Zinzendorff thank'd the States, in the Name of the Emperor, and King Charles, for the Firmneſs they ſhew'd on this Occaſion: The Duke of Marlborough did the ſame on the Part of the Queen, which was follow'd with the like Expreſſions of Satisfaction by all the other Miniſters that were preſent; with very particular Marks of Eſteem to the Penſionary, Whom, ſays the Bp. of C....., I have often thought the G—— of the States for his wiſe and prudent Management thro' the whole Negotiations. I need ſay no more to let you know that he is a plain, grave, wiſe Man, of great Judgment and Abilities, quiet, unpopular, and uncorrupt. And what that Reverend Prelate adds, concerning my Lord Townſhend, gives one a juſt Idea of that wicked ungrateful Faction, which afterwards perſecuted that noble Lord, even for thoſe Negotiations, to the Merit of which, the Biſhop pays this Homage: He has, by his good Senſe, Integrity, Openneſs, and Affability, acquir'd the univerſal Eſteem of the States, beyond what could be hop'd from ſo young a Miniſter, and to ſuch a Degree, as will always be remember'd to his Honour in that Country, however it may be deny'd or forgot in this.

Bp. of C.... Character of Monſieur Heinſius, and Lord Townſhend.

The Duke of Marlborough, who was not a little troubled at the Change of Things, left the Hague ſoon after Rouillé, but went no farther than to be within Call, if that French Gentleman had any thing more to ſay; but he had not. It was ſaid, the Dauphin of France inſiſted more than any one on the refuſing of the Preliminaries, as he had done on the Acceptation of the King of Spain's pretended Will. The French King, to keep his People quiet, publiſh'd a Manifeſto, by way of circular Letter, to all the Governors of his Provinces, wherein the World ſaw what an eaſy Taſk he had all his Life-time, to delude his Subjects, and make them inſenſible of their Slavery. A.D.1709

The Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene had put themſelves at the Head of the Confederate Army in Flanders, almoſt as ſoon as Rouillé got to Paris; and, in about a Fortnight's Time, had caus'd the very ſtrong City of Tournay to be inveſted, June 27. The Trenches were open'd the 8th of July, N. S. and on the 28th the Garriſon capitulated for the Town; the Government of which was given to the Earl of Albemarle. The Marquis de Surville, the French Governor, remain'd in the Citadel with no leſs than 5000 Men, and a Week after propos'd to the Confederate Generals, the appointing of two Perſons to treat about a Surrender; accordingly the Princes of Savoy and Marlborough nam'd the Sieur de Lalo, Brigadier-General of the Britiſh Troops, and the Marquis de Surville, the Marquis Ravignan, Brigadier-General in the French Service, who drew up, and ſign'd an Agreement for that Purpoſe. The ſame Day, Auguſt the 4th, the Marquis de Ravignan ſet out for the French Court, from whence he was to come back the 8th, with the King's Ratifications: But now again the French gave a freſh Inſtance of their double Dealing, and ſhew'd that their Propoſals for ſurrendering the Citadel of Tournay, was only to gain Time; for the French King refus'd to ratify them, unleſs a general Ceſſation of Arms in the Netherlands, till the 5th of September, was agreed to. Upon which the Confederates puſh'd the Siege with ſo much Vigour, that the Garriſon ſurrender'd Priſoners of War, which was all they got by holding out till the 3d of September.

Tournay taken by the Allies.

The French King deals doubly again.

The Allies loſt no Time, after the taking of Tournay, either to attack the Enemy, or, if they could, to form the Siege of Mons, which Town the Princes of Savoy and Marlborough had block'd up. They march'd to attack the Enemy, who were poſted behind the Woods of La Merte and Malplaquet, where they intrench'd themſelves: Their Army was commanded by the Mareſchal de Villars, who had hitherto eſcap'd being beaten by the Duke of Marlborough, by keeping out of his Way. While the latter was preparing every thing for attacking him, Lieutenant-General Dedems took St. Guiſlain Sword in Hand, and made the Garriſon Priſoners of War. The next Day, September the 11th, a little after 8 o' Clock, the Signal for the Attack was given, by the Diſcharge of 30 Pieces of Cannon, and Prince Eugene advanc'd with his Right into the Wood of Sart, and 36 Battalions of that Wing, commanded by the Duke of Argyle and General Schuylenburgh, and 20 other Battalions, under the Command of Count Lottum, attack'd the Enemy with ſuch Bravery, that notwithſtanding the Barricades of fell'd Trees, they drove them out of their Intrenchments in the Woods of Sart and Taiſniers. General Withers, with 19 Battalions, attack'd them in another Intrenchment beyond the Woods of Taiſniers and Great-Blaregnies with the like Vigour and Succeſs: Thirty-ſix Dutch Battalions, commanded by the Prince of Naſſau-Orange, attack'd the Enemy's Right, poſted in the Woods of La Merte, and in an Opening, cover'd with three Intrenchments, met with greater Reſiſtance, and loſt abundance of Men, before they could penetrate into the firſt Intrenchment. As they were marching on to the ſecond, they were

St. Guiſlain taken.

The Battle of Malplaquet.

*A.D.*1709 charg'd by the Enemy with ſo much Vivacity, that they were oblig'd to retire to their former Poſt: Upon which the Duke of Marlborough order'd Lieut. General Withers, with the Body under his Direction, to ſuſtain them; but upon farther Notice that Withers was himſelf engag'd with the Enemy, and that all Things went well on the Right, the Duke of Marlborough commanded the Earl of Orkney, with 15 Battalions, to attack the Intrenchments in the Plain, with Directions, if he ſucceeded, to poſt himſelf there, and cover the Horſe as they ſhould file off thro' the Woods into the Plain, in order to charge the Enemy's Cavalry which were drawn up there. This was executed with ſo much Vigour and Succeſs, that after a ſhort Diſpute the Enemy quitted thoſe Intrenchments, which gave the Horſe an Opportunity to enter them. And tho' the firſt Squadrons, led by the Prince of Heſſe, had much ado to form themſelves, and were put into ſome Diſorder by the French King's Houſhold-Troops; yet being immediately rally'd by the Duke of Marlborough, and ſuſtain'd by the Squadrons of Prince Eugene's Army, they advanc'd together into the Plain, and charg'd the Enemy's Cavalry, who being ſoon broke and defeated, their whole Army fell into Diſorder, and made off towards the Plain of Bavay, leaving ſome Cannon behind them. General Vinck having with the Horſe ſurrounded ſeveral Battalions of the Enemy's Right, ſummon'd them to ſurrender; but the French, being behind a Moraſs, made their Retreat along the Edge of a Wood. Three Regiments of Daniſh Cavalry falling at the ſame Time on the Enemy, made a terrible Slaughter among them, till the French, having gain'd a ſecond Wood, found Means to eſcape. The Allies purſu'd the Runaways full-gallop as far the Village of Quievrain, where the French had poſted ſome Squadrons on an advantageous Ground; upon which the Confederates thought fit to give over the Chace, and the French march'd off, ſome to Bavay, and ſome, in very great Confuſion, to Maubeuge, Valenciennes, and Condé. It may be eaſily imagin'd, that a Battle fought againſt an Enemy, entrench'd every where up to the Chin, muſt make the Victorious pay dear for their Victory. The Allies own'd they had above 18,000 Men kill'd and wounded: Among the former were Count Lottum, General Tettau of the Pruſſians, Count Oxenſtiern, the Lord Tallibardine, eldeſt Son to the Duke of Athol, Colonel of a Regiment of Foot in the Dutch Service; among the Wounded were Prince Eugene ſlightly on the Head, Brigadier May in the ſame Place, Lieutenant-General Spar, Generals Wackerbaert and Hamilton, Brigadier Cromſtrome, Monſieur Duyts, the Prince of Naſſau's Adjutant, Count Oxenſtiern Adjutant, &c. The Prince of Naſſau had two Horſes kill'd under him, but eſcap'd unhurt; as did alſo the Duke of Argyle, tho' he receiv'd ſeveral Muſket-Shot thro' his Cloaths and Perriwig. Brigadier Lalo, a French Refugee, in great Favour and Eſteem with the Generals, Sir Thomas Pendergraſs Colonel of a Regiment of Foot, Colonel Rivet of the Guards, Colonel Cranſtone, Lieutenant-Colonel Arundel, and Lieutenant-Colonel Bethel, were reckon'd among the Slain. Lieutenant-General Webb, in the Beginning of the Action, receiv'd a very dangerous Wound by a Muſket-Ball that lodg'd near the Groin; Lieutenant-Colonel Ramſay, Major Laſhley, and Major Row dy'd of their Wounds; but Lieutenant-Colonel Farmer, Major Chivers, and others, ſurviv'd theirs.

Confederate Officers kill'd and wounded.

Prince of Orange's Bravery.

'Tis certain the French loſt more Men than the Confederates, notwithſtanding they fought behind Entrenchments; but ſo many Priſoners were taken by the Allies, in, and after the Rout, that by the Kill'd, Wounded, Taken, and Deſerters, the French Army was more than one third Part diminiſh'd, yet they would hardly allow that the Confederates had a Victory, tho' they acknowledg'd they had 540 Officers kill'd on the Spot, and 1068 wounded, beſides 301 Officers taken: Among their Slain were Meſſ^rs^ de Courſillon, de Chemerault, Patavicini, de Lautree, de Greborges, de Mores, and Sheldon, Lieutenants-General; Count de Bourk, Meſſ^rs^ de Rouleau, de Rochbonne, de Tournefort, Majors-General; Count Agennes, Meſſ^rs^ de Coaſquin and de Slakenberg, Brigadiers; the Duke de St. Aignan, and Meſſ^rs^ de Schauſtein, de Salis, de Seignelay; the Chevalier de Croy, de Tellgonde, de Molezund, de Barentin, Fitzgerald, St. Laurent, and the Duke of Charoſt. Among the Wounded was the Mareſchal de Villars himſelf, who, having receiv'd a Shot in the Knee, was oblig'd to leave the Command of the Army to the Mareſchal de Boufflers; the Duke de Guiche, the Chevalier de St. Goris, Meſſ^rs^ de Conſlans, de Beaufremont, de Savigne, de Cronſat, de Morneſiers, de Opeide, de Refugee, de Albergetti; the Princes de Mombaçon and de Lambeſſe, Meſſ^rs^ de Brillac, de Tournemine, de Renty, de Berville, de Antel, and St. Hilaire. The Action of Blaregnies being over, the Duke of Marlborough order'd the Confederate Army to encamp a little beyond the Place of Battle, which cannot properly be call'd a Field, it being for the moſt part Woods and Lanes; but in a Day or two they were order'd to their old Camp at Belian. The 12th of September, N. S. they were buſy in burying their Dead, and removing their wounded Men; and there having been a great many of the French Officers and Soldiers left wounded on the Place of Battle, the Duke of Marlborough gave Notice to the Mareſchals de Boufflers and Villars, that he would permit them to ſend a Number of Waggons to fetch them off. His Grace order'd Lieutenant-General Cadogan, with 200 Horſe, to meet at Bavay ſuch a General as they ſhould ſend with a like Number, to ſettle the Manner, and to take the Paroles of Honour of the Officers they ſhould carry off, with the Number of private Soldiers, to be afterwards accounted for upon Exchange. Accordingly they ſent the Chevalier de Luxemburg, a Lieutenant-General, with whom General Cadogan concerted thoſe Matters, and then went to Bruſſels to haſten the March of the Artillery, and Ammunition-Waggons for the Siege of Mons, the capital City of the Province of Hainault, where lately the Elector of Bavaria had kept his Fugitive Court, and from whence the Count de Bergheick and the Duke of Alba wrote a joint Letter to my Lord Duke of Marlborough, to which the Count added a Poſtſcript, importing, That if the Queen of Great-Britain, by Means of his Highneſs's good Offices, ſhould think it for the Intereſt of the Nation to have regard to it, he was provided with Powers from the King his Maſter, Philip, to explain himſelf more particularly to ſuch Perſons, and in ſuch a Place as his Highneſs would pleaſe to appoint. The Count hinted particular Satisfactions to the Duke, as if his Maſter and he vainly imagin'd his Grace could have any Satisfaction like that of being inſtrumental in procuring the Peace of Chriſtendom, on Terms ſafe and honourable for the Queen his Miſtreſs, and all her Allies. The Duke ſlighted this ſiniſter Way of dealing;

*A.D.*1709

French kill'd and wounded.

The Count de Bergheick's Letter for a Treaty.

A.D 1709 dealing; but the Duke of Alba having a Paſs granted him for himſelf, and ſome Ladies and Perſons of Quality, to leave Mons, my Lord Duke permitted Alba to have an Interview with him, being willing to take hold of all Opportunities to let the World ſee how ready he was to hear any Propoſal which tended to put an End to the War, if it might be done with Honour and Saftey, and anſwer the great Ends for which it was undertaken. The Prince of Orange-Naſſau commanded the Siege of Mons, which held out three Weeks, and then capitulated. After which the Confederate and French Armies went into Winter-Quarters. This Campaign in Germany was no more ſucceſsful than the former had been; and, indeed, there was no great Expectations of Succeſs on that Side: The Army, under the Command of the Elector of Brunſwick, being as ill provided and recruited as uſual; notwithſtanding the fair Promiſes that had been made his Electoral Highneſs to augment his Army, and, as he had projected, enable him to invade Burgundy: Inſtead of which, the Count de Merci, having made an Irruption into Upper Alſace, with a ſtrong Body of Troops, was attack'd, and totally defeated by the French Army, under the Count de Borgh.

The Duke of Marlborough ſlights it.

The Duke of Savoy minds his own Intereſt.

The Duke of Savoy, who, amidſt his exemplary Zeal for the Support of the common Cauſe, did not entirely forget a due Care of his own Intereſt, being diſguſted with the Court of Vienna for delaying to put him in Poſſeſſion of Vigevano, and other Dependencies of the Milaneſe, which were to be made over to him, refus'd to go into the Field, and left the Command of the Confederate Army, in Piedmont, to Velt-Mareſchal Thaun, who oblig'd the French to abandon the Lines at St. Maurice, drove them from thoſe at Feſſons, defeated a Body of them at Conſlans, and took the Town and Caſtle of Annecy. Small Advantages all of them!

This Year produc'd nothing extraordinary in Spain; for the great Superiority of the French, on the Side of Catalonia, prevented the Allies from attempting any thing conſiderable there; but on the Frontier of Portugal an Attempt was made, with ill Succeſs, in the Plains betwen Badajox and Campo-Major. The Portugueſe General, contrary to the Earl of Galway's Opinion, paſt the River Caya with all their Horſe, moſt of the Foot, and ſome Field-Pieces, which they fir'd with good Execution on the French and Spaniards, who were commanded by the Mareſchal de Bey. This General immediately charg'd the Portugueſe Horſe of the Right Wing, who wheel'd about, and fled without firing one Shot, which gave the Spaniards an Opportunity of ſeizing the Portugueſe Cannon. In order to recover theſe, and to favour the Retreat of the Body of Foot, which had repuls'd the Enemy three times, the Earl of Galway himſelf brought up Pearce's Brigade, conſiſting of the Battalions of Barrymore and Stanwix, and one of Spaniards newly rais'd; but theſe Troops not being ſuſtain'd by the Portugueſe Horſe of the Left, who fled like thoſe of the Right, they were intercepted, and oblig'd to ſurrender Priſoners of War; and, with them, Major-General Sankey, the Earl of Barrymore, Brigadier Pearce, and the Conde de St. Juan a Portugueſe General. The reſt of the Britiſh Fleet did Wonders under the Command of the Marquis de Montandre; and with the Portugueſe Infantry made a handſome and orderly Retreat, with the Loſs of about 150 Men. The Earl of Galway, who had a Horſe ſhot under him, very narrowly eſcap'd being taken; but having found Means to get away from the Enemy, with Major Bladen, his Secretary, and a few others, he rode four or five Miles, and at laſt reach'd the Confederate Army, which came that Night to Avanches, and the next Day encamp'd at Elvas. A.D. 1709

General Stanhope attempted in the Spring of this Year to have reliev'd the Caſtle of Alicant, which had been defended with wonderful Bravery by Major-General Richards, Colonel Syburgh, and other gallant Officers: The two former, out of a fond Curioſity to view the Ground near where a Mine was about to be ſprung, went thither, contrary to the Advice of other Officers, who however accompany'd them to avoid the Imputation of Fear, and were blown up and bury'd in the Ruins. Don Pedro de Ronquillo, who commanded the Siege, had ſo well fortify'd the Landing-Place, that General Stanhope, and Admiral Whitaker, finding it too difficult to Land, reſolv'd in a Council of War to endeavour to ſave ſo brave a Garriſon by an honourable Captitulation; which being agreed to by Don Pedro, they march'd out with two Pieces of Cannon, and all other Marks of Honour, April the 18th, and were put aboard the Fleet, which landed them at Minorca; where they remain'd to refreſh themſelves. General Stanhope having form'd a Deſign to ſurprize Cadiz, by Means of a Correſpondence he had in the Place, took two Regiments of the Troops in that Iſland on board the Fleet, and ſail'd for Gibraltar, about the Middle of Auguſt, expecting to be join'd by the Forces that were order'd from England, under the Command of Major-General Wills, conſiſting of a Battalion of Guards, Royal Fuzileers, Regiments of Whetham, Dormer, Bowles, Munden, and La Pell, Lord Inchiquin, Col. Gore, making in all 7460 Men, beſides the Earl of Rochfort's Regiment of Dragoons: A plain Proof that the War in Spain was not neglected by the then Miniſtry: but Admiral Baker, who was to convey theſe Troops, was detain'd ſo long on the Coaſt of England, by contrary Winds, that they did not make the Coaſt of Portugal till ſix or ſeven Weeks after General Stanhope ſail'd from Port-Mahon; and in the mean Time the Spaniards, being apprehenſive of his Deſign, had made large Detachments from the Frontiers of Portugal, for the Security of Cadiz and Andaluſia; and the Seaſon was then ſo far advanc'd, that it was too late to undertake any thing: So that General return'd to Port-Mahon, from thence he went to Barcelona, and having diſpatch'd his Buſineſs at that Court, ſail'd to Italy, from whence he came to England by Way of Germany and Holland. Admiral Baker proceeded with his Tranſports to Barcelona, where General Wills landed them; and by this Reinforcement the Army of King Charles III. conſiſted of above 28,000 Men, beſides the Confederate Troops in Portugal; General Steremberg, who, before their coming, had taken Belaguer and Agen on the Frontiers of Cataloina, was enabled to act offenſively the next Year.

The Negotiations of Peace which were broken off in publick by Monſieur Rouillé's leaving Holland, were ſtill kept up in private by a Correſpondence between the Marquis de Torcy and Mr. Petkum, who had the Vanity to pretend to the Character of Mediator; but was really no more than what we call'd him before, the Go-between, to carry News, from one to the other, of the Diſpoſitions on either Side to Peace. The Subject of this Correſpondence was an Expedient for the 37th Article, which the Allies inſiſted upon with ſo good Reaſon, that it could never have been given up

*A.D.*1709 up, had not the Treaty fallen into such Hands as the Utrecht Managers, who were afraid France would rather make too great than too little Concessions; who were so ridiculous, as well as so impolitick, as to upbraid the Dutch with want of Breeding, in obliging the Plenipotentiaries to stay in a small Town, in a Corner of their Country, while their Ministers were treating with them. The Reverend Prelate, before-cited, in his Reflections on these Proceedings, says; "If the King "of France supports the Duke of Anjou, all the "Efforts the Allies can make against him will be "to no Purpose, since France can send more "Men and Money to Spain in a Month, than "they can do in a Twelve-month. As to the Ex-"pedients propos'd to secure this Point, all was "upon the same Foot with that which Monsieur "Petkum propos'd, as from himself, That three "Cautionary Towns should be put into the Pos-"session of the Confederates by France, to be "restor'd when the Affairs of Spain should be de-"cided: But when Towns were nam'd that, "might effectuall have answer'd the Ends of the "Caution: the Offer was evaded or refus'd. "Towns in Spain were first propos'd; and to "hinder his complying in that, the King deli-"ver'd up those he had there to his Grandson; "when Bayonne and Perpignan were nam'd, it "was against his Honour aud Safety; Thronville "was the only Place thought of on the Side of Al-"sace, which Proposal was also rejected, on the "same Pretence as the former; and as to Flan-"ders, the Towns of most Consequence, as "Arras and Cambray, were excepted against."

Torcy desires to renew the Conferences.

However, the Progress of the Allies kept the French in such a continual Alarm at Paris, that something must be done to satisfy the People; and Monsieur de Torcy wrote to Mr. Petkum, to desire, since the Point in dispute could not be adjusted by Letters, that Passes might be granted for some Ministers, from France, to come to Holland to renew the Conferences; or that Mr. Petkum might be permitted to go to France, to try if his Presence could forward a Negotiation. The States refus'd the Passes till they knew precisely what those that were to have them came for; since under the Appearance of some Good, the Presence of French Ministers, in Holland, gave them an Opportunity of doing a great deal of Harm, by sowing Seeds of Jealousy among the Allies, poisoning the Minds of the People against their Governors, and retarding the Preparations for another Campaign, which could never be push'd with the Vigour they should be, while People were amus'd with the specious Appearance of an approaching Peace. The States having consented to Mr. Petkum's Journey to Paris, thither he went, and after a Stay of about ten Days, return'd without any Expedient for the controverted Article, and an Answer short even of their Expectations who hop'd the least from it, and which overthrew all the Preliminaries at once; while the King pretended, in the Paper Petkum brought, to agree to all but one, by destroying the Terms while he promis'd to keep to the Substance of them; for it deferr'd the Execution of the Articles till after the Ratification: Whereas the Allies had declar'd long before, in answer to the Elector of Bavaria's Letter, at the End of the Rammelie's Campaign, That they would not enter upon Treaty till the fundamental Points were settled; the Necessity of which they were convinc'd of, by the dear-bought Experience of former Treaties. And now, by the Answer Mr. Petkum brought, the Ends of a Preliminary Treaty were frustrated, and the Allies had little Reason to be satisfy'd with the Cant of Terms and Substance, ever since the breaking of the Partition Treaty was solv'd by the fine Words, Letter, and Spirit. *A.D.*1709

Copy of a Letter sent to Monsieur Petkum, by the Marquis de Torcy, Nov. 27. N. S. 1709.

"MONSIEUR Pettecome, when he re-"turns to the Hague, will be pleas'd to "acquaint the Pensionary, that it would be "impossible for his Majesty to execute the 37th "Article of the Preliminaries, tho' his Majesty "could prevail on himself to sign it. Petkum's Paper from Tor-cy.

"That without discussing the Remarks which "may be made, as to the Terms and the Form "of the other Articles, 'tis visible they were not "propos'd by the Allies, six Months since, upon "any other Prospect but to prevent the Effects "of the Campaign, then ready to begin. That "the Events of War being capable of altering "the near Dispositions to the Conclusion of a "Peace, 'twas then a prudent Part to prevent "them.

"That the said Reason is now ceas'd, in re-"gard that the Winter naturally produces a Ces-"sation of Arms, without any Agreement in "Writing.

"That therefore the three Winter Months "might be spent in treating definitively of Peace, "without farther mention of the Preliminaries.

"That the Form of those Articles being sup-"press'd, the King would allow of the Sub-"stance.

"That there should be a Treaty on Behalf of "his Majesty, and of the Allies, on the Basis "of those Conditions, to which he had been "willing to consent, for giving Satisfaction to the "Emperor, England, Holland, and their Allies, "notwithstanding he has declar'd, that Conditions "should be null, if they were not accepted du-"ring the holding of the Conferences at the "Hague.

"That he is ready to assume the Negotiations "upon the same Foot, to appoint Plenipotentia-"ries to that Purpose, and to send them to such "Places as shall be agreed on, to begin the Con-"ferences, with those of the Allies, on the 1st "of January next.

"If a Negotiation be consented to, the Sieur "Pettecome may return immediately to settle the "Passes, and other Formalities, for the Place of "Congress, and the Manner of meeting there.

Petkum had a very good Present from Monsieur de Torcy, for his Charge and Trouble; and doubtless it was to make his Market that he busy'd himself in this Matter. The Bp. of C..... remarks upon it, "About the Time that Mon-"sieur Pettecome return'd, the King of France "wrote to the Duke of Anjou, to acquaint him "with what had past, and assur'd him, That tho' "he was oblig'd to recal his Troops; he needed "not be alarm'd at it, for that he would never "abandon him; and that he had order'd twelve "of his Regiments to join the Spaniards, in case "King Charles made an Irruption into Arragon. "And a little after Monsieur Iberville was sent "to Madrid, where he arriv'd Dec. the 26th. "His Instructions were to communicate his Bu-"siness to no Body but the King himself. He "did not make a long Stay, nor was he in ap-"pearance well receiv'd; but no Judgment could "be made from thence, what his Errand "was: 'Tis most reasonable to think 'twas to "learn the State the Duke of Anjou's Affairs

A.D. 1709 " were in, and give him his Leſſon, with " Aſſurances, that in Spite of all Appearances to " the contrary, the King would never deſert him. " This Journey was made a great Myſtery of, " to make the Confederates believe the Buſineſs " of it was to perſuade the Duke of Anjou to re- " tire out of Spain.

The States-General having conſider'd the Paper Mr. Petkum brought from Paris, found it full of Prevarication; and therefore came to a Reſolution, " That it was abſolutely neceſſary, that the Al- " lies in general, and every one of 'em in parti- " cular, ſhould, in an extraordinary Manner, " exert themſelves, and make early Preparations " for proſecuting with Vigour, the next Cam- " paign, the Advantages obtain'd in the former. " That a Letter, to that Purpoſe, ſhould be writ " to the Emperor and Diet of the Empire at Ra- " tiſbonne, the Confederate Circles, the Electors " and Princes of the Empire, the Queen of Great- " Britain, and the Duke of Savoy, and that " their Imperial and Britannick Majeſties ſhould " be deſir'd, That Prince Eugene of Savoy, " and the Prince and Duke of Marlborough, " might come to the Hague very early in the " Spring, before the End of February, to concert " the neceſſary Meaſures for the Campaign." The Queen of Great-Britain not only return'd a favourable Anſwer to the Letter of the States-General, but reſolv'd alſo to exhort the Allies to a vigorous Proſecution of the War; and particularly wrote a very preſſing Letter upon it, to the General Diet of the Empire.

The Palatines come to England.

We are not to forget an extraordinary Event which caus'd much Diſcourſe and Argument in England at this Time; and that was the coming over of 6 or 7000 Palatines, Men, Women, and Children, who were driven from their native Country, either by the oppreſſive Exactions of the French, or the Deſolation occaſion'd by the Calamities of the War. They were for the moſt part Proteſtants, and continu'd coming over, from the Palatinate, Swabia, and other Parts of Germany, till they encreas'd to ſo great a Number: Among whom were School-Maſters, Huſbandmen, Vine-dreſſers, Herdſmen, Wheelwrights, Smiths, Weavers, Carpenters, Maſons, Bakers, Coopers, and other Handicrafts-men. It was never certainly known how theſe Foreigners came into this Deſign to go and ſettle in the Engliſh Colonies in America; it was a very good one for themſelves, and thoſe Colonies, had it been proſecuted with the neceſſary Prudence and Vigour. The moſt reaſonable Conjecture is, that William Penn, the famous Quaker, being Proprietor of Penſilvania, had ſuch an inviting Account of that Country drawn up, and diſpers'd among theſe Germans, in their own Language, as diſpos'd them to come into a Scheme for their tranſporting themſelves to that, and other Engliſh Settlements in America, which the Miniſters themſelves gave into; otherwiſe Monſ. d' Ayrolle, the Britiſh Secretary at the Hague, would not have furniſh'd them with Shipping, as faſt as they came to Holland, to tranſport them to England; where, when they arriv'd, the Queen firſt order'd a daily Allowance to be diſtributed among them, and a ſufficient Number of Tents, out of the Tower, for their encamping on Blackheath, and near Camberwell; and then, upon a Petition of the Juſtices of the Peace for the County of Middleſex, order'd a Brief to be iſſu'd, June 16. to collect Charity-money for them within that County; which Brief was, three Months afterwards, made to extend thro' the whole Kingdom of Great-Britain; appointing

William Penn thought the Occaſion of it.

A.D. 1709 ſeveral noble and worthy Perſons to be Truſtees and Receivers of the Charity ſo collected; as, beſides the Lords and other of her Majeſty's moſt honourable Privy Council,

Lords and Gentlemen appointed Truſtees, of the Charity for them.

Sir James Mountagu, Attorney-General,
Robert Eyre, Eſq; Solli-citor-General,
Hon. Spencer Compton, Eſq;
Hon. George Watſon, Eſq;
Sir Matthew Dudley,
Sir John Bucknall,
Sir John Stanley,
Sir Henry Furneſe,
Sir John Phillips,
Sir Alexander Cairnes,
Sir Theodore Janſſen,
Sir James Collett,
Sir Edmund Harriſon,
Sir William Scawen,
Sir John Elwill,
Rev^d Dr. Rich. Willis,
Dr. White Kennett,
Dr. Henry Godolphin,
Dr. Thomas Manningham,
Dr. Thomas Bray,
Dr. George Smallridge,
Dr. Robert Moſs,
Dr. Samuel Bradford,
Rev^d Dr. Lilly Butler,
Dr. Thomas Linfold,
Dr. ..... Pelling,
Mr. Samuel Clarke,
Mr. Conrade Wernley,
Mr. Ubrick Scherer,
Mr. John Trebbeke,
Mr. Andrew Ruperty,
Dr. Frederick Slare,
Dr. James Keith,
Samuel Travers, Eſq;
John Plumer, Eſq;
John Shute, Eſq;
Joſeph Oſſley, Eſq;
Richard Wollaſton, Eſq;
David Hexſtetter, Eſq;
John Ward, Eſq;
Henry Corniſh, Eſq;
Nathan el Gould, Eſq;
Juſtus Beck, Eſq;
John Dolben, Eſq;
Henry Martyn, Eſq;
Micajah Perry, Eſq;
George Townſhend, Eſq;
William Falkner, Eſq;
Peter Joye, Eſq;
Henry Hoare, Eſq;
Thomas Smith, Eſq;
Robert Hales, Eſq;

The kind Reception and Entertainment which theſe diſtreſs'd Refugees met with here, encourag'd many other Germans to leave their deſolate Habitations, and follow their Countrymen into England; and the Number of them increas'd ſo far, that Monſ. d' Ayrolle was directed to put a Stop to their coming over. Some of them being found to be Papiſts, Money was given them to bear their Charges back, and they were ſent home. Of the Palatines who ſtay'd behind, ſome were taken into private Families, ſome ſent to Ireland, and ſome to America; where, eſpecially in Penſilvania, their Numbers have ſo encreas'd, that there are now in the Colonies 7 or 8000 Germans, Men, Women, and Children, who live comfortably, and have not yet given any Occaſion to any Clamour, that the Church there is in Danger from them.

How they were diſpos'd of.

The Earl of Wharton, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, holds a Parliament there.

The Earl of Wharton, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, arriv'd there the 2d of April. At his Landing, at Ringſend, he was waited upon by the Lord Viſcount Bleſſington, Sir Charles Fielding, Lieutenant-General Ingoldby, and Thomas Keightly, Eſq; Members of the Privy-Council, by Appointment of the Lords Juſtices, to congratulate his ſafe Arrival. His Excellency's Reception there, and all the Way to the Caſtle of Dublin, was with great Splendor, and Marks of Affection and Joy.

A Fortnight after he landed, he open'd a Seſſion of Parliament, and made a Speech to both Houſes; of which I ſhall inſert only as much as ſeems agreeable to his own particular Sentiments, and probably was the Effect of his own Counſel.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I Am oblig'd and directed to lay before you another Conſideration of infinite Conſequence, and that is, to put you in mind of the Inequality there is, with

A.D.1709 with respect to Numbers, between the Protestants and Papists of this Kingdom, and of the melancholy Experience you have had of this sort of Men, whenever they have had it in their Power to distress, or destroy you.

These Reflections must necessarily lead you to think of two Things; the first is, seriously to consider, whether any new Bills are wanting to enforce or explain those good Laws which you have already, for preventing the Growth of Popery. And, in the next Place, it makes evident the Necessity there is of inculcating and preserving a good Understanding amongst all the Protestants of this Kingdom. What the most proper Methods are, to compleat so desirable and necessary an End, yourselves, who have the Opportunities of knowing the Uneasiness that any of your Fellow-Subjects may lie under, are the fittest to judge.

He recommends Union among all Protestants.

I will only add, That the Queen, who is all Goodness, never had any thing so much at her Royal Heart, as the bringing to pass, and perfecting the Union of her Subjects of Great-Britain: And I may venture to say, that she looks upon her Success, in this great Undertaking, to equal, if not to exceed, any other of the Glories of her Reign.

His Excellency shews here the great Desire he had to reconcile the Church of England, or rather Ireland, to the Dissenting Protestants in that Kingdom, as the surest Means to weaken the Popish Interest, by strengthening the Protestant. The Britons, in the North of Ireland, are for the most part Presbyterians; the Service they did in the Irish Rebellion, by defending Londonderry, and Inniskilling, in conjunction with Church of England-Men, deserv'd better Usage than they had met with from some High-church Lord-Lieutenants, who never fail'd to caress the Papists, and frown upon the Dissenters. The Irish Papists built very much on Tory Politicks, and doubted not, by dividing the Protestants, to find an Opportunity to destroy them. And how near they have been to effecting it, is well known to the Protestants in Ireland, whose Hearts have bled to see the Encouragement that has been given to those Cut-throats, under such Ministers as Constantine Phips lately was in that Kingdom. The Lord Wharton was resolv'd not to dally with the Papists, but to let them know, at his first coming, they were to expect no Favour from him. The Protestant Dissenters labour'd under some severe Laws, with respect to the Education of their Children, and arming themselves for their Defence. Popery grew upon them under the late Administration, and his Excellency procur'd an admirable Bill to prevent the Growth of it, by enacting, That the Estates of the Irish Papists should descend to their Protestant Heirs. And it was not two Months after his Lordship's Landing in Ireland, that Theobald Bourk, Lord-Viscount Mayo, and Edward Lord Birmingham, Baron of Athenree, renounc'd the Popish Religion in St. Andrew's Church, in Dublin. Indeed the Earl of Wharton did more towards rooting out Popery, in three Months, than the most popular of his Predecessors, in the Government of Ireland, had ever done in three Years. And it was observable, that the Papists no sooner heard he was appointed Lord-Lieutenant, than they shew'd their Despair in their Looks, as they always testify'd their Joy when such Lieutenants as the Earl of Rochester, Duke of Ormonde, &c. were appointed. There never was a Chief Governor of Ireland more acceptable to the English Protestants than the Earl of Wharton; but it must be own'd the native

Irish Lords turn Protestants.

Irish, the Rabble of Papists, did not crowd after his Coach, and hout him along the Streets, as they had done the Duke of Ormonde, Lord Rochester, &c. A.D.1709

The House of Commons, Nemine Contradicente, voted an Address of Thanks to his Excellency for his Speech; and four or five Days after, Serjeant Caulfield presented the Bill to prevent the Growth of Popery. The House having order'd Mr. Broderick to attend the Lord-Lieunant, and lay before him their humble Desire, That some Ecclesiastical Preferment might be conferr'd on Dr. Pratt their Chaplain; Mr. Broderick reported his Excellency was pleas'd to say, I am surpriz'd a Gentleman of Merit should be so long unprovided for; I will take a fitting Opportunity to comply with the Desire of the House of Commons in his Behalf. Yet the Tories in England gave out, that the Lord Wharton persecuted the Church in Ireland. This was reported upon his making Dr. Lambert, who was recommended to him by the Archbp. of Canterbury, and had been several Years Chaplain to the Duke of Montagu, Dean of Downe, and Dr. Lloyd Dean of Connor, who were both as good Protestants, as well as good Churchmen, as any in her Majesty's Dominions. One would have thought that his admitting Jonathan Swift, to be one of his Chaplains, should have gain'd him the good Word of such Churchmen as Swift, or at least from himself; and yet a Year or two after, that pious Divine, who had burlesqu'd all Religion, in his Tale of a Tub, burlesqu'd History, in compiling the Story of Verres, purely to abuse his Patron and Benefactor, of whom the House of Peers, in Ireland, said in their Address to the Queen, We return our most humble Thanks to your Majesty, for sending his Excellency, the Earl of Wharton, a Person of so great Wisdom and Experience, to be our Chief Governor.

Swift one of Lord Wharton's Chaplains.

His base Ingratitude.

There happen'd an Event in that noble House, which the Tories, of England and Ireland, endeavour'd to take Advantage of, against his Excellency, by reporting he had sent a Bishop to Prison; as if it had been impossible for a Bishop to be guilty of a Crime that deserv'd Imprisonment. The Fact was thus; The House of Peers having appointed to adjourn from the 28th to the 29th of June, Dr. John Pooley, Bishop of Raphoe, a Kinsman of that Pooley who was one of the Authors of the High-Church Memorial, took upon him to protest against that Vote; his Words are so very silly, that if I respected High-Church, as much as they respect themselves, I would sink them; his Reason was, Because he conceiv'd it against the Laws of the Church to do Business upon a Holiday, which might hinder Divine Service, Prayers, and Sacraments, Sermons, or Homilies, and Catechisms, least it should be a robbing of God, &c. Such was the Reasoning of this most excellent Prelate; as if there was no Body to read the Homilies but the Bishops, and no Body to be catechis'd but the House of Lords, who the next Day resented this Protest, and told him, If he did not withdraw it, they must send him to the Castle: But he was so fond of this Foolery, that he stuck close to his Protest, and they order'd the Black-Rod to take hold of him; and adjourning afterwards for a Month, the Usher had him so long in Durance, which, by the Lord Wharton's particular Direction, was made as easy to him as was consistent with the Orders of the House.

Bishop of Raphoe taken into Custody.

I have not enlarg'd upon the House of Lords and House of Commons Addresses of Condolance and Congratulation; they were both much the same as those in England on the same Occasions.

A.D.1709 sions. On the 23d of May, the Commons voted a Supply of 75,000*l.* and on the 1st of June, a Motion was made, "That the House would be "come humble Suitors to her Majesty, to extend "her Royal Bounty to the Provost, Fellows, and "Scholars, of Trinity-College, near Dublin, for ha-"ving lately censur'd Edward Forbes, by Degrada-"tion and Expulsion, for speaking dishonourably "of, and asperſing the glorious Memory of his late "Majesty King William III. and also for the "steady Adherence of the Provost and Fellows of "the said College, to the late happy Revolution, "her present Majesty's Government, and the "Succession in the Protestant Line, as by Law "establish'd; for the Encourgement of good Li-"terature, and sound Revolution-Principles, and to "address his Excellency, the Lord-Lieutenant, "That he would lay before her Majesty the humble "Desire of this House, that 5,000 l. be bestow'd "by her Majesty on the Provost, Fellows, and "Scholars of Trinity-College, near Dublin, for "erecting a publick Library in the said College."

A Fellow of the College degraded for abusing the Memory of King William.

I shall only hint, that on the 5th of August, the Lower House of Convocation was in a very high and hot Debate, occasion'd by a Question, about the Power of *Prorogu*ings; wherein they discover'd an Inclination to imitate their Brethren in England, whose Synodical Acts consisted only in Opposition to their Bishops. The Lord-Lieutenant being inform'd of the Jarrings among the Clergy, by Dr. Browne, Chairman of the Committee of Convocation, when the Debate was a foot, sent Orders to prorogue them: At which they were much surpriz'd and mortify'd, and Browne, for giving this Intelligence, was, some Time after, presented to the See of Cork, by Procurement of his Excellency; yet when afterwards Phips, and other Creatures of Mr. Harley, were got into the Administration, in Ireland, this very Dr. Browne became the most violent of all the Irish Prelates, against the Earl of Wharton, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and, indeed, against the whole Whig Party; to whom he render'd himself still more obnoxious, by reproaching the Drinking to the pious and glorious Memory of King William. Against which he wrote a dull Pamphlet or two, and preach'd as dull Sermons, which so little answer'd his Purpose, that King William's glorious Memory was afterwards more frequently drunk than ever, with an additional Mark of Contempt to the Bishop, who is hardly ever nam'd now any where without it.

D. Browne made Bp. of Cork.

Deserts to the Tories.

Preaches against drinking to the pious Memory of King William.

The Money-Bills, the Bill to prevent the Growth of Popery, and other Bills, being ready for the Royal Assent, his Excellency, the Earl of Wharton, came to the House of Peers, on the 30th of August, and sent for the Commons, whose Speaker, Alan Broderick, Esq; having presented those Bills to the Lord-Lieutenant, made an excellent Speech.

His Lordship gave the Royal Assent to the above-mention'd Acts, and made a Speech to both Houses, in which were these Paragraphs:

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

Lord-Lieutenant's Speech in favour of Protestant Dissenters.

I Make no Question but that you understand too well the true Interest of the Protestant Religion in this Kingdom, not to endeavour to make all such Protestants as easy as you can, who are willing to contribute what they can to defend the whole against the common Enemy.

It is not the Law now past, nor any other Law, that the Wit of Man can frame, will secure you from Popery, whilst you continue divided among your selves; it being demonstrable, that unless there be a firm Friendship and Confidence among the Protestants of this Kingdom, it is impossible for you either to be happy, or to be safe. A.D.1709

And I am directed to declare it to you, as her Majesty's fix'd Resolution, That as her Majesty will always maintain and support the Church, as by Law establish'd, so it is her Royal Will and Intention, that Dissenters shall not be persecuted, or molested in the Exercise of their Religion.

Before his Excellency went for England, he procur'd the high Post of Lord-Chief-Justice of that Kingdom for Alan Broderick, Esq; John Foster, Esq; Recorder of Dublin, was made Attorney General, and William Whitfield, Esq; Solicitor-General; all Men of approv'd Merit, and Zeal for the English Interest, which was the only Reason for their being remov'd, during the fatal Administration of that unworthy Chancellor, Constantine Phips. Before we proceed to give some Account of the Proceedings of the British Parliament, it must be noted, that on the Fifth of November, Henry Sacheverel, D. D. preach'd a Sermon at St. Paul's, before the Lord-Mayor, and Aldermen; the Mayor was Sir Samuel Gerrard, a Grocer, who was so pleas'd with the Doctor's Performance, that taking him home to Dinner, in his Coach, he thank'd him for his fine Sermon, and desir'd him to print it, which the Aldermen refus'd to consent to, and Sacheverel said, He had spoken some bold Truths, which might displease some People. However, upon Sir Samuel Gerrard's bare saying, he hop'd to see it in Print, the Doctor made haste to put it to the Press, and publish'd it, with an Epistle Dedicatory to that Mayor; wherein he call'd him, a Bright Ornament of the Church; which so ill became the Character of the Person he flatter'd, that it has made a Jest of the Phrase itself; and there's hardly a greater Affront to be put upon any one now, than to call him a Bright Ornament.

Dr. Sacheverel preaches Sedition.

Sir Samuel Gerrard, Lord-Mayor, flatter'd in his Dedication.

On the 28th of November, her Majesty constituted Edward, Earl of Orford, Sir John Leake, Sir George Byng, George Dodington, Esq; and Paul Methuen, Esq; Commissioners for executing the Office of Lord-High-Admiral of England, in the room of the Earl of Pembroke, on whom she was pleas'd to bestow a Pension of 3000*l.* a Year, out of the Revenue of the Post-Office. The same Day the Duke of Marlborough landed at Aldborough in Suffolk, and on the 30th came to St. James's; where, the Day before, the Envoy Extraordinary of his Electoral Highness of Brunswick, had an Audience of her Majesty, wherein he notify'd the happy Delivery of the Electoral Princess of a Daughter, and desir'd her Majesty, in the Names of the Prince and Princess Electoral, to stand Godmother to the young Princess, and to permit her to be call'd after her Name.

Q. Anne stands Godmother to her Royal Highness the now Princess of Orange.

Matthew Aylmer, Esq; was appointed Admiral, and Commander in Chief of her Majesty's Navy; the Lord Dursley, Vice-Admiral; and Charles Wager, Esq; Rear-Admiral of the Red; Sir John Jennings, Admiral; and Sir Edward Whitaker, Vice-Admiral of the White; Sir John Norris, Admiral; and John Baker, Esq; Vice-Admiral of the Blue; Dr. Henry Newton, her Majesty's Envoy to the Great Duke of Tuscany, was constitued Master of St. Katharine's, ear the Tower, in the room of the Earl of Feversham, deceas'd; and Dr. Thomas Manningham was consecrated Lord Bishop of Chichester.

Promotions in the Navy.

On the 15th of November, the Parliament of Great-Britain met, and the Queen, who had not been in Person there the whole Sessions before,

*A.D.*1709 was pleas'd to go that Day to the Houſe of Peers, and in her Speech to both Houſes told them;

Queen's Speech to the Parliament,

That in the Beginning of the Year our Enemies made uſe of all their Artifices to amuſe us with falſe Appearances, and deceitful Inſinuations, of their Deſire of Peace, in Hopes that from thence Means might be found to create ſome Diviſions or Jealouſies among the Allies; but they were entirely diſappointed in their Expectation, and ſuch Meaſures were taken upon that Occaſion, as made it impoſſible for them long to diſguiſe their Inſincerity.

About the Inſincerity of the French.

[This was ſaid but a very few Months before, without diſguiſing their Inſincerity: Meſſrs St. John and Harley, admitted their Emiſſary and Agent into Counſel with them, and permitted him to create what Diviſions or Jealouſies he pleas'd.]

The Operations of the War were not delay'd, and the Campaign, which, notwithſtanding the Backwardneſs of the Seaſon, immediately follow'd, had been at leaſt as glorious for the Allies as any of thoſe which had preceded. [We never meet with the Terms, Glory or Glorious, in any publick Speeches, or Acts, from the Beginning of the aforeſaid Harley and St. John's fatal Adminiſtration, to the happy End of it.]

That God Almighty had been pleas'd to bleſs us with a moſt remarkable Victory, and with ſuch other great and important Succeſſes, both before and after it, that France became thereby much more expos'd and open to the Impreſſion of our Arms, and conſequently much more in need of a Peace, than it was in the Beginning of the Campaign. Yet tho' their many Wants and Neceſſities might naturally lead us to expect it, yet our late Experience may fully convince us, it is not to be depended upon any other Way, than by being in a Condition to compel them to ſuch Terms as may be ſafe and honourable for all the Allies.

And the Way that was taken for it, by the Miniſters that were employ'd ſoon after, was to put a General at the Head of the Army, with Orders not to let a Sword be drawn againſt them.

The Lords in their Addreſs ſaid, "Peace was "the Choice of her Moderation, and may prove "the only Refuge of her Enemies." They concluded with Congratulations on the Succeſs of her Arms, and thoſe of her Allies, under her General the Duke of Marlborough, whoſe Conduct was worthy of the chief Command in ſo juſt a War, and his Valour equal to the Bravery of her Troops. They aſſur'd her Majeſty of their utmoſt Support to carry on the War, till France was compell'd to ſubmit to the Terms of a ſafe and laſting Peace. There was not one Word like compelling ſaid after this; and the Harleians were ſo far from talking of compelling France, that if any one was likely to be compell'd by them to make Peace, it was the Confederates.

The Lord Chancellor having been order'd by the Houſe of Peers to return Thanks to the Duke of Marlborough, when his Grace made his firſt Appearance this Seſſion in that moſt honourable Houſe, his Lordſhip ſpoke to him thus: "That "he was commanded by the Lords to give his "Grace the Thanks of that Houſe, for his con-"tinu'd and eminent Services to her Majeſty and "the Publick, during the laſt Campaign, of "which nothing could be greater ſaid than what "her Majeſty, who always ſpoke with the ut-"moſt Certainty and Exactneſs, had declar'd "from the Throne: That it had been at leaſt as "glorious as any which had preceded it. But "that this Repetition of the Thanks of that "auguſt Aſſembly, had this Advantage of the "former, that it muſt be look'd upon as added

Duke of Marlborough thank'd by the Lords.

"to, and ſtanding on the Foundations already laid *A.D.*1709
"in the Records of that Houſe, for the preſerving
"his Memory freſh to all future Times: So that
"his Grace had alſo the Satisfaction of ſeeing
"this everlaſting Monument of his Glory riſe
"every Year much higher. His Lordſhip con-
"cluded with wiſhing, That God might conti-
"nue in a wonderful Manner to preſerve ſo in-
"valuable a Life; that he might not only add
"to that Structure, but finiſh all with the Beau-
"ties of an honourable and laſting Peace." His Grace's Anſwer was, I look upon it as the greateſt Mark of Honour I can receive, that your Lordſhips are pleas'd to take notice of my Endeavours to ſerve my Queen and my Country; and I beg Leave to do Juſtice to all the Officers and Soldiers who ſerv'd with me, it not being poſſible for Men to ſhew more Zeal for her Majeſty's Service, or greater Bravery than they had done.

The Duke's Anſwer.

While her Majeſty's General was acquiring this Glory Abroad, by the Succeſs of her Arms, her Treaſurer, and her other Miniſters, acquir'd equal Reputation at Home, by the Succeſs of her Counſels. Yet all this While were Mr. Robert Harley, Mr. Henry St. John, Mr. William Bromley, and the Chiefs of the High-Church Party, made up, as you ſee, of Bigots and Libertines, ſecretly undermining them at Court, by miſrepreſenting their Actions and Deſigns, and ſetting them in the falſeſt Light, to impoſe upon, and delude a well-meaning Princeſs. Their main Inſtrument was Mrs. Abigail Maſham, who, for her Abuſe of the Royal Ear, to which ſhe only had now Acceſs, was about this Time generally nam'd Abigail Earwig; and tho' ſhe wanted not Craft, in which ſhe was well inſtructed by Mr. Harley, ſhe at this time blabb'd a little too much to Sir Godfrey Kneller, when ſhe was ſitting to him for her Picture; every one being ſo fond of their own Likeneſs, that let it be what it will, they take Pleaſure in ſeeing it, and have a fooliſh Conceit that others will do ſo too. She told Sir Godfrey, even now when there was ſo great Harmony, in Appearance, between the Queen, the Miniſters, and the two Houſes of Parliament, That her Majeſty could truſt no Body about her; and therefore ſhe help'd her to ſome truſty Ones five or ſix Months after. It was this Faction who reproach'd the Duke of Marlborough with having wantonly and unneceſſarily ſacrific'd the Lives of many Thouſands, to raiſe his own Reputation. This was firſt whiſper'd about among them, and then it got into their Clubs, at the Vine, the Fountain, &c. Afterwards, it was in all their Mouths; but to ſilence this falſe and malicious Reproach, the Houſe of Commons came to this unanimous Reſolution; "That "the late Victory obtain'd by his Grace the Duke "of Marlborough, and the other great and impor-"tant Succeſſes of the laſt Campaign, were ſo re-"markable, that this Houſe thought itſelf oblig'd "to expreſs how ſenſible they were of the Ho-"nour and Advantage, which the Kingdom, and "the whole Confederacy, had receiv'd by his emi-"nent Services." And, "That Mr. Comptroller, "Mr. Secretary Boyle, Mr. Chancellor of the Ex-"chequer, Mr. Onſlow, Lord Coningſby, Mr. "Nevil, Lord William Pawlet, Mr. Craigs, Mr. "Compton, Mr. Walpole, Mr. Dolben, Sir Charles "Hedges, Ld. Lumley, and Sir Charles Cox, ſhould "give his Grace the Thanks of this Houſe, and "congratulate his Grace's Safety and Return to "Great-Britain." Which being done accordingly, "my Lord Duke ſaid in anſwer, "That it was "a great Honour and Satisfaction to him, that the "Houſe of Commons was pleas'd to take ſo much Harley, St. John, &c. Treachery to undermine him.

Abigail Earwig joins with them.

Her ſaying of the Queen.

A Reflection on the Duke of Marlborough.

The Commons congratulate him upon his Succeſſes.

The Duke's Anſwer.

A.D.1709 " Notice of his Endeavours to ſerve his Queen " and his Country; and that he could not " be juſt to all the Officers and Soldiers, who " had ſerv'd with him, unleſs he took Occaſion " to aſſure the Commons, that their Zeal and " Affection, for the Service, was equal to the " Courage and Bravery they had ſhewn, during " this whole War."

The Commons having taken the Supplies into Conſideration, proceeded in it with ſo much Diſpatch, that they had hardly ſat one Month, before they had granted all the neceſſary Sums for the next Year's Service, amounting to 6,184,466 l. On the 2d of December, upon a Motion of Mr. John Hungerford, a Bill was order'd to be brought in, to prevent all immoderate and exceſſive Gaming. About a Week after, a Petition of ſeveral Bookſellers was deliver'd to the Houſe, praying for an Act to ſecure to themſelves the Properties of Books bought and obtain'd by them. But it muſt be obſerv'd and remember'd, that the Grievance complain'd of was owing to ſome of themſelves, who, without regard to any One's Property, pirated other Men's Books, and do ſtill, with too much Impunity, as well as Violation of Right, continue that wicked and ſcandalous Practice, notwithſtanding a Bill was brought in with another Title, for the Encouragement of Learning, by veſting the Copies of printed Books in the Authors or Purchaſers, which Bill paſt this Seſſion, but did not anſwer the End propos'd by it.

The Commons give above ſix Millions in a Month.

Some Account of Henry Sacheverel.

Being now come to Sacheverel's Sedition, occaſion'd by his being call'd to an Account for his factious abuſive Sermons, it will not be improper to ſay ſomething of the Man, tho' like the Greek Incendiary, Eraſtratus, his Name had never been remember'd, but for the Miſchief he did.

Henry Sacheverel, whom we are treating of, was Grandſon of Mr. John Sacheverel, the Preſbyterian Miniſter of Wincaunton in Somerſetſhire, Nephew of Mr. Timothy Sacheverel, the Preſbyterian Miniſter of Tarrant-Hinton in Dorſetſhire, and Nephew of Mr. Philologus Sacheverel, the Preſbyterian Miniſter of Eaſtwood in Eſſex; which three Miniſters were, after the Reſtoration of King Charles II. which is commemorated by Act of Parliament, turn'd out of their Churches, and afterwards with their Wives and Families out of their Habitations, for worſhipping God according to their Conſciences. There is this remarkable concerning Dr. Sacheverel's Grandfather, and Uncle Timothy; his Grandfather, Mr. John Sacheverel, on the very Day of King Charles II. Coronation, preach'd on this Text; But if ye ſhall do wickedly, ye ſhall be conſum'd, both you and your King. The Obſervation he chiefly inſiſted upon was, That wicked Men, continuing in their wicked Actions, are the greateſt Traytors to the King and State wherein they live. Several of his Auditory went out of the Church in the midſt of Sermon, and the Rabble got together, and in the Market-Place, at Wincaunton, impannel'd a Jury from amongſt themſelves, and repreſented a formal Trial of the Preacher; after which they drew him in Effigie, with a Book in his Hand, which they call'd his Catechiſm, upon a Hurdle to the Top of a Hill, where a great Bonfire was prepar'd, and the Effigie of this pious Man was ſtuck upon a Pole, and plac'd in the Middle of the Flames, where it was conſum'd. Henry Sacheverel's Uncle Timothy, being driven by Perſecution from his Houſe and Flock at Tarrant-Hinton, remov'd to Winterbourn, in the ſame County of Dorſet; where, upon the Indulgence in 1672, he fitted up an Out-houſe for a Place of Worſhip, and the Rabble ſet it on fire, to prevent its being put to that good Uſe. Thus did theſe Reverend Miniſters, of Sacheverel's Name and Family, ſuffer by the Rage of High-Church Mobs, which were the Tools himſelf, or his Faction for him, made uſe of to get him Preferments in the Church. His Father, who had imbib'd other Principles at the Univerſity, or believ'd he ſhould do his Buſineſs better by Conformity, now triumphant, than by Non-conformity under Perſecution, became Miniſter of St. Peter's Church, a ſmall Living in Marlborough, where he dy'd, and left his Wdiow, and a numerous Family, in very mean Circumſtances. Henry, his eldeſt Son, was bred at the publick School in Marlborough, at the Charge of one Edward Hearſt, an Apothecary, whoſe Wife ſurviving him, continu'd his Charity to Sacheverel, and ſent him to Oxford. His Mother, by Procurement of Biſhop Burnet, was admitted into an Hoſpital for diſtreſs'd Widows at Saliſbury. The Widow Hearſt was High-Church, as her Huſband had been, and the young Sacheverel's Zeal help'd to continue her Beneficence towards him. He had not been long at Oxford before ſhe diſcover'd his turbulent, violent, and imperious Temper; the more ill-becoming in him, becauſe he ſubſiſted by Charity. He was remarkable for his diſreſpectful Behaviour to his Superiors, and his Inſolence to his Equals; the very Make and Look of him were an Index to his Character; he was Large, Tall, of a lived Complexion; his Countenance audacious, but dead, beſpeaking Envy, Ill-nature, and Pride, without Skill to conceal Either upon Occaſion. When he came to be Ordain'd by the very learn'd and religious Dr. Lloyd, Biſhop of Worceſter, his Lordſhip charg'd him with falſe Latin; he confidently defended what he ſaid, and the Biſhop was forc'd to ſend for Books out of his Study to convince him. His Lordſhip, upon Examination, finding him very raw and ignorant in Divinity, refus'd to Ordain him at that Time, but did it afterwards, upon Recommendation of the Biſhop of Oxford, with particular Marks of Favour; yet he ungratefully traduc'd that pious and learned Prelate in a Libel, call'd The Character of a Low-Churchman. Having a ſmall Benefice given him in Staffordſhire, he gave great Scandal to the ſober and religious People in his Neighbourhood, by his Immoralities, which are ſet forth in a Treatiſe, entitl'd, Peril of being zealouſly, but not well-affected, written by a Miniſter of the Church of England, one of the Brotherhood of St. Katharine's. While he was at his Pariſh, or Oxford, he fell in with the moſt furious of the Jacobite Party, made ſcurrilous Reflections on the Death of King William, and the Hanover Succeſſion; and when the Queen appear'd againſt the High-Church and the Memorial, he had the Impudence to call her a Waxen Queen; Whereby, ſays the Annaliſt, he alluded to, or gave the Hint of the Tacit Jeſt, that was put upon her at Oxford, by thoſe who put her Motto, of Semper Eadem, on the Vane of a Weather-cock. Having diſtinguiſh'd himſelf by his Ravings in ſeveral Pulpits at Oxford, Lichfield, Leiceſter, Derby, and other Places, where he endeavour'd to enflame the People againſt the Government, the Factious thought he would propagate their vile Cauſe to more Purpoſe in London; and having ſent for him to Town, got him a Chaplainſhip in St. Saviour's, Southwark, where he was benefic'd, when the Bright Ornament, before-mention'd, invited him to begin the Part he

Abuſes Bp. Lloyd,

Queen.

Preaches Sedition up and down the Country.

*A.D.*1709 was to act in London at St. Paul's, and he preach'd and printed his Sermon, which he call'd The Perils of falſe Brethren.

I ſhall not enter into the Detail of Sacheverel's Impeachment and Trial; the Arguments for Reſiſtance and Non-Reſiſtance, againſt Arbitrary-Power and Paſſive-Obedience, have been the Subject of ſo many Diſcourſes, before and ſince the condemn'd Doctor's Time, that there's no need of enlarging upon, or indeed of repeating them; and I ſhall only mention what is moſt rare and curious.

His falſe and inſolent Sermon at St. Paul's.

Sacheverel's Sermon being in every one's Hand ſoon after 'twas printed, it was the Subject of the whole Talk of the Town, High-Church and Jacobites extoll'd it, as full of Truths, equal to thoſe in the Goſpel; all good Engliſhmen abhorr'd the Falſhood and Inſolence of it, and were impatient to have the Preacher brought to Puniſhment. This, doubtleſs, was what Mr. Harley lik'd above all Things that could have happen'd; he knew full well that the Queen could be brought to nothing more eaſy, than to believe that the Church was in Danger, if ſo bold a Step, as the puniſhing a Churchman, was attempted; and that ſhe would then of courſe hearken more than ever to thoſe who ſhould ſtand by the Church in ſo great Peril.

Mr. Harley privately ſets on an Impeachment.

Tho' Matters were not yet ripe enough for her to change Hands in the Miniſtry, he doubted not but thoſe that were now employ'd, would effectually loſe their Credit with the Queen, by the Impeachment of the Doctor; and therefore he and his Adherents forwarded it in private, as much as they oppos'd it in publick. Sacheverel was ſo profane as to bring the Character of a Comedy into his Sermon, which in Truth was of itſelf a Tragi-Farce; and ſaucily to mention my Lord High-Treaſurer by the Nickname of Volpone, which rais'd the Indignation of all good Britons to ſuch a Degree, that it could not be kept out of Parliament; where John Dolben, Eſq; Son to the late Archbp. of York, a Gentleman of Parts and Spirit, complain'd, Dec. the 13th, of two printed Books, entitl'd, The Communication of Sin; preach'd at the Aſſizes held at Derby, Aug. 15. 1709; and the other, entitl'd, The Perils of falſe Brethren, both in Church and State; preach'd before the Lord-Mayor on the 5th of November.

John Dolben, Eſq; complains to the Houſe of Commons of Sacheverel's Sermon.

Several Paragraphs in the Epiſtle Dedicatory, to George Sacheverel, Eſq; High-Sheriff of the County of Derby, before the Aſſize-Sermon, were read. This 'Squire Sacheverel was ſaid to be related to the Doctor, but it could not be in Blood very nearly; for the Doctor's Great-Grandfather was beneficed in the Iſle of Purbeck, in Dorſetſhire, almoſt an hundred Years before that Time; but he might be related to George Sacheverel, Eſq; in another Senſe; the 'Squire having had the Character of a Madman, and what the Doctor was will be ſeen preſently. Several Paragraphs of his Perils of falſe Brethren were alſo read, and then Sir Peter King, Recorder of London, and other Members, made Speeches againſt the Audaciouſneſs of Doctor Sacheverel, who had advanc'd Poſitions diametrically oppoſite to Revolution Principles, to the preſent eſtabliſh'd Government, and to the Proteſtant Succeſſion; and, conſequently, tending to foment Factions, and ſtir up Rebellion. Thoſe who were in the Secret of Sacheverel's Miſſion for that Purpoſe, were ſtunn'd at this ſudden Attack upon their falſe Apoſtle; and no Member offering to ſpeak in his Defence, it was RESOLV'D,

No Body ſpeaks for him in the Houſe.

" That a Book, entitl'd, The Communication " of Sin, being a Sermon preach'd at the Aſſizes " held at Derby, Aug. 15. 1709; and a Book, *A.D.*1709 " entitl'd, The Perils of falſe Brethren, both in " Church and State; ſet forth in a Sermon " preach'd before the Lord-Mayor, &c. at the " Cathedral-Church of St. Paul's, on the 5th " of November, 1709, were malicious, ſcanda- " lous, and ſeditious Libels, highly reflecting up- " on her Majeſty and her Government, the late The Com- " happy Revolution, and the Proteſtant Succeſ- mons Re- " ſion, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, and both Houſes of ſolve. " Parliament, tending to alienate the Affections " of her Majeſty's good Subjects, and to create " Jealouſies and Diviſions among them." And it was order'd, That Dr. Henry Sacheverel, and Henry Clements, his Bookſeller, ſhould attend at the Bar of the Houſe next Day. Accordingly, on the 14th of December, he was convey'd to Weſtminſter, in the Coach of Dr. Lancaſter, Rector of St. Martin's in the Fields, a Divine of no other Eminence than what his Degrees and Preferments gave him. This Doctor attended the other Doctor to the Court of Requeſts, where above an hundred of their Cloth aſſembled to bear Teſtimony to the Cauſe. Dr. Sacheverel, and Clements, his Bookſeller, being call'd in, and examin'd at the Bar, the Doctor own'd the two ſcandalous Libels and told them what Encouragement he had from Sir Samuel Garrard, the Lord-Mayor, to print The Perils of falſe Brethren. Sir Samuel Garrard, a Member of the Houſe, being aſk'd, Whether he had commanded Dr. Sacheverel to print his Sermon, the Lord-Mayor, in a very great Pannick, diſown'd that ever he deſir'd, order'd, or encourag'd the Printing the ſaid Sermon. So here is this rare High-Church Divine ſetting out as Champion for the Faction, with a notorious Lye in his Mouth. The Lord-Mayor of London, his own Bright Ornament, ſpoke Truth, and as a Member of the Houſe of Commons ſaid, They ought to give more Credit to one of their own Members, than to a Man who had preach'd ſuch Sermons.

An hundred of the Clergy appear with him.

The Lord-Mayor diſowns him.

Sacheverel ſtanding to what he had ſaid, tho' prov'd to be a Liar in the Face of the Repreſentative of Great-Britain, by the Evidence of the Lord-Mayor of London: It was Reſolv'd, That Dr. Henry Sacheverel be impeach'd of high Crimes and Miſdemeanors; and Mr. Dolben was order'd to impeach him at the Bar of the Houſe of Lords, in the Name of all the Commons of Great-Britain. Clements declaring he had the Libel from Dr. Sacheverel, was let go; but the Doctor was taken into Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms, and a Committee of ſome of the moſt eminent Members of the Houſe, was appointed to draw up Articles againſt him.

Prov'd in a Lie.

He is impeach'd.

Having done this Juſtice to a Criminal, the Houſe proceeded to do Juſtice alſo to a moſt deſerving Perſon of the ſame Profeſſion, the Reverend Mr. Benjamin Hoadley; and at the Motion of the ingenious and learned Anthony Henley, Eſq; it was RESOLV'D,

Vote in Favour of the Rev. Benj. Hoadley.

" That the Reverend Mr. Benjamin Hoadley, " Rector of St. Peter's Poor, London, for having " often ſtrenuouſly juſtify'd the Principles on " which her Majeſty and the Nation proceeded " in the late happy Revolution, had juſtly meri- " ted the Favour and Recommendation of this " Houſe: And that an humble Addreſs be pre- " ſented to her Majeſty, That ſhe would be gra- " ciouſly pleas'd to beſtow ſome Dignity in the " Church on the ſaid Mr. Hoadley, for his eminent " Services both to Church and State." The Queen's Anſwer was, I will take a proper Opportunity to comply with your Deſire. This Deſire was never

A.D.1709 never comply'd with in this Reign; and from this Time to the End of it we muſt expect, that whatever is ſaid from the Throne, in favour of Revolution-Principles, will have no more Effect than the Anſwer to the Commons Addreſs in behalf of Mr. Hoadley.

This Vote was ſo juſtly deſerv'd, that no Honour could be greater; and the ſhameleſs Perſecution that Reverend Divine met with afterwards, from the envenom'd Pens of ſome Party-men, even of his own Holy Vocation, ſhews how inſenſible they were of Modeſty or Truth, to ſet themſelves in oppoſition to the Senſe of the Nation, doing this publick Homage to the Merit of ſo excellent a Perſon.

When Mr. Dolben carry'd up the Impeachment againſt Dr. Sacheverel, it was obſervable, that the Lord Haverſham, one of Mr. How's Diſſenting-Congregation, made a ſhort Speech, importing, "That it ſeem'd ſtrange to ſee a Divine "impeach'd for preaching a Doctrine for which "he would heretofore have been rewarded, and "might, if the Times chang'd, be made a Biſhop. However, added his Lordſhip, Since "he is impeach'd, I hope a Day will come for the "calling other Criminals to account: For which "Way ſoever I caſt my Eyes, I ſee Matter for Im-"peachments." Sacheverel had treated the Diſſenters with all the Filth and Bitterneſs of Language a Man of his Intellects was capable of; but the Diſaffected and the Diſguſted being on his Side, and Lord Haverſham on theirs, theſe Contraries were reconcil'd in Oppoſition to the Adminiſtration.

The Doctor having no Conveniency for the Service of his Auxiliaries, while he was in Cuſtody, petition'd the Houſe to be bail'd, that he might have an Opportunity to make his Defence; in which all the World knew he would not want Help, as long as there were ſuch Men as Sir Simon Harcourt, Conſt. Phipps, Dr. Atterbury, Dr. Smalridge, Dr. Moſs, Dr. Henchman, &c. to inſtruct him.

The Committee, above-mention'd, being order'd to ſearch for Precedents, as to Bailing the Doctor, Mr. Dolben reported, They could find none; and the Queſtiton being put, Whether he ſhould be admitted to Bail? it paſt in the Negative. Yeas 64. Noes 114.

This Committee ſat ſeveral Times at Sir Joſeph Jekyl's Houſe, during the Adjournment of Parliament to the 9th of January; and when the Commons then met, Mr. Dolben reported, That they had drawn up the Articles of Impeachment, which were read Paragraph by Paragraph. The Preamble to the Articles being read, a Motion was made by the Doctor's Friends, That the Report ſhould be re-committed; which occaſion'd a warm Debate. It is hop'd particular Notice will be taken of Dr. Sacheverel's Friends, that a Judgment may be made of the good Intentions of thoſe who countenanc'd and ſupported him. Mr. Robert Harley inſiſted on leaving out the Word Sedition; Mr. William Bromley did not fail to vindicate the Doctor and High-Church on this Occaſion: But whatever they, or others ſaid, was fully anſwer'd by the late Speaker, Mr. Smith, Lieutenat-General Mordaunt, an Oxford-Man as well as Mr. Bromley, Mr. Lechmere, Mr. Thompſon, &c. So the Queſtion for Re-committing being put, it paſt in the Negative. Yeas 131. Noes 232; and the Articles of Impeachment were agreed to, and order'd to be carry'd to the Lords, importing in Subſtance, "That Dr. Henry Sa-"cheverel, in Sermons and Books, did falſely and "maliciouſly ſuggeſt and maintain;

1. That the neceſſary Means us'd to bring about the happy Revolution, were odious and unjuſtifiable: That his late Majeſty, in his Declaration, diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; and that to impute Reſiſtance to the ſaid Revolution, was to caſt black and odious Colours upon his late Majeſty, and the ſaid Revolution.

2. That the Toleration granted by Law to Proteſtant-Diſſenters, was unreaſonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable: And that he was a falſe Brother, with relation to God, Religion, or the Church, who defended Toleration, and Liberty of Conſcience. That Queen Elizabeth was deluded by Archbiſhop Grindal, whom he ſcurrilouſly call'd a falſe Son of the Church, and a perfidious Prelate, to the Toleration of the Genevean Diſcipline. And that it was the Duty of ſuperior Paſtors, to thunder out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's againſt Perſons entitl'd to the Benefit of the ſaid Toleration; and inſolently dar'd or defy'd any Power on Earth to reverſe ſuch Sentence.

3. That the Church of England was in a Condition of great Peril and Adverſity under her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; and, in order to arraign and blacken the Vote, or Reſolution, of both Houſes of Parliament, approv'd by her Majeſty, That the Church of England was in a ſafe and flouriſhing Condition under the Queen's Adminiſtration, he did ſuggeſt the Church to be in Danger; and, as a Parallel, mention'd, That the Perſon of King Charles was voted to be out of Danger at the ſame Time that his Murderers were conſpiring his Death; thereby wickedly and maliciouſly inſinuating, that the Members of both Houſes, who paſs'd the ſaid Vote, were then conſpiring the Ruin of the Church.

4. That her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, both in Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Affairs, tended to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution; and there were Men of Characters and Stations in Church and State, who were falſe Brethren, and did themſelves weaken, undermine, betray, and did encourage, and put it in the Power of others, to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment: And charg'd her Majeſty, and thoſe in Authority under her, both in Church and State, with a general Male-Adminiſtration; and, as a publick Incendiary, he perſuaded her Majeſty's Subjects to keep up Diſtinctions of Factions and Parties, inſtill'd groundleſs Jealouſies, fomented deſtructive Diviſions among them, and excited and ſtirr'd them up to Arms and Violence. And that his ſaid malicious and ſeditious Suggeſtions might make the ſtronger Impreſſions upon the Minds of her Majeſty's Subjects, he, the ſaid Henry Sacheverel, did wickedly wreſt and pervert divers Texts of Scripture.

A.D.1710 Articles againſt Sacheverel.

As every one of theſe Articles were fully prov'd, what a falſe, malicious, ſeditious, wicked, profane Man muſt this be! they are all Terms made uſe of in the Report; and add to this, an invincible Impudence, an Inſenſibility of Conſcience, and even Humanity. Was it poſſible for Faction to leave ſuch a Tool in a Nook of a County? Could he eſcape the Search of a Man of Mr. Harley's Craft? And was it then a Wonder to ſee him brought upon the Stage to act that Part which was cut out for him?

The Serjeant of the Houſe of Commons deliver'd him to the Cuſtody of the Uſher of the Black Rod's Deputy, Jan. 14. and the Houſe of Lords admitting him to Bail, Dr. Lancaſter, aforeſaid, and Dr. Bowes, were bound for him, and doubtleſs would have been ſo, had he been a worſe Man even than he was, conſidering the Cauſe he was engag'd in. The Doctor having had a Copy of the Articles deliver'd to him, his Cabinet-Counſellors prepar'd an

Anſwer

A.D. 1710 Answer for him, wherein they made him deny the false, malicious and seditious Positions charg'd upon him, and justify, palliate and extenuate what he had advanc'd in his Sermons.

His Answer a Reflection on the Parliament's Honour.

This Answer being sent from the Lords to the Commons, and referr'd by them to the Committee, they consider'd the same, and Mr. Dolben reported, That it was plainly design'd to reflect on the Honour of the House. And a Replication to it being order'd to be drawn up, a Debate arose upon its second Reading, wherein the Harleians insinuated, It was adviseable to leave the Offender to the ordinary Course of Justice. And so doubtless he would have been left, if they had consider'd him only as the adopted Son of the Widow Hearst, of Marlborough, as the boisterous, turbulent Student of Magdalen, Oxon; but it was the Cause against the Faction the Commons did virtually impeach; and it was necessary that they should bring its Knight-Errant to Account for it. The Annalist, pursuing his Mob-Politicks, says, This wholesome Counsel coming from the Enemy's Quarter, the Courtiers were deaf to it, and, like Men infatuated to their own Ruin, deliberately set fire to the Mine, by which they were to be blown up. So indeed talk'd the lower Order of Statesmen, in Coffee-Houses and Taverns, some Time after: tho' when the Criminal was first question'd in the House of Commons, the Spirit that appear'd in the Prosecution was highly approv'd; and what the House said in their Address to the Queen upon it, is an unanswerable Reason for their proceeding as they did: They could not patiently sit still and see the Justice of the late happy Revolution reflected upon; her Majesty's undoubted Title, and gracious Administration, to be render'd odious to the People; the Protestant Succession undermin'd; the Resolutions of Parliament treated with Contempt; the Governors of the Church, and her Majesty, as Supream, vilify'd and aspers'd; the Toleration expos'd as Wicked; and Sedition insolently invading the Pulpit. Indeed it was the Observation of many judicious Lovers of Liberty and the Constitution, that tho' Great-Britain paid a little too dear for the Solemn Judgment of the Legislature of Queen Anne, and the two Houses of Parliament, in favour of Liberty, Spiritual and Temporal, and of Revolution-Principles, vindicating them to be the Basis of our Constitution; yet rather than not have had that Solemn Judgment, they would have been willing that Mess. Harley, St. John, &c. should have had their short Turn in the Ministry, notwithstanding the Miseries and Shame with which it was attended.

The Commons lay before the Queen the Necessity of prosecuting him.

Mr. Dolben carry'd the Doctor's Answer, and the Commons Replication to the Lords, who appointed Thursday, the 9th of February, for his Trial; and having notify'd it to the Commons, they Resolv'd, That their Committee, who drew up the Articles against Dr. Sacheverel, should be their Managers: And these were,

The Managers for the Commons at Sacheverel's Trial.

Sir John Holland, Comptroller of her Majesty's Houshold,
Mr. Secretary Boyle,
Mr. Smith, Chancellor of the Exchequer,
Sir James Montagu, Attorney-General,
Robert Eyre, Esq; Sollicitor-General,
Robert Walpole, Esq; Treasurer of the Navy,
Sir Joseph Jekyl,
Nicholas Lechmere, Esq;
John Dolben, Esq;
William Thompson, Esq;
Sir Thomas Parker,
Sir Peter King, Recorder of London,
Sir John Hawles,
Lord William Pawlet,
Lord Coningsby,
Hon. Spencer Compton, Esq;
Lieut. Gen. Stanhope,
Lieut. Gen. Mordaunt,
Sir David Dalrymple.
Spencer Cowper, Esq;

A.D. 1710

Twenty Gentlemen for Rank, Character, and Merit in all Qualifications not easily to be match'd in Great-Britain.

It being debated whether the House should attend in a Body, or in a Committee of the whole House, it was, upon the Question, carry'd for a Committee. Yeas 192. Noes 180. Which occasion'd the putting off the Trial till Conveniencies were made in Westminster-Hall for the Reception of the Commons, who were to be present at the Trial, which commenc'd the 27th of February. About 12 o' Clock at Noon, the Lords in their Formalities went down to their Court in that Hall, and the Managers of the Commons, and the Committee of the whole House, having taken their respective Places; her Majesty being then, and every Day of the Trial, present incognita, Sir James Montagu spoke first in behalf of the Commons of Great-Britain, and shew'd the Reasons of this Prosecution, which was not intended against the Function, but against a particular Person. He was seconded by Mr. Lechmere, who enlarg'd upon the Nature, and aggravated the Enormity of Dr. Sacheverel's Crimes. After which the Epistle to his Name-sake, Sacheverel, Sheriff of Derbyshire, was read, as were several Paragraphs of his Perils of false Brethren, on which the Articles of Impeachment were grounded. This was all that was done the first Day of the Trial. The next Day Sir Joseph Jekyl made good the first Article of the Impeachment in the following Speech.

Attorney-General.

The first Day's Trial.

Sir Joseph Jekyl's Speech.

My Lords,

" THE Commons cannot but think it hard, " that in this Assembly of the British " Nation, after more than One-and-twenty " Years Enjoyment of the Advantages arising by " the late happy Revolution, it should be necessa- " ry to plead in Vindication of it. They who share " in the Legislature with your Lordships, have " put themselves in the Nature of Suitors to you, " against this Offender; in whom your Lordship " will see the Reverse of a true English Subject. " If the Justice of the Revolution be established, " the Toleration will be rejoyc'd in by some, and " grievous to none: But if the Justice of that " Foundation be question'd, every Thing built " upon it is in some Degree shaken, and an Op- " portunity given for Disputes never to be ended, " but by a total Subversion of our Government " and Constitution. From what Quarter is it " that all Obstruction and Opposition to the late " King, and to her Majesty, has come? Upon " the Succession depends our present Happiness, " and future Hopes: and yet this Criminal at the " Bar has not thought fit once so to go out of his " Way, as to mention it in his Answer. Can " the Pretender have any Hopes but in Avoid- " ance of that Law? Can it be thought proper " to preach this Doctrine, in the Reign of the best " of Princes, which can be of no Use but to the " worst? The right stating the Case of Resistance at " the Revolution, will be a Means of settling Mens " Minds in the Love of Order and Regularity, " which is the great End and Design of the Law " to secure. It is the fundamental Rule, That " the Law is the only Measure of the Prince's Au- " thority, and the People's Submission to it. There " is nothing plainer, than the Sense of the Law " must be found out by Law itself; and that Re- " ligion has nothing to do on that Occasion, but

A.D. 1710 " to enforce the Obedience from the Conſiderati-
" of higher Rewards and future Puniſhments.
" My Lords, It may be aſſerted, that the " People have an Intereſt and Right to the " Law and Conſtitution: There is a Principle
" ariſing from the Nature of Civil Society;
" and this Right the Nation aſſerted and re-
" cover'd out of the Hands of thoſe, who had
" diſpoſſeſs'd them of it. There are to this Pur-
" poſe two famous Inſtances, in the Knowledge
" of the preſent Age, the Reſtoration, and the " Revolution. By both theſe great and happy E" vents, the Regal Power, and the Rights of the " People were recover'd; and it is hard to ſay in
" which the People had the greateſt, they having
" an Advantage by every Prerogative of the " Crown. Our Conſtitution was recover'd at
" the Time of the Reſtoration, when the Whole
" was violated; and the Caſe of the Revolution
" is equal to it. Our greateſt Privileges, even that
" on which all others depend, viz. of giving our
" Conſent to the making new Laws, or repealing
" old ones, was taken away, and a Deſpotick Power
" ſet up, in too many Inſtances to be repeated.
" As the Nation agreed to the Diſeaſe, ſo like-
" wiſe did they in the Remedy; by which the " whole Frame of the Government was entirely
" reſtor'd. A remarkable Proof of the excellent
" Temper the Nation was in at that Time!"

To the ſame Article ſpoke Robert Eyre, Eſq; Sollicitor-General, in theſe or the like Expreſſions.

Robert, Eyre, Eſq; " The Prayers appointed by Authority, to be
" us'd on the Fifth of November, regard a double
" Deliverance; but this Criminal takes Notice of " the Revolution only to give it up. He allows
" that to be true, which every Man, and he him-
" ſelf knows to be falſe: He ſays, The late King
" diſown'd and diſclaim'd all manner of Reſiſtance
" at the Revolution; and that to impute Reſiſtance
" to the Revolution, is to caſt odious Colours upon
" his late Majeſty, which the Commons appre-
" hend to be a full Proof of the Aſſertion in the
" firſt Article: For Reſiſtance was the neceſſary
" Means us'd to bring about the Revolution; and
" it carries a high Reflection upon our Great and
" Glorious Deliverer, to ſay he diſclaim'd all Re-
" ſiſtance, whilſt he was actually engag'd in it, for
" the Re-ſettlement of our Conſtitution, and to
" preſerve us from Popery, and Arbitrary Power,
" which was the whole Deſign of his Labours
" thro' his moſt glorious Reign.

" The Commons had Reaſon to hope, after ſo
" many Years Enjoyment of all the Happineſs of
" a Free-born People, and at a Time when the " Subjects of this Kingdom enjoy'd their full Li-
" berties, under the Queen's moſt excellent Ad-
" miniſtration, no Perſon would have been ſo
" wicked, as to have caſt any Reflection upon the " Means whereby theſe Bleſſings were obtain'd,
" and continu'd to us.

" But ſince all theſe Enjoyments cannot ſatisfy,
" or ſettle the reſtleſs and turbulent Spirit of the " Enemies of the Revolution, the Commons think
" it their indiſpenſable Duty to the Crown, and
" to their Country, to demand your Lordſhips
" Judgment on this important Subject.

Sir John Holland ſaid;

My Lords,

Sir John Holland. " The preſent Conſideration is of the greateſt
" Importance, no leſs than whether your Lord-
" ſhips, and ſo many of the Commons of Great-
" Britain, who took up Arms at the Revolution,
" were really Rebels? And whether our late glo-
" rious Deliverer was an Uſurper or not? The " Criminal was aware of this juſt Objection,
" which appears, by his Endeavours, on ſecond
" Thoughts, to make us believe, that by Reſiſt-
" ance he meant Conqueſt, which he could not ex-
" pect to hear of without the utmoſt Reſentment
" of the Commons. It is an unaccountable Pre-
" ſumption, that he could imagine, ſo mean a Sub-
" terfuge ſhould prevent your Lordſhip's Juſtice,
" which the Commons aſk, in this Caſe, for his
" Reformation, and an Example to others. The " Commons would by no Means be underſtood,
" as if they thought the People were Judges, when,
" and how far, they are to obey. We agree, the " Laws of Obedience, both divine and humane,
" are very expreſs and poſitive; but Neceſſity will
" always make a juſtifiable Exception, ſo much
" depends upon the Revolution, that the Com-
" mons are highly jealous of it. Twenty Years it
" has been ſettled; but it is not ſo long ſince the
" Pretender, and his Adherents, endeavour'd to
" invade it; and when they ſhall hear that the " Revolution is branded in Sermons, as is now u-
" ſual, it may have Conſequences ſo ill, that we
" hope it ſhall not now be done with Impunity.

A.D. 1710

Robert Walpole, Eſq; ſpoke next.

My Lords,

Robert Walpole, Eſq; " I doubt not but your Lordſhips have obſerv'd
" how injurious the Doctrines, now in queſtion,
" may be to the Kingdom, and how loudly they
" call for your Lordſhips Juſtice. When Merce-
" nary Scribblers are employ'd by a Party to vent
" their Malice, it may be fit to leave them to the
" Courſe of Common Juſtice; but when the Trum-
" pet is ſounded in Sion; when the Pulpit takes up
" the Cudgels, and gives the Alarm; when theſe
" bitter and poiſonous Pills are gilded over with
" the ſpecious Name of Loyalty, and People are " brought to ſwallow them up for their Souls and
" Conſciences Sake, the Commons cannot but " think it high time to put a ſtop to this growing
" Evil; and they cannot apprehend, but that the
" juſt Reſentment they have ſhewn on this Occa-
" ſion, will meet with Applauſe from all thoſe
" that are ſincere Friends to her Majeſty, and her
" Government, and to the Proteſtant Succeſſion
" as is eſtabliſh'd by Law; and therefore I do not
" wonder to ſee her Enemies concern'd at this " Trial. The very Being of our preſent Govern-
" ment is the Reſiſtance that was neceſſarily us'd at
" the Revolution; and it is a moſt ſurprizing As-
" ſurance, that while the Enemies of our State
" are ſtriking at the Root of all, they ſhould be " able to paſs themſelves upon the World for ei-
" ther. To recommend themſelves to the Queen,
" they find fault with the Revolution, without which
" ſhe never would have been a Queen, and we the
" moſt miſerable of People. If Reſiſtance be in
" no way ſafe to be allow'd, then all the great Pri-
" vileges enacted in the Petition of Rights are mere
" Pretences. Reſiſtance is no where enacted to
" be legal, but ſubject to all Laws in being, un" der the higheſt Penalties. The Doctrine of " unlimited Paſſive-Obedience, is calculated for
" Abſolute-Power; but it cannot be our Advan-
" tage, or Security to her Majeſty, who neither
" wants nor deſires it. What can the Meaning
" of this Attempt be, but to prepare the People
" to be ready to embrace a Government, in which
" it is like to be expected from them?

Sir John Hawles ſpoke next to the ſame Arti- Sir John Hawles.
cle; and next to him, General Stanhope made a remarkable Speech, full of manly Eloquence, and deliver'd

A.D. 1710 deliver'd with a Spirit and Air which abash'd the steady Impudence of the Criminal.

Among other Things he said,

General Stanhope. " If Dr. Sacheverel had preach'd his Sermon " in a Conventicle of disaffected Persons, main- " tain'd by some deluded Women, no Notice " should have been taken of so nonsensical and in- " coherent a Discourse: But that true Son of ---- Calls him an insignificant Tool. " the Church, that insignificant Tool of a Party, " having preach'd this Sermon in a Place where " it might do great Mischief, by creating Jealou- " sies, and reviving old Animosities in the City " of London, the Fountain-head of the Supplies " which the Nation so readily contributed towards " this necessary War, his Offence deserv'd the se- " verest Animadversion. That if his Positions " were true, the Queen was no more than an U- " surper; neither House of Parliament had any " Authority to sit; all their Proceedings were " illegal; and all the Blood and Treasure that " had been spent since the Revolution, were spent " in an ill Cause, which would sully the Glories " of a Reign which exceeded those of Queen E- " lizabeth; for the latter had only the Felicity " to defend the Nation against the Power of " Spain, whereas her Majesty's Arms triumph'd " over the United-Force of France and Spain." He added, " That another Divine, naming Dr. " Atterbury, who then stood behind Sacheverel, " at the Bar, had likewise, some Time before, " preach'd a Latin Sermon at St. Paul's, where- " in he asserted the Doctrine of Passive-Obedi- " ence; but that in that very Sermon he contra- " dicted himself; for he allow'd that there may " be some difficult and extraordinary Cases, where- " in St. Paul could be no longer our Guide, and " then we must consult the wise Politicians, and " the Learned in the Laws. Upon which, Ge- " neral Stanhope quoted Grotius, who, in his fa- " mous Treatise, de Jure Belli & Pacis, men- " tions Cases wherein the People may oppose and " resist Tyrants, and assert their Liberties."

Sacheverel, who appear'd unconcern'd while the other five Managers were speaking, turn'd pale, and was disorder'd, when he found himself treated with Scorn and Contempt by General Stanhope. The Duke of Buckinghamshire mov'd, the Doctor might be heard in his Defence, Article by Article; but upon the Question it was carry'd in the Negative; and Sir Peter King, Lord William Pawlet, and Spencer Cowper, Esq; spoke to the second Article, which ended the Trial for that Day.

On the 1st of March, Mr. Thompson spoke to the third Article, as did also Spencer Compton, Esq; Lord Coningsby, John Dolben, Esq; Sir Thomas Parker, Mr. Secretary Boyle, Mr. Smith, Chancellor of the Exchequer. Sir Thomas Parker spoke long, and with great Force of Reason and Eloquence; and Mr. Dolben happening to say in the Heat of his Discourse, These false Brethren, pointing to the Bar, where stood Dr. Moss, Dr. Smalridge, Dr. Atterbury, and other staunch Doctors, Lord Haversham zealous for the Church. Lord Haversham, the Presbyterian, interrupted Mr. Dolben, and mov'd that he might explain himself, it being a Reflection on the Church of England Clergy: But Mr. Dolben saying, He had us'd the plural Number for the singular, and meant the Prisoner only, the Lords were satisfy'd.

The Trial had now lasted four Days, and the Doctor gone every Day to Westminster in a taudry Glass Chariot, belonging to young Newland, Son of Sir George Newland, a Scrivener in Smithfield.

In the mean time the Cry of the Church's Danger made a dismal Sound in the Ears of the religious Mobs of London and Westminster, who, out of an extraordinary Concern for the afflicted Asserter of her Rights, left their several Crafts and Callings, and crouded the Streets to hail Blessings on the Doctor, and to be blest by him. He had Lodgings in the Temple, that he might be near his Lawyers; and from thence to Westminster-Hall, where he and his Companion shouted as if he had been drawn along in a triumphal Car. There had not been such a rascally Crew seen together since the Days of John Ball the Priest, who was hang'd for Wat Tyler's Rebellion, and might properly enough be term'd Sacheverel's Forerunner. This Rabble was instructed to let the Queen know their pious Sentiments, which others were afterwards to interpret to be those of the whole People of England. The Queen going to the House of Peers in her Chair, some of this Multitude gather'd about it, crying out, God bless your Majesty, God bless the Church; we hope your Majesty is for Dr. Sacheverel. The Mob oblig'd all Persons they met to pull off their Hats to the Doctor, as they huzza'd him to his Tryal; they abus'd those that refus'd to worship their Idol, among whom happen'd to be some Members of both Houses of Parliament. The Evening of the second Day of the Trial was illuminated with Bonfires made of the Pulpits and Pews of demolish'd Meeting-Houses: Were not these a rare Parcel of Protestants! Would not such a Gang of Rioters be a Shame, not only to any Religion, but to any Country? What a Forehead must the seditious Priest, who was at the Head of 'em, have to look sober Men in the Face, after he had set so great a City in a Flame? Can one imagine that he and the Doctors, his Supporters at the Bar, had any the least Concern upon them for the Safety of Religion, and the Souls of Men; and what, without it, was their Concern for the Church, but a solemn Grimace, to disguise their Avarice and Pride? The Mob, as furious as if under Possession, fell upon Mr. Burgess's Meeting-House near Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, broke the Windows, and a Part of the Walls, and gutted the Inside of it, as they threaten'd to do by his Dwelling-House, and would have done by his Person, had he come in their Way. But he took Shelter in a Roman Catholick's House, in the Neighbourhood, who express'd great Dislike at the Outrages of the High-Church Rabble, which, however, was much encreas'd by a Mixture of Popish Mob, which I knew by the Confession of Papists, whose Heads were not so hot as Sacheverel's. They demolish'd also Mr. Earl's Meeting-House in Long-Acre; Mr. Bradbury's in Newstreet; Mr. Taylor's in Leather-Lane; Mr. Wright's in Black-Friars; Mr. Hamilton's in Clerkenwell; and all the while they were about this, the Devil's Drudgery, their Cry was, High-Church for ever! High-Church and Dr. Sacheverel for ever! larding their barbarous Shouts with the most execrable Oaths and Curses. They also batter'd and plunder'd the Houses of several Dissenters, and threaten'd to pull down the Lord Chancellor's, the Earl of Wharton's, the Bishop of Salisbury's, Mr. Dolben's, and others. They talk'd of destroying Mr. Hoadley's Church; which was the more likely, because Sacheverel was known to have the greatest Enmity and Rancour of Mind against that eminent and worthy Divine. They had condemn'd Salter's-Hall, Mr. Showers's Meeting-House, and other Places of Religious Worship in the City, to Destruction, and spar'd not in their Menaces the Bank of England: For

A.D. 1701 Mobs croud about him.

The Mobs tell the Queen to be for the Doctor.

They burn the Meeting-Houses of Protestant-Dissenters.

Mr. Burgess the Minister in Danger of his Life.

The Outrages of Sacheverel's Mob.

Threaten to plunder the Bank.

A.D.1710 amidſt all their ſpiritual Zeal for High-Church and the Doctor, they hanker'd after that Mammon; and had not due Care been taken to guard againſt them, it is probable they would have plunder'd Grocer's-Hall, as they did the Houſes of ſeveral Diſſenters. As ſoon as the Earl of Sunderland had Notice of this Inſurrection, he acquainted the Queen with it, who commanded the Earl to ſend her Horſe and Foot-Guards to quell it. The Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Newcaſtle, and other Noblemen coming to the Secretary's-Office, to conſer with his Lordſhip on this Occaſion; my Lord Sunderland ſent for Capt. Horſey, an Exempt, who then commanded the Guard; to mount immediately, and go and diſperſe the Mob. Capt. Horſey objecting he was the Queen's Body-Guard, and anſwerable for any Accident, he was told, it was her Majeſty's expreſs Command, and both the Earl of Sunderland and the Lord Chancellor repreſenting the Danger of Delay, he acquieſc'd; only ask'd pleaſantly, Whether he was to preach, or to fight the Mob? if the firſt, he deſir'd ſome better Speaker; if the latter, Fighting was his Trade, and he would do his beſt. To this the Earl reply'd, You muſt uſe your Judgment and Diſcretion, and forbear violent Means, except in Caſe of Neceſſity. This Party of the Guard came upon the Rabble as they were rejoicing over a Bonfire, made out of the Untenſils of Mr. Earl's Meeting-Houſe. They fled immediately, only one of their Captains, with a few Followers, cry'd out, High-Church and Dr. Sacheverel, and were ſeiz'd by the Troopers. This Captain of theirs was George Purchaſe, a broken Trooper turn'd Bailiff; another of their Captains was Francis Willis, a Footman; and another, Daniel Damaree, a Waterman, who wore the Queen's Badge. They and Purchaſe were apprehended, ſent to Newgate, try'd for High-Treaſon, and Damaree and Purchaſe were condemn'd to be hang'd, drawn, and quarter'd; but they were ſcreen'd from Execution by Means of Mr. Robert Harley, Mr. Henry St. John, and others of their Kidney.

Horſe-Guards order'd to diſperſe them.

Purchaſe the Bailiff, a Captain of Sacheverel's Mob, ſeiz'd. He and Damaree, the Waterman, try'd and condemn'd.

On the 2d of March, the Guards at St. James's and Whitehall were doubled, and the Militia of Weſtminſter rais'd, which conſiſting moſtly of Fellows of Mob-Rank, very much thin'd Sacheverel's Rabble afterwards; and the Addreſs of the Commons put an End to their Riots for the preſent. The Houſe reſolv'd to addreſs her Majeſty, That ſhe would be graciouſly pleas'd to take effectual Meaſures to ſuppreſs the preſent Tumults, ſet on foot and fomented by Papiſts, Nonjurors, and other Enemies to her Majeſty's Government; and to iſſue her Royal Proclamation, promiſing a Reward to ſuch as ſhould diſcover and ſeize thoſe Incendiaries as had been the Occaſion of the late Tumults and Diſorders. Her Majeſty's Anſwer imported, "That ſhe was extreamly ſenſible of the "great Care and Concern of the Commons for "the publick Peace upon this Occaſion; and as "her Majeſty had a juſt Reſentment at thoſe "tumultuous and violent Proceedings, ſo ſhe "would take immediate Care for ſuppreſſing "them; and would loſe no Time in endeavour-"ing to find out the Authors and Abettors, in "order to bring them to Puniſhment, according "to the Deſire of this Houſe." The Commons were ſo well pleas'd with this Anſwer, that they unanimouſly reſolv'd to preſent an Addreſs to her Majeſty, to return Their moſt hearty Thanks for her moſt gracious Anſwer to their Addreſs; and for her effectual Care in ſuppreſſing thoſe rebellious Tumults, which were ſet on foot and fomented by Papiſts, Nonjurors, and other Enemies to her Majeſty's Title and Government, in defiance of the juſt Proſecution of the Commons againſt Dr. Henry Sacheverel: And they humbly beſought her Majeſty to believe, That as this Proſecution proceeded only from the indiſpenſible Obligation, which her faithful Commons look'd upon themſelves to lie under, not to ſit ſtill, and patiently ſee the Juſtice of the late happy Revolution, and the Glory of their late Royal Deliverer reflected upon; her Majeſty's undoubted Title ſtruck at; her Adminiſtration, by which ſo many Bleſſings were deriv'd upon them, endeavour'd to be render'd odious, and repreſented as deſtructive of the Church and Conſtitution; the preſent Eſtabliſhment, and Proteſtant Religion condemn'd; the Reſolutions of Parliament treated with Contempt; the Governors of the Church, and her Majeſty as Supream, aſpers'd and vilify'd; the Toleration expos'd as wicked, and Sedition inſolently invading the Pulpit; So the Maintenance of her Majeſty's, Right; the Safety of her Perſon; the Quiet of her Government; the Continuance of their Happineſs under her excellent Adminiſtration; the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line; the Support and Honour of the Church of England, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, with that Toleration which was by Act of Parliament allow'd to Proteſtant Diſſenters, ſhould be their conſtant Care and Concern. The Tories had not the Face to oppoſe the Subſtance of this Addreſs; but to humour their Party, it was mov'd in the Houſe, That Republicans ſhould be added to Papiſts and Nonjurors: but as that was to have turn'd a very ſerious Thing into a Jeſt, it paſt in the Negative; Yeas 110, Noes 270. A Proclamation was publiſh'd for ſuppreſſing theſe Tumults, and Sacheverel thought fit at laſt to quit his Triumphal Car, and be carry'd to his Trial in a Chair, only follow'd by a few of the younger Tory Mob.

A.D.1710

The Commons Addreſs againſt Sacheverel's Mob.

Queen's Anſwer.

On the 2d of March, the Doctor's Counſellors, Sir Simon Harcourt, Mr. Conſtantine Phipps, Mr. Dodd, Mr. Duncan Dee, and Dr. Henchman, a Civilian, began his Defence, which they continu'd till the 7th; and then the Doctor having obtain'd Leave, deliver'd the Speech which his Brother Doctors, Atterbury, Smalridge, Freind, and Moſs, made for him, with the Help of Harcourt and Phipps.

The Doctor's Counſellors.

'Tis too long, and in too many Hands to bear a Repetition: I ſhall content myſelf with a few Remarks, ſome of which I borrow from Mr. Maynwaring's Four Letters to a Friend in North-Britain. "But now comes the great Scope of "the Doctor's Perſormance, his own Harangue at "the Bar of the Houſe of Lords; and here, with-"out entring into a particular Examination of "the whole Piece, I cannot help profeſſing, with "ſome Sorrow, that I think he was too hard-"ly dealt with by thoſe that made it for him, "when they oblig'd him to aver, in the Face of "God, and the Queen, That he had neither ſug-"geſted, nor did in his Conſcience believe that "the Church is in the leaſt Peril from her Maje-"ſty's Adminiſtration. If thoſe Men, he means "Atterbury, Smalridge, Freind, Moſs, &c. had "been endu'd with the leaſt Mercy, Conſcience, "or Humanity, they would never have put into "his Mouth ſuch a choaking Provocation as this; "and I cannot help taking his Part againſt them "upon this Occaſion, as abandon'd a Prieſt as "he is. When this holy Man had, in his Ser-"mon at St. Paul's, plainly ſhewn," How obvious it were to draw a Parallel between the ſad Circumſtances of the Church of England formerly, and of the Church of England at preſent, whoſe Walls

The Speech made for him by other Doctors.

A.D. 1710

Walls and Enclosures are pull'd down, and this pure Spouse of Christ prostituted to more Adulterers than the Scarlet Whore in the Revelations.

Mr. Maynwaring's Remarks on Sacheverel's Speech.

" What cou'd enter into the Heads of those Pen-
" men of the Speech, to make the poor Wretch
" swear, that he had never suggested the Church
" was in Danger? With what Indignation must
" every one hear such solemn Appeals made to " Heaven, for the Truth of a Fact which the " whole Assembly knew to be directly contrary?
" What Excuse shall we find out for this most
" hardned Sinner? Will it acquit him to say, that " he did not compose his Speech, and only per-
" form'd his Part like an Actor: indeed, it may " be said to resemble a Play in one Respect, be" cause it was a Farce very well wrought, and
" had a wonderful Effect on the weak Part of his
" Audience; the rest were amaz'd, continues
" Mr. Maynwaring, they trembled at his Oaths,
" when he call'd the Searcher of Hearts to witness,
" in the most solemn and religious Manner, as he
" expected to be acquitted before God and his Holy
" Angels, at that dreadful Tribunal, before which,
" not only he, but even their Lordships must appear,
" that he was far from designing to Defame her
" Majesty's Administration. Good God! And
" is this the Man for whom the People have made
" an Insurrection? Is this the Man for whom their " Zeal has flam'd out in all Manner of Appear" ance? Is this the Man whose Effigies is sold
" about, curiously done in Metzo tinto; whose
" Health is drank before the Queen's, and next
" in the same Glass with that of the Church?
" What can he have to do with any Church, who " is a Shame to Christianity itself? And is this
" the Man for whom Tears were shed, when,
" by his insolent Behaviour, he had made that
" Compassion ridiculous which would otherwise
" have been due to one in his Circumstances?
" How offensive was his Assurance; how nause-
" ous his Presumption; and how Atheistical was
" his Purpose, in wickedly perverting diverse
" Texts of Scripture, instead of preaching the " Truths. He said, He had no Intention to as-
" perse the Memory of his late Majesty; and he has " been often heard to say, he ought to be De wit-
" ted, of which I have myself seen an Affidavit,
" under the Hand of Mr. Eberal." As to the Protestant Succession, he is known to have frequent-ly revil'd the late King, for his curs'd Legacy, which was his ordinary Phrase for the House of Hanover. After he had been railing at, and damn-ing the Dissenters in most of his Sermons, he pro-fesses in his Speech, he was no ways offended with the Toleration. After all this, he had the astonish-ing Impudence, to use Mr. Maynwaring's own Words, to call himself an Ambassador of Christ; to say in one Place of his Speech, he had no Design in View but to discharge his Duty to God; and to express himself thus in another: I think I may therefore with Confidence use the Words of the greatest Apostle to his Accusers, Having obtain'd Help from God, &c. What a prophane, blasphe-mous Wretch is this Pseudo-Martyr? What is it that the People are doing, who run after him? And what have they to answer for, who set them at Work? Sure never poor Soul was in so deplorable a Condi-tion, nor had so much Occasion for the Prayers of the whole Church. And when he came to print this Speech, and dedicate it to the House of Lords, he there us'd an Asseveration that was almost as frightful as the rest, and that no Body sure could read without Horror; for he there declares, That the Words of his Speech are, in every Respect, intirely agreeable to his Thoughts and Principles, as he hopes to find Mercy at the Hands of the Great God. Lord have Mercy upon him!

A.D. 1710

If we look back into the Laudaian Times, we shall find the High-Church Clergy to be just such Men as Sacheverel: The Womach's, the Perin-chefs's, the Pelling's, in King Charles II's Reign, were the same. The Atterbury's, the Trapp's, the Binck's, the Hill's, answer Mr. Maynwaring's Character of Sacheverel; and if that odious Party should be in Being in the next Age, Posterity will find them as turbulent, as troublesome, as wicked, and as dangerous, as was this Incendiary, calling himself an Ambassador of Christ, and will not take it ill that they are warn'd to be on their guard against them.

Mess. Harley and St. John at the Bottom of Sacheverel's Sedition.

One may easily imagine that those two old Puritan Offsprings, Mess. Harley and St. John, were at the Bottom of this Sedition, and set all their Engines at Work to increase the Clamour and the Confusion; the Use of which was, to dispose the Queen to remove those Ministers who had serv'd her hitherto with so much Wisdom and Success, so much to her own, and her Peoples Safety and Glory. The Emissaries of France fail'd not to give quick and constant Intelligence of the Cool-ness which appear'd in the Queen towards her most able and faithful Counsellors, and the Ground their Friends in England were getting by several Infusions into the Queen, of Designs against her and the Church; which made strong Impressions on the Mind of a Princess, who was as much sub-ject to Fear as others of her Sex: However, the Lord-Treasurer Godolphin, and the Lord Sun-derland, not without some Difficulty, prevail'd with her to make Sir Thomas Parker Lord Chief-Justice of the Queen's-Bench, in the room of Sir John Holt, who died during Sacheverel's Try-al, as did Sir Thomas Lyttleton, Treasurer of the Navy, whose Place was well supply'd by Robert Walpole, Esq; Secretary at War, which Office be-ing given to Mr. Adam Cardonnel, the Duke of Marlborough's Secretary, gave Offence to many, who thought too much Honour was done him in it. But another Incident at this time discover'd, probably sooner than was intended, that the Queen had not only taken Mrs. Abigail Hill, but Mr. Robert Harley into her Cabinet-Council, which very justly alarm'd all the Well-affected in Great-Britain, who expected nothing from it, but the Reverse of every Thing that had been done for the Security of our Religion, Liberty, and the Protestant Succession. The Earl of Essex dying January 10, Earl Rivers was made Constable of the Tower in his Stead, and his Regiment of Dra-goons was intended to be given to Col. Hill, Mrs. Abigail's Brother, without consulting the Duke of Marlborough, whose Intention was to give it to Col. Mered th; the Queen insisting upon Col. Hill's having it, with a Firmness the Duke and Dutchess of Marlborough had not known in her before; they found Mrs. Masham, for so we must now call Mrs. Hill, had fix'd herself irre-moveably in her Majesty's Favour and Affection. The Dutchess expresst her Resentment at the Ri-valship of a Domestick of hers in the Queen's Con-fidence; and abstaining from the Court, gave Mrs. Masham the better Opportunity to put Mr. Harley's Projects in Execution: It was observ'd, that her Majesty seem'd to be in little Pain about the Dutchess's Conduct, and it was thought necessary at so critical a Juncture, when every thing was at Stake, to get an Address of the Parliament for the Removal of Mrs. Masham from the Queen's Presence and Service. The Earl of Sunderland felt the Pulse of some Members of the House of Com-mons,

Sir Tho. Parker made Chief Justice.

Robert Walpole, Esq; Treasurer of the Navy.

The Queen discovers her Inclinations to favour the Harleians.

A.D.1710 mons, with respect to such an Address, which did not beat high enough for such an Attempt, and Col. Hill, in the mean time, humbly petitioning her Majesty that his having the Regiment might not give any Uneasiness to the General, and the Ministry, but that it might be dispos'd of as they desir'd, this Matter was piec'd together for the present; but the Queen after this took no great Care to save Appearances, and if she kept a little fair with the Ministry, every one saw 'twas a Constraint she put upon herself, 'till Things were riper for a Change.

One cannot express the Pleasure these Misunderstandings between the Queen and her best Counsellors gave the Court of France, who knew very well that the Hearts of the Tories had been always French, when the Whigs were too hard for both of them at Home and Abroad; and as the Treaty of Gertruydenberg was set on Foot about this Time, 'tis no Wonder the French Ministers were so stiff in their Negotiations for a Peace, when they made sure of having a quick End put to the War, as soon as ever those that had now the Management of it were out of Employ, which they were assur'd would be the Effect of the Feuds and Tumults, that had thrown the whole Kingdom of Great-Britain into Disorder.

The Managers who reply'd to Dr. Sacheverel's Defence, were Sir Joseph Jekyl, Mr. Sollicitor-General Eyre, Mr. Lechmere, Sir Peter King, Mr. Cowper, Mr. Thompson, Sir Thomas Parker, who spoke so fully to the Matter, that General Stanhope, who was also ready to reply, did not think it necessary to add any thing to it. Sir Thomas Parker, in particular, made a remarkable Speech, which for its Spirit, as well as Truth, was very much applauded, and the Merit of his Service that Day was too much forgotten some Years after: He prov'd, that Dr. Sacheverel had wrested several Texts of Scripture, and misquoted others, precious Soul! and was in some measure guilty of Perjury, since in his Speech he protested, with the most solemn Imprecations and Appeals, to the Searcher of Hearts, that he had no Intention to asperse the Memory of the late King, to traduce the happy Revolution, &c. which was as plain as Noon-day, both from the Tenour and express Words of his Sermon.

Sir Tho. Parker's Speech against Sacheverel.

On the 16th of March, the Queen being incog. in the House of Lords, a Motion was made to declare, That the Commons had made good the First Article against Dr. Sacheverel; and a Debate arising upon it, the Earl of Wharton spoke thus;

Earl of Wharton's Speech.

" There is a different Strain between the Doctor's Sermon and his Speech; the Speech is a " full Confutation and Condemnation of the Sermon: All he has advanced about Non-Resistance " and Unlimited Obedience, is ridiculous and false, " as is also his Distinguishing in the Affair of the " Revolution, in which there was notorious Resistance in the Association begun at Exeter, and " in the Seizing of York and Oxford Gates, and " breaking down the Bridge. The Doctrine of " Passive-Obedience, as preached by the Doctor, is " not reconcileable to the Practice of Churchmen. " If the Revolution was not lawful, many in that " House, and vast Numbers without, were guilty " of Blood, Murder, Rapine, and Injustice; and " the Queen herself is no lawful Queen, since the " best Title she has to the Crown is her Parliamentary Title, founded on the Revolution."

The Lord Haversham, in a very long Harangue said little in Defence of the Doctor; tho' he said much against the Prosecution, and thought he had been very smart on the Earl of Wharton, in asserting that King James II. had no rightful Heir but Queen Anne. A.D.1710

The Lord Ferrars excus'd Dr. Sacheverel, by alledging, That the Revolution was not mention'd in his Sermon. The Earl of Scarborough said, the Revolution was a nice Point, and above the Law. The Lord Haversham, having said in his Speech, That some Bishops voted contrary to their Doctrine: Dr. Talbot, Bishop of Oxford, explain'd their Doctrine as it related to Sacheverel's Case, and said, among other Things, In all Governments there is an absolute Power lodged somewhere; with us 'tis in the Legislature: According to Sir Tho. Smith, in his Repub. Angl. the Parliament gives Forms for the Succession of the Crown. The Executive Power with us is lodged in the Prince, and those commissioned by him, acting according to their Commissions, and within these Laws, with the Execution whereof he and they are vested, are irresistible. The Person of the Prince is always inviolable; so that nothing less than a total Subversion of the Constitution, can justify any forceable Resistance of his Subjects. But, in a Legal Monarchy, where the Laws, erected by the common Consent of Prince and People, are the Measures both of his Government and their Obedience, that Limit his Power, as well as secure their Rights and Properties, the Prince shall change this Form of Government into an absolute Tyranny, set aside those Laws, and when all Applications and Attempts of any kind prove unsuccessful, if then the Nobles and Commons join together, in Defence of their ancient Constitution, Government and Rights, I cannot call them Rebels: which being so plain an Argument, that it will admit of no Answer, shall be all that we shall make use of. Dr. Hooper, Bishop of Bath and Wells, allow'd of what the Bishop of Oxford advanc'd about the Necessity and Legality of Resistance, in some extraordinary Cases, but was of Opinion, this ought to be kept from the Knowledge of the People, who are naturally too apt to resist. Self-preservation is a natural Principle, and if People cannot preserve themselves without Resistance, it is natural for them to resist; but if they are not wrong'd, nor hurted, they naturally incline to be quiet and easy: People, says the Bishop, should be kept from the Knowledge of their Right. Of what Use is that Right to them if they know it not? Is a Man the Richer for having a Treasure hid in his House, if he knows not what it is, nor where it is? In truth, Bishop Hooper, and other Bishops, before the Revolution, did take all possible Care to keep People in Ignorance, with respect to the Duty they ow'd to their Country. The Bishop asserts very boldly, The Revolution is not to be boasted of; the Consequence of it, which advanced him in the Church, seems, by what he said now, not to be a Subject of Boasting; we ought to throw the Mantle over it. He is telling the Lords, that they must do so, at the same time that their Lordships see Resistance asserted by the Commons, and placed its full Light and Lustre. But this Bishop Hooper was one of the Divines who teaz'd the Duke of Monmouth, when he had but a Minute or two to live, to assert Passive-Obedience and Non-Resistance, as he himself did, tho' to no Purpose, neither then nor now. The Duke of Argyle said, among other Things, being provoked to it by Bishop Hooper's assuming so decisive a Tone, The Clergy in all Ages have deliver'd up the Rights and Liberties of the People, and preached up the King's Power, in order to govern him; and therefore they ought not to be suffer'd to meddle with Politicks. The Earl of Anglesey re-

Bp. Talbot vindicates the Revolution.

Bp Hooper for keeping People from the Knowledge of their Rights.

Answer'd by the D. of Argyle.

A.D. 1710 ply'd, Political Sermons are allow'd on the 30th of January. Was there any ſtanding cut againſt ſuch Reaſoning, or againſt this by the Duke of Leeds? I own I had a great Share in the late Revolution, but I never thought that Things would have gone ſo far. Did he never think that the Prince and Princeſs of Orange would be declared King and Queen, when himſelf was one of the firſt Men that moved for it? The Biſhop of Saliſbury prov'd the Juſtice of the Revolution, by Reaſon, Law, and the Practice of all wiſe States, Jews and Gentiles. The Lords Somers, Halifax, and Mohun, ſpoke alſo in Vindication of the Revolution. The Archbiſhop of York, the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, the Earls of Nottingham and Rocheſter, the Lord Guernſey, the Lord North and Grey, and the Marquis of Caermarthen declar'd, they never read ſuch a Piece of Nonſenſe as Dr. Sacheverel's Sermon, but did not think him guilty of a Miſdemeanour. The Queſtion being put, Whether the Commons had made good their firſt Article of Impeachment againſt Henry Sacheverel, D. D. it was carry'd in the Affirmative.

Earl of Angleſey, and Duke of Leeds Speeches.

Lords declare the Doctor's Sermon to be full of Nonſenſe and Madneſs.

On the 17th of March, the Lords took the ſecond Article of the Impeachment into Conſideration, and the Biſhop of Lincoln, now his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, made an excellent Speech, wherein he gave an Account of the Deſign of a Comprehenſion, ſet on Foot towards the End of King James II's Reign, by the late Dr. Sancroft, Archbiſhop of Canterbury; who was ſo far from thinking, that no Time would ever be proper to eaſe the Diſſenters of their Burdens, that he thought it was then a proper Time to review and enlarge our Liturgy, by correcting of ſome Things, and adding of others, and by leaving ſome few indifferent Ceremonies at the Miniſters Liberty, in order to reconcile Diſſenters to the Church. His Grace ſaid in that Speech, His Deſign was promoted by the moſt eminent Divines of the Church, as Dr. Patrick, Biſhop of Ely; Dr. Sharp, Archbiſhop of York; Dr. Compton, Biſhop of London, &c. The Biſhop of Norwich enforc'd what the Biſhop of Lincoln had ſaid about Toleration, concluding, that ſomewhat ſhould be done to put a Stop to ſuch Preaching, as, if not timely corrected, may kindle ſuch Animoſities among us, as may truly endanger our Church and State. No Peer offering to ſpeak in Favour of Dr. Sacheverel, the ſecond Article was carry'd in the Affirmative, and the third was but little debated. Lord Halifax made a ſhort Speech, and was anſwer'd by Lord Ferrers, and the Earl of Nottingham. The fourth Article occaſion'd a longer Debate, which was begun by the Earl of Wharton, in Praiſe of the preſent excellent Adminiſtration, ſetting forth the great Things that had been done by them at Home and Abroad, and aggravated the Criminal's Guilt, in reviling ſuch able and faithful Miniſters. The Biſhop of Saliſbury ſeconded him, and ſpoke with Vehemence againſt Sacheverel, for his Reflections, particularly on a Noble Peer, whom he mark'd out by the ugly and ſcurrilous Epithet of Volpone; which was very true, yet ſome of the younger Members were pleas'd to be merry upon it, and to cry out, Name him, Name him; but the Lord Chancellor ſaid, No Peer was oblig'd to ſay any more than he thought fit. The Lord Ferrers ſpeaking again in Favour of the Doctor, was anſwer'd by the Lord Ilay; as was Duke Hamilton by the Lord Mohun. At the Cloſe of the Debate upon this Article, the Earl of Wharton ſaid, That ſince the Houſe had reſolv'd, that the Commons had made good their Four Articles of Impeachment againſt Dr. Sacheverel, the Lords ought, by a neceſſary Conſequence, to reſolve and declare, That the ſaid Dr. Sacheverel was guilty of the Crimes and Miſdemeanours charg'd upon him. The Earl of Rocheſter made a Motion, that the Judges ſhould be adviſ'd with, but no Body ſeconded him. The Lord Guernſey mov'd, that the firſt Part of the Earl of Wharton's Queſtion, ſhould be left out: Upon which the Earl ſaid, I wonder at the Lord Guernſey making this Motion, after the Houſe have come to a Reſolution, that the Commons have made good their Articles; and the Queſtion does not preclude any Peer from his Right of giving his Judgment, for every Lord was at Liberty to Proteſt, and give his Diſſent, if he would not be convinc'd by the Majority of the Houſe; and the Lords being in the Nature of a Jury, ought to deliver their Opinion Seriatim. The Lord Guernſey reply'd, "That the "Lords were not as a Jury; for every Lord was "both a Judge and a Jury: that ſome Peers "might think Dr. Sacheverel guilty of one Part, "and innocent of the other; and yet, if they "were to give their Judgment, as this Queſtion "was ſtated, how could they ſay he was guilty?" How could they ſay he was not guilty, when the Preamble ſets forth, that the Commons had made good their Impeachment? The Lord North and Grey mov'd, that the Words, High Crimes and Miſdemeanours, be left out. The Earl of Wharton ſaid, That what was offer'd was unfair; for the Commons having impeach'd Dr. Sacheverel of High Crimes and Miſdemeanours, and the Lords agree'd and reſolv'd, that the Commons had made good their Impeachment, it neceſſarily follow'd, that he was guilty of the ſaid Crimes and Miſdemeanours. When afterwards a Debate aroſe, Whether the Peers ſhould give their Votes in this Caſe, Content, or Not Content; or, Guilty, or Not Guilty; the Earl of Wharton propos'd the latter, and it was carry'd. After which the Queſtion was put to each Lord ſeverally, beginning at the junior Baron, and 69 declar'd Doctor Sacheverel GUILTY, and 52 NOT GUILTY: Accordingly, Sentence paſt upon him, That Henry Sacheverel, Doctor in Divinity, ſhall be, and is hereby enjoin'd, not to Preach during the Term of three Years, next enſuing: That Dr. Henry Sacheverel's two printed Sermons, referr'd to by the Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons, ſhall be burnt before the Royal Exchange, in London, between the Hours of Twelve and One, on Monday the 27th of this Inſt. March, by the Hands of the common Hangman, in the Preſence of the Lord-Mayor of the City of London, and the two Sheriffs of London and Middleſex.

A.D. 1710

Duke Hamilton and Lord Mohun.

His Grace the preſent Archbiſhop of Canterbury's Speech about the Comprehenſion.

Biſhop of Norwich againſt Sacheverel.

Biſhop of Saliſbury mentions the Abuſe of the Lord Treaſurer in Sacheverel's Sermon.

Dr. Sacheverel convicted.

Sentence paſt upon him.

A LIST

A.D.1710

A LIST of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, who voted For and Againſt the Impeachment of Dr. Sacheverel.

For the IMPEACHMENT.

Lords and Commons for the Impeachment.

LORD Chancellor.
Lord Treaſurer.
Lord Preſident.
Lord Privy Seal.
Lord Steward of the Houſhold.
Duke of Cleveland.
Duke of Richmond.
Duke of Grafton.
Duke of St. Albans.
Duke of Bolton.
Duke of Schomberg.
Duke of Bedford.
Duke of Montroſs.
Duke of Roxburgh.
Duke of Dover.
Marquis of Kent.
Marquis of Dorcheſter.
Earl of Derby.
Earl of Lincoln.
Earl of Dorſet.
Earl of Bridgwater.
Earl of Leiceſter.
Earl of Weſtmoreland.
Earl of Manchester.
Earl Rivers.
Earl of Stamford.
Earl of Winchelſea.
Earl of Sunderland.
Earl of Carliſle.
Earl of Radnor.
Earl of Berkeley.
Earl of Holderneſs.
Earl of Portland.
Earl of Warrington.
Earl of Bradford.
Earl of Orford.
Earl of Greenwich.
Earl of Grantham.
Earl of Wharton.
Earl of Cholmondeley.
Earl of Crawford.
Earl of Loudon.
Earl of Leven.
Earl of Orkney.
Earl of Seafield.
Earl of Roſeberry.
Earl of Glaſgow.
Earl of Ilay.
Biſhop of Sarum.
Biſhop of Ely.
Biſhop of Peterborough.
Biſhop of Oxford.
Biſhop of Lincoln.
Biſhop of Norwich.
Biſhop of St. Aſaph.
Lord De la War.
Lord Fitzwalter.
Lord Paget.
Lord Hunſdon.
Lord Mohun.
Lord Biron.
Lord Colepepper.
Lord Rockingham.
Lord Cornwallis.
Lord Oſſulſton.
Lord Herbert.
Lord Halifax.
Lord Harvey.
Lord Pelham.

BEDFORDSHIRE.

Lord Edward Ruſſel.
Sir William Goſtwick.
William Farrer.
William Hillenſden.

BERKS.

Richard Nevil.
Lord Fitzharding.
Richard Topham.
Owen Buckingham.
Grey Nevil.
William Hucks.

BUCKS.

Richard Hampden.
Sir Richard Temple.
Alexander Denton.
Charles Godfrey.
Fleetwood Dormer.
Sir John Wittewronge.
Simon Mayne, Eſq;
Harry-Grey Nevill.
Sir Roger Hill.
James Chaſe.

CAMBRIDGSHIRE.

Ruſhout Cullen.

CHESHIRE.

Hon. Langham Booth.
John-Crew Offley.

CORNWALL.

John Dolben.
Francis Roberts.
Robert Furneſe.
Ruſſel Roberts.
John Evelyn.
Sidney Godolphin.
James Crags.
Thomas Scawen.
Anthony Nicoll.
Francis Foot.
Samuel Travers.
Henry Vincent, jun.
Hugh Forteſcue.
Sir William Hodges.

CUMBERLAND.

Gilfrid Lawſon.
Sir James Montagu.
James Stanhope.
Hon. Albemarle Bertie.

DERBYSHIRE.

Thomas Coke.
Sir Thomas Parker.

DEVONSHIRE.

John Harris.
Sir George Byng.
John Dibble.
George Treby.
Sir Walter Yonge.
Sir John Cope, jun.
Roger Tuckfield.
Robert Ball.
Sir Peter King.
Spencer Cowper.
Thomas Bere.

DORSETSHIRE.

Thomas Ridge.
Awnſham Churchill.
Thomas Freke.
John Burridge.
Edward Clavel.
Hon. Maurice Aſhley.
Anthony Henley.
William Coventry.
Sir John Cropley.
General Erle.

DURHAM.

Hon. William Vane.
Thomas Conyers.
James Nicholſon.

ESSEX.

Thomas Middleton.
Sir Iſaac Rebow.
Sir Thomas Webſter.
Thomas Richmond.
Kendrick Ediſbury.
Thomas Frankland.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

Mat. Ducie Morton.
Sir John Guiſe.
Francis Windham.
Henry Ireton.

HEREFORDSHIRE.

Hon. James Brydges.
Lord Coningſby.
Serjeant Birch.

HERTFORDSHIRE.

Jeſkan Lomax.
Sir Thomas Clarke.
William Monſon.

HUNTINGDONSHIRE.

John Pocklington.
Edward Wortley, alias Montagu.
Francis Page.

KENT.

Sir Thomas Palmer.
David Polhill.
Hon. Henry Watſon.
Thomas D'Aeth, jun.
Sir Stafford Fairborn.
Sir John Leake.
Sir Thomas Colepepper.
Sir Robert Marſham.
Sir John Jennings.
Henry Withers.

LANCASHIRE.

Arthur Maynwaring.
Sir Roger Bradſhaigh.
Henry Bradſhaigh.
Sir Thomas Johnſon.
Richard Norris.

LEICESTERSHIRE.

Sir Gilbert Pickering.

LINCOLNSHIRE.

George Whichcot.
Hon. Peregrine Bertie.
William Coteſworth.
Sir William Ellis.

MIDDLESEX.

Sir John Auſtin.
Scorie Barker.
Rt. Hon. Hen. Boyle.
Sir William Aſhurſt.
Sir Gilbert Heathcote.

MONMOUTHSHIRE.

John Morgan, of Tredegar.

NORFOLK.

Sir John Holland.
Aſh Windham.
Waller Bacon.
John Chambers.

Sir Charles Turner.
Robert Walpole.
Robert Baylis.
Thomas de Grey.
Hon. William Fielding.
Horatio Walpole.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

Hon. Sidney Wortley, alias Montagu.
Hon. Geo. Montagu.
Hon. Charles Egerton.
Hon. Wm. Egerton.

NORTHUMBERLAND.

William Carr.
Sir Henry Liddel.
Sir Richard Sandford.
Sir John Bennet.
Jonathan Hutchinson.

NOTINGHAMSHIRE.

John Thornhaigh.
John Plumtree.
Roby Sherwin.
Thomas White.
Hon. Richard Sutton.

OXON.

Rt. Hon. Lord Rialton.
Sir Thomas Wheate.

RUTLANDSHIRE.

Philip Sherrard.

SALOP.

Henry Lord Newport.
Sir Robert Corbet.
Sir Edward Leighton.
—— Jones.
Sir Humphery Briggs.
Sir William Forrester.
Thomas Weld.
Richard Harnage.
Charles Mason.

SOMERSETSHIRE.

Robert Yate.
Sir William Daines.
William Blaithwaite.
William Coward.
George Dodington.
George Balch.
Thomas Smith.

SOUTHAMPON.

Charles, Marquis of Winchester.
Lord William Pawlet.
Thomas Jervoise.
Geo. Rodney Brydges.
Adam Cardonnel.
Sir Charles Wager.
Anthony Morgan.
Hon. Norton Pawlet.
Sir TristramDillington.
Sir John Hawes.
Sir Edward Laurence.
James Worsley.
Henry Worsley.
Paul Burrard.
Richard Chandler.
Richard Woolaston.
Rt. Hon. John Smith.
William Guidott.

STAFFORDSHIRE.

Walter Chetwynd.
Crew Offley.
John Lawton.
Richard Swinsen.

SUFFOLK.

William Churchill.
Sir Richard Allen.
Daniel Harvey.
William Thompson.
Sir Philip Skippon.
Sir Harvey Elwys.
Hon. Spencer Compton.
Sir Joseph Jekyl.

SURRY.

Sir William Scawen.
Sir Charles Cox.
John Cholmley.
Thomas Onslow.
George Evelyn.
James Cocks.
Denzil Onslow.
Nicholas Carew.

SUSSEX.

Sir Henry Peachy.
Peter Gott.
Thomas Carr.
JohnWicker.
Gen. Meredith.
Samuel Gott.
Thomas Pelham.
John Page.
Richard Lloyd.
William Hale.
Sr Cleave Moor.
Henry Goring.
Hon. Richard Lumley
Lord Lumley.
Lord Shannon.

WARWICKSHIRE.

Sir Orlando Bridgman.
Edward Hopkins.

WESTMORELAND.

Daniel Wilson.
Nicholas Lechmere.

WILTSHIRE.

Robert Eyre.
Sir Lambert Blackwell.
Charles Mompesson.
John Eyre.
Reynolds Calthorpe.
Edward Ash.
William Ash, jun.
Edward Baynton.
George Ducket.
Josiah Diston.
Paul Methuen.
James Montagu.
Thomas Farrington.
Edmund Dunch.
James Vernon.
Hon. Robert Cecil.
Sir Edward Ernle.

WORCESTERSHIRE.

Sir Thomas-Cooke Windford.
Thomas Wylde.
Sir Edward Goodere.
John Rudge.

YORKSHIRE.

Sir William Strickland.
Sir William Robinson.
Sir Will. St Quintin.
William Maister,
Christopher Stockdale.
William Thompson.
Hon. Henry Mordaunt.
William Pulteney,
Hugh Cholmondely.
Craven Peyton.
William Palines.
William Strickland.
Leonard Smelt.
William Jessop.
Sir Charles Hotham.
Sir William Hustler.
Roger Gale.
William Lowther.
Sir John Bland.

Barons of the Cinque-Ports.

John Pulteney.
Matthew Aylmer.
Philip Papillon.
Sr Henry Furnese.
Josiah Burchet.
Hon. John Fane.
Walter Whitfield.
John Brewer.
Philip Guybois.
Thomas Bristow.
Sir Francis Dashwood.
William Lowndes.
George Naylor.

WALES.

—— Jefferys.
Griffith Rice.
Richard Vaughan.
Sir John Awbrey.
Wiriot Owen.
Sir Arthur Owen.

SCOTLAND.

Sir Alex. Cummins.
Hon. John Gordon.
Hon. Francis Montgomery.
Hon. James Campbell.
Hon. James Campbell, jun. of Ardkinglass.
Alexander Abercrombe.
George Bailie.
John Montgomery.
Hon. William Dalrymple.
John Campbel.
William Green.
Sir Patrick Johnston.
Col. Patrick Ogilvie.
John Sinclair.
John Cockburn, of Ormistown.
Sir David Dalrymple.
Alexander Grant.
Alexander Duff.
Sir David Ramsay.
Lieut. Colonel John Stewart.
Lord Arch. Hamilton.
Hon. Colonel George Douglass.
Hugh Ross.
Sir Alex. Douglass.
William Morrison.
Robert Englass.
Sir Gilbert Elliot.
John Pringle.
Henry Cunningham.
Col. John Erskin.
Sir William Gordon.
Hon. John Stewart.
William Cockran.

Againſt the IMPEACHMENT.

Lords and Commons againſt the Impeachment.

Archbiſhop of York.
Duke of Ormond.
Duke of Beaufort.
Duke of Northumberland.
Duke of Shrewſbury.
Duke of Leeds.
Duke of Buckinghamſhire.
Duke of Hamilton.
Earl of Pembroke.
Earl of Northampton.
Earl of Denbigh.
Earl of Berkſhire.
Earl of Thanet.
Earl of Scarſdale.
Earl of Angleſey.
Earl of Suſſex.
Earl of Yarmouth.
Earl of Nottingham.
Earl of Rocheſter.
Earl of Abingdon.
Earl of Plymouth.
Earl of Scarborough.
Earl of Jerſey.
Earl Poulet.
Earl of Mar.
Earl of Wemys.
Earl of Northeſk.
Viſc. Say and Sele.
Viſc. Weymouth.
Biſhop of London.
Biſhop of Durham.
Biſhop of Rocheſter.
Bp. of Bath and Wells.
Biſhop of Cheſter.
Lord Ferrers.
Lord Willoughby of Broke.
Lord North and Grey.
Lord Howard of Eſcriek.
Lord Chandos.
Lord Leigh.
Lord Lexington.
Lord Berkley.
Lord Craven.
Lord Oſborn.
Lord Dartmouth.
Lord Stawel.
Lord Guildford.
Lord Butler.
Lord Lempſter.
Lord Haverſham.
Lord Guernſey.
Lord Conway.

BERKS.

Sir John Stonehouſe.
Anthony Blagrave.
Thomas Rendas.

BUCKS.

Francis Duncombe.
Sir Samuel Garrard.
Sir James Etheridge.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

John Bromley.
Hon. Arthur Anneſley.
Hon. Dixie Windſor.
John-Hind Cotton.
Samuel Shepherd.

CHESHIRE.

Sir Henry Bunbury.
Peter Shakerley.

CORNWAL.

James Fuller.
Lord Byde.
William Cary.
John Trevanion.
Sir Cholmley Deering.
Alexander Pendarves.
John Manley.
John Conyers.
Sir Henry Seymour.
Harry Trelauney.
Thomas Hern.
John Praed.
John Borlace.
George Granville.
Edward Eliot.
Francis Scobel.
Sir Nicholas Morrice.
Sir William Pole.

DERBYSHIRE.

John Curzon.

DEVONSHIRE.

Sir William Courtney.
Robert Rolle.
Nicholas Wood.
Sir Edward Seymour.
George Courtney.
Richard Ackland.
Nicholas Hooper.
Sir William Drake.
Henry Manaton.
Nathaniel Herne.
Frederick Herne.
Richard Mervin.

DORSETSHIRE.

Thomas Strangeways.
Thomas Chaffin.
William Lewen.
Tho. Strangeways, jun.
Edward Nicholas.
George Pitt.
John Bankes.
Richard Fownes.

DURHAM.

Sir Robert Eden.

ESSEX.

Sir Richard Child.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

Thomas Webb.
Allen Bathurſt.
Charles Cox.

HEREFORDSHIRE.

Lord Scudamore.
John Price.
Thomas Foley.
Edward Harley.
Henry Gorges.

HERTFORDSHIRE.

Ralph Freeman, jun.
Thomas Halſey.
John Gape.

HUNTINGDONSHIRE.

John Probey.

LANCASHIRE.

Richard Shuttleworth.
Henry Fleetwood.
Robert Heyſham.
William Heyſham.
John Ward.
Edward Harris.
Chriſtopher Parker.

LEICESTERSHIRE.

Jeffery Palmer.
Sir George Beaumont.
James Winſtanley.

LINCOLNSHIRE.

Lord Willoughby of Ereſby.
Sir Thomas Meers.
Thomas Liſter.
Thomas Wynn.
Arthur Moor.
Hon. Charles Cecil.
Hon. Charles Bertie.

MIDDLESEX.

Sir William Withers.
John Ward.

MONMOUTHSHIRE.

Lord Windſor.
Clayton Milborn.

NORFOLK.

Richard Ferrier.
Horatio Walpole.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

Sir Juſtinian Iſham.
Thomas Cartwright.
Sir Gilbert Dolben.
Francis Arundel, jun.
Hon. Tho. Wentworth.

NORTHUMBERLAND

Thomas Forſter, jun.

NOTTINGHAMSHIRE

William Leving.

OXON.

Sir Robert Jenkinſon.
Sir Will. Whitlocke.
William Bromley.
Sir John Walter.
Thomas Rouney.
Hon. Charles North.

RUTLANDSHIRE.

Richard Halford.

SOMERSETSHIRE.

Henry Portman.
John Prowſe.
Samuel Trotman.
Edward Colſton, jun.
Sir Francis Warr.
Sir John Trevelyan.
Sir Jacob Banks.

SOUTHAMPTON.

Sir Simeon Stewart.
Henry Holmes.
Leonard Bilſon.
William Stephens.
Francis Gwyn.
William Etricke.

STAFFORDSHIRE.

Hon. Henry Paget.
John Wrotteſly.
John Cotes.
Thomas Foley.
Joſeph Girdler.

SUFFOLK.

Sir Thomas Hanmer.
Sir Robert Davers.
Sir William Barker.
Clement Currance.
Sir Henry Johnſon.
William Johnſon.
Joſeph Weld.

SURRY.

Sir John Parſons.
Morgan Randyl.
Sir George Newland.
Paul Docminique.
Sir Theophilus Ogelthorpe.

SUSSEX.

Sir Rich. Farrington.
Charles Eversfield.

A.D. 1710 Lawrence Alcock.
Henry Campion.

WARWICKSHIRE.

Sir John Mordaunt.
Andrew Archer.
Hon. Francis Greville.
Hon. Doding. Greville.

WESTMORELAND.

James Grahme.
Edward Duncombe.

WILTSHIRE.

Sir Richard How.
Robert Hyde.
Charles Fox.
Sir Charles Duncombe.
Edmund Lambert.
Hon. Henry Bertie.
Francis Anneſley.
Sir James Long.
Lord Bruce.
Hon. Robert Bruce.
William Harvie.
Francis Popham.
Hon. James Bruce.

WORCESTERSHIRE.

Sir John Packington.
Samuel Swift.
Edward Foley.
Edward Winnington.

YORKSHIRE.

Lord Downs.
Robert Benſon.
Robert Byerly.
John Hungerford.
John Sharp.
Thomas York.
Sir Brian Stapylton.
Sir Michael Warton.

CINQUE PORTS.

John Boteler.

WALES.

Lord Bulkeley.
Hon. Henry Bertie.
Sir Edward Williams.
Lewis Price.
Sir Simon Harcourt.
William Griffith.
Sir William Williams.
Sir John Conway.
Sir Thomas Manſel.
Richard Vaughan.
Edward Vaughan.
John Langhorne.
Thomas Harley.
Robert Harley.

SCOTLAND.

William Johnſton.
George Lockhart.
Robert Urquhart.
Sir James Abercrombie.
Sir John Anſtruther.
John Carnegie.
Robert Roger.
John Houſton.
Dugald Stewart.
Joſeph Auſtin.
Sir John Shawe.
Lieut. Gen. Roſs.

A.D. 1710

'Twill be aſtoniſhing to Poſterity, that ſo many Noblemen, and Gentlemen, ſhould countenance ſuch an Inſignificant Tool in his ſeditious and inſolent Behaviour, or endeavour to ſcreen him from Puniſhment. This Criminal, in his Addreſs to the Lords, made his Court to them, by acknowledging the Favour he had met with from ſome of them; which Mr. Maynwaring animadverts upon thus: "I cannot but obſerve "one Thing to you; that when his kind Friends "and Benefactors, in the Upper-houſe, as he "himſelf calls them, came to make a Defence "for him, to me, I confeſs, they ſeem'd to do "it in a moſt unfriendly Manner; and I cannot "help taking his Part here once again, and ſay-"ing, That I do think they were a little too "hard upon him: For, notwithſtanding the "great Obligations he profeſſes to have receiv'd "from them, ſome of them call'd him Prag-"matical; moſt of them call'd him Impertinent; "and he that was ſo highly offended when he "was ſtil'd an Inſignificant Tool, by ſome of the "Commons, had the Misfortune to be worſe "treated by his kind Friends among the Lords. "In the warmeſt Debates they ſaid, He was a "Madman; in their cooleſt they ſaid, He was a "Fool; and thoſe that ſpoke beſt in his Cauſe, "had more Modeſty than to attempt his Defence "any other Way, than by endeavouring to "prove that his Sermons were Nonſenſe: Tho' "ſome argu'd very right on the Conſequence "that might happen, if People ſhould be puniſh'd "for ſpeaking fooliſhly, yet I cannot but think, "that here again they were too ſevere upon "him; for tho' he has neither Learning, nor "Engliſh, and ſometimes is defective in the com-"mon Rules of Grammar, yet I cannot think "he is quite ſuch a Fool as his kind Benefactors "would have made of him; but am ſo far from "believing he has no manner of Meaning in any "thing he ſays or writes, that I think I have al-"ready ſhewn you, he plainly had a Meaning, "and one that was not only malicious, but dan-"gerous."

Mr. Maynwaring's further Remarks on the Doctor's Speech.

What an eternal Reproach muſt it be to High-Church, for patronizing ſuch a worthleſs Prieſt? What a Reflection on the then Government, to have made two of his Advocates Lord Chancellors? What Shame ſhould I think I had cover'd myſelf and my Poſterity with, had I appear'd in the Defence of ſo impudent, ſo ignorant, and ſo incorrigible an Offender; who, harden'd in his Iniquity, made a Glory even of his Puniſhment, and his Rabble made Bonfires and Illuminations for his Deliverance, as they term'd the merciful Sentence paſt upon him, for which the Whigs have paid dearly from that Time to this. It will not be conteſted, that Mr. Samuel Johnſon, who was ſo barbarouſly and villainouſly treated in King James's Reign, was infinitely ſuperior to Sacheverel on all Accounts; and that his Crime, in the Opinion of thoſe that thought it a Crime, was much leſs than this condemn'd Doctor's: yet how bloodily did High-Church deal with that learned, worthy Divine! It throws one into Trembling to think of it; and tho' every good Briton would have abhorr'd ſuch Treatment, even towards Sacheverel, yet all good Britons were ſorry that the Neceſſity of the Times ſuffer'd this impudent Offender to ſlip thro' the Hands of Juſtice. He immediately publiſh'd a Collection of Prayers, call'd his Thankſgiving, to impoſe himſelf on the Populace as a moſt pious Confeſſor, when every Body, that had any thorough Knowledge of him, knew he was as immoral as he was inſolent. He ſays, in his Thankſgiving, My Soul is eſcap'd even as a Bird out of the Snare of the Fowler; the Snare is broken, and I am deliver'd. Prodigious Hypocrite! Thus ſays Mr. Maynwaring, "Tho' "his Sentence would have been thought worſe "than Death by a true Son of the Church, yet "becauſe he was neither condemn'd to a Goal, "nor to have his Ears cut off, nor his Noſe ſlit, "according to the mournful Examples that "were ſet by his Predeceſſors, the Laudæans, "in Times paſt, therefore does he make theſe "pious Prayers: But his Judges had no Deſign "upon his Life, his Limbs, or his Fortune; it "was the Doctrine, not the Man, that they pro-"pos'd to condemn." Not only Sacheverel's ſeditious Sermons were condemn'd to be burnt by the common Hangman, but alſo, and at the ſame Time, the famous Oxford Decree, mention'd in the Reign of King Charles II. wherein theſe following Poſitions are condemn'd as Damnable, as well as Trayterous, &c. There is a mutual Compact, tacit or expreſs, between a Prince and his Subjects; the Sovereignty of England is in the three Eſtates, King, Lords, and Commons; Self-Preſervation is the fundamental Law of Nature, &c. "The Houſe of Lords taking into Conſide-"ration the Judgment and Decree of the Uni-"verſity of Oxford, paſs'd in their Convocation, "July 21. 1683. given in Evidence by Dr. Hen. "Sacheverel at his Trial, upon the Impeachment "of the Houſe of Commons, and thereupon "lately

And on his Collection of Prayers.

The Oxford Decree burnt by the Hangman.

A.D.1710 " lately reprinted: It was Reſolv'd by the Lords " Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſem- " bled, That the ſaid Judgment and Decree con- " tains in it ſeveral Poſitions, contrary to the " Conſtitution of this Kingdom, and DESTRU- " CTIVE to the PROTESTANT SUCCESSION, " as by Law eſtabliſh'd. And it was thereupon " Order'd, by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal " in Parliament aſſembled, That the ſaid Judg- " ment and Decree ſhall be burnt by the Hands " of the common Hangman, in the Preſence of " the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex, at the " ſame Time and Place, when and where the " Sermons of Dr. Henry Sacheverel are order'd " to be burnt." A Treatiſe of the Word Perſon, written by John Clenden of the Inner-Temple, and printed for John Walthoe, Bookſeller, was order'd to be burnt, and an Addreſs preſented to the Queen for proſecuting the Author and Bookſeller. Sacheverel's Collections of Quotations out of libellous Books, and other ſuch Pieces, were condemn'd to the Flames; and the Tories to be quits with the Whigs, as they call'd it, mov'd for an Addreſs for a Faſt, which was the more extraordinary, becauſe till then they were wont to make themſelves merry with ſuch Motions and Faſtings; but it was to caſt a Reflection on the Whigs, as Encouragers of the horrid Blaſphemies that had been vented, publiſh'd, and printed in this Kingdom; and the Faſt was to deprecate the Divine Vengeance. The Politicks of the Party being very ſuperficial, their Deſign was eaſily ſeen thro'; and therefore the Majority added, many of which Blaſphemies have again, in a moſt irregular, extraordinary, and inſolent Manner been printed, publiſh'd, and diſpers'd throughout the Kingdom, to the Scandal of good Chriſtians, by Dr. Henry Sacheverel. But this Addition was probably the Occaſion of the Queen's giving an evaſive Anſwer to this Addreſs.

The Commons Addreſs for a Faſt.

The Queen's evaſive Anſwer.

During theſe Debates and Diſorders, occaſion'd by Sacheverel's Buſineſs, the Commons found Leiſure to paſs the Lottery-Bill for 1,500,000 l. of which 600,000 l. was ſubſcrib'd in one Day; and taking into Conſideration, that many of their Members did not, at this critical Juncture, attend the Service of the Houſe, they voted, Jan. 25. That ſuch Members as abſented themſelves, without Leave of the Houſe, were to be reputed Deſerters of their Truſt, &c.

A Bill was alſo order'd to be brought in for limitting the Number of Officers, Military or Civil, in the Houſe of Commons. Mr. Wortley Montagu was Chairman of the Grand Committee, and General Stanhope, and other leading Men of the Whig Party, promoted it. It paſt the Houſe of Commons, but was rejected by the Houſe of Lords; where not only the Earl of Wharton, but the Earl of Scarborough, and the Lord North and Grey ſpoke againſt it. The Houſe of Commons having examin'd the Subject-Matter of the Petition of the Creditors of the Mine-Adventure, Reſolv'd unanimouſly, March 31. That Sir Humphrey Mackworth, Dept. Governor of the Mine-Adventurers, was guilty of many notorious and ſcandalous Frauds, and indirect Practices, in Violation of the Charter granted to the ſaid Company, in Breach of his Truſt, and to the manifeſt Wrong and Oppreſſion of the Proprietors and Creditors of the ſaid Company: And that he might not run away, a Bill was order'd to be brought in, to prevent Sir Humphrey Mackworth leaving this Kingdom, and alienating his Eſtate till the End of next Seſſion of Parliament. This pious High-Churchman had for ſome Years before been one of the Idols of the Party, and had not only written ſome polemical, but alſo ſome devotional Tracts, to encreaſe the Veneration they had for him. The Report of the Committee, who manag'd this Matter, was order'd to be printed; but Robert Benſon, Eſq; the Chairman, very much delay'd the Printing of it, by a Tour to Holland. And after Meſſ. Harley and St. John were got into the Miniſtry, and this Parliament was diſſolv'd, it is no Wonder we hear no more of Sir Humphrey Mackworth's ſcandalous and notorious Frauds and Corruption.

Sir Humphrey Mackworth voted guilty of notorious Frauds.

A.D.1710

We are now to take a ſhort View of Tranſactions Abroad, particularly with reſpect to the Negotiations for Peace, which the French now pretended to be deſirous of forwarding, with a Deſign ſtill to amuſe and divide the Allies; for, as has been obſerv'd, they were perfectly well inform'd of the Situation of Affairs in England, and that their Friends could not be long kept out of Employ, and the Miniſtry in England would want a Peace as much as the French did; it being impoſſible that ſuch Men, who were ſuſpected, hated, and deſpis'd by the Confederates, ſhould be able, if they had been willing, to carry on the War. However, a Project of Peace was ſent from Paris to Mr. Petkum in Holland; it was a ſort of Amplification of that of the Hague, and in the main, the ſame with the Preliminaries, but in another Form.

The Treaty of Gertruydenburgh.

Now the Alteration of the Form as effectually deſtroy'd the Preliminaries, as if it had been put into no Form at all. Here the Reſtitution of the Spaniſh Monarchy is a Promiſe only; the concerting Meaſures with the Allies to that End is left out; the reſtoring the two Electors of Bavaria and Cologne is requir'd in Contradiction to the confirming the Upper-Palatine to the Elector Palatine, as ſtipulated in the Hague Preliminaries; and as an Expedient for the 37th Article, four Towns were to be given up in Flanders, ſuch as the French King ſhould name; Which, ſays the Bp. of Ch.... was worth nothing, ſince he would never give any Town the Allies could think a tolerable Security for ſo important a Point: But that the Deſign and End of the Preliminaries might be entirely ſubverted, it is propos'd, That the Execution of all the Articles be deferr'd till the Ratifications are exchang'd.

This being nothing but the old Bait made up a-new, the Allies were too wiſe to bite at it; and as France had all along excepted nothing but the 37th Article, they were reſolv'd to adhere to the reſt; and therefore would admit of no Conferences till they explain'd themſelves on that Point: which Steadineſs made the French Court recede, at leaſt in Appearance, and they gave the States all the Aſſurance the moſt expreſs Words could do, that the King agreed to all the other Preliminaries; and that if they would conſent, his Miniſters ſhould come and confer with them upon the 37th Article, he did not doubt but what ſhould be propos'd from him, would be to their Satisfaction. Which was ſo full a Declaration, that it gave ſome Hopes this Difficulty might be got over, and the Refuſal of what was ask'd would look invidious. The French were inſinuating every where, That the States were too diffident, and had a mind to prolong the War; wherefore, to remove all Pretences of Complaint, Paſſports were granted for ſuch Miniſters as the King ſhould think fit, and Notice of it tranſmitted to the Court of England. The States acting in all Things with Sincerity and Zeal for the Good of the common Cauſe, they wrote in very preſſing

A.D. 1710 Terms to the Queen, That she would be pleas'd to send over the Duke of Marlborough, if he could be so soon spar'd, before the End of February, that they might have the Benefit of his wise Counsels, as well as reap the Advantage of his memorable Valour. The Express, to desire Passports, arriv'd at the Hague the 9th of Feb. N. S. and the House of Commons being inform'd by Sir Gilbert Heathcote, one of the Members for the City of London, that Advances were made towards renewing a Negotiation of Peace, the House Resolv'd to present an Address to her Majesty, to second the Request of the States-General, about sending the Duke of Marlborough to Holland. The Lords concurr'd in that Address, which was presented the 8th of Feb. O. S. and is as follows:

May it please your Majesty,

Lords and Commons Address to the Queen about it.

WE your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in Parliament assembled, having Reason to believe that the Negotiations of Peace will suddenly be renewed in Holland; and being justly apprehensive of the crafty and insinuating Designs of our Enemies, to create Divisions among your Allies, or by amusing them with deceitful Expectations of Peace, to retard their Preparations for War, do think ourselves bound in Duty, most humbly to represent to your Majesty, of how great Importance we conceive it is to the Interest of the Common Cause, that the Duke of Marlborough should be abroad at this critical Juncture.

We cannot but take this Opportunity to express our Sense of the Great and Unparallel'd Services of the Duke of Marlborough, and with all imaginable Duty, do applaud your Majesty's great Wisdom in having honoured the same Person with the great Character of General, and Plenipotentiary, who, in our humble Opinion, is most capable of discharging two such important Trusts. We therefore make it our humble Request, That you will be pleas'd to order the Duke of Marlborough's immediate Departure for Holland, where his Presence will be equally necessary, to assist at the Negotiations of Peace, and to hasten the Preparations for an early Campaign, which will most effectually disappoint the Artifices of our Enemies, and procure a Safe and Honourable Peace for your Majesty and your Allies.

Her Majesty's Answer.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I Am so sensible of the Necessity of the Duke of Marlborough's Presence in Holland, at this critical Juncture, that I have already given the necessary Directions for his immediate Departure; and I am very glad to find, by this Address, that you CONCUR with ME in a JUST SENSE of the Duke of Marlborough's EMINENT SERVICES.

As Mr. Rob. Harley and Mrs. Abigail Masham were, at this critical Juncture, at Penelope's Labour, unravelling by Night what was spun by Day, undoing, by false Representations and insidious Insinuations of Persons and Things, what was done in Parliament and Council for the Publick Good, so the Ministers had yet too many Friends about the Queen to want sufficient Intelligence of their clandestine Contrivances against them; and, no doubt, the States Letter, and the Parliament's Address for the Duke's going to Holland, were intended to let the Queen see what Confidence they put in the Duke of Marlborough's Conduct and Courage, in Action and Counsel; and how necessary they thought his Service in both, for carrying on the Common Cause, whether by Arms or by Treaty. But whatever soft Words the Queen made use of in her Answer, she was come to a Point, and at that very time determin'd, at all Adventures, to change Ministers and Measures; which the French could not but be well inform'd of, and were therefore not in much Pain for the Success of the Negotiations at Gertruydenberg, where, on the 9th of March, N. S. the States Deputies, Mess. Buys and Vanderdussen, met the French Plenipotentiaries, the Mareschal D'Huxelles, and the Abbot de Polignac; Men extremely well qualify'd for the Business they came about. They shew'd sufficiently, at the first Conference, what slender Hopes there were of any great Good from them; for notwithstanding the Preliminaries, and the Assurances to perform them, they began with a Proposal of Partition; and, That Naples, Sicily, and the Towns on the Coast of Tuscany, belonging to Spain, should be granted to one of the Competitors, without naming which. As contrary as this was to the Preliminaries, the Allies did not wholly reject it, nor did the French Ministers absolutely insist upon all they at first ask'd, because, if they had, they would have been sent back immediately, as they came: therefore, they intimated, they believ'd their Master would, for the Sake of Peace, desist from the Demand of Naples. Upon this the Deputies remov'd to the Hague, and a Courier was dispatch'd to the French Court, with an Account of what had past. The Duke of Marlborough was come to the Hague two Days before the Deputies went to this Conference, the Matter of which had been concerted at the Hague with his Grace and my Lord Townshend, the British Plenipotentiaries, and the Result of it was communicated to the Ministers of all the rest of the Allies. The chief Errand of the French Ministers being to gain Time, they had the best Opportunity for it that could be; at the End of every Conference they sent an Express to their Court, and upon his Return, perhaps the next Day, or two or three Days after, when they had decipher'd their Instructions, they desir'd another Conference. The States Deputies went from the Hague, conferr'd, return'd, reported; upon which the Allies meet, consult, agree, and settle what farther Steps should be made on their Part. The French on their Side send an Express to Court, and so on. That no Obstruction to a general Peace, on the Foot of a Partition, might arise from the Address of the British Parliament, the latter was contriv'd by short Prorogations, that the Queen might have their Concurrence to agree to such a Partition as should be thought reasonable by all the Allies: The first Prorogation being but for 13 Days, from the 5th to the 18th of April, and the Queen was pleas'd to tell the Occasion of it in her Speech; wherein, after having said, I cannot sufficiently express to you my great Concern, that you have had so NECESSARY an Occasion of taking up a great Part of your Time. She added, among other Things, Finding by Advices from Abroad, that our Army has not yet taken the Field, and that the Plenipotentiaries of France are still in Holland, I think it proper at present to make Prorogations but for a very short Time.

A.D. 1710

The Queen then resolved to change the Ministry.

The French know it.

The Negotiations so manag'd by the French, as to gain Time.

The Queen owns the Prosecution of Sacheverel to be necessary.

We have hinted that the French King's Ministers at Gertruydenberg insisted on Sicily, and the Tuscan-Ports; the latter Philip was in Possession of, and would not part with; the

A.D.1710 Dutch would not conſent to part with Sardinia, which was already in the Emperor's Poſſeſſion: Thus, in appearance, the Negotiations hung only here; the French Miniſters would quit nothing but Naples; the Dutch nothing but Sicily: the latter had Reaſon to be the ſtiffer, for that there was News of the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene having paſt the Scarpe without Oppoſition, which they let the French Miniſters know at the next Conference, who, as much as they were alarm'd, ſeem'd not to be concern'd at it; and pretending they could ſay no more, ſent to Court for farther Inſtructions, demanding till the 28th of May to do it, which was allow'd, tho' it needed not; nor did take ſo much Time to know the King's Pleaſure. Their Expreſs came back the 3d, which was notify'd in the ſame Manner as the reſt, and the French King ſtill inſiſting on the Partition demanded by his Miniſters, it was ſignify'd to them by Mr. Petkum, That it was to no Purpoſe to have more Conferences; which the Mareſchal and the Abbot ſeem'd to reſent ſo much, that they declar'd they would be gone the 18th of May, and carry'd the Jeſt ſo far, as to ſend away part of their Retinue and Equipage. However, their Stay at Gertruydenberg was too advantageous for their Maſter's Affairs to admit of acting the Farce out; and when the 15th came, an Expreſs luckily arriv'd to ſolve Appearances, and enable them to continue there with a good Grace. This was notify'd the 18th, and the Deputies went to them the 23d; at which Conference, being the fifth ſince their coming, all the new Conceſſions on the Part of France, were the giving up the Tuſcan Ports, and the inſiſting on Sicily and Sardinia, to which tho' the Allies did not formerly conſent, yet the French Miniſters ſaw plainly thoſe Iſlands would not have broken off the Treaty, had they ſhewn themſelves in earneſt as to all the other Parts of it. Notwithſtanding what had happen'd to the Preliminary Articles, they talk'd mightily of their King's Sincerity; adding, he would uſe all poſſible Means to oblige his Grandſon to conſent to that Partition, but that requir'd Time. It was demanded, Supposing the Partition agreed to, which way did the King propoſe the reſt of the Spaniſh Monarchy ſhould be ſecur'd to the Confederates? To this the Plenipotentiaries could not give an Anſwer at this Conference; ſo it was deferr'd to the next, which was to be the 6th, and not held till the 16th of June, tho' the Expreſs arriv'd from France the 6th, but it was not notify'd till the 10th. The French Court had been all this while in Pain for Arras; but their Army was by this Time aſſembled, and ſo encamp'd, that it was impracticable for the Allies to come at them or the Town. This made 'em the more eaſy as to the Negotiation, and every Poſt brought them good News from their Friends in England; where, however victorious the Duke of Marlborough might be in Flanders, he would ſurely be vanquiſh'd by the prevailing Faction. It was not however Time for them to break off the Negotiation entirely; and therefore at the ſixth Conference, this capital Point was diſcuſs'd, How the Allies ſhould be put in Poſſeſſion of Spain and the Indies? The Debate laſted from Morning till Night, with ſo much Art and Evaſion on the Side of the French; with ſo much Reaſon and Reſolution on that of the Allies, that I ſhould do it an Injury to pretend to repreſent it; and therefore ſhall take it wholly as the Bp. of Ch..... wrote it. "The Anſwer of the French Miniſters was, "That the King was willing to concert the proper Meaſures with them, according to the 4th "Article of the Hague Preliminaries, but this the "Deputies could not think ſufficient; for this he "was oblig'd to by the Preliminaries, tho' the "37th Article had been ſtruck out. Beſides, "that it was inconſiſtent with a General Peace, "which they had all along inſiſted on, and would "neceſſarily engage them in a Spaniſh War, which "they had been treating of a Partition to prevent. "But to underſtand their Meaning more diſtinctly, they deſir'd them to explain themſelves, "what theſe Meaſures were the King would "come into: Would he join his Forces with "their's, to oblige his Grandſon to accept the "Terms? Why yes, perhaps he would. But in "diſcuſſing this Point, they took care to ſtart a "thouſand Difficulties, to ſhew it was impracticable; ſuch as theſe, How to ſettle what ſhould "be the whole Force employ'd to reduce Spain "and the Indies? What Share each ſhould contribute? How they ſhould act, jointly or ſeparately? Who ſhould command, how and "where? By whom their Inſtructions for Acting ſhould be form'd, and the like? And the "ſame Difficulties might be ſtarted for the Sea-Service. Well, if theſe Meaſures are impracticable, as no doubt they are, where one Party never deſigns to come heartily into them, "what are thoſe the King will come into? "Why, he will contribute certain Sums of Money towards the Expence the Allies ſhall be at "on this Occaſion. How now will this mend "the Matter? How ſhall they be able to ſettle "the Sum, and ſecure the Payment? The firſt "of theſe is a very difficult Point, when it comes "to be drawn into Particulars, and to be conſider'd how hard it is to know how long it may "continue; when and where the Payments ſhall "be made; and if a Sum certain can't be fix'd "at firſt, who ſhall ſettle the Proportion France "ſhall pay, or oblige them to acquieſce in it? "But if theſe Difficulties could be overcome, "what Security will the Allies have for Payment? "Why, the Bonds of the richeſt Bankers of "Paris." This is all that France offer'd; and conſidering Monſieur Bernard, the richeſt of all thoſe Bankers, was lately become Bankrupt for the King, the Allies had no great Encouragement to accept of ſuch Security. "One would be "glad to know, continues that Prelate, what Remedy the Allies could have againſt thoſe Bankers in caſe of Failure; or how could they "reach them? To take Paris itſelf, does not "ſeem to be more difficult; grant they are Men "of Honour and Credit, what's that againſt Reaſon of State, where an arbitrary Prince is pleas'd "to interpoſe? After all, if Security could be "given for a certain Sum, what is this in Effect, "but to ſell a Part of the Spaniſh Monarchy for "a Sum of Money, towards carrying on a War, "which the French King would take care to "render ineffectual."

A.D.1710

France offers the Security of the Goldſmiths of Paris, for Spain and the Indies.

I have been the longer on this Argument, becauſe Mr. Harley, and his Fellow-Labourers in the Utrecht Peace, laid the Blemiſhes of that Treaty to the Charge of the Miniſters whom they ſupplanted; becauſe they might have concluded this at Gertruydenberg, if they had been ſo wiſe, and ſo honeſt, as to have taken the Security of the Goldſmiths of Paris, to pay ten or twelve Millions for maintaining the War in Spain againſt the King's Grandſon. If ſuch a Security had been propos'd to Mr. Henry St. John, and Mr. Arthur Moor, I doubt not they would have taken it, or the Security of the Swiſs in Paris, rather than not have a Peace, without which

The Report of Mr. Harley's getting into the Miniſtry, breaks off this good Treaty.

Letter to a Tory Freeholder.

*A.D.*1710. Terms to the Queen, That she would be pleas'd to send over the Duke of Marlborough, if he could be so soon spar'd, before the End of February, that they might have the Benefit of his wise Counsels, as well as reap the Advantage of his memorable Valour. The Express, to desire Passports, arriv'd at the Hague the 9th of Feb. N. S. and the House of Commons being inform'd by Sir Gilbert Heathcote, one of the Members for the City of London, that Advances were made towards renewing a Negotiation of Peace, the House Resolv'd to present an Address to her Majesty, to second the Request of the States-General, about sending the Duke of Marlborough to Holland. The Lords concurr'd in that Address, which was presented the 8th of Feb. O. S. and is as follows:

Lords and Commons Address to the Queen about it.

May it please your Majesty,

WE your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in Parliament assembled, having Reason to believe that the Negotiations of Peace will suddenly be renewed in Holland; and being justly apprehensive of the crafty and insinuating Designs of our Enemies, to create Divisions among your Allies, or by amusing them with deceitful Expectations of Peace, to retard their Preparations for War, do think ourselves bound in Duty, most humbly to represent to your Majesty, of how great Importance we conceive it is to the Interest of the Common Cause, that the Duke of Marlborough should be abroad at this critical Juncture.

We cannot but take this Opportunity to express our Sense of the Great and Unparallel'd Services of the Duke of Marlborough, and with all imaginable Duty, do applaud your Majesty's great Wisdom in having honoured the same Person with the great Character of General, and Plenipotentiary, who, in our humble Opinion, is most capable of discharging two such important Trusts. We therefore make it our humble Request, That you will be pleas'd to order the Duke of Marlborough's immediate Departure for Holland, where his Presence will be equally necessary, to assist at the Negotiations of Peace, and to hasten the Preparations for an early Campaign, which will most effectually disappoint the Artifices of our Enemies, and procure a Safe and Honourable Peace for your Majesty and your Allies.

Her Majesty's Answer.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I Am so sensible of the Necessity of the Duke of Marlborough's Presence in Holland, at this critical Juncture, that I have already given the necessary Directions for his immediate Departure; and I am very glad to find, by this Address, that you CONCUR with ME in a JUST SENSE of the Duke of Marlborough's EMINENT SERVICES.

As Mr. Rob. Harley and Mrs. Abigail Masham were, at this critical Juncture, at Penelope's Labour, unravelling by Night what was spun by Day, undoing, by false Representations and insidious Insinuations of Persons and Things, what was done in Parliament and Council for the Publick Good, so the Ministers had yet too many Friends about the Queen to want sufficient Intelligence of their clandestine Contrivances against them; and, no doubt, the States Letter, and the Parliament's Address for the Duke's going to Holland, were intended to let the Queen see what Confidence they put in the Duke of Marlborough's Conduct and Courage, in Action and Counsel; and how necessary they thought his Service in both, for carrying on the Common Cause, whether by Arms or by Treaty. But whatever soft Words the Queen made use of in her Answer, she was come to a Point, and at that very time determin'd, at all Adventures, to change Ministers and Measures; which the French could not but be well inform'd of, and were therefore not in much Pain for the Success of the Negotiations at Gertruydenberg, where, on the 9th of March, N. S. the States Deputies, Mess. Buys and Vanderdussen; met the French Plenipotentiaries, the Mareschal D'Huxelles, and the Abbot de Polignac; Men extremely well qualify'd for the Business they came about. They shew'd sufficiently, at the first Conference, what slender Hopes there were of any great Good from them; for notwithstanding the Preliminaries, and the Assurances to perform them, they began with a Proposal of Partition; and, That Naples, Sicily, and the Towns on the Coast of Tuscany, belonging to Spain, should be granted to one of the Competitors, without naming which. As contrary as this was to the Preliminaries, the Allies did not wholly reject it, nor did the French Ministers absolutely insist upon all they at first ask'd, because, if they had, they would have been sent back immediately, as they came: therefore, they intimated, they believ'd their Master would, for the Sake of Peace, desist from the Demand of Naples. Upon this the Deputies remov'd to the Hague, and a Courier was dispatch'd to the French Court, with an Account of what had past. The Duke of Marlborough was come to the Hague two Days before the Deputies went to this Conference, the Matter of which had been concerted at the Hague with his Grace and my Lord Townshend, the British Plenipotentiaries, and the Result of it was communicated to the Ministers of all the rest of the Allies. The chief Errand of the French Ministers being to gain Time, they had the best Opportunity for it that could be; at the End of every Conference they sent an Express to their Court, and upon his Return, perhaps the next Day, or two or three Days after, when they had decipher'd their Instructions, they desir'd another Conference. The States Deputies went from the Hague, conferr'd, return'd, reported; upon which the Allies meet, consult, agree, and settle what farther Steps should be made on their Part. The French on their Side send an Express to Court, and so on. That no Obstruction to a general Peace, on the Foot of a Partition, might arise from the Address of the British Parliament, the latter was contriv'd by short Prorogations, that the Queen might have their Concurrence to agree to such a Partition as should be thought reasonable by all the Allies: The first Prorogation being but for 13 Days, from the 5th to the 18th of April, and the Queen was pleas'd to tell the Occasion of it in her Speech; wherein, after having said, I cannot sufficiently express to you my great Concern, that you have had so NECESSARY an Occasion of taking up a great Part of your Time. She added, among other Things, Finding by Advices from Abroad, that our Army has not yet taken the Field, and that the Plenipotentiaries of France are still in Holland, I think it proper at present to make Prorogations but for a very short Time.

A.D.1713

The Queen then resolved to change the Ministry.

The French know it.

The Negotiations so manag'd by the French, as to gain Time.

The Queen owns the Prosecution of Sacheverel to be necessary.

We have hinted that the French King's Ministers at Gertruydenberg insisted on Sicily, and the Tuscan-Ports; the latter Philip was in Possession of, and would not part with; the

A.D.1710 Dutch would not conſent to part with Sardinia, which was already in the Emperor's Poſſeſſion: Thus, in appearance, the Negotiations hung only here; the French Miniſters would quit nothing but Naples; the Dutch nothing but Sicily: the latter had Reaſon to be the ſtiffer, for that there was News of the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene having paſt the Scarpe without Oppoſition, which they let the French Miniſters know at the next Conference, who, as much as they were alarm'd, ſeem'd not to be concern'd at it; and pretending they could ſay no more, ſent to Court for farther Inſtructions, demanding till the 28th of May to do it, which was allow'd, tho' it needed not; nor did take ſo much Time to know the King's Pleaſure. Their Expreſs came back the 3d, which was notify'd in the ſame Manner as the reſt, and the French King ſtill inſiſting on the Partition demanded by his Miniſters, it was ſignify'd to them by Mr. Petkum, That it was to no Purpoſe to have more Conferences; which the Mareſchal and the Abbot ſeem'd to reſent ſo much, that they declar'd they would be gone the 18th of May, and carry'd the Jeſt ſo far, as to ſend away part of their Retinue and Equipage. However, their Stay at Gertruydenberg was too advantageous for their Maſter's Affairs to admit of acting the Farce out; and when the 15th came, an Expreſs luckily arriv'd to ſolve Appearances, and enable them to continue there with a good Grace. This was notify'd the 18th, and the Deputies went to them the 23d; at which Conference, being the fifth ſince their coming, all the new Conceſſions on the Part of France, were the giving up the Tuſcan Ports, and the inſiſting on Sicily and Sardinia, to which tho' the Allies did not formerly conſent, yet the French Miniſters ſaw plainly thoſe Iſlands would not have broken off the Treaty, had they ſhewn themſelves in earneſt as to all the other Parts of it. Notwithſtanding what had happen'd to the Preliminary Articles, they talk'd mightily of their King's Sincerity; adding, he would uſe all poſſible Means to oblige his Grandſon to conſent to that Partition, but that requir'd Time. It was demanded, Suppoſing the Partition agreed to, which way did the King propoſe the reſt of the Spaniſh Monarchy ſhould be ſecur'd to the Confederates? To this the Plenipotentiaries could not give an Anſwer at this Conference; ſo it was deferr'd to the next, which was to be the 6th, and not held till the 16th of June, tho' the Expreſs arriv'd from France the 6th, but it was not notify'd till the 10th. The French Court had been all this while in Pain for Arras; but their Army was by this Time aſſembled, and ſo encamp'd, that it was impracticable for the Allies to come at them or the Town. This made 'em the more eaſy as to the Negotiation, and every Poſt brought them good News from their Friends in England; where, however victorious the Duke of Marlborough might be in Flanders, he would ſurely be vanquiſh'd by the prevailing Faction. It was not however Time for them to break off the Negotiation entirely; and therefore at the ſixth Conference, this capital Point was diſcuſs'd, How the Allies ſhould be put in Poſſeſſion of Spain and the Indies? The Debate laſted from Morning till Night, with ſo much Art and Evaſion on the Side of the French; with ſo much Reaſon and Reſolution on that of the Allies, that I ſhould do it an Injury to pretend to repreſent it; and therefore ſhall take it wholly as the Bp. of Ch..... wrote it. "The Anſwer of the French Miniſters was, "That the King was willing to concert the proper Meaſures with them, according to the 4th "Article of the Hague Preliminaries, but this the "Deputies could not think ſufficient; for this he "was oblig'd to by the Preliminaries, tho' the "37th Article had been ſtruck out. Beſides, "that it was inconſiſtent with a General Peace, "which they had all along inſiſted on, and would "neceſſarily engage them in a Spaniſh War, which "they had been treating of a Partition to prevent. "But to underſtand their Meaning more diſtinctly, they deſir'd them to explain themſelves, "what theſe Meaſures were the King would "come into: Would he join his Forces with "their's, to oblige his Grandſon to accept the "Terms? Why yes, perhaps he would. But in "diſcuſſing this Point, they took care to ſtart a "thouſand Difficulties, to ſhew it was impracticable; ſuch as theſe, How to ſettle what ſhould "be the whole Force employ'd to reduce Spain "and the Indies? What Share each ſhould contribute? How they ſhould act, jointly or ſeparately? Who ſhould command, how and "where? By whom their Inſtructions for Acting ſhould be form'd, and the like? And the "ſame Difficulties might be ſtarted for the Sea-"Service. Well, if theſe Meaſures are impracticable, as no doubt they are, where one Party never deſigns to come heartily into them, "what are thoſe the King will come into? "Why, he will contribute certain Sums of Money towards the Expence the Allies ſhall be at "on this Occaſion. How now will this mend "the Matter? How ſhall they be able to ſettle "the Sum, and ſecure the Payment? The firſt "of theſe is a very difficult Point, when it comes "to be drawn into Particulars, and to be conſider'd how hard it is to know how long it may "continue; when and where the Payments ſhall "be made; and if a Sum certain can't be fix'd "at firſt, who ſhall ſettle the Proportion France "ſhall pay, or oblige them to acquieſce in it? "But if theſe Difficulties could be overcome, "what Security will the Allies have for Payment? "Why, the Bonds of the richeſt Bankers of "Paris." This is all that France offer'd; and conſidering Monſieur Bernard, the richeſt of all thoſe Bankers, was lately become Bankrupt for the King, the Allies had no great Encouragement to accept of ſuch Security. "One would be "glad to know, continues that Prelate, what Remedy the Allies could have againſt thoſe Bankers in caſe of Failure; or how could they "reach them? To take Paris itſelf, does not "ſeem to be more difficult; grant they are Men "of Honour and Credit, what's that againſt Reaſon of State, where an arbitrary Prince is pleas'd "to interpoſe? After all, if Security could be "given for a certain Sum, what is this in Effect, "but to ſell a Part of the Spaniſh Monarchy for "a Sum of Money, towards carrying on a War, "which the French King would take care to "render ineffectual."

France offers the Security of the Goldſmiths of Paris, for Spain and the Indies.

I have been the longer on this Argument, becauſe Mr. Harley, and his Fellow-Labourers in the Utrecht Peace, laid the Blemiſhes of that Treaty to the Charge of the Miniſters whom they ſupplanted; becauſe they might have concluded this at Gertruydenberg, if they had been ſo wiſe, and ſo honeſt, as to have taken the Security of the Goldſmiths of Paris, to pay ten or twelve Millions for maintaining the War in Spain againſt the King's Grandſon. If ſuch a Security had been propos'd to Mr. Henry St. John, and Mr. Arthur Moor, I doubt not they would have taken it, or the Security of the Swiſs in Paris, rather than not have a Peace, without which

The Report of Mr. Harley's getting into the Miniſtry, breaks off this good Treaty.

Letter to a Tory Freeholder.

*A.D.*1710 there was no saving of their Necks. But the Treaty of Gertruydenberg was in the Hands of Men of Ability and Honour, who had always the main Point in View, which was the Recovery of Spain and the West-Indies for the House of Austria; whereas the Utrecht Managers had nothing in View, but the Offices they had usurp'd, and had no Way to keep them, but by putting an End to a War, which was so near putting it out of the Power of France to protect them.

It was argu'd in Holland, that if the French were in earnest, there would be no need of Force to compel the Duke of Anjou to quit Spain; and it ought to be wholly of the French King, since he had from the first promis'd the Restitution of Spain and the Indies: nevertheless, if Force was necessary, the Allies would join their Troops in Catalonia and Portugal, to those of France, which would soon oblige Philip to accept of the Conditions granted him by the Gertruydenberg Treaty, which there were no Thoughts of in that of the Hague. The accepting the Money-Offer, suppos'd a particular Peace, and a Continuation of the War in Spain, which it was impossible for them to hinder France from supporting in private; and that she would not do it, when her Inclination and Interest were so strong Motives for it, there was no Reason to question. Upon the whole, it was resolv'd to reject the Money Offer, and demand of the French Plenipotentiaries to explain themselves upon the Subject of the Evacuation of Spain and the Indies, in Favour of King Charles, agreeable to the Preliminaries, and to the Promise made by France from the very First; they never pretending to desire so much as one single Conference for Peace on any other Terms, after which the Allies would declare their Intention with respect to the Partition. This was signify'd to the French Plenipotentiaries, in a Letter from Mr. Petkum, of the 8th of July; to which they gave no distinct Answer, but desir'd a Conference: The States Deputies went to it the 13th, and repeated the Demand of the Allies, as to their explaining themselves. The French Ministers having no Way to evade it, were pleas'd to call it a formal Rupture of the Treaty, and said, all they had to do was to return Home. The Deputies gave them time to send another Express, desiring no Delays might be made: The Express came back from Versailles in three Days, he not staying at Court above an Hour or two, as if he had gone meerly for Form sake. The Mareschal de Huxelles, and the Abbot de Polignac, notify'd his Return the 18th of July, and sent a Letter to the Pensionary, in Form of a Manifesto, full of Misrepresentation and Falsification of Fact, with a Design to charge the Dutch with breaking off the Treaty, which they were so sincere in concluding, for a General Peace. This Letter has in it all the Art of a French Writer, and able Minister, and is as well done as the Cause he defends will admit. The best Answer to it was the Resolution of the States General, dated July 23, three Days after the Receipt of the French Plenipotentiaries Letter, written with that Plainness and Sincerity, so free from Disguise and Artifice: there is in it such solid Reasoning, so much good Sense, such a Force of Truth, that it left no Room to question the Integrity and Honour of the Allies in this Negotiation, they all concurr'd in this Resolution; the last Article of which was, That farthermore, the Sieur Randwick, and the other Deputies of their High Mightinesses for Foreign Affairs, shall be required and impowered, as they are by these Presents, to enter again upon fresh Conferences with the Ministers of the High Allies, and jointly to concert by what Ways and Means the War may be carried on, on all Sides, with greater Vigour, &c. If it is the Interest of any Nation in the World to be always in Peace, it is certainly that of the Dutch, whose Safety, Riches, and Power, nay, whose very Being depends upon Trade, a Flower which never thrives in War; and, as Interest is the best Counseller, the Dutch seldom fail of pursuing its Counsels; yet, how vigorous are they in their Resolves to continue the War, 'till France is brought to Reason; whereas the Harleians in England, of whom not one Man was in any tolerable Degree acquainted with the Interest of Princes and States, and the Business of the World, immediately, as if inspir'd, pretended to know the Interest not of England only, but of Holland and all the Confederacy, better than the States General did, and hurry'd on a Peace on any Terms, under Pretence of Necessity and the Good of the Publick.

*A.D.*1710 The Resolution of the Dutch.

The French break off the Treaty, and charge it on the Allies.

The Ignorance of the Harleians.

It was notify'd to the French Plenipotentiaries, That they having first declar'd the Rupture of the Conferences, their Declaration was accepted, and they, upon that, left Gertruydenberg, July 25, N. S. at the Juncture that the great Change was made in the Ministry in England, to the Amazement of all the World, not only of Protestants and Papists, but of Turks and Heathens; there not being one Step taken in it but what was wild and unwarrantable. At that very Juncture were Orders sent to the Lord Viscount Townshend, the British Plenipotentiary in Holland, to present a Memorial to the States General, in which they were told, "That her Majesty did entirely ap- "prove their Resolution, in answer to the French "Plenipotentiaries Letter, and all the Steps they "had made during the late Negotiations." This Memorial was presented August the 7th, N. S. and Aug. 8, O. S. the Earl of Godolphin, who had been in the Treasury between 20 and 30 Years, and had manag'd with more Applause than any Treasurer had done since the Death of Queen Elizabeth, was remov'd from his Office of Lord High-Treasurer; and in his Place, tho' not with the same Title, was put Mr. Robert Harley, who had never distinguished himself in the Managing of Money Schemes, but by the beforemention'd Project of a Land Bank; and who knew no more of the Treasury than the World knew of him. From the Time of this Memorial, to the End of this Reign, there's no heed to be given to the Letter of State-Speeches and Papers; for those that drew them had no more regard to the Honour and Conscience of those that were to speak them or own them, than they had to their own; and we shall not find one of any Importance, that carries with it an Air of Sincerity and true Meaning.

The Queen entirely approves the Counsel of the Dutch.

The Earl of Godolphin removed.

No more Sincerity in State Papers.

It was not 'till February this Year that Mr. Whitworth, the Queen's Envoy Extraordinary to the Czar of Muscovy, could accomodate Matters with his Ministers about the Insult committed by the Laceman, Bailiffs, and Attorney, against Monsieur Metueof, the Czar's Ambassador in England.

About

A.D.1710 About the Beginning of May the Queen was pleas'd to make a Promotion of General Officers.

A Promotion of General Officers.

LIEUTENANT-GENERALS.

Lord Shanon,
Marquis de Montandre,
Lord Montjoy,
Richard Gorges,
Nicholas Sankey,
Earl of Crawford,
Henry Holt,
D. of Northumberland,
George Carpenter,
George Maccartney,
Sir Richard Temple,
Lord North and Grey,
Earl of Stair.

MAJOR-GENERALS.

Thomas Handasyde,
John Bayne,
Barthol. Ogilby.
Sher. Davenport,
Heyman Rook,
Thomas Whetham,
John Livesay,
Edward Braddock,
Gilbert Primrose,
William Tatton,
Joseph Sabine,
Edward Pearce,
Roger Elliot,
Thomas Pearce,
William Evans,
John Newton,
Thomas Crowther,
Charles Sybourg,
Richard Holmes,
George Kellam,
John Pepper.

BRIGADIER-GENERALS.

John Stewart,
Lord Ikeren,
William Watkins,
Earl de Loraine,
Lord Paston,
William Breton,
Richard Sutton,
Henry Durel,
Richard Russel,
Henry Morrison,
Samuel Masham,
Jacob Borr,
Earl of Rochfort,
Hans Hamilton,
Lord William Hay,
Lord John Kerr,
Francis Godfrey,
John Hobart,
Lewis Mordaunt,
Thomas Ferrer,
Nicholas Lepel,
Thomas Stanwix,
Sir Charles Hotham,
James Nicholson.

By the making of near threescore General Officers, what could the People think, but that the War would still be delighted in, till a safe and honourable Peace was procur'd by it: but there was nothing less in the Hearts of those who were as yet behind the Curtain in the Conduct of the British Affairs, but soon made their awkard Appearance on the Stage. We have hinted that too much Opportunity had been given Mrs. Abigail Hill, by the Dutchess of Marlborough, to insinuate what she pleas'd into the Queen, either for the Tories, or against the Whigs; and it was found by woful Experience, that her Mistress was too susceptible of such Impressions. Mr. Robert Harley, plowing with this Heifer, resolv'd to begin the Execution of the Scheme of the Party, by the Duke of Shrewsbury's being made Lord Chamberlain, who was in the Secret of it, and as ready to go any Lengths in it as any Body: For notwithstanding his great Zeal for the Revolution, and the Confidence King William had in him the first Years of his Reign, many Persons of Penetration discover'd a great Abatement of that Zeal, after Smith's Business was laid before the House of Lords, and especially after the Duke return'd with an Italian Wife from Rome. However, the Beginning with him was well enough contriv'd, considering that the People of Penetration ever were, and ever will be, the Minority in all Nations.

The Change begins with the Duke of Shrewsbury.

The Queen open'd this Matter to the Lord Treasurer in the following Letter:

St. James's, April the 13th. A.D.1710

Queen's Letter to the Earl of Godolphin about it.

I Am sorry to find by your Letter you are so very much in the Spleen, as to think you cannot for the Future contribute any thing towards my Quiet but your Wishes; however, I will still hope you will use your Endeavours; for by all one hears and sees every Day, as Things stand at present, I think one can expect nothing but Confusion. I am sure, for my Part, I shall be ready to join with all my Friends, in every Thing that is reasonable, to allay the Heat and Ferment that is in this poor Nation. Since you went to Newmarket, I have receiv'd several Assurances from the Duke of Shrewsbury, of his Readiness to serve me upon all Occasions, and his Willingness to come into my Service; which Offer I was very glad to accept of, having a very good Opinion of him, and believing he may be of great Use in these troublesome Times. For these Reasons I have resolv'd to part with the Duke of Kent, who, I hope, will be easy in this Matter, by being made a Duke. And I hope that this Change will meet with your Approbation, which I wish I may have in all my Actions. I have not yet declar'd my Intentions of giving the Staff and the Key to the Duke of Shrewsbury, because I would be the first that should acquaint you with it.

The Lord Treasurer's Answer.

Newmarket, April 15. 1710.

The Earl of Godolphin's Answer.

" I Have the Honour of your Majesty's Letter of the 13th, by which I have the Grief to find, that which you are pleas'd to call Spleen in my former Letter, was only a true Impulse and Conviction of Mind, that your Majesty is suffering yourself to be guided to your own Ruin and Destruction, as fast as it is possible for them to compass it, to whom you seem so much to hearken. I am not therefore so much surpriz'd as concern'd at the Resolution, which your Majesty says you have taken, of bringing in the Duke of Shrewsbury; for when People began to be sensible, it would be difficult to persuade your Majesty to dissolve a Parliament which, for two Winters together, had given you above six Millions a Year for the Support of the War, upon which your Crown depends; and even while that War is still subsisting, they have had the Cunning to contrive this Proposal to your Majesty, which in its Consequence will certainly put you under a Necessity of breaking the Parliament, tho' contrary, I yet believe, to your own Inclination.

" I beg your Majesty to be persuaded, I do not say this out of the least Prejudice to the Duke of Shrewsbury; there is no Man of whose Capacity I have had a better Impression, nor with whom I have liv'd more easy for above twenty Years.

" Your Majesty may please to remember, that at your first coming to the Crown, I was desirous he should have one of the chief Posts in your Service; and it would have been happy for your Majesty, and the Kingdom, if he had accepted that Offer; but he thought fit to decline it, and the Reasons generally given at that Time for his doing so, do not much recommend him to your Majesty's Service. But I must endeavour to let your Majesty see Things as they really are: And to bring him into your Service, and into your Business at this Time, just after his being in a publick open Conjunction, in every Vote, with the whole Body of TORIES, and

" in

*A.D.*1710 " in private constant Correspondence and Cabal-
" ling with Mr. Harley in every Thing; what
" Consequence can this possibly have, but to
" make every Man that is now in your Cabinet
" uneasy, and run from it, as they would do from
" the Plague? I leave it to your Majesty to
" judge, what Effect this entire Change of your
" Ministry will have among your Allies abroad,
" and how will this War be like to be carried on,
" in their Opinion, by those who have all along
" oppos'd and obstructed it? And who will like any
" Peace the better, the more it leaves France at " Liberty to take their Time of imposing the Pre-
" tender upon this Country? These Considerations
" must certainly make Holland run immediately
" into a separate Peace with France, and make
" your Majesty lose all the Honour, and all the " Reputation your Arms had acquired by the " War, and make the Kingdom lose all the " Fruit of that vast Expence which they have " been at in this War, as well as all the Ad" vantages and Safety which they had so much
" need of, and had so fair a Prospect of obtain-
" ing by it. And can any Body imagine, that
" after so great a Disappointment to the King-
" dom, there will not be an Enquiry into the " Cause of it, and who have been the Occasion
" of so great a Change in your Majesty's Mea" sures and Councils, which had been so long
" successful, and got you so great a Name in
" the World. I am very much afraid, your " Majesty will find, when 'tis too late, that it
" will be a difficult Task for any Body to stand
" against such an Enquiry. I am sure, if I did
" not think all these Consequences inevitable,
" I would never give Your Majesty the Trouble
" and Uneasiness of laying them before you; per-
" suaded as I am, that your Majesty will find
" them so, it is my indispensible Duty to do it
" out of pure Faithfulness and Zeal for your " Service and Honour.

" Your Majesty having taken a Resolution of
" so much Consequence to all your Affairs both
" Abroad and at Home, without acquainting the " Duke of Marlborough or me with it, 'till af-
" ter you had taken it, is the least Part of my
" Mortification in this whole Affair; but, per" haps, the World may think, the long and faith-
" ful Services we have constantly, and zealously
" endeavour'd to do your Majesty, might have
" deserv'd a little more Consideration.

" However, for my own Part, I most humbly
" beg leave to assure your Majesty, I will never
" give the least Obstruction to your Measures, or
" to any Ministers you shall employ. And I
" must beg farther, to make two humble Re-
" quests to your Majesty; One, That you will
" allow me to pass the Remainder of my Life
" always out of London, where I may find most
" Ease and Quiet; the other, That you would
" keep this Letter, and read it again about Christ-
" mas, and then be pleas'd to make your Judg-
" ment, Who hath given you the best and most
" faithful Advice:" And about that time his Counsels appear'd to be Prophecies. But as the Resolution to change was taken without Reason, so was every Step in the Consequence of it. The Earl of Godolphin, speaking of the Faction of High-Church, headed by Mess. Harley, St. John, Bromley, &c. calls them here TORIES, I hope his Example will justify that Expression, where-ever I have us'd it; and there's an End of the Charge of Partiality in my History.

He calls the Harleians TORIES.

While Mrs. Hill and Mr. Harley were thus fraudulently sapping the Foundation of the Whig Ministry, Sacheverel and his Rabble were making open and furious Attacks on their Friends all over England. We have seen what a worthless, insignificant Tool it was; but a Beatle is more proper for some Work than an Axe, and a Man of Sense would have been no more fit for the Doctor's, than the Doctor was for the Treasurer's. Men are generally best known by their Company; and it will be a good Way to judge of the Merit of Sacheverel's Patrons by his own. We shall meet with some of them in the following Paragraphs. About the Middle of May, this most Holy Man set out from London to Oxford, from whence he was to set out on a Progress into several Counties, to receive the Homage of the High-Church, Gentle and Simple. He was magnificently entertain'd by the Earl of Abingdon; Mr. Charles Bertie, Fellow of All-Souls; Mr. Rowney, one of the Members of Parliament for the City of Oxford; the Vice Chancellor; the Heads of Houses, and most of his Brother Doctors. From thence he march'd, with a numerous Cavalcade, towards Shropshire, under Pretence of taking Possession of a Living lately bestowed upon him in that County by Mr. Lloyd, whose Name deserves the Notice of Posterity, as well as the Doctor's, for the judicious Choice he made of so modest, sober, and able a Divine, to be Confessor to him and his Tenants. At Banbury, of chief Note in the modern Annals for King James's killing a Dog there in sight of the Corporation, the Doctor was waited upon by that Worshipful Body, in Scarlet Gowns, and Black Gowns, and the Recorder made as good a Speech as he cou'd to him, which introduc'd a more grateful Present, a Hamper of the best Wine in Banbury: The Night concluded with Bonfires, and ringing of Bells. The next Day he went, the Rabble still at his Horse's Heels, to the Lord Willoughby's, where he had a Dinner. Upon his Arrival at Warwick, the Mayor, and the other Worshipfuls paid their Respects to him at his Inn, and order'd him another Hamper, as well fill'd as that at Banbury was. He went that Night, June the 3d, as decently attended as he had hitherto been, to the Lord Craven's, and did the County of Warwick the Honour to stay some Days in it, to make Riots, and assemble the Populace together, to receive his Instructions against the next Elections. Wherever he came, he cry'd aloud, and spar'd not, against the Ministers as yet in Being, against the Protestant Succession, and Protestant Dissenters, and was never weary of speaking well of Mr. Harley, Mr. Harcourt, and Mr. St. John, all like himself, Champions and Pillars of the Church. On the 12th of June, Sir William Boughton gave him a Dinner, and the Lord Craven, the Lord Willoughby, &c. gave him their Company. Some Days after he journey'd towards Salatin, the Benefice given him by 'Squire Lloyd of Shropshire. Within a Mile of Wrexham he was met by near two thousand Welsh Gentry, as well on Horseback as on Foot, who convey'd him to the House of Mr. Geo. Shakerley, whose Name has a Claim to Immortality, by his making a Bed for him one Night. Being invited to Shrewsbury, he was met at Momford-Bridge, by several 'Squires of Salop, as Mr. Owen, Mr. Cresset, Mr. Creswel, Mr. Kynaston, Mr. Mitton, and some Thousands of the High-Church, on the Keffils off the Mountains. From Salop he went to Codover, where Mr. Owen receiv'd him with the Slaughter of half a Hecatomb of one kind or another. At Bridgnorth, says the Annalist, he could not fail of making

*A.D.*1710

Sacheverel's Progress.

Persons who had the Honour to entertain him.

A.D.1710 king a moſt pompous Entry; Mr. R. Creſwell, a rakiſh Youth, and a profeſs'd Jacobite, who deſign'd to ſtand for Member of Parliament for that Place, having ſent a circular Letter to the Rectors, Vicars, and Curates round about the Country, and to others who were Well-wiſhers to the Doctor's Principles, to favour him with their Company at Dinner. According to this Invitation, moſt of the neighbouring Clergy and Sportſmen repair'd to Bridgenorth; ſo that when Dr. Sacheverel came near the Town, he was met by the junior Creſwell, riding before 3 or 4,000 of the choiceſt Spirits under the Reeking, beſides 2 or 3,000 that could not get Horſes, and footed it in the Proceſſion; moſt of them with Knots that had been white, with Tinſel-Edging, and Lacker'd-Laurel in their Bonnets, in Token of the Doctor's, and High-Church's Triumph over the Revolution and the Miniſtry. The Annaliſt affirms, That the two Steeples in Bridgnorth had no leſs than 50 Pounds Worth of Flags and Colours upon them, which were enough for a Fleet of Colliers, and would have been more religiouſly employ'd. Upon an Invitation to Ludlow, he repair'd thither the 7th of July, and was met not only by Welſh Gentlemen, and the like, but by Drummers, Trumpeters, and Harpers, and the Tintamar was ſo great, that the Huzzas of the Rabble could hardly be heard for it. Great Care muſt be taken to prevent People's making a wrong Judgment on this Occaſion, by imputing the Madneſs of the Multitude to the whole Body of the Church, or, indeed, High-Church itſelf: For as the Annaliſt ſays, His Triumph gave no ſmall Offence even to the ſober Part of his own Party. What could be more ſhocking to modeſt reaſonable Men, than to ſee a Clergyman, who had the Misfortune to be found guilty of high Crimes and Miſdemeanors, and who ſtill lay under the Cenſure of the higheſt Court of Judicature in Great-Britain, daring the Juſtice of the Nation, and drawing ſuch Herds of the unthinking Populace after him, who when they were thus got together, ſeldom parted without committing Riots and Outrages againſt their wiſer and honeſter Neighbours. The Doctor thinking he ſhould be receiv'd at Worceſter with as much Noiſe and Buſtle as in other Places, ſet out from Ludlow to make his Entry into that City; but being now come into a good cloathing Country, inhabited by Men of Underſtanding and Subſtance, he met with ſome Slights and Affronts, which ſtill whiten'd his lived Look, and gave a Check to his ſteady Impudence. His Mortification was moſt remarkable at Worceſter; the very learned and pious Dr. Lloyd, Biſhop of that Dioceſe, having given expreſs Orders to his Clergy not to pay him any Reſpect, and he was obey'd very punctually. The Mayor of that City gave alſo the like Orders to thoſe under his Juriſdiction, and the Doctor was forc'd to content himſelf there, with the Company and Shouts of a few Children, who every Day pay the ſame Reſpect to a Bear or a Monkey. The Infection ſpread itſelf among the Mob all over England; and while the People's Heads were hot, the Elections for a new Parliament came on, Mr. Harley and his Aſſociates having prevail'd with the Queen to diſſolve that which ſhe had ſo lately applauded and thank'd: But from this Period there was an Affectation of doing every thing contrary to what had been done by the beſt Parliaments, and beſt Miniſters, that had been known in this Nation, ſince the Death of Queen Elizabeth.

The Dr. in Diſgrace at Worceſter.

On the 14th of June, the Earl of Sunderland was remov'd from being Secretary of State, and the Lord Dartmouth put in his Place. The Well-affected were ſo ill-pleas'd with this Change, that the publick Credit ſunk upon it more than it had hitherto done, when the Fears of the People were ſtrongeſt upon Rumours of Invaſions and Rebellions. Read what was ſaid of it by a Writer at that Time: "The Directors of the Bank of Eng-
"land, looking upon the Removal of my Lord
"Sunderland ominous to Credit, repreſented to
"her Majeſty, by the Duke of Newcaſtle, that
"if any further Changes were made in the Mini-
"ſtry, publick Credit might be much injur'd."
But that weigh'd very little with thoſe who were not much concern'd in the Riſe or Fall of it, which was the Condition of the Harleys, Harcourts, and almoſt all thoſe that were ready to fill the Places that were to be made vacant for them. However, the Queen gave Leave to Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Governor of the Bank, Nathaniel Gould, Eſq; Deputy-Governor, Francis Eyles, Eſq; and Sir William Scawen, two of the Directors, to wait upon her; and, ſays the ſame Author, She aſſur'd them ſhe would make no further Changes. So it runs on all along to the End of this Reign; and we may aſſure ourſelves, that whenever any thing is ſaid in the moſt ſolemn Manner, the Reverſe of it will happen on the firſt Occaſion. Sa Reponſe fut aſſez favorable, mais ſa Conduite n'y repondit pas. Her Anſwer was favourable enough, ſays a French Hiſtorian, but her Conduct did not agree with it.

A.D.1710

Queen's Anſwer to the Bank.

The Queen ſaid farther, that When ſhe had Occaſion to make any Alteration in the Miniſtry, it ſhould be no Prejudice to the Bank, or the common Cauſe: But both the common Cauſe and the Bank being afterwards very much affected by it, Mr. Robert Harley wrote an Eſſay to prove there was no ſuch thing as Credit: It has neither Quantity nor Quality, ſaid he, has no Whereneſs or Whenneſs, Scite or Habit, but is the eſſential Shadow of ſomething that is not. This fine Genius is the Perſon pick'd out to be Succeſſor to the Earl of Godolphin in the Prime Miniſtry: Let us ſee a little more of his Ingenuity and Argumentation; We want a Pope in our Philoſophy, to be the infallible Judge of what is Reaſon; and he might well preach up the Infallibility of Reaſon, ſince it was a Guide which he and his Aſſociates had little Knowledge of, and leſs Diſpoſition to hearken to it.

High-Church, ſays the Annaliſt, was wonderfully pleas'd and elated upon the Removal of the Lord Sunderland; they extoll'd her Majeſty for aſſerting her Prerogative, and ſetting herſelf free from an Arbitrary Junto, that kept her in an inglorious Dependance on their Will and Caprice. For the carrying on the War, the recovering of Spain, and ſecuring the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and the Liberties of Europe, was with the Tories a mean Caprice. The Duke of Beaufort coming to Court about this Time, ſaid to her Majeſty, I am extreamly glad I can now ſalute you Queen; as if ſhe was not as much in Dependance on Mrs. Abigail Maſham, and Mr. Robert Harley, as ever ſhe had been on the Duke and Dutcheſs of Marlborough; and whether any thing could be more inglorious than the former, let the Reader determine.

The Queen's Allies, particularly the Emperor, and the States-General, could not but be alarm'd at the Advices they receiv'd from England; and being apprehenſive that the Duke of Marlborough would either be remov'd, or ſo diſguſted as to lay down his Command, Count Gallas, the Imperial Ambaſſador, and Mr. Vryberg, the Dutch

*A.D.*1710 Envoy, were directed in a moſt reſpectful Manner to repreſent to the Queen, what ill Influence the Changing of the Miniſtry might have on Affairs abroad. Count Gallas was told, he might aſſure the Emperor, "That whatever Changes "the Queen deſign'd to make, ſhe had reſolv'd "to continue the Duke of Marlborough in his "Employment; and deſir'd, that Prince Eu- "gene, and the other Imperial Generals and "Plenipotentiaries might act with him, with the "ſame Confidence as before." The Anſwer given to Mr. Vryberg, was favourable enough, imputing their Interpoſition to a Zeal for the Common Cauſe: But the Harleians made a terrible Noiſe at the Preſumption of the Dutch, in offering to intermeddle with the Queen's Domeſtick Affairs; though the Queen had herſelf intermeddled, juſt before, with the Emperor's, in deſiring him to appoint Prince Eugene to command in Spain; and again, in preſſing the Emperor, Time after Time, to deal more gently with his Proteſtant Subjects in Silefia.

The Allies alarm'd at the Queen's taking in Mr. Harley, &c.

Not many Days before the Lord Sunderland was remov'd, he receiv'd an Account from the Earl of Bradford, Lord-Lieutenant of Shropſhire, and the Grand-Jury at Shrewſbury, of great Riots and Diſturbances in that County, occaſion'd by Sacheverel's Infuſions into the Populace, when he was lately amongſt them: The Lord Sunderland laid the Letter before the Queen, who could not well avoid ſhewing her Diſlike of ſuch tumultuous Doings, notwithſtanding a Nonjuring Parſon was a main Promoter of them. The Humour of Addreſſing was reviv'd after the Condemnation of Sacheverel, and the Stile made Uſe of was an Imitation of that of the Addreſſes to King Charles, and King James II, preparatory to the Murders of my Lord Ruſſel, Alderman Corniſh, and others. High-Church in Shropſhire were handing about ſuch an Addreſs, againſt Revolution-Principles, the Toleration, &c. and for Hereditary, Unalienable Right, other Names for the Pretender. The Earl of Sunderland was authoriz'd to write back to the Earl of Bradford, that her Majeſty was highly diſpleas'd at theſe riotous and ſeditious Proceedings, promoted by Papiſts, Nonjurors, and other Perſons diſaffected to the Government, and of dangerous Principles; and that ſhe accepted the Earl's, and the Gentlemen of the Grand-Jury's Information, as a Mark of their Loyalty and Zeal for her Perſon and Government, of which ſhe deſir'd the Continuance, in going on to ſuppreſs ſuch Practices, by which the publick Peace was broken, and which tended to nothing leſs than the total Subverſion of of our preſent happy Conſtitution; and that it was her Majeſty's Pleaſure, they ſhould effectually proſecute the Offenders, with the utmoſt Rigour of the Law, as Damaree and Purchaſe, who ſeem'd to be try'd and condemn'd, purely that they might be pardon'd. The Earl of Sunderland was offer'd a Penſion of 3000 l. a Year, to make amends for the Loſs of his Place; but he generouſly anſwer'd, If I cannot have the Honour of ſerving my Country, I will not plunder it.

Queen's Letter about the Shropſhire Riots.

Earl of Sunderland's Saying, when he refus'd a Penſion.

As to the before-mentioned Addreſſes, we have a juſt and lively Idea of them in Mr. Maynwaring's third Letter to a Friend in North-Britain: "Addreſſes were put forward round the King- "dom, made up of the groſſeſt Contradi- "ctions that were ever ſeen in Print: But as "before Sacheverel's Tryal, Inſtructions were "given to their Clergy, what Doctrines they "were to preach, in which their true Senſe, "and Purpoſe was cover'd, as I have already "ſhewn; ſo now there was a Cue given, and "ſome Copies, or Patterns of Addreſſes were ſent "down to the more dark and ignorant Parts of "the Land, ſuch as Wales, Somerſetſhire, &c. in "which Addreſſes there was a ſecret Meaning, "different from that which was expreſt, and "the Poiſon of one Part was conceal'd un- "der the ſeeming fair Profeſſions of the other: "But to Countries more enlightned, where "they could rely on the Zeal and Abilities of "truſty Friends for performing ſo great a Ser- "vice, they only tranſmitted ſome particular "Heads to work upon, ſuch as Hereditary "Right, and the Hanover Succeſſion, two To- "picks that ſtand mighty well together! Pri- "mitive Apoſtolical Doctrines, and Indulgence to "tender Conſciences, a Zeal for Paſſive Obedi- "ence, and Deteſtation of Reſiſtance: A great "Rage againſt Deiſts, Socinians, and Republi- "cans: A doating Fondneſs for a new Parliament. "But, continues Mr. Maynwaring, who would "argue with ſuch Men as theſe, who have con- "founded the very Names of Perſons and Things? "And therefore it is not ſtrange to find thoſe that "are for the uninterrupted Succeſſion, to declare "their Zeal for the Houſe of Hanover, and the "old, riveted, inveterate Preſbyterians of Radnor, "promiſe to chuſe conſtant Communicants." "This Radnor Addreſs was preſented by Mr. Robert Harley; and, on the Baſis of theſe moſt groſs Contradictions, theſe Defiances of Truth, and theſe Inſults upon common Senſe, and common Modeſty, did that worthy Gentleman build the noble Structure of his Miniſtry. On Tueſday, Auguſt the 8th, her Majeſty ſent the Duke of Somerſet, to demand of the Earl of Godolphin, the Staff of Ld. High-Treaſurer. Mr. Maynwaring, juſt mention'd, was much eſteem'd by his Grace the Duke of Somerſet, as well as by the Earl of Godolphin; and perceiving ſome Coldneſs between theſe two great Lords, he labour'd, with all his Might, to reconcile them; he went daily from the one to the other, to prevent a Rupture; and had he ſucceeded, a great Part of the Miſchiefs that follow'd, upon the Removal of the Lord Godolphin from the Treaſury, might have been prevented; for Mr. Harley, notwithſtanding he was ſo well ſupported, as we ſhall ſee preſently, could not have gain'd Ground, had theſe two illuſtrious Perſons, in Conjunction, maintain'd it againſt him.

Mr. Maynwaring's Account of the Tory Addreſſes.

*A.D.*1710

Mr. Rob. Harley's Addreſs.

The next Day after the Staff was taken from the Earl of Godolphin, it was declar'd, That the Queen had appointed Robert Harley, Eſq; Henry Paget, Eſq; Sir Thomas Manſel, and Robert Benſon, Eſq; for Commiſſioners for executing the Office of Lord High-Treaſurer; and to ſoften Things a little, Sir Richard Onſlow, Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, was made a Privy-Counſellor, and the Lord High-Chancellor Cowper, Lord-Lieutenant of the County of Hertford: Mr. Robert Harley being made Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the room of John Smith, Eſq; the latter had Compenſation, by a Teller's Place in the Exchequer. Indeed it was generally reported, and believ'd, that Mr. Harley, knowing what a ſmall Number of Men there was in his Party, who had Heads fit for Buſineſs, was deſirous to have had the Lord-Chancellor ſtill kept in his Station, and even the Lord Wharton in the Lieutenancy of Ireland; nay, that moſt of the Whigs, who were employ'd in the Adminiſtration, ſhould have continu'd in it, and the Duke of Marlborough in the Command of the Army; provided he, and thoſe that were engag'd with him in the Cabal againſt the Miniſtry, were taken in upon

New Commiſſioners of the Treaſury.

A.D.1710 upon their own Terms: but the Whigs knew them too well to truſt to them, or to expect any Good would ariſe out of whatever they were concern'd in. The French Hiſtorian writes, Soit que les Whigs dedagnaſſent de ſe confondre avec de gens dont ils croyoient les Principes dangereux; ſoit que les Toris ne ſe cruſſent pas en ſureté juſqu' à ce que leurs antagoniſtes euſſent entierement quitté le Champ de Bataille; ce Projét s'evanouit.

Whigs refuſe to act with Tories.

" Whether it was becauſe the Whigs ſcorn'd to be " confounded with People whoſe Principles they " believ'd to be dangerous, or the Tories did not " think themſelves ſafe as long as their Antago- " niſts kept the Field of Battle, this Project " came to nothing; the Earl of Nottingham, " who had all along been taken for one of the " Higheſt of High-Church, was ſo far from " falling in with the Meaſures of theſe new Ma- " nagers, that, on the contrary, he oppoſed them " in every thing: Some thought, he expected to " have the offer of one of the moſt conſidera- " ble Employments, and was diſguſted at the " Diſappointment; Mr. Harley having ſtood in his " Way, out of Jealouſy of his great Ability and " Experience, in both of which himſelf came ſhort " of him. But others ſaid, the Earl foreſaw what " mad Work they would make of it, and re- " ſolv'd, therefore, to have nothing to do with " them"

Mr. de Ciſe, p. 295.

Earl of Nottingham will have nothing to do with Mr. R. Harley.

Earl Rivers was ſent to the Court of Hanover, to prevent Umbrage being taken there at the Changes in England, which were viſibly in favour of the Enemies to the Proteſtant Succeſſion; tho' all that gave into Mr. Harley's Meaſures, did it not with a Deſign to promote the Intereſt of the Pretender; but what could that Illuſtrious Family think, when they heard all at once, that Changes in Employments.

The Earl of Angelſey was made Vice-Treaſurer of Ireland, in the room of Lord Coningſby.

Henry St. John, Eſq; Secretary of State, in the room of Henry Boyle, Eſq;

The Earl of Rocheſter, Preſident of the Council, in the room of the Lord Somers.

Pray obſerve what a Change here is:

Sir Simon Harcourt Lord-Keeper, in the room of the Lord-Chancellor Cowper.

The Duke of Buckinghamſhire, Lord-Steward of the Houſhold, in the room of the Duke of Devonſhire.

George Granville, Eſq; Secretary of War, in the room of Robert Walpole, Eſq;

Arthur Moor, Eſq; ſays the Annaliſt, " A " Perſon of as mean Capacity as Extraction, was " made one of the Lords Commiſſioners of Trade " and Plantations; but what rais'd ſtrange Jea- " louſies among the Well-affected to the Hanover " Succeſſion was, to ſee the Duke of Hamilton, " an open Stickler for the Pretender, brought in- " to play, and firſt made Lord-Lieutenant of the " County of Lancaſter." After which, if every one of the new Managers had taken the Sacramental Teſt, as Evidence of their good Intentions to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, there was not an honeſt and reaſonable Man in Europe, who knew any thing of the Matter, that would have given the leaſt Credit to it.

The Duke of Ormonde was appointed Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, in the room of the Earl of Wharton.

John Robinſon, D. D. who had formerly been the Engliſh Reſident at Stockholm, was made Biſhop of Briſtol, and Dr. Byſſe, Biſhop of St. David's, that Church-Promotions might tally with thoſe of the State. Lord Windſor was made a Lieutenant-General; General Webb Governor of the Iſle of Wight; Earl of Portmore, Commander in Chief of the Forces in Portugal, in the room of the Earl of Galway; the Lieutenancy of the City of London was alter'd. " The new " Commiſſion, ſays the Annaliſt, was chiefly " deſign'd both to prevent Sir Gilbert Heathcote, " an Alderman near the Chair, and Governor of " the Bank of England, who had given Offence " to the Court by his Application to the Queen, " in favour of the late Miniſtry, being choſen " Lord-Mayor, and to ſtrengthen the Intereſt " of the Church-Party in the Election of Par- " liament-Men for the Capital City." This " Lieutenancy immediately got an Addreſs " ready, to congratulate the Queen on the flouriſhing Condition of her Affairs, ſince they were put into good Church-Hands; and the Queen complimented them, with telling them, They were Men of great Fortunes; and ſhe deſir'd they would uſe their Endeavours to ſupport the publick Credit; which was no more in their Power, than as Lord Haverſham ſaid, to ſtop the Tide with their Thumbs: For Stocks of all Sorts ſunk ſo low, that thoſe who probably at firſt were not diſpleas'd with it, as it was a ſure Sign of the mean Opinion the money'd Men had of the new Managers, began to wiſh there was a Stop put to it; in order to which, Mr. Robert Harley made Mr. John Lambert, a French Refugee, Remitter, in the room of Sir Henry Furneſe, whoſe Credit Abroad was ſo well eſtabliſh'd, that if the Government wanted 100,000 l. in any Part of Europe, he could have drawn or procur'd Bills for it in a Poſt or two.

A.D.1710 Lieutenancy of London alter'd.

I am well enough appriz'd of the Duty incumbent on all Subjects in England, to take the Senſe of the Nation in that of the Repreſentative; but one cannot part with that Underſtanding one has, ſo far, as not to diſtinguiſh between a free Senſe, and a forc'd Senſe; and if there was, or can be, ſuch a Senſe as the latter in ſuch an Aſſembly, it was that of the next Parliament, choſen under the Influence of Mr. Harley's Intrigues, and Sacheverel's Mobs. 'Tis not enough that I myſelf knew theſe things to be true by an hundred ſcandalous Inſtances, and one particularly, where an indigent Pettifogger was put up for a Borough in Cornwal; and when the Fellow was requir'd to give an Account of his Qualification, as to the 300 l. a Year, he fix'd it at the Playhouſe in Drury-Lane, where he had a weekly Allowance. But he was a Tool of St. John's, and very zealous for the Church in the worſt Interpretation ſo good a Word will bear. The unwarrantable Practices in the enſuing Elections were known and deteſted as well Abroad as at Home. Le nouveau Miniſtere ſe ſervit de toutes ſortes d' Artifices & de moyens violents pour avoir un Parlement à ſa Devotion. " The new Miniſters, ſays the French " Hiſtorian, made uſe of all Sorts of Artifices, " and violent Means, to get a Parliament at their " Devotion. This is certain, that the unbridled " Multitude ran about with Clubs in their Hands, " in thoſe Cities and Boroughs where the Ele- " ctions were made, and forc'd the greateſt Part " of the Electors to give their Votes for High- " Churchmen. The Seditious threatned to pull " down the Houſes of thoſe who voted other- " wiſe than they would have them, and in many " Places made their Threats good. A Crowd of " the Mutineers kept cloſe about thoſe that took " the Poll, to hinder the Electors coming to it, if " they were not on their Side. The new Mini- " ſters were charg'd with countenancing, and e- " ven with authorizing theſe violent and irregular " Proceedings;

Irregular Elections.

A.D. 1710

" Proceedings; they found their Account in it: " For as wicked as the Means us'd were, the Tories " had a great Majority in the Elections." The Annaliſt writes, " The Mob appear'd with un- " uſual Confidence, and, as it were, arm'd with " Authority at the Elections on the Side of the " Church and Monarchy, by which they meant no- " thing in the World but Perſecution and the Pre- " tender; and not only by reproachful Language, " but even by Blows, deterr'd thoſe who came " to vote contrary to the Idols they ſet up; inſo- " much, that if the Whigs had not on this Occa- " ſion practiſed, as well as profeſs'd, Moderation, " theſe new Elections might have ended in, what " was by many apprehended, a Civil War. The " Influence of the Mob was in a particular " Manner remarkable at the Election for Weſt- " minſter; where Mr. Medlicot, and Mr. Croſs, " being ſet up by the Church-Party, ſome of thoſe " who offer'd to give their Voices for their Com- " petitors, General Stanhope, and Sir Henry- " Dutton Colt, were knock'd down, and ſorely " wounded; which oblig'd many of their Party " to return Home without Polling; whereby the " Tories carry'd it, as they did in London, by the " Lord Mayor Garrard's bringing many Citizens " on the Livery, who were for their Purpoſe, tho' " not duly qualify'd." And by this Means was choſen one Caſs, ſo notorious a Jacobite, that he ſhelter'd Friend, who was afterwards hang'd, drawn, and quarter'd for High-Treaſon, in his Houſe. Sir Gilbert Heathcote, one of the Whig Candidates, next the Chair, and ſuperior in Fortune to all the Tory Candidates, except Hoare, coming out of Guildhall, was not only inſulted with reviling Language, but one of the High-Church Party ſpit in his Face: " An Af- " front, ſays my Author, which perhaps was never " offer'd in any civiliz'd Nation to a Perſon of his " Character, he being at that Time the Lord- " Mayor of London elect, and, as ſuch, one of " the moſt eminent Civil Magiſtrates in Chriſten- " dom."

Caſs choſen for London.

Sir Gilbert Heathcote inſulted by the Tory Mob;

It was neceſſary to ſhew what Methods the Harleians took to get Voices in the Elections, and conſequently what their Majority was compos'd of, becauſe, when afterwards they were afraid of the Juſtice of the Nation, they anſwer'd all the Charges that were brought againſt them with aſſerting, that the Senſe of it was on their Side.

And again when Lord Mayor.

Soon after the Election was over, Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Lord Mayor, was, according to Cuſtom, ſworn at the Exchequer in Weſtminſter; but the Pageantry, and ſome other Parts of the uſual Solemnity were omitted, his Lordſhip well knowing in what a Diſpoſition the Mob was towards him; and, indeed, ſome of the High-Church Rabble were ſo audacious as to inſult him in his Cavalcade. Their Brethren at Weſtminſter, as rudely treated Major-General Davenport, who was General Stanhope's Proxy at that Election; and that at the very Juncture when General Stanhope was taking Poſſeſſion of Madrid, the Capital of the Spaniſh Monarchy, for King Charles III. after his glorious Victories at Almenara and Saragoſſa. The Battle of Almenara was fought the 27th of July; and here the Earl of Rochfort, and Count Naſſau, two Lords of the Houſe of Naſſau, loſt their Lives, after they had by their Valour contributed much to the Victory. Three Weeks after the Battle of Saragoſſa was fought by General Stanhope, whoſe Victory made way for the March to Madrid, the News of the Victory was brought to the Queen by Colonel Harriſon, the 15th of September, O. S. at which General Stanhope inſulted by the High-Church Rabble.

A.D. 1710

Time the High-Church Rabble were pelting General Stanhope's Proxy, and knocking down his Friends at the Weſtminſter Election. However, for the Succeſſes in Spain, and for the taking of Doway, Bethune, and Aire, by the Duke of Marlborough in Flanders, there was a Thankſgiving-Day appointed, which the Queen ſolemniz'd in St. James's Chappel. To have gone as uſual to St. Paul's, and there to have had Te Deum ſung on that Occaſion, would have ſhewn too much Countenance to thoſe brave and victorious Engliſh Generals, who were fighting her Battles Abroad, while High-Church was plotting, and railing, and addreſſing againſt them at Home. The carrying of four Indian Caſaques about in the Queen's Coaches, was all the Triumph of the Harleian Adminiſtration; they were call'd Kings, and cloath'd by the Playhouſe Taylor, like other Kings of the Theatre; they were conducted to Audience by Sir Charles Cotterel; there was a Speech made for them, and nothing omitted to do Honour to theſe five Monarchs, whoſe Preſence did ſo much Honour to the new Miniſtry; which the latter ſeem'd to be extreamly fond of, and defray'd all their Expences during their Stay here: They were the Captains of the four Nations in League with the Engliſh at New-York and New-England, and came in Perſon to treat of Matters concerning Trade with the Lords Commiſſioners of Plantation; as alſo of an Enterprize againſt the French, and their Confederate Indians in thoſe Parts; but they came in an ill Time to have Succeſs in any Negotiations, either of Commerce or War, which the new Managers knew little of, and car'd as little for.

Four Indian Caſaques here.

The Misfortune which happen'd to General Stanhope at Brihuega, where he was ſurrounded by the French and Spaniſh Armies, and after a moſt gallant Defence, oblig'd to ſurrender himſelf with ſeveral Engliſh Battalions Priſoners of War, was ſome Relief to High-Church, who had not recover'd themſelves out of the Fright which that General's two late Victories had put them into: They did not ſtick to rejoice at it, ſays my Author, and whether he had ſaid it or not, I can witneſs to the Truth of it. From this Time to the End of the Reign, the Military Affairs are ſcarce worth remembering; and it would be well if the Civil could be forgotten, conſidering what Hands they were in: But ſince all Writers will not agree to make a Vacuum in Story of the Harleian Miniſters, it muſt be remember'd by us as well as others.

Mr. Secretary St. John had not been long in the Execution of his Office, before he gave Proofs of his Fitneſs for it, and particularly one very extraordinary one, being an Advertiſement he printed in the Gazzette, and put his very valuable Name to it; Whereas ſome evil-deſigning Perſons having unſcrew'd, and taken away ſeveral Iron Bolts out of the great Timbers of the Weſt Roof of the Catheral Church of St. Paul's, her Majeſty, for the better Diſcovery of the Offenders, was pleas'd to promiſe her moſt gracious Pardon, and a Reward of fifty Pounds, to any Perſon concern'd herein, who ſhould diſcover his Accomplices. Upon this Foundation did High-Church build a Plot againſt the Queen, and Mrs. Abigail Maſham, and affirm'd, that the Screws were taken away, that the Cathedral might tumble upon the Heads of the Court on the Thankſgiving-Day; when, ſays the Annaliſt, It was ſuppos'd her Majeſty would have gone thither; and many of the Tories, and the Emiſſaries of the new Miniſtry, were ready enough to charge it upon the Whigs; but upon Inquiry it appear'd, that the miſſing of the Iron Pins was owing

The Screw-Plot a Contrivance of St. John's.

A.D. 1710 owing to the Neglect of ſome Workmen, who thought the Timber ſufficiently faſten'd without them, as indeed they were; and the Fooliſhneſs, as well as Malice, of this Advertiſement, made People more merry than angry.

Tho' we have mention'd the Duke of Ormonde's being made Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, in the room of the Earl of Wharton, yet it is requiſite to mention alſo what was done by the Earl before he left that Kingdom. He arriv'd there the 7th of May, and open'd the Seſſion of Parliament the 19th, with a Speech to both Houſes, which has not the ſame Force of his former Speeches, being weaken'd by the Influence of new Councils. After having mention'd ſomething relating to the Government of Ireland, he added;

Earl of Wharton's Speech to the Parliament of Scotland.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I Have one thing more in Command to recommend to you, which is that Union among yourſelves, which her Majeſty hath ſo much at Heart, and hath ſo often put you in mind of. There wants nothing but this to make you very happy, and very ſecure. The eſtabliſh'd Church can't but be moſt flouriſhing and ſafe under the Influence of her Majeſty, who, through the whole Courſe of her Life, hath been the brighteſt Ornament of that Holy Religion which ſhe profeſſes: And our civil Rights and Liberties muſt be ſecure under a Queen, who, from the Beginning of her Reign, to this Day, hath ſo glorioufly eſpous'd and vindicated, not only the Rights of her own People, but the Liberties of all Europe. This ſhould prevail with us all to have no other Diſputes among us, but to ſtrive who ſhall ſhew moſt Duty and Loyalty towards her Majeſty, and moſt Zeal for the Support of the Proteſtant Intereſt, and Proteſtant Succeſſion.

No Complacency could have prevail'd on the the Lord Wharton to have omitted the laſt two Articles, the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and the Proteſtant Intereſt, which came ſo coldly from the Mouths of the Chief Governors of Ireland after him.

The Houſe of Commons ſaid in their Anſwer,

The Commons Addreſs.

YOUR Excellency's eminent Zeal for her Majeſty's Service and Government; your gracious Concern for our happy Eſtabliſhment in Church and State; your diſintereſted Regard to the Rights and Liberties, even of the leaſt Subject; and your particular Care of the Intereſt and Welfare of her Majeſty's faithful Subjects of this Kingdom, create in us a juſt and grateful Senſe of her Majeſty's Royal Care, and of her Goodneſs towards us, in giving us this Opportunity of meeting again, under your Excellency's Adminiſtration, to conſider of, and provide what may be yet neceſſary for our Happineſs and Security.

Alan Broderick, Eſq; Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, being made Lord Chief-Juſtice of Ireland, by Procurement of the Earl of Wharton, his Excellency recommended John Forſter, Eſq; Recorder of Dublin, to be choſen Speaker. The Houſe order'd Thanks to the Lord Chief-Juſtice Broderick for his faithful and eminent Services, and the Lord Moor to acquaint him with it: But a Year after, when Sir C. Phipps, &c. had got the Government into their Hands, one of the firſt Things they did, was to remove the Lord Chief-Juſtice Broderick from the Queen's-Bench, his meriting the Thanks of the Commons being ſufficient to ruin him with them. The Earl of Wharton ſwore ſeveral new Privy-Counſellors, as the Earl of Kildare, the Earl of Meath, the Viſcount Mountjoy, Viſcount Caſtlecomer, Sir Thomas Southwell, Major-General Guſtavus Hamilton, William Connolly, Eſq; Theophilus Butler, Eſq; and Philip Savage, Eſq; A.D. 1710

The Tories deface the Statue of King William.

On Sunday, the 25th of June, at Night, the Tories very much defac'd the Statue of King William, out of ſpite to the preſent Government, which paid ſo profound a Reſpect to his glorious Memory. This Statue was erected by the City of Dublin, after the Battle of the Boyne, and theſe Ruffians twiſted the Sword it had in one Hand, wreſted the Truncheon out of the other, daub'd the Face with Dirt, and offer'd it other ſuch Indignities. The Houſe of Lords, upon Information of this Inſolence, came to this unanimous Reſolution.

The Lords Reſolve upon it.

That all Perſons concern'd in that barbarous Fact, are guilty of the greateſt Inſolence, Baſeneſs, and Ingratitude; and deſir'd his Excellency the Lord-Lieutenant, to iſſue out a Proclamation, to diſcover the Author of this Villainy, with a Reward to the Diſcoverer, which his Excellency with great Readineſs iſſu'd accordingly.

The Addreſs of the Houſe of Commons in Ireland on this Occaſion, and at a Time when it was become too faſhionable at Court to ſpeak ſlightingly of King William and the Revolution, was ſo hearty and reaſonable, that it ought to have been an Example to the like Aſſembly in England. I abhor all national Reflections, which are equally unjuſt and barbarous; and were it true that the original Iriſh are more given to Bulls than other People, it does not affect the Engliſh in Ireland any more than the Brogue of Lancaſhire affects the Language at St. James's. But at this Time it was a common Toaſt among the Well-affected in England, An Iriſh Underſtanding to the Engliſh Parliament; which, tho' it ſeem'd to have the Turn of a Joke, was meant really, and founded on the Addreſs which follows:

May it pleaſe your Excellency,

The Commons hearty Addreſs againſt that villainous Act.

WE cannot better expreſs the Pleaſure we receiv'd from the early Care and Endeavours us'd by your Excellency, to diſcover, and bring to Puniſhment thoſe inſolent Miſcreants, who ſince our late Adjournment, have with equal Malice and Baſeneſs, inſulted and defac'd the Statue of his late Majeſty King William III. of glorious Memory, than by owning it in the moſt publick Manner, as an Inſtance of your Excellency's Gratitude to the Memory of that great Prince, and of your Vigilance and Concern for our Preſervation from the Enemies of our Peace and happy Eſtabliſhment, who envy our late glorious Sovereign the Honour of a Statue, erected as a Teſtimony how much was owing to our Deliverer from Popery and Slavery.

His Memory muſt ever be dear to all Men, except thoſe who deſire to bring our Religion, Lives, and Properties into the ſame Dangers from which his Courage and Conduct ſo bravely and ſeaſonably reſcu'd us. And ſuch we unanimouſly declare all thoſe to be, who, on any Pretence whatſoever, endeavour to reflect on the Juſtice of the late happy Revolution, the Memory of God's great Inſtrument in effecting it, or the neceſſary Means made uſe of in bringing it about. Had their impotent Rancour and Malice fully accompliſh'd their Deſign, by entirely demoliſhing and deſtroying that Monument of our Gratitude; yet, are we perſuaded, his glorious Name would always be diſtinguiſh'd with Honour, and continu'd dear to a People deliver'd, by him, from Popiſh Superſtition, and French Slavery; and to whoſe Reign we are indebted for

2

A.D. 1710 those inestimable Laws, which exclude all Popish Successors, and settle the Crown upon our most gracious Queen, and the Heirs of her Body, being Protestants; and, for want of such Issue, on the most illustrious House of HANOVER: So that if we have any true Regard for her Majesty's Title, for our most holy Religion, or for our civil Liberties, we cannot sufficiently acknowledge your Excellency's most generous Care, to detect so base and barbarous a Fact; nor omit any Opportunity of expressing our Detestation of those, whose repeated Indignities, offer'd to the Memory of our great Deliverer, are sufficient Indications of their being Enemies to our happy Constitution in Church and State, and of their Affection to the Pretender.

His Excellency's Answer.

Gentlemen,

Earl of Wharton's Answer. I Am very well pleas'd that my Endeavours for the Discovery of this villainous Attempt have been pleasing to you: I had been the most ungrateful of all Men living, had I not done what lay in me to that End; and I am sure that neither you, nor I, nor any good Protestant, can do enough to shew the eternal Value that we retain for the Memory of that Great Prince.

The Statue repair'd by the City of Dublin. The City of Dublin caus'd the Statue to be repair'd, and a new Truncheon to be put into its Hand; the twenty-four Companies of the City attending the Solemnity: For which the House of Commons, Nemine Contradicente, RESOLV'D,

The Commons thank them. " That the Thanks of this House be given to the " Lord-Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons, and Citi- " zens of the City of Dublin, who erected the " Statue in Honour of King William, of glorious " Memory, for their great Zeal and Care in re- " pairing that noble Monument of their Grati- " tude to our late Deliverer from Popery, Slavery, " and French Power, and supporting the Honour " and Memory of that great Prince.

New Parliament in England. On the 25th of November the new Parliament met at Westminster; and Sacheverel having no more to do in the Country, gave over riding about it, and repair'd to London, to receive the Reward of his Pains and Labours in the Elections, and other High-Church Services. The naming John Smith, Esq; to be Speaker of this Parliament, was rather a Slur than a Compliment, there not being a Man in that House so fit for their Chair as William Bromley, Esq; still Representative for the University of Oxford, who could not but have Heart-Burnings for the Usage their Decree lately met with; and consequently would be sure to give as little Quarter to the Whigs as possible. The Speaker being chosen and approv'd, the Queen made a Speech as usual, but not with that Acceptation as usual; for none but the Harleians could be pleas'd with an Air of Mystery, instead of the Frankness and Cordiality of former Speeches. She told them, " She call'd them to " shew the Confidence she plac'd in the Duty " and Affection of her Subjects; and she met " them there with the greatest Satisfaction, ha- " ving no Reason to doubt, but that she should " find such Returns as would add new Life to our " Friends, and entirely disappoint the Hopes of " our Enemies."

Mr. Wm. Bromley chosen Speaker.

I know very well that whatever comes from the Throne is Sacred, and I therefore forbear making any farther Remarks than, that if by Friends were to be understood Allies; if by Enemies, the French; this is one of the Passages in this, and the succeeding Annals of this Reign, which are to be read backward; but I shall forbear, and only observe, that after a particular Recommendation of the War in Spain, and Supplies for the next Year's Occasions, it was said; A.D. 1710

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Q's. Speech. " The Eyes both of Friends and Enemies are " upon you; the Way to give Spirit to the one, " and to defeat the restless Nature of the other, " is to proceed in such Manner as becomes a " British Parliament.

" I shall, in the plainest Words, tell you my " Intentions, and I do this with the greater Sa- " tisfaction, because I depend upon their being " agreeable to you; I am resolv'd to support and " encourage the Church of England, as by Law " establish'd:

" To preserve the British Constitution, accord- " ing to the Union: And,

" To maintain the Indulgence by Law allow'd " to scrupulous Consciences.

" And, that all these may be transmitted to " Posterity, I shall employ none but such as are " heartily for the Protestant Succession in the " House of Hanover, the Interest of which Fa- " mily no Person can be more truly concern'd " for than myself."

How this Speech was made good. No Body questions but Mr. Harley inspir'd the Sentiments of this Speech, tho' the Style is too good to be his; and every Particular of these short Paragraphs, except that about the Church, were thus made good by the Facts.

As to the Union, it was nearly affected in one of its most Fundamental and Essential Articles, by the Patronage Bill, according to the Representation of Mr. William Carstairs, Mr. Thomas Blackwell, and Mr. Robert Baillie, deputed by the Church of Scotland to oppose its passing.

The Indulgence to scrupulous Consciences was certainly not supported and encourag'd by the Schism and Occasional Bills:

Nor the Interest of the illustrous House of Hanover, by employing the Earl of Mar, the Duke of Hamilton, the Lord North and Grey, the Earl of Orrery, Bishop Atterbury, Viscount Bolingbroke, Earl Marischal, &c. every one of which were well known to be not at all concern'd for the Interest of that Serene Family, and most of them were attainted for High-Treason against it 5 or 6 Years after.

The Lords and Commons Addresses were suited to the Queen's Speech, only the Commons began to be out of Humour with the Confederates for exerting themselves so much as they did in the Common Cause, and clos'd their Address, with representing, among other Things, That the most effectual Way to give Spirit to her Friends, and defeat the restless Nature of her Enemies, would be to discountenance these Principles and Measures, that have lately threatned her Crown and Dignity, which, when ever they prevail, will prove fatal to our whole Constitution both in Church and State. So, here it begins: Here are Revolution-Principles, and the Prosecution of Sacheverel, roundly asserted to be destructive to our whole Constitution, which, by the way, has no other Foundation, and to Church and State, which were sav'd, and are preserv'd by them. Such a Declaration, quite contrary to all that the last Parliament had been Saying and Doing; cou'd not, as the Annalist observes, " but keep, the " Whigs still uneasy, whilst the Doctrine of ab- " solute Passive-Obedience, and Hereditary Right, " altogether inconsistent with the late Revolution, " and

The Commons against the Revolution, and for the Doctor.

Jacobitism countenanced.

A.D.1710

" and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, were openly " countenanc'd. The Speech and Addreſs had " therefore no manner of Effect in Relation to " the Publick Funds, which continued tumbling " in Proportion as High-Church roſe in Credit " at Court." And truly that Party, either apprehending that the rotten Bottom they were upon would not long bear their Superſtructure, or that the Queen's Life was not very promiſing for the Accompliſhment of their Projects, tending all to piece up broken Fortunes, or raiſe new ones, were equally raſh and precipitate in their Meaſures. The Earl of Scarborough making a Motion in the Houſe of Peers for returning Thanks to the Duke of Marlborough, ſome Objections were made to it, even tho' a Day of General Thankſgiving had been ſo lately ſolemniz'd for his eminent Services the laſt Campaign. His Grace's Friends cou'd not but be ſurpriz'd at ſuch an Oppoſition, and there was too much Delicacy in the Affair to pretend to think any more of it afterwards. The next Day, Nov. 29. a Complaint was made by the Earl of Rocheſter, againſt Sir Simon Harcourt, Lord-Keeper, for taking upon him to introduce the Scotch Lords to the Queen, himſelf being no Peer; but the late Lord-Chancellor Cowper maintaining he had a Right to do as he had done, no farther Notice was taken of it. The War in Spain, which by the Misfortune at Brihuega, had again ſhut up King Charles in the Province of Catalonia, notwithſtanding General Staremberg's Advantage of the Enemy in the Engagement at Villa Vicioſa, was now the Favourite, tho' it was become more impracticable than ever. The new Managers ſeem'd to do every thing in ſpite to their Predeceſſors; and becauſe the War in Flanders was as yet under the Management of the Duke of Marlborough, therefore will they have it remov'd to Spain; tho' it is to be ſuppos'd, that being come to a private Determination to have no War at all, in a very little while, they were not much concern'd about the carrying it on, either in Flanders or Spain; however, to make a Shew of the latter, the Earl of Peterborough was ſent to Vienna, to concert Meaſures for it with the Imperial Miniſters; Earl Rivers was appointed Miniſter and Plenipotentiary at Hanover, to ſatisfy that Court, that the Proteſtant Succeſſion was the Thing of the World which the Court of England had moſt at Heart. But the Earl had a hard Taſk of it; and when a hundred Addreſſes, virtually againſt it, had been graciouſly receiv'd, how cou'd he make out, that by Hereditary Right was meant that of the Houſe of Hanover? Lieutenant-General Cadogan was remov'd from his Embaſſy in Holland, and Mr. Richard Hill appointed to ſucceed him; but that Gentleman excuſing himſelf, on Account of Indiſpoſition, the Earl of Orrery ſupply'd his Place. Information being given the Miniſter in England, by a Man of HONOUR, as no doubt he call'd himſelf, having himſelf a Command in the Army, That Lieutenant-General Meredith, Major-General Maccartney, and Brigadier Honeywood, drank Damnation and Confuſion to the new Miniſtry, and to thoſe that had any Hand in turning out the Old, Mr. George Granville, Secretary at War, was immediately order'd to ſignify to them, That the Queen had no farther Occaſion for their Service. There's no ſoftning ſuch a Toaſt, if it had been true; but ſome Officers who came then from Flanders, avow'd, that theſe Generals only drank a Health to the Duke of Marlborough, and Confuſion to all his Enemies; and what good Briton was not ready to pledge them, if the Confuſion was only meant to their Devices, which in Charity ought to have been ſuppos'd, whether the Informer ſpoke Truth or not? Lieutenant-General Meredith was turn'd out of the Government of Tinmouth-Fort, and the Place of Gentleman of the Horſe; the former was given to the Earl of Hertford, the latter to Coniers D'arcy, Eſq; Brother to the Earl of Holderneſs; the only two Places, ſince the Harleians were taken in, which had not a Change for the worſe. The Duke of Beaufort, the Duke of Hamilton, the Earl of Abingdon, and the Earl of Orrery, were ſworn of the Privy-Council: And Paul Methuen, and George Dodington, Eſqrs. were oblig'd to make Room at the Board of Admiralty for Mr. Geo. Clarke, Fellow of All-Souls College, Oxon, and Sir James Wiſheart, who diſtinguiſh'd himſelf afterwards by bullying the Catalans into a Submiſſion to the French. The Earl of Wharton was remov'd from the Office of Juſtice in Eyre, to make room for the Earl of Abingdon: And Mr. Conſtantine Phipps, one of Sacheverel's Advocates, made a Knight and Lord Chancellor of Ireland, about the ſame Time, the Middle of December. On the 28th of that Month the Duke of Marlborough arriv'd at London; and, to avoid the Acclamations of the People, inſtead of going directly to St. James's, bid his Coachman drive directly to Montagu-Houſe; where, having reſted an Hour, he went out by a private Door to wait on her Majeſty, who receiv'd him very graciouſly. The next Morning his Grace aſſiſted at a Committee of Council; and that and the following Days receiv'd the Viſits of the Earl of Rocheſter, Preſident of the Council; Earl Pawlet, Firſt Commiſſioner of the Treaſury; the Secretaries of State, &c. His Grace, who knew well how to receive and return their Compliments, gave no Occaſion by it to any Surmiſes as to his future Conduct: He had, upon his Departure from Holland, promis'd the States General and Prince Eugene not to abandon the Common Cauſe; and therefore, concealing his Reſentment, he concerted Meaſures with the new Miniſtry as he had done with the old, tho' without Confidence in them; wiſely conſidering, that the preſerving his Command in Flanders, was the moſt effectual Means to maintain his Credit Abroad, and to preſerve what he had left at Home. He deliver'd into her Majeſty's Hands, his Dutcheſs's Key, as Groom of the Stole, which was given to the Dutcheſs of Somerſet; and the Queen was ſo pleas'd with his Grace's Acquieſcence in the preſent Councils, that ſhe not only renew'd his Commiſſion, but made him eaſy in his Command, by a Diſpoſition of the other Generals. The Duke of Argyle was made General of the Army in Spain, which was thought to be the more agreeable to the Duke of Marlborough, for that there had lately been no very good Underſtanding between their Graces. Mrs. Maſham was made Privy-Purſe to the Queen, in the Diſcharge of which Office the Dutcheſs of Marlborough had behav'd with ſuch Ability, Œconomy, and Fidelity, that Mr. R. Harley himſelf bore Teſtimony to it, by a very ſtrong Acknowledgment under his own Hand. Lieutenant-General Meredith's Regiment was given to the Earl of Orrery; Major-General Maccartney's to Col. Kane; and Brigadier Honeywood's to Col. Clayton.

The Earl of Orrery's Regiment of Foot was given to Major-General Sybourg.

The

High-Church ſinks the Credit of the Nation.

Earl of Scarborough's Motion for Thanks to the D. of Marlborough, not carry'd.

Earl of Rocheſter complains of Sir Simon Harcourt.

Lord Cowper defends him.

Earl Rivers ſent to Hanover.

The Secretary at War, Mr. Granville, order'd to diſmiſs three Generals, for drinking a Health.

A.D.1710

Paul Methuen and George Dodington, Eſqrs. remov'd.

Duke of Marlborough arrives at London.

His prudent Conduct.

*A.D.*1711

The Queen's Birth-Day, February the 6th, was this Year ſolemniz'd with extraordinary Pomp; but it was obſerv'd, the Duke of Marlborough did not appear at this Feſtival, having, with her Majeſty's Leave, ſet out four Days before for Blenheim-Houſe with the Marquis de Paſcal, Governor of Bruſſels, and Monſieur de Sciſſan, who had laſt Summer made a gallant, tho' unſucceſsful Attempt, againſt Port de Cette, in South-France, in order to aſſiſt the Cevennois, who were not yet quite ſuppreſs'd.

The Examiner, a Libel, ſet up by Mr. St. John, &c.

It will not be improper to take Notice, that in order to prepare the Way for this aſtoniſhing Change in the Miniſtry, the Harleians ſet up a weekly Libel, call'd the Examiner. The common Drudge for it was one Oldeſworth, an obſcure Perſon; but Meſſ. St. John, Swift, and Prior, were Fellow-Labourers in ſupporting it. Arthur Maynwaring, Eſq; Auditor of the Impreſt, and Member of ſeveral Parliaments for Preſton in Lancaſhire, was in the ſtricteſt Confidence with the Duke of Marlborough, the Earl of Godolphin, the Earl of Sunderland, and the late Miniſtry. Tho' he was not a Privy-Counſellor, his Ability, for Counſel, exceeded many that were; and few of the deepeſt Secrets of State were kept from him. I have myſelf known the Duke of Marlborough, and the Earl of Sunderland, to have been with him one after another, the ſame Morning, and to have Conference about the intended Change, which he diſcover'd the ſooneſt of any one of them, and often told them, They ſhould not flatter themſelves with an Imagination, that the Queen would hearken to Reaſon, and not ſhift her Hands, nor break the Parliament; for ſhe would hearken to Mrs. Abigail, and Mr. Harley, have a new Miniſtry, a new Parliament, and a Peace. Mr. Maynwaring was not only a Man of Buſineſs, well-ſkill'd in Politicks, and Figures; but a Man of Wit and Eloquence, and the moſt exact Critick of his Time. He had a very mean Opinion not only of Mr. St. John's Honeſty, but of his Capacity, where a ſolid Underſtanding was neceſſary; and, with very great Indignation, obſerv'd how he ſuffer'd the beſt Men in the Nation to be bely'd, an d vilify'd in his Libel.

Mr. Maynwaring's Saying to the old Miniſters.

There were ſeveral Perſons ſaid to be the Author of the Firſt Examiner, as Mr. Prior, Dr. Swift, Dr. Atterbury; but Mr. Maynwaring was inclin'd to think, Mr. Prior and Mr. St. John had the greateſt Hand in it; and us'd to expreſs the utmoſt Abhorrence of Prior's Ingratitude, who had been rais'd by the Whigs from being a Drawer at a Tavern, to be a Commiſſioner of Trade, and a Member of Parliament. He got into the Houſe of Commons by the Intereſt of the Earl of Dorſet, and had not ſate there a Year, before he deſerted the Party that had preferr'd him. As for Dr. Swift he would hardly ever deign to name him: He aſſur'd me more than once, that the Doctor offer'd his Service to the Earl of Godolphin, and would, for a Penſion, have written as much Falſhood and Scandal againſt the new Miniſters, as he did afterwards againſt the Old, if there had been Occaſion for it: But their Characters were ſuch, that he might have rioted in Satyr, and not have offended the Truth. Mr. Maynwaring told me, The Earl of Godolphin had the laſt Contempt for Pamphlets, and always deſpis'd the Preſs. He added, I have often blam'd it in him, and now he feels the Effects of it, when his exalted Reputation is levell'd with Infamy, in the odious Compariſons, made by the Examiner and his Brethren, of his Adminiſtration with his Succeſſors. He never doubted Mr. St. John's being a main Promoter of that deteſtable Libel. 'Twas not long after the publiſhing it, that a Letter came out, directed to the Author, containing Inſtructions how he ſhould behave himſelf, which Mr. Maynwaring doubted not was written by Mr. St. John, and he could not ſuffer ſo much Inſolence to paſs without Animadverſion. The Author of a Paper, call'd the Whig Examiner, undertook it by Direction from him, if he was not himſelf that Author: There is one Paſſage in it which touches Mr. Steel, afterwards Sir Richard, who then publiſh'd the Tatler, and had given Offence to the Tories, by ſome ſmart Strokes againſt Mr. Harley, and the other Leaders of that Faction. Mr. Steel was wont to ſtile himſelf the Cenſor of Great-Britain; upon which the Letter-Writer ſaid, He reſembled the famous Cenſor of Rome in nothing but eſpouſing the Cauſe of the Vanquiſh'd. To this Mr. Maynwaring reply'd, 'Tis juſt the ſame, as if one ſhould ſay, in regard to the many obſcure Truths, and ſecret Hiſtories that are brought to Light in his Letter, that the Author of theſe new Revelations reſembles the ancient Author of the Revevlations in nothing but venturing his Head; beſides that there would be no Ground for ſuch a Reſemblance, would not a Man be laugh'd at by every common Reader, ſhould he thus miſtake one St. John for another, and apply that to St. John the Evangeliſt, which relates to St. John the Baptiſt? It ſeems this Man had had very great Obligations to the Duke of Marlborough, by whoſe Procurement he obtain'd the Poſt of Secretary at War, and had a double Salary allow'd him; yet, notwithſtanding this, and other valuable Favours, did Mr. St. John, in that Letter, treat their Graces the Duke and Dutcheſs of Marlborough, as Plagues, Furies, &c.

*A.D.*1711

Mr. St. John's Reflection upon Mr. Steel.

Mr. Maynwaring's Remark.

Mr. St. John's Ingratitude to the D. of Marlborough.

I hope theſe Anecdotes will not be reckon'd an impertinent Digreſſion; ſince they explain Perſons and Things, which are the chief Subject of our Hiſtory.

Mr. Prior's Ingratitude.

Mr. Maynwaring's Opinion of Prior and Swift.

Lord Godolphin deſpiſes the Preſs.

About Michaelmas, 1710, Mr. Maynwaring ſent to ſpeak with me, at the Deſire of Sir Samuel Garth; he began with Complaints of the Villainy and Inſolence of the Examiner, ſaying, It did a World of Miſchief; he wiſh'd I would ſet up a Paper as an Antidote to that Poiſon; adding, I will aſſiſt you in it, not only with my Advice, but with my Pen; which he did in a very ample Manner. He ſaid, he queſtion'd not but Matthew Prior had a Hand in it as well as St. John; and that Dr. Swift made that Paper a Canal to convey his Malice and Reſentment into the World, my Lord Godolphin having rejected his mercenary Offer to write for the old Miniſtry before the Change. He told me, De Foe had great Obligations to the Lord-Treaſurer Godolphin, when he began to turn his Reviews againſt his generous Benefactor; and wrote his Lordſhip a Letter, that he did it in compliance with the Madneſs of the Times; and ſeem'd to fall in with thoſe who clamour'd againſt his Adminiſtration, only that he might get a Hearing in his Favour: Nay, this baſe Wretch took Money at the ſame time of the Lord Godolphin, who paid him half a Year's Penſion after he wrote againſt him, and of Mr. R. Harley, who ſent him to Scotland as a Spy, when the Treaty of Union was on foot, and kept him in Pay ever after, as a Man whoſe Conſcience was exactly of a Size with his own. The Paper propos'd by Mr. M—— being thus concerted, it was written, and publiſh'd a Week after, under the Title of the Medley, of which five-and-forty were written by Mr. Maynwaring, Sir Richard Steel, Anthony

Mr. Maynwaring's Diſcourſe with the Author.

Mr. R. Harley Patron to Mr. De Foe.

A.D.1711 Anthony Henley, Eſq; Biſhop Kennet, and myſelf, who had on my Hands the Main of the Labour, both in Writing and Publiſhing, and it anſwer'd the End. The Examiner was routed, and the Field of Battle yielded to the Medley, which was laid down the Week after, not being ſet up like the preſent Daily and Weekly Poſts, Journals, &c. for the Benefit of a Market only, but for the Benefit of the Cauſe eſpous'd by all good Britons.

Mr. Maynwaring's ſecret Hiſtory of the Change.

The Remainder of this ſecret Hiſtory relating only to myſelf, the Ingratitude of ſome, and the Diſintereſt of others, it deſerves not a Place here, as what follows does, tho' the Contents of one of the Medley's, becauſe it lets us into the Secret of the Change, and the Characters of the Perſons put out, and put in, better than any thing. For this Purpoſe Mr. Maynwaring made uſe of the Story of Galigai and Conchini in Vaſſor's Hiſtory of Lewis XIII. By the Duke de Sully he intended the Earl of Godolphin; by the Duke d' Epernon the Duke of Marlborough; by Du Vair the Lord Chancellor Cowper; by Mangot Sir Simon Harcourt; by Barbin Mr. R. Harley; by France England.

Earl of Godolphin.

His Enemies, ſays he, of the Duke Sully, Superintendant of the Finances of France, thought him too good a Manager of the publick Treaſure; and at laſt Experience ſhew'd, that his Removal prov'd the Ruin of the State; the Treaſures were drain'd; the Stores ſquander'd; and the Compariſon of the miſerable Condition of France ſoon after, to the flouriſhing Eſtate in which the Duke of Sully left it, too plainly demonſtrated how prejudical his Removal from Affairs was to the Kingdom.

Duke of Marlborough.

" The Duke of Epernon was too neceſſary to " be remov'd at that Juncture; but at laſt the " Queen began to have a ſtrange Diſtruſt of that " Duke, and to look upon him as an Enemy, " tho' he ſurmounted with Eaſe all the Difficul- " ties that her Enemies could occaſion to her Af- " fairs. He diſſembled as well as he could the " Mortification he was under for the Loſs of the " Queen's Favour; publick Marks of her Alte- " ration towards him fully convinc'd him that " his Diſgrace was reſolv'd upon. The Refuſal " of ſome Favours which the Duke had earneſtly " deſir'd for his Friends, had made him ſenſible " before that he was not ſo well approv'd of at " Court. The Duke had complain'd of this, and " the Queen not concern'd to manage him any long- " er, took that Occaſion of his Diſcontent to call " him no more to Council. That laſt Proof of " the Diſpleaſure, or at leaſt Indifference of the " Queen, was enough to mortify a Man that had " leſs Merit. He affected not to ſhew any Civility " to thoſe that he knew to be his Enemies, how " diſtinguiſh'd ſoever they were by their Birth, " their Rank, or their Credit. The Duke made " no Difficulty to provoke them more againſt " him; he thought it became him to revenge " himſelf for their ill Offices, by inſulting them " with a noble Contempt; he did not follow thoſe " ſhameful Maxims which teach Men to diſſemble " their Reſentments, and baſely to return Actions " of Grace for Injuries receiv'd: A ſtoical Inſenſi- " bility ſeem'd to him out of Seaſon, perſuaded, " as he was, that a due Concern for having loſt " the Fruit of his Services, was not unworthy a " a great Mind. When he took his Leave, the " Queen receiv'd his Complements with an af- " fected Coldneſs; but tho' a Treatment ſo little " deſerv'd, made him not loſe Reſpect, yet he " knew how, upon this Occaſion, to ſhew a juſt " Senſe of it, and to convince her Majeſty, in a " decent Manner, that ſhe would, perhaps, one " Day be under a Neceſſity of having again Re- " courſe to him." A.D.1711

Lord Cowper.

Du Vair, Keeper of the Seals, ſuffer'd his Diſgrace with a Greatneſs of Soul, which was not ſuſpected of Affectation: The World knew he had no ways ſought that eminent Dignity of the Robe; content to do Juſtice with an Integrity very rare in this corrupt Age; he had taken no Pains to eſtabliſh himſelf at Court, whither he had been call'd againſt his Will, and where he ſcorn'd to ſupport himſelf by Flattery, and baſe Complaiſance; but his Juſtice and Probity were not at all agreeable to thoſe that then govern'd the Kingdom; all good Perſons murmur'd that the Seals were given to Mangot, a Man of an ill Character; and that a Magiſtrate of extraordinary Reputation ſhould be diſgrac'd, in order to raiſe an unworthy Creature of Galigai's.

Mr. R. Harley.

" Barbin, who ſucceded the Duke de Sully in " the Treaſury, of a little Country Gentleman, " was made Comptroller of the Finances. He " and Mangot were buſy in forming Deſigns to " encreaſe their Power, to ruin the diverſe Cabals " that were form'd againſt them; and to eſtabliſh " their own Fortune, they reſolv'd to puſh " Things to an Extremity, and openly to attack " any Party that ſhould riſe againſt them. Barbin, " a bold enterprizing Man, thought he could " ſupport himſelf no other Way, and whenever " the Queen ſhew'd a Diſpoſition to follow right " Meaſures, the artificial Inſinuations of Bar- " bin ſoon turn'd her from that Reſolution, " which was but weakly taken."

After this he applies the following Remark of Vaſſor to Meſſ. Harley, St. John, Harcourt, &c. It is a miſerable Thing indeed, ſays Vaſſor, that ſuch People as theſe ſhould ever have it in their Power, by baſe Intrigues, and often by black Calumnies, to remove, and deprive of their Employments, thoſe that have uſefully ſerv'd their Country!

I doubt not enough has been ſaid, and that from the beſt Authority, to give the Reader a juſt Idea of the Merit of theſe Managers; ſo we proceed in their Management.

On the 2d of February, Mr. Secretary St. John deliver'd a Meſſage to the Commons from the Queen, " That there had been an Action in " Spain, very much to the Diſadvantage of King " Charles's Affairs, which having fallen particu- " larly on the Britiſh Forces, the Queen had im- " mediately given Directions for ſending and pro- " curing Troops to repair this Loſs." Occaſion was taken from hence, by the Managers, to cauſe an Inquiry to be made into the Affairs of Spain, and, ſays the Annaliſt, " At the ſame Time to " give the Duke of Marlborough a Side-Wind " Mortification, by calling the Earl of Galway " to an Account, and paſſing a Complement on " the Earl of Peterborough. With this View when " the latter was thought to be on his Departure " for Vienna, on a Motion made by the Duke " of Beaufort, the Lords deſir'd the Queen to " ſtay the Earl's Journey for ſome Days, that " they might make uſe of ſuch Lights and Infor- " mations as the Lord Peterborough could give " them concerning the Affairs of Spain." This being all Court-Juggle, the Queen readily complyd with their Deſire, and a Committee being appointed for that Enquiry, the Earl of Abingdon was Chairman; the Earl of Galway and the Lord Tyrawley were order'd to attend them; the former gave them an Account of his Conduct in Spain, in a Narrative which their Lordſhips ſeem'd to be ſatisfy'd with. The Lord Tyrawley

The Lords examine the Earl of Galway, and Lord Tyrawley, about the War in Spain.

A.D.1711 said, When I'm in the Army I keep no Regiſter, I carry neither Pen nor Ink about me, but only a Sword, which I uſe the beſt I can, upon Occaſion; and all I know in general is, That we always acted according to the Reſolutions of the Councils of War. The Duke of Marlborough, the Earl of Wharton, the Earl of Godolphin, and my Lord Halifax, ſpoke in Favour of the E. of Galway. The Duke of Marlborough, with the utmoſt Concern, and even Tears in his Eyes, ſaid, That it was ſomewhat ſtrange, that Generals, who had acted to the beſt of their Underſtandings, and had loſt their Limbs in the Service, ſhould be examin'd like Offenders about inſignificant Things! Then Earl Paulet propos'd the Queſtion, and it was reſolv'd in the Affirmative, That the Miniſters were juſtly to be blamed, for contributing to all our Misfortunes in Spain, and to the Diſappointment of the Expedition againſt Toulon, by approving the Offenſive War in that Country. The Proteſt againſt this Reſolution, ſets this Matter in another Light:

The Duke of Marlborough extremely touch'd at the Earl of Galway's Treatment.

Diſſentientibus,

" Becauſe, that, conſidering the Army of the " Allies in Spain was to receive ſo great an Addition of Troops, ſent under the Earl Rivers, the general Deſire and Expectation of " the Kingdom to have the War brought to a " ſpeedy Concluſion, and all other Circumſtances of the War, as it then ſtood, we are of " Opinion, That an Offenſive War was then " fitteſt for thoſe in her Majeſty's Service to adviſe; and we do not find Reaſon, by any thing " ariſing on the Examinations and Debates, to be " of another Opinion: The Occaſion of fighting the Battle of Almanza, depending, as we " conceive, on Cauſes ſubſequent to that Advice, the ill Succeſs of it, as we apprehend, " being juſtly attributed to other manifeſt Reaſons; and the real Deſign on Toulon, as finally " adjuſted with the Duke of Savoy, not requiring, " as appears to us, the Aſſiſtance of any Forces " from Spain."

The Lords who proteſted were,

Lords Proteſt about the Cenſure on that War.

Devonſhire,	Rockingham,
Kent,	Scarborough,
Lincoln,	J. Ely,
Wharton,	W. Lincoln,
Godolphin,	J. Llandaff,
Sarum,	Harvey,
Derby,	Bangor,
Somers,	Marlborough,
Lichfield and Coventry,	Dorcheſter,
St. Aſaph,	Orford,
Dorſet,	Herbert,
Sunderland,	Mohun,
Bolton,	Cowper,
Bedford,	Aſhburnham,
Leiceſter,	Norwich,
Stamford,	Bridgwater.

The Earl of Rocheſter mov'd, that ſuch Lords as pleas'd might make Animadverſions on the Proteſtations of ſuch Lords as ſhould proteſt; and the Duke of Buckinghamſhire mov'd for voting Thanks to the Earl of Peterborough, which being order'd, Sir Simon Harcourt ſpoke to his Lordſhip to that Effect; but what ſeems too indecorous to be ſpoken in ſo auguſt an Aſſembly, obliquely reflected on the Gratuities that had been received by the Duke of Marlborough.

Lord Peterborough thank'd.

Sir Simon Harcourt reflects on the Duke of Marlborough.

Such is your Lordſhip's known Generoſity, and truly noble Temper, that I aſſure myſelf, the Preſent I'm now offering to your Lordſhip is the more acceptable, as it comes pure and unmix'd, and is unattended with any other Reward, which your Lordſhip might juſtly think would be an Allay to it.

A.D.1711

Tho' many People were deſirous that the Earl of Peterborough's Services in Spain might have the Thanks of that Houſe, yet they did not approve the Lord Keeper Harcourt's Manner of giving it, but ſaw, with Indignation, that he took hold of that Opportunity to ſpeak invidiouſly of the juſt Thanks that had been paid the Duke of Marlborough, for his more glorious and more important Actions; but there is a Baſeneſs and a Meanneſs in the Spirit of the new Managers, which are the Reverſe of Heroiſm, and conſequently muſt always riſe againſt the Merit of the Duke of Marlborough, whoſe Eſteem for the Earl of Galway was thought to be a chief Occaſion of the Trouble that Lord met with, after the Loſs of an Arm and an Eye in the Service of the Queen and Country: So he was queſtioned, Why he gave the Right to the Portugueſe, when he commanded the Britiſh Forces in Spain? Pray let us give a little Attention to this, that the Enemies to the Revolution-Principles may not anſwer all the Charges againſt this wonderful Miniſtry, with a ſtale and unjuſtifiable Reflection on the Hiſtorian, that he is Partial. The Treaty with Portugal was made Years before the Earl of Galway was call'd from his Retirement in Hampſhire, to command the Queen's Forces there. By that Treaty, the Troops of that Crown were to have the Right in their own Country. Now was it poſſible for any one to imagine, that the Portugueſe being come to the Bridge of Almanza, in the Way to Madrid, wou'd not think both Sides of the Bridge to be alike in their own Country, and that thoſe who refus'd to paſs it on Account only of a Doubt, that they might want Proviſions on the Spaniſh Side, wou'd not immediately have fac'd about, and march'd home again, had the Earl of Galway ſaid, Gentlemen, We are now going out of your Country, and the Britiſh Troops muſt have the Right of you. The Annaliſt, tho' a very poor Reaſoner, cou'd not but fall upon this Remark; It is certain, that if the Portugueſe had not march'd into Caſtile, upon my Lord Galway's refuſing to give them the Right in Spain, his Lordſhip wou'd have been generally reflected upon for loſing the vaſt Benefit that was generally expected from the Conjunction of the Portugueſe with King Charles's Forces, on a Punctilio of Military Honour. This is ſo certain, that there is not a Reader, Whig or Tory, but will be immediately appriz'd of it, and conſequently, of the Injuſtice and Ingratitude of the new Managers, in puſhing this Matter to a Cenſure, on ſo gallant and deſerving a General: How does that Cenſure agree with the Expreſſion in a Letter, not from the Earl of Sunderland, a Whig, but from Sir Charles Hedges, a Tory Miniſter, the Secretary of State, July 2, 1706. It is a great Happineſs to the Common Cauſe, that your Excellency will, in all probability, be with the King of Spain, ſince it may receive great Advantage by your good Advice, in ſettling Affairs with him, as it has done from your great Care and prudent Conduct, by which you SURMOUNTED DIFFICULTIES with the Portugueſe, which were thought IMPRACTICABLE.

The Tories ſhameful Ingratitude to the Earl of Galway.

The new Managers, Mr. Rob. Harley at their Head, to follow their Blow in the Attack upon their Predeceſſors, got a Vote in the Houſe of Commons, that Mr. Ridge, the Brewer at Portſmouth, had cheated the Navy of near 4000 Tun of Beer, and order'd an Addreſs to be preſented to the Addreſs againſt Mr. Ridge without Ground.

*A.D.*1711 the Queen, to cauſe Ridge to be proſecuted; inſtead of which, the Vote being paſs'd, Ridge continu'd to ſerve the Navy, as before; and the Harleians at the ſame time that they addreſs'd to have him proſecuted, reſolv'd ſtill to employ him, for they knew the Caſe to be this: The Service for the Fleet had of late lain, for the moſt Part, in the Mediterranean, where the Difference of the Climate rendred the Beer ſent hence uſeleſs; and the Seamen being not able to drink it there, requir'd Drink of a better ſort, as Wine and Water, which is ordinarily us'd on board the Fleet in thoſe Parts. But as the Victualling-Office can in their Accounts charge Beer only, it was allow'd to the Seamen, by the Office, to take Money of the Brewer to buy Wine in the Streights, mix'd with Water. Thus, tho' the Beer was not deliver'd, yet the Publick ſuffer'd no Wrong, the Nation paying for no more than the Allowance of Beer.

The Managers ſtrange Blunder and Falſhood.

How Mr. R. Harley got the Name of Trickſter.

For ſuch Tricks as theſe Mr. Harley got the almoſt general Name, of the Trickſter. It was true that Mr. Ridge deliver'd near 4000 Tun of Beer leſs than he receiv'd Bills for; but, that he defrauded the Seamen thereby was falſe, becauſe, at their own Deſire, they had their Allowance for Beer in Wine and Water.

The next thing they did was to procure a Petition from Tooly-Street, Southwark, againſt the poor Palatines, a great Number of them dwelling in one Houſe, which theſe wiſe Ones were afraid would bring a Contagion among them: The Queen herſelf had appear'd very well pleas'd with the charitable Contributions that had been liberally rais'd for the Subſiſtence of thoſe Proteſtants, ſo had moſt of the Fathers of our Church; but, becauſe ſome of 'em were Calviniſts, and becauſe moſt of the Foreigners are ſo who come to ſettle amongſt us, therefore did theſe excellent Miniſters ſet on Foot a Bill to repeal the Naturalization-Act; and an Enquiry, how theſe Palatines came into England? The Lords threw out the Bill for repealing the Naturalization-Act, and many wiſh'd their Lordſhips had done the ſame by the Bill of Qualifications, which was deſign'd as a Compliment to the Land-Intereſt; as that was pretended to be the great Support of the Church-Intereſt. To ſay nothing of the Abſurdity, if not worſe, of confounding Spiritual and Temporal Intereſts, of miſ-naming Perſons and Things, the Reaſons againſt the Qualification-Bill are obvious enough. By reſtraining the Elections for Knights of Shires to Eſtates of 600*l. per Ann.* and for Citizens and Burgeſſes to 300*l. per Ann.* Men, who by their natural and acquired Abilities and Skill in Buſineſs, are the fitteſt to ſerve their Country in Parliament, may happen to be excluded; and Men of mean Parts choſen, if but qualify'd by having Land only: Thus it may prove a great Detriment to Trade, by excluding the proper Truſtees for it, and committing the Protection of it to none but Landed-Men, which is a great Alteration of our Conſtitution, it being originally intended, that Corporations ſhou'd be repreſented by ſome of their own Body: It was a vain Conceit, that by this means Land and Sea-Officers would be kept out of the Houſe, it being well known that moſt of theſe have a better landed Intereſt than many of thoſe that ſat by their Land Qualification. Tho', if I had had an hundred Votes, I ſhou'd have given all in the Negative to this Bill: Yet, it was not out of Suppoſition, that there wou'd not be Six Hundreds and Three Hundreds a Year enough to be choſen among the Friends to the Revolution and Proteſtant Succeſſion, but out of the real Unreaſonableneſs of the Law before it was eſtabliſh'd. I cou'd give Liſts of Hundreds that have been choſen without one Qualification for it, except that of Acres; and of as many, who wou'd have ſtood, and been choſen, had it not been for the Neceſſity of buying Land to be qualify'd, by which they might make 3 per Cent. of their Money, and 6 per Cent. by the Funds. This Men of Buſineſs do not underſtand, and Men of no Buſineſs underſtand the Publick Intereſt as little as their own. I leave the Convocation-Hiſtory to the Eccleſiaſticks; and if Hiſtory was invented to remember Facts for Example to Poſterity, a Work that has no Facts to compoſe it, but Diſputes among themſelves about Prerogatives and Powers, can give very little Pleaſure to Perſons of any other Profeſſion. However, we muſt not forget that the Convocation did meet, and choſe a Prolocutor, Dr. Atterbury. The Archbiſhop propos'd to the inferior Clergy, to addreſs her Majeſty by Way of Thanks: They were for enlarging ſome Part of it, which the Biſhops were not free to; and this had like to have created a new Difference: The Archbiſhop prorogu'd them to January the 17th, at which the Majority of them was diſguſted: He then prorogu'd them to January the 24th, at which time the Lord Dartmouth, Secretary of State, brought them a Licence, under the Broad-Seal, to ſit, and that in as ample a Manner as was ever granted ſince the Reformation; the Facts of which are doubtleſs in their Archives, and may be a Treaſure for future Hiſtories.

*A.D.*1711

The Queen authorizes the Convocation to ſit and do Buſineſs.

He is againſt the Naturalization-Act.

600l. and 300l. a Year Bill.

Mr. William Bromley, Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, told them, that Dr. Atterbury, Dr. Stanhope, Dr. Stanley, Dr. Smalridge, Dr. Delaune, had been with him, from the Convocation, to expreſs their Satisfaction for the Inſtructions that had been given the Committee for rebuilding Greenwich Church; to conſider what Churches were wanting in London and Weſtminſter, and to offer the Lights of the Convocation, in relation to the extreme Want of Churches: Upon which it was reſolv'd, That the Houſe would have particular Regard to ſuch Application as ſhould be made to them from the Convocation, and voted 350,000*l.* for building 50 Churches; which, had it been done with a View of promoting nothing but the Common Intereſts of Religion, as the above-mention'd Doctors told Mr. Bromley the Houſe acted in rebuilding Greenwich Church, wou'd have been a moſt pious Service, as the Annaliſt calls it; but he ſpoils all, by adding, Indeed, none could wonder, that this Houſe of Commons ſhould ſhew an extraordinary Zeal for the Church by Law eſtabliſh'd, and expreſs their Gratitude to the inferior Clergy, by whoſe Influence chiefly many of them carry'd their Elections.

A Vote for 50 new Churches.

While the Earl of Godolphin was at the Head of the Treaſury, a Scheme was laid before him for paying off all Debentures and Tallies due to the Navy, &c. which his Lordſhip, who was always for making his Ground ſure before he trod upon it, laid by 'till a better Opportunity offer'd; beſides, the Publick Credit was ſo flouriſhing, 'till the Irruption of the Harleians, that the Treaſurer had no need to have recourſe to Chimerical Projects to ſupport it: It was not ſo with Mr. Rob. Harley, and this Scheme being put in his Way, he caught the Hint immediately, and reſolv'd to make uſe of it as his own: In order to this, he got a Committee appointed to examine and ſtate the Publick Debts, and upon their Report the Houſe Reſolv'd, That a Supply be granted for the Payment of 5,130,359*l.* to the Navy; 154,324*l.*

Lord Godolphin lays the South-Sea Scheme by.

*A.D.*1711 Mr. R. Harley takes it up.

154,324 l. to the Ordnance; 424,791 l. to the Tranſport-Service; 1,018,656 l. to Debentures, &c. in all 7,128,569 l. to which were added the laſt Year's Tallies then in the Offices. The Supply given afterwards for this was, a Continuation of the General Mortgage from 1716, to raiſe an Annuity of 568,279 l. being the Intereſt at 6 per Cent till the Principal be provided for. And with this Intereſt was alſo granted the Monopoly of a ſuppoſitious Trade to the South-Sea, or Coaſt of Peru in America; the ſeveral Proprietors of the Navy-Bills, Debentures, and other publick Security, being to be incorporated for that Purpoſe; and becauſe the Fund was ſo diſtant, it was declar'd, That the Parliament would annually make Proviſion for the Intereſt till 1716. This Project, which was good enough of itſelf, did Mr. Robert Harley render chimerical by a Piece of State-Flattery, and tacking the South-Sea Trade to it, tho' he knew full well that he and his Junto were entering upon a Negotiation of Peace, which by the Ceſſion of Spain, and the Weſt-Indies, would for ever exclude the Engliſh from the Privilege of trading to Peru or Mexico; inſtead of which the Duke of Anjou, upon his being ſettled by them in the Poſſeſſion of Spain and the Indies, gave them a precarious Licence to ſend a Ship or two thither yearly, ſtinting them both as to the Tonage, and Value of the Cargo, which notable Scheme gave Birth to what is ſtill call'd the South-Sea Company.

Guiſcard's Attempt againſt Mr. R. Harley.

The following Incident, relating to the Perſon of Mr. Harley, might be left to Biographers, if Biography ever meddles with it; but having by his own, and Mrs. Abigail Maſham's Intrigues, added great Importance to his Character, it muſt not be forgotten, that about the Beginning of March, the Marquis de Guiſcard ſtabb'd Mr. Harley at the Council-Board, of which there are theſe Particulars in the Annals: Guiſcard had been Colonel of a Regiment, in the Service of King Charles III. in Spain, which Regiment was almoſt cut to Pieces at the Battle of Almanza, and therefore never rais'd again. Guiſcard ſollicited to have a Penſion, when the old Miniſters were employ'd; but his Intimacy with Mr. St. John, with whom, ſays the Annaliſt, He had enter'd into a ſtrict Confidence, and Community of Pleaſures, did not at all forward his Affair at Court. When Mr. Henry St. John had got himſelf into the Secretary's Office, the French Marquis expected from him all the good Offices which Brethren in Iniquity feed themſelves with Hopes of on the like Occaſion. But all Friendſhips, ſays the Annaliſt, that are not grounded on Vertue, are ever fleeting; the Secretary, who had ſome time before quarrel'd with Guiſcard about a Strumpet, or rather a Baſtard, which neither of them would own, was hardly prevail'd with to ſpeak in his Favour: However, upon his faint Recommendation, the Queen order'd him a Penſion of 500 l. per Annum, which Mr. Harley not only reduc'd to 400 l. but refus'd to put it on a fix'd Eſtabliſhment. The Marquis being deny'd Acceſs to her Majeſty, grew highly diſguſted, and endeavour'd to make his Peace with the Court of France. In order to which, he wrote to Mr. Moreau, a Banker at Paris, directing his Letters to a Perſon in Portugal, under Cover of the Earl of Portmore, who miſtruſting ſomething he would not be pleas'd with, ſent them back to his Lady, who deliver'd them to Mr. Harley. The Annaliſt tells us, Some pretend theſe Letters contain'd only looſe Reflections on the Weakneſs and mean Capacity of the preſent Miniſtry; for whatever their Flatterers may ſay of the Cunning of Mr. Harley, and the Wit of Mr. St. John, Connoiſſeurs had the ſame Opinion of them, as Guiſcard expreſs'd to Moreau the Banker. But whatever were the Contents of the Letters, the Marquis was on the 6th of March apprehended in St. James's Park for High-Treaſon, by Virtue of a Warrant ſign'd by his boſom Friend, Mr. Secretary St. John, which could not but be very provoking. He deſir'd the Meſſengers, that ſeiz'd and diſcover'd him, to kill him, his Caſe being very deſperate; if he return'd to France he might expect the Wheel for having ſerv'd in the Queen of Great-Britain's Army againſt the French; if he ſtay'd in England he muſt ſtarve; ſo what to do he knew not: and in the midſt of his Rage and Deſpair he came to a Reſolution, ſince he muſt periſh, not to periſh alone. Being brought to the Cockpit, to be examin'd by a Committee of Council, he 'ſpy'd a Penknife in the Room where he was confin'd, the Meſſenger who had him in Cuſtody not perceiving it. The Lords of this Committee were, Sir Simon Harcourt, Lord-Keeper; the Earl of Rocheſter; the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, the Duke of Newcaſtle; the Duke of Ormonde; Earl Paulet; the three Secretaries of State, the Duke of Queenſbury, the Lord Dartmouth, and Mr. Henry St. John. The latter ask'd Guiſcard ſeveral Queſtions concerning his Correſpondence with France, to which he anſwer'd with a firm Countenance; but when Mr. Moreau was nam'd, and his Letters produc'd, the Marquis appear'd very much ſurpriz'd, and diſorder'd, and deſir'd to ſpeak with Mr. St. John aſide, which made it conjectur'd, that his Deſign was to attack the Secretary, who told him, what he deſir'd was impracticable, and unuſual; that he was there as a Criminal, and if he had any thing to ſay, he might ſay it to all of them. Guiſcard inſiſting to ſpeak with him by himſelf, the Lords of the Council were about to ring the Bell to call in the Meſſengers to take him away, which he obſerving, ſaid, Voila qui eſt dur, pas un Mot; That's hard, not one Word: And ſtepping towards the Table, as if he deſign'd to ſay ſomething to Mr. Harley, he ſaid, ſtooping down his Head, J'en veux donc a toy; Then have at thee: And ſo ſtabb'd him about the Middle of the Breaſt; but the Penknife lighting on the Bone, the Blade broke half an Inch from the Handle; of which the Marquis being not ſenſible, he redoubled his Blow, and with a great deal of Force ſtruck Mr. Harley not far from the firſt Wound. Guiſcard thinking he had done that Gentleman's Buſineſs, and that his Weapon would do more Execution, ruſh'd on towards Mr. St. John, overthrowing the Clerks Table, that ſtood between, which was a Barricade for the Secretary, who cry'd out, The Villain has kill'd Mr. Harley, and drew his Sword, as did alſo the Dukes of Ormonde and Newcaſtle, who gave Guiſcard ſeveral Wounds; as did Mr. St. John, who, it is ſaid, laid about him in a furious Manner, to revenge the ſuppos'd Murder of his Friend. But when he ſaw Mr. Harley get up, and walk about, and heard Earl Paulet cry out, Not to kill Guiſcard, the Annaliſt aſſures us, he gave over making Paſſes at him, who had only the Stump of the Penkniſe to encounter him and all Opponents with. Some of the Privy-Counſellors, ſecur'd themſelves with Chairs againſt the Rage of this French Furioſo; others ran out to call Help; upon which the Meſſengers and Door-Keepers ruſh'd in, and offering to lay hold on Guiſcard, the latter ſtruggled with them all, and overthrew ſome of his Aſſailants; but Mr. Wilcox,

*A.D.*1711

A.D.1711 Wilcox, the Meſſenger, a ſtout, ſtrong Man, grappled with him, flung him, and gave him ſeveral Bruiſes, particularly one in the Back, which was afterwards judg'd to be the Occaſion of his Death. While they were binding him, he ſaid to the Duke of Ormonde, My Lord Duc d' Ormonde, pourquoi me depechez vous? Why don't you diſpatch me? The Duke is ſaid to have anſwer'd, Ce neſt pas l' Affair des Honnêtes Gens, ceſt l' Affaire des autres: That is not Work for a Gentleman; 'tis another Man's Buſineſs. The next Day both Houſes of Parliament addreſs'd the Queen, to expreſs their great Concern for the moſt barbarous and villainous Attempt made upon the Perſon of Robert Harley, Eſq; adding, They had Reaſon to believe his Fidelity to her Majeſty, and Zeal for her Service, had drawn upon him the Hatred of all the Abettors of Popery and Faction; and an Act paſs'd to make it Felony, to make an Attempt on the Life of a Privy-Counſellor. Her Majeſty was deſir'd to take all poſſible Care of her Sacred Perſon; and a Proclamation was publiſh'd, ſtrictly to put in Execution the Laws againſt Papiſts. The Annaliſt adds to all this, "When Mr. Harley came firſt to the Houſe of Commons after "his Recovery, he was, by their Order, congratulated upon it, by Mr. William Bromley, "their Speaker, who made a ſet, flattering Speech "to him; and he, blown up with this ſolemn "Congratulation, did, a Week after, propoſe "the South-Sea Scheme; tho' there was nothing "in it, continues he, which a Man of the meaneſt Capacity might not eaſily have found out: "And tho' the Pretence of paying the National "Debts without any Charge to the Nation, and "yet allowing a large Intereſt 'till the Capital "Stock, or the Debts themſelves were redeemed "and paid by Parliament, was a groſs, palpable "ILLUSION; nevertheleſs, the ſame being gilded over by the glittering Proſpect of having "a Share in the Trade of the South-Sea, the "Commons brought in a Bill on the Reſolutions "that had been dictated by the Projector:" It happen'd very luckily for him, that the ſame Day he offer'd his Project to the Houſe, the Earl of Rocheſter, the Queen's Uncle, dy'd ſuddenly, whereby Mr. Harley was rid of the only dangerous Competitor he had in the Queen's Favour; and ſo he became Prime Miniſter. The Annaliſt writes, The Parliament having already worſhipp'd this Idol of their own making, &c. The Queen made him Baron Harley, of Wigmore; Earl of Oxford, and Earl Mortimer; and pray mind, on the 29th, the Thankſgiving Anniverſary of the Reſtoration of King Charles II. he was made High-Treaſurer of Great-Britain; this is the more worth minding, becauſe his Father, who was a Parliament Colonel, had taken Care to have him bred a Preſbyterian; and his Wife, and his Brother Edward were then, or very lately rigid Preſbyterians; and for fear the Rankneſs of ſuch an Education ſhou'd have had an ill Savour with High-Church, he pitch'd upon that happy Day for the receiving of his White Staff, upon which that King was reſtor'd, who, in Breach of his Word to thoſe Preſbyterians, gave his Aſſent not long after it, to a Bill, to turn 2000 of their Miniſters out of their Churches, and even out of their Livings and Dwellings, together with their Wives and Children. He took the Oaths of Treaſurer in the Court of Chancery, June the 1ſt, on which Occaſion the Lord Keeper Harcourt, making a Speech to him, outdid, if poſſible, even Mr. Bromley, in Flattery and Formality: To prove this, I need repeat two Paſſages of it only.

The Earl of Rocheſter's Death.

Mr. R. Harley made Earl of Oxford, &c. And Lord High-Treaſurer.

My Lord Oxford,

"The Title which you now bear cou'd not "have been ſo juſtly placed on any other of her "Majeſty's Subjects. Some of that ancient "Blood which fills your Veins is derived from "the Veres; and you have ſhew'd yourſelf as "ready to ſacrifice it for the Safety of your "Prince, and the Good of your Country, and "as fearleſs of Danger on the moſt trying Occaſions, as ever any of that brave and loyal "Houſe were."

[It is to be noted, that not only this new Lord's Father was a Colonel in the Parliament Army, but alſo the Lord Keeper Harcourt's Father, and as ſuch are treated every where as Rebels by the Earl of Clarendon.] Again:

Lord Keeper's flattering Speech to him.

"Nor is that Title leſs ſuited to you, as it car- "ries in it a Relation to one of the chief Seats "of Learning; for even your Enemies, my "Lord, if any ſuch there ſtill are, muſt own, "that the Love of Letters, and the Encouragement of thoſe who excel in them, is one diſtinguiſhing Part of your Character."

[The reſt of it is ſo nauſeous, that if it had been true, it muſt have made every one ſick that heard it.]

"The high Station of Lord Treaſurer of "Great Britain, to which her Majeſty has call'd "you, is the juſt Reward of your eminent Services. You have been the Great Inſtrument of reſtoring Publick Credit, and retrieving this "Nation from the heavy Preſſure and Ignominy "of immenſe Debts, under which it languiſhed; and you are now entruſted with the Power "of ſecuring us from a Relapſe into the ſame ill "State out of which you have reſcu'd us."

The Contrary of which every one who knows any thing of the Matter knows to be true, and he himſelf who ſpoke it, tho' he knew as little of the Buſineſs of the Treaſury as any one of his Station in Life cou'd not but know of it.

His Titles of Oxford, and Mortimer, give Offence.

It was thought a ſtrange Piece of Preſumption that this new made Lord, who had but a very ſmall Eſtate, and was of no higher Rank than that of a Country Gentleman, ſhou'd arrogate to himſelf two of the moſt Noble Titles in the Engliſh Heraldry, Mortimer having been in the Royal Family, and the Veres, Earls of Oxford, had that Title the longeſt that ever noble Family had one: Yet this was not the only thing that gave Offence to ſober and well-affected Minds, who did not take well his ſuffering his Panegyriſt to throw an odious Reflection on the Lord Godolphin into the Preamble of his Patent, where the preceding Adminiſtration in the Treaſury is charg'd with Peculation, or plundering it. If this ſhould be affirm'd, ſaid Mr. Maynwaring, at a Time when the publick Treaſury was well manag'd under the Direction of an honeſt diſintereſted Perſon, who was never ſuſpected for having cheated the Publick; on whom muſt the Invective turn? not only the Invective in the Preamble, but that in the Speech. Such are the Men with whom we are to keep Company two or three Years longer.

A Reflection on the Lord Godolphin, in the Preamble to his Patent.

The Commons vote the Church in Danger from the poor Palatines.

On the 14th of April, the Commons voted the Charge of bringing over the poor Palatines, a Miſapplication of the publick Money, and that their coming hither was of dangerous Conſequence to the Church; and that whoever adviſ'd it was an Enemy to the Queen and Kingdom. Directly contrary is all this to the Charitable Contribution, and Letters of the Queen and the Biſhops. If the Majority of this Houſe had known who was the Adviſer, they would moſt certainly have

*A.D.*1711 nam'd him; but it was only gueſs'd that the Earl of Sunderland was at the Bottom of this Affair, and gueſs Work ſeems to be below the Dignity of the Repreſentative of a great Nation. Two Days after, they threw out the Bill for the better preventing Bribery and Corruption in Elections for Members of Parliament: For tho' High-Church is always for loading theſe Elections with Difficulties when it anſwers their own Purpoſe, or the Purpoſes of any Faction they join with; yet when for our Sins they get into Power, they are as willing to make the beſt uſe of it they can for their own Intereſt. The Houſe choſe Commiſſioners for examining the Value of all Grants ſince the Reſtoration, except thoſe of King Charles, and King James II. So plain a Slur on the Memory of King William, that the Lords rejected it; and, indeed, that auguſt Aſſembly made a glorious Hand, at this dangerous Juncture, againſt the violent and deſtructive Meaſures of this Miniſtry. The Commiſſioners Names in the rejected Bill were, Mr. Hind-Cotton, Sir Simeon Stuart, Mr. Eversfield, Mr. Bulteel, Mr. Hewetſon, Mr. Blackmore, and Mr. Wrightſon.

Lords reject the Grant-Bill.

Commiſſioners nam'd in it.

On the 17th of April, an Expreſs arriv'd from Holland, with the News of the Death of the Emperor Joſeph, who dy'd of the Small Pox at Vienna, eleven Days before. On the 20th of April, the Queen ſent a Meſſage to both Houſes, That ſhe had come to a Reſolution to ſupport the Intereſt of the Houſe of Auſtria, and to uſe her utmoſt Endeavours to get the King of Spain made Emperor: That the States-General had concurr'd with her Majeſty, and that ſhe had taken the moſt proper Meaſures to engage all thoſe who had a Share in this Election, and were in the Intereſt of the Common Cauſe with her, in bringing this great Work to a good Iſſue; and ſhe had an entire Confidence in the Affection and Duty of the Parliament, that with their Aſſiſtance ſhe ſhould be enabled to make a happy Concluſion of this War in a ſafe and honourable Peace.

Queen's Meſſage in favour of the Houſe of Auſtria.

This produc'd a Joint-Addreſs from both Houſes in the ſame Sentiments, in almoſt the ſame Language as the Meſſage; and here again did the wonderful Genius of the Treaſurer exert itſelf. This Meſſage being ſo worded, that the well-meaning might interpret the Queen's ſupporting the Intereſt of the Houſe of Auſtria to be now, what it always had meant hitherto, the Recovery of Spain and the Weſt-Indies for it; and that others might underſtand by it her Intention to conclude a Peace as ſoon as poſſible, which was the Senſe the new Managers gave it themſelves, and would have had others take it in, to juſtify their clandeſtine Conferences with the Abbot Gualtier, which they were now carrying on, and wherein it was pretended, that the Emperor's Death having alter'd the Situation of Affairs, and prepar'd the Way for the King of Spain's ſucceeding him in the Empire, there wou'd be ground for Apprehenſions, that the Balance of Power which this War was undertaken to ſettle, might, by the Addition of Spain and the Weſt-Indies, turn it to the Side of Auſtria, as it was fear'd the Poſſeſſion of Spain, and the Weſt-Indies, wou'd have turn'd it to that of Bourbon; but this was all Grimace, and an impudent Impoſition on the Underſtanding of the Engliſh. Long enough before the Emperor Joſeph dy'd had Meſſrs St. John and Harley began their ſecret and treacherous Negotiations to break the Confederacy, and keep France in a Condition to aſſiſt the Enemies of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, whenever Matters were ripe for their bringing in the Pretender. The Annaliſt affirms, Thoſe at the Helm had clandeſtinely enter'd into the Negotiations of Peace with ſome Agents of France, even before the old Miniſters were remov'd. We may aſſure ourſelves, that the making a ſpeedy, diſhonourable, and dangerous Peace, was the Thing reſolved upon, before one Step was taken in the Change of the Miniſtry. Meſſrs Harley, St. John, and the new Managers, had no other Way in the World to keep Poſſeſſion of the Ground they had got, but by deſtroying all Confidence between the Queen and her Allies, who never cou'd have any Confidence in them; therefore the Queen ſays not a Word to the Commons of enabling her to carry on the War, in order to obtain a ſafe and honourable Peace, but to enable her to conclude it by ſuch a Peace, tho' ſafe and honourable, when tack'd to the Utrecht Peace, is ſuch a Contradiction in Terms, that it wou'd be receiv'd in Common Life either with Contempt or Indignation.

The Miniſters treat clandeſtinely with a French Agent.

*A.D.*1711 The Power of the Emperor a falſe Pretence, for giving up Spain to France. The Miniſters treacherous Treating with the French.

Mr. Edward Harley, Brother to the late Mr. Robert, had been made Auditor of the Impreſt by the Earl of Godolphin, and was pack'd out by his Brother to manage all the odious Proceedings againſt his Benefactor, and the old Miniſters, againſt whom, we are told by the Annaliſt, He cook'd up a Repreſentation, which was approv'd by the Commons, and preſented to the Queen the 4th of June; and therein they tell her, "That "they had not only given her the neceſſary Sup- "plies, but had diſcharg'd the heavy Debts ſo "long and ſo juſtly complain'd of;" which, if any one elſe had ſaid but they, we ſhou'd not have been at a Loſs to have hit upon the right Phraſe for it. Theſe onerous Debts were, according to them, unneceſſary, and might have been prevented, "as be- "ing, from the Beginning, inlarg'd and increas'd "beyond the Bounds preſcrib'd: That the Sur- "pluſage of ſome Funds had not been apply'd "to anſwer the Deficiency of others; but other "Uſes were found out, ſuch as were neither vo- "ted nor addreſs'd for by Parliament, which "therefore we judge a Miſapplication of Publick "Money. The Debt of the Navy has ariſen "from a Liberty that has been taken of transfer- "ring Money, iſſu'd for that Service, to other "Uſes, particularly, for Proviſions for the Land "Forces in Spain and Portugal. To this we "muſt add, the many notorious Embezzlements "in your Majeſty's Brew-houſe; and that the "Commiſſioners for Victualling have been guilty "of great Negligence; that the Receivers of the "Land-Tax were not obliged to make due and "punctual Payments:" But what follows ſtrikes me with Horror; there is no Inſtance of ſo groſs and incredible a Miſrepreſentation in all Records, as will be proved, to the Satisfaction of all honeſt Minds both now and hereafter: WE FIND, That they who of late Years had the Management of your Majeſty's Treaſury, and ought to have compell'd the ſeveral Accomptants duly to paſs their Reſpective Accompts, have been guilty of ſo notorious a Breach of Truſt, and of ſo high an Injuſtice to the Nation, that of the Monies granted by Parliament, and iſſued for the Publick Service to Chriſtmas 1710, there remains unaccounted for, the Sum of Thirty-five Millions, three Hundred and two Thouſand, one Hundred and Seven Pounds, for a great Part of which no Accompts have ſo much as been laid before the Auditors; and for the reſt, tho' ſome Accompts have been brought in, yet they have not been proſecuted by the Accomptants, and finiſh'd. If any one is inclin'd to think I bear too hard on theſe Men by the Repreſentations I make of them, let ſuch ſtop at this monſtrous

Mr. Edward Harley cooks up a Repreſentation againſt the old Miniſtry.

The monſtrous Vote of 35 Millions unaccounted for.

A.D.1711 Vote, and conſider what thoſe muſt be capable of, who could ſacrifice Honour, Conſcience, Knowledge, and Fact, to the Intereſt of ſuch a Set of Managers as were now in Employment. The true State of theſe thirty-five Millions was drawn up by A. Maynwaring, Eſq; one of the Auditors, and is as follows. A.D.1711

The Earl of Ranelagh's Charge is —— ——					l. 21,015,618	s. 19	d. 4½
Diſcharge,	l.	s.	d.
By Accompts actually paſt, ——	14,593,665	4	2⅛	21,013,847	10	10½
By Accompts render'd, or lying before the Auditors,	6,420,182	6	8⅛
				Remains to be accompted for —	1,771	8	6
Prov'd by Mr. Maynwaring to be but four Millions. The Hon. James Brydges, Eſq, his Charge is					15,374,689	1	11¾
Diſcharge,
By Accompts actually paſt, ——	956,789	6	5¼	9,054,281	15	00¾
By Accompts render'd, or lying before the Auditors,	8,097,492	8	7½
By Accompts deliver'd ſince Chriſtmas, 1710, ——					3,227,778	2	6
				Remains to be accompted for —	3,092,629	4	5
Lord Falkland's Charge is ——					3,094,723	7	11½
Diſcharge,
By Accompts actually paſt, ——	1,22,133	5	11	2,587,501	11	2¾
By Acc^ts lying before the Auditors,	1,465,368	5	3¾
				Remains to be accompted for —	507,221	16	8¾
Sir Thomas Lyttleton's Charge is —— ——					18,382,750	1	5¼
Diſcharge,
By Accompts actually paſt, or ready for Declaration,	7,559,382	5	3¼	18,329,562	4	4
By Accompts lying before the Auditors, under the Examination of the Navy-Board, and by Money paid over to R. Walpole, Eſq;	10,770,179	19	0¾
				Remains to be accompted for —	53,187	17	1¼
Captain Atkinſon and others, Commiſſioners for Tranſportation, their Charge during the late War,				938,646	19	9
Diſcharge,
By Accompts lying before the Auditors,	935,807	8	4
				Remains to be accompted for —	2,839	11	5
Captain Atkinſon, and others, their Charge for this War,					120,108	16	3½
Their Diſcharge by Accompts render'd, or lying before the Auditors,	60,546	13	11½
				Remains to be accompted for —	59,562	2	4
Mr. Nutting's Charge is —— —— ——					108,118	16	10½
				Remains to be accompted for —	108,118	16	10½
Mr. Maſon's Charge is —— —— ——					262,813	19	7
				Remains to be accompted for —	262,813	19	7
Mr. Povey's Charge is —— —— ——					136,159	13	00½
His Diſcharge by Accompts lying before the Auditors,	135,476	00	00½
				Remains to be accompted for —	683	13	0
Mr Micklethwayte's Charge is —— —— ——					480,209	0	11½
His Diſcharge by Accompts lying before the Auditors,	376,442	10	9½
				Remains to be accompted for —	103,766	10	1
Mr. Savery's Charge is —— —— ——					276,078	8	8½
Diſcharge,
By Accompts actually paſt, ——	63,810	7	2	138,538	8	2½
By Accompts before the Auditors, —	74,728	1	0½
				Remains to be accompted for —	137,540	0	6¼
				Total to be accompted for	4,330,135	00	7¼

Pray

A.D.1711

Pray let us remember that the Repreſentation drawn up by a Committee, of which Mr. Edward Harley, Auditor of the Impreſt, was Chairman, poſitively aſſerts, that the thirty-five Millions remain to be accompted for. And it is plain, by the above-mention'd Accompt, ſtated by Mr. Maynwaring, the other Auditor of the Impreſt, that the Accompts for above twenty-four Millions of the thirty-five were actually paſs'd, which the ſaid Mr. Edward Harley, or his Clerks muſt know, as well as Mr. Maynwaring; and yet for the ſake of blackening thoſe honourable and worthy Miniſters, whom his Brother Robert, and Mrs. Abigail Maſham had ſupplanted in the Queen's Favour, are thoſe notorious Contradictions to Fact obtruded upon her, and upon the Nation. Mr. Harley the Auditor could not but be capable of knowing what Mr. Maynwaring writes on this Subject; No Accomptant is oblig'd, by the Courſe of the Exchequer, to render his Accompt under 15 Months, nor ſome under 18; yet this Vote takes in all Accompts to the firſt Meeting of the Committee; but there is no Mention made from what Period of Time th y did commence. To have been particular in every Reſpect was too much for the Compaſs of a Vote; ſo that there are Accompts from King Charles, King James, and King William's Reign, in the principal Branches of the Expence in all the Revenue brought in, to make up and ſwell the general Accompt; and this is by many Thouſands of People, without Doors, imputed to the late Miniſters. He then banters the Raſhneſs and Partiality of that Houſe of Commons, of which h mſelf was a Member, in ordering ſo unjuſt a Vote of the Committee to be printed. In his State of the thirty-five Millions, he diſcharges above thirty Millions, and reduces them to a little above four, which, as he ſays, was much ſhort of a Year's Supply. He adds,

The prodigious Injuſtice of Mr. Edward Harley's Repreſentation.

Prov'd by Mr. Maynwaring.

" And now if I may be allow'd to ſuppoſe what
" I think, I have fully prov'd that many Irregu-
" larities, and unavoidable Delays, attend the " paſſing of ſome Accompts, which no Care or
" Induſtry can prevent. If it happen that the " Nature of the Services, and the Method of " Payment in ſome Offices, being inconſiſtent
" with the Courſe of the Exchequer, require Pri- A.D.1711
" vy Seals, and are the Work of longer Time
" than is limited for paſſing Accompts; if it appears
" that theſe Irregularities incident to Accompts,
" are yet neceſſary for the Accomodation of the " Service, and not to be avoided without infinite
" Prejudice to the Management; and if it ap-
" pears that the Security of the Publick does not
" entirely depend upon the actual paſſing of Ac-
" compts, provided they have been daily render'd,
" all which he fully makes out, I hope People will " begin to be ſatisfy'd, that the Nation has not
" been cheated of thirty five Millions."

The Repreſentation, as to the State of the Navy Debts, is charg'd with the ſame Prevarication, and, indeed, Untruth. Theſe Debts were reported to amount to five or ſix Millions, and this was ſaid to render the Robbery of the thirty-five Millions the more viſible. A Gentleman, whoſe Perfection in the Art of Figures, and Experience in Affairs, both of Land and Sea-Service, and Politicks, and Negotiation, is juſtly deem'd to be the moſt conſummate of any of his Contemporaries, wrote a Letter about the Debts of the Navy, and People were ſo pleas'd with it, that many Thouſands of them were ſold, notwithſtanding the Publiſhers durſt not diſpoſe of them publickly. It is prov'd in this Letter, that the Debts of the Navy were ſo far from being decreas'd by the new Managers, that the Increaſe in the very firſt Year of their Management, was near 900,000*l.* This Houſe of Commons voted the Navy Debts to be in the Year 1711, 5,130,539*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.* whereas the old Miniſters had in Effect brought the Debts into the narroweſt Compaſs that ever it had been in ſince the Revolution. One can hardly believe that Men, who called themſelves not only Chriſtians, but Churchmen, could be guilty of ſo extravagant, as well as groundleſs a Charge, as to make a Debt of 5,000*l.* five Millions. This is not to be believ'd, or that ſuch a Set of Men could be collected in any Part of the World, ſo void of Conſcience and Modeſty as was theſe Managers, in the pretended Debt of five Millions, which was but 5474*l.* 13*s.* 11½*d.* See the State of it.

The Repreſentation of the Navy-Debt

	l.	s.	d.
The Debt of the Navy, excluſive of the Regiſter-Office, as ſtated by the Committee of the Houſe of Commons, was at Michaelmas, 1702,	5,130,539	05	05
Deduct the Debt of the Navy as it ſtood at Michaelmas, 1702,	1,722,679	05	08
Deduct what has been receiv'd ſhort by the Navy during this War,	1,411,001	19	09½
There remains a Debt incurr'd during the late Adminiſtration,	3,133,681	05	05½
Which is Diſcharg'd thus, by Extra-Services;	1,996,857	19	11½
Intereſt paid, and due on Navy-Bills,	242,265	12	00
Intereſt paid, and due on Victualling-Bills,	209,139	12	6
By Act of Parliament. Paid for Naval-Stores, imported from America,	18,000	16	6
Paid Bounty-Money for French Priſoners,	34,155	00	00
For Raiſing Men,	4,729	10	05
Rebuilding Ships loſt in the great Storm,	134,232	00	00
Bounty to Widows, &c. of Officers and Seamen loſt in the Storm,	15,158	00	11
Bounty to Officers ſerving under Sir George Rook in the Mediterranean,	30,777	13	05
Ordinary of the Navy for 1704,	120,000	00	00
Extraordinary Expence of 14,000*l. per Ann.* for 9 Years,	126,000	00	00
Paid to the Commiſſioners of Tranſports, in the Years 1702, 1703, 1704,	84,515	12	08
Extraordinary Expence for Marines,	119,675	08	03
To the Office of Sick and Wounded,	100,228	14	06
For Hire of Victualling-Ships,	145,598	17	03
Victualling Land-Forces ſent to Spain and Portugal,	606,806	07	07½
Total of Extra-Services,	1,991,383	06	00½
Balance,	5,474	13	11½

Thus

A.D.1711 Thus the whole Charge upon the old Miniſters with reſpect to the Navy Debts, amounted to a little above 5000 l. the Extra-Services included; and that there was Reaſon to include them, the Author makes out in what follows. "I muſt "make one Obſervation more to you; That as "the Debts of the Navy has annually increas'd, "an annual Account of it has been laid before "the Houſe of Commons, who were conſtantly "informed how far the Proviſion made for the "preceding Year had fallen ſhort of anſwering "the Expence; but being ſenſible, that the more "preſſing Supplies were as much as cou'd be well "rais'd within the Year, they ſtill thought it "more adviſeable to leave the extraordinary "Charges as a growing Debt, than to increaſe "the Publick Burden upon the People, by en-"larging the uſual Proviſions for the Navy. And "in the Parliament before the laſt, a full Account "of the Navy-Debt being call'd for, the late Mi-"niſters were ſo far from being blamed upon this "Subject, that after a full Conſideration, and "long Debate about the Cauſes and Methods of "contracting that Debt, the Houſe came to a "Reſolution in their Favour, and went as far in "approving their Conduct and Management as "any ſubſequent Parliament has gone in cenſu-"ring them: And when the Juſtice of two dif-"ferent Parliaments comes to be the Queſtion, "I muſt not take upon me to determine between "them, but will only make this ſhort Remark; "That from ſuch time, at leaſt, as the Senſe of "the Houſe was known upon this Occaſion, the "late Miniſtry cannot be thought blameable for "proceeding in their uſual Method, when they "were ſupported by Authority and Approbation "of Parliament."

Thus we have ſeen the prodigious Navy-Debt reduced from Five Millions to Five Thouſand Pounds, round Numbers; and the enormous Thirty-five Millions, to Four Millions: And yet do theſe Managers tell the Queen, Your Majeſty will pleaſe to conſider in ſuch an immenſe Sum unaccounted for, how many Embezzlements may be conceal'd, and how juſtly it is to be ſuſpected, that ſo ſcandalous a Remiſſneſs has been allow'd with no other Deſign. Good God! what Hands was this poor Nation then in? When even the Sanhedrim ſpoke the Language of Baal, and the Voice of the People was the Voice of his Prieſts!

Unjuſt and ſcandalous Miſrepreſentation.

By the Account of the new Writs iſſued for electing Members of Parliament in the room of others preferr'd to Places, and of re-electing ſuch as requir'd it, we ſhall ſee who ſome of theſe Men were.

Excellent Promotions.

For the City of York, in the room of Robert Benſon, Eſq; made Chancellor of the Exchequer.

For the County of Surry, in the room of Heneage Finch, Eſq; made Maſter of the Jewel-Office.

For the County of Somerſet, in the room of Sir Wm. Wyndham, made Maſter of the Buckhounds.

For the Borough of Droitwich, in the room of Edward Jefferies, Eſq; made a Welſh Judge.

For Ilcheſter, in the room of Edward Philips, Eſq; made Comptroller of the Mint.

For Hertford, in the room of Charles Cæſar, Eſq; made Treaſurer of the Navy.

For Glamorganſhire, in the room of Sir Tho. Manſel, made Comptroller of the Houſhold.

For Droitwich, in the room of Edward Foley, Eſq; made Receiver of the Duties upon Hides.

For New Radnor, in the room of Rob. Harley, Eſq; made a Lord.

For Newton in Lancaſhire, in the room of John Ward, Eſq; made a Welſh Judge.

For Totneſs, in the room of Francis Gwyn, Eſq; made a Commiſſioner of Trade. A.D.1711

On the 12th of June the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to Ten Publick and Seven Private Bills; after which her Majeſty made a Speech to both Houſes, wherein having thank'd the Commons for the Supplies, the greateſt ever granted to any Prince in one Seſſion, ſhe was pleas'd to ſpeak of the Church in two ſeveral Paragraphs, and to commend the Temper of this Parliament, particularly with reſpect to Diſſenters. At the Cloſe of the Speech, the Lord-Keeper Harcourt prorogu'd the Parliament to the 10th of July.

In this Seſſion Endeavours were us'd to have made Something of Nothing, in prejudice of Sir James Montagu, whoſe greateſt Crime, in the Opinion of this Majority, was his being the Lord Halifax's Brother. Sir James had been choſen in Parliament for Carliſle for ſeveral Years, and was choſen again for that City at the laſt Election; to prevent which, thoſe that oppos'd him gave out, that his being remov'd from the Office of Attorney-General, was a Mark of her Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, and that ſhe wou'd be offended if he was choſen after it. Sir James being inform'd of this, wrote to his Friend, the Biſhop of Carliſle, That tho' the Queen had thought fit to put another in his Place, yet he was ſo far from having incurr'd her Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, that, on the contrary, ſhe had been graciouſly pleas'd, in Conſideration of his former Services, to beſtow upon him a Penſion of 1000 l. per Annum. This Letter being communicated to ſome of the Electors, Sir James Montagu's Opponent took from thence Occaſion to object, that ſince he had a Place of Profit, meaning the Penſion, he cou'd not be choſen a Member. To this Sir James anſwer'd, in another Letter to the Biſhop, that he had no Place of Profit, only a Penſio which did not diſqualifie. Col. Gledhill having got a Copy of this Part of that Letter, ſhew'd it in Company; and ſomebody telling him he had omitted what was moſt remarkable in it, That the Queen had given Sir James a Penſion to enable him to carry his Election, Gledhill puts it down in his Notes, and gave Information of it to four Parliament-Men, particularly to Mr. Charles Eversfield, a great Stickler for High-Church; and, according to the Zeal and Underſtanding of that ſort of Men, he immediately complain'd of it to the Houſe of Commons, as a Reflection on her Majeſty's Honour. Sir James Montagu deny'd the Fact, and Gledhill charg'd him with it at the Bar of the Houſe, where ſome of his Witneſſes were examin'd, who cou'd prove nothing but the Paſſage in that Part of the Biſhop's Letter, which Sir James Montagu's Friends had diſpers'd: The Biſhop of Carliſle being nam'd in the Information, he deſir'd to be heard, and accordingly was heard: After which Sir James Montagu ſpoke for himſelf, and a Debate enſuing, it ended in this Reſolution, "That "William Lord Biſhop of Carliſle had diſpers'd "ſeveral Copies of a Letter, pretended to have "been receiv'd from Sir James Montagu, a "Member of this Houſe, in order to procure "Sir James Montagu to be elected a Citizen of "of the City of Carliſle, reflecting on the Ho-"nour of her Majeſty; and by concerning him-"ſelf in the ſaid Election, had highly infring'd the "Liberties and Privileges of the Commons of "Great-Britain." Then the Queſtion was put, "That Col. Gledhill had made good his Charge "againſt Sir James Montagu, it paſt in the Ne-"gative."

False Informations againſt Sir James Montagu, and the Bp. of Carliſle.

Vote againſt the Biſhop.

A.D.1711

" gative." But pray let us mind, that Information was a downright Untruth; nevertheleſs, it was reſolv'd, " That Col. Gledhill had ſufficient " Grounds for bringing the ſaid Charge before the " Houſe."

The recalling his Grace the Duke of Argyle from the Service in Flanders, to command the Britiſh Forces in Spain, was generally well lik'd, not only on Account of ſome Miſintelligence between the Duke of Marlborough and that Lord, but alſo out of Hope that by his Courage, Gallantry, Activity, and Conduct, the Affairs of Charles III. in Spain might change Face for the better. The Duke of Marlborough, tho' he continued in the Command of the Grand Army in the Netherlands, yet there being no longer any Confidence between him and thoſe that manag'd every thing at Court, no great Good was expected from the Continuance of the War, more than the putting off as long as might be the Ending it, by an inglorious and dangerous Peace. Dr. H.... the preſent Bp. of Ch..... was then Chaplain-General, or the Duke of Marlborough's Attendant-Chaplain in Flanders, and was in the Deepeſt of his Councils at that Time; when he wrote ſeveral excellent Treatiſes, as the Management of the War, in four Parts: And the Anſwer to the Conduct of the Allies in as many, which were all reviſ'd and corrected by Mr Maynwaring, who was doubtleſs the beſt Critick of his Age. I ſpeak this with the more Aſſurance, becauſe I myſelf carry'd theſe Treatiſes to the Preſs, and was well-acquainted with the Biſhop's Zeal in thoſe Days for Revolution Principles, the very Reverſe of Perſecution, of Oppreſſion, and Uncharitableneſs. This Biſhop, in his fourth Letter about the Management of the War, writes, Biſhop of Ch..... on the Management of the War.

" That little more Harmony was to be expected " between two Rivals in Power, than from a " falling and a riſing Favourite. Some Perſons " would ſtill pretend to put a good Face upon the " Matter; and do not queſtion, from the Duke " of Marlborough's paſt Succeſſes, that he will " yet frighten our Enemies into an honourable " Peace: But I am afraid he is not likely to do " ſo much at this Time, when the Enemy are " encourag'd to take Heart afreſh; the Allies are " full of Jealouſies and Fears, and himſelf ex- " tremely mortify'd. Things are not the ſame

And the ill Treatment of the D. of Marlbro'.

" any more than the Uſage he meets with; " when he is uneaſy in his Thoughts, under- " min'd in the Favour of his Sovereign, and vile- " ly miſrepreſented to the People; when his " Want of Intereſt at Home, makes it impoſſible " for the Allies to depend upon the Hopes he " gives them; when he is without Authority in " his Army; when it is made criminal to e- " ſpouſe his Intereſt, and to fly in his Face is " the ſureſt Means to recommend; when 'tis me- " ritorious in his Officers to cabal againſt him, " and the moſt Factious will be thought the moſt " deſerving; with what Heart can a Man in " theſe Circumſtances ſerve? or what Succeſs " can be expected from him, when he is to de- " pend upon profeſſed Enemies for his Support. " 'Tis little, I think, we can hope for even " from him hereafter, tho' that little be more " than any Body elſe could do."

To carry Matters on the more ſmoothly, the Queen wrote a ſweetening Letter to the States-General, about the Duke of Marlborough, whoſe Conduct ſhe declar'd herſelf to be entirely ſatisfy'd with. On the 4th of March, his Grace arriv'd at the Hague, and was daily in Conference with the Deputies of the States, to concert Meaſures for the Operations of the enſuing Campaign; and on the 25th of April ſet out for the Army, which was encamp'd on the Marque and the Scarpe, the Town of Orchies being in the Centre, as Worde was in the Camp along the Road, from Douay to Valenciennes. Prince Eugene join'd the Duke of Marlborough the 21ſt of May, but ſoon after receiv'd Orders to march with the Imperial and Palatinate Troops to the Upper Rhine, to ſecure Germany, which was threaten'd with an Invaſion by the Elector of Bavaria. The French Army, under the Mareſchal de Villars, being poſſeſs'd of ſo ſtrong a Camp, that the Duke of Marlborough found the attacking him to be impracticable, his Grace, by a well-manag'd Stratagem, ſurpriz'd the French Lines, without the Loſs of one Man, and form'd the Siege of Bouchain; before which Place the Trenches were open'd Aug. 18, and the Garriſon ſurrender'd Priſoners of War, Sept. 12. to the Number of 4 or 5,000 Men. The Mareſchal de Villars, a Man much given to Gaſconade, finding himſelf ſo well encamp'd behind Rivers, Woods, and Marſhes, that the Duke of Marlborough could not ſafely come at him, boaſted that the Duke was come to his Ne plus ultra, and that he had put a Stop to the Conqueſts of a Captain, who, like Cæſar, might have aſſum'd the Motto of Veni, Vidi, Vici, had not his Modeſty been equal to his Merit. How the French Mareſchal came off with his Boaſt, is ſeen in the Hiſtory of this Campaign: He ſaw the Engliſh General extend the Frontier of the Allies as far as Picardy, and Paris expos'd to the Inſults of their Parties. His Boaſts were turn'd upon him at the Court of Verſailles; and the Writers ſet to work by the new Managers, were forc'd to acknowledge, There is nothing more certain than that Madem. Maintenon is oblig'd to uſe all her Intereſt with the King to continue the Mareſchal de Villars in the Command of the Army in Flanders. It muſt be confeſs'd, that his Majeſty has all along ſhewn a ſtrong Partialty for that General; but the Invectives of moſt of the Courtiers are ſo bitter, and yet ſo open, and the Clamours of the Populace ſo loud and abuſive, that nothing but the King's Complaiſance for the above-mention'd Lady, and his Affection for her favourite General, could poſſibly ſcreen his Honour. The following Lampoon upon the Mareſchal is now in every one's Hands. To explain which, we muſt take Notice, that whenever Monſieur de Villars heard of the Victories of Blenheim, Rammelies, Turin, Oudenarde, &c. he us'd to ſay, Je ne ſaurois etre par tout; I cannot be every where; as if he was always ſure of Victory: A Saying that agrees perfectly well with the Genius of the Man and his Nation, who are vain amidſt Diſgrace, which, and his Ne plus ultra of this Campaign, occaſion'd the Verſes that began and ended,

A.D.1711 The Campaign.

The Duke of Marlborough ſurprizes the French Lines. Takes Bouchain. Mareſchal de Villars' Vanity.

A French Lampoon upon him.

Le Ne plus ultra eſt ſurpris.
The Ne plus ultra is ſurpriz'd.
My Lord, vous cherche, a l'autre bout,
Vous ne ſauriez etre par tout.
My Lord at t'other End comes on;
You can't be every where.

Which ſhews how much juſter the French were in their Sentiments than the Harleians and their Tools, who, while the French were lampooning their General for being beaten, were libelling our's for beating him. Bouchain was call'd a Pidgeon-Houſe, to leſſen the Glory of taking it; and the bloodleſs Paſſage of the Lines reflected on, as an Exploit of no more Conſequence than

The Tories leſſen the Duke of Marlborough's Services.

A.D. 1711

The Tories leſſen the Duke of Marlborough's Services.

than a Militia Company's croſſing a Kennel. It is ſaid, the Mareſchal, who knew better than his Friends in England what was for his Credit, would have fought the Duke of Marlborough, to have prevented his Diſhonour in loſing his Lines and Bouchain; of which the ſame Writer, who call'd it a Pidgeon-Houſe, a Hireling of Mr. Harley's, afterwards is forc'd to confeſs the Strength of the Garriſon; 5,000 Men in the Neighbourhood of the French Army, ſuperior to ours, and conſtantly attempting to diſturb us, makes the Succeſs of the Siege the more remarkable. But the French King would not conſent that he ſhould venture a Battle, tho' the Dauphin ſeconded the Mareſchal's Requeſt. The King, who was then about ſending Emiſſaries to England to bring on a Negotiation of Peace, by Encouragement of the preſent Managers, ſaid, There were ſuch Steps already made towards a general Peace, that he hop'd ſoon to ſee the Effects of it, without farther Effuſion of Chriſtian Blood, which he had all his Lifetime ſhewn himſelf ſo very ſparing of.

French King owns a ſecret Negotiation.

Duke of Savoy in France.

In the mean Time the Duke of Savoy, upon Accommodation of ſome Differences between the Emperor and him, about Part of Montferrat and Milan, which was yielded to him by Treaty, found his Way into the Dutchy of Savoy, and penetrated as far as the Rhoſne, but were ſtopp'd by the French, who were poſted near Fort Barreaux in an inacceſſible Camp.

Charles III. King of Spain, choſen Emperor.

Charles III. King of Spain, being choſen Emperor of the Romans, was crown'd at Frankfort, in great Solemnity, on the 22d of December; his Majeſty having ſome time before given the neceſſary Directions for the Regency of Catalonia, which he left to the Queen, embark'd on Board the Confederate Fleet, and landing in Italy, proceeded thence to Germany. General Staremberg, who commanded in Catalonia, taking with him Count Montheſe, the Dutch General, and Lieutenant-General Hamilton as Voluntiers, with about 4,000 Horſe and Foot, went in Perſon to relieve the Caſtle of Cordona, very much preſs'd by the French, whom he forc'd to retreat with Precipitation, and the Loſs of above 2,000 Men.

The War in Catalonia.

The Engliſh Forces in Portugal were commanded by the Earl of Portmore this Campaign; the Confederates retook Meranda de Duero; but the Marquis de Bay threatening to make an Irruption into that Kingdom, the Portugueſe return'd Home to defend their own Country.

An Affair happen'd this Year in Germany which had good Conſequences for the Proteſtant Intereſt. The Chapter of Hildeſheim having in a violent Manner moleſted the Proteſtants ſettled in that Biſhoprick, the Elector of Hanover took them into his Protection, which produc'd a Convention between his Electoral Highneſs and the Chapter, by which the Proteſtants were to enjoy their religious Liberties, according to the Treaty of Weſtphalia; but this Agreement was ſoon broken in upon by the Chapter, who ſeeing his Electoral Highneſs intent on the grand Affairs of Chriſtendom, thought this a proper Opportunity to revive the Perſecution againſt the Proteſtants in their Diſtrict. The Elector admoniſh'd them to forbear their Violences; which they not duly regarding, he caus'd the Town and Caſtle of Payne, and afterwards the City of Hildeſheim, to be ſeiz'd by his Troops, about the Beginning of this Year. This was notify'd by his Miniſters at Berlin, the Hague, and other Courts; and that as ſoon as the Chapter had redreſs'd the Grievances of the Proteſtants, he would withdraw his Forces from that City and Biſhoprick. This Declaration however was not enough, either to ſtill the Clamours of the Papiſts, or even to remove the Jealouſies and Umbrage which the King of Pruſſia, and ſome other Proteſtant States entertain'd upon this Event. The latter made preſſing Inſtances with the Queen of Great-Britain and the States-General, to engage them to interpoſe their good Offices, to oblige the Elector of Hanover to evacuate Hildeſheim. His Electoral Highneſs caus'd a kind of Manifeſto to be publiſh'd, to juſtify his Proceedings, and took particular Care that his Troops ſhould not touch the leaſt Part of the ordinary Revenues and Contributions, out of which that Biſhoprick us'd to furniſh its Quota to the Army of the Empire. The Chapter ſeeing the Elector firmly reſolv'd to have the Grievances of the Proteſtants of that Biſhoprick effectually redreſs'd, according to former Treaties and Conventions, thought it Prudence to give his Electoral Highneſs entire Satisfaction: Which being done accordingly, his Highneſs immediately withdrew his Forces from the Dependencies of Hildeſheim.

The Elector of Hanover protects the Proteſtants of Hildeſheim.

The King of Pruſſia being come to the Hague, to preſs the Concluſion of the Affair of the Succeſſion of the late King William, the Prince of Naſſau-Friezland, the other Claimant, was earneſtly deſir'd by his Pruſſian Majeſty to come thither alſo: His Highneſs comply'd, tho' not without ſome Reluctance, to leave the Confederate Army in the Middle of the Campaign, which ſeem'd to forebode the Fatality which attended that brave young Prince; who being come to Moerdyke, on the 14th of July, N. S. in his Way to the Hague, and being oblig'd to ferry over the Amer, he choſe to continue in his Coach, being fatigu'd with his Journey: He had with him Mr. Hilken, Maſter of his Horſe, and Colonel of his Guards; and when they were got very near the oppoſite Shore, a ſudden tempeſtuous Guſt of Wind aroſe, with which, and the Diſturbance of the Water, occaſion'd by it, the Horſes were ſo frighten'd, that they immediately leap'd over-board, overſet the Ferry-Boat, and dragg'd the Coach into the Amer, where the Prince and his Companion were ſoon drown'd, notwithſtanding the Endeavours of one of his Highneſs's Servants, who loſt his Life in endeavouring to ſave his Maſter's. The Death of this Prince, who, whatever Claims were ſet up by others to the Succeſſion of the late King William, did by general Conſent inherit the Vertues, and gave Hopes of attaining the Reputation of the illuſtrious Princes of Orange, was univerſally lamented by the States-General, by all the Inhabitants of the United Provinces, and in particular by the Army, who had been Witneſſes of his good Conduct, and heroick Bravery, in the memorable Sieges of Liſle, Doway, and Mons, the Battle of Oudenard, and chiefly that of Blaregnies.

The Prince of Naſſau Friſon drown'd.

Hiſtorians are oblig'd to record all National Events, let the Occaſion or Conſequence of 'em be good or bad. The Deſign of the new Managers to reduce Quebec and Canada, French Settlements in North America, was form'd by Colonel Nicholſon, who had taken Poſſeſſion of Nova Scotia, put a Garriſon into Port-Royal, and call'd it Annapolis. The four Indian Chiefs were alſo great Promoters of it; and it was certainly a good Project, if it had fallen into good Hands. The driving the French out of thoſe Parts would have driven them alſo out of the Newfoundland Trade entirely, and have been a very great Security to the Britiſh Settlements, New-England, and New-York. But it was not likely that a Sett of Men, whoſe Hearts were bent on entering into Friendſhip with the French, ſhould hear-

The miſerable Expedition to Canada.

tily

*A.D.*1711 tily ſet about an Enterprize that was likely to retard the Peace; however, they gradually engag'd themſelves in it, and Troops were ſent for from Flanders, and, with others in England, put on board Tranſports, under Convoy of Sir Hovenden Walker: The Regiments of Col. Kirke, Brig. Hill, Col. Clayton, Col. Wardreſs, Lieut. Gen. Seymour, Col. Deſannay, and a Battalion of Marines, commanded by Col. Charles Churchil, were ſhipp'd off at Portſmouth; in all about 5,000 Men, under the Command of Brig. Hill, Brother to Mrs. Abigail Maſham. The Squadron of Men of War conſiſted of the Edgar, Monmouth, Devonſhire, Humber, Swiftare, Kingſton, Sunderland, Montagu, and Dunkirk, which were to be reinforc'd by other Ships in the Weſt Indies. This Fleet ſail'd from Plymouth the 4th of May, and arriv'd at Boſton in New-England the 24th of June. General Hill and Admiral Walker going aſhore, a Council of War was held, in which it was reſolv'd to land the Troops, the Proviſions which they expected to be furniſh'd with at Boſton not being in any Readineſs. The Fleet upon their Arrival here conſiſted of twelve Men of War, forty Tranſport-Ships, and ſix Store-Ships, with all Manner of warlike Stores, and a fine Train of Artillery, with forty Horſe for the Uſe of the ſame, commanded by Col. King, with proper Officers. On the 20th of July, the Britiſh Forces return'd on Board their reſpective Ships, and were join'd by two Regiments of New-England and New-York, commanded by Col. Vetch, and Col. Walton. On the 30th of July, the Fleet ſail'd for the River of Canada, and Col. Nicholſon ſet out from Boſton for New-York, from whence he proceeded to Albany, where the Forces of New York, Connecticut, and New-Jerſey, about 1,000 Palatines, and about 1,000 Indians of the five Nations, under the Caſſaiques, who had been in England, rendezvous'd to the Number of about 4,000 Men, commanded by Colonel Ingoldſby, Col. Schuyter, and Col. Whiting, who march'd towards Canada the 28th of Auguſt. And thus far the Expedition ſeems pretty well concerted, except the Omiſſion of providing Supplies of Proviſions at Boſton in due Time; by the Delay of which the Seaſon for the ſafer Navigation in the River of St. Laurence was loſt; and except a due Foreſight and Care in providing Pilots who were acquainted with it, that River being the moſt difficult, and dangerous for Ships, of any in America, if not in the World. The Fleet arriv'd at the Mouth of the River of Canada, on the 14th of Auguſt, and on the 18th, The following Account was written by Sir Hovenden Walker, who piqu'd himſelf on writing finely: "The Wind " blowing freſh at N. W. we put into Caſpe- " Bay, where we ſtay'd till the 20th, being a- " fraid of loſing with the Tranſports that might " be blown to Leeward; but having got all of " them together, we proceeded up part of the " River of Canada, which is 130 Leagues long, " to Quebec, from the Mouth of it. On the " 21ſt it prov'd foggy, and continu'd ſo all " Night, and the Day following, with little " Wind till the Afternoon, when, in an extreme " thick Fog, it began to blow hard at E. and " E. S. E. we found ourſelves then in a dange- " rous Circumſtance, having neither Soundings, " nor Sight of Land, to ſteer any Courſe, or a- " ny Anchorage within 60 Leagues, and that " not ſafe: So that the Pilots on Board this " Ship, being the beſt in the Fleet, were of O- " pinion, that the Admiral ſhould make a Signal " to bring to, which he did with our Heads to " the Southward, judging by that we might eſcape *A.D.*1711 " Danger, and be driven by the Stream into the " Mid-Channel: But quite contrary, as we were " with the Wind Eaſterly, and our Heads to the " Southward, in two Hours we found ourſelves up- " upon the North-Shore, among Rocks and Iſlands, " where the whole Fleet had like to have been loſt. " The Men of War eſcap'd tho' with extreme Ha- " zard, but eight Tranſports were caſt away, with " about 800 Men, Officers, Soldiers, and Sea- " men.

" After this Diſaſter we continu'd there two " or three Days, ſeeing what Men and other " Things they could get from the Shore. Af- " ter which it was determin'd, by a Conſulta- " tion of Sea-Officers, to return back to ſome " Bay or Harbour, where the Fleet might ſafely " ride, till a further Reſolution ſhould be taken. " Accordingly, on the 14th of September, we " arriv'd in the Spaniſh River Bay, and a Coun- " cil of War, of Land and Sea-Officers, being " held, it was unanimouſly agreed to return " Home." This diſmal Account of the Expedition to Canada, was brought to England by Col. Clayton, who arriv'd not many Days before Sir Hovenden Walker, who came to Portſmouth with the Fleet, and the Remainder of the Tranſports, October the 9th. Six Days after, the Edgar, his own Ship, carrying 70 Guns, was blown up, with above 400 Men in her, at Spithead. This American Enterprize was the Jobb which one of the chief Miniſters would have got 20,000 l. by, ſaying, The Government was not worth ſerving, who would not allow ſuch Jobbs as that was, by falſe Reckonings, Bargains, Premiums, &c.

The Edgar blown up.

The Duke of Ormonde, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, held a Parliament there in July, which ſate but about a Month, and then was prorogu'd, having granted the Supplies requir'd by the Eſtimates. The Annaliſt writes, " It is " obſervable, that the Duke of Ormonde, Sir " Conſtantine Phipps, Lord-Chancellor, and the " Majority of the Iriſh Houſe of Peers, did " on ſeveral Occaſions viſibly favour and coun- " tenance the High-Church Party, if not down- " right Jacobites." Which moſt certainly they did, contrary to their repeated ſolemn Oaths of abjuring the Pretender; and being for their ſo doing perjur'd, I ſhould be glad to be inform'd with what Ceremony Men of that Character ought to be treated? The ſame Spirit of Jacobitiſm diſcover'd itſelf in Scotland alſo; that treacherous Faction having entire Dependance on the Protection of Mr. St. John, and others in the new Miniſtry. The Dutcheſs of Gordon, a Papiſt, ſent, about the latter End of June, to Mr. Robert Bennet, Dean of the Faculty of Advocates, a Silver Medal, with a Head on the Right-Side, and this Motto, Cujus eſt? On the Reverſe, the Britiſh Iſlands, with the Word Reddite, as a Preſent to the Faculty. This worthleſs and ſhameleſs Token of the Lady's Love to the Pretender, and the Faculty, was firſt left in the Hands of their Servants; the Dean being ſhy, either to accept or place it in the Repoſitory of Rarities (this Rarity of much leſs Value than Wat Tyler's Lathing-Staff) conſulted the Members of the Faculty, to whom he ſhew'd the Medal, telling them, with ſingular Formality, Her Grace the Dutcheſs of Gordon, ſends us as a Preſent the Medal of King James III. whom we, and the Engliſh call the Pretender; and, I hope, Thanks are to be return'd to her Grace. Mr. Alexander Stevenſon anſwer'd, The Medal ſhould be return'd to her Grace; for the receiving it

The Duke of Ormonde, and Mr. Phipps, favour the Jacobites in Ireland.

The Dutcheſs of Gordon gives the Pretender's Medal to the Faculty of Advocates in Scotland.

A.D.1711 it was throwing Dirt on the Face of the Government. He was ſeconded by Mr. Rob. Alaxander of Black-Houſe, who ſaid, that the receiving of ſuch a Medal was owning a Right contrary to her Majeſty's. Mr. Rob. Bennet reply'd, That Oliver Cromwel's Medal, who deſerv'd to be hang'd, and the Arms of the Common-wealth of England had been receiv'd, and why not this? Mr. Duncan Forbes, and Mr. Joſeph Hume ſaid, It was time enough to receive the Medal when the Pretender was hang'd; to whom adher'd Mr. Hugh Dalrymple, Son to the Preſident; Mr. James Ferguſon, Son to Sir John Ferguſon, and Sir James Stuart. Then roſe up Mr. Dundaſs of Armſton, and made an impudent, treaſonable Speech, for which his Neck ought to have been ſtretch'd by the Hangman.

Dean of Faculty,

Dundaſs's impudent, treaſonable Speech.

WHatever theſe Gentlemen may ſay of their Loyalty, I think they affront the Queen, when they pretend to honour her, by diſgracing her Brother, who is not only a Prince of the Blood, but the Firſt thereof: and if Blood can give any Right, he is our undoubted Sovereign.

[The late Mr. Rob. Harley, Mr. Henry St. John, Mr. Wm. Bromley, &c. were then the Miniſtry-paramount in Great-Britain, and it is therefore no Wonder Dundaſs eſcap'd the Gallows.] He went on;

I think too they call her Majeſty's Title in Queſtion, which is not our Buſineſs to determine; Medals are the Documents of Hiſtory, and therefore, tho' I ſhould give King William's Stamp with the Devil at his Right Ear, I ſee not how it cou'd be refus'd, ſeeing, an hundred Years hence it would prove, that ſuch a Coin had been in England. But, Dean of Faculty, What need of further Speeches? None oppoſe the receiving the Medal, and returning Thanks, but a few pitious, ſcoundrel Vermin and Muſhrooms, not worthy our Notice: Let us therefore proceed to name ſome of our Number to return our hearty Thanks to the Dutcheſs of Gordon.

Frontleſs Villain! Sir James Stuart, her Majeſty's Sollicitor, and the Perſons of Diſtinction before-mention'd, does he to their Faces, and in full Aſſembly of their Faculty, call ſcoundrel Vermin, and Muſhrooms; for which, and his treaſonable Expreſſions, he wou'd have been ty'd to the Cart's-Tail, and well laſh'd, if he had not fared worſe under any other Adminiſtration. The Dean of Faculty putting it to the Vote, it was carry'd by a great Majority, to return Thanks to her Grace of Gordon, which was order'd to be carry'd to her by the ſame Dundaſs, and one Mr. Horne of Weſthal, who, in Form, return'd her the moſt hearty Thanks of the Faculty for all her Favours, particularly, for preſenting them with a Medal of their Sovereign Lord the King; hoping, and being confident that her Grace ſhould very ſoon have an Opportunity to compliment the Faculty with a ſecond Medal, ſtruck upon the Reſtoration of the King and the Royal Family, and the finiſhing Rebellion, uſurping Tyranny, and Whiggery. There was ſomething extremely ridiculous, as well as deteſtably impudent in this Buſineſs; the Medal was not new ſtruck, nor the Value of it half a Crown; beſides, it was common among the Jacobites, and there was ſcarce a Cook-Wench in a Popiſh Family but had one of 'em. The Remarkable of it, beſides the Inſolence and Folly in ſending and receiving it, is, that it was ſuppos'd to be ſtruck upon the Change of the Miniſtry, in Complement to the good Opinion the Pretender had of the Merit and Friendſhip of the new Miniſters. To prevent my being charg'd with Partiality here, read the Annaliſt. "It was ſtruck "upon the fond Hopes given by the Jacobites in "England, to their Correſpondents in France, "that the Britiſh Nation was ready to declare "for the Pretender; to which the Diſturbances, "occaſioned by Dr. Sacheverel's Sermon and "Tryal, and the aſſerting the Doctrines of Di"vine Hereditary Right, and of abſolute Paſſive "Obedience, diametrically oppoſite to the late "Revolution and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, gave "ſome Air of Probability." The Timing of this doughty Preſent ſhew'd plain enough that it was intended to keep up the rebellious Spirit in Scotland, which had been breeding before the Union, and was now coming to Maturity; for this Half-a-Crown Rarity was to be receiv'd with ſo much Pomp immediately upon the Aſſembly of the Kirk publickly declaring themſelves for the Illuſtrious Houſe of HANOVER.

A.D.1711

Sir David Dalrymple, the Queen's Lord-Advocate, gave an Account of this traiterous Proceeding to the Duke of Queenſberry, one of the Secretaries of State; who happening to die about that Time, the Information was laid before the Queen by one of the other Secretaries; and the Crime was ſo flagrant, that there was no avoiding the ſending the Lord-Advocate Orders to enquire into it: upon which the Faculty thought fit to diſown Dundaſs, Horne, and the other factious Advocates in their Addreſs concerning the Medal, as done by a Party, and not by General Conſent; for it ſeems theſe Traitors had taken hold of an occaſional Meeting of the Faculty, to have Warrant for their treaſonable Proceedings; or, at leaſt, the Miniſters in England were willing to accept of ſuch an Excuſe, and to drop the Proſecution that was expected upon it: Inſtead of ſuch an Excuſe, Dundaſs wrote a Vindication of himſelf and the reſt of the Faction that were concern'd in this Farce; and all that was done to ſhew the Government's Reſentment, was, the ſuppreſſing his Libel. Monſieur de Creyenberg, Reſident from the Elector of Hanover, having, by his Highneſs's expreſs Order, preſented a Memorial, and made preſſing Inſtances for the Proſecution of Dundaſs, Horne, and their vile Aſſociates, the Farce aforeſaid was ſo well purſu'd, that Sir David Dalrymple, who was very ſincere and hearty in that Proſecution, as far as he was permitted to proceed, was remov'd from his Office of Lord-Advocate, on Pretence that he had been too remiſs in that Affair; tho', as the Annaliſt writes, He would have proſecuted the Medaliſts with greater Severity than any whatever, had he not had ſecret Inſtructions from a great Man at Court, not to ſtir farther in it.

In England the Jacobite Faction was rampant, and, as if they were ſure of Encouragement from the Miniſters, they ſtuck not at declaring directly and openly for the Pretender. An infamous News-Paper, call'd, The Poſt-Boy, was made uſe of by the new Miniſters, to convey their Scandal againſt the old into the World, and prepare the Way for their deſtructive Schemes: As a Poſtſcript to this Paper of the 5th of July, was added this Paragraph; "We are inform'd that Mr. White, "alias Leſley, is gone to Swiſſerland, in order, "if he can, to convert a certain young Gentle"man, and bring him over from Popery to Prote"ſtantiſm; if he ſucceeds, it's hop'd there will be "no Experiment try'd hereafter to run the Ha"zard of making uſe of a COMEOVER; for "theſe

A treaſonable Paragraph in the Poſt-Boy countenanc'd.

A.D.1711 " theſe Sort of Gentlemen ought to be no " more truſted than a ſtaunch Whig, tho' he " ſwears that he ſhall be for the Church and " Monarchy, except thoſe, meaning Mr. Harley, " Mr. St. John, &c. who have been ſenſible of " their Error, and ſince their Converſion have " merited the Eſteem of all honeſt Men." The Miniſters knew full well that this Paragraph was diſpers'd in Coffee-houſes; but no Provocations cou'd excite them to ſtir the leaſt Step in favour of the Houſe of Hanover: But as mindful as they were of the Pretender's Intereſt, they forgot not their own, and therefore continu'd to parcel out the Places and Honours amongſt themſelves.

Honours and Promotions.

Thomas Lord Raby came over from Holland, where he was ſtation'd as Ambaſſador Plenipotentiary, Either for ſecret Inſtructions, ſays the Annaliſt, or rather to make Bargains for future Services; having a private Pique againſt the Duke of Marlborough, from whom he had receiv'd Diſguſts, both in Flanders, and at Berlin; he was therefore judg'd to be the moſt proper Perſon to be a Check to his Grace, to whom not all the Generals, nor all the Armies of France could be a Check. We ſhall find by the Diſcoveries of the ſecret Committee, three or four Years afterwards, that he was a fit Man for the Purpoſe. The Queen made him Earl of Strafford; the Lord Dartmouth, Earl of Dartmouth; the Lord Ferrers, Earl Ferrers; the Earl of Orrery, Baron Boyle of Marſton in Somerſetſhire; Sir Simon Harcourt, Baron of Stanton-Harcourt in Oxfordſhire; the Duke of Hamilton, Duke of Brandon; but a Caveat being enter'd againſt that Patent, a Stop to it was put for the preſent. Mr. Peter Wentworth, Brother to the now Earl of Strafford, was made firſt Equery to the Queen; Col. Hammond, Governor of Landguard Fort, in the room of Col. Jones; Earl Paulet, Lord-Steward of the Houſhold; the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, Preſident of the Council; Henry Paget, Eſq; Capt. of the Yeomen of the Guard, in the room of Lord Viſc. Townſhend; William Ettrick, Eſq; Council for the Admiralty, in the room of George Townſhend, Eſq; James Bruce, Brother to the Earl of Ailesbury, Comptroller of the Army, in the room of Thomas Broderick, Eſq; the Earl of Winchelſea, Henry Paget, Eſq; Robert Benſon, Eſq; William Bromley, Eſq; and the Lord Raby, were ſworn Privy-Counſellors; the Duke of Buckinghamſhire was made Lord-Lieutenant of the North-Riding of Yorkſhire, in the room of the Duke of Newcaſtle, made Lord-Lieutenant of Bedfordſhire and Middleſex; the Earl of Denbigh, Lord-Lieutenant of Leiceſterſhire; the Earl of Scarſdale, Lord-Lieutenant of Derbyſhire, in the room of the Duke of Devonſhire; the Lord North and Grey, Lord-Lieutenant of Cambridgeſhire. About the Middle of July, Sir George Byng was declar'd Admiral of the White; Walter Whitfield, Eſq; who was much in favour with the Duke of Marlborough, was remov'd from the Place of Paymaſter-General of the Marines, to make room for Sir Roger Moſtyn of Flintſhire; the Lord Cheyne was made Clerk of the Pipe, in the room of William Ferrel, Eſq; Mr. John Caſs, a Brewer, was choſen one of the Sheriffs of London, to the great Joy of High-Church, ſays the Annaliſt, he having been ſo intimate with Sir John Friend, who was hang'd, drawn, and quarter'd for High-Treaſon, at the Time of the Aſſaſſination and Invaſion-Plots, that he ſhelter'd him in his Houſe, where he was taken, and carry'd thence to Newgate. The Harleians ſeem'd to affect Occaſion to ſhew their Complaiſance to any that belong'd to the Pretender, and got the Queen's Order to admit the Lord Clermont and his Brother, Capt. Middleton, Sons to the Earl of Middleton, who were taken on Board the Saliſbury, when the Pretender was going with them to Scotland, to Bail. Anthony Hammond, Eſq; who became at laſt as ſenſible as any Man of the treacherous and dangerous Deſigns of theſe Managers, was appointed Paymaſter of the Forces in Spain, in the room of Mr. Mead; the Duke of Kent was made Lord-Lieutenant of Bedfordſhire, upon the Deceaſe of the Duke of Newcaſtle, occaſion'd by a Fall from his Horſe, as he was Hunting. His Grace having been alſo Lord Privy-Seal, there was a great Competition for that high Office; the Dukes of Buckinghamſhire, Shrewſbury, and Leeds, the Earl of Nottingham, and the Lord Guernſey his Brother, the Earls of Clarendon, and Jerſey, were nam'd among the Tory Confederates; but the Duke and Dutcheſs of Somerſet made great Intereſt for the Lord Somers; and their Graces would have done great Service to their Country, if they could have prevail'd with the Queen to have given his Lordſhip that Place, and with the Lord Somers to have accepted it: But her Majeſty had another Man in her Eye, and his Lordſhip no manner of Inclination to be in Conjunction with the Lord Oxford, Mr. St. John, &c. The Duke of Shrewſbury took the Diſappointment of it ſo ill, that he retir'd to his Seat in Oxfordſhire, and the Prime Miniſter, and his faſt Friend, Mrs. Abigail Maſham, got the Seal for Dr. Robinſon, Bp. of Briſtol, who was no more fit for the Place than the Place was fit for him; it being inconſiſtent with his Vocation, by the Holy Ghoſt to take upon him the Paſtoral Charge, which is ſo well known to all who have any Knowledge of the Chriſtian Religion, that to ſay more of it would be Impertinence. This Choice, ſays the Annaliſt, diſquieted ſome great Men, the Effects of which appear'd not long after. There was no Need of much Speculation to conjecture, why ſo illuſtrious and improper a Poſt was beſtow'd upon a Miniſter of the Goſpel. He was, in a few Months, to take on him the Function of a Temporal Ambaſſador, and the Biſhoprick and the Seal were to give the Negotiations of Peace both Sanction and Shew.

A.D.1711

John Robinſon, D.D. Bp. of Briſtol, made Lord Privy-Seal

Being now about to enter upon the moſt wicked, as well as weak Tranſaction that ever diſgrac'd a great Nation, I muſt prepare the Way for it with other Mens Words, to defend myſelf againſt the Charge of Partiality.

" In the mean while, ſays the Annaliſt, thoſe " at the Helm carry'd on the Negotiations of " Peace, which they had clandeſtinely enter'd in- " to, with ſome Agents of France, even before " the old Miniſters were remov'd: To this " Purpoſe we may take Notice, that Mr. Henry " St. John, and Mr. Robert Harley himſelf, " had ſeveral private Meetings with Sieur Gual- " tier, an obſcure French Prieſt, who for ſome " time was protected by Count Gallas, and ſuffer'd " to ſay Maſs in his Chapel, and who being af- " terwards employ'd in London, by Count Tal- " lard, to receive and forward his Letters be- " tween Paris and Nottingham, began to be ta- " ken Notice of, and thereupon aſſum'd the Title " of Abbot. The Emiſſaries of France gave out " every where, That a ſecret Negotiation of Peace " was on foot, and that Court was not wanting " to cheriſh and improve the eager Diſpoſitions " towards

Mr. St. John, and Mr. Harley's ſecret Practices for Peace before the Change of the Miniſtry.

A.D.1711 " towards a Peace, which they found in the new " Britiſh Miniſtry." If their Hearts or their Heads had been good, they would not have let the Enemy know thoſe Diſpoſitions of theirs, 'till they had been ſure of the Terms they were to treat upon. Monſieur de Torcy tranſmitted Propoſitions of Peace to England, dated April 22, and ſign'd by himſelf: They were introduc'd with a Boaſt, that his Maſter did not propoſe Peace becauſe he was not able to carry on the War, but to give new Proofs of the Deſire he always had to preſerve the Peace of Europe. The Propoſitions were, 1. Security to the Engliſh for Commerce in Spain and to the Indies. 2. A Barrier for the Dutch to their Liking. 3. That reaſonable Means ſhould be thought of to ſatisfy the Allies of England and Holland. The next Propoſition is ſuch an Inſult on common Senſe, Honeſty, and Modeſty, that one muſt have a contemptible Opinion of thoſe that ſent and thoſe that receiv'd it. 4. As the good State of the Affairs of the King of Spain furniſh'd new Expedients to end the Differences touching that Monarchy, Endeavours ſhou'd be us'd to ſurmount the Difficulties rais'd on this Occaſion. Mr. Henry St. John, Secretary of Mr. St. John aſſures the States, the Queen will not treat without them.

The firſt Propoſitions of France.

State, tranſmitted theſe Trifles to the Lord Raby, the Queen's Ambaſſador at the Hague, to communicate them to the Penſionary, and to aſſure him, That the Queen would act in perfect Concert with the States in making Peace or War. So, it begins well; for we ſhall find every Step taken by the Britiſh Miniſters towards a Peace, from this time 'till they were come to a Point about it, was ſeparate, clandeſtine, and in Breach of all Treaties with the Allies. Mr. St. John deſir'd the Lord Raby to keep it as ſecret as poſſible; he own'd there was an Air of Complaiſance in the Propoſitions to England, which might not be well taken in Holland: He ſaid, the good Underſtanding between the Queen and the States ſhou'd be kept inviolably on her Part; and he was himſelf at that time reſolv'd to do all that lay in his Power to deſtroy it, unleſs the Dutch did what the new Managers would have 'em. The Dutch Miniſters told the Lord Raby, that the States took theſe Propoſitions to be very dark and general, and deſign'd to create Jealouſy between her Majeſty, that Repbulick, and their Allies. The Lord Raby himſelf adviſ'd, to go open with the States in this Matter, that they might have no Occaſion to accuſe the Engliſh of taking the leaſt Meaſures without them. But, ſays the Annaliſt, " It was not " long before Mr. St. John prepar'd the Lord " Raby to lay aſide his Scruples, and to entertain " other Sentiments of the Manner of carrying on " this Negotiation:" For having a few Days after, May 26, acquainted him with the Queen's Pleaſure, that he ſhould make all poſſible Haſte to come over, the Secretary frankly told him, That Britain had gone ſo much too far in weaving her Intereſt into that of the Continent, that it would prove no eaſy Taſk to diſentangle our Affairs, without Tearing or Rending. Some of his laſt Words were, That the Queen would act in perfect Concert with the States, and that the good Underſtanding between them ſhould be inviolably kept on the Part of England. If we find out ſuch a Man as this in common Life, what are the Names that we give him? Hiſtory will not admit them. In Anſwer to this honeſt Information, the Lord Raby, continues the Annaliſt, " took the Hint,

Mr. St. John's double Dealing.

Lord Raby's frank Offer.

" and aſſur'd the Secretary, He would venture " and undertake any thing to ſerve the Queen; " and ſo all Correſpondence between England " and Holland, concerning the preſent Treaty, " ended with the Communication of the firſt " Propoſals." I am very ſorry, out of Love to my Country, that England ſhould furniſh ſuch odious and ſcandalous Materials for Hiſtory, during the Miniſtry of theſe deſperate Men, that no Nation, be it ever ſo barbarous, can parallel The Author adds, on the other Hand, the Britiſh Miniſters were ſo forward as PRIVATELY to ſend over to France one of their Agents, Mr. Matthew Prior, who from a very low Extraction (he had been a Drawer at a Tavern, and was therefore call'd Matthew Pint-Pot, in the Whig Pamphlets) had gain'd a Name among the Wits of the Age, and who by adapting his flexible Principles to the prevailing Party, had, in the different Changes of the Miniſtry ſince the Revolution, found Means to raiſe himſelf. Tho' the ſubject Matter and Succeſs of his CLANDESTINE Negotiation, was for ſome time induſtriouſly kept ſecret, yet this Journey cou'd not be ſo kept; for about the Beginning of Aug. he was ſtopp'd by the Cuſtom-houſe Officers at Deal, upon his return from France: He went by an alias, as People about criminal Work generally do, and was detain'd 'till his true Name was known, and Orders came from London to let him go. Thus we find a Treaty, which was to be the Settlement of Empires, Kingdoms, and States, begun by an obſcure French Prieſt on one Hand, and a low-born Engliſh Poet on the other. Upon the Noiſe of this Adventure, Count Gallas expoſtulated with Earl Mortimer and Oxford about it, who told him as great a Truth as he was wont to tell others; You have no Reaſon to be alarmed, for the Queen will never make a Peace derogating from her Engagements with her Allies. This Foible is in every thing they ſay, and in every thing they do, as was before obſerv'd. The Annaliſt proceeds: " In order to palliate this clan- " deſtine Negotiation between Great-Britain and " France, which was no longer a Myſtery, and " to feel the Pulſe of the Nation about a Peace, " the Agents of the Britiſh Miniſters publiſh'd a " Pamphlet, intitul'd, A New Journey to Paris, " together with ſome ſecret Tranſactions between " the French King and an Engliſh Gentleman." As ridiculous as a Dialogue wou'd be between Alexander the Great and Tom D'urfey. Our Author adds, " This Account, under the fictitious " Name of M. du Beaudries, was written by " Mr. Jonathan Swift, formerly Chaplain to Sir " William Temple, an ingenious but ambitious " Clergyman, who had ſome time before devo- " ted himſelf to the Whigs, and wr tten againſt " the Tories; but being diſappointed in his Hopes " of Preferment, upon the Revolution in the " Miniſtry he immediately tack'd about, liſted " himſelf in the Service of High-Church, and " with Mr. Prior, Dr. Friend, Mr. Oldeſworth, " and others, was employ'd in writing a Weekly " Paper, call'd, The Examiner; the Deſign of " which was to inveigh againſt the late Miniſters " with all poſſible Bitterneſs, as is taken Notice " of elſewhere." Mr. Swift's whole Account of the Journey to Paris is one continu'd Falſhood, to give Credit to this treacherous Negotiation; for he makes Mr. Prior to be in Conference with the French Prime Miniſter, in a little Houſe at the Fagg-end of the Villiage of Verſailles, which is over-heard. The Prime Miniſter having heard Matthew Prior's Demands, cry'd out, Bon Dieu! Good Good! was there ever any thing like it? You could not demand more of our great Monarch, if you were at the Gates of Paris: For the Love of God, Monſieur Prior, relax ſomething, if your Inſtructions will permit you: Is it not enough that our King will

Mr. Matt. Prior ſtopp'd by Cuſtom-houſe Officers.

Lord-Treaſurer's Promiſe to Count Gallas.

Mr. Swift writes for the Whigs.

A.D.1711 will abandon his Grandſon, but he muſt lend his own Arm to pull him out of the Throne? Why did you not open yourſelf to me at Boulogne? Why are you more inexorable here than you were there? You have riſen in your Demands by ſeeing Madam Maintenon's Deſire for a Peace: As able as you are to continue the War, conſider which is to be moſt preferr'd. Here the cloven Foot is diſcover'd; The Good of your Country, or the particular Advantage of your General; for he will be the only Gainer among your Subjects. With ſuch Stuff as this did the Harleians amuſe and impoſe upon the People; the delighting in War; the Duke of Marlborough's Ambition; the aggrandizing the Emperor, and other like groundleſs and abſurd Topicks, were enlarged upon, aggravated, and expatiated by their Libellers, to diſpoſe the People to accept of any Peace France thought fit to give them. While, on the other Hand, the Friends to the Common Cauſe had nothing to ſay for the continuing the War, 'till a ſafe and honourable Peace could be procured, but the Reaſons for which that War was entred into, the ſettling a Balance of Power in Europe, and ſecuring the Rights and Liberties of the Nations concern'd in it; but, the ſolemn and ſacred Engagements made by the Queen with the Confederates, for thoſe neceſſary as well as glorious Ends; but, her ſacred, ſolemn, and repeated Aſſurances, never to make any Peace without recovering Spain and the Indies out of the Hands of the Houſe of Bourbon; but, the looſing the Fruits of an hundred Victories, purchas'd at the Price of Mountains of Treaſure, and Seas of Blood; but, the more than Probability, that one Campaign more, tho' far ſhort of the Blenheims, Ramelies, and Oudenard's, would carry the Confederate Army to thoſe Gates of Paris, which the pretended Prime Miniſter of France ſpoke of as unapproachable: We muſt add to this too, that by a ſafe and honourable Peace, the Proteſtant Succeſſion in Britain, the only Security the Britons had for their Religion and Liberty, and the Proteſtant Religion all over Chriſtendom, would have been ſufficiently guarded againſt all open or ſecret Attempts of the Enemies to both.

The Miniſtry impoſe upon weak People with falſe Stories and Arguments.

Reaſons for continuing the War.

'Twas ſaid, in excuſe of ſending Mr. Prior to France, as if to beg a Peace of the French King, who had been begging it two Years at the Hague and Gertrudenberg, that Monſ. de Torcy wrote firſt to his old Friend, the Earl of Jerſey, that ſomebody might be ſent over to France, to hear what he had to ſay; but that is as ridiculous as all other Excuſes of the Management of this Miniſtry. What if ſuch a Letter was ſent to Torcy's old Friend, ought not thoſe Miniſters to have determin'd the ſending an Agent to France in concert with the Dutch, as the Queen had promiſed? It will not bear Argument, 'tis too groſs and ſhocking; and the Honour of our Nation is ſo much concern'd in it, that it is to be wiſh'd, that theſe falſe and evil Counſellors, their Councils and Actions could be forgotten for ever, as a Diſgrace to all Hiſtory. Every one knew at that time, that Mr. St. John not only circulated and ſupported the Examiner, but that he wrote ſeveral of thoſe infamous Libels, as alſo the Letter to the Examiner, ſome Months before, containing Hints and Inſtructions for Meſſrs Swift, Friend, and Oldeſworth, which they faithfully obſerved in carrying on that Paper; in which, the firſt Notice was given of what was to be expected from the preſent Managers, with reſpect to the Negotiations of Peace, in that of the 11th of April; which probably was the Work of that ſedate, virtuous Politician Mr. St. John.

It is ſaid, Suppoſe a Council is to be purſu'd, which is neceſſary to carry on the Deſigns of a prevailing Party: You muſt know he is ſo whimſical as to call the Queen, Parliament, and all the People of Great-Britain, except himſelf, the Harleys, &c. the Emperor, the States-General, and all the Allies, a Party, becauſe they were all for carrying on the War, 'till the Duke of Anjou quitted, or was driven out of Spain, as well as the old Miniſtry in England, to whom he here particularly applies it; to preſerve them in Power, to gratify the immeaſurable Appetite of a few Leaders, Civil and Military, tho' by hazarding the Ruin of the whole Nation. This Council, deſperate in it ſelf, unpreſidented in the Nature of it, they procure a Majority to form an Addreſs, which makes it look like the Senſe of the Nation; for under that Shelter they carry on their Work, and lie ſecure againſt after Reckonings. I muſt be free to tell my Meaning in this, That among other Things, I underſtand it of the Addreſs to the Queen about three Years ago, to deſire that her Majeſty would not conſent to a Peace without the entire Reſtitution of Spain. This upſtart Stateſman, or his Hireling, did not think it worth minding, that all the Treaties of Alliance againſt France; all the Declarations of the Allies of Queen Anne; and all the Addreſſes of her Parliaments, on the ſubject of the Grounds of the War, were full of Reſolutions not to conclude it without that Reſtitution; nay, the Houſe of Lords, but a few Weeks before this Libel was publiſh'd, ſaid, in their Repreſentation of the Management of the War in Spain; When we previouſly conſider how your Majeſty entred into this War, for aſſerting the Liberties of Europe, and the Rights of the Houſe of Auſtria to the Spaniſh Monarchy, which had been wreſted from them by the Artifices and Uſurpations of the French King; nay, nine Days after Mr. St. John or one of his Libellers had ſaid this in the Examiner, both Houſes of Parliament, the Lords, and even this Houſe of Commons ſaid, in an Addreſs, We are truly ſenſible of the great Loſs the Allies have ſuſtain'd by the Death of the Emperor, and do with all Duty acknowledge the early and wiſe Care your Majeſty has been pleas'd to take, to prevent the ill Conſequences thereof, by reſolving to ſupport the Intereſt of the Houſe of Auſtria. In the Beginning of September another Paper, ſupported by the ſame Mr. St. John, call'd, The Poſt-Boy, in an Article from the Hague had theſe Words. The Miniſter of Triers, who has been with his Maſter at Frankfort, arrived here on Saturday laſt, to take Care of the Elector's Affairs in caſe of a Negotiation of Peace; the Reaſon is, becauſe 'tis ſtill aſſur'd, that it is carry'd on in England; at leaſt, our Advices from thence, as well as thoſe from France, inſinuate as much. An Expreſs alſo arrived here on Saturday laſt from Count Gallas, with Diſpatches for Count Zinzendorf, intreating him to return, in regard it was highly probable that the Peace haſted to its Concluſion. The Diſcourſe of the Miniſters is, that the late Preliminaries will not be inſiſted upon, but that another Scheme of Peace will be formed, after which the Congreſs may aſſemble here to ſign it. A very honourable Way of proceeding this! the Imperial Miniſter is invited to come back, for fear the Peace ſhould be concluded before his Return; and the reſt of the foreign Miniſters are to have nothing to do but to ſign it, the Scheme being ready formed to their Hands.

A.D.1711

Mr. St. John's Libels firſt breaks the Deſign of making a bad Peace.

He vilifies a Majority.

His Arguments groundleſs and impudent.

Mr. St. John gives Notice of a Treaty in his Newspaper.

Notwithſtanding all the Treaties, Declarations, Addreſſes, and Aſſurances, about recovering Spain, and the Indies for the Houſe of Auſtria,

A.D.1711 ſtria; notwithſtanding the Addreſs of the Houſe of Lords, of the 20th of April, to the ſame Effect, yet did Mr. Secretary St. John, or one of his Mercenaries, in the Examiner of the 26th of April, explode the Demand of the Reſtitution of the Spaniſh Monarchy as Temerity, Folly, and Gaſconade.

The private Propoſitions which Mr. Prior carry'd to France with him are not worth repeating; but, alas, our Hiſtory would for the four laſt Years of this Reign be very ſcant, if we ſhould relate nothing but what is worth it: The Contents were, To make no Peace without Satisfaction to the Allies, according to Agreements and Treaties. [It makes one tremble to think that ſuch Falſhood ſhould be National] The Dutch to have a Barrier; the Emperor and the Duke of Savoy Security; the Settlement of the Government in Great-Britain to be acknowledg'd; Dunkirk to be demoliſh'd; Great-Britain to have the Aſſiento, and Newfoundland; and laſt of all, and above all, in Breach of all Treaties and Alliances of Promiſes, and what ever is ſacred in all humane Compacts, That the SECRET ſhould be INVIOLABLY kept. Monſieur de Torcy finding Mr. Prior had no full Power, wrote to Mr. St. John, that He ſaw with great Pleaſure, Mr. Prior, after an Interval of ſo many Years, that he could have wiſh'd he had greater Liberty to employ his great Talents, which he was perſuaded he would have made a good Uſe of; but hop'd Monſieur Meſnager would ſupply what he could not do. This Monſieur Meſnager was much of the ſame Rank as Mr. Prior, a ſort of Secretary to the Council of Commerce in France, as Mr. Prior was one of the Commiſſioners of Trade in England. Another Agent in this fraudful Affair, was one Arthur Moore, who had been a Servant to Sir James Hayes, of the African-Company: Theſe were the Plenipotentiaries behind the Curtain, and they did more towards the Peace, ſuch a one as it was, than the Lord Privy-Seal, the Earl of Strafford, the Mareſchal de Huxelles, or the Abbot de Polignac. Meſnager, and another French Emiſſary came to England with Mr. Prior, and the former had frequent private Conferences with Secretary St. John, the Duke of Shrewſbury, whoſe Name I wiſh I had not met with on this Occaſion, the Lord Dartmouth, and eſpecially with the Treaſurer: At one of their Meetings, at Mr. Prior's Houſe, Monſieur Meſnager deliver'd thoſe Miniſters a formal Anſwer of the French King, to the formal Demand which Mr. Prior deliver'd the Prime Miniſters in France. The Queen being then at Windſor, Mr. St. John wrote her, That the French King had comply'd with every Article, except that relating to North-America; and he doubted not, they ſhould be able to compound that too: That the Treaſurer had propos'd ſome Alterations, to make the Propoſitions more palatable in Holland, which they ſhould get over; and therefore deſir'd a Warrant for full Powers to ſign. He deſir'd alſo, that Mr. Prior might be added to thoſe who were to have theſe Powers, becauſe he had treated with M. de Torcy in Perſon: He concluded, that the Plenipotentiaries, to be nam'd in the full Powers, were the Lords of the Cabinet-Council, as the Earl of Oxford, the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, the BISHOP of Briſtol, the Duke of Shrewſbury, Earl Paulet, the Earl of Dartmouth, and himſelf: But the Agreement was made before by Mr. St. John and Meſnager, the Queen knowing nothing more of the Matter, than what Mrs. Abigail Maſham and Earl Mortimer were pleas'd to tell her in Generals. My French Hiſtorian informs us, Ils eurent pluſieurs Conferences avec cet Envoye Menager, ſans etre author ſer par la Reine, mais lorſq; ils furent prets de Signer les Preliminaries ils crurent qu'il falloit interpoſer le nom de la Princeſs. Upon this they got the abovemention'd Order, Qui ne venoit qu' apres coup & fut antidate trois jours; which came not till the Buſineſs was over, and was antedated three Days. The French Hiſtorian adds, They took another Precaution to prevent their being call'd to an Account for their Conduct; which was, that in the whole Courſe of this Negotiation there was not one Miniſter that ſign'd any Act, or any Writing concerning it. Deeds of Darkneſs are always ſo manag'd; and Perſons who deſerve to be hang'd for what they are doing, have generally Senſe enough to take Care that there be as little Evidence of it as poſſible. In Truth, moſt of the Cabinet, though they had readily concurr'd in treating with Meſnager, declin'd ſetting their Hands to the Treaty, and ſo the Special Preliminaries, between Great-Britain and France, ſign'd by Monſieur Meſnager, the 27th of September, were accepted, and ſign'd only by the Earl of Dartmouth, and his Brother in Office, Mr. Secretary St. John; the latter, who, like another Treaty-Man, had reſolv'd to venture any thing, and undertake any thing, to ſerve the Queen, as they call'd it, needed not to have been afraid of putting his Hand and Seal to whatever the French King, or the Pretender would have requir'd of him; he had done ſo much to ſerve them, that he had no Way to keep his Head on his Shoulders a little longer, but to go on doing till the Confederacy was broken, and with it the Proteſtant Succeſſion. The ſame Day that theſe Special Preliminaries were ſign'd, another Set of General Preliminary Articles, on the Part of France, was ſign'd by the ſame Managers, as was alſo a ſeparate Article in favour of the Duke of Savoy: And from this Time a perfect Confidence was eſtabliſh'd between the Courts of England and France. A Week after, Meſnager and a Frenchman, who came with him, ſaid to be the Abbot de Boſc, return'd to France; Meſnager having firſt been honour'd, by the Queen, with a private Converſation in her Cloſet; and, at his Requeſt, the Mareſchal de Tallard was permitted to go to France for four Months on his Parole, which ended in his Enlargement without Ranſom; the Firſt-Fruits of this clandeſtine, fraudulent, and ſcandalous Negotiation. The Annaliſt adds, "Meſnager, by Encouragement from "Mr. St. John, ſtill living, ſpoke to the Queen "in favour of the Pretender, whom he call'd "her Brother, and her Majeſty ſeem'd not diſ-"pleas'd with the Diſcourſe. He obtain'd al-"ſo, by Means of Mrs. Abigail Maſham, a "verbal Promiſe, That private Inſtructions ſhould "be ſent to the Earl of Strafford, not to inſiſt "on the French King's giving up the Intereſts of "the Pretender abſolutely." This Writer tells us farther, he had ſeen a Letter from a good Hand in Paris, importing, That Monſieur Meſnager, upon his Return thither, was very ſanguine, and had affected publickly to affirm, That the Peace was as good as concluded, and that in particular, he laid great Empheſis on the Advantages granted in favour of the Prince of Wales, which appear'd very unlikely, when People compar'd the Weight of ſuch an Affair with the Abilities of Mr. Meſnager, who never was accounted a great Genius. But no great Genius was requir'd to negotiate with Perſons, who lik'd the Peace the better for its being a bad one. A good one could not have done their Buſineſs. If Spain and the Weſt-Indies had been taken from a

The wicked Propoſitions ſent to France by Mr. Prior.

Mr. Prior flatter'd by the French King.

The Managers of the clandeſtine Negotiations.

Meſnager ſent from France to England.

The Engliſh Miniſters treat with him privately.

The Counſellors that had full Power for it.

Mr. St. John concludes without the Queen's Knowledge.

A.D.1711

The Warrant forgot, afterwards antedated.

The other Counſellors do not ſign the clandeſtine Preliminaries.

The Courts of England and France in cloſe Confidence.

Tallard let go for nothing.

Meſnager ſpeaks to the Queen for the Pretender.

He is reckon'd a mean Fellow in France.

A.D. 1711 Bourbon Prince, and the Confederates been satisfy'd in all their juſt Demands, France would have been reduc'd to ſo low a Condition, that ſhe muſt have abandon'd the Intereſt of the Pretender for ever; and without that Intereſt the Harleians could not have ſupported themſelves againſt the Remonſtrances of all the Friends to the Common Cauſe, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion at Home and Abroad. When Meſnager was gone, thoſe faithleſs Negotiators communicated the Preliminaries he had ſign'd to Count Gallas, and other Foreign Miniſters. They will make but a pitiful Figure in Hiſtory, yet it cannot well be without them.

Preliminary Articles, on the Part of France, for effecting a General Peace.

Meſnager's Preliminaries communicated to Count Gallas.

I. "HE will acknowledge the Queen of "Great-Britain in that Quality, as alſo the Succeſſion of that Crown, according to "the preſent Settlement.

II. "He will freely, and BONA FIDE, "conſent to the taking all juſt and reaſonable "Meaſures for hindering that the Crowns of "France and Spain may ever be united on the "Head of the ſame Prince, His Majeſty being "perſuaded that this Acceſs of Power would "be contrary to the Good and Quiet of Eu"rope.

III. "The King's Intention is, That all the "Parties engag'd in the preſent War, with"out excepting any of them, may find their "reaſonable Satisfaction in the Treaty of Peace "which ſhall be made. That Commerce "may be re-eſtabliſh'd, and maintain'd for the "future, to the Advantage of Great-Britain and "Holland, and of the other Nations who have "been accuſtom'd to exerciſe Commerce.

IV. "As the King will likewiſe maintain ex"actly the Obſervation of the Peace, when it "ſhall be concluded; and the Object the King "propoſes to himſelf being to ſecure the Fron"tiers of his Kingdom, without diſturbing in "any Meaſures whatſoever the neighbouring "States, He promiſes to agree, by the Treaty "which ſhall be made, That the Dutch ſhall "be put in Poſſeſſion of the fortify'd Places "which ſhall be mention'd in the Netherlands, "to ſerve hereafter for a Barrier, which may "ſecure the Quiet of the Republick of Hol"land againſt any Enterprize from the Part of "France.

V. "The King conſents likewiſe, That a "ſecure and convenient Barrier ſhould be form'd "for the Empire, and for the Houſe of Au"ſtria.

VI. "Notwithſtanding Dunkirk coſt the King "very great Sums, as well to purchaſe as to for"tify it, and that 'tis farther neceſſary to be at "very conſiderable Expences for razing the "Works, his Majeſty is willing, however, to en"gage to cauſe 'em to be demoliſh'd immediately "after the Concluſion of the Peace, on Con"dition, that for the Fortifications of that Place, "a proper Equivalent, that may content him, "be given him: And as England cannot fur"niſh that Equivalent, the Diſcuſſion of it ſhall "be referr'd to the Conferences to be held for "the Negotiation of the Peace.

VII. "When the Conferences for the Ne"gotiation of the Peace ſhall be form'd, all the "Pretenſions of the Princes and States, en"gag'd in the preſent War, ſhall be therein "diſcuſs'd BONA FIDE, and amicably; and "nothing ſhall be omitted to regulate and ter"minate them to the Satisfaction of all Par"ties."

A.D. 1711

Done at London the 27*th of* Sept. O. S. 1711.

MESNAGER.

Tho' I was well acquainted with the Oppoſition theſe Managers met with, and the Tracts that were written to expoſe their ruinous Management, and prevent, if poſſible, the Ruin to which they had devoted us; yet, for want of Room, I am oblig'd to content myſelf with a few Paſſages out of the beſt of them.

Mr. Maynwaring ſhuns the Treachery and Scandal of theſe Negotiations,

Mr. Maynwaring publiſh'd the Preliminary Articles of the Hague Treaty, and three Articles of the Grand Alliance before them, to ſhew by the former, what Difference there was between the Offers of France, by that mean Agent Meſnager, and thoſe made by Monſieur de Torcy, Prime Miniſter to Lewis XIV. The three Articles of the Grand Alliance were to let the World ſee how that Treaty oblig'd us to act in Concert with the Confederates. He wrote Remarks upon the preſent Negotiations of Peace, which Diſcourſe had a mighty Run, tho' handed about privately, with no Bookſeller's, nor Publiſher's Name to it: He begins it with ſhewing how not only King William, but Queen Anne, had oblig'd themſelves, by the moſt ſolemn and repeated Engagements, to make no Peace till his Imperial Majeſty had Satisfaction for his Pretenſions to Spain and the Weſt-Indies, and faithfully to communicate their Deſigns to the Confederates. He then enlarges on the ſeveral Reſolutions and Addreſſes of Parliament, and the Queen's Anſwers as poſitive, for recovering Spain and the Indies, for the Houſe of Auſtria, as Words could expreſs, or bind.

contrary to the moſt ſolemn Treaties and Engagements.

If the Harleians wanted Light in ſo difficult an Affair as they were entering upon, Mr. Maynwaring held it up to them; he ſet before them all the ill Conſequences of the bad Peace they were treacherouſly and ſecretly negotiating; he warn'd them of the Deſtruction they were bringing upon our dear Couutry, and left them without the leaſt Pretence to an Excuſe for their clandeſtine and criminal Conduct. They went on blindly, raſhly, and obſtinately; they had Views beyond even putting an inglorious End to this glorious War; they had the Pretender and Revolution in their Heads, and a King to impoſe upon us by the Help of France, which they muſt deſpair of effecting, if all the ill Conſequences of their ill Peace did not happen as our excellent Author ſaw they would, and told them as follows;

Mr. Maynwaring ſhews the ill Conſequences of this wicked Management.

"As to the Conſequences of this Negotiation, "there is one that muſt needs be obvious to "the whole World; it muſt certainly diſſolve "all Truſt and Agreement among the Allies, "and ſure nothing that weakens the Alliance "can tend to ſecure our own Dominions, or to "reduce France. I have already ſhewn that "there are two Things which the Allies have "particularly promis'd to perform; One is, to "act jointly and openly with the reſt of the Con"federates; the other is, to aſſiſt the Emperor "in aſſerting his Right to Spain: But ſecret "Steps have been now made towards Peace, "without the Concurrence or Knowledge of all "the Parties; and Meaſures have been taken "for dividing that Succeſſion which the Allies

"are

A.D.1711 " are engag'd to preſerve entire. A Deſign has
" been laid for diſpoſing of the Spaniſh Monarchy,
" in Favour of one who has no Right to it with-
" out the Conſent of that Prince, whoſe Succeſ-
" ſion it is; and the beſt Part of it is allow'd to
" an Enemy, in prejudice of a Friend. This is
" a Precedent which ſhould never be approved of,
" becauſe no body knows where it may end, or
" what ſecret Bargain may be made for other
" Kingdoms.

" Nor is it enough to ſay, that all theſe Ne" gotiations amount to no more than receiving
" Propoſals from France, which the Dutch them-
" ſelves have done: The Dutch never courted in
" the Cabinet thoſe that they had conquer'd in
" the Field. If Monſieur Pettecum went to " France, it was in an open, avow'd Manner;
" and if ſome little French Agents have at any
" time lurk'd in Holland, that Republick ought
" not to be blam'd for it, ſuch Wretches will al-
" ways creep into every free Country; and I
" wiſh there are not too many of them, at this
" time, unknown and undiſcovered here. But
" ſuch Accidents are of no weight in the great
" Queſtion now before us: The French Spies may " have often been in Holland; the Dutch have
" never in this War ſent an Agent to France, ve-
" ſted with Authority to propoſe a ſhameful
" Peace. It was the Glory and Happineſs of the " Queen and her People, that the Allies had en-
" tire Dependance upon England, and that ſhe
" ſupported with her own Hands the Balance
" of Europe; how then durſt any body adviſe
" or approve new Meaſures? The French wiſh'd
" for nothing but Spain and the Weſt-Indies; 'tis
" the Prize they have all along fought for; and
" ſhall they gain it now, by being beaten nine
" Campaigns? There is ſomething ſo new and " extraordinary in this, that it muſt needs make
" the Fame of their Negotiations immortal.
" But who will pretend to juſtfy ſuch Proceedings
" in other Places, ſuch unaccountable Turns of " Intereſts and Councils? Will not ſome of the " Allies think they are abandon'd by others, and
" that the Liberties of Europe are betray'd? Will
" not the Emperor complain that he is neglected
" by his Friends? Will he not juſtly complain
" that they had not Patience to ſee what he would " offer? what Proofs he would give of his Zeal
" for the Common Cauſe, what additional " Troops he would ſend into the Service, and
" what further Endeavours he would uſe of all
" kinds for recovering his own Right, and for re-
" venging the Injuſtice of his Enemies? Beſides,
" will not the myſterious Manner in which ſome
" Things have been carried on, give Grounds for
" Jealouſies and Diviſions, and make People ſuſpect
" there is ſomething wrong at Bottom? What
" need had there been elſe of a Diſguiſe? Fair
" and juſt Deſigns for the publick Good can al-
" ways bear the Light. But there are ſome cer" tain Matters which all the World knows were
" not communicated, but diſcover'd; and when
" at laſt the Secret was out, Propoſals were then
" immediately printed in the Poſt-Boy; not as a
" Project upon which Men might deliberate,
" but as a Sentence which they muſt patiently
" ſubmit to: The Allies were all threaten'd,
" allarm'd, and inſulted in that Paper; and if
" any of their Miniſters pretended to remon-
" ſtrate, he was firſt corrected by that Scribler,
" and afterwards Reaſons were given for ordering
" his Departure.

Mr. Meſſnager's Articles abhorr'd.

Mr. Meſnager's Preliminaries were ſo generally abhorr'd and deſpis'd, that the Managers found it neceſſary to put a Stop to the Clamour that was rais'd againſt them, which they endeavour'd to do by other Articles, to be printed in that Paper, among which were thoſe for yielding up Cadiz, and the Coaſts of the South-Sea, to the Engliſh, for the Benefit and Security of Commerce. The Effronterie of this is without Parallel, not one Syllable of it was true, and yet the Harleians ſpread it about as a Thing agreed and to be depended upon.

A.D.1711 The Miniſters give out other Articles, not one Word of which was true.

Count Gallas the Imperial Ambaſſador had, in the Year 1707, found out another ſuch clandeſtine Negotiation for a Peace with France, carry'd on by Meſſ. Harley and St. John, without concert with the Miniſters, and no doubt with the Queen's Conſent, who always ſhew'd a Willingneſs to hear any thing that tended to put an End to the War, after ſhe began to give Ear to what Mrs. Abigail Hill ſaid to her: This wiſe and vigilant Miniſter had got ſome Light into Mr. St. John's dark Intrigues with the French Agents, before the Preliminaries were communicated to him, and had expoſtulated with him and his Colleagues ſo much about it, that he became troubleſome to them; upon which, Endeavours were us'd to have him recall'd; which not ſucceeding, they got the Queen to order his being forbid the Court, which happen'd thus: The Count deſigning to diſpatch an Expreſs to his Maſter, the Emperor, who was then at Milan, ſent to Mr. Secretary St. John's Office for a Paſs upon his Certificate, as uſual; but one of the Under-Secretaries, or Clerks, having anſwer'd, That they could grant no Paſs upon his Excellency's Certificate, without the Queen's Orders, the Expreſs was not ſent away. The next Day, Oct. 27, upon the Return of his Excellency's Gentleman of the Horſe, whom he had diſpatch'd to the Emperor with an earneſt Deſire for Leave to go home; (for what Man of Honour could take Pleaſure in having to do with ſuch Men as Mr. St. John, Mr. Harley, &c.) Count Gallas wrote a Letter to the Earl of Dartmouth, the other Secretary, acquainting him, that he had receiv'd his Imperial Majeſty's Command to repair to Frankfort, and deſiring to know when he might go to Hampton-Court, to take his Leave of the Queen: The Lord Dartmouth, anſwer'd, He was ſorry that Letter came too late, having already receiv'd Orders from her Majeſty not to have any further Correſpondence with his Excellency, which Mr. Secretary St. John was order'd to notify to him more at large. Accordingly Sir Clement Cotterel, Maſter of the Ceremonies, waited upon the Count the next Day, and acquainted him from the Secretaries, by the Queen's Order, That he ſhould no more come to Court, his Behaviour of late not being agreeable to her Majeſty; but that whatever ſhould for the future be preſented to her from his Imperial Majeſty, by the Hands of another Miniſter, ſhould be very well receiv'd. There is a Meanneſs and Weakneſs in this Proceeding which deſerves Pity: The Queen is doubtleſs out of the Queſtion. Theſe Managers had given more than ſufficient Reaſon for all Count Gallas's Expoſtulations: He ſaw no good was to be done with ſuch Men; he was weary of dealing with them, and wanted to be gone, for which he had obtain'd Leave from his Maſter. All this they knew; but to ſhew the French that any thing might be expected from their Complaiſance for their new Friends, they muſt needs have this imaginary Slur put upon a Miniſter who had faithfully diſcharg'd his Duty, in oppoſing Meaſures ſo oppoſite to the Emperor's Intereſt, and the Queen of England's Engagements to Count Gallas found out Mr. Harley's and Mr. St. John's Treachery in 1707, and at this Time.

He is forbid the Court.

The Meanneſs and Weakneſs of that Proceeding.

A.D 1711 to promote them. But, alas, to be forbidden a Court which he had forbid himself; a Court where the Harleians were prevalent, was so far from being a Slur, that Count Gallas was the more esteem'd and applauded, even in England as well as other Parts of Europe. The Paris Gazetteer having introduced this Story with a notorious Lie, Qu'il sortit au plutot d' Angleterre; That he should forthwith leave the Kingdom; adds, Ou ne scait pas precisement, &c. 'Tis not certainly known what was the Occasion of his being thus treated; however, it is attributed to his using some Expressions that were not very respectful in a Conference with the Sieur St. John, in his Complaints and Reproaches. The Count being willing to know what had been determin'd in their Counsels, as to his Departure, the Sieur St. John return'd Answer, He might go away when he thought fit.

Count Gallas esteem'd and applauded for his Conduct.

The Emperor having Information of Mesnager's Journey, Business, and Success in England, wrote a Circular-Letter to the States-General, and the Electors of the Empire, to desire them to join Councils with him, to induce the Queen of Great-Britain to continue the War, or to adhere to the preceding Preliminaries, and not to trust the immortal Glory she had gain'd, and the certain Welfare of her People, to the Infidelity of French Promises. Count Goes, his Ambassador at the Hague, presented a Memorial to the States, to desire them not to come to any Resolution about the Treaty, but in Conjunction with his Imperial Majesty, or his Ministers. The States return'd a civil Answer, and dispatch'd Mr. Buys, Pensionary of Amsterdam, to England, to act for them in this critical Juncture, and he perform'd his Part so well, that the Paris Gazetteer attributed the Warmth which appear'd in the House of Lords against Mesnager's Preliminaries, to the Management of that artful Negotiator. The Duke of Shrewsbury being nam'd a Plenipotentiary for the Treaty, declin'd it; and, indeed, I have often wonder'd with what Face the British Plenipotentiaries could appear among the Ministers of the Allies, when the Errand they were sent upon was quite contrary to the whole Tenour of the Grand Alliance.

The Emperor's Representation to the Queen against those ruinous Practices.

Duke of Shrewsbury will not be a Plenipotentiary.

About a Month after Mr. Buys came to London, he receiv'd Advice from Holland, that the States-General had given Way to the importunate Sollicitations of the British Plenipotentiary, and consented to grant Passports to the French Plenipotentiaries; upon which the Treasurer had a Conference with him about the Place of Treaty, and the Queen having nam'd Utrecht, it was agreed to by Mr. Buys, and notify'd to the Foreign Ministers by Secretary St. John. It was also declar'd, That the Bp. of Bristol was to be join'd with the Earl of Strafford in the Utrecht Treaty; and the Bishop having no such Scruples nor Delicacy as the Duke of Shrewsbury had, was far from declining it. The Earl of Nottingham openly exclaim'd against the Preliminaries, which the Bishop was to carry to Utrecht with him, and finding the new Managers obstinate in the Pursuit of their desperate and dangerous Measures, he left them, and refus'd to have any Part in their future Counsels.

Bishop of Bristol will be one.

Earl of Nottingham has no more Correspondence with the Ministers.

On the first Day of the Term, fourteen Booksellers, Printers, or Publishers, who had been seiz'd, and confin'd by Warrants from Secretary St. John, a great Pains-Taker in such dirty Work, appear'd at the Queen's-Bench Bar, for

A.D. 1711 printing and publishing some Pamphlets and Ballads on the Managers of the Peace. At the same Time, Mr. St. John himself was the greatest Libeller and State Ballad-maker in Britain; and these Managers had, besides Dr. Swift, Mr. Prior, and Mr. Friend, mention'd by the Annalist, Mr. Daniel de Foe, Mr. Abel Roper, and one Clements, a New-England Jobber in Service and Pay. Mr. St John himself assisted Abel Roper in his Post-Boy, a News-Book, publish'd three times a Week; Mr. Maynwaring would not, in his Remarks, have taken Notice of such a despicable Wretch as Abel Roper, but that He believ'd, says the Author of his Life, Mr. St. John himself was sometimes his Assistant, especially that he wrote the smart Paris Articles. Notwithstanding his own Guilt, and that of his Tools; notwithstanding the villainous Libels that were publish'd by them daily against the Allies, the old Ministers, the two last Parliaments, the Duke of Marlborough, with, I will not say Impunity, but Applause and Reward, did this same Mr. St. John crowd the Jails and Messengers Houses with those that printed and publish'd Answers to the Invectives written by himself, or his Mercenaries. Mr.—— afterwards Lord Lechmere, Counsel for Mr. Darby and Mr. Hurt, two Printers, pleaded with notable Vehemence against the Tyranny of Mr. St. John's committing People without telling them their Crimes; urging, That at this Rate, the Office of a Secretary of State would become a Spanish Inquisition. But, at the Request of the Attorney-General, these fourteen Booksellers, Printers, and Publishers, were continu'd on their Recognizance. At that very Time one of this Petty-Tyrant's Drudges publish'd a seditious, false and scandalous Libel, entitl'd, Reasons for a speedy Peace. Wherein that vile Scribler propos'd an Excise not on one or two Commodities, which paid a like Imposition before, but a General Excise on all Commodities that never paid before, and never ought to pay; yet every one knows how busy this invidious Secretary was, not long ago, in endeavouring to raise Disturbances in the Nation, on account of altering the Method of collecting the Duties on two good exciseable Commodities. This Libeller made another Proposal, and that was, to shut up the Exchequer; and his other Tool, the Examiner, hinted a Spunge to strike out the old Score of Debts and begin a-new; yet this honest, sober Statesman let them say and do what they would in favour of himself and Fellow-Peace-makers; upon which Mr. Maynwaring wrote, " Why was not the Author of the Rea-
" sons for a speedy Peace confin'd among the " Hawkers, and Ballad-sellers that were lately
" put into Custody? Is there more Danger to
" the Government from a Penny Observator,
" or a Half-penny Ballad, than from a Book
" that proposes shutting up of the Exchequer,
" and says, Country Gentlemen will come into it?
" Can there be a greater Reproach to any Ad-
" ministration, than that such Notions should
" be publickly spread under it, that tend to no-
" thing but distracting the People, and unhing-
" ing the Government?

A.D. 1711

Libellers employ'd by them.

Ld. Lechmere's Argument against the Secretary's Injustice.

One of his Hirelings proposes a General Excise, and shutting up the Exchequer; another a Spunge.

Whilst the most celebrated Pens were engag'd on both Sides, a Performance appear'd for the ruin'd Party, as the Examiner call'd the Whigs, from an unknown Hand, which gain'd great Attention. It was the Pamphlet entituled " A Letter to Sir
" Jacob Bankes, by Birth a Swede, but Natura-
" liz'd, and a Member of the present Parliament,
" concerning the late Minehead Doctrine, which
" was

A.D.1711 A full Account of the Letter to Sir J. B.

" was eſtabliſh'd by a certain free Parliament of " Sweden, to the utter enſlaving of that Kingdom. A Hint has been given of this Treatiſe elſewhere, and we now farther enlarge upon it from better Information. The Author took occaſion to write this Letter to Sir Jacob, upon his having preſented an Addreſs from the ſaid Corporation, wherein it was expreſly declar'd, That Kings were accountable to none but God, and that Subjects were bound to obey, notwithſtanding any Tyranny and Oppreſſion whatever. This Letter ſhews by what means this Doctrine came to be eſtabliſh'd in Sir Jacob's native Country, and what the Conſequences of it were to his Country Men. This the Author did by Obſervations he had made himſelf, by having then lately travell'd thro' Sweden, and by Paſſages in the Swediſh Hiſtory; and more particulary Dr. Robinſon's Account of Sweden, the Perſon who had been juſt then diſtinguiſh'd above all the Clergy, being made Lord Privy-Seal, and Ambaſſador Plenipotentiary for the Scandalous Treaty at Utrecht. The putting of theſe Matters together was ſo artful, that they contain'd an exact and natural Parallel to all the remarkable Tranſactions in England at that Time. It was in reality holding up a Glaſs to the Miniſters, the Parliament, and the Queen herſelf, in which each of them could not but ſee their own Reſemblance; of which my Reader will be enabled to make the beſt Judgment by the Contents of the Letter, which were as follows, viz.

The Management of the Clergy when in Power.
A remarkable Revolution in Sweden, whereby a Popiſh King was excluded.
The Clergy Enemies to that Revolution, and treated as ſuch.
A Popiſh Pretender.
The Proteſtant Succeſſion eſtabliſh'd.
War againſt the Popiſh Pretender.
The Government manag'd by the Queen and five Great Officers.
A new Scheme contriv'd by a knaviſh Miniſter.
The Quinquinvirate ruin'd.
The Divine Right of Kings firſt contriv'd.
Several Objections made to it.
A new Parliament call'd by the Advice of the new Miniſters.
The Speech to the new Parliament.
The old Miniſtry bear the blame of all.
The Deſcription of the late Council.
A She Favourite without Birth or Beauty.
The Character of the new Parliament.
The Doctrine of Kings being accountable to none but God, eſtabliſh'd by Parliament.
The Conſtitution utterly ruin'd.
The deplorable Condition of the People.
The College of the Spunge erected.
A Set of Monarchical Levellers.
The Miſery of the People.
The Clergy the chief Inſtruments of it.
A neighbouring Kingdom ruin'd by the ſame Means.
The enſlaving Prieſts bred at Oxford.
The Danger of Peoples complimenting good Princes with their Liberty.
The Parliament devoted to the Court.
The People amus'd with the Pleaſure of being reveng'd on the old Miniſtry.
The partial Proceedings of the new Parliament.
The new chief Manager of the Treaſury, the greateſt Enemy to his Country.
A Digreſſion concerning Liberty.
The Gratitude of the Romans to a great General.
A Compariſon between a great Heroe, and a little Trickſter.
Indulgence to ſcrupulous Conſciences taken away.
Ignorance, Stupidity and Uniformity.
Like Biſhops, Like King, a true Maxim.
Proteſtants under abſolute Power more miſerable than Papiſts.
Reſiſtance good Phyſick.

A.D.1711

This Piece was ſold as faſt as it cou'd be printed; neither was it an indifferent Circumſtance towards making it ſo much demanded, that when the Author came to be known, he prov'd to be one Mr. Benſon, a Country Gentleman, and at that time High Sheriff of the County of Wilts, and a Perſon who had not receiv'd any Favours from the late Miniſtry, and was not related to any of them, but to ſeveral on the other Side of the Queſtion; ſo that it was plain the Author was only influenc'd by the Love of Liberty. In a few Months time ſo many Editions of this Pamphlet were ſold off, that they amounted to upwards of 60,000 in London, beſides two Editions at Dublin, one at Edinburgh, one Tranſlation in French at the Hague, another at Amſterdam, and another Tranſlation in High Dutch at Hamburgh. The Lord Cowper ſaid of this Pamphlet, that it was the firſt thing that gain'd the Whigs an Audience; for before that Letter, whatever appear'd on the Whig Side, was thrown away without any Examination, tho' ever ſo well writ, excepting two or three Pieces of Mr. Maynwaring's.

The Queen and the Miniſters were equally deſirous of ſhewing their Reſentment againſt the Author; but after conſulting the Attorney-General and all the moſt eminent Lawyers that they confided in, they were told no Proſecution could be carried on with any Proſpect of Succeſs; however it was reſolv'd to make a ſhew as if they intended one; and Mr. Benſon was oblig'd to give Bail to appear at the King's-Bench in no leſs a Sum than 4000 l. himſelf in a Bond of 2000 l. and Henry Lyell, Eſq; one of the Directors of the Bank, and Mr. Cracherode of the Temple (afterwards Sollicitor of the Treaſury) each in a Bond of 1000 l. more. The requiring ſuch exceſſive Bail was a Mark of the Meanneſs as well as Malice of thoſe Mens Minds who inſiſted upon it; that Gentleman's Character and Condition being ſuch as qualified him to give better Security than perhaps any of the then Miniſters could have procur'd, had they ſtood in need of it, which they were ſure to do as ſoon as they were out of Power: However, tho' they knew they cou'd do nothing more againſt Mr. Benſon, yet they order'd their Attorney to give him frequent Trouble, Fatigue, and Expence, by Attendance in the King's-Bench Court.

There was one Thing, not yet mention'd, occaſion'd by this Letter, that 'tis not fit to paſs over in Silence. The Miniſters got Count Gylemberg (their truſty Confident, as it has appear'd ſince) to complain of this Letter to Sir Jacob Banks, in three ſeveral Memorials. In the laſt he repreſented that he had lately receiv'd expreſs Orders from his Maſter to that purpoſe, and in his Memorial he inſerted the following Paſſage as an outragious Reflection on his King, of whom Mr. Benſon had ſaid, " That he had no ſooner imbrued " his Hands in the Blood of one of his own Sub- " jects, the Brave Patkul (that noble Foreign " Whig, who took up Arms for the Liberty of his " Country) but he became as unfortunate as he was " before Succeſsful. However, if he ſhould be here- " after reſtor'd to his Throne, 'tis to be hop'd he " will make ſome good uſe of his ſo long Sojourn at " Bender, and have learn'd from the Turks to uſe

A.D.1711

" his Subjects with more Mercy than ever his Fa-
" ther did.

Mr. Benſon was under no uneaſineſs on this Account; and the Reaſon of my taking notice of this particular, is this; Count Gyllemberg's Memorial was the chief Occaſion of the French and Dutch Tranſlations abovemention'd, by which means that Piece came to be read in Sweden; and there is great Reaſon to believe that it contributed more than any one thing elſe towards raiſing that Spirit in the Swedes, which they have ſince exerted to reſcue themſelves from that intolerable Slavery under which they groan'd, and which is ſo ſtrongly deſcrib'd in that Piece.

Duke of Marlborough's return to England. Will not aſſiſt at the Conſultations for the Treaty.

On the 18th of November the Duke of Marlborough arriv'd from Holland, and went the ſame Day to Hampton-Court, to wait on the Queen, but he did not aſſiſt at any of the Conſultations at Court, about the preſent Negotiations of Peace. The Baron de Bothmar, Envoy from the Elector of Hanover, came over with his Grace, and deliver'd to Mr. Secretary St. John a long Memorial, in his Maſter's Name, wherein he repreſented, " The Neceſſity of preſerving a good " Union between the Allies, while the Peace " ſhould be treating, of their giving each other " a mutual Guaranty upon what ſhould thereon " be concluded; as alſo the pernicious Conſequen- " ces, if Spain and the Indies were left to the " Duke of Anjou." This Memorial, a few Days after it was deliver'd, was publiſh'd by Mr. Samuel Buckley in his News-paper, call'd The Daily Courant, and receiv'd with great Applauſe by all the Well-wiſhers to the Proteſtant Religion, and the Liberty of Europe. They were wonderfully well pleas'd with the great Zeal his Serene Highneſs ſhew'd for ſupporting the Common Cauſe; and his affectionate Regard for the Security and Proſperity of the People, who were one Day to be his Subjects. And let all thoſe happy People be ever thankful to Almighty God, that that one Day came in his own Time.

The Hanover Memorial againſt it.

The Tools of the Miniſtry rail at it.

The Memorial directly exploded and condemn'd the Scheme of the Harleians for a ſpeedy Peace; and the Tools of that Miniſtry exclaim'd much againſt it, as an Act of no good Policy in his Electoral Highneſs to intermeddle in the Affairs of Great-Britain. The Idiots! Was it not good Policy for his Electoral Highneſs to do his Endeavours to prevent, if poſſible, the Ruin of a Country which was ſo like to be his own, and the breaking of a Confederacy who were engag'd in Intereſt to maintain his Succeſſion to it. Mr. St. John and his Colleagues wou'd have ſtifled this Memorial, had it been in their Power; they ſuffer'd it to be ſaid in Print, That it was not genuine; and when the Dutcheſs of Somerſet ſhew'd it in Print to the Queen, it had not been laid before her by her truſty Secretary St. John. Will Poſterity believe, that ſuch a Man as this, after having been attainted for High-Treaſon in Parliament, after having been ſo wicked and ſo mean as to be a Servant to an attainted Pretender, after having been Years a Fugitive among our Enemies, to avoid the Puniſhment which the Law has provided for Traitors, ſhould be now in England employing the Wantonneſs of what Wit he has, in vilifying and inſulting the Adminiſtration, under which the Execution of the Law was ſuſpended?

Mr. St. John, &c. endeavours to ſtifle it.

Tho' Mr. Harley, and eſpecially Mr. St. John affected an Air of invincible Confidence, as ſecure of carrying their Point; yet they and their Fellow Miniſters were full of dire Apprehenſions of the Iſſue of their Temerity and Treachery. The Prorogation of the Parliament to the 7th of December, occaſion'd various Reflections; ſome thought it would ſtill be prorogu'd 'till the Peace was concluded; others, that it was occaſioned by a late Coalition of ſome eminent Peers of the High-Church Party with the Friends to the old Miniſters, theſe Lords dropping off from the new ones as faſt as they found out the Driſt of their baſe and deſperate Counſels. It was ſuſpected that the Coalition of thoſe Lords, wou'd produce a Repreſentation againſt Meſnager's Peace, which the new Managers hoped they might prevent by the Help of the Scots Peers, of whom not above three or four were come to Town.

A.D.1711

Among theſe melancholly Meaſures of the Miniſtry, there happen'd one merry one, ſo extremely fooliſh, that I am afraid it will be thought too poor for Hiſtory.

Upon Information that the Paſte-board Pictures of the Devil, the Pope, and the Pretender, were to be burn'd on Queen Elizabeth's Day, November the 17th, according to the Cuſtom of the London Mobility, the Earl of Dartmouth iſſued out his Warrant to her Majeſty's Meſſengers, for the ſeizing and ſecuring the ſaid Paſte-board Pictures; purſuant to which Warrant, from one of her Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State, ſeveral of the Queen's Meſſengers, ſuſtain'd by a Detachment of the Troops of the Houſhold, march'd at 12 o'Clock at Night, November the 16th, to an empty Houſe in Drury-Lane, where they found the Pictures aforeſaid array'd in Taffety and Tinſel, and meeting with no Reſiſtance from them, nor the empty Houſe, they took hold of them, and carry'd them very manfully to the Earl of Dartmouth's Office: And the Truth is, theſe were the only Trophies the new Miniſters had to brag of. The Annaliſt is grave at the acting of this Farce: " It appear'd, ſays he, very ſtrange, " that a popular Rejoicing, ſo grateful to this " Proteſtant City, and which was never attempt- " ed to be quaſh'd but in the Reign of King " James II. a Papiſt, ſhould at this time be " ſuppreſs'd." But the new Miniſtry, who had done their bad Buſineſs by their Rabbles, and the Cry of High-Church and Sacheverel, could not but be in a mortal Fright at the Apprehenſion that if the People ſhould get once together in a Proteſtant Humour, and the Cry ſhould be no Popery, no French Peace, their Buſineſs would be done with a Vengeance, and without either Judge or Jury. A diſmal Account was given of this Matter to the Queen, by Mr. Secretary St. John, and he having a Faint Heart of his own, as all ſuch double and dark Dealers generally have, did not fail to do what he could to move the like Paſſion in his Miſtreſs. The train'd Bands of London and Weſtminſter were immediately raiſed, notwithſtanding the Enemies were Priſoners in the Secretary's Office, and kept three Days together under Guard, to the great Diverſion of the Whigs, and of ſuch Tories whoſe Wits were not run away from them. The Earl of Wharton being ask'd by one of them, What was become of the Pictures of the Devil, the Pope, and the Pretender? Anſwer'd merrily, Their Diſciples came by Night and ſtole them away. To continue the Ridiculum of the Harleian Miniſtry, their Tool Abel Roper, was order'd to inſert in his Paper, of November 22, a Paragraph reflecting on the KIT-CAT-CLUB, a Society of Gentlemen, and ſo infinitely ſuperior to the Harleys, the St. John's, the Bromley's, the Harcourt's, &c. in Quality, Merit, and Fortune, that nothing could be more inſolent than their preſuming to name

The Earl of Dartmouth iſſues his Warrant againſt the Pictures of the Devil, the Pope, and the Pretender.

The Train'd Bands raiſed upon it.

Mr. St. John informs againſt the Devil, the Pope, and the Pretender.

Earl of Wharton's Joke upon the Miniſtry.

A.D. 1711 Their Hireling belies the Kit-Cat-Club.

name them on any occaſion without their leave, and due Regard to their illuſtrious Characters. It was probably Mr. Secretary himſelf, who charg'd them with a Conſpiracy to raiſe a Mob, to confront the beſt of Queens and her Miniſtry, and pull down the Houſes of ſeveral Honeſt, Worthy, Loyal, True Engliſh Gentlemen, having had Money diſtributed to them ſome time before for that purpoſe, by G. G. G. S. S. S. W. H. M. an inſatiable ambitious Junto cum multis aliis, who made the Subſcriptions, and gave out that her Majeſty was very ill, if not dead, in order to have acted their Treaſons with greater Freedom. Theſe execrable Lies need no more to prove them to be ſo, than the Names of the Pretended Junto.

Duke of Grafton,
Earl of Godolphin,
Sir Samuel Garth,
Duke of Somerſet,
Earl of Sunderland,
Lord Somers,
Earl of Wharton,
Lord Halifax,
Duke of Montagu.

The Riſe of that Club.

The KIT-CAT-CLUB were mortally hated by the Harleians, as well for their great Quality and Worth, as for their Zeal for the Proteſtant Succeſſion. This Club grew up from a private Meeting of Mr. Somers, afterwards Lord Chancellor, and another Lawyer, now in a very high Station in the Law, and Mr. Tonſon, ſen. the Bookſellor, who before the Revolution, met frequently in an Evening at a Tavern, near Temple-Bar, to unbend themſelves after Buſineſs, and have a little free and chearful Converſation in thoſe dangerous Times. Their Supper was a Mutton Pye a piece, made by a Paſtry-Cook in that Neighbourhood, who became famous for his Excellence in that Way. Other Gentlemen of the ſame good Engliſh Principles, joyning themſelves afterwards to this original Society, it became the moſt Noble One, and the moſt Pleaſant, that perhaps ever was in the World; ſince the Meeting of Auguſtus, Mecænas, Pollio, Horace, &c. The Society Mr. Secretary abus'd thus himſelf, or ſuffer'd his Hireling to abuſe them, conſiſted of the following Perſons,

A Liſt of the Kit-cat Club.

Duke of Mancheſter,
Duke of Dorſet,
Duke of Devonſhire,
Duke of Newcaſtle,
Duke of Richmond,
Duke of Somerſet,
Duke of Grafton,
Duke of Kingſton,
Duke of Montagu,
Earl of Lincoln,
Earl of Huntingdon,
Earl of Eſſex,
Earl of Carliſle,
Earl of Burlington,
Earl of Berkley,
Earl of Scarborough,
Earl of Carbery.
Earl of Godolphin,
Earl of Wharton,
Lord Hallifax,
Lord Somers,
Lord Mohun,
Lord Shannon,
Lord Cornwallis,
General Stanhope,
Sir Richard Temple,
Hon. Spencer Compton, Eſq;
Arth. Maynwaring, Eſq;
William Walſh, Eſq;
Mr. Dartiquenave,
Sir Samuel Garth,
Sir John Vanbrug,
Abraham Stanyan, Eſq;
Col. Titcomb,
Mr. Congreve,
Mr. Steele,
William Pulteney, Eſq;
Joſeph Addiſon, Eſq;
Robert Walpole, Eſq;
Sir Godfrey Kneller, Bt.
George Stepney, Eſq;
John Dormer, Eſq;
Edmund Dunch, Eſq;
Edward Hopkins, Eſq;
Thomas Hopkins, Eſq;
Mr. Jacob Tonſon, ſen.

Theſe were the Perſons Mr. St. John, or Abel Roper, ſaid, were acting Treaſons, and that the Lord Somers, and the Lord Godolphin gave Money to the Mob to raiſe a Mutiny; for which, if the Secretary and the News-Writer had been guilty of no other Scandal, I know of no Puniſhment ſo ſhameful as the Shame they deſerv'd to be put to.

A.D. 1711 Lord Nottingham ſcandalouſly abus'd in the Miniſtry's News-Paper.

Such was the Dread the Miniſters were in, concerning the Repreſentation which was expected from the Lords againſt a Peace, that the Treaſurer left no Stone unturn'd to engage the Earl of Nottingham in their Meaſures; and becauſe the Earl deſpiſed and refuſed his Offers, he was ſhamefully inſulted by an Advertiſement in the Poſt-Boy, and by Lampoons and Libels in Verſe and Proſe, publiſh'd or handed about by the Faction. The Queen condeſcended to cloſet the Dukes of Marlborough, Grafton, and St. Albans, the Earls of Dorſet and Scarborough, the Lords Somers and Cowper, and others, about the terrible Repreſentation which kept the Miniſtry trembling under a perpetual Pannick; but thoſe noble Peers and Patriots remain'd firm in their Reſolutions, and the Miniſters depending on their Friends from Scotland, and being afraid of provoking the People ſtill further, by a further Prorogation, a Committee of Council met the 6th of December, to conſider of the Speech the Queen was to make the next Day to the Parliament, which began thus,

The Queen cloſets ſeveral Lords.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

A deplorable Inſtance of Ingratitude in delighting in War.

" I Have called you together as ſoon as the " Publick Affairs would permit, and I am " glad that I can now tell you, that notwith- " ſtanding the Arts of thoſe who delight in War, " both Place and Time are appointed for open- " ing the Treaty of a General Peace.

" Our Allies, eſpecially the States-General, " whoſe Intereſt I look upon as INSEPARABLE " from my own, have, by their ready Concur- " rence, expreſt their entire Confidence in me; " and I have no Reaſon to doubt, but that my " own Subjects are aſſur'd of my particular " Care of them."

Every good Briton ſhook his Head when they read this Expreſſion, Who delight in War, which the Miniſter who made the Speech threw in as a Reflection on the Duke of Marlborough; and thoſe gallant Officers who had ſo glorioufly ſerv'd her in vindicating the Common Cauſe, and who juſtly delighted in the Succeſs of their Services. It is ſaid here, that the Queen's Intereſt and that of the Dutch were inſeparable; and a few Months after, the ſame Counſellor makes her ſay, by her Miniſter in Holland, That ſhe thought herſelf free from all Engagements with the States General.

Strange Inconſtancy

It was further ſaid in the Speech;

" That her chief Concern was, that the Pro- " teſtant Religion, and the Laws and Liberties " of theſe Nations might be continued, by ſe- " curing the Proteſtant Succeſſion: That after ſo " much Expence of Blood and Treaſure, ſhe " would endeavour they might find their Intereſt " in Trade and Commerce: That ſhe would do " her utmoſt to procure all her Allies reaſonable " Satisfaction, and unite with them in the ſtricteſt " Engagements to continue the Alliance, in or- " der to make the Peace laſting."

Worſe ſtill! Towards which, though deſir'd again and again, the Miniſters took not one Step.

" That ſhe hop'd none would deny her the " Glory and Satisfaction of ending the War, " by a juſt and honourable Peace."

Could that Peace be juſt which was a Violation of all the Conditions of entring into and carrying on the War? Could that Peace be honourable, that left the Nation more in fear of France;

A.D. 1711 France, after the French King's Armies had been beaten all over Europe in a Ten Years War, than they were before it commenc'd?

The Queen having unrob'd in an adjacent Room, return'd and ſtaid in the Houſe of Peers incognito, to hear the Debates, and awe Gainſayers by her Preſence: But the Spirit of true Patriotiſm is incapable of ſuch Impreſſions; and upon Earl Ferrers's making a Motion to return Thanks, which was ſeconded by the Earl of Abingdon, the Earl of Nottingham ſpoke very rationally and affectingly againſt Meſnager's Preliminaries, as inſufficient and captious, and urg'd the Neceſſity of carrying on the War with Vigour 'till the intire Monarchy of Spain was reſtor'd to the Houſe of Auſtria; adding, That tho' he had a numerous Family, he would readily contribute half his Income towards it; and rather than acquieſce in a Peace which he thought unſafe and diſhonourable to his Country and all Europe, He concluded with offering a Clauſe to be inſerted in the Addreſs of Thanks, To repreſent to her Majeſty, as the humble Opinion and Advice of the Houſe, That no Peace could be ſafe or honourable to Great-Britain or Europe, if Spain or the Weſt-Indies were to be allotted to any Branch of the Houſe of Bourbon. This was oppos'd by the Lord Guernſey, his Lordſhip's Brother, and by the Lord North and Grey: The Treaſurer alſo ſaid, This was not a proper time to debate ſuch a Clauſe. The Earl of Wharton appealing to the Houſe, whether there were any Rule or Order againſt it, the Duke of Buckinghamſhire own'd there was none, and conſequently the Treaſurer did not conſider well what he ſaid, in affirming it was againſt Rules and Orders. Then the Earl of Wharton ſpoke with Vehemence againſt Meſnager's and St. John's Preliminaries, and inſiſted on the Neceſſity of the Clauſe, as did alſo the Earl of Sunderland: What, my Lords, ſaid he, in Anſwer to ſome Peers, who urged their not being prepar'd: Is it poſſible that any Member of this Illuſtrious Aſſembly, ſhould be unprepar'd to debate an Affair, which for theſe Ten Years paſt has been the Principal Subject Matter of our Conſultations? Do not we Sit in the ſame Houſe; and are we not the ſame Peers, who have conſtantly been of Opinion, and have often repreſented to her Majeſty, that no Safe and Honourable Peace can be made, unleſs Spain and the Weſt-Indies be recover'd from the Houſe of Bourbon? 'Tis true, I ſee ſome new Faces among us; but even that Lord who ſits on the Wool-Pack, meaning the Treaſurer, may well remember, that in the laſt Reign, Four Lords were Impeach'd for having made a Partition-Treaty. The Earl of An——y, who with the Duke of Ormond, was juſt come into the Houſe, having that Morning travelled above thirty Miles, on their return from Ireland, repreſented the Neceſſity of eaſing the Nation of the Burden of this Expenſive War. This Topick had the Face of ſpecial good Will to the Country, and was therefore Popular, the only Argument that the Harlieans had, which had the leaſt Appearance of Popularity; and yet, as Matters ſtood, there was nothing in it. We had already expended Sixty Millions in this Second War ſince the Abdication: We were now about to obtain the End for which we had been at this prodigious Expence; and ſhould we loſe it out of good Husbandry, becauſe we would not be at Eight or Ten Millions more Expence, to Compleat the Work? For my part, I wonder how ſuch Coin as this could be uttter'd in an Aſſembly ſo well able to judge between Copper and Gold. Let us ſee what Mr. Maynwaring ſaid upon it: " I will venture to aſſert, that there is " no True Engliſhman, who has regard to Ho-

The Earl of Nottingham ſhews the Inſufficiency of Meſnager's Preliminaries.

His Lordſhip's Brother oppoſes him.

The Lord Treaſurer confuted by the Duke of Bucks.

Lord Sunderland againſt the Lord Treaſurer.

Lord An——y for the Peace.

" nour or to Faith, to Obligations, or to Intereſt, " who would not come into any juſt Ways for " raiſing Money, rather than conſent to ſuch a " Peace, as will make us the Reproach of Europe. " For my own Part, I do ſolemnly declare, " that whatever Eſtate I had in the World, I " would freely give half of it to ſecure the reſt, " rather than yield up Spain to the Houſe of " Bourbon; becauſe, I do in my Conſcience be- " lieve, I ſhall endanger the whole by ſuch a " Treaty. The Earl of A——y added: We ought to leave it to her Majeſty's Wiſdom, to conclude a Peace, when She thought it convenient for the Good of her Subjects: Could ſhe conclude a bad Peace for the Good of her Subjects? I wiſh Hiſtory would permit the ſinking of ſome Paſſages which load the Memory of Honourable Perſons with Diſhonour, as does the Cloſe of this Speech: We might have enjoy'd the Bleſſing ſoon after the Battle of Ramelies, if the ſame had not been put off by ſome Perſons whoſe Intereſt it was to prolong the War. Beſides that we could not have had a Peace after the Battle of Ramelies, without leaving the Duke of Anjou in Poſſeſſion of Spain and the Weſt-Indies, that Prince was ſo vain as to propoſe ſending Plenipotentiaries as King of Spain, to treat with the Allies about Peace. I was willing to examine what the Earl of A——y ſaid, not only becauſe he made ſo long a Journey, and was in ſuch haſte to ſay it, but becauſe it will be neceſſary to ſhew what thoſe who were for Meſnager's Peace, had to ſay for themſelves, and none of them ſaid any thing better than this Earl did. But if it had been truer and better ſtill than it was, the Blemiſh upon it would have been indelible, for that odious Reflection upon the Duke of Marlborough, who being touch'd as he ought to have been, by ſuch an Affront to his Glory, which little Minds only could be capable of, anſwer'd, I think my ſelf happy in having an Opportunity given me, of vindicating my ſelf on ſo material a Point, which my Enemies have ſo loudly and unjuſtly laid to my Charge, before a Perſon (meaning the Queen, and making a Bow towards the Place where ſhe was) who knowing the Integrity of my Heart, and the Uprightneſs of my Conduct, will not fail doing me Juſtice; I refer my ſelf to the Queen, whether, whilſt I had the Honour to ſerve her Majeſty, as General and Plenipotentiary, I have not conſtantly inform'd her Council of all the Propoſals of Peace that have been made, and have not deſired Inſtructions for my Conduct on that Subject. I can declare with a ſafe Conſcience, in the Preſence of her Majeſty, of this Illuſtrious Aſſembly, and of that Supream Being, who is infinitely above all the Powers on Earth, and before whom, according to the ordinary Courſe of Nature, I muſt ſoon appear, to give an Account of my Actions, that I ever was deſirous of a Safe, Honourable and Laſting Peace; and that I was always very far from any Deſigns of prolonging the War, for my own Private Advantage, as my Enemies have moſt falſely inſinuated. My advanc'd Age, and the many Fatigues I have undergone, make me ardently wiſh for Retirement and Repoſe, to think of Eternity the Remainder of my Days, the rather, becauſe I have not the leaſt Motive to deſire the Continuance of the War, having been ſo generouſly rewarded, and had Honours and Riches heap'd upon me far beyond my Deſert and Expectation, both by her Majeſty and her Parliament. I think my ſelf bound to this Publick Acknowledgment to her Majeſty and my Country, that I ſhall always be ready to ſerve them, if I can but crawl along,

Duke of Marlborough reſents what the Earl of A——y ſaid of him

Appeals to the Queen.

A.D.1711 to obtain an Honourable and Laſting Peace. But at the ſame Time, I muſt take the Liberty to declare, that I can by no means give into the Meaſures that have lately been taken to enter into a Negotiation of Peace with France, upon the Foot of the Seven Preliminary Articles; for I am of the ſame Opinion with the reſt of the Allies, that the Safety and Liberty of Europe would be in iminent Danger, if Spain and the Weſt-Indies were left to the Houſe of Bourbon, which with all Humility, and as I think my ſelf in Duty bound, I declar'd to her Majeſty, when I had the Honour to wait on her, after my Return from Holland, and therefore I am for inſerting in the Addreſs the Clauſe offered by the Earl of Nottingham. This eloquent and moving Speech was back'd by the late Lord Chancellor Cowper, the Biſhop of Salisbury and the Lord Halifax; Peers of great Parts, and fine Elocution, who were oppoſed by the Lord North and Grey. It will not be expected I ſhould ſay the ſame of this Lord and others. The Strength of Lord North and Grey's Argument was, That 'tis the indiſputable Prerogative of the Crown to make Peace and War. And it is the indiſputable Right of the People not to part with their Money for a War, unleſs they are ſatisfy'd it ſhall not be thrown away in a bad Peace. The Dukes of Shrewsbury and Buckinghamſhire ſaid little or nothing to this Queſtion, which being put to the Vote, the Earl of Nottingham's Clauſe was carry'd by a Majority of 61 Votes againſt 55. A Motion was made for mentioning in the Addreſs the further Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover; a Noble Peer ſaid, that what her Majeſty had been pleas'd to declare thereupon, in her Speech, was ſo ſatisfactory, that nothing could be added to it; and that he did not doubt, but the Illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover entirely relied on the Affections of the Lords. When the Queſtion was put that the Conſiderations of the Clauſe ſhould be put off till the abſent Peers were come, it was carry'd in the Negative by a Majority of 22 Voices, which ſo terrify'd the Miniſtry, whoſe Places, and as they had Reaſon to fear, whoſe Lives depended on their preſent Majorities, that from that Time they conſulted about the making an Experiment to get and ſecure a major Vote in the Houſe of Peers, which no other Men durſt have attempted, and no other Government would have ſuffered, and that was to encreaſe that moſt Noble Houſe by a way equally new and aſtoniſhing. Her Majeſty's Anſwer to the Addreſs, the chief Contents of which was, the Earl of Nottingham's Clauſe was palpably evaſive, and exactly agreeable to the Treaſurer's Character. I ſhould be very ſorry any one ſhould think, I would not do my utmoſt to recover Spain, and the Weſt-Indies, from the Houſe of Bourbon; for ſhe needed not but to have continued the Duke of Marlborough in the Command of the Army, and have continued him to act as he had hitherto done, and ſhe might have had part of France as well as Spain, &c. I'm ſatisfy'd, it will be agreeable to a curious Reader to hear how the Paris Gazetteer tel's this Story, 'Tis in his Article from London, of the 25th of December. the 18th of this Month, after the Queen of Great-Britain had made her Speech about her Deſign of concluding a Peace, there was a Debate in the Houſe of Lords, which laſted near Four Hours. The Earl of Nottingham made a long Harangue to prove that no Peace could be ſafe and honourable, 'till the whole Monarchy of Spain could be reſtored to the Houſe of Auſtria. My Lord North and Grey ſpoke on the contrary, to prove, that the Power of making Peace and War was a Royal Prerogative; and he was of Opinion to thank the Queen, and to leave to her wiſe Conduct the Care of making Peace as ſhe thought fit. The Earl of Nottingham's Opinion was ſeconded by the Earl of Sunderland, by my Lord Marlborough and ſeveral others: So was my Lord North and Grey's, among others, by the Duke of Ormond and by the Duke of Leeds, who voted by Proxy, being indiſpos'd. A.D.1711

A Clauſe like that of the Earl of Nottingham's being propos'd in the Commons Houſe, it was rejected by a Majority of 232 Voices againſt 106. And the Arts and Deſires of thoſe that delight in War were not forgotten to be diſappointed. It being obvious that the Senſe of the Houſe of Peers was againſt the admitting of Duke Hamilton's ſitting in their Houſe as Duke of Brandon in England, by a Creation ſince the Union, that Affair was dropp'd. But another was ſtarted which gave Scandal to Perſons who were of Opinion, that no Temporal Intereſts ſhould be woven into Spiritual. The Annaliſt reports the thing as it happen'd, and I uſe his Words, not as being fond of them, but to ſpare my own on this Occaſion. "A Noble Peer, who had all "along ſtickled for the Occaſional Bill, and who "could not be eaſy in or out of Place, being diſ-"guſted, both becauſe he was left out upon the "change of the Miniſtry in 1710, and becauſe "he lately ſuffer'd a Repulſe about the Privy-"Seal; this Lord, I ſay, made it one of the "Conditions upon which he entered into ſtrict "Engagements with the Whig-Party, that they "ſhould concur with him in bringing in and "carrying through his Darling Bill, the Occa-"ſional Conformity Bill, tho' under another Title, "and with ſuch Clauſes as he pretended would "enlarge the Toleration, and be a farther Se-"curity for the Proteſtant Succeſſion. With this "laſt Bait many of the Whig Lords were unwa-"rily drawn in, and accordingly on Saturday the "fifteenth of December, the Earl of Nottingham "brought in the Bill, and was back'd by the "Earl of Scarborough, the Earl of Wharton, "&c." The Wavering of the laſt Noble Peer is a ſad Inſtance of the Infirmity of human Minds, even of the greateſt, and that while we are in this World we cannot ſhake it off. This Lord did verily believe that this Bill was an Injuſtice, and conſequently an Oppreſſion to Proteſtant Diſſenters, whom he lov'd, tho' he did not join with them, and yet with a ſhort and doubtful View of gaining over the Earl of Nottingham to be againſt the Peace, he ſeconds him in a Law to abridge them of the natural Rights of Mankind, to worſhip God according to their Conſciences, without loſing any thing of theſe Rights. To ſay that Earl of Oxford and Mortimer knew all this as well as the Earl of Wharton, and yet that he eſpous'd this Bill, is ſaying nothing, becauſe the deſerting his Party and Principles could not ſurpriſe any body who knew the Man, of whom the Annaliſt writes, "The Diſſenters being juſtly "alarm'd at this Bill, did the ſame Morning "make Application to the Earl of Oxford, be-"ſeeching him with all Humility to uſe his "beſt Intereſt to prevent the paſſing of the Bill. "But tho' he, with moſt of his Family, had "for the greateſt Part of his Life join'd in "Communion with the Presbyterians; yet "on this occaſion he thought fit to ſacrifice his "Religions Principles to his Political Views, and "ſo the Diſſenters were left in the Lurch.

*A.D.*1711 The Duke of Marlborough continu'd all this while in his Poſt, of which not only the Voice of the Nation, but the Voice of the whole World declar'd him to be moſt worthy; and the new Managers, tho' quite deafto that Voice,or to Reaſon and Honour, had not Courage enough to lay him quite aſide, 'till they had prepar'd their Faction for it, at leaſt by a Thouſand falſe and frontleſs Calumnies in Libels, Lampoons, News-Books, and by the Mouths of their Vermin, called Lions, who frequented the Coffee-Houſes, to ſpread Lies on the Duke, and hear Truths of their Maſters, which they term'd Sedition, and made what ill uſe of it ſerv'd their turns beſt. But this was not enough to gain Ground upon the Duke of Marlborough's general Reputation, and therefore they got a Jew to ſwear that theDuke of Marlborough had receiv'd Money upon Contracts for Bread, and Bread Waggons, and one Preſton to ſwear ſomething about Forage in North-Britain. It is to be noted here, that there was not one Penny receiv'd by the Duke of Marlborough or his Agents, but what had all along been receiv'd by the Captains-General his Predeceſſors. That his greateſtEnemies knew this, and that every Step in the Proſecution was groundleſs, malicious, ungrateful and inſolent, yet theſe Mens Depoſitions were formally laid before Lockhart, one of the Pretender's Emiſſaries,and the reſt of the Commiſſioners of Accompts, who reported the matter in what Shape they thought it would beſt ſerve the Turn to countenance this prodigious Entry in the Council Books. Dec. the 30th, Her Majeſty being inform'd that an Information againſt the Duke of Marlborough was laid before the Houſe of Commons, by the Commiſſioners of the Publick Accompts; Her Majeſty thought fit to diſmiſs him from all Employments, that the matter might take an impartial Examintaion. The nextDay,the31ſt of*December*,it was notified to the Duke, by a Note written with her own Hand, that her intention was, to reſume all the Employments ſhe had entruſted him with. To ſay that thus, with a ſtroke of a Pen, was this ſhining Reign reduced to a Blot, or what is much the ſame, to a Level with the Reign immediately preceding the Revolution, comes ſhort of what may be ſaid of it with Truth, tho' not with Decorum. The Lords, while the Majority was for obſerving theTreaties that had been made with the Allies, voted an Addreſs to her Majeſty, to have the Inſtructions to the Plenipotentiaries, to conſult with the Miniſters of the Allies to preſerve a ſtrict Union amongſt them, and for procuring to them all juſt and reaſonable Satisfaction, and a general Guaranty of the Terms of Peace, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, to be deliver'd by the Lords with the White Staves, which was another quickening to the Creation of the Dozen. His Grace receiv'd this ill deſerv'd Billet with heroical Reſignation, and wrote a dutiful Anſwer, which he ſent by the Counteſs of Sunderland, one of his Daughters, a Lady endowed with all the Graces of Body and Mind, which render'd her the Object of every ones Love and Eſteem. And her Political Principles were ſo entirely Engliſh, that ſhe was generally called The Little Whig.

Lions employed by the Miniſtry.

The Duke of Marlborough turn'd out.

The Little Whig, what Lady ſo call'd.

The Duke of Somerſet, Maſter of the Horſe, continuing firmly in the Intereſt of his Country, and oppoſing the deſtructive Schemes of the new Miniſters, they reſolv'd, in a Conſultation held about the middle of December, to remove him; but they had not Courage enough to put it in Practice: For as ſure as they were of the Queen, they knew her Friendſhips were very ſtrong as long as they laſted; and they were afraid the Affection and Eſteem ſhe had for the Dutcheſs of Somerſet, a Lady of ſingular Virtue and Merit,would be too hard for theirImportunity, and then another Precipice would be in their way; ſo that Matter was deferr'd. But to ſhew their inveterateMalice andReſentment againſt that illuſtriousLord,for his Steadineſs in oppoſing their ruinous and ſcandalous Meaſures; out comes a Pamphlet call'd, Advice to the October Club, ſaid to be the Work of the Lord Keeper Harcourt, wherein their Graces are both ſhamefully abuſed and inſulted. It is ſaid there, It was obvious to ſuppoſe, in particular, where the Honour and Intereſt of a Husband were ſo cloſely united with thoſe of a Wife, he might be ſure of her utmoſt Endeavours for his Protection, tho' ſhe never lov'd nor eſteemed him. There is a great deal more of the like Stuff, too nauſeous to be repeated. This will give us an Idea of the Veracity and good Manners of their great ones; what then muſt their little ones be, with whoſe Scribling, the Town ſwarm'd at this Juncture? Having mentioned the October Club, we muſt obſerve it was made up moſtly of thoſe that were now honoured with the Denomination of the Landed Intereſt, of Country Gentlemen, who were inſpired with Politicks,upon the Appearance of Sacheverel; and getting into the Houſe by the Influence of the Doctor and the new Miniſters, were at firſt ready to vote according to the Treaſurer's Conſcience, if that Term is pardonable, rather than their own; but falling ſhort of their Expectations from him,they began to be reſtleſs,and enquire into the Reaſon of things, which was not the Buſineſs he had cut out for them. To make them the more eaſy, the Lord Keeper Harcourt wrote and Publiſhed that Pamphlet to excuſe the Treaſurer, and wheedle them intoTemper. The Annaliſt,who enlarges upon this, adds a Liſt of the Leaders of the October Club, who met at the Bell-Tavern in Weſtminſter, to the Number of above 150 Fox-hunters in the Country, and Place-Hunters at London.

*A.D.*1-12

Duke and Dutcheſs of Somerſet vilify'd by the Miniſtry.

The October-Club.

The Lord Keeper Harcourt writes a Pamphlet.

The NAMES.

William Bromley, Eſq;	Sir Juſtiniam Iſham,
Francis Anneſley, Eſq;	George Lockhart, Eſq;
Robert Byorley, Eſq;	Sir Roger Moſtyn,
Henry Campion, Eſq;	Sir John Packington,
Charles Cæſar, Eſq;	Francis Scobel, Eſq;
Sir Robert Davers,	William Shippen, Eſq;
Charles Eversfield,Eſq;	Sir William Whitlocke,
Ralph Freeman, Eſq;	Sir Thomas Thorold,
Sir Thomas Hanmer,	John Trevanion, Eſq;
John Hungerford, Eſq;	Sir William Windham.

The Treaſurer, and the reſt of the Miniſters, finding by the Majority of 22 beforementioned, that his Staff would be very precarious if it ſhould grow upon him, it was reſolv'd, ſays the Annaliſt, to overpower the Whig-Lords, by throwing into the Houſe of Peers a WHOLE DOZEN of Gentlemen blindly devoted to the Court: Which bold and deſperateCounſel was accordingly put in Execution the ſame Day that the Queen turned the Duke of Marlborough out of all the Places which he had ſo glorioufly filled, according to her own frequent Acknowledgment. A Contemporary Hiſtorian writes, "The Miniſtry "could find no other Expedient to ſupport their "Schemes, and, perhaps, to prevent the Examination of Prior, about going to France, and "the Prime of them from being ſent to the "Tower, but by creating Twelve new Peers at "once to get a Majority, being more than

was

A.D.1712 was done in the Four and Forty Years Reign of Queen Elizabeth. People were as much ſtunn'd, at this daring Innovation, as if Magna Charta had been ordered to be burnt by the Hands that burnt the Oxford Decree. Upon the firſt Rumour of theſe Twelve at once, a Gentleman of Note cry'd out, It is impoſſible; he, meaning the Teaſurer, cannot pick out Twelve Gentlemen in England who will accept of Peerage upon ſuch Terms. He then explain'd himſelf, Gentlemen of Weight equal to the Dignity. That may be, reply'd another, but I will warrant he picks out a Dozen to anſwer his Purpoſes, if he cannot do without it. There were ſo many Lords to be made at ſo ſhort Notice, that I have heard there was but one Preamble in all the twelve Patents, and that the Clerks were forced to write Night and Day to engroſs them, and get them ready for the Seal. The Creations were thus;

The Creation of twelve Lords at once.

James, Lord Compton, Son to the Earl of Northampton,
Charles, Lord Bruce, Son to the Earl of Ailesbury,
} were called by Writ.

The TWELVE.

George Hay, Eſq; Lord Duphin in Scotland, was created Baron of Podwarden in Herefordſhire.
The Lord Windſor, a Viſcount of Ireland, Baron Mountjoy, of the Iſle of Wight.
Henry Paget, Eſq; Son to the Lord Paget, Baron Burton, of Burton in Staffordſhire.
Sir Thomas Manſel, Baron Manſel of Margam in Glamorganſhire.
Sir Thomas Willoughby, Baron Middleton of Middleton in Warwickſhire.
Sir Thomas Trevor, Baron Trevor of Bromham in Bedfordſhire.
George Granville, Eſq; Baron Lanſdown, of Bideford in Devonſhire.
Samuel Maſham, Eſq; Baron Maſham of Oates in Eſſex.
Thomas Foley, Eſq; Baron Foley, of Kidderminſter in Worceſterſhire.
Allen Bathurſt, Baron Bathurſt of Battleſden in Bedfordſhire.

The Annaliſt tells us, "Sir Michael Warton, a "very wealthy Gentleman, declin'd the Offer of a "Dignity which was ſo profuſely beſtow'd: He "adds, to amuſe the Multitude, a Proclamation was "ordered to be publiſhed for a general Faſt to "be obſerved throughout all England, on the "20th of January, for imploring God's Bleſſing "on the intended Treaty; in Breach of ſo many "ſacred Obligations by Alliances, Declarations, "and Aſſurances." The Biſhop of Briſtol being to leave his Biſhoprick and the Kingdom for ſome Time, to attend the Conferences at Utrecht, where he was to act as Plenipotentiary for the Queen of Great-Britain, no leſs than three Members of the Houſe of Commons were deputed for his Office of Lord Privy-Seal; Sir George Beaumont, Bart. Robert Bierley, and Edward Nicholas, Eſqs. On the 24th of December, the Biſhop, with a numerous Retinue, embarked at Deptford. Having acquainted myſelf pretty well with the Function and Appearance of the primitive Paſtors and Biſhops in the Courſe of my Reading, for the Hiſtory of Chriſtianity, which has lain by me ſome Time, the Account of this Prelate's Equipage, Train, and Furniture, as it was then Printed, is the greater rarity, and as well worth the Reader's Curioſity as mine. A.D.1712

The Biſhop of Briſtol's Retinue. The Biſhop's Liveries and Plate.

One Coach with eight Horſes, and Five with ſix; four Pages, and twelve Footmen in Liveries, partly of the Colour generally uſed by Biſhops in England; with an Appointment of near 9000 Ounces of Plate, half of which was gilt, and a black Velvet Gown richly covered with Gold Loops, having a long Train to be born up by two Pages in Aſh-colour'd Coats with ſilver Orraces and green Velvet Waiſtcoats. The Retinue;

Hon. ---- Verney, Eſq;
Mr. Duncomb,
Mr. Longueville,
Marmaduke Wywil, Eſq;
— Drake, Eſq;
— Bland, Eſq;
— Hedges, Eſq;
Mr. Hales,
Mr. Snow,
— Holt, Eſq;
— Bertie, Eſq;
Mr. Collins,
Mr. Tyſon,
Mr. Clerke,
John Wyche, Eſq;
Mr. Sayer.

Three Chaplains to both Plenipotentiaries. } Mr. Dibben, Mr. Wyvil, Mr. Ayres.

James Gibbon, Eſq; Secretary.
Anthony Bottomley, Eſq; Gentleman of the Horſe.

Mr. Brewſter,
Mr. Haſtings,
Mr. Sedgwick,
} Pages.

The Biſhop of Briſtol's Equipage.

This pompous Account loſes all its Grandeur by conſidering it is out of Character, and no more ſuitable to that of a Paſtor of a Chriſtian Church, than it would be if he had been made Maſter of the Ceremonies. But neither this Conſideration, nor the Care of two Flocks of his, as Dean of Windſor, and Biſhop of Briſtol, could keep this Prelate at home: So away he went with Monſ. Buys, the Dutch Envoy Extraordinary, and came to Utrecht the 16th of January, N. S. with his Wife and ſome of his Domeſticks, in two Coaches and ſix Horſes.

THE

THE HISTORY OF ENGLAND, &c.

CHAP. IV.

From the Treaty of Utrecht, to the Death of the Queen: Containing the Space of Two Years, Six Months, and Fifteen Days.

*A.D.*1712 WHOEVER expects a Detail of the Conferences at Utrecht, will be balk'd in this Hiſtory. There was nothing in them from the beginning to the End of that odious Treaty, but what was either Trifling or Tricking on the Part of the French and their new Friends; and it was all ſo diſhonourable to the Allies, that it muſt be grating to every good Briton to write and to read it. However, I ſhall take in the Remarkables as they come in my Way. Monſieur Meſnager, who had been in England to huddle up this Matter with the new Miniſters, being to be one of the French Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, was, for the greater Honour of the Thing, made a Count; and to ſhew what a Head he had, he took the Title of Count St. John, or St. Jean, a petty Village in Normandy, but too big to be his own. This Man's mean Condition made his aſſuming that Title rather a Diſgrace than an Honour to all the noble Houſe of St. John in England, except the Secretary himſelf; to compliment whom this Deputy of Commerce enobled himſelf, as he thought, by taking his Name for his Title. Were ſuch whimſical Perſons as theſe fit to be Miniſters and Plenipotentiaries? But the Work and Workmen were all of a Piece.

Meſnager turn'd to Count St. Jean, or St. John.

As to the Foreign Princes and States concern'd with us in the War, and who ſhould have been concern'd with us in the Negotiations of Peace, moſt of them ſeem'd willing enough to enter upon a Treaty; eſpecially after the Dutch, by the overbearing Counſels of England, had been prevailed with to agree to it. Count Goes, the Emperor's Miniſter at the Hague, refuſed for ſome Time to aſſiſt at the Conferences held by the Miniſters of Pruſſia, Portugal, Savoy, Poland, and thoſe who were for treating in Concert with the States-Deputies; and when the other Imperial Miniſter, the Baron de Heems, was preſent, it was only to ſhew his Diſſent in the Name of his Maſter, who having given Prince Eugene full Inſtructions, diſpatch'd him to the Hague, from whence he was to proceed to London. When he arrived at the Hague, he had a Conference with the Deputies of the States-General, at which they were obliged to let the Earl of Strafford aſſiſt. *A.D.*1712

Prince Eugene's Speech to the Miniſters of the Allies.

His Highneſs began with ſaying, He was ſent by the Emperor, not to make Complaints, that contrary to the Tenour of Treaties, Great-Britain had enter'd into ſome Negotiations with the Enemy; and that this State had in concert with her, concurr'd in the Nomination of a Place of Congreſs for a General Peace; and this without the leaſt Participation of his Imperial Majeſty: But alledg'd, that, paſſing over in Silence what he might have ſaid on this Article, he contented himſelf with deſiring both thoſe Powers not to be too haſty in an Affair of the laſt Conſequence for themſelves, as well as for the Tranquility of Europe; the rather becauſe we were not yet ſo far reduced as to accept of ſuch Laws as the Enemy ſhall pleaſe to preſcribe: But, that on the contrary, after ſo many Advantages obtain'd over them, we are in a Condition of expecting from them their Uſurpations, and of making, by a due Satisfaction to all the Allies, a glorious, firm, and laſting Peace for all Europe. The Earl of Strafford muſt make but an indifferent Figure, when he heard ſo many notorious Truths ſpoken by one of the greateſt Heroes of the Age, and knew that his Employers were at the ſame time reſolved to make Meſnager's Peace, without any

A.D.1712 Regard to the Intereſts and Stipulations with the Allies. Neither this Speech, nor his Highneſs's Negotiations ſignified any thing towards putting the leaſt Stop to the Treaty; he therefore reſolv'd to try his Fortune in England; but, before he went, wrote to her Majeſty to know whether his coming would be agreeable; and ſhe was pleaſed to anſwer in the new Way of anſwering, He ſhould be very welcome, which every one knew he was not; and that the turning out the Duke of Marlborough, the very Day before his Highneſs arriv'd in England, was deſign'd among other things alike honourable, to let him ſee, that whatever Errand he was come upon, the Duke of Marlborough's Intereſt ſhould be of no uſe to him. If he had been welcome at our Court, why, as the Annaliſt ſays, were Endeavours us'd to keep him on the other Side of the Water? And why did the Earl of Strafford write this Letter to Deſborough, Captain of the Fubbs Yacht, which is equally remarkable for Purity of Stile and Sentiment.

He goes to England.

SIR,

PRince Eugene having deſir'd my Orders to you, to carry him over, you know I do not pretend to command any of her Majeſty's Yachts, without her ſpecial Command; you know your Orders, and how far they authorize you to carry over the Prince. You know the Reſpect and Conſideration due to the Prince, and his great Merit; therefore 'tis needleſs for me to tell you what Reſpect and Conſideration you ought to ſhew him. I can aſſure you I have a particular Reſpect and Eſteem for him; and I ſhall always be glad to do the Prince all the Service that lies in my Power.

I am your moſt humble Servant,

STRAFFORD.

Our Author adds, "The Captain was a Man "of Senſe, and underſtood Engliſh. But though "this Letter rather implied a tacit Prohibi- "tion, than a poſitive Order; yet being "thereby left at liberty to uſe his own Diſcre- "tion, he thought it his Duty, as he could not "but eſteem it an Honour, to carry over ſo "great a Hero; who embark'd at the Brill the 8*th* "of January, N. S." with his Nephew, the Chevalier de Savoy, Son to the Count de Soiſſons, the Count de la Corſana, and Count Cornelius of Naſſau, and arriv'd off Harwich the 1*ſt* of January, O. S. Next Day at the Buoy at the Nore, where he receiv'd Account of the Ingratitude of the Court to his noble Friend and Companion in Arms and Glory, the Duke of Marlborough, at which he was extreamly concern'd; and inſtead of being waited on by Princes and Generals, as in other Journeys, our Author tells us, the Government ſent down one Drummond, a broken Merchant, and one Brinſden, a Quack; the former a Creature of the Treaſurer's, the latter of the Secretary's: He calls him his Agent, but the World call'd him his ----- a Name too obſcure for Hiſtory, to attend or rather to be Spies upon the Prince, who came to Leiceſter-Houſe, prepared for his Reception, by Count Gallas, before his Departure, January the 5th. His Highneſs immediately cauſed his Arrival to be notify'd to the Treaſurer, the Secretaries of State, and Foreign Miniſters, who waited upon him the ſame Evening; as did the Duke of Marlborough, to whom the Prince ſhew'd the ſame hearty Friendſhip and Affection, as when they embraced after having a thouſand Times eſcaped Death, in the Battle of Blenheim. Drummond the Bankrupt, no doubt, by Direction from his Patron Earl Oxford and Mortimer, ſaid to his Highneſs, the leſs you ſee the Duke of Marlborough, the better. Monſtrous this! Cou'd he or his Patron imagine that the Prince of Savoy had a Soul of the like Make with their own, capable of Failure in reſpect to the greateſt Merit upon Earth, becauſe the Court fail'd in Gratitude? He anſwered, As the Miniſtry may depend upon it, I will not cabal againſt them, ſo I hope they do not expect I ſhould forbear any uſual Familiarity with my good Friend the Duke of Marlborough. The next Day his Highneſs received a Letter from the Prime Miniſter, and a Viſit from Secretary St. John; as alſo from Count Maffey, Monſ. Hoffman, and other Foreign Miniſters, from the Duke of Montagu, the Earl of Hertford, General Lumley, General Webb, General Palmes, General Harvey, and other Perſons of Diſtinction. About Noon he returned the Duke of Marlborough's Viſit, and ſent a Gentleman with a Compliment to the Dukes of Buckinghamſhire and Ormond, Earl Pawlet, and other great Officers of State. He was introduc'd to the Queen by Secretary St. John, about Seven o' Clock in the Evening, none being preſent but the Lord-Treaſurer and the Secretary. Having deliver'd the Emperor's Letter to her Majeſty, he deſir'd her to peruſe it, becauſe it contain'd the Subſtance of his Errand; which her Majeſty did, and then was pleas'd to ſay, She was ſorry the State of her Health did not permit her to ſpeak with his Highneſs as often as otherwiſe ſhe ſhould be glad to do; but that ſhe had ordered theſe two Gentlemen, there preſent, to receive his Propoſals, and confer with his Highneſs as frequently as he ſhould think proper. People were very willing to expect great and good Things from Prince Eugene's Arrival in England: For Men in Sobriety of Thinking, cou'd not imagine, that he would be abus'd and ſlighted as was his victorious Friend. Inſtead of which, the Remains of Sacheverel, and the new Miniſtry's Rabble, committed great Diſorders in Leiceſter-Fields, the ſecond Night after he came thither; and, in one of their News-Papers, there was an Advertiſement inſerted, moſt vilely reflecting on the Counteſs of Sciſſons, the Prince's Mother; which flagitious and flagrant Affront, ſays our Author, his Highneſs over-looked with his uſual Magnanimity; and his diſcreet and obliging Behaviour wonderfully endear'd him to every Body. He wanted not the loud Acclamations of the better ſort of People wherever he came, and the Noblemens Houſes where he Din'd, were daily crowded, like the Theatre, with Perſons of Diſtinction and Faſhion, to have the Pleaſure of ſeeing a Hero of ſuch univerſal Fame: I was Witneſs of this at the Duke of Marlborough's Houſe in the Park, where he din'd with their Graces, and the four charming Ladies their Daughters, not ill-named, the four Graces, by the Poets of that Time: And to give ſo good Company an Opportunity to ſee him, his Highneſs went through all the Rooms; and under Pretence of taking a nice View of the Pictures, he gave them a full View of himſelf. Some, even of the TORIES, cou'd not help wiſhing his Reception at Court had been more ſuitable to his illuſtrious Merit and Character. But the Miniſters and their Emiſſaries, either took no Notice at all of him, or what Notice they took, was with ſuch an ill Grace, that his Highneſs could not but diſcover that his Preſence made them uneaſy. This is not however to be underſtood of all, for the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, Duke of Shrewſbury, Earl Pawlet, and Earl Rivers, entertain'd his Highneſs with an Air of Frankneſs and Chearfulneſs,

A.D.1712

The Prince viſited.

The Queen's Reception of him.

He is inſulted by Sacheverel and the Miniſtry's Mobs.

Welcome to the Noble and the Good.

Two ordinary Fellows ſent to attend him.

Drummond the Bankrupt gave him ſawcy Advice.

A.D. 1712 which ſhew'd that his Company was as pleaſing as it was honourable to them. But it cannot be thought that his Highneſs was himſelf as well pleas'd as when he was at the Houſes of the Duke of Marlborough, Duke of Montagu, Duke of Schomberg, Duke of Devonſhire, Duke of Richmond, Duke of Grafton, Earl of Sunderland, Earl of Portland, Earl of Wharton, Earl of Berkley, Earl of Stair, Earl of Orkney, Lord Halifax, the Honourable Henry Boyle, Eſq; General Palmes, and the eminent Dr. Garth. His Highneſs was alſo entertain'd by Dr. Ratcliff, Lord Lexington, Lord Aſhburnham, Lord North and Grey, Sir Thomas Hanmer, Earl Oxford and Mortimer, and Henry St. John, Eſq;. It was a common Report then, that when he dined with the Lord-Treaſurer, who was well skill'd in the Art of Coaxing, he ſhould ſay to him, I look upon this Day the happieſt in the whole courſe of my Life, ſince I have the Honour to ſee in my Houſe, the greateſt Captain of the Age. His Highneſs reply'd, If it were ſo, I am obliged to you for it, thereby alluding to the Earl's being the Author of the Duke of Marlborough's Diſgrace, which rid him of a Competitor in Military Glory. His Highneſs affected to ſhew a particular Regard to the Duke of Ormond, who was likely to be General in Flanders the next Campaign; and that Duke did not omit any Opportunity to give his Highneſs all Marks of Reſpect and Eſteem: But it was outſide all, and ſo were all the like Appearances of the Lord-Treaſurer, and the Secretary of State. As to the other Secretary of State, the Earl of Dartmouth, it is not remembered that he gave any Entertainment to Prince Eugene; and that which was intended him by the City, was balk'd by a Letter from that Lord, in anſwer to a Requeſt of the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, made by two of their Brethren, to know her Majeſty's Pleaſure. The Letter was directed to the Lord-Mayor, Sir Gilbert Heathcote.

Lord-Treaſurer coaxes him.

The Prince's his quick Reply.

The Lord Dartmouth's Letter to the Lord-Mayor to diſcountenance the City's entertaining Prince Eugene.

My Lord,

Two of the Court of Aldermen, having brought a verbal Meſſage to be delivered to her Majeſty, which was, That the Lord-Mayor, Court of Aldermen, and ſeveral Citizens, of the beſt Rank, deſired to treat Prince Eugene, and ordered them to attend me to know the Queen's Pleaſure: And being aſked by the Lords of the Council, whether they had their Meſſage in Writing, anſwered, That they had no Order nor Meſſage in Writing, but that they came upon a Minute taken at the Court of Aldermen, of which they had no Copy. They were thereupon told, that the Queen had commanded the Lords to acquaint them, that her Majeſty would return no Anſwer to any Meſſages which is not brought with the ſame Reſpect as has always been paid by the City of London to her Predeceſſors. To prevent any Miſtake in what was ſaid to them, I ſend your Lordſhip this Account, and am,

My Lord,

Your Lordſhip's moſt obedient,

and moſt humble Servant,

DARTMOUTH.

Theſe Counſellors knowing the two Aldermen came with a verbal Meſſage only, took hold of it to deprive Prince Eugene of his Dinner in the City, which if they had flatly denied, wou'd have been cried out againſt by every Body, as in Truth this Evaſion was, except by the Friends to the French Peace, and I think one may add, without Partiality, to the Pretender. To avoid this Charge, I have often made uſe of Authors, whom otherwiſe I ſhould have left to the Oblivion they are fallen into: But I never do it, except I know what I take from them to be true; and it is not for want of ample Knowledge of theſe Things that I uſe them, but to ſhew that others knew 'em as well as my ſelf. I am now about to copy the Annals. "It had been whiſper'd "that in a Conſultation, held between the lead- "ing Lords, it was propoſed, either not to ad- "mit into the Houſe the twelve new Peers, or "Proteſt againſt their being made, during the "Sitting of Parliament, meerly to ſerve a Turn." And one of theſe two Meaſures was much expected, as it was much deſired, by the Friends to a juſt, ſafe, honourable and laſting Peace. "But neither "of theſe Counſels was purſued. For the Lords "being met on the 2d of January, the twelve "occaſional Peers, as they were then called, "were introduced and admitted; and the Court "Party, having both by this Reinforcement, "and by the coming up of the Scotch Lords, got "the Majority, the Houſe acquieſc'd in the "Queen's ſullen Anſwer to their laſt Addreſs; "That her Majeſty thought that her Speech to "both Houſes, would have given Satisfaction to "every Body; and that ſhe had given Inſtructions "to her Plenipotentiaries, according to the Deſires "of that Addreſs." The Deſires of that Addreſs was, that her Plenipotentiaries might act in Concert with thoſe of the Allies, for a mutual Guaranty, of a ſafe, honourable, and laſting Peace, and of the Proteſtant Succeſſion. The Earl of Strafford knows whether he had any ſuch Inſtructions, and all the World knows how well they were purſued, if any ſuch there were. Then the Lord Keeper, delivered the Houſe a Meſſage from the Queen, for their Adjournment to the 14th of January, to hear Matters of Importance; which occaſioning a warm Debate, and a Queſtion, the Affirmative was carried thus,

A.D. 1712

Conſultations on the making Twelve at once.

Yeas 81 Noes 68

Deduct the 12

69

Mr. St. John calls them the Dozen.

Our Author proceeds, "This Meſſage for Ad- "journment was ſent only to try the Strength "of both Parties; Mr. Secretary St. John, having "been heard to ſay, If thoſe Twelve had not been "enough, we would have given them, the Whigs, "another Dozen. However, very bold Reflec- "tions were made upon it, both in Print, and moſt "Converſations, People not ſcrupling to ſay, Tho' "the Queen had an undoubted Right to create "as many Peers as ſhe pleaſed, yet her Mini- "ſters might be call'd to an Account for adviſ- "ing her to abuſe that Right. That Peace and "War were alſo the Prerogatives of the Crown, "and yet engaging in a ruinous War, or making a "treacherous Peace, are Things no Miniſters "ever did, and eſcaped uncenſured, or unpuniſhed. "That the creating of Twelve Peers to ſerve a "Turn, was, in effect, making a Houſe of Peers a "Property to the Court, and taking away a "Negative upon the Crown, which would ren- "der our Liberties precarious, &c. But after "all the ſevereſt Reflection againſt the Dozen of "new Peers was made by the Earl of Wharton, "who when the Queſtion was going to be put a- "bout Adjourning, aſk'd one of them, Whether "they voted by their Foreman, thereby compar- "ing them to a Petty Jury. And ſeveral other "Compariſons might be made, if our Tongues "and our Pens were not tyed." Hiſtory

A.D.1712

History ſhould be neither Panegyrick nor Satyr, farther than the Nature of the Facts render them ſo; and therefore, in remembring who were the Perſons that thought themſelves worthy to fill up the Vacancies, made by the Removal of the Duke of Marlborough, I ſhall only mention that the Duke of Ormond was made Commander in Chief of all the Forces in Great Britain; Earl Rivers, Maſter of the Ordnance; and the Duke of Northumberland, who had been in no more Battles than the Hiſtorian, was appointed Captain of the ſecond Troop of Guards. Edward, Earl of Clarendon, William Lord North and Grey, George Earl of Northampton, Thomas Earl of Thanet, and Heneage Finch, Lord Guernſey, were ſworn of the Privy-Council. The Earl of Strafford was ordered to feel the Pulſe of the Elector of Hanover, as to his Acceptance of the Command of the Britiſh Forces in the Low-Countries; but it was another Proof of the Wrongheads of the new Miniſters, to flatter themſelves, that his Electoral Highneſs, one of the wiſeſt Princes in Europe, did not ſee through their Cobweb Politicks, or cou'd be amus'd with Shadows, when the Subſtance was brought by them into ſo much Danger. The Britiſh Plenipotentiary found his Highneſs, whatever were the Means he uſed for it, entirely averſe to accept that Command, when a Peace was reſolv'd upon; ſo that too was given to the Duke of Ormond, who had always affected Popularity to the great Detriment of his Fortune, but now ſeem'd to be more than ordinary pleas'd with the Worſhip that was paid him by the High-Church Populace, who ſet him up as their Idol, and he gave not the leaſt Token that it was not acceptable to him. But it prov'd his Ruin, the Rabble being the moſt rotten Scaffolding that great Men can make uſe of in their political Edifices. Sir Matthew Dudley, Mr. Newport, Mr. Culiford, and Mr. Shute, now Lord Barrington, were removed from being Commiſſioners of the Cuſtoms, and Matthew Prior, John Bridges, Robert Williamſon, and Edward Gibbon were added to that Commiſſion. The Duke of Somerſet's Firmneſs, in adhering to the true Intereſt of Great Britain, in oppoſition to the deſtructive Scheme of the new Managers, made them never give over importuning the Queen, by their Truſty Mrs. Abigail, now Lady Maſham, 'till they got his Grace to be removed from his Poſt of Maſter of the Horſe; but her Majeſty cou'd not be prevailed with to accept of the Dutcheſs's Reſignation; that excellent Lady being very unwilling to remain in a Court, where her noble Conſort had met with ſuch unjuſt and ungrateful Treatment. The Lady Rialton, and the Counteſs of Sunderland, the Duke of Marlborough's Daughters, reſign'd their Places of Ladies of the Bed-Chamber, one of which was beſtowed on the Lady Catherine Hyde, Daughter to the late Earl of Rocheſter.

Duke of Ormond made General in the Duke of Marlborough's Place.

The Elector of Hanover will not Command the Britiſh Army in Flanders.

Worthy Gentlemen turn'd out of Places.

Tho' there cou'd be no very good News expected from the opening the Congreſs at Utrecht, yet the Miniſtry were deſirous to have the Parliament adjourned 'till the News of its being opened arrived; and Secretary St. John accordingly carry'd a Meſſage from the Queen, that her Majeſty deſired them to Adjourn to the 17th of January, when ſhe hoped ſhe might be able to come to her Houſe of Peers, being ſtill indiſpoſed with the Gout: Which Meſſage was readily comply'd with, and the ſame Day, Mr. Finch preſented a Bill to repeal the Act for naturalizing Foreign Proteſtants, as if we were afraid of having too many People, and too much Trade in England. If Queen Elizabeth had been capable of having ſuch a ſet of Counſellors about her as theſe new Miniſters, and the Zeal againſt admitting Foreign Proteſtants among us, to prevent Danger to the Church had been cheriſh'd as it was now, this Nation, according to the exacteſt Calculations of Political Arithmeticians, wou'd have a Million of People, and Millions of Treaſure leſs than it has now. But one cannot believe that the Tories cou'd make any ſuch Calculations.

Mr. Finch moves for repealing the Naturalization Act.

A.D.1712

The Queen's Gout continuing, her Majeſty ſent the News that was come from Utrecht, to the two Houſes, by a Meſſage importing, "That "her Majeſty cou'd now tell them that her Plenipotentiaries were arriv'd at Utrecht, and had begun to concert the moſt proper Ways of procuring a juſt Satisfaction to all in Alliance "with her, according to the ſeveral Treaties; "and particularly with relation to Spain and "the Weſt-Indies. That the World would now "ſee how groundleſs thoſe Reports were, which "had been ſpread Abroad by Men of evil Intentions, to ſerve the worſt of Deſigns, as if a ſeparate Peace had been treated, for which there "had not been the leaſt colour." As this Meſſage had been drawn up by the Prime Miniſter, or ſome of his Junto, it has in it all the tricking and quibling which formed the Character of the Man. Theſe Things are within my own Memory, and I myſelf publiſh'd and wrote ſeveral of the Tracts that are here referr'd to. If inſtead of ſeparate Peace, it had been worded treating ſeparately, it wou'd have been juſt the Miniſters were charged with it, Matthew Prior's going firſt to France, and Meſnager's coming back with him to England, are Proofs that we ſent for the Peace to France; and as to the Care about recovering Spain and the Weſt-Indies for the Houſe of Auſtria, the Managers who drew up this Meſſage, knew at the ſame Time that they ſaid it, that it was reſolv'd to leave the Duke of Anjou in Poſſeſſion of them; and the People of England were ſatisfy'd what particular Care the Biſhop of Briſtol and Earl of Strafford had Orders to take of the Recovery of Spain and the Indies, by an Account of the Mareſchal D'Uxelles's Behaviour at the firſt Conferences. That Affair being mention'd, the Mareſchal, with an Air which would have driven him from Gertrudenberg, had he aſſum'd it there, ſaid, We ought to wait the Arrival of the Embaſſadors of Spain. Count Zinzendorf reply'd briſkly, I am here, and I am myſelf that Perſon; neither the Biſhop nor the Earl thought fit to ſhew any Diſlike to D'Uxelles's Preſumption. The Queen, at the Cloſe of this Meſſage, is made to ſay, That ſhe found it neceſſary to obſerve, how great Licenſe was taken in publiſhing falſe and ſcandalous Libels, ſuch as were a Reproach to any Government. Which was moſt true, as it was, that the moſt ſcandalous and falſe, were written by St. John, Prior, Swift, and others countenanc'd and rewarded by the Miniſtry.

Another deplorable Inſtance of Double-Dealing.

My French Hiſtorian writes, Le Roi de Portugal, & le Duc Savoie ſe virent inſultè par le pitoyables Gazettiers, ſans que les Miniſtres de ces Princes qui en firent des Plaintes puſſent en avoir Raiſon Il s' y dechaina une foule d' Ecrivains Mercenairs & ſcandaleux qui n' epargnerent pas ce qu' ilya de plus Auguſt du Monde. The King of Portugal and Duke of Savoy were inſulted by News-Writers, and their Miniſters cou'd get no Satisfaction; there were let looſe a Crowd of Mercenary Scriblers, who ſpared not the moſt auguſt Things in the World. I will give an Inſtance of one of their

*A.D.*1712 their Libels, which the Annaliſt aſſures us was written by either Mr. Prior, or Dr. Jonathan Swift; take it as he tells it.

" To prepoſſeſs the Minds of the Commons, " the Duke of Marlborough's inveterate Enemies " ſet all their Mercenary Pens at Work to blaſt " his Reputation; and among the reſt, one " of the Writers of the Examiner, either Prior " or Swift, who for ſome time paſt had purſued " his Grace with unrelenting Fury, and profli- " gate Malice, did on this Occaſion, the " Duke being queſtioned in Parliament, pub- " liſh a ſatyrical Copy of Verſes, wherein he " charged his Grace with Breach of Truſt, and " delivered him up to Juſtice. This Stanza is " not the moſt villainous."

An impudent and villainous Libel on the Duke of Marlborough.

IX. So flagrant is thy Inſolence,
So vile thy Breach of Truſt is;
That longer with thee to diſpenſe,
Were want of Power, or want of Senſe:
Here Towzer do him Juſtice.
Widow and her Cat. Fable.

The comparing of the new Miniſters and their Accomplices to a Maſtiff or mad Dog, was indeed an apt Simile enough; but I queſtion whether if a French Ballad-maker had diſpens'd ſuch lewd Rhimes on the Duke of Marlborough at Paris, after the Battle of Oudenarde, and the taking of Liſle, he wou'd not have been ſent for it to the Galleys. But theſe deteſtible Mercenaries, hir'd by theſe Men to invent Lies and Scandal for them, being not able to ſtand againſt the Force of Truth and Wit, in the Writings of Mr. Maynwaring, Dr. Hare, and others who wrote unanſwerably on the Side of the Confederacy, the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and the old Miniſters, the Harleians call'd in the Power of the Crown to their Aſſiſtance, and that very St. John, who has ſince been ſuch a Champion for the Liberty of the Preſs, did now uſe his utmoſt Endeavours to have a Reſtraint put upon it. But even this Majority cou'd not be be brought to it.

The Lords having reſolved upon an Addreſs of Thanks, upon a Motion of my Lord Somers, it was agreed, that to theſe Words, and particularly with Relation to Spain and the Weſt-Indies, ſhou'd be added, which are of ſo great Concern to the Safety and Commerce of your Majeſty's Kingdoms.

The Preparation the Commons made for a formal Attack in the Duke of Marlborough's Caſe, was ſo trivial and mean, that the Contrivers of it would deſerve Pity, as ſome of the Infirmities of human Nature, did not their Wickedneſs kill any ſuch Emotion. They gave out that Robert Walpole, Eſq; who had ſerved the Queen and Kingdom in ſeveral important Employments, with diſtinguiſhed Ability, Fidelity, and Zeal; and by his uncommon Merit, had in a particular Manner acquired the Eſteem and Friendſhip of the Duke of Marlborough, had cheated the Publick of a prodigious Sum, when he was Secretary at War. To confirm this falſe Tale, Lockhart, the Pretender's faſt Friend, and his Brother-Commiſſioner of Accounts, delivered a Report to the Houſe, containing a Charge againſt Mr. Walpole, grounded on Depoſitions of Mr. Man, relating to Contracts for Forage in Scotland; which being taken into Conſideration, the very firſt Day of the Parliament's meeting after their Adjournment, notwithſtanding many worthy Members, and Mr. Walpole himſelf ſpoke very rationally and calmly in his Vindication, it was reſolved, that Mr. Walpole had taken 500 Guineas, and a Note of a Man's Hand for 500 Pounds, for two Forage Contracts in Scotland, which they own'd to be purſuant to a Power from the late Lord-Treaſurer. However, they expelled him the Houſe, and committed him to the Tower for this Enormity. The main Foible of which was, that it was not true; ſo well known Abroad, that a French-Man could write in his Hiſtory, Ce Gentilhomme fit voir qu'il n' avoit jamais touchè cet Argent. Tho' that Gentleman prov'd, he never received the Money. *A.D.*1712

Injuſtice to Mr. R. Walpole.

The bringing a Charge into Parliament againſt the Duke of Marlborough about Money, from the Contractors for Bread and Bread-Waggons, ſcandalized not only every good Briton, but every good Man in Chriſtendom, who had heard of his Grace's wonderful Actions in the Service of the Queen and her Kingdoms; but what wou'd they have though of it, if they had known what his Grace had to ſay in his Juſtification. " That the Money he " had received from Sir Solomon Medina, the Jew " Knight, was no more than what had been allow- " ed as a Perquiſite to the Commander in Chief of " the Army in the Low-Countries, even before " the Revolution and ſince. That, whatever- " ver Sums he had received on that Account, " had been conſtantly employed for the Service " of the Publick, in keeping ſecret Correſpon- " dence, and in getting Intelligence of the Ene- " mies Motions and Deſigns. That this had " fallen ſo far ſhort, that he took leave to acquaint " them with another Article that had been ap- " plied to the ſame Uſe, which aroſe from the " Queen's Warrant, though that did not pro- " perly relate to the publick Accounts, being a " free Gift of the Foreign Troops: That be- " fore the late King's Death, when the Parliament " voted 40,000 Men for the Quota of Eng- " land, in the Low-Countries, 21,612 were to " be Foreigners, and the reſt Engliſh; that, for " theſe laſt they gave 10,000 l. a Year, for Intelli- " gence without Account. But his Majeſty be- " ing ſenſible that this Sum wou'd not any ways " anſwer that Service, and being unwilling to " apply for any more to the Parliament, he or- " dered that the Foreign Troops ſhou'd contri- " bute Two and a half per Cent. towards it, " which they readily agreed to, upon Pro- " miſe that no other Stoppages ſhou'd be made " from their Pay. That the Queen afterwards " was pleas'd to confirm it by her Warrant, " and that it had been apply'd from Time to " Time for Intelligence and ſecret Service, with " ſuch Succeſs, that, what with the Bleſſing of " God, and the Bravery of the Troops, moſt " of the Advantages of the War might be at- " tributed to the timely and good Advice, pro- " cur'd by the help of that Money." The Allegations made by his Grace are confirm'd by the notoriety of the Facts; which not being contradicted, but evaded, by Lockhart of Carnwaith, and his Brother Commiſſioners, the Matter came to a Debate, and let us read who they were that ſpoke with Vehemence againſt the Duke of Marlborough.

Charge againſt the Duke of Marlborough about Bread-Waggons.

The Duke's Vindication

Mr. Thomas Foley,	Sir Thomas Hanmer,
Mr. Edward Harley,	Sir Henry Bunbury,
Mr. Henry St. John,	Sir William Windham,
Vicechamberlain Cooke,	Sir Robert Raymond,
Sir John Packington,	Mr. John Manley.

And who they were who ſpoke for his Grace.

Sir Charles Hedges,	The Hon. James Bridges, Eſq;
Sir Peter King,	William Pulteney, Eſq;
Sir Richard Onſlow,	Robert Heyſham, Eſq;
Gilford Lawſon, Eſq;

A.D.1712 Sir John Germain gave Evidence, that the Perquiſite received by the Duke of Marlborough from the Contractors for Bread, &c. was formerly allow'd to Prince Waldeck, under whom he ſerv'd as Aid de Camp. But as if this had been a new Thing impos'd upon the Contractors, the receiving that Money was voted to be unwarrantable and illegal, and his Grace to be accountable for the Two and half per Cent. deducted from the foreign Pay. Were there ſuch Men any where elſe in the World? Do Generals keep an Account of the Monies diſburſted for Intelligence and ſecret Services? But no Matter. Theſe Reſolutions being laid before the Queen, the worſt Part of this Buſineſs is to come. She was pleaſed to anſwer, I have a great Regard for whatever is repreſented to me by my Commons, and will do my Part to redreſs what you complain of. The Commiſſioners of Accompts made the Deductions of the Two and half per Cent. to amount to above 460,000 l. charging his Grace in groſs to ſwell the Accompt as was done in the Caſe of the 35 Millions. This Report is ſo long, ſo wild and provoking, that there is no having any more to do with it.

The Queen countenances the Charge.

The Miniſters having done ſo much to diſoblige all who wiſh'd well to the common Cauſe, the Proteſtant Religion, and Proteſtant Succeſſion, bethought themſelves of the Obligations they themſelves were under to High-Church, which Party they imagin'd wou'd not be better pleaſed with any Thing, than with the breaking in upon the Union with Scotland, to mortify the Kirk. Accordingly a Bill was order'd to be brought in, to preſerve the Liturgy of the Church of England, and for repealing an Act paſs'd in the Parliament of Scotland, entituled, An Act againſt irregular Baptiſms and Marriages. This Bill being twice read, a Petition of William Carſtairs, Principal of the College of Edinburgh, Thomas Blackwell, Profeſſor of Divinity at Aberdeen, and Robert Baillie, Miniſter of Inverneſs, was offered to the Houſe, relating to the ſaid Bill, but it was rejected: As was alſo a Clauſe to reſtrain Perſons in Office from going to Epiſcopal Meetings. Such was the Juſtice of this Majority, they compell'd every Body in Office in England to be of the national Church, and in Scotland, they permitted them to diſſent from it. The Church of Scotland, juſtly alarm'd at the Deſign of ſetting up the Church of England's Liturgy and Worſhip in North-Britain, the Commiſſioners of the General Aſſembly drew up a large Repreſentation, wherein they ſet forth, "That "the Scotch Act of Parliament, 1707, for ſecuring the Proteſtant Religion and Preſbyterian Government, whereby all the other Acts in favour of the ſame, are ratified and approved, is declar'd to be an eſſential and fundamental Condition of the Treaty of Union, without any Alteration thereof, or Derogation therein in any ſort for ever, even beyond the reach of Parliament. That they cou'd not but expreſs "their Surprize and deep Affliction, to hear of "a Bill offer'd for ſuch a large and almoſt boundleſs Toleration, not only threatning the Overthrow of their Church, but giving a large Licence to all Errors and Blaſphemies, and throwing up all Diſcipline, to the Diſhonour of God, "and Ruin of the Chriſtian Religion, and the infallible Diſturbance of the Quiet, and to the "Confuſion of that Church and Nation; and "therefore with all Humility, but with the greateſt Earneſtneſs, they did beſeech, nay, "obteſt her Majeſty, by the ſame Mercy of "God, that reſtored that Church, and raiſed "her Majeſty to the Throne, to interpoſe for "for the Relief of that Church, and the Main- A.D.1712
"tenance of the preſent Eſtabliſhment, as in her "Royal Wiſdom and Juſtice ſhe ſhou'd think "needful." Mr. Carſtairs made a ſhort Speech when he preſented this Repreſentation and Petition to the Queen, and receiv'd a gracious Anſwer, with farther Aſſurances of her Royal Protection for the Church of Scotland. But to continue the new Method of anſwering, the Act againſt which they petition'd, went on, paſs'd both Houſes, and had the Royal Aſſent.

The Miniſtry break in upon the Union.

Shameleſs Partiality in High-Church.

The new Method of anſwering Addreſſes.

His Grace the Duke of Devonſhire made a Motion in the Houſe of Lords for a Bill to ſettle the Precedence of the moſt illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover; which Motion had not the deſir'd Effect at that Time, not out of any Diſreſpect to that Succeſſion, but through the Artifices of the Lord-Treaſurer, who found Means to have the Matter evaded, purpoſely to bring in the Bill himſelf about three Weeks after. For while his Creatures were openly in an Intereſt contrary to that of the Electoral Family, himſelf affected Diſtinction by his Zeal for it, tho' in the main he ſuffer'd it to be brought into the extreameſt Peril. The Bill was entitul'd, An Act for ſettling Precedence of the moſt excellent Princeſs Sophia, Electreſs and Dutcheſs Dowager of Hanover, of the Elector her Son, and the Electoral Prince, the Duke of Cambridge. It was read twice January 17, the third Time the next Morning, and ſent by the Lord Chief-Juſtice Parker, and Mr. Juſtice Eyres, to the Commons, who read it three Times without any Interruption; and having reſolv'd it ſhou'd paſs Nemine Contradicente, ſent it back to the Lords by Mr. Secretary St. John.

The Act for Precedence in the Houſe of Hanover paſt.

On the 30th of January, Queen Anne was carried in a Sedan to St. James's Chapel, where Mr. Pawlet St. John preach'd before her, a Man of no other Note, than what his two Names gave him, 'till he made himſelf obnoxious by this Profanation of the Holy Place he was then in. He concluded his Harangue thus, For thy Name-ſake, O Lord, by which we have been called; for thy Temple's, where we worſhip thee, O give not up thy Heritage again to ſuch Reproach; but preſerve thy Church from the madneſs of their Zeal, who wou'd ruin it by reforming it. Tremendous Temerity! Does he tell the Omniſcient that the Chriſtians who wou'd reform the Church to its primitive Purity and Simplicity, deſign'd only its Deſtruction! Again, preſerve thy Name from theſe Hypocrites who fear not to advance thy Kingdom by rebelling, and thy Glory by blaſpheming thee; and from all the ſad and terrible Effects of religious Rage, pretended Moderation, and independant Loyalty, ſuch as afflicted our Fathers, or may threaten our Poſterity, Good Lord deliver us: And let all the People of this Nation, all true Lovers of our Queen and Country ſay Amen. Were theſe falſe Suggeſtions, theſe ſcurrilous Ironies, fit for the Preſence of God and the Queen? Do ſuch Men as this Preacher really think there is a God who will not be mock'd? The Martyrdom was his proper Subject, if his Father had to do with it, what was that to his Poſterity? Why, Revolution Principles muſt be underſtood to be Rebellion, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion to be the continuance of it. In any other Interpretation this Rant wou'd be Nonſence and Impertinence, tho' much applauded at that Time. He was thank'd for the Sermon, and order'd to Print it; Dr. Gooch of Cambridge, who Preach'd before the Commons, was thank'd alſo; but the Biſhop of Norwich, who Preach'd a pious healing Sermon before the Lords, receiv'd no Thanks.

Mr. Pawlet St. John's profane Sermon.

A.D. 1712 On the 4th of February the Commons voted the Dutch deficient in their Quotas for Sea Service, and the Emperor deficient in his Forces for Land Service, that the King of Portugal was likewise deficient: And all three in so great a Degree, that England had been at many Millions Charge in carrying on the War, more than she need to have been, had those Princes and the States made good their Agreements. These Votes were ushered in by Pamphlets, said to have been written by Secretary St. John, call'd the Conduct of the Allies, which was fully answer'd by Dr. Hare, the present Right Reverend and learned Bishop of Chichester. That Answer is in four Treatises, entituled, The Allies and the late Ministry defended; and the Allegations in the Votes abovementioned are fully consider'd and cleared: But the Intent of it was to persuade the People that we had been frequently impos'd upon by the Confederates, and therefore were under a Necessity of getting a Peace at any rate, rather than have none. I refer to the Bishop's four Treatises, and content myself with what was said Abroad, on those extraordinary Resolves. Les Alliez d' Angleterre n' eurent pas un Traittement plus favorable que les Whigs, La Chambre Basse declara, &c. "The Allies of England were no better "treated than the Whigs, the lower House de- "clar'd the Emperor and the States-General had "not furnished their Contingent in Flanders, nor "in Spain, nor in Portugal, according to what "had been stipulated in the Treaties; and they "attributed all the Losses which had been sus- "tain'd, during the whole Course of the War, "to that Deficiency. The States-General, "whose Conduct and Courage, Fidelity with "respect to their Allies, and glorious Effort to "preserve the Liberty of Europe, will be to the "eternal Renown of that Republick. The "States, I say, publish'd a Memorial of their Con- "duct from the beginning of the War, to that "Time, wherein they made appear what little "Reason there was to accuse them, and justify'd "their Conduct in a manner very respectful, "but very forcible also." The Commons cou'd not bear to have their Sentiments contradicted; and the Memorial having been printed in the Daliy Journal, they voted it to be a false, scandalous and malicious Libel; these arbitrary Resolutions, False, Scandalous, Malicious, are the Technical Terms of Party for whatever is not lik'd. The Memorial was presented by Monsr. Borselle, the States Ambassadour in England, and shews, as it is there worded, That the States mere wrongfully accus'd by the Resolution of the House of Commons, and by their Address on that Subject presented to her Majesty; which indeed they had so well prov'd, that unprejudiced People were generally offended at so unjust a Charge against so good Allies.

Secretary St. John's Pamphlet answer'd by Dr. Hare.

Unjust Votes against the Dutch, fully confuted by the States-General.

The Majority vote the States Memorial to be false, scandalous, &c.

Sir James Wisheart was sent to Holland to quicken the Negotiations of Peace, under pretence of settling the Quota of the States for the Marine next Year; and Mr. Thomas Harley was sent to Hanover with the Act of Precedence, which, says the Annalist, was thought wou'd bespeak him a gracious Reception, and raise favourable Thoughts of the British Ministers; but that Court saw through these Cobweb Amusements, which were contradicted by the bare-faced Countenance given to the Enemies of the Protestant Succession, and the Discouragement of its best Friends.

House of Hanover not to be impos'd upon by them.

Lieutenant-General Stewart was appointed Commander in Chief of the Forces in Ireland, and John, Lord Archbishop of Tuam, one of the Lords Justices of that Kingdom, jointly with Sir Constantine Phips, who openly favour'd the Pretender's Interest. A.D. 1712

On the 7th of February the Commons read a third Time a Bill in favour of Episcopacy in Scotland, upon which Occasion Sir David Dalrymple said, That since he saw the House were resolved to make no Alterations in the Body of the Bill, he acquiesced, and only desired, that the Title of it might be thus, A Bill for establishing Jacobitism and Immorality in Scotland. A Motion was then made that the Bill do pass Nomine contradicente, to which a Scotch Gentleman made Answer, That he hoped many of his Countrymen, and added, all good Patriots, wou'd be against a Bill which was so diametrically opposite to the Treaty of Union: It was sent to the Lords by Sir Simeon Stewart.

Sir David Dalrymple's Saying of Scots Prelacy.

The Ministers being extremely embarrass'd with the Negotiations of Peace, which all but their own Faction cry'd out against, imagin'd it wou'd be a Means to reconcile People to it, if they cou'd cast an Odium on the Treaties concluded in the Time of their Predecessors; and therefore their Adherents in the House of Commons call'd for the Barrier-Treaty, between the Queen and the States-General, and came to some Resolutions; which were supported by the same Wisdom, Honour, and Sincerity, that had distinguish'd their Resolves hitherto from those of all other Representatives. They voted that there were several Articles in the Treaty destructive to the Trade and Interest of Great-Britain; and Mr. Maynwaring prov'd the quite contrary, in a little Discourse he wrote on purpose, entituled, A short Account and Defence of the Barrier Treaty, which is printed in his Life, particularly he informs us, that with Reference to those Articles, nothing was desired in them but what the Dutch had a Right to already, as the Pensionary alledg'd, and that it had been stipulated for them by the Treaty of Munster, that the Subjects of the States should have the same Privileges of Trade to the Spanish Dominions as were granted to the Subjects of Great-Britain and the Anseatick Towns, &c. Notwithstanding which, and many Pages of Argument still stronger, to prove the Justice and Reasonableness of the Barrier-Treaty, the same Majority who voted the authentick Memorial of their High Mightinesses to be a false, scandalous, and malicious Libel, resolv'd, "That the "Lord Viscount Townshend, who negotiated and "sign'd, and all those who advis'd the ratifying "of the said Treaty, were Enemies to the Queen "and Country". If they had voted it to be Midnight at Noon-day, it wou'd not have been more preposterous. The learned Prelate, late mention'd, did also vindicate the Barrier-Treaty more largely in another Treatise; but what the Pensionary said, is of itself sufficient to justify the Lord Townshend's agreeing to what had been agreed before. The Harleians attack'd this Barrier-Treaty with another View also, and that was to weaken the Guaranty of the Protestant Succession; for in the new Barrier-Treaty which their Negotiators made, they destroy'd the Force of the former Clause concerning it, by stipulating that the States shou'd do nothing towards the supporting it, but at the Request of Great-Britain, which, in such Hands as theirs, wou'd most surely have sent for the French to assist the Pretender, rather than for the Dutch to resist him. The States-General wrote a very submissive, pathetick Letter to the Queen, setting forth their just Claim to, and the Necessity

The Tories again break in upon the Union.

They vote the Barrier Treaty to be against Trade.

The contrary prov'd.

They vote the Lord Townshend an Enemy to the Queen and Country.

They destroy the Guaranty of the Protestant Succession.

A.D. 1712 Neceſſity of that Barrier, for the Security of England as well as Holland; cloſing it thus, That if there were ſome Articles which, without affecting the Eſſentials of the Treaty, might be thought to want Explanation, her Majeſty ſhou'd find them willing and ready to Treat thereupon, and with all the Facility and Condeſcenſion that could reaſonably be required of them, whatever ſhou'd not be of the laſt Importance for the Security of their State; intreating, withal, her Majeſty to continue towards them that very precious Friendſhip and good Will with which ſhe had hitherto honoured them. Every good Briton who read this Letter, that was made publick, was wonderfully affected with it; but it had no more Effect upon the Miniſters than if it had been ſaid to Men who were Mad or Drunk. Mr. Anneſley was Chairman of the Committee, who made theſe Reſolves about my Lord Townſhend and the Barrier-Treaty, and Mr. Conyers of the Committee that cenſur'd the Management of the War in Portugal; which is ſufficiently vindicated in a large Treatiſe, written in Juſtification of the Earl of Galway's Conduct. Then the Commons, with the like Affectation of Zeal for the Good of the Publick, expell'd Adam Cardonnel, Eſq; the Duke of Marlborough's Secretary, and a Member of the Houſe, for taking a Fee of 500 Ducats from the Contractors for Bread and Bread-Waggons: They alſo fell upon Waggon-Money, Forage-Money, upon Mr. Sweet, Deputy-Paymaſter at Amſterdam, for One per Cent. of the Contractors aforeſaid, on hiring Troops, &c. All which Matters having no other View nor Effect, than to ſet People againſt the old Miniſtry, who wiſely and faithfully ſerv'd them, it cannot be worth either the Writer or Reader's while to dwell longer upon them.

They fall upon Mr. Cardonnel and Waggon-Money, &c.

The Specifick Offers of France being tranſmitted to England by the Biſhop of Briſtol and Earl of Strafford, the general Indignation againſt them was ſuch, that no Set of Men in the World, but the Miniſters then in England, wou'd have hazarded their Necks ſo daringly as they did, by an obſtinate Purſuit of ſo dangerous and diſhonourable a Negotiation. They had a Trick of ſending Paragraphs to the News-Papers in Holland, to be taken thence, and inſerted in their infamous Paper the Poſt-Boy; for which they alſo invented ſuch News as they thought neceſſary, to introduce the Meaſures they were taking; and therefore they printed in the Article from the Hague this moſt impudent Falſity, even juſt at the Time that the French Offers came over and gave them the Lie.

The Biſhop of Briſtol, and Earl of Strafford ſend over the ſpecifick Offer of France.

The Offers of France, however unreaſonable they might ſeem to ſome of that Country, did certainly promiſe much more to the Engliſh than was ever demanded in thoſe famous and numerous Articles, fallaciouſly term'd Preliminaries, which were ſign'd by the Duke of Marlborough and the Lord Viſcount Townſhend, in 1709. The Newſmonger was generally ſuppoſed to be Secretary St. John himſelf; but if he did not dictate, he certainly directed ſuch Paragraphs, and protected and rewarded thoſe that did dictate them.

The Miniſters print a notorious Falſity.

On the 15th of February, my Lord Halliſax made a Motion in the Houſe of Peers for preſenting an Addreſs to the Queen, about the Specifick Offers of France, which he call'd Trifling, Arrogant, and Injurious to her Majeſty and her Allies. They were ſo Arrogant and Trifling, that ſeveral noble Lords, who bore no good Will to the old Miniſters, ſpoke againſt them; and it preſently appear'd that in the Senſe of that auguſt Aſſembly theſe Propoſitions ought to be rejected with the utmoſt Indignation, that it plainly appear'd, France has no other View than to amuſe and divide the Allies. Did not the Biſhop of Briſtol perceive this, if the Earl of Strafford did not, and ought he not, in the Sincerity of a Miniſter of the Goſpel, to have repreſented this to the Queen; but it was not for ſuch Work that the Treaſurer ſent him to Utrecht. It was farther ſaid in the Houſe of Lords, That it was derogatory to her Majeſty's Honour to enter into any Negotiations with that Crown, 'till her Majeſty's Title was acknowledg'd. Endeavours were uſed to adjourn the Debate, by ſuggeſting that the Offers that were handed about, had yet no other Authority, than their being inſerted in the Holland Gazettes, and therefore might not be genuine: Pray obſerve what Hands we are in. The Treaſurer and the two Secretaries, &c. knew they were genuine, and could not by this Delay have got above a Day or two; for by that Time it would have been univerſally known, and they would have been oblig'd to own they were genuine. "Therefore the Lords ought not to "take any Notice of them, 'till ſuch Time the "Queen had communicated them to the Houſe." But the Offers were ſo idle and inſolent, that it was reſolved, upon a Diviſion, to addreſs her Majeſty upon it, which they did as follows.

A.D. 1712 The Offers Trifling, Scandalous and Injurious.

The ſhameful Excuſe of the ſpecifick Offers.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

The Lords Addreſs againſt them.

WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament aſſembled, beg leave humbly to repreſent to your Majeſty the juſt Indignation of this Houſe, at the diſhonourable Treatment of your Majeſty by France, in having propoſed to acknowledge your Majeſty's Title to theſe Realms, no ſooner than when the Peace ſhall be ſigned. And we cannot forbear expreſſing our utmoſt Reſentment at the Terms of Peace offer'd to your Majeſty, and your Allies, by the Plenipotentiaries of France. And we do with the greateſt Zeal and Affection aſſure your Majeſty, that this Houſe will ſtand by, and aſſiſt your Majeſty with our Lives and Fortunes in carrying on this War, in conjunction with your Allies, till a ſafe and honourable Peace can be obtained for your Majeſty and your Allies.

Her Majeſty's Anſwer.

My Lords,

I Return you my hearty Thanks, for the Zeal you expreſs for my Honour, and for the Aſſurance you give of ſupporting me.

The Sileſia Company compliment P. Eugene.

Prince Eugene continued ſtill in England, and had a Compliment paid him by the Sileſia Company, as they were then called, a Body of Merchants and other Citizens of London, who lent the Emperor 250000 l. on his Mines in Sileſia, for the Service of the War in Italy; where Prince Eugene then commanded againſt the French. Sir Alexander Cairnes and Sir Theodore Janſſen were deputed by that Company to wait on his Highneſs; and to aſſure him, that it was not ſo much to make Profit of their Money, as the Honour of being ſerviceable to the common Cauſe; and of having an Opportunity to ſhew their Reſpect for a Prince of ſo great a Reputation; and as they accounted themſelves particularly obliged to his Highneſs's Integrity, for the punctual Payment of their Intereſt and Principal; ſo, if in the Courſe of this War, his Highneſs ſhould have any occaſion for greater Sums, their Company would readily advance them upon his Highneſs's ſingle Security.

His

*A.D.*1712 The Prince's Answer.

His Highness receiv'd their Compliment with Marks of the utmost Satisfaction, and was pleased to tell them, that he was very much obliged to them, since the raising of the Siege of Turin, and the Successes that followed thereupon, were, under God, mainly owing to the seasonable Supply of Money he receiv'd from England. In what Light do these Citizens of London appear on this Occasion, compar'd with the eternal Cloud in which this Ministry is involved?

His Memorial to justify the Emperor's Conduct in the War.

The Memorial which his Highness made publick about this Time, is so full, in answer to all the invidious Remarks on his Imperial Majesty's Conduct in the War, that I shall give an Extract of it. Having mention'd two Letters, written before his Arrival in England, by the two Secretaries of State to Count Gallas, about the Method of carrying on the War in Spain, his Highness proceeds.

" 'Tis certain the Emperor went from Barcelona before he cou'd have this Advice from Count Gallas, and that he was obliged to consult his Ministers and Generals, in order to draw up an exact Scheme, according to her Majesty's Desire. In this he did not lose one Moment of Time, but sent for me to Insprach to receive his Orders, and dispatch'd me immediately into England to her Majesty the Queen; because he thought he could send no Body who was better inform'd of his Military Affairs, and particularly of the State of all his Forces in the Empire, and that Side the Mediterranean. He sent also with me, as I mention'd before, the Count de Corsana, who is very well inform'd of all that relates to the Affairs of Spain.

" 'Twas therefore by his Imperial Majesty's Orders that I drew up my first Memorial, to request her Majesty to appoint her Ministers to enter into the Particulars of it with me, at least about the Affairs of Spain, in Case the present Conjuncture could bear the Continuance of the War.

" I think it needless to recapitulate what has pass'd during the Course of it. All the World knows that it was the House of Austria who began, and maintain'd it alone for above a Year, [Not a Word of this is hinted in all the Invectives of this Ministry against the Allies, and their Conduct] with vast Expence both of Men and Money; and that when the Allies enter'd into it, according to the Treaty of the Grand Alliance, his Imperial Majesty prosecuted it with the same Vigour in Italy, having besides a considerable Army in the Empire. And though the Affairs of Bavaria, and the Rebellion of Hungary, carried the War into all his Hereditary Countries, he not only continued his Troops, and did all that lay in his Power for the common Cause, but even exerted himself so far, that he had scarce a Garrison left to place in his Capital, which was then threatned with a Siege: Therefore 'tis plain, no Prince in the World could have shewn more Friendship and Zeal for the Good of the common Cause. And there was no Difference between those Years and them that follow'd, but only that the Regiments cou'd not be so compleat while all his hereditary Countries were in a Commotion. But he did not fail, immediately after Peace was restor'd there, and the Enemy remov'd from his Frontiers, on the side of Bavaria, to compleat all his Regiments, and likewise to raise new ones, for reinforcing his Armies in Italy, Spain, and the Empire, and elsewhere as was judg'd necessary. This Year his Imperial Majesty having apply'd himself to the recruiting and augmenting of his Regiments, particularly those of Foot, and knowing the Necessity there is of making all possible Efforts at once to put an end to the War, and to oblige the Enemy to such a Peace as the Safety of Europe requires, he is ready to redouble them on his Part, as appears by my former Memorials, so that they shall exceed not only 1600 Men, the Number set down in the Answer, but also above 14000, even though, as 'tis alledg'd in the Answer, his Imperial Majesty shou'd be obliged to furnish 90,000 Men, which does not appear to be founded upon any Treaty in Writing; his Majesty now offering to have 103,920 Men of his own Troops in the Field, without including the Garrisons of Bavaria, those of the Frontier Places being always reckon'd among the Troops in that Country, which the General is at liberty to diminish or augment according as the State of War shall require, as is seen by Experience in the Low-Countries, where the national Troops, viz. English and Dutch, and the Foreigners in their Pay, are put every Year in good Numbers into Garrisons. *A.D.*1712

" Her Majesty, the Queen, may please to consider, that the Month of February is almost at an End, that the Season is far more advanc'd in Spain than elsewhere, that no Disposition is yet made on that Side, that the Troops there are far behind us in Arrears, and that whether we have a Peace or War, not one Moment ought to be lost: For, if the first, our good Dispositions alone may oblige the Enemy to grant safe and honourable Terms, by letting them see that we are still in a Condition to continue the War with more Vigour than in the preceding Years: And, if the War lasts, there is not time enough to make necessary Preparations there, and in other Places.

" Their High Mightinesses, the States-General, had declar'd in several Conferences to the Queen's Ministers, and myself, as to the War in Spain, that they will keep the same Number of Troops in that Country that are now there; both of their own Troops, or in their Pay, and that they will send thither the four Battalions which were stipulated last Year; so that I hope her Majesty, the Queen, will please to order the Rest to be concerted with me. Besides my first Memorial, I declar'd in the Conferences, in the Name of his Imperial Majesty, that he propos'd to have 30,000 Men of his own Forces; and that wherras the Charges of that Service wou'd amount to four Millions of Crowns, he wou'd take one Million upon himself. It may reasonably be judg'd that this Effort, if rightly consider'd, is no small Ease to England, is the greatest his Imperial Majesty is able to make; and if the two Maritime Powers make the like Efforts, we may hope to put a speedy and happy End to this War, and to oblige France to a safe and good Peace, &c."

Some Days pass'd before the Ministry wou'd vouchsafe an Answer; and at last, when Secretary St. John acquainted the House of Commons with Prince Eugene's Proposals about the 30,000 Men and the Million of Crowns, no Member said any thing to the Message; which made the Prince very uneasy. The next Day, February 27th, the Chevalier de Savoy, his Nephew dy'd of the Small-Pox, which was a great Trouble to his Highneſs, he having a particular Affection for that hopeful young Prince.

A.D. 1712

A ridiculous Breach of the Act of Union.

High-Church not having, as they thought, broke in ſufficiently upon the Act of Union, by the Patronages of Churches in North-Britain, they got another Act for reſtoring the Chriſtmas-Holidays to their former Uſe, which the Kirk had got to be ſuppreſt. What Heads theſe Men muſt have to have Room for ſuch Dreams, as well as ſuch Politicks: The Yule Vacance, or Chriſtmaſſing in Scotland, was hardly worth the Labour of two Houſes of Parliament, but this Miniſtry and their Aherents, ſhew'd Childrens Play, and did little Things to ſpite others only, while they were contriving their Ruin. This Spiting runs thro' all their Proceedings in a more or leſs Proportion.

The Miniſtry act in Spite.

The Lord Treaſurer's Brother, Edward, laid before the Commons, how much of the Thirty-five Millions had been accounted for in Mr. Maynwaring's Office, and his own, Auditors of the Impreſt. Enough has been ſaid of this Tragi-Farce of the Thirty-five Millions; and the bringing it formally on the Stage again, was the more ridiculous now, becauſe the generality of the People, even of thoſe the Miniſtry endeavour'd to impoſe upon, had by this Time been convinc'd of the Fallacy and Malice of this Clamour, by two Letters, written by Robert Walpole, Eſq; who knew that Matter better than any one, and was, as Mr. Maynwaring, a very good Judge ſaid, the beſt Maſter of Figures of any Man in his Time: He made it appear in theſe Letters, to the Satisfaction of all Men who had any Honeſty as well as Underſtanding, "That the great "Debt of the Nation was occaſion'd by abſo- "lute Neceſſity: That the Good of the Pub- "lick, and the Authority of Parliament, re- "quir'd thoſe extraordinary Expences and Ser- "vices. That of the Thirty-five Millions, &c. "Accompts had been duely render'd for all but "four. The Delays which happen in paſſing "moſt of the Accompts, had ariſen only from "Neceſſity, and the Nature of the Services: "That the common Courſe and Method of Buſi- "neſs made it impracticable for ſeveral Accomp- "tants to comply with the Rules of the Exche- "quer. That if in ſome few Inſtances all "poſſible Care and Diſpatch had not been us'd "to proſecute and finiſh the Accompts, the "Blame was by no means to be laid where it "was intended. That of all the Money granted "for the Service of this War, and iſſued during "the late Adminiſtration, it did not appear "there had been the leaſt Loſs and Embezzle- "ment. That there was no Ground to ſuſ- "pect, that by not compelling the Accomp- "tants to paſs their Accompts, any Frauds or "Miſapplications had been ſcreen'd or conceal'd; "and that upon the whole, there never was a "greater Calumny rais'd upon leſs Grounds "than that which he had diſprov'd." Theſe Truths were too ſtrong for the Treaſurer and his Junto, who had conjur'd up this wicked Spirit, to digeſt; and therefore to be reveng'd on the Author, who had been re-choſen for the Borough of King's-Lynn, in Norfolk, they voted Mr. Walpole incapable of being elected to ſerve in this preſent Parliament; for without ſuch a Vote, the People of Lynn thought themſelves ſo happy, in having ſo able and honourable a Repreſenſative, that this Majority cou'd not have expell'd him oftner than they wou'd have re-choſen him.

Mr. Maynwaring's Character of Mr. R. Walpole.

Mr. Walpole proves the Falſhood of the Charge of Thirty-five Millions.

A malicious Vote againſt him and the D. of Marlborough.

They then voted the Two and a half per Cent. from the Foreign Troops, to be apply'd to the uſe of the War; which they might the better do, becauſe they knew well enough the Duke of Ormond, their new General, wou'd have no Occaſion for Spies or Intelligence. The Reader will obſerve, that theſe Men's Councils are always attended with ſomething that expoſes the Weakneſs and Wickedneſs of them: They got this Vote purely to colour the Cenſure they had unjuſtly paſt on the Duke of Marlborough, contrary to the Sentiments of the Allies; who paid that Two and a half per Cent. for to ſhew that theſe Princes deſign'd and deſir'd that the Duke of Marlborough ſhou'd have that Deduction for the Uſes to which it was appropriated; and as a Proof of their Diſapprobation of all that this Miniſtry and their Majority had done concerning it, they order'd their Miniſters to repreſent, that the Two and a half per Cent. being their own Money, they were willing to allow it as a Free Gift, even to the Duke of Ormond, as they had done to the Duke of Marlborough, whom theſe Men, notwithſtanding all this, had order'd to be proſecuted by the Attorney-General. The Lords rejected the Bill, to exclude the Officers the Houſe of Commons; and the latter drew up a Repreſentation about the Management of the War, which is fully confuted by Biſhop H——'s Treatiſes, ſo call'd; but the Queen return'd an Anſwer to it, as graciouſly, as if it had been all Truth: She ſent a Meſſage, That the Earl of Strafford had certify'd, That the Collection at Rotterdam for the building an Engliſh Church there, was not ſufficient by 2500 l. which ſhe deſir'd them to make Proviſion for; and they comply'd with it, as one might well have ſuppos'd they wou'd.

A.D. 1712

The Foreign Princes deſire to pay the Two and a half per Cent. to the D. of Marlborough, which the Majority voted againſt.

On the 13th of March, Prince Eugene was introduced to his Audience of Leave by Mr. Secretary St. John; the three next Days he ſpent in receiving and paying the Viſits of the Miniſtry and other Perſons of Quality. On Sunday Morning, March 16, he took Leave of his dear Friend and Partner in Peril and Glory, the Duke of Marlborough; and having din'd with the honourable Henry Boyle, Eſq; He ſet out in the Afternoon for Greenwich, accompanied by the Duke of Grafton, Count Naſſaw, and the Lord Lifford. The next Morning his Highneſs and thoſe Lords embark'd for Holland, aboard the Peregrine Yacht, and arriv'd there Wedneſday the 19th of March. Whatever Speculations were then on the Succeſs of this Prince's Negotiations in England, they were random Gueſſes, and nothing ſo certain, as that he gain'd no manner of Ground of the Miniſters towards obſtructing the Peace, which they were reſolv'd to make at all Adventures: But that his Errand might not be entirely fruitleſs, they promis'd him one Third of the four Millions of Crowns, judg'd ſufficient for the War in Spain.

Prince Eugene leaves England.

While Prince Eugene was in England, the Scowrers began to play their mad Frolicks over again. The Beginning of them was in King William's Reign; and Shadwel wrote a Comedy to expoſe their Folly and Brutality: Theſe were lewd young Fellows, who in their Cups aſſaulted thoſe they met in the Night, broke Windows, pick'd up Whores, beat them, and ſometimes did worſe. As all Orders and Degrees of Men have their Fools among them, ſome of theſe Rakes were above the common Rank, as to Birth, and that made their Pranks the more talkt of. They were now call'd

The Scowrers, call'd Mohocks.

A. D. 1712

The Miniſtry give out they are Plotters.

Mohocks, and the new Miniſters immediately gave out they were ſo many Conſpirators againſt the Queen and Government; great Number of the Diſaffected, ſaid they, have combin'd together to diſturb the publick Peace; they moſt inhumanly, and without any Provocation, Aſſault and Wound thoſe they meet in the Streets, ſlitting or flatting Peoples Noſes, gagging or diſtending their Mouths with Iron Inſtruments, and committing many other extravagant Fooleries. The Annaliſt adds, "At "the ſame Time, printed Liſts were handed a- "bout of many Perſons, ſaid to have been "taken and committed to ſeveral Priſons, on "Account of theſe Barbarities; amongſt whom "ſome Men of Figure and Titles were inſinua- "ted to be." Theſe Stories were not only told us as by Authority, but a Proclamation was iſſued to diſcover theſe Mohocks, with 100 l. Reward for every ſuch Mohock ſo diſcover'd and appr hended, upon ſending Proof that he had wounde- ſtabb'd, or maim'd any one without Provocation.

Political Councils about the Mohocks.

Poſterity will not eaſily believe, that ſuch Boys Play as this ſhou'd be the Effect of State-Counſels. There was really no manner of Ground for this Report and Proclamation, but what was accidentally given by the Frolicks of the Scowrers abovementiond; much more frequent and rio- tous twenty Years before this. Yet the Privy-Council took this Matter into Conſideration, which, if there is any thing more in it than we know of, it was ſhrewdly ſuſpected that B.....n, and other Tools of Mr. Secretary St. John's, got a parcel of Raſcals to do the Miſ- chief, and, as our Author adds, threw the Odium of it upon the Whigs, whom, by all poſſible Means they endeavour'd to render obnoxious to the People. However, in order to juſtify the ſiniſter Proceedings of the Miniſters in this Affair, two common Pick-Pockets were try'd, convicted, and ſeverely puniſh'd for Form-ſake: Nay, they carry'd this other abominable Device of theirs ſo far, that the Lord Hinchinbroke, a gallant young Nobleman, and an Officer of the Army, who at the Deſire, and in Company of a Conſtable, went out one Night, in Queſt of the pretended Mohocks, were arraign'd and try'd as Diſturbers of the publick Peace; but the ſhameleſs Fable of the Mohocks was univer- ſally exploded, and the Miniſters made as much a Jeſt of as the Miſchiefs they were doing wou'd admit; our Author ſays, to the Shame and Confuſion of thoſe who firſt broach'd, and then en- deavour'd to countenance it.

The Miniſtry's Tricking in it.

They are a Jeſt.

The Reader perceives that every Step taken by theſe Men, is ſo much out of the Character of good Politicians and good Britons, that while we are writing their Hiſtory with the ſtricteſt Regard to Truth, we may be cenſur'd as writing an Invective. They fell upon that up- right and long experienc'd Treaſurer, the Earl of Godolphin, for 12,000 l. part of 20,000 l. which the Queen had lent the Treaſury of Scotland before the Union, for ſecret Service: And tho' the Lord Godolphin affirm'd, in anſwer to the Re- port of the Commiſſioners of Accompts, that her Majeſty's Servants in North-Britain, had prevail'd with her not to require that 12,000 l. yet, Lockhart of Carnwarth) we ſhall hear of him again when the Pretender is coming to Scot- land) and the other Commiſſioners declar'd it to be their judicious and honeſt Opinion, that my Lord Godolphin ought to pay back that 12,000 l. I muſt do Juſtice to them, and own their Words were, "The whole Money lent, to be ac- "counted for: But whether, continues the ſame "Writer, upon an Apprehenſion that the Earl "of Godolphin might eaſily clear himſelf of all "theſe trivial Accuſations, in caſe of a Proſecu- "tion, or upon ſome other Conſideration, "no other Notice was taken of it."

A falſe Charge brought by them a- gainſt the Earl of Godol- phin

A.D. 1712

The Dutch Memorial bearing very hard on the Houſe of Commons, and the ſpreading it going near, as we are told, to reſtore Sight to a a great many, whoſe Eyes had been faſcinated by falſe Colours and Miſrepreſentation of Things, the Majority reſolv'd to ſhew their Reſent- ment at the Printing of it: They call'd it a Libel, as I have already mention'd; and a Committee was appointed to find out the Author, &c. Whereas every one knew their High Mightineſ- ſes the States-General of the United Provin- ces were the Author. The Chairman of this Committee was Mr. John Hungerford, formerly expell'd the Houſe for taking a Bribe of the Or- phans of London; and they reported very gravely, that it appear'd to them, that Samuel Buckley was the Printer of the pretended Memorial; and he was thereupon order'd to be taken into Cu- ſtody of the Serjeant at Arms. This pretended Memorial, as thoſe wiſe Men call it, had been printed in Holland by the States Printer in Ordi- nary; nay, Monſ. Borſelle, their Envoy Extraor- dinary to the Queen of Great-Britain, deliver'd it to her Majeſty, by whoſe Order Mr. St. John the Secretary, wrote an Anſwer to it, in the pert frothy Stile of a Pamphleteer.

The Majo- rity for Piloring the Printer of the States-Ge- neral Me- morial.

Mr. St. John's An- ſwer to it.

Her Majeſty agreed, that according to the States Reſolution, abovemention'd, Great-Britain will never contribute enough, nor the United Provinces too little. Are Ironies and Witticiſms ſuch as theſe, becoming the Importance of the Subject, and the Dignity of the Perſon whom he makes to ſpeak? Again,

There is advanc'd a Maxim, That the Power of each of the Allies is the only Rule and Meaſure of the Efforts they are to make; and after this, the States ſet up for Judges, as well of the Power of her Majeſty's Kingdom, as of that of their own State. 'Tis not difficult to perceive how far this ſort of Logick wou'd carry us. 'Tis notorious that no good Stateſman can make any Judgment of the Proportion of Quotas, but by ſuch Cal- culations; and no Body queſtions but the Mini- ſters of the States-General knew much better than the Miniſters then in England, what this Kingdom cou'd do for the Support of the common Cauſe. But to ſhew what he had learnt by his new Endearments with France, he aſſumes the haughty and commanding Airs of our new Friend the French King, as the Faction began now to prepare us to call him, her Majeſty ſays, ſhe has given her Orders according to the Plan, in which there is not the leaſt Alteration to be expected. He adds an Untruth, known to be ſuch by every Man in Holland, that knew what was doing in England.

The French King to be call'd Friend.

The Queen looks upon an Union betwixt herſelf and the States, to be the ſtrongeſt Support of the common Cauſe; and for that Reaſon has done all that ſhe cou'd to traverſe the Deſigns of thoſe Factious Spirits, which tended to break that Union. The factious Spirits, which he makes the Queen ſay ſhe had travers'd, were the Oppoſition the Mini- ſters met with, in their hurrying on Meſnager's Peace; and the States were very well aſſur'd the Perſons in that Oppoſition were the only Friends they had in Great-Britain.

A Motion for a Bill againſt Printing.

The Printing of the Memorial anger'd the Majority of the Commons ſo much, that ano- ther Attempt was made to procure a Bill to reſtrain the Preſs, but it ſucceeded not; and all they

A.D. 1712

they did, was to lay a Stamp-Duty on News-Papers and Pamphlets. It was another Inſtance of the Ingratitude of theſe Men, in offering to lay the leaſt Reſtraint upon Printing; for, as our Author ſays, They were chiefly indebted to it for their preſent Strength, by the greateſt Abuſes of it that ever was known.

The French Refugees having preſented an humble Petition and Repreſentation to the Queen, praying her Majeſty's Interpoſition at the Treaty of Utrecht, in Favour of their Brethren, under Perſecution in France, and for the Reſtitution of their Eſtates in that Kingdom, of which they had been ſo unjuſtly depriv'd; the Earl of Dartmouth wrote a Letter to Meſſieurs Du Bourdieu and Graverole, two French Proteſtant Miniſters, Agents for the reſt; aſſuring them that the Biſhop of Briſtol and the Earl of Straſford were already under the ſtricteſt Orders to ſupport the Intereſt of the French Refugees at the Negotiations of Peace. Accordingly the Queen appointed Armand de Bourbon, Marquiſs de Miremont, Nephew to the Earl of Feverſham, to go to Utrecht, and, in her Majeſty's Name, to take particular Care of the Intereſts of the French Refugees. Notwithſtanding all this, and whatever the Biſhop and the Earl ſaid for the French Proteſtants, if really they ſaid any thing, one of thoſe Proteſtants aſſures us in Print, their Intereſts were either but faintly ſupported by Great-Britain, or the Court of France ſhew'd no Regard to her Majeſty's Interceſſion; both which are certainly true.

The Earl of Dartmouth ſays, the Earl of Strafford had ſtrict Orders to Support the French Proteſtants.

Commiſſioners againſt King William's Grants.

A Bill to reſume King William's Grants in England, entituled only, to enquire into the Value of them, had been tack'd to the Lottery Bill, but was now untack'd by the ſame Majority, on the Treaſurer's Promiſe to uſe his Intereſt in the Houſe of Lords, that it ſhou'd paſs ſingle. The Commiſſioners choſen for this impartial Enquiry deſerve to have their Names tranſmitted to Poſterity; John Hind-Cotton, Eſq; Honourable James Murray, Eſq; Lord-Viſcount Down, Charles Cholmondeley, Eſq; James Bulteel, Eſq; William Levins, Eſq; Sir Edmund Bacon. This Bill had like to have been flung out of the Houſe of Lords at the firſt Reading, it having been carry'd for a ſecond by two Votes only. After the third Reading, May 20, there aroſe a warm Debate, in which the Duke of Argyle, and the Earl of Ilay, his Brother, diſtinguiſh'd themſelves, and ſpoke emphatically in Praiſe of King William. His Grace ſaid, That if for the Eaſe of the Publick, it was found proper to reſume the Grants of the Crown, he wou'd readily give his Vote for it, provided, they would go ſo far back as the Reſtoration of King Charles II; but that he cou'd never agree to limit the Bill to the Grants of King William, becauſe ſuch an Act wou'd be injurious to the Memory of the Deliverer of Great-Britain and all Europe; which ought to be had in Reverence by all honeſt Men, and by all honeſt Men was had in Reverence. The Earl of Wharton, the Lord Cowper, and Lord Halifax, ſpoke with equal Force and Eloquence, againſt the partial Diſtinction between Grants ſince the Revolution and thoſe before it; adding, that ſuch a Diſtinction wou'd give too much Credit to a Miniſtry, who by the paſſing of the ſaid Bill, wou'd have the Means in their Hands to oppreſs and ruin thoſe who had not the good Luck to pleaſe them. The Earl of Oxford ſaid, it was only a Bill of Enquiry into the Value of the Grants; which he doubted not but the Parliament wou'd confirm; it being to be preſum'd, that thoſe who had theſe Grants had render'd ſignal Service to their Country. The Earl of Wharton, who knew the Man to the bottom, and was as much ſuperior to him in Wit and good Senſe, as in Nobility and Fortune, his Staff only excepted, reply'd, It is alſo to be preſum'd that thoſe who enjoy the Grants of King Charles II, and King James II, might have likewiſe done important Service to the Nation: Wherefore, it wou'd be proper to look into the Motives of all thoſe Grants, in order to confirm them to thoſe who had deſerv'd them. The Lord Treaſurer ſaid, I have been informed, that the Commons have no Deſign abſolutely to reſume the Grants of King William, but only to make the Poſſeſſors pay four or five Years Rent for Confirmation. The Earl of Wharton anſwered ſmartly, I will not at all call in queſtion what a Lord of ſuch known Sincerity and Probity has advanced; but the Reſumption of all the Grants of Ireland ſufficiently ſhews, that the Commons have not been content with a Part. The Queſtion, that the Bill do paſs, being put, the Votes were equal, 78 of a ſide; which is a Negative, according to the Uſage of Parliament; and was owing, in great meaſure, to the Vigilance of the late Duke of Portland; who being inform'd, that the Lord Colepepyr had ſent his Proxy to the Earl of Sunderland, who, by Reaſon of Indiſpoſition, could not produce it, immediately diſpatch'd an Expreſs to the Lord Colepepyr, who ſent his Proxy by him, to another Lord, and it came Time enough to make a Part of the Negative.

The Lord-Treaſurer's Speech againſt King William's Grants, cenſur'd by the Earl of Wharton.

Duke of Argyle vindicates the Memory of King William.

When the Speaker preſented the Money-Bill to the Queen, May 15, he made a Speech, which had nothing in it ſo remarkable, as where 'tis ſaid, Your faithful Commons are in hopes, that what they have ſo chearfully given for your Majeſty's Occaſions, will enable your Majeſty to put an end to the preſent War, by a ſafe and honourable Peace: An Expreſſion on the Confines, at leaſt, of Nonſenſe; to give Money to make a Peace is to buy it; but to carry on the War, to make a Peace, is the way to have it ſafe and honourable. There being no Account come of any Peace, ſafe or not ſafe, made abroad, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Benſon of Yorkſhire, mov'd, when the Commons returned to their Houſe, to adjourn to the 15th of June; that the Call of the Houſe be then made, and he doubted not, the Queen would, by that Time, lay before them the Reſult of the preſent Negotiations. Mr. Hampden complain'd, That notwithſtanding all the Promiſes given from Time to Time to the Commons, we had an unactive and lazy Campaign, and a trifling Negotiation of Peace; ſo that we were amuſed by our Miniſters at Home, and Trick'd by our Enemies Abroad. Mr. Secretary St. John was touch'd to the quick with ſo juſt a Reflection; and according to his manner of anſwering, made Authority ſupply the Place of Reaſon: Such Inſinuations, ſaid he, with Vehemence, highly reflect on her Majeſty and her Miniſters; but tho' ſome Members had been ſent to the Tower for leſs Offences, and that he who ſpoke laſt, might be fond of that Honour, yet he hoped the Houſe would be of another Opinion. Sir Richard Onſlow replied, To ſuppoſe her Majeſty, or her Miniſters, have any Influence on the Deliberations of this Houſe, is injurious to her Majeſty, and a Violation of the Privileges of this Houſe: In which he was ſeconded by Mr. Lechmere; but the Debate went no farther; and the Houſe adjourn'd, waiting for News of the Peace, which coming by Bits and Scraps, was juſtly term'd by the Lord Cowper, a Dripping Peace.

Mr. W. Bromley's Speech has an Infirmity.

An unactive, lazy Campaign, and a trifling Negotiation of Peace.

People

A.D. 1712 People, who were to be impoſed upon by the fair Speeches in and out of Parliament, concerning it, flatter'd themſelves with great Advantages to be procur'd for us in Trade; that to the South-Sea they were as good as ſure of, and it was not doubted, but that of the North-Sea, of Carthagena, Porto Bello, and the Coaſts of Mexico, as well as Chili and Peru, would be free for our Merchants to trade to; but the making the Biſhop of Briſtol the Plenipotentiary for Commerce, as well as Peace, ſpoil'd all; he not being verſed in theſe Matters, ſays the Annaliſt, was obliged to direct himſelf by the Lights he received from Arthur Moore, a Perſon of as mean Extraction as Matthew Prior, who was nam'd to be the Plenipotentiary for Commerce, jointly with the Biſhop and the Earl of Strafford; but the latter, according to the ſame Author, abſolutely refuſed to be join'd in Commiſſion with a Perſon of ſo low Birth, and threatned to lay down his Employment: So Trade was left to the Biſhop, who had no Pretence to make any ſuch Exceptions.

Arthur Moore the Biſhop of Briſtol's Inſtructor.

I have ſaid before, that there being nothing agreeable, or indeed of Importance, in the Negotiations at Utrecht, conſidering the Peace was determin'd by the Miniſters in England, before the Biſhop and Earl went thither, and that the Congreſs was only a Matter of Form, I would not enter into the Detail, but ſhall obſerve, that after the ſeventh Conference with the French Plenipotentiaries, the Plenipotentiaries of the Allies had an extraordinary Conference, wherein they communicated mutually their reſpective ſpecifick Demands; and Count Zinzendorf, the Imperial Miniſter, inſiſted, That the Reſtitution of the whole Spaniſh Monarchy ſhould be expreſsly mention'd. The Dutch declar'd, they were reſolv'd to make good all their Treaties made on occaſion of this War, as well thoſe that related to Spain and the Indies, as thoſe made with Portugal. But the Britiſh (Is this a delightful Story for a Briton to write or read?) were the only Miniſters that did not make any mention of Spain and the Indies, contenting themſelves with a general Declaration concerning the Juſt and Reaſonable Satisfaction for the Queen's Allies, in Conformity to her Alliances: Juſt and Reaſonable Satisfaction were Sounds only. If any Senſe was in them, it was, that whatever the Miniſtry thought fit to determine, ſhould be Juſt and Reaſonable; for if any thing better had been meant, it would have been mention'd. The Imperial Plenipotentiaries made ſuch preſſing Inſtances for the Explanation of thoſe Terms, that thoſe of Great-Britain could no longer put it off, without breaking with the Allies; for which, Matters were not yet ripe. The Portugal Miniſter earneſtly ſeconded the Imperial Miniſter's Demand for that Explanation; and the Dutch declar'd, That by the Clauſe inſerted in all their Demands, 'That all the Allies ſhall have 'Satisfaction on their Pretenſions.' they underſtand, the Reſtitution of Spain and the Indies to the Houſe of Auſtria: which Declaration oblig'd the Britiſh Miniſters to make the ſame; and it was inſerted in the Protocol, and, by common Conſent, depoſited in the Hands of Monſieur Buys, one of the States Plenipotentiaries. This was in the beginning of March; and the Miniſters of the Allies having then deliver'd their ſpecifick Demands to thoſe of France, the latter deſir'd three Weeks Time to give in their Anſwer, which muſt be conſider'd by the French King. In the mean while, they exclaim'd againſt the Unreaſonableneſs of the Demands of the Confederates; ſo did their Friends, the Miniſters in England. They excepted particularly againſt the Pretenſions of the Proteſtant Allies in favour of the French Refugees. The Abbot de Polignac was in expectation of a Cardinal's Cap; and to merit it, ſeem'd to be very much offended at the Preſumption of the Confederates, to intermeddle with his Maſter's Conduct with reſpect to the Hugonots his Subjects; which gave occaſion to one of the fineſt Repartees that ever was made, and that from a Dutchman, which we obſerve to animadvert on the Vanity of ſome Engliſhmen, who, tho' we never found but the Dutch were hard enough for us, when we had any thing to manage with them, think to ſhew their own Wit by making a Jeſt of their Neighbours. The Abbot, diſcourſing one Day with Monſieur Vanderduſſen on the Demands of the Proteſtant States, that the Proteſtants on board the Gallies, or detain'd in Priſon, ſhould be ſet at Liberty, ask'd him, Whether the States would ſet at Liberty the People detain'd in their Spin-houſe and Raſp-houſe. Monſieur Vanderduſſen reſenting this odious Compariſon, told him, If the French Court would own the People detain'd in thoſe Houſes as their Brethren, as the States own'd for ſuch the Proteſtants in the Gallies, for whom they interceded, he did not queſtion but their High Mightineſſes would ſet thoſe Malefactors at Liberty. The French Abbot, abaſh'd and confounded, turn'd the Diſcourſe off to other Matters.

A.D. 1712

The ſhameful Neglect of the Intereſts of the Allies by the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht.

The Dutch Miniſters for recovering Spain.

Monſieur Vanderduſſen's fine Repartee to the Abbot Polignac, about the Refugees.

It is not worth while, for the Reaſon before mentioned, to enter into the Particulars of the Diſpute between the Miniſters of the Allies and thoſe of France, about delivering the Anſwers of France to the ſpecifick Demands of the Confederates, in Writing, or by Word of Mouth. The French Miniſters inſiſted upon the latter; the Mareſchal d'Huxelles ſaid, They had no Reaſon to deliver any thing to the Plenipotentiaries of the Allies in Writing, ſince they had made a bad Uſe of the laſt, to inflame the People againſt them. To which, one of the Imperial Miniſters reply'd, That the French had no more to do, but to give in Juſt and Reaſonable Propoſals in Writing, and then it would inflame the People againſt the Allies, if they refus'd them. One of the States Miniſters told the Mareſchal d'Huxelles, The French Court would be deceived, if they expected a Peace by tampering with ſome of the Allies, in order to divide them from the reſt. The Mareſchal return'd this Gaſconade upon him, That not only the preſent King of France, but even the whole Royal Family, would enter into a Vow, to take a ſevere Revenge on the Dutch, if they obſtructed the Peace. To which, one of the Confederate Miniſters reply'd, That ſuch Diſcourſes as theſe would only put the Dutch upon their Guard, and induce them to do their utmoſt to break the Arms of thoſe who threatened to beat out their Brains, according to that Saying, Præſtat prevenire quam preveniri. It were to be wiſh'd, that this French Mareſchal had declar'd thus at Gertruydenberg, when the Duke of Marlborough was at the Head of the Confederate Armies, and he was begging Peace for his Maſter in a Nook of the Province of Holland. The Treatment he ought to have expected, would have been a Leſſon to all ſuch vain bluſtering Negotiators; but our Biſhop and Earl let him ſay what he would, with as much Unconern, as if they were not of the Number of the Confederate Miniſters. The Diſpute about Writing, or Dictating, was improv'd by the common Enemy's Plenipotentiares, to gain Time for the clandeſtine Negotiations between the Miniſters in England and France. The Truth is, ſays a Modern Author, "The

A fooliſh Gaſconade of the French Plenipotentiaries.

A.D. 1712

A treacherous clandeſtine Treaty between the Engliſh and French Miniſters.

" The French Plenipotentiaries knew that their " Buſineſs was not to be done at Utrecht, but by " a Negotiation carried on directly between London and Verſailles; the Particulars of which " they were let into by the Abbot Gualtier, " who, as well as Mr. Thomas Harley, arrived " at Utrecht about the Beginnning of April. A " few Days after, the French Plenipotentiaries " communicated to the Biſhop of Briſtol, and " the Earl of Strafford, under the higheſt Obligation of Secrecy, a Plan for a general Peace, " which the Biſhop of Briſtol accepted as a Mark " of the great Confidence France repoſed in them, " readily engag'd not to diſcover any thing of it " to the reſt of the Allies, and under the ſame " Caution, tranſmitted it to Mr. Secretary St. " John. But 'tis highly probable, this Plan was " concerted between France and England, ſent " by Mr. Harley to Utrecht, and by the Abbot " Gualtier to Paris, while the Allies were a- " muſed about Writing or Dictating." Here's a Plan formed by the Miniſters in England and France ſeparately from, and without the Knowledge of the Confederates; and yet a few days after, the Earl of Oxford affirm'd, there was no ſeparate Peace, and that the ſame would be FOOLISH, KNAVISH AND VILLAINOUS; and conſequently thoſe that treated thus ſeparately, were Fools, Knaves and Villains; againſt which I have no Buſineſs to ſay any thing.

A ſeparate Treaty,

call'd by the Treaſurer, Villainous.

On the 16th of April, Prince Eugene of Savoy, having finiſh'd his Conferences at the Hague with the States-Deputies about both the War and Peace, repaired to Utrecht, the ſame Day the Earl of Strafford went from Utrecht to the Hague, and earneſtly preſs'd the States-General to come into the Queen's Meaſures; a Phraſe very much in uſe about St. James's. The States were at the ſame Time well inform'd of more ſecret and treacherous Practices of the Engliſh Miniſters, who had us'd their Endeavours to hinder the States of Brabant, tho' the Emperor's Subjects, from ſupplying the Imperial Troops that were marching into the Netherlands with Bread and Forage. Therefore they ſent a Deputation to the Earl of Strafford, who, to uſe the Words of our Author, not having yet Orders to explain himſelf, and being under an Engagement of Secrecy with the French Plenipotentiaries, the common Enemy, made no ſcruple to declare, " That her Majeſty's Intentions " were, that her Troops ſhould act with the ſame " Vigour againſt France, as if there were no " Negotiation." He repeated this Declaration the ſame Evening in another long Conference with Prince Eugene of Savoy, Count Zinzendorf, the States-Deputies, and the Council of State; and a little above a Month afterwards, the Duke of Ormond declar'd, he had receiv'd poſitive Orders by a Courier from the Queen, not to agree to a Battle. The Duke of Ormond arriv'd at the Hague the 23d of April, and the next Morning expreſs'd to the Great Penſionary, the Queen's Reſolution of puſhing the War with all poſſible Vigour, until the Enemy ſhou'd agree to ſuch Terms of Peace as might be ſafe and honourable for her and her Allies. And a very few Days after, the Duke declar'd, his Orders forbad him to enter into any Action againſt the Enemy, either by Battle or Siege. Every Aſſizes and Seſſions in England afford Inſtances of Cheats and Fourbes, who for leſs Crimes than theſe, are whip'd and ſtigmatiz'd. There is no Inſtance of ſuch national Fourberie, and well may Monſ. de Cize, the French Hiſtorian, cry out, Il y a tant de mauvaiſe foi dans cette Conduite qu on ne concoit pas comment degens d' Honneur et de Qualitè peuvent mettre en uſage des ſi bas Artifices. There is ſo much Falſhood in this Conduct, that one cannot conceive how Men of Honour and Qual ty can be guilty of ſuch mean Practices; but we ſhall find the St. Johns and Harleys guilty of ſtill meaner, before a Month is at an end.

The Queen's Meaſures, a Phraſe.

More Treachery in the Miniſtry.

More Treachery.

The Duke of Ormond in Holland.

Tho' the Military Affairs of this Year are repeated ſhameful Incidents, in Proof of the treacherous and fooliſh Meaſures of the Britiſh Miniſters, yet ſomething muſt be ſaid of them, grating as it is to all good Britons.

The wretched Account of the Duke of Ormond's Campaign.

On the 26th of May, the two Confederate Armies, commanded by Prince Eugene of Savoy, and the Duke of Ormond, broke up from their Camp between Douay and Marchiennes, and paſt the Scheld, at Neufuille and Souches, between Bouchain and Denain. Prince Engene encamp'd with the Right at Noyelles, and the Left at Montrecourt, the Lines paſſing by Aveſnes le Sec and Haſpre, where the Prince took his Quarters. The Duke of Ormond, whoſe Army conſiſted only of the Britiſh Forces, and the Forces in Britiſh Pay, the Dutch not having entruſted him with the Command of their Troops, for very good Reaſons, had his Right at ſome diſtance from Prince Eugene's Left, and his Left extended as far as the Briaſe, on the River Selle, the Duke's Quarters being at Solemnes. The Body of Troops commanded by General Fagel, at Lieu St. Amand, for the Security of Bouchain, join'd the Armies upon their coming to the Camp, and took their Poſt in the Lines, but 13 Battalions and 30 Squadrons were left encamp'd between Souches and Denain, to cover the Bridge and ſecure the Communication with Marchiennes. For the ſame Purpoſe, 40 or 50 out of each Battalion of both Armies, were employ'd to throw up a ſtrong Line to take in all the Champian Country between Denain and Marchiennes; whither was brought a great Convoy of Proviſions, Artillery, and Ammunition, conſiſting of 147 Boats, which came from Ghent to Tournay; and was afterwards conducted to the Army by the Palatines, commanded by Count Vehlen. By all theſe happy Diſpoſitions made by Prince Eugene, in Concert too with the Duke of Ormond, the Allies ſeem'd reſolv'd either to attack the Enemy, who were encamp'd with the Right at Caſtelet, and their Left near Cambray, having the Scheld before them; or if that was found impracticable, to undertake a Siege. And Prince Eugene of Savoy, whoſe Heart was engag'd in this Cauſe, propos'd to the Duke of Ormond the ſending out a Detachment to view the Situation of the Enemy. The Duke cou'd not well deny his Conſent to ſo reaſonable a Propoſal; ſo 4000 Horſe of the two Armies, were detach'd on the 17th of May, under the Command of the Imperial General Fels, who advanc'd to the Side of Caſtelet; and being return'd without meeting any of the Enemy, acquainted the Prince of Savoy he had diſcover'd that the open Country, between the Spring-Head of the Schelde and the Somme, was large enough for twenty Squadrons to march a-breaſt. His Highneſs finding by this Report the Opportunity was as fair as cou'd be deſir'd to attack the French with Advantage, made all the neceſſary Diſpoſitions in order to fight them; and on Saturday the 28th in the Morning, communicated his Deſign to the Duke of Ormond, which put the Duke upon a Diſcovery of the diſhonourable Part he was ſent to act. He ſaid, with ſome Confuſion, he cou'd not give his Opinion immediately, but wou'd do it in the Afternoon.

The Dutch will not truſt him.

A fair Opportunity to deſtroy the French Army.

A. D. 1712

Afternoon. In the mean time he detach'd all the Grenadiers of his Army, under the Command of General Withers, with Design, as was given out, to drive the Enemy from the Woods of Bochain, below Câſtelet; but on their Approach, the French Army was under the deepeſt Conſternation, and were preparing to fly beyond the Somme; for which Purpoſe, with much Precipitation, they ſent a Body of their beſt Horſe to ſecure their Retreat: And thus had Prince Eugene's Advice been comply'd with, the Confederate Army might have either fought the Enemy, or have beſieged Cambray with a great deal of Eaſe: Yet the Britiſh Detachment return'd, as was the Duke of Ormond's Intention, without doing any thing, being, as they pretended, uncapable to come at the Enemy, by reaſon of ſome Defiles and uneven Grounds, on which they were advantageouſly poſted; but they were poſted upon the open Champian Country, between the Head of the Schelde and the Somme. Wither's Report furniſhed the Duke of Ormond with plauſible Objections againſt Prince Eugene's Propoſals; but the ſame being fully anſwer'd, and the Duke preſs'd by his Highneſs and the Field-Deputies of the States, he declar'd roundly, he had received the Queen's poſitive Orders not to agree to a Battle. The Prince of Savoy had lately ſuſpected ſome ſuch double Dealing on the Part of the Miniſtry in England; and not ſurpriz'd at this, he anſwer'd cooly, It is no great matter, nor will ſuch Orders hinder the Succeſſes of this Campaign, ſince we may undertake the Sieges both of Queſnoy and Landrecy, and after the Conqueſt of theſe two Places penetrate as far as Paris this Campaign. But the Duke of Ormond declar'd again, his Orders forbad him to enter into any Action againſt the Enemy, either by Battle or Siege. All that Prince Eugene cou'd ſay to him upon the favourable Opportunity that was now put into their Hands of gaining Victory over the Enemy, and forcing them by that Means to agree to a good Peace with all the Confederates, was in vain, tho' his Highneſs added, "That the Confederate "Army, having paſſed the Schelde and the Selle, "and advanc'd into the middle of the Enemies "Garriſons, they cou'd not now retire without "the hazard of receiving a Blow; and that it "wou'd be better ſince it was ſo, that the Duke "had diſcover'd his Orders before they approach'd "ſo near the Enemy's Army."

The Duke of Ormond endeavours to hinder it, and declares he muſt not fight.

Prince Eugene ſays the Armies might penetrate to Paris.

The Duke of Ormond declares he muſt not beſiege.

This laſt Declaration of the Duke's was kept ſecret, both to prevent ſuch Diſorders as might have happened thro' the Animoſity of the Troops, and to take ſuch Meaſures and Precautions as ſhould be neceſſary at that Juncture. The States-Deputies diſpatch'd an Expreſs to their High Mightineſſes, with an Account of what had paſt. Their Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht complain'd of this flagrant Breach of Faith and Honour to the Biſhop of Briſtol; the Biſhop reply'd, "I know "nothing of the Matter, and will repreſent it to "the Queen:" But he knew ſo much of all thoſe bad Matters, as made every good Chriſtian admire how he cou'd reconcile the being concern'd in them to his Character. He then went on, "I muſt let "you know at the ſame time, that two Days be-"fore, I receiv'd an Expreſs, with a Letter from "her Majeſty; in which ſhe complains, that "notwithſtanding all the Advances ſhe had made "from time to time to the States, in order to "engage them to enter with her upon a Plan of "Peace, their High Mightineſſes had not an-"ſwered her as they ought, and as her Majeſty "hop'd they wou'd. That therefore they ought "not to be ſurpris'd if her Majeſty did now "think her ſelf at Liberty to enter into ſeparate "Meaſures, in order to obtain a Peace for her "own Conveniency:" How cou'd a Preacher of the Goſpel hear Lay-Men make him this Anſwer without Tremor? "Such a Step will be "contrary to all the Alliances and Treaties be-"tween their High Mightineſſes and the Queen. "They think they have merited otherwiſe, by "the Deference which on all Occaſions they "have ſhewn to her Majeſty; and they knew "nothing of the Advances which the Biſhop "ſays her Majeſty has made toward the States, "on the Subject of a Plan of Peace." The Biſhop was no more ſhock'd than before, tho' no manner of Advances had been made towards the States, but the directing an Acceptance of a French Plan, and proceeded, I muſt not forget to tell you my Inſtructions do farther bear, that conſidering the Conduct of the States towards her Majeſty, ſhe thinks her ſelf diſengaged from all Alliances and Engagements with their High Mightineſſes. This Declaration, made by ſo Right Reverend a Perſon, rais'd at once Aſtoniſhment and Indignation. It was communicated the next Day, June 3, N. S. to the Miniſters of the Allies at the Hague; upon which ſeveral Conferences were held, and private Meaſures concerted between the Miniſters of their High Mightineſſes, his Electoral Highneſs of Hanover, the brave, wiſe, and virtuous Landgrave of Heſſe-Caſſel, and ſome other Princes of the Empire, for ſubſiſting and paying the Foreign Troops in the Pay of Great-Britain.

A.D. 1712

The Biſhop of Briſtol threatens the States with a ſeparate Peace.

The Biſhop of Briſtol ſays the Queen is diſengag'd from the Alliances with the Dutch.

General Cadogan, who with much ado kept his Poſt in the Army, ſent an exact Draught of the Situation of the Confederate and French Armies, which Mr. Maynwaring got to be curiouſly engraved and made Publick. The Account of the Diſpoſition of the two Armies, printed at the bottom of the Draught, was drawn up by him, and it explains the Advantage the Confederates had of the French, in ſuch a manner as gave every one Reaſon to believe the Army of the Allies wou'd have had a compleat Victory, if the Engliſh General had not let that Opportunity ſlip.

General Cadogan ſends home an Account of the Situation of the Confederate and French Armies.

The States-General wrote a long expoſtulating Letter, on the Biſhop's Declaration, to the Queen, and the Baron Hohendorf, Adjutant-General to Prince Eugene, who was going to England to forward the Payment of the Subſidy for Spain, had Inſtructions from his Highneſs and Count Zinzendorf, the Imperial Ambaſſador in Holland, to confer with the Miniſtry about the preſent melancholy Juncture of Affairs; but neither the States Letter, nor his Conference, had any other Effect than a colluſive Order to the Duke of Ormond to concur in a Siege: Tho' that Duke boggled at nothing which the Miniſters requir'd of him, yet he cou'd not but be a little affected at the poor Figure he made in the Confederate Armies, where the Duke of Marlborough always made ſo glorious a one; which drew from him this tame Expoſtulation, in the Cloſe of one of his Letters to Secretary St. John: By this and my former, you may gueſs how uneaſy a Situation I am in; and if there be no Proſpect of Action, I do not ſee of what Uſe I am here: If it ſuits with her Majeſty's Service, I ſhall be glad I might have leave to return to England; but in this, and all other Matters, I ſhall readily ſubmit to her Majeſty's Pleaſure.

The Duke of Ormond makes a poor Figure in the Confederate Armies.

News of the Duke's and Biſhop's Declarations coming to England, it ſtruck every Man who had the leaſt Concern for the Honour and Welfare of his Country with Horror; and ſome fondly fed themſelves with Hopes that the Treaſurer wou'd never

A.D. 1712 never be able to escape Censure and Punishment, for procuring such shameful and destructive Orders to be sent to the Duke of Ormond. But, alas! the major Vote was so much at his Devotion, since the new and wonderful Creation, that he had Encouragement to attempt any thing. The Lord Hallifax open'd the Debate about these Orders, in the House of Peers, May 28th. "He shew'd "the ill Consequence of the Duke's Declaration, "and the Necessity of carrying on the War with "Vigour, and concluded with a Motion for an "Address to have those Orders laid before them."

The Lord-Treasurer vindicates the Duke of Ormond's Conduct.

The Ministers being desir'd to explain whether there were any such Orders or not, the Treasurer said, "The Ministers cou'd not discover the Queen's Orders to her General, neither her Majesty's particular Directions: "That, however, he wou'd adventure to say, "That if the Duke of Ormond had refus'd to "act offensively, he did not doubt but he had "followed Instructions, and it was Prudence "not to hazard a Battle upon the Point of concluding a good Peace; especially, considering "they had to do with an Enemy so apt to break "his Word."

Lord Wharton answers him.

I am extream glad, says the Earl of Wharton, to find that noble Lord so candid as to acknowledge the Insincerity of France; but, in my Opinion, that is a strong Reason for keeping no Measures with such an Enemy, but rather for pushing him with the utmost Vigour, 'till he is reduced to the Necessity of acting honestly. The Lord-Treasurer reply'd, "That tho' the Duke of Ormond "might have refus'd to hazard a General Battle, "yet he cou'd be positive that he wou'd de"cline joining with the Allies in a Siege, Orders "having been sent to him for that Purpose." As no Body thought the Treasurer understood any thing of Military Affairs, so what the Duke of Marlborough said in Answer, was the less surprizing; I do not know how to reconcile the Orders, nor to hazard a Battle, and to join in a Siege, to the Rules of War, since it is impossible to make a Siege without either hazarding a Battle, in case the Enemy attempt to relieve the Place, or shamefully raising the Siege. His Grace the Duke of Argyle spoke of the Imprudence of trusting Prince Eugene of Savoy with the Management of the War; because a Battle won or lost might break off a Negotiation of Peace. His Grace added, "That two Years "before, the Confederates might have taken "Arras or Cambray, instead of amusing them"selves with the insignificant Conquests of Aire, "Bethune, St. Venant." The Earl of Nottingham declar'd, He cou'd not comprehend why Orders had been given our General not to fight, unless certain Persons were apprehensive of weakning the French, so far as to disable them to assist them in bringing about Designs which they durst not yet own, which is the plain Truth of the Matter. They wou'd not have had better Terms if France wou'd have given them, for fear, if she was too much weakened, they might not have had Assistance from thence to impose the Pretender upon us. The Duke of Devonshire cou'd not help expressing his Concern, that the Duke of Ormond shou'd be put upon such dirty Work; his Grace said, That by Proximity of Blood he was more concern'd for the Duke of Ormond's Reputation than any other; and therefore he cou'd not forbear declaring he was surpris'd to see any one dare to make a Nobleman of the first Rank, and so distinguish'd a Character, the Instrument of such a Proceeding. Earl P—— answer'd, "That no Body cou'd doubt of the Duke of "Ormond's Courage and Bravery; but that he "was not like a certain General, who led Troops "to the Slaughter, to cause a great Number of "Officers to be knock'd in the Head, in a "Battle or against Stone-Walls, in order to fill "his Pocket by disposing of their Commissions." A.D. 1713

A very rude Expression against the Duke of Marlborough.

This being the most shocking of all the rude Expressions that had been utter'd against that victorious General, within Doors or without, it is not to be express'd how general the Indignation was against it, as far as it became known, and most People were well pleas'd with his Grace for resenting it as he did. The Lord Cowper made a long Speech, wherein he complain'd of their being kept so long in the Dark about the Progress of a Negotiation of Peace: And some other Lords in the same Sentiments, having press'd the Earl of Strafford, lately arriv'd from Holland, to give the House an Account of it, his Lordship excus'd himself, but the Treasurer assur'd them, that in a few Days her Majesty, according to her Promise, wou'd lay before her Parliament the Conditions on which a Peace might be made, which he doubted not wou'd give intire Satisfaction to every Member of that House, and to all true English-men, when at the same time he knew that all true Englishmen wou'd abhor those Conditions; for the agreeing to which, Mr. St. John was so honest, as to own they both ought to have been hang'd, as will be seen hereafter. The Earl of Strafford made a Motion for the Papers relating to the Hague and Gertruydenburg Treaties, to be laid before the House, which was carry'd in the Affirmative; tho' 'tis difficult to reconcile this Earl's Impatience for a sight of those Papers, containing an Account of a wise and faithful Negotiation, for the Advantage of the common Cause, with the Conduct of the present Negotiators at Utrecht, which was neither wise nor faithful, nor for the Advantage of the common Cause: But their way was every Day to cast Mists before the Peoples Eyes, to blind them; and being in their Hands, they were then easily misled.

The Duke of Marlborough calls Earl P—— to Account.

As soon as the House was up, the Lord Mohun went to Earl P—— and told him the Duke of Marlborough desir'd to have an Eclaircisment with his Lordship about some Expressions he had us'd in that Day's Debate; and therefore desired him to go and take the Air in the Country. "The Earl, says the Annalist, who readily un"derstood the Meaning of such an Eclaircisment, "ask'd my Lord Mohun, whether he brought "him a Challenge? To which he answer'd, "My Message wants no Explanation, and I "will accompany the Duke of Marlborough. "Earl P—— being return'd Home with some "Emotion, and having given his Lady a Hint of "what had past, the Earl of Dartmouth, Se"cretary of State, was soon acquainted with "it, and went immediately to the Duke of "Marlborough, and desir'd him not to stir a"broad: At the same time, he caus'd two Cen"tinels to be plac'd at Earl P——'s House; "and having inform'd the Queen of the whole "Affair, her Majesty sent him back to the Duke "of Marlborough, to desire him to go no far"ther. His Grace gave his Word of Honour "that he wou'd comply with her Majesty's "Commands." But Mr. St. John's infamous Libeller, the Examiner, was directed to treat his Grace with his usual Insolence for encouraging Party Duels, tho' the one was as much above Sixty as the other was above Forty Years old; and such Duels were what the Whigs were in no manner of Apprehension of. The Duke of Ormond, who at the Expence of a great Fortune,

*A.D.*1712 was once very popular, loſt for a while much of his Popularity, by his odious and ſhameful Conduct in Flanders, which, it was ſaid, no Command nor Orders cou'd excuſe; but that a Man truly Brave and Noble, wou'd have flung ſuch Orders in the Face of him that ſhou'd have dar'd to bring them to him.

Cenſures on the Duke of Ormond.

"Moſt People, continues our Author, were "free with the Duke of Ormond; and to this "Purpoſe, we may take Notice, that an Ale-"houſe Keeper in Weſtminſter, having either "for a Jeſt-ſake, or out of mere Simplicity, ſet "up for a Sign, that Duke's Head, with this In-"ſcription, The General of Peace; the Govern-"ment order'd the ſame to be taken down:" A fine Inſpection for Miniſters of State!

The Miniſters order an Alehouſe Sign to be taken down.

Mr. Pulteney's Motion againſt the Duke of Ormond's Conduct.

Mr. Pulteney mov'd in the Houſe of Commons, March 28th, "That an Addreſs be preſented to "her Majeſty, to acquaint her that her faithful "Commons were juſtly alarm'd at the Intelli-"gences receiv'd from Abroad; that her Gene-"ral in Flanders had declin'd to act offenſively "againſt France, &c. and that they beſought "her Majeſty, that ſpeedy Inſtructions might be "given him to proſecute the War with the ut-"moſt Vigour, as the beſt Means to obtain a "ſafe and honourable Peace." Mr. Secretary St. John having given that Houſe the ſame Aſſurances as the Lord-Treaſurer had done, ſaid, in Anſwer to what had been ſuggeſted by a Member, That the preſent Negotiations had been carry'd on in a clandeſtine and treacherous Manner. "He hop'd it wou'd not be accounted Trea-"chery to act for the Glory and Advantage of "Great-Britain:" Why did he deſerve to be hang'd then, according to his own Confeſſion? "That he gloried in the ſmall Share he had in "the Negotiation; and whatever Cenſure he "might undergo for it, the bare Satisfaction "of acting in that View, the Gallows, accord-ding to his own Saying, "wou'd be a ſufficient "Recompence and Comfort all his Life-time."

Inſtead of Mr. Pulteney's Addreſs, this Majority, the Pinks of Patriotiſm, voted an intire Confidence in the Queen's Promiſe, to let them know the Terms of Peace before they were concluded. The next Day, March 31, upon a Motion of Mr. Murray, a Scots Member, an Addreſs was voted, that the Rents of the Biſhops Lands in Scotland might be given to ſuch of the Epiſcopal Clergy there as ſhou'd take the Oaths to her Majeſty.

Falſe and ridiculous Politicks to keep France and Spain divided.

The extream Folly, as well as Treachery, of what is to come, muſt render theſe Men as contemptible as they will be hateful to Poſterity. The preventing the Union of the two Kingdoms of France and Spain for the Preſervation of the Balance of Power, was the View the Confederates had in proſecuting the War, for recovering Spain out of the Hands of the Houſe of Bourbon. This War had coſt hundreds of Millions of Treaſure, and little leſs than Millions of Lives. The Engliſh Miniſters are now about putting a diſhonourable and diſadvantageous End to it, but have the Effronterie to aſſert, they will preſerve that Balance of Power, and effectually hinder the dreaded Union of thoſe two Kingdoms. And how will they do this? Why, by taking the Duke of Anjou's French Word, "That if you will let him be King of Spain, he will never be King of France, though that Crown ſhou'd fall to him. This they called, A Renunciation, which the Court and Kingdom of France, in the Caſe of Lewis the XIV and his Queen, the Infanta Maria Thereſa of Spain, had 50 Years before frequently and ſolemnly declar'd to be null and void of itſelf. Neither France nor Spain had the Face to offer ſuch a Security for preventing the Union of the two Crowns; but the Engliſh Miniſtry begg'd it of them, as the only Colour they had to conclude a Treaty ſo diametrically oppoſite to the Terms and Ends of the Grand Alliance. This ridiculous Expedient for preventing the Union of France and Spain, was ſent over to France by Meſſieurs Harley and St. John; the Meſſenger was the Pretender's pretended Mother's Agent, Abbot Gualtier, who carry'd a Memorial about it from them to the Marquiſs de Torcy, who was ſo plain with Secretary St. John, as to declare, That the Renunciation deſir'd, would be null and void by the Fundamental Laws of France, according to which, the neareſt Prince to the Crown is of Neceſſity the Heir thereto; and they wou'd deceive themſelves, who received the King of Spain's Renunciation as a ſufficient Expedient to prevent the Miſchief they propos'd to avoid. But the Queen's Miniſters ſtill inſiſting on this inſufficient Expedient, the Marquiſs de Torcy undertook to prevail with the King his Maſter, to ſee what the Duke of Anjou might be brought to; upon Condition, however, that there ſhou'd be a Ceſſation of Arms between Great-Britain and France. So dexterouſly did he turn Mr. St. John's Forwardneſs, adds our Author, to the promoting the fatal Breach of the Confederacy. It was theſe Counſels that occaſion'd the Orders before-mention'd to the Duke of Ormond, not to engage in a Battle or Siege; and to the Biſhop of Briſtol, to declare the Queen was now under no farther Obligations to the States; and to the Earl of Strafford, to repair to London forthwith, to have his Part given him by thoſe that were in the Depths of the Secret, into which they did not let one of the Allies, and yet had the Front to deny themſelves, and to make others deny that there was any ſeparate Treaty. Matters being huddled up between England and France, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, Friday the 16th of June, and having paſſed three publick and ſix private Acts, made a Speech to both Houſes, containing the Terms of Peace.

*A.D.*1712

Torcy declares Mr. St. John's Project for it vain and uſeleſs,

yet he inſiſts upon it,

and breaks the Confederacy for it.

The Miniſters treat ſeparately, and poſitively deny it.

It ſignify'd nothing, that every good Briton conceiv'd ſo great Indignation at the Report of thoſe Terms, that the Complaint and Clamour againſt them were as univerſal as was the Love of our Country and the Proteſtant Succeſſion. Stocks tumbled immediately 4 or 5 per Cent. and the Reſentment and Apprehenſions that were occaſion'd by it, were not to be expreſs'd. The Annaliſt ſays, That ſome, even of the High-Church Party, were greatly ſurpriz'd; notwithſtanding all which, the Blow being ſtruck, it muſt be followed, and no Time given for Recollection; ſo the Majority immediately reſolv'd, to preſent an Addreſs of Thanks, and humbly to deſire her Majeſty to proceed with the preſent Negotiation for the obtaining a ſpeedy Peace. Mr. Freeman of Hertfordſhire was the Chairman of the Committee for this Addreſs: And the Queen's Anſwer was ſo worded, that it wou'd have ſerved if the Treaty had been open, general, honourable and ſafe. I have the Safety and Intereſt of all my People ſo much at Heart, that I cannot but take a great deal of Pleaſure in this your dutiful and PRUDENT Addreſs; and I thank you kindly for it: I have ſtudy'd your Welfare, and by this you will find the good Effects of that Confidence which you place in me, and which ought always to remain between ſo affectionate a Prince, and ſuch faithful Subjects. The Houſe thank'd her Majeſty in an Addreſs for her Speech.

Generally abhorred without Doors.

The Majority addreſs for it.

Things

A.D. 1712 Things went not quite ſo ſmoothly in the Houſe of Lords. As ſoon as the Queen left it, a Motion being made for Thanks, the Earl of Wharton ſaid, They had all the Reaſon in the World to do it, eſpecially for that Part of her Majeſty's Speech, wherein ſhe was pleas'd to declare, That the Securing the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover to theſe Kingdoms, was what ſhe had neareſt at Heart. But that her Majeſty's Speech containing many other Particulars of the greateſt Conſequence and Importance, he was of Opinion the Houſe would do well to take her Majeſty's Speech into Conſideration the next Day; which was readily agreed to. The Lords being met accordingly on Saturday the 7th of June, the Earl of Wharton propos'd, that the Letter from the States-General to her Majeſty, arriv'd that Morning from Holland, might be read. But this was oppos'd, it being ſuggeſted, that the Houſe ought not to take notice of a Writing which carried no Authority with it. Then their Lordſhips took her Majeſty's Speech into Conſideration, which occaſion'd a warm Debate. Among the reſt, the Duke of Marlborough repreſented, that the Meaſures entered into, and purſued in England for this Year paſt, were contrary to her Majeſty's Engagements with the Allies, did ſully the Triumphs and Glories of her Reign, and would render the Engliſh Name odious to all other Nations. Whereupon the Earl of Strafford ſaid, that ſome of the Allies, meaning the Dutch, would not ſhew ſuch Backwardneſs to a Peace as they had hitherto done; but for a Member of that illuſtrious Aſſembly, meaning the Duke of Marlborough, who maintain'd a ſecret Correſpondence with them, and endeavour'd to perſuade them to carry on the War, feeding them with Hopes that they ſhould be ſupported by a ſtrong Party here. Great is the Inequality between the Speakers in theſe Debates; but the major Vote ſupplies all Defects. The Lord Cowper anſwer'd this Earl, who having not expreſt himſelf in all the Purity of the Engliſh Tongue, Lord Cowper took Occaſion from thence to ſay, That that noble Lord had been ſo long Abroad, that he had almoſt forgot, not only the Language, but the Conſtitution of his own Country; that according to our Laws, it could never be ſuggeſted as a Crime on the meaneſt Subject, much leſs in any Member of that Auguſt Aſſembly, to hold Correſpondence with our Allies, ſuch Allies eſpecially whoſe Intereſt her Majeſty had declar'd to be inſeparable from her own, in her Speech at the Opening of this Seſſion: Whereas it would be a hard Matter to juſtify and reconcile, either with our Laws or the Laws of Honour and Juſtice, the Conduct of ſome Perſons in treating clandeſtinely with the common Enemy, without the Participation of the Allies. The Lords took afterwards into Conſideration the Advantages offer'd by France to Great-Britain, particularly in ſettling the Trade to Spain and to the Weſt-Indies, as in the Time of the late King of Spain, Charles II. On which Occaſion the Earl of Godolphin ſaid, he did not pretend to any great Knowledge in Trade, but that during the Time he had the Honour to be in the Adminiſtration, he had obſerv'd, and he might eaſily make it out by the Books of the Cuſtom-houſe, that the ſingle Trade to Portugal brought to England in Times of War double the Wealth of the Trade to Spain in Times of Peace; ſo that whatever might be ſuggeſted to caſt a Miſt before the Eyes of the People, it was to be preſum'd, that the Trade to Spain would be leſs for the future, becauſe the French had made themſelves abſolute Maſters of it. The Debate ended in a Motion for an Addreſs of Thanks, which was much to the ſame Purpoſe as that of the Commons. A Motion was made for adding theſe Words to it, and in Order to that, that her Majeſty would take ſuch Meaſures in Concert with her Allies, as might induce them to join with her Majeſty in a mutual Guaranty. The Earl of Nottingham and the Lord Cowper ſpoke with Force and Eloquence for the adding the Words; Earl Mortimer and Oxford, and Earl P—— ſpoke againſt it; but it was reſolv'd in the Negative by a Majority of 81 Voices againſt 36. The Reaſons of this great Majority were, Firſt, becauſe the Proxies, of which the Affirmatives had more than the Negatives, were not call'd for. Secondly, Becauſe ſeveral Lords, as the Duke of G——, the Earl of D——t, the Earl of M——r, and the Lord A——m, did not at that Time think fit to vote againſt the Court. Five and Twenty Lords entered a Proteſt againſt the Rejecting of the Guaranty Clauſe, with their Reaſons for ſo doing, which were printed and publiſhed.

Earl of Strafford's Speech againſt the Duke of Marlborough.

Animadverted upon by Lord Cowper.

He charges the Managers with a clandeſtine Treaty.

A.D. 1712

A Clauſe propoſed for a Guaranty among the Allies.

Carried in the Negative.

The Majority of the Houſe of Lords were ſo offended at this Proteſt, that on the 13th of June the Queſtion being put, Whether it ſhould be expung'd out of the Books of the Houſe, it was carried in the Affirmative. This Proteſt and the ſolid Reaſons contain'd in it were doubtleſs drawn up with the Earl of Godolphin's Approbation at leaſt; for the Copy was convey'd to the Preſs by ſome who had it from him. The Lords appointed a Committee to enquire who were the Printers and Publiſhers, both of this Proteſt and of that concerning the Orders produced by the Duke of Ormond; but neither by their Lordſhip's Enquiry, nor by an Order of the Queen in Council, for the Diſcovery of the Perſon that directed the Printing of the ſaid Proteſts, nor the 100 Pound Reward promiſed in that Order, had any Effect, the Perſon who did direct it was very ſafe, tho' more than my ſelf were in this Secret.

The Proteſt ordered to be expung'd

The Proceeding againſt Dr. Fleetwood, Biſhop of St. Aſaph, one of the moſt pious, reverend and learned Prelates that ever our Church was bleſt with, was enough of it ſelf to have markt the Character of this Miniſtry, who ſet it a foot with Infamy, had not every other Meaſure they engag'd in, laid the like Mark upon it. His Lordſhip having re-printed Four Sermons he had formerly preach'd, prefix'd a new Preface to them, which treated of the Iniquity of the Times, particularly with Relation to thoſe Miniſters. After having enumerated the glorious Succeſſes of her Majeſty's Arms and Counſels, while ſhe was ſteady in the Obſervance of her Treaties with her Allies, and in proſecuting the War for obtaining the End of them, that holy Biſhop added, We were, as all the World imagined, then juſt enter'd on the Ways that promiſed to lead to ſuch a Peace, as would have anſwer'd all the Prayers of our religious Queen, the Care and Vigilance of a moſt able Miniſtry, the Payments of a willing obedient People, as well as all the glorious Toils and Hazards of the Soldiery; when God, for our Sins, permitted the Spirit of Diſcord to go forth; and by troubling ſore the Camp, the City and the Country, and, oh! that it had altogether ſpared the Places ſacred to his Worſhip, to ſpoil for a Time the beautiful and pleaſing Proſpect, and give us, in its Stead, I know not what— Our Enemies will tell the reſt with Pleaſure. Theſe Words of eternal Truth

Bp. Fleetwood's Preface.

A.D. 1712

pronounced in ſo awful and moving a Manner, did the Majority of this Houſe of Commons vote to be malicious and factious, and condemn'd his Lordſhip's Preface to be burnt by the Hands of the common Hangman. The good Biſhop imitating the Apoſtolical Reſignation, as his Perſecutors imitated the Pagan Barbariſm and Inſolence, ſaid only when he was told of it, I eſteem myſelf happy to ſuffer with the Duke of Marlborough, the Earl of Godolphin, and ſo many other illuſtrious Patriots, whoſe Reputation their Enemies endeavour to blaſt. "On "the other Hand, ſays our Hiſtorian, this Treat- "ment of a Prelate of ſuch ſignal Merit, ſo "unblameable a Life, and ſo univerſally eſteem'd, "particularly by the Queen herſelf, who, before, "was us'd to call him her Biſhop, was highly re- "ſented by many true Sons of the Church." The Truth is, the Actions of this Set of Miniſters, and their Adherents, are riſen ſo from one Degree of Deformity to another, that they are become monſtrous; and it is almoſt mortal, either to write or read them; for which Reaſon, I pity both myſelf and my Readers for what is ſtill to come of them: They got an Addreſs to the Queen, not to anſwer the States-General's moſt excellent Letter in Vindication of their Conduct, becauſe it was Printed, for Fiends and Spectres, according to vulgar Notions, dread not the Light ſo much as they did: "It was obſerved, adds the Author "laſt quoted, that a Cenſure was paſt on the "Letter, to gratify Secretary St. John." Notwithſtanding Mr. Lechmere and other worthy Members, made ſeveral Speeches to juſtify the Conduct of the States, which in the Articles alledg'd by theſe Men in their Libels and Invectives, was rather laudable than blameable.

Order'd to be burnt by the common Hangman.

His pious Saying upon it.

They reject the Guaranty of the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

Mr. Hampden having made a Motion for the Allies to be Guarantees of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, the Queſtion was put with ſome Difficulty; and St. John and the Enemies to the Royal Houſe of Hanover were then ſo prevalent, and withal ſo impudent, that it was carried in the Negative, NOES 133. YEAS 30. If any of this traiterous Faction have eſcaped the Puniſhment due to their Crimes, and are ſtill living, will they after this ever dare to pretend an Attachment to the Intereſt of the Royal Family; whom they in this Vote, as far as the Nature of it extended, renounced and rejected? Inſtead of this Guaranty it was reſolved to addreſs the Queen, that they had an entire Confidence in her Majeſty's Concern for the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line.

The Queen highly commends the Peace as advantageous to England.

The Queen cloſ'd the Seſſion with a Speech to both Houſes, June 26th; in which are ſome Extraordinaries that wou'd have been more aſtoniſhing, had not People known who it was that put the Words into her Mouth, which ſhe lately deliver'd with as much ſeeming Pleaſure as if the Subſtance of them had been Sincerity and Glory.

Your ſatisfactory Addreſſes will give me Strength to ſtruggle with any Difficulties as may yet be raiſed: And I hope, that neither they who envy the making a good Peace, nor who think it their Intereſt to continue the War, will be able to defeat our joint Endeavours for the Honour and Advantage of Britain, and the Security of all our Allies.

The French highly commend it, &c.

There was not a Mortal in all Europe, out of the Pale of the Miniſtry, who ſaid this was a good Peace, and who, inſtead of envying, did not abhor the making of it: Cou'd it be a good Peace for France and for England too? A great deal depends upon this: They have made her Majeſty tell the Britiſh Nation, that the Peace ſhe was now making, was ſo good as to raiſe Envy againſt her for the making it. Now read what the Biſhop of Rennes, at the Head of the States of Bretagne in France ſaid of this ſame Peace to the French King, in a Speech pronounced by him January 29th, N. S. half a Year after the Queen's Death: Having deſcribed the extream Diſtreſs that Kingdom was reduc'd to about the end of the War, he tells him, His Majeſty, by the Superiority of his Genius, had found Means to extricate it, by creating Diviſion among his Enemies, when France was upon the very Brink of Ruin, which had enabled him to ſave Spain, and keep it in the Hands of his Grandſon, and alſo to GIVE Peace to Europe, on Terms perfectly glorious to himſelf, and advantageous to his People.

A.D. 1712

Advantageous to France.

The Parliament being adjourn'd, and not prorogued, occaſioned a Surmiſe that it was intended as a farther Mortification to Mr. Walpole, who rather choſe to continue a Priſoner in the Tower, than to make his Submiſſion for an Offence, of which he was not guilty. The narrow Education and Spirit of the Prime Miniſter, and the Malice of his then Boſom Friend, the Secretary St. John, were ſufficient Grounds for ſuch a Surmiſe. The Parliament being afterwards prorogued, Mr. Walpole was of courſe ſet at Liberty, and took that Opportunity to publiſh his Caſe; in which he clear'd himſelf of all the falſe and malicious Imputations in the Cenſure that had been paſt upon him, to the Satisfaction of all the impartial World, and to the Shame and Confuſion, if it had been poſſible, of the Miniſters who had made ſuch vile Uſe of their Power and Prevalence, to mortify and injure him. In a Poſtcript to the Caſe, Mr. Walpole took notice of what paſt after his Expulſion, upon his being re-choſen Member of the Commons, and ſhew'd, "That as no Law or Uſage made Expulſion an "Incapacity, nothing but a Declaration of Par- "liament cou'd do it; which having been not "made previous to Mr. Walpole's ſecond Election, "there cou'd be no Incapacity at the Time of the "Election, and therefore ſuch a Declaration, "ſubſequent to the Election, was, in other "Words, a ſecond Expulſion." This Aſſertion was corroborated by the Inſtances of Mr. Wooliaſton, who was alſo expell'd, re-elected and ſate in the ſame Parliament unmoleſted; and of Sir Robert Sawyer, who was alſo expell'd and re-elected, immediately after the Sentence of Expulſion was paſs'd, in the Vacancy occaſion'd by his own Expulſion; this plain Reaſoning had no Effect on the Minds of the Majority who had expell'd him. But Mr. Walpole's Lodgings in the Tower were every Day ſo crowded by the Attendance of Perſons of the higheſt Rank and Diſtinction, for Quality and Merit, as the Duke of Marlborough, the Earl of Godolphin, the Dutcheſs of Marlborough, &c. that the Miniſters were much more mortify'd with the juſt Reſpects that were paid him, than Mr. Walpole was with the Injuſtice they did him.

The Miniſtry's Hatred to Mr. R. Walpole

He deſpiſes it, and proves their Charge falſe.

and their Proceedings arbitrary and illegal.

The Addreſs of the City and Lieutenancy of London, againſt which, Sir Gilbert Heathcote and Sir Charles Peers objected, That making Peace and War, being the Prerogative of the Crown, they ought not to meddle with it, procur'd Knighthood for William Stewart, one of the preſent Sheriffs, and John Caſs the other, of chief Note, for being a Friend and Confident of Sir John Friend, who was hang'd for the French-Invaſion Plot; Samuel Clark was alſo Knighted on this Occaſion. Counties, Cities and Boroughs, followed the Example of the Londoners, in Addreſſes about the Queen's Peace; which were introduced with great Pomp, and long Anſwers made Addreſſes in praiſe of the Queen's Speech. Men Knighted.

*A.D.*1712 made to them, as if they had really been the Senſe of the Nation; whereas it is moſt certain, that nothing wou'd have been more eaſy than for the Miniſters who ſet theſe Addreſſes to work, to have got Addreſſes for the Peace, and againſt the the Peace, from the ſame Places, and at the ſame Time, as any one may ſee by looking into the Hiſtory of Addreſſes, publiſh'd by my ſelf about this Time, to make a Jeſt of the Contradictions, Inconſiſtency, Extravagance, and Impertinence in them. The like of which is no where to be met with.

Duke of Ormond order'd to concur in a Siege Queſnoy beſieged.

Orders having been ſent to the Duke of Ormond to concur in a Siege, Prince Eugene of Savoy order'd Queſnoy to be inveſted; and the Trenches were open'd before it the 20th of June. The Duke of Ormond aſſiſted to cover the Siege a Day or two, and then declared he cou'd do it no longer, being oblig'd by his Inſtructions to march with the Queen's Troops, and thoſe in her Majeſty's Pay, to take Poſſeſſion of Dunkirk, which the French had engag'd to deliver. Accordingly ten Battalions, commanded by the Earl of Orkney, were detach'd for that Service; but the Generals of the Allies declining to obey the Duke's Orders for marching, it was defer'd ſome Days. Theſe Generals ſaid they had Orders from their Maſters to obey his Grace's Command while he ſtaid with the Confederates, but had no Orders to march away with him. The ſame Day, June 25th, the Duke, at a Conference with Prince Eugene and the States Field-Deputies, acquainted them he had receiv'd Orders from the Queen his Miſtreſs, to publiſh within three Days a Suſpenſion of Arms for two Months, between his Army and the French, which he propoſed alſo to them. The Prince and the States Deputies demanding Time to conſider of it, the Duke told them, that did not depend upon him; and if they yet perſiſted in carrying on the Siege, he wou'd cover it no longer, intending to march off with his Troops in three Days. He caus'd alſo the Generals of the Auxiliary Forces to be inform'd, that if they expected Bread, or Pay, or Arrears, they muſt obey his Commands. What a glorious Commiſſion has he charg'd himſelf with! And what muſt thoſe Generals, who were all gallant Men, and Men of Honour, think of him, when he was putting it in Execution? They demanded Time of him to conſult their Principals, with whoſe Miniſters the States-General having conferr'd, they diſpatch'd Meſſ. Van Weldren and Hop to the Army, to concert proper Methods with Prince Eugene of Savoy, to engage thoſe Generals to continue with him, and to provide for their Subſiſtence. The Auxiliaries ſuſpending their Obedience to the Duke of Ormond's Orders, he was oblig'd to defer the March of the Detatchment for Dunkirk. None of the Generals expreſs'd ſuch an Abhorrence of Separation from the Confederate Army, as the Prince of Anhalt-Deſſau, who commanded the Pruſſians, and ſaid they were all Poltrons, who reported the King of Pruſſia would ſeparate from the Allies. A ſufficient Explanation of the Character of thoſe who did ſeparate from them.

The Duke of Ormond withdrew his Troops.

And publiſh'd a Suſpenſion of Arms.

The Generals of the Allies will not deſert with him.

Prince of Anhalt calls thoſe that ſeparate Poltrons.

In the mean Time the Biſhop of Briſtol was as little abaſh'd at Utrecht, as the Duke of Ormond was at the Army, when he propos'd a Suſpenſion of Arms to the Plenipotentiaries June 27th. None of thoſe Miniſters thought fit to return him an Anſwer. Their Surprize and Reſentment ſtruck them Dumb; ſo the Biſhop left them to themſelves; and when he was gone, ſome of them ſpoke warmly againſt his Propoſal, which he urg'd again at a Conference in the Afternoon; but they were unanimous to wait for Orders from their Maſters. On the 29th of June the Duke of Ormond ſent his Adjutant with a written Order to the Generals of the Auxiliaries, commanding them to hold themſelves and their Troops in a Readineſs to march. But thoſe brave Men unanimouſly anſwer'd, They could not follow him, nor ſeparate from Prince Eugene, without expreſs Orders from their Principals. The only Generals of the Auxiliaries who obey'd the Duke of Ormond's Orders, were Major General Berner, who commanded four Squadrons and one Battalion of the Troops of Holſtein-Gottorp; and Major General Waleſ, Colonel of a Regiment of Dragoons of the Troops of Liege, who had the Queen's Commiſſion. The Hereditary Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel bid the Adjutant tell the Duke, the Heſſians deſir'd nothing more than to march, provided it were to fight the French. It was obſervable, that the Mareſchal de Villars, at that critical Juncture, caus'd ſeveral Bridges to be laid over the Sanſet; and the Surmiſe was pretty general, that he intended to have fallen upon the Confederate Army, if the Duke of Ormond cou'd have prevail'd with the Troops in Britiſh Pay to have ſeparated from them when he did. 'Tis certain the Duke of Ormond's Behaviour had ſo ſunk his Credit with all but the French, that Prince Eugene believ'd him capable of ſeizing the Towns which the Duke of Marlborough had recover'd and taken from the Enemy in the Pais Conquis, as Flanders was call'd in the Maps of France. The Prince of Savoy ſent for General Hompeſch, Governor of Doway, and deſir'd him to take Care that the Engliſh Troops, deſign'd for Dunkirk, might not go through that City; and the like Caution was given to other Dutch Governors; for which there was very good Reaſon, as we ſhall ſee preſently. Such was the Duke of Ormond's Campaign, ſuch Glory was he acquiring for his Country and himſelf; the Engliſh Name, that but laſt Year was ſo highly honour'd, and ſo well belov'd all over Europe, where the common Enemy was not Maſter, is in leſs than a Twelve Month grown into contempt and hatred. One cannot expreſs how ill the Duke of Ormond, and the Biſhop of Briſtol's Conduct was taken in all the United Provinces, where extraordinary Aſſemblies were held on this Occaſion. The City of Amſterdam, as ſhe contributes moſt towards the publick Expences, ſo has ſhe the greateſt Sway and Influence in all Conſultations; and ſhe now ſent an extraordinary unprecedented Deputation to the Hague, conſiſting of three Burgo-Maſters, and as many principal Magiſtrates. Before their Departure, the Regent Burgo-Maſters held an Aſſembly, in which Monſieur Corver, their Senior, a Perſon no leſs venerable by his Age, being 84 Years old, than by his Integrity and Wiſdom, made this memorable Speech. I am an old Man, upwards of Foreſcore, and have ſeen far more difficult Times, even the French at the very Gates; but by the Bleſſing of God, on our Firmneſs and Reſolution, we have hitherto preſerv'd our Liberty. I have no private Intereſt in Trade, and no other concern than for the good of my Country and the Common Cauſe; yet I would give half of what I have in the World, nay all, and you know I have ſomething to loſe, rather than ſuffer the Loſs of our Liberties. But if at laſt we are overpower'd, then let us lay our Cities under Water, betake ourſelves to our Ships, and ſail to the East-Indies. And let thoſe who ſee our Country laid waſte ſay, there liv'd a People, who choſe to loſe their Country rather

Duke of Ormond loſes all Character, and the Character of his Country.

Mr. Corver of Amſterdam's generous Speech.

*A.D.*1712 rather than their Liberty. These Words had not only an Effect upon the Assembly at Amsterdam, but on that of the States-General also, to whom they were reported. However the States, out of Deference to the Queen of Great-Britain, wou'd not presently come to a Resolution about the Suspension of Arms, till they had better inform'd themselves of the Sentiments of the Confederates.

While these Things past in Flanders and Holland, Major General Groveslein, Governor of Bouchain, who had been detach'd by Prince Eugene, with about 1500 Horse, Dragoons and Hussars, made a successful Incursion into France; and having ravag'd, plunder'd, and burnt several open Towns and Villages in Campagne, and the Country of Metz, and struck Terror and Consternation as far as Paris, made his Retreat by Traerbach, and from thence, through the Bishoprich of Liege, to Maestrecht; where he deposited a great Number of Hostages he brought away with him for Contributions. The Duke of Ormond, not content with his Obedience to the Orders which were sent to him to desert the Allies, acquainted Prince Eugene, that his Troops should continue in the Army, if he would give over the Siege of Quesnoy. But his Highness return'd this Heroick Answer, That instead of putting a Stop to the Siege, he would cause it to be prosecuted with all imaginable Force; and he would let the Duke be Witness of another Expedition, after the taking of that Town. From this Time, all Correspondence ceas'd between the Duke of Ormond and Prince of Savoy, who perceiving that frequent Expresses went between the Duke and the French Army, which might prove detrimental to the Confederate Cause, his Highness express'd himself as desirous of his marching off, as the Duke was to march; the British Troops being now, said the Prince, only a Burden to the Netherlands, since they had declar'd they would not fight against France. On the First of July the Confederates storm'd and carry'd the Counterscarp of Quesnoy in four Places; and two Days after, Monsr. Labadie, the Governor, surrender'd himself and Garrison Prisoners of War.

An Irruption into France.

Prince Eugene's gallant Answer to a Proposal of the Duke of Ormond's.

Quesnoy taken.

The Delivery of Dunkirk to the British Forces was put off for some Time, on pretence, that the Suspension of Arms, which was to be the Condition of it, shou'd include not only the British Troops, but the Troops in British Pay. However, the French Court finding the Auxiliaries fix'd in their Resolution, not to separate from Prince Eugene; and fearing, if he should disgust the Ministry in England, by balking their Expectations of having Possession of Dunkirk, the Duke of Ormond might still be order'd to act with the Confederates, Orders were sent to the Count de Aumont, Governor of Dunkirk, to deliver that Place to those whom the Queen of Great-Britain should send to take Possession of it; which was done accordingly; and Brigadier Hill with his own, Col. Disney's, and Col. Kane's Regiments, and about 1000 Marines, being admitted into the Town the 7th of July, the French Garrison march'd out, and the English took their Posts: But the French Ships and Gallies were permitted to remain in the Harbour, with two or three Battalions of Marines in the Town, on Pretence of Guarding the Stores. The Privateers were also indulged the Liberty of coming in and out, provided they brought no English Prizes, which they might take and carry any where else. The Earl of Strafford having receiv'd his last Instructions, Rarities no doubt! return'd to Holland, where Rejoicings were then making for the Surrender of Quesnoy; and the Earl asking for what the Cannon and small Shot were so furiously discharg'd, was answer'd, for the taking that Place: To which he reply'd, You make a great Noise for a Bicoque, a paltry Town. Prince Eugene, being, as he said, determined to prosecute the War with Vigour, and let the Duke of Ormond be a Witness of some other Conquests, broke up from the Camp at Haspre the 16th of July; and the next Day order'd the Prince of Anhalt-Dessau to invest Landrecy. The Duke of Ormond abandoning him and his Army to the Enemy's Insults, now superior to the Confederates in Numbers, march'd away to Avesne le Secq; giving out, and making loud Complaints, that he was himself abandon'd by the Prince of Savoy. Such an Imposition on the Eyes, Ears and Understandings of both Friends and Foes, that a Man of great Heart and great Genius cou'd not have given way to it for any Consideration.

Brigadier Hill, Mrs. Masham's Brother, has Dunkirk deliver'd to him.

*A.D.*1712

Earl of Strafford speaks scornfully of the taking Quesnoy.

More ill Conduct of the Duke of Ormond.

The French Author, whom I have often quoted, was an Officer in the Duke of Ormond's Army at the time of the Separation; and I chuse to copy him rather than one of our own Writers, because he was on the Spot, and being a Foreigner, had nothing but Truth to bias him.

" Si les Troupes Auxilaires en eussent eu autant
" a quel Carnage, &c. If the Auxiliary Troops
" had marched off with them, to what Butchery
" had the Confederates been expos'd, after so
" great a Defection? They had nothing to do
" but surrender themselves at Discretion to
" the Mareschal de Villars, whom they had so
" often beaten, or resolve to have their Throats
" cut. This is what the French General made
" sure of; and no Thanks to the Ministry in
" England, that he did not accomplish his Designs,
" and been reveng'd of those who had so often
" reveng'd the Quarrel of their Masters. The " English being thus separated from their old
" Companions, with whom they had gather'd
" many Laurels, and might with much ease have
" gather'd more, by the taking of Landrecy, and
" marching into France, the Lord Strafford
" perswaded the Duke of Ormond to lay the " Blame of the Separation on Prince Eugene of
" Savoy; as if the latter had left the English,
" and not the English left him. The Duke
" caus'd it to be told his Highness, that he was
" oblig'd to publish the Cessation of Arms, to
" prevent his being at the Mercy of the French,
" and to save the English Army. There is so
" much Treachery in this Conduct, that one
" cannot conceive how Men of Honour and
" Quality can be guilty of such mean Artifices.
" The Allies soon felt the dismal Effects of this " Separation in the unhappy Affair of Denain;
" but they were as much disquieted by the Mo-
" tion of the English Army, as they were dejected
" at the Success of the French. The Duke of
" Ormond, at the Persuasion of Monsr. de Torcy,
" and by Advice of the Lord St——, seiz'd
" Ghent and Bruges, two Places that cut off the " Communication between France, Holland and
" Flanders: This Enterprize was thought of, to " find out a Pretence to quarrel with the Dutch,
" &c."

Torcy and St—— persuade him to besiege Ghent and Bruges.

The Massacre at Denain, where the Mareschal de Villars, with the greatest Part of the French Army, surrounded the Earl of Albemarle, and cut off several Battalions of the Troops of the Allies, before Prince Eugene cou'd come to their Relief, was entirely owing to the Duke of Ormond's Deserting with the British Forces about a Week before; and that Success so spirited the French

The Massacre at Denain occasion'd by him.

A.D. 1712 French General and his Army, that taking Advantage of the Diviſion among the Allies, they recover'd Queſnoy and Bochaine, and even Douay before the end of the Campaign. And the French Hiſtorian aſſures us, that the ſeizing of Ghent and Bruges was in purſuance of Monſ. de Torcy's Advice, tho' the Orders for it came from England: The Treaſurer wrote the Duke of Ormond a Letter upon it, full of ſuch awkard Flattery, as if that Expedition, in Breach of all Faith and Honour, had been as glorious as the March to Blenheim, or the Conqueſt of Liſle.

The Queen of Great-Britain, as well as Lewis XIV. expected that the great Turn of Affairs in the Field, wou'd quicken the Negotiations of Peace; but notwithſtanding the Butchery at Denain, and the abandoning ſo many Towns to the Superiority of the Mareſchal de Villar's Numbers, the Confederates rather provok'd by the Treachery of the Britiſh Miniſtry and General, than frighten'd by the boaſted Succeſſes of the Enemy, continu'd firm in their Reſolution, not to agree to the Suſpenſion of Arms, 'till France made other Offers for Peace than had hitherto been communicated to them from England.

The Biſhop of Briſtol and Earl of St——, inſiſt on the Ambaſſadors of the Duke of Anjou's Admiſſion.

The States of Holland and Weſt-Frieſland agreed to take moſt of the Britiſh Auxiliaries into their Pay, and order'd their Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, to inſiſt on the reſtoring of Stratſburgh, and the Demolition of all the fortify'd Places the French had built on the Rhine; and while the Miniſters of the Allies were buſied in concerting the Meaſures for a vigorous Proſecution of the War, 'till France was reduc'd to the Neceſſity of agreeing to a juſt, ſafe and honourable Peace, the Earl of Strafford, and his Colleague, the Biſhop of Briſtol, inſiſted on the Admiſſion of King Philip's Plenipotentiaries to the Congreſs at Utrecht. Thus inſtead of recovering Spain and the Weſt-Indies, according to all the Treaties Great-Britain had enter'd into for carrying on the War againſt France, according to all the Addreſſes of the Parliament, and to all the Queen's Anſwers and Aſſurances, are the Biſhop and the Earl, her Majeſty's Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht, the only Miniſters that inſiſt upon acknowledging the Duke of Anjou as King of Spain. It is eaſy to imagine the Concern and Conſternation the Dutch were in to ſee themſelves betray'd and abandon'd by the Miniſtry in England, and they cou'd not help expreſſing their Reſentment of ſuch notorious Breaches of Faith, Honour and Friendſhip, as were a ſhame to Men, and much more to Chriſtians. The Earl of Strafford telling them, when he came back, that he had a new Barrier-Treaty to offer them, one of the Miniſters reply'd, What Reaſon is there for a new one? which cannot be more to our Satisfaction, or more ſolemnly executed than the old one; unleſs Treaties hereafter among you are to be Triennial, like your Houſe of Commons, which indeed I think may be proper; for they, it ſeems, uſe them as they think fit.

A juſt, but ſevere Reflection, by a Dutch Miniſter to the Earl of St——.

Sir Thomas Hanmer goes to Flanders.

Sir Thomas Hanmer Speaker of the next Parliament going to Flanders, and cauſing the Depth of the Harbour of Oſtend to be ſounded: As alſo viewing the Fortifications, with a Regard which exceeded that of Curioſity; it gave occaſion to much Speculation in thoſe that had a better Opinion of the Capacities of the Managers in great Opinions, than ſuch had as had moſt Knowledge of them. 'Tis plain, by what happen'd ſoon after, that the Earl of Strafford, who went alſo to Flanders, had Inſtructions to go to the Army, and be aſſiſting to the Duke of Ormond in the Deſign upon two of the Emperor's Towns, Ghent and Bruges; where Sir Thomas Hanmer ſpent ſome Days, and, doubtleſs, prepar'd Matters with the French Faction in thoſe Places, for the Reception of the Britiſh Troops, in purſuance of the Directions the Managers had received from the Court of France, whoſe Orders, as their Intimations may be well call'd, were punctually obey'd by Meſſrs. Harley, St. John, &c. Tout ceque M. de Torcy, demandoit, ſays the French Hiſtorian, All that Monſ. de Torcy demanded or inſinuated, was executed more punctually than if his Orders had been directed to Officers in the Pay of France. Nay, after the Slaughter at Denain, in which the Miniſters took ſingular Pleaſure, Monſ. de Torcy, well aſſur'd how agreeable the News of it wou'd be to them, writes to Mr. St. John, The King of France is perſuaded that the Advantage which his Troops have obtain'd, will give the Queen ſo much the more Pleaſure, as it may be a Motive to oblige her Confederates to accept of the Terms France offer'd them. The Secret Committee, who inquir'd into theſe Affairs, ſay, They cou'd not with Patience read a Letter from a Miniſter of France, declaring to the Secretary of State of England, "That a Victory obtain'd by the Queen's Ene-"mies over her good Allies, muſt be a Pleaſure "or Satisfaction to her Majeſty." And how the Miniſters in France, and thoſe in England, ſympathiz'd in Joy upon the Surprize, and Maſſacree of the Dutch, and other Troops at Denain, may be farther ſeen in that wretched Piece of Fuſtian which the Treaſurer wrote to the General, who having abandon'd thoſe Troops to that Butchery, had in Proſecution of the treacherous Counſels taken in England, by Directions from France, ſeiz'd Bruges and Ghent. Earl Mortimer having told him it was a Coup de Maitre, adds, I take a double Pleaſure in it, becauſe it is done by the Duke of Ormond; to whoſe Perſon I have ſo entire a Friendſhip, and in whoſe Succeſs I take ſo particular an Intereſt. Monſ. de Torcy wrote a very juſt Compliment on the Affair of Denain; That the Allies might now ſee what they had loſt by her Majeſty's with-drawing her Forces, and what value they ought to put upon a Nation which every where carry'd Victory along with it. But the ſeizing of Ghent and Bruges was not a more uncommon Act of Baſeneſs and Treachery than the Duke of Ormond's deſcending ſo low, as to take on him the Office of an Intelligencer, in favour of the French, and for the farther Deſtruction of the Confederates.

A.D. 1712 The Engliſh Miniſters directed by thoſe of France.

Wonderfully pleaſed with the Slaughter of the Dutch Forces at Denain.

The Lord Treaſurer's Flattery on the Duke of Ormond's having Ghent and Bruges betray'd to him.

The Duke of Ormond betrays the Confederates Counſels to the French.

The Dutch encourag'd by their Enterprize upon Fort Knocque, had form'd a Deſign for ſurprizing Newport or Furnes, which the Duke getting Information of, he wrote an Account of it immediately to Secretary St. John, made Viſcount Bolingbroke, in the following Terms; "I take this Opportunity to acquaint your Lord-"ſhip with an Affair which has been communi-"ted to me, by a Perſon very well inclin'd to her "Majeſty's Service; your Lordſhip will beſt "judge of the Importance of it, and the Uſe "that is to be made of it, when I tell you that "the Succeſs of the Enterprize upon Knocque, "has encourag'd the forming a Project for ſur-"prizing of Newport or Furnes; and that the "fortifying of Dyxmude, is made uſe of as a "Pretence for drawing together a Body of "Troops ſufficient to put the Deſign in Execu-"tion: If it be thought more for her Majeſty's "Service to prevent it, I am humbly of the "Opinion ſome Means ſhou'd be found out to "give Advice of it to Mr. de Villars, who may poſ-"ſibly think we owe him that good Office

A.D. 1712.

" in requital of ſome Informations he has gi-
" ven me.

The Biſhop and Earl at Utrecht,

One of the moſt ſcandalous Incidents in all the Negotiations of the Utrecht Peace, is the Biſhop and Earl's Offer of the Queen's Speech to the Miniſters of the Allies, as a Plan to found the Treaty upon; but the Miniſters of France declar'd openly they had no Orders to agree to that Plan, and thereby diſown'd our Miniſters in that ſolemn Declaration, which they dictated for their Royal Miſtreſs. The Dutch Plenipotentiaries agreed to accept of the Queen's Speech pro Materia Tractandi, if the French Miniſters would allow it to be their Maſter's Plan; but the latter would not hear of it. What a ſtaring Falſity is this in a Letter from one of the Britiſh Plenipo's, upon the Duke of Ormond's Deſertion. All the Engliſh ſeem to rejoice to march off; and then he adds, except two or three ſour Faces, who ſigh and wiſh the Hanoverians had not ſeparated from us; but I ſhall tell them, perhaps, it may be the better; he may ſee by this time the wrong Advice he has follow'd. What a Head that was to reflect thus on the Conduct of the wiſeſt Prince in Europe? " But this, ſay the Secret Committee,
" was not the only Inſtance of his, the Lord
" St——'s Scorn and Contempt expreſs'd on
" the like Occaſions; for July 16, 1712, giving
" an Account of a Converſation with Mr. Bu-
" leau, the Elector of Hanover's General,
" wherein his Lordſhip declar'd, That the Queen
" had yet made neither Peace nor Truce; which " Declaration was made near a Month after the " Articles for a Suſpenſion of Arms was ſign'd:
" And his Lordſhip repreſenting the great Dan-
" gers the Queen's Troops were expos'd to, be" ing left alone in their Camp when Prince
" Eugene march'd, and Monſ. Buleau replying, in
" caſe of any Attack they had been ſure of their
" Aſſiſtance and Protection, his Lordſhip ſays,
" My Anſwer was in a diſdainful way; it wou'd
" be a very odd thing when an Elector of the Em-
" pire ſhould be a ſufficient Protection for Great
" Britain." We muſt remember, that the eloquent Lord Cowper animadverted on this Plenipo, in the Houſe of Peers, for his underſtanding as little of our Language as our Conſtitution; and the Quotations out of his Letters in the Report of the Secret Committee, are a Proof of Lord Cowper's Remark. In another Letter, December 14, to Mr. St. John, he ſays, Count Zinzendorf own'd it was impoſſible to carry on the War alone, eſpecially ſince the Elector of Hanover, who was the greateſt Hero for the War, has threaten'd the States to recal his Troops, if they do not pay him the Queen's Share. In ſhort, Count Zinzendorf himſelf could not but laugh at the ridiculous way of Proceedings of that Court. The Annaliſt tells us, the Elector of Hanover offer'd in the firſt Place to maintain, during the War, at his own Expence, the half of the Troops he had in the Service of Great-Britain, beſides the Regiment of Dragoons of Bothmar, and to agree for the Maintenance of the reſt upon eaſy Terms.

Diſown'd by the French Miniſters.

The Earl of Strafford's Reflections on the Elector of Hanover.

Mr. Secretary St. John goes to France.

I ſhall take no farther Notice of the new Viſcount Bolingbroke's Journey to France, than what is ſaid of it in the Report, except a Circumſtance or two; which, tho' more Perſonal than Political, is not more important. The Lord Treaſurer ſaid in his Letter to the Queen, mentioned in the ſaid Report, That there was no manner of Occaſion for the Secretary's going to France; and it ſeems indeed that his main Buſineſs was to receive the Preſents and the Compliments, which he thought his Treaſon to his own Country deſerv'd from the Enemy. Being at General Erle's, in Dorſetſhire, not long after, and a Gentleman in Company expreſſing his juſt Suſpicions, that our Managers were to be well paid for the Peace, that gallant Officer ſaid, I have been juſt reading the Life of the De Wits, and find the French King paid many Millions of Livres Penſion to his Faction in Holland: But, adds the General, if our Miniſters have not 100 Millions Sterling for their Peace, their Bargain will be as fooliſh as it is wicked. It is ſuppoſed, that St. John's hurrying away to the French Court, had relation not only to the Continuance of the Suſpenſion of Arms, and the Propoſition of a Separate Peace, but alſo to ſerve lucrative Ends of his own. It appears by Lord Bolingbroke's Inſtructions, according to the Report, that he was empower'd to conclude a Separate Peace with England, France and Spain. Let us not forget what Earl Mortimer and Oxford ſaid of the making ſuch a Peace, that it was Fooliſh, Knaviſh and Villainous; and there bears at this time ſome Doubt relating to the particular Intereſts of Great-Britain: He was to endeavour to get them explain'd, and to do his beſt to diſcover the Ultimatum of France: For they had broke with all the Allies; they had divided and ruin'd the Confederate Army; they had got to be deliver'd, even from the Throne, that France made ſuch Offers for Peace, when at the ſame time France denied ſhe had made thoſe Offers, and had not let them know what Orders ſhe wou'd make. But whether the French Miniſters would let our Secretary into the Ultimatum or not, he was to conclude the Treaty; and the Miniſtry thought they had ſufficiently diſcharged their Duty in declining to be ingag'd to impoſe what Terms France ſhould think proper upon the Allies. Thoſe Allies, in the Words of the Report, to whom the Queen was bound by the Faith of Treaties, and all the moſt ſolemn Engagements, and Publick Declarations, to procure all juſt and reaſonable Satisfaction, according to their ſeveral Alliances: but now it ſeems ſufficient that we did not debar them from the liberty of endeavouring to obtain ſtill better for themſelves. With theſe Inſtructions Lord Bolingbroke goes to France, and without entring into farther Particulars, the Convention for a general Suſpenſion of Arms between Great-Britain and France for four Months was ſign'd at Paris by Lord Bolingbroke and M. Torcy, Auguſt 27, N. S. 1712. France was now become entire Miſtreſs of all future Negotiations, and did not fail to make uſe of the Power that was put into her Hands. An early Inſtance of which was ſeen in the Affair of Tournay, which the French immediately demanded to be deliver'd up to them, though, as the Viſcount Bolingbroke confeſſes, the Queen intended it, in her Speech, to be Part of the Dutch Barrier. However, when it was debated in the Cabinet Council, where the Surrender of it was warmly oppos'd by ſome Lords, the Viſcount valuing nothing what was intended by the Speech, propos'd Expedients whereby it might be reſtor'd to France, and gave Monſ. de Torcy Advice by what Management Tournay might be ſecured to the French King, contrary to the avow'd Senſe of what the Queen had declar'd in Parliament: And in this the Treaſurer was as deeply engag'd as the Secretary; an Article which we ſhall find hereafter render'd both guilty of High-Treaſon, and it is ſure enough that their not ſuffering the Pains and Penalties, will be the beſt Reaſon that Poſterity will have for not giving

A.D. 1712.

General Erle's Saying of the French bribing the Miniſtry.

Lord Bolingbroke concludes a Separate Peace.

He ſigns a General Suſpenſion of Arms.

The Lord Treaſurer ſays there was no Occaſion for it.

A.D.1712 Credit to the Tranſactions of theſe Times. There's no need of giving the Particulars of the Viſcount Bolingbroke's Reception in France, the Honours that were paid him being the Purchaſe of that Treaſon. After having receiv'd ſome of them at Calais and Paris, he was carried by Monſ. de Torcy to Verſailles, where the King was, and an Apartment magnificently fitted up for him. On the 21ſt of Auguſt he was introduc'd to the King, to whom he preſented the Queen's Letter; and that Monarch aſſur'd him, That he ever had the higheſt Eſteem for the Queen, [even when he ſent the Pretender to Scotland to dethrone her, if the Pretender and he could have done it;] that ſhe had proceeded in ſuch a manner, as to turn that Eſteem into the ſincereſt Friendſhip; and he hop'd ſhe was ſatisfy'd he had done every thing on his Part which might facilitate the Peace; that he was pleas'd to find it ſo near a Concluſion; that there were ſome who us'd all Endeavours to obſtruct it, but that, God be prais'd, they would not be long able to do ſo.

The French King's Talk with Lord Boling-broke.

General Stanhope will not wait on the French King.

General Stanhope, who had been exchang'd for the Duke of Eſcalona, taking Fontainbleau in his way through France to England, the Viſcount offer'd to introduce him to the King; but that General declin'd it, having other Sentiments of the Honours receiv'd from the Common Enemy, than the Secretary had. He ſaw him, as he went a Hunting in his Chaiſe, with a gay Retinue of Ladies. Whether it was accidental, or concerted, when the Viſcount went to the Opera, he found the French King's Box, in which he was to have ſate, taken up by the Pretender, and the Secretary ſeated himſelf in one that was near it. He had agreed, that King James's Dowager ſhould have Threeſcore Thouſand Pounds a Year paid her by the Court of England, by way of Dowry; and doubtleſs both ſhe and her pretended Son had reaſon to rejoice, as they did, in what was done and doing for them, by this, and other Managers in Great-Britain. She herſelf was under Attainder, and to correſpond with her was Death by the Laws of England: What then was it to make Bargains for her, and to rob the Treaſury of 60,000 l. a Year, to ſupport her, and her Outlaws, in carrying on their wicked Deſigns againſt the Religion and Liberties of our Country? While the Viſcount was at Fontainbleau, the Elector of Bavaria, another declared Enemy to the Confederates, and a Rebel under the Ban of the Empire, came thither, and had a Conference with him, in which he deſired him to recommend his, and his Rebel Brother the Elector of Cologn's Intereſts to the Queen his Miſtreſs. Theſe two Princes had moſt ſhamefully betray'd the Common Cauſe, which they were bound to ſupport by all the Ties of Duty, Honour and Gratitude. He of Cologne had deliver'd his Country, on the Frontiers of Holland, to the French, who had made War ten Years with the Allies, to hinder his Advancement to that Electorate. He of Bavaria in one Day admitted French Troops into all the ſtrong Towns of Flanders, of which he had been made Governor by the Procurement of King William, and his Confederates, whom he abandon'd, and rais'd a terrible Rebellion, with the Aſſiſtance of France, in the Bowels of the Empire. Were theſe Princes fit Objects to be recommended to the Queen's Protection? But unworthy as they were, their Intereſts were eſpouſed by her Miniſters, and the Duke of Marlborough was ſtripp'd of his Principality of Mindelheim in favour of Bavaria, who had forfeited it by the Laws of the Empire, of which he was a Member. On the 29th of Auguſt, N. S. the Suſpenſion of Arms for four Months longer was proclaim'd in England, to the Terror and Aſtoniſhment of all good Britons, who abhorr'd any Suſpenſion, while our Friends the Confederates continu'd in Arms for the Support of that Cauſe we had deſerted. The ſame Day an Order of Council was publiſhed, about delivering out Paſſes to Merchants, and Maſters of Ships, which was pretended to be a great Benefit to them; but like all the other Benefits of this unhappy Adminiſtration, it was accompanied with ſome miſchievous and ruinous Circumſtances. This Order laid on our Merchants a Neceſſity of purchaſing French Paſſes from the Secretaries of State, who filled their Pockets with the Fees exacted for them. At the ſame time the French Court delay'd ſending over their Paſſes; and ſome of their Ships, which were taken by Sir Thomas Hardy, were releas'd upon producing of our Paſſes, while ſeveral of our Ships were made Prizes for want of theirs.

Lord Bolingbroke's Bargain for K. James II. his Dowager for 60,000 l.

The Duke of Marlborough ſtript of his Principality of Mindelheim.

A.D.1712

The French abuſe the Engliſh.

The Britiſh Secretary having receiv'd a Preſent of a fine Jewel, which had been the late Dauphin's, worth 4 or 5000 l. Sterling, left Paris, and return'd to England by the Way of Dunkirk. We have hinted that the Lord-Treaſurer, in his Letter to the Queen, took notice of the Importance of this Journey; and it is obvious, that a Suſpenſion of Arms, which was already agreed upon ſo far, that it took up but a few Hours Time for a Concluſion, by the Secretaries of England and France at Paris, did not require the Preſence of ſo important a Perſon as the ſecond Miniſter in England to go thither on Purpoſe to conclude it. It is therefore probable, that his main Buſineſs, as was then generally believ'd, was to ſue for the altering the Dates of former Agreements, in order to palliate ſome forward and unwarrantable Advances which Mr. Harley, Mr. St. John, &c. had made in this clandeſtine Negotiation.

Dates alter'd by Lord Bolingbroke.

The French deſtroy our Sugar-Iſlands, while the Biſhop and Earl are at Utrecht.

Notwithſtanding theſe, and all the other Advances of the Britiſh Miniſters, to come at this French Peace, the French Court, who had engag'd them ſo deep in the Secreet, that they durſt not depart from it, treated them, and the Nation, as they thought fit; and while the Duke of Ormond was taking the Confederates Towns from them in Flanders, to facilitate the Operations of the Mareſchal de Villars againſt them, a French Squadron in the Weſt-Indies was taking the Sugar-Iſlands belonging to the Engliſh, deſtroying their Plantations, carrying away their Negroes, and making Hoſtages of the Planters. This News came time enough to welcome the Viſcount Bolingbroke's Return to England from the Embraces of Monſieur de Torcy, and his dear Friends at the Court of France: He left Prior behind him, to do what Drudgery remain'd towards concluding a Separate Peace; and having receiv'd Advice of the Invaſion of the Leeward-Iſlands by the French, he wrote thus to him, September 19, O. S. "This proves a very un-
"toward Contretemps. It gives a Theme to
"the Whigs, [he himſelf the Great Grandſon of
"that St. John, who was call'd Cromwell's
"Dark-Lanthorn,] and ſerves to awaken the "Paſſions that were almoſt lull'd aſleep. We "expected that Coſſart's Squadron might have "gone to the Coaſt of Brazil [mind what
"Intelligence our Managers had] or to Surinam;
"but we never imagin'd our Colonies would
"have been attack'd by him, at a Time when
"we

A.D.1712 " we were knitting the Bonds of Friendſhip be-
" tween the two Nations with all poſſible Induſtry.
" Could this ill Opinion of our new Friends
" have enter'd into our Heads, [ſomething of
" theſe Heads has been hinted already] I do aſ-
" ſure you, he ſhould have been accompanied
" by a Fleet of the Queen's, which would have " kept him in Reſpect." He remembers the Orders that were ſo punctually and chearfully obey'd by the Duke of Ormond; and then adds, " I will not ſay this Order ſav'd their Army " from being beat; I think in my Conſcience " that it did. In a word, we depended ſo much " upon the good Underſtanding, which we " thought eſtabliſh'd, and were ſo earneſt to " prevent any thing which might break in upon " it, that we not only avoided to fortify our " Squadron, as we might have done, but we " alſo neglected to put in execution ſome Deſigns " which would have annoy'd the French and " Spaniards perhaps more than any which have " been effected in the Courſe of this War." In his Letter of the 29th of September, to his Dear Matt, as he calls him, " I have got at laſt the " Affair of the Griffin compounded, not with" out very great Difficulty; and though the " Sum paid to the Captors was ſo large as 35000*l.*
" the Ship was plainly Prize, and the Paſs ſent
" over hither might have been prov'd to have
" been numerically one of thoſe I deliver'd at
" Fontainbleau four Days after the Griffin was Gualtier's Villany own'd by Lord Bolingbroke. " in Sir Thomas Hardy's Power, though Gual-
" tier was ready to ſwear, he receiv'd it ſome
" Months before." Was it not very much for the Credit of the Earl of Oxford and Mortimer, and the Lord Viſcount Bolingbroke, to admit ſuch a Raſcal, as the Viſcount owns Gualtier was, into their ſtricteſt Confidence; to ſend him on their Errands to France, and to employ him as one of the chief Agents in the Negotiations of Peace? A Wretch that offer'd to ſwear falſly in an Admiralty-Cauſe; of whom the Secretary himſelf could not help ſaying, this Part of the Abbot has, I confeſs to you, done him no Good in my Opinion; but ſtill he employ'd and truſted him: And what honeſt Man wou'd have been a Tool for the bad Work he was to do with him?

We have ſeen how the Secretary values himſelf to the French Court, on the Earneſtneſs of himſelf and the other Managers in England, to knit the Bands of Friendſhip between the Britons and the common Enemy; we ſhall now find them ſo well knit, that the French King makes uſe of the Engliſh Agent in France, to Mr. Prior an Agent for France. be his Plenipotentiary in England. It is ſaid to the Report, " About the latter end of October,
" Mr. Prior was ſent into England, and by
" what appears, left his Reſidence in France,
" without the Leave or any Order from the
" Queen his Miſtreſs; but was ſent over by the " King of France as a proper Perſon, whom he
" thought fit to entruſt with the great Secret of
" prevailing with the Queen, by her Credit, to
" obtain what the King demanded for the Elector
" of Bavaria." Prior brought a Credential Letter from the French King to the Queen, and about the middle of November went back to France with new Inſtructions, wherein the Propoſal of a Neutrality in Italy is one of the chiefeſt Articles. He carry'd alſo a Letter from the Queen to the King of France, wherein, among other Things it is ſaid, That Mr. Prior continuing to behave himſelf ſo, as that his Conduct may be entirely agreeable to the King of France; he does but literally execute the Orders the Queen had given him, and is a Proof of his Duty and Zeal for her Service. A.D.1712

We muſt not forget, that while theſe Endearments and friendly Negotiations paſt between the Courts of Great-Britain and France, the Congreſs continues at Utrecht, where the Squabble between the Count de Rechteren's and Mr. Meſnager's Footmen, made a Pretence to interrupt the Treaty, which is hurry'd on by the Britiſh and French Miniſters in their ſeveral Courts, with little or no Regard to the Conferences of the Plenipotentiaries in Holland; where the Biſhop of Briſtol and Earl of Strafford labour much the Point of Paſſports for King Philip's Ambaſſadors; but the States-General alledg'd they cou'd not be granted without doing a manifeſt Injury to the Emperor, who had at leaſt an Equal Title to the Crown of Spain with King Philip.

Endearments between the Miniſtry and common Enemy.

Biſhop of Briſtol and Earl of St——'s Negotiations little regarded by them.

It is no Wonder that the Earl of Strafford's grand Airs and high Tone had made him Enemies enough in Holland, nor, that the Populace at Utrecht were provok'd to let him ſee the Indignation they had conceiv'd againſt him: It being given out, that the Duke of Savoy, whom the Engliſh Miniſters were tampering with to come into their ſeparate Meaſures, had abandon'd the Allies, ſome of the ordinary People at Utrecht broke not only the Windows of the Marquiſs de Borgo, the Duke's Plenipotentiary, but alſo of the Lord Strafford; and as a farther Indignity to the latter, they ſet up a Wheel on the Rails before his Houſe, with a Paper on it, in which was written the Dutch Word Straff-art, alluding to the Earl's Name, and implying, that he deſerv'd the Puniſhment denoted by the Wheel; the Word Straffen, in Dutch, ſignifying to puniſh. This Outrage was ſo reſented by the Magiſtrates of Utrecht, that they publiſh'd a Placaert, promiſing a Reward of 400 Guilders to any one that ſhou'd diſcover the Authors of it, and that the Name of the Informer ſhou'd be conceal'd; but I do not find he was enough reſpected in that City to excite a Diſcovery; or that the Britiſh Court inſiſted on farther Satisfaction. We have mention'd the Endeavours us'd by the Britiſh Miniſters, to draw the Duke of Savoy off from the Confederacy; one of them was the Contrivance of Secretary St. John, to make him an Offer of the Kingdom of Sicily, which at once, as he thought, wou'd flatter the Vanity of the Duke of Savoy, and mortify the Houſe of Auſtria, which was always in his View. The Earl of Peterborough, who was then at Turin, receiv'd this Anſwer from his Royal Highneſs; I am not ſo vainly impatient of the Title of King, as to loſe or hazard my real Intereſt for an empty Name; but I think it much more extraordinary, that a Prince beaten two Years together by his Enemies, ſhou'd remain at laſt with the Prize contended for, and which, ſo often by Parliament, had been declar'd the juſt and unavoidable Motive of the War. But his Miniſter at London, having ſucceeded in his Negotiation, for the Payment of the Arrears of Subſidies, due from Great-Britain to his Maſter; and the Queen's Guaranty for his Poſſeſſion of Sicily and other Territories, yielded to him by former Treaties, prevail'd at laſt, over thoſe juſt and generous Sentiments, and brought him into the Meaſures of our Miniſtry.

The Earl inſulted at Utrecht.

The Miniſtry tamper with the Duke of Savoy to come into their Meaſures.

He deſpiſes them, and joins in them.

Mr. Thomas Harley, a Man never heard of out of the Marſhes of Wales, 'till his Kinſman took him thence to make a Stateſman of him, having been ſome time in Holland, went from thence in July, with Mr. St. John, the Secretary's Brother,

A. D. 1712

Mr. Tho. Harley ſent to Hanover.

ther, to the Court of Hanover, where Mr. Thomas Harley took on him the Character of Ambaſſador Extraordinary. Thoſe who knew the Buſineſs he went about, thought it a Jeſt to ſend ſuch a Perſon to convince the Elector of Hanover, as he endeavour'd to do, That his Electoral Highneſs's not coming into the Queen's Meaſures, would do him an Injury in the Minds of the People, who were ſet upon Peace. But the Elector, whoſe Character was Steadineſs, as well as Wiſdom and Goodneſs, remain'd firm in the Sentiments which he expreſs'd in that excellent Memorial preſented about a Year before by the Baron de Bothmar, and anſwer'd the Treaſurer's Couſin to this Effect: I do not put my ſelf upon the Foot of one pretending immediately to the Throne of Great-Britain. The Queen is a young Woman, and I hope will live a great many Years; when ſhe dies my Mother is before me. Whenever it pleaſes God to call me to that Station, I hope to act as becomes me, for the Advantage of the People. In the mean time ſpeak to me, as to a German Prince, and a Prince of the Empire. As ſuch, I muſt tell you, I cannot depart from what I take to be the true Intereſt of the Empire and the Dutch. It is worth obſerving what Anſwers the Agents of the Britiſh Miniſters receive every where, when they go about to divide the Confederates; with what Truth, and what Spirit the Princes reſiſt their unjuſt and ſeparate Propoſitions.

His Electoral Highneſs's generous Anſwer to his bad Propoſal.

Not long after the Inſult the Earl of Strafford met with at Utrecht, he went to England, and was made a Knight of the Garter at the ſame time with the Duke of Kent, D. Hamilton, Duke of Beaufort, Earl Paulet, and the Earl of Oxford and Mortimer. Lord Bolingbroke was very much diſguſted that he too had not the Ribbond, and was not let into the whole Secret of Mr. Thomas Harley's Embaſſy to Hanover; at leaſt he ſuſpected as much, and was never afterwards in any Degree of Friendſhip or Confidence with the Treaſurer; but ploughing with the ſame Heiſer as the latter had done, he, by Lady Maſham's, and other Ladies Influence on the Queen, did gradually undermine the Earl of Oxford in her Majeſty's Favour.

Lord Bolingbroke ſupplants the Earl of Oxford.

About this time ſeveral Gentlemen of Figure and Fortune form'd themſelves into a Club, that met once a Week at Charing-Croſs, and took the Name from that Illuſtrious Family, for whoſe Service they aſſembled. This Society was very inſtrumental in keeping up the Whig Spirit in London and Weſtminſter, and conſequently throughout the whole Kingdom. A Liſt of the Names of theſe worthy Perſons is fit to be handed down to Poſterity.

A LIST of the Hanover-Club, as it ſtood November 4, 1713.

The Hanover Club.

1 THE Lord Viſcount Caſtlecomer.
2 Thomas Lord Pelham.
3 William Coventry, Eſq;
4 Bryan Fairfax, Eſq;
5 William Strickland, Eſq;
6 Charles Churchill, Eſq;
7 Hugh Cholmley, Eſq;
8 Martin Bladen, Eſq;
9 Richard Edgecomb, Eſq;
10 James Craggs, Eſq; jun.
11 Paul Methuen, Eſq;
12 William Pulteney, Eſq;
13 George Montagu, Eſq;
14 Thomas Frankland, Eſq;
15 John Duke of Montagu.
16 Richard Lord Viſcount Lumley.
17 Henry Earl of Lincoln.
18 Richard Topham, Eſq;
19 William Benſon, Eſq;
20 Sir Robert Marſham.
21 Robert Furneſe, Eſq;
22 Richard Steele, Eſq;
23 Sir John Ruſhout, Bart.
24 Henry Lord Viſcount Lonſdale.
25 Joſeph Addiſon, Eſq;
26 Lewis Watſon, Eſq;
27 Robert Briſtow, Eſq;
28 Horace Walpole, Eſq;
29 Edward Aſhe, Eſq;
30 Leonard Smelt, Eſq;
31 John Knight, Eſq;

Secretary to this Society of True Patriots, Mr. Ambroſe Philips;
To whom they made a generous Allowance Yearly.

About this Time too appear'd three Pamphlets with the following Titles:

Reaſons againſt the Hanover Succeſſion, &c.
What if the Queen ſhould die?
What if the Pretender ſhould come?

In each of theſe Pamphlets there were ſeveral Paſſages highly treaſonable; and it was eaſily perceiv'd they were writ by Daniel Foe. Mr. Benſon, who, as I ſaid before, was under a ſham Proſecution, was reſolv'd to carry on a real one againſt this Tool of the Miniſters. He ſpar'd neither Pains nor Expence on this Occaſion, and in a few Days he got into his own Poſſeſſion the Original Manuſcripts of all thoſe three Pamphlets, written in D. Foe's own Hand, or rather Hands, for they were every one of them different; but all the three being prov'd by one of the Printer's Servants, before the Lord Chief Juſtice Parker, to be the Hand-writing of D. Foe, his Lordſhip granted a Warrant to take him up; which being done, tho' not without much Trouble and Charge, his Lordſhip committed him to Newgate: But what was Matter of great Surprize, was, that the very Perſon whoſe proper Buſineſs it was to appear againſt him, appear'd for him, and approv'd of his Bail, namely, Mr. Borret, Sollicitor to the Treaſury, which he durſt not have done without Order from his Maſters. Mr. Benſon immediately apply'd to Sir Edward Northey (then Attorney-General) and offer'd him no leſs than ten Guineas to retain him againſt D. Foe; but he declin'd it, and told Mr. Benſon, he could not be concern'd in the Proſecution without an Order from a Secretary of State. Mr. Benſon then went to another eminent Council (now one of the greateſt Ornaments of Weſtminſter-Hall) who made no Difficulty, but enter'd very heartily into the Proſecution, and it was brought near to a Day of Trial; at which Time the ſame Perſon who had procur'd D. Foe to be bail'd, procur'd his Pardon, which Foe produc'd in the Queen's-Bench.

Here the Reader may obſerve the unparallel'd Impudence of the then Miniſters, who had made the Queen ſo often declare to her Parliament, how much ſhe had the Houſe of Hanover at Heart, and who had themſelves ſo often ſolemnly ſworn to it; yet here, in Defiance to all Senſe and Conſcience, they appear'd as openly for the Pretender, eſpecially the then Lord Bolingbroke (who counterſign'd the Warrant for D. Foe's

A.D. 1712 Pardon) as if they had been at that very Inſtant, what Bolingbroke has been ſince, the Pretender's own Miniſtry.

This Proſecution, however, which was begun and follow'd by a private Gentleman, and entirely at his own Expence, and was carried ſo far that the Royal Pardon only cou'd protect the Criminal, had the good Effect, that the Tools of the Miniſters were afterwards oblig'd to be more cautious.

It was on the firſt Day of Eaſter-Term, that Daniel Foe, for whoſe Appearance J. Grantham, Printer, and T. Warner, Publiſher, had been bound in 400 l. a Piece, did appear, among others, at the Court of Queen's-Bench; and her Majeſty's Attorney-General acquainting the Court that he was order'd to proſecute him for the above-mention'd Libels, he was continued upon his Recognizance; but before he went out of Court the Lord Chief Juſtice Parker cau's'd the two Reviews of the 16th and 18th of April to be ſhewn to him, and ask'd him whether he was the Author of them, which, after ſome Heſitation, he confeſs'd; whereupon his Lordſhip declar'd, that thoſe two Papers were very inſolent Libels againſt him in particular, and alſo againſt the Laws of England; but that his Lordſhip being perſonally concern'd, he would leave it to the other Judges to do what they thought fitting in that Matter; and the two Reviews being then diſtinctly read their Lordſhips concurr'd in Opinion, that they were highly inſolent to the Lord Chief-Juſtice, and a notorious Contempt to that Court, and the Laws of the Nation, and that the ſaid Daniel Foe ſhould be committed Priſoner to the Queen's-Bench for his ſaid Offence.

The Court was unanimous, that the Books for which he was bound over were ſcandalous, wicked and treaſonable Libels; but D. Foe endeavouring to excuſe himſelf, by ſaying the Books were writ Ironically, he was told by Judge Powis, after ſeveral learned Arguments to prove the Abſurdity of that Pretence, that he might be hang'd, drawn and quarter'd for thoſe Books: But Daniel Foe had the good Luck to eſcape the Gallows, in the manner as has been mentioned. There was a Search at this time for Pittis, the Author of Jus Sacrum, but he could not be found. This Wretch had been at Oxon, ſold his Fellowſhip of New-College, went to London, turn'd Quack, Jacobite and Libeller, and was ſoon reduc'd to Beggary and Infamy, which well qualify'd him for the Service of the Cauſe he now eſpous'd.

The Renunciation, which was declar'd beforehand by the French Court to be Null, and of no Effect, was ſworn by King Philip, November 5, N. S. the Lord Lexington being then at Madrid. This was confirm'd afterwards by the Cortez, or States of Spain, in his Lordſhip's Preſence, the King valuing himſelf to them on his Preference of the Crown of Spain to that of France, in Return for the Spaniards keeping it on his Head, when it was in the moſt tottering Condition. Tho' his Army was forc'd to raiſe the Siege of Campo Major, yet the Portugueſe finding they were like to be left by England, if they continu'd the War againſt him, the Count de Tarouca, the King of Portugal's Plenipotentiary at Utrecht, was prevail'd upon by the Biſhop of Briſtol to come into the Queen's Meaſures, and ſign the Suſpenſion of Arms, November 7, the Engliſh Forces in Portugal, and thoſe in Catalonia, were order'd home, which diſabled Count Staremberg to execute the Deſigns he had form'd for the Defence of that Principality. Thus, by the End of the Campaign, the Duke of Savoy and King of Portugal were wheedled, or hectored, by the Miniſtry in England, and their Agents, into a Compliance with the French Plans of Peace, and all Spain given up to the Duke of Anjou, except Barcelona, and a Caſtle or two in Catalonia, which could not long ſtand out againſt the joint Forces of France and Spain. The Emperor, by this Means, found himſelf under a Neceſſity to maintain the War againſt the two Crowns with the Strength of the Empire, and its Princes only; for the Dutch began to be weary of their Oppoſition to the Peace, which England was determin'd to conclude, or rather had concluded ſecretly and ſeparately with the common Enemy. For Duke Hamilton was appointed the Queen's Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Court of France, having been made Maſter of the Ordnance in Auguſt. The Duke d'Aumont, Firſt Gentleman of the Bed-chamber to the French King, was appointed to be his Ambaſſador at the Court of England; and the Choice of theſe two Ambaſſadors was extreamly agreeable to the Pretender's Friends, whoſe Cauſe and Intereſt they both openly favour'd.

A.D. 1712

Duke Hamilton truſted with the Embaſſy to France.

The Duke d'Aumont ſent by the French King to England.

If the Treaſurer's Capacity had been of ſo great Extent as his Flatterers made him believe, he would have been aſham'd of the pretended Conſpiracy againſt his valuable Life, of which this ridiculous Account was printed, That a Band-Box had been ſent him, with three Piſtols charg'd and cock'd, whoſe Triggers being tied by Packthread faſten'd to the Cover, the Piſtols wou'd have gone off, and done Execution, at the opening of the Box, had not the ſame been miraculouſly prevented by Dr. Jonathan Swift, who being then in the Room, while the Earl of Oxford was ſhaving, ſuſpected ſomething, and opened the Box in ſuch a manner, that no Miſchief was done. But, as the Annaliſt writes, "The Belief of ſuch an "extraordinary Plot was ſoon exploded, when "it was found that the three Piſtols were "no more than a Steel ſet on a Piſtol-Stock to "ſtrike Fire, and two Ink-horns, or Squibs; "ſo that Jonathan Swift, the lucky Diſcoverer, "was by many ſuſpected to have been the inge-"nious Contriver of this Political Machine," for which Service, the Earl of Oxford procur'd him the Deanary of St. Patrick in Dublin; for what other Service he did him, except in writing falſe and ſcurrilous Libels againſt the old Miniſters, his firſt Patrons, does no where appear. This Man was ſuppos'd by Mr. Maynwaring to be employ'd in the Weekly Libel, called the Examiner, and he never denied it. In one of thoſe infamous Papers, the making a ſpeedy Peace on any Terms, to prevent the Emperor's growing Power, is preſs'd very much. Mr. Maynwaring lays it to Swift's Charge, and corrects him for it thus: "This is a Propoſal ſo treacherous, "as well as contrary to common Senſe, that I "have often wonder'd how it has been poſſible "to engage ſo many unhappy Men to expoſe "themſelves in writing on that Subject; for I "think the ſole Glory of diſplaying our Dan-"gers from the Emperor, ſhould have been left "to that Author who writ the Tale of the Tub; "and the ſame Title would have ſerv'd for "his Treatiſe upon this Argument. A Man, "who to pleaſe the very worſt Men among us, "the Deiſts, Socinians and Free-Thinkers, made "a Satyr upon Religion, is the only fit Perſon "to be employ'd in ſuch Drudgery of Scribbling; "and it would be Impudence in a Clergyman, "who has ridicul'd Chriſtianity, to pretend after

Dr. Jonathan Swift diſcovers the Band-Box Plot.

Made Dean of St. Patrick.

Mr. Maynwaring corrects him for his Satyr on Religion.

The Biſhop of Briſtol prevails with the principal Plenipo's to deſert the Allies.

A.D. 1712 Foe and he have one Maſter.

"after that to ſtick to any thing elſe. This "Province therefore ſhould have been kept en- "tire for him, and the ſhameleſs D. Foe ſhould "have been forbid to meddle with it; for he "brings great Diſgrace upon his preſent Maſters, "by declaring ſo publickly for France and the "Pretender."

Lord Mohun fights with Duke Hamilton and kills him.

About ten Days after the Band-Box Plot was ſo happily diſcover'd, and prevented, the Miniſtry did what they could to form another Conſpiracy againſt them in the Death of Duke Hamilton, whom my Lord Mohun kill'd in a Duel, November the 15th. The Occaſion of the Quarrel was taken from Duke Hamilton's reflecting on Mr. Whitworth, Father to the late Lord Whitworth, who was Evidence for Lord Mohun in his Suit with Duke Hamilton, for the Succeſſion to the Earl of Macclesfield's Eſtate. The Duke and the Lord Mohun meeting at Mr. Orlebar's, a Maſter in Chancery's Chambers, the Duke ſaid, after Mr. Whitworth had been examin'd, He has neither Truth nor Juſtice in him, the Lord Mohun retorted, He has as much as your Grace. This Law-Suit had depended long, been very Expenſive, and, as uſual in ſuch Caſes, made ill Blood between theſe two Noblemen; Duke Hamilton's Reflection on Mr. Whitworth broiling in Lord Mohun's Stomach, he could not be eaſy 'till he had ſent Lieutenant-General Maccartney to him to let him know, he thought himſelf injur'd in his Friend, and requir'd Reparation. General Maccartney having been twice at Duke Hamilton's Houſe, a Meeting was appointed at the Roſe Tavern in Covent-Garden, where the Duke and the General were a few Minutes in private, the Lord Mohun, and Colonel John Hamilton, who came with the Duke, being in ſeparate Rooms. Mr. Maccartney went ſeveral times between the Duke and the Lord Mohun, which in Charity and Reaſon one ought to think was rather to compoſe than inflame the Quarrel: But the Tools of the Miniſtry affirm'd the contrary, and that the Time and Place of the Duel was then fix'd, and that General Maccartney kept the Lord Mohun at the Bagnio in Long-Acre all Night, that he might not cool upon it; and to that end took Care that he ſhould be well warm'd with Wine. A moſt villainous Lye! For the Lord Mohun and Mr. Maccartney lay the Night before the Duel at the Bagnio. They drank little or nothing, and my Lord was ſo far from being warm, that he walk'd up and down the Room ſilent and thoughtful, as I was inform'd by the Waiter. The next Morning, Saturday the 15th of November, they two went in a Hackney-Coach to the Lodge in Hide-Park, where being ſoon after met by Duke Hamilton and his Second, Colonel Hamilton; they all jump'd over a Ditch into a Place call'd the Nurſery. The Lord Mohun, knowing this to be in effect a Family Quarrel, about the Right and Intereſt of Relations, rather than a Diſpute of Honour, very juſtly would have excus'd the Seconds from Engaging; but Duke Hamilton would not, ſaying, Mr. Maccartney ſhould have a Share in the Dance. All having drawn, immediately the two Principals made ſuch violent and deſparate Paſſes, or rather Stabs, that they ſoon fell down mortally wounded, and the Lord Mohun grappling with the Duke, and ſhortning his Sword, gave him that Wound on the fleſhy Part of the Shoulder which reach'd his Breaſt, and was ſaid to have been given him by Maccartney after he fell: Another villainous Lye, which was ſo far countenanc'd by the Miniſtry, that they publiſhed an Advertiſement for the Diſcovery of Lieutenant-General Maccartney, who, as appear'd upon Oath, gave the Duke of Hamilton the Wound of which he dy'd. The Man they got to ſwear this was Hamilton, the Duke's Second. The Falſity of that horrid Imputation, as the Annaliſt tells us, ſufficiently appear'd, both from the Depoſitions taken at the Coroner's Inqueſt, and from the Report and Declarations of two or three eminent Surgeons, who were unanimous, that the Wound the Duke received in his Right Arm, and which was allow'd on all Hands to be given by the Lord Mohun, was the immediate Occaſion of the Duke's Death. One of thoſe Surgeons, Mr. B—— a French Man, declar'd particularly, that the Wound, ſaid to be given him by Maccartney, had the Symptoms of a Weapon in the Hands of a Man in the Agony of Death, as was Lord Mohun, ſe remuant, the Term he made uſe of to Colonel Coot; a Hand that ſhakes with Convulſion, and not a direct Thruſt. Having mention'd Colonel Coot, I muſt obſerve, that that Gentleman and myſelf, were deſir'd by Sir Samuel Garth, in the Name of the Duke of Richmond, to whoſe Houſe Mr. Maccartney retir'd after the Action, to get Copies of the Affidavits taken by the Coroner; which being refus'd, we got the Names of the Witneſſes, and in a few Days, all the Witneſſes themſelves, at the Tavern in Jermyn-Street; where we deſir'd them to recollect, if they cou'd, what they had ſworn concerning the Duel which ſome of the Servants at the Lodge ſaw, and ran to part the Duelliſts, but came too late; and they all agreed in a poſitive Denial of General Maccartney's running near the Duke, 'till after he had receiv'd his Wounds; and both his, and Colonel Hamilton's Swords had been deliver'd to them. Notwithſtanding this apparent well prov'd Truth, did the Examiner, by the Miniſters Direction or Sufferance, make theſe diabolical Reflections on the whole Wigg Party; "They having tried all o- "ther Methods in vain, they return'd to their "laſt Expedient of Murder, and employ'd Trea- "chery and Violence at once. Their General, "the Duke of Marlborough, ſet the Example of "Party Duels, which was only to give them a "Sanction, and deputed that infamous Meſſen- "ger of his Challenge to be the Bully of the Fa- "ction. That Bravo Maccartney was forc'd "to keep his Patron's Courage up with Wine; "and the Mortal Wound the Duke receiv'd, af- "ter his Adverſary was run through the Heart, "cou'd not be given him by any but Maccartney.

A.D. 1712 The Miniſtry publiſh that falſe Report.

Falſe Reports againſt General Maccartney.

The Examiner's lying Account of it.

The Miniſters puſh'd on this deteſtable Calumny on Maccartney ſo far, as to make Hamilton ſwear it before the Privy-Council; and if this perjur'd Wretch had really ſeen him ſtab Duke Hamilton, as he ſwore afterwards, what a baſe worthleſs Fellow was he to let Maccartney walk ſoberly off, with his Cane on his Button, and his Arms a-croſs, from the Nurſery to the Park-Gate, at Kenſington; when, with the Help of the Waiters at the Lodge, he might eaſily have ſecur'd him? But tho' he and Maccartney ſtood on the Spot a conſiderable Time taking care of their Principles, he ſaid not a Syllable of it then, but, doubtleſs, took his Leſſon afterwards from Secretary St. John, &c. which he improv'd at his mock Trial; and no doubt, if theſe Miniſters who had promis'd 500 l. Reward for taking Maccartney, cou'd have caught him, Hamilton was ready to have given that fictitious Evidence againſt him; nor cou'd they have wanted more

Hamilton the Duke's Second perjur'd.

A.D. 1712 more such Witnesses to have murder'd General Maccartney, and that too by Form of Law. But he escap'd beyond Sea, and liv'd there 'till his late Majesty's happy Accession to the Throne; after which, he took his Trial in Westminster-Hall, and came off honourably in the Opinion of the Court, and of all that heard it: Hamilton, the false Witness, liv'd a while in Contempt, and died miserably.

As to the Lord Mohun's being the Aggressor in this Quarrel, it might very well be, considering the Animosity occasion'd by the Law-Suit. Duke Hamilton had been often forewarn'd to avoid his Lordship's Company, who probably might be inclin'd to decide the Matter by Combat, after the Saxon Mode, upon an Apprehension that the Duke wou'd remove the Cause into the House of Peers; where, says our Author, p. 609, he might hope to supply, by Friends and Interest, what he wanted in Justice and Equity; or that he might beg and obtain the late Earl of Macclesfield's Estate, the Prize contended for, on Pretence, that the Outlawry against that Earl was not revers'd in due Form.

Another sham Plot.

The next Plot, with which the Ministry frighten'd the Queen, occasion'd the doubling of the Guard at Windsor. Information was given, that some disaffected Persons lurk'd in the Night near the little House in which her Majesty liv'd: These disaffected prov'd three young German Gentlemen, who came to Windsor, Saturday the 22d of November, to view the Castle; and happening to walk about the Queen's House in the Evening, were challeng'd by a Centinel, as usual; but they not understanding English, and thinking they had come too near her Majesty's Apartment, instead of answering, betook themselves to their Heels: Upon this, the Centry call'd to his Corporal; and the commanding Officer being acquainted with it, made his Report to the Minister, then at Windsor, and it being work'd up into a treasonable Design of the Whigs, the Guards, as has been said, were doubled.

It was wonder'd by many, how the Duke of Marlborough, who was justly honour'd as the greatest Hero of this, if not of all Ages, cou'd stay in England to bear the Insults of the vile, virulent Faction, who wrote under the Protection of the then Government. All who were anxious for his Safety, in hope that he might yet be one Day useful in the Defence of the Protestant Succession, against its open and secret Enemies, wish'd him Abroad; for it wou'd not have been surprizing, had those Murderers of his Fame, the Ministers and their Emissaries, murdered his Person, which, with a little Caution, might certainly have been done with Impunity. They were so profligate as well as malicious, as to insinuate that the Duke of Marlborough spirited up the Duel in which the Pretender's best Friend, Duke Hamilton, was kill'd. Oldisworth, Swift, Prior, and probably Secretary St. John, continually pelted his Grace with the foulest and falsest Aspersions. His Patience had been put to such frequent Trials, that it gave way at last to so many Provocations, and he resolv'd to leave an unthinking ungrateful People, as were all that adher'd to the Ministers in the Prosecution of their French Peace. The Persons he communicated his Design to, were the Earl of Godolphin and Mr. Maynwaring, I name none of his Family, they being included of Course.

The Duke of Marlborough goes to Flanders.

The Annalist is wrong in saying, He opened his Design to the Earl of Oxford, and demanded a Pass, which was readily granted. His Grace never open'd himself to the Treasurer since he had the Staff; but Mr. Maynwaring spoke to the Earl of Oxford about it, and the Pass was far from being readily granted. The major Part of the Ministers, particularly Monsieur St. John, was against it, being afraid of his Grace as well Abroad as at Home, and thought their Power wou'd secure them better against him here. However, the Treasurer, to oblige Mr. Maynwaring, remov'd all Difficulties, conquer'd all Opposition, and concerted with that Gentleman the manner of granting and limiting the Pass, which was done to my Lord Duke's Satisfaction: The Pass was accompanied with a Letter from the Queen, to testify how well pleas'd she shou'd be with the honourable Reception his Grace every where met with. The Duke having settled his Affairs, sent a Gentleman from his Seat at St. Albans to Windsor, to fetch this Pass; but the Lord-Treasurer wou'd send it by a Messenger of his own, who was enjoin'd not to deliver it 'till the Duke of Marlborough had consented to write a few Lines to him, which that Messenger was to bring back, importing, that the Pass was procur'd by the Earl of Oxford, and the Acknowledgment for it, was due only to him; which being comply'd with, his Grace had the Pass and Letter deliver'd to him. On Sunday the 1st of December, the Duke embark'd at Dover on Board the North-Britain Packet-Boat, and landed at Ostend the next Day, under a tripple Discharge of the Cannon on the Ramparts; my Lord Duke was receiv'd at his landing by Lieutenant-General Cadogan, and Brigadier de Caris, Governour of the Place; and was conducted by a vast Concourse of People to Captain Brown's, where he din'd; he supp'd with the Governour, lay that Night at the Burgo-master's, and the next Day set out for Antwerp. He was receiv'd with extraordinary Marks of Respect in all the Dutch Garrisons, particularly, Maestricht, from whence he repair'd to Aix la Chapelle. The Ministers were so offended at General Cadogan's Civilities to his Grace, that they soon after turn'd him out of all his Employments, which, if other Instances of Baseness and Ingratitude were wanting, wou'd be sufficient to make their Memory odious to Futurity.

A.D. 1712

Lord Bolingbroke opposes it.

The Lord Treasurer requires a Letter from the Duke, owning that he got the Pass.

Gen. Cadogan turn'd out by the Ministry for his Civilities to his Grace.

On Duke Hamilton's Death, the Duke of Shrewsbury, now almost as deep in this political Mire as the rest, was appointed to succeed him in the Embassy to France; and there was an Affectation in the Court of England, to shew singular Marks of Regard and Friendship to the Courts of France and Spain, after the Expence of above 100 Millions Sterling, and a Million of Lives, to get from them what they had, by Violence and Injustice, got from others; which now was readily and shamefully given up by our Ministry. The Marquis de Monteleone, appointed to be one of King Philip's Ambassadors at Utrecht, taking London in his way, to receive his Passports from Holland, had Audience of the Queen, and spoke to her thus;

MADAM,

The Catholick King, my Master, has sent me to give your Majesty a Thousand Thanks for the great Pains you have been pleas'd to take, to procure Peace to Europe: The whole Spanish Nation, in particular, owe their Lives to your Majesty; for had the War continued there is not one faithful Spaniard, who wou'd not have spent the last Drop of his Blood in my Master's Quarrel.

Duke of Anjou's Minister's Speech to the Queen.

The

A.D.1712

The Queen's Anſwer was;

I Thank my Brother, the King of Spain, for the Complement he makes me by you. I think my ſelf very happy, in being able to contribute to the Safety of ſo Brave a Nation, and ſo Loyal a People.

Whom by her Declaration, publiſhed by the Duke of Ormond in the Expedition to Cadiz; by that, publiſh'd by the Earl of Peterborugh and Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, three Years after; by the Negotiations of Mr. Crow in Catalonia, and the Endeavours of the Earl of Galway in Portugal, ſhe had exhorted and invited to riſe up in Arms againſt him.

The Earl of Strafford return'd to Holland in the Beginning of December, and carry'd with him a new Plan of Peace, the Subſtance of which is contain'd in the Cloſe of what the Earl ſaid to the Deputies of the States-General, and the Grand-Penſionary, "Preſſing for a ſpeedy "Reſolution, whether the States was willing or "not to ſign the Peace jointly with her Majeſty, "immediately and without Delay, for other-"wiſe her Majeſty would be oblig'd to ſign her "Peace, without waiting for them to come into "it any longer than a Fortnight or three Weeks "at fartheſt. That her Majeſty aſſuring her-"ſelf that the States would not delay to con-"clude the Peace with her, would procure "Tournay for them, which, with many other "Places, were not to be expected from France, "if the Queen ſhould ſign her Peace ſeparately. "That as to the Empire, there would be no "Alteration in what is contain'd in the Queen's "Speech relating thereto, nor in any thing with "reſpect to the Emperor, only that Sardinia "ſhould be given to the Elector of Bavaria, "and that the Duke of Savoy ſhould have Sicily. "That her Majeſty was very deſirous to have "the Concurrence of the States in all that re-"lated to that Duke, as well as to the Elector "of Bavaria, and to oblige the Emperor to con-"ſent to the Neutrality of Italy, and to with-"draw his Troops from Catalonia. That ſhe "further deſir'd, that the Plenipotentiaries of "the States at Utrecht might be furniſh'd with "full Powers to conclude forthwith the new "Treaty of Barrier; a Copy of which he de-"liver'd into the Hands of the Regiſter Fagel."

Earl of Strafford's laſt Propoſal to the Dutch about the Peace.

The new Plan being communicated to the States of the reſpective Provinces, the Members of thoſe Aſſemblies were variouſly affected. The Ceſſion of Tournay, after the Treaſurer and Secretary in England had put France upon inſiſting to have it reſtor'd, was a great Bait to the Dutch; and the Threat that they would loſe it, with ſeveral other Places, if the Queen ſign'd her Peace ſeparately, chang'd the Minds of many of them, and diſpos'd them to give a favourable Ear to the Lord Strafford's Propoſals. That Plenipo went incognito to Amſterdam, where he had ſeveral ſucceſsful Conferences with the leading Magiſtrates. That City has always great Influence on the States of Holland, as thoſe States have on the States-General, and the Diſpoſition of Amſterdam is generally a Rule for the Cities and Provinces in the Affairs of War and Peace; but the States of Utrecht, where the Biſhop of Briſtol was not idle during his Colleague's Abſence, were the firſt that conſented to the new Plans for the Peace and the Barrier; and on the 29th of December the States of Holland did the ſame, which the States-General agreed to the ſame Day, and wrote a very reſpectful and affectionate Letter to the Queen; wherein they ſignify'd their Reſolution to enter into her Meaſures, and to conclude and ſign a Peace jointly with her, as alſo to take, with her Majeſty, new Engagements on the Proteſtant Succeſſion and Barrier-Treaty.

They agree to them.

A.D.1713

The Compliance of the Dutch quickned the Paces of the Negotiations at Utrecht; but while the Britiſh Plenipo's were hurrying on the Treaty there as faſt as they could, after the Accommodation of the Conteſt between Count Rechteren and Mr. Meſnager, the Miniſters in England were in the moſt direful Apprehenſions of what would be the End of them, and their Treaty, from the Treatment they met with from France, where the Miniſtry ſeem'd not to care what became of them, if they could gain their Ends; and having them now faſt enough in their Clutches, they flew off from their Agreements in favour of the Engliſh Commerce in North-America. The Report of the Secret Committee fully explaining theſe Matters, I ſhall take my Account of them from it.

The French Miniſters careleſs of the Engliſh.

"While the Engliſh Miniſtry are doing theſe "good Offices to the Subjects of France, and "taking all Opportunities, both Publick and "Private, to eſpouſe their Intereſts, the Com-"mittee is ſurpris'd at the ill Treatment which "England receiv'd from France at this Time, "and at their Backwardneſs in making good the "Promiſes and Engagements they were under "in ſome Points that moſt nearly concern'd "the Intereſts of Great-Britain." For at the very time that the Biſhop and the Earl at Utrecht were preſſing the Plenipotentiaries of the Allies to conclude a Peace with France jointly or ſeparately, the Advantages Great-Britain was to expect and reap from it were, in a great Meaſure, unſettled and undetermin'd, notwithſtanding what had been ſaid to them in the Queen's Speech.

The French Court contradict the Queen's Speech.

France began to cavil, and, as Lord Bolingbroke ſaid, go back from what the King had promiſed the Queen. He tells Mr. Prior, He cannot be perſwaded the French act either fairly or wiſely. They preſs us to conclude, that they may have others at their Mercy, and at the ſame time they chicane with us concerning the moſt Eſſential Article of all our Treaties, and endeavour to elude an Agreement made, repeated and confirmed.

"The two great Points of Moment in diſpute "were concerning the Fiſhery at Newfoundland, "and in what manner the Ceſſion of Cape "Breton was to be made. The other was a-"bout the Treaty of Commerce. As to the firſt "it is obſerved, that in the Queen's Inſtructi-"ons to the Duke of Shrewſbury, he is directed "to propoſe, as the Queen's laſt Reſolution, that "ſhe will conſent to give and yield up to his moſt "Chriſtian Majeſty, the entire Poſſeſſion and "Propriety of the Iſland of Cape Breton; but with "this expreſs Condition, that his ſaid Majeſty "ſhall, on his Part, in Conſideration of the ſame, "relinguiſh to her Majeſty all manner of Right "to Fiſhing, and drying Fiſh, on the Coaſt of "Newfoundland, or any Part reſerved to his "Subjects by the Articles ſign'd at London the "27th of September, O. S.

Inſtructions to the Duke of Shrewſbury, Ambaſſador in France.

"Several Repreſentations were ſent back-"wards and forwards, ſhewing the fatal Conſe-"quences of what was demanded by the French, "altho' Lord Bolingbroke, in his Letter of the "19th of January, $17\frac{12}{13}$, inſiſted, that the

A. D. 1712 " Queen had never yielded what France pre-
" tended to; yet in his Letter to the Duke of
" Shrewſbury, of the ſame Date, he tells him,
If the French cloſe with the Overture he then made them with Regard to the Diſputes concerning Commerce, her Majeſty is willing to accept the laſt Expedient propoſed by Monſieur de Torcy for adjuſting our Differences about North-America, and to conſent that the King in the Ceſſion of Newfoundland, do reſerve to his Subjects a Right of Fiſhing and Drying on the Coaſt of Newfoundland, from Point Ruht North about to Cape Bonaviſta; " and here no Direction is given about Cape " Breton, of which the French got the entire " Poſſeſſion and Propriety, altho' in the Duke " of Shrewſbury's Inſtructions it is declar'd, That the Queen look'd on Cape Breton to belong to her, and reckon'd that Iſland a Part of the ancient Territory of Nova Scotia, which is by this Treaty reſtor'd to her. " But if the Duke could " not prevail upon them to agree with him, in " the Article of Commerce; he was to declare, " that neither will the Queen agree with them " in their Propoſition concerning Newfoundland. " Here the Committee conſiders upon what " Conſideration this valuable Privilege of taking " and drying Fiſh upon the Coaſt of Newfound- " land, was yielded up to France." In Monſ. de Torcy's Anſwer to the Lord Bolingbroke's Memorial, May the 24th, 1712, it was agreed, " That Britain and France ſhould grant to the " Subjects of each Crown reciprocally the ſame " Privileges and Advantages, which they ſhall " either of them grant to the Subjects of any " other Nation whatſoever: Upon this Foun-
Lord Bolingbroke owns the French falſe to them. " dation was eſtabliſhed the Principle of treat-
" ing, and being treated as Gens Amiciſſima; and " purſuant to this Principle the Tariff of 1664, " which was granted to Holland, except the four " Species, was likewiſe to be granted to it, and " by the eighth and tenth Articles of the Treaty " of Commerce it was ſo ſettled. But France " pretending now that this Tariff would be too " beneficial to us, refus'd to grant it to us un-" til another Tariff ſhould be made in Britain " exactly conformable to that of 1664, where-" by our Duties ſhould be reduc'd as low here " as theirs are in France by that Tariff." This, Lord Bolingbroke ſays, is an open Violation of Faith, and by this they are removing a Corner-Stone, which was laid early in the Foundation of a Building brought almoſt to Perfection, the Fall whereof muſt prove of as fatal Conſequences to them as to us. He adds, I was ſtrangely ſurpris'd, when I ſaw the Precedent of the Utrecht Treaty quoted, to perſwade us to refer our Commerce, as the Dutch then did theirs, to Commiſſioners, to be treated of after the ſigning the Peace.
Lord Bolingbroke argues againſt referring Trade to Commiſſioners, The Behaviour of the French upon that Occaſion has given us Warning, and it is from thence we have learn'd whatever is referr'd and given up; and they muſt have a mean Opinion of thoſe whom they would perſwade to purſue the ſame Method to get the Tariff of 1664, by which the Dutch then loſt it. " But he had either not learn'd this " Leſſon, or had entirely forgot it, when on the
And then propoſes it himſelf. " 24th of May he himſelf had propoſed, That ſeveral Points relating to Commerce, requiring a longer Diſcuſſion than the Criſis would admit, Commiſſaries ſhould be appointed to ſettle and adjuſt the Differences. " After this he propoſes to " ſtrike out of the Project of the Treaty of " Commerce, the ninth and tenth Articles, and " inſtead thereof to inſert one to the Effect of " that which he had drawn; and the Accep-
" tance of this Amendment, was to put an A. D. 1713 " End to all Differences, and gave ſuch ample " Advantages to France, that the French readily " agreed to it, and inſerted it Verbatim as it was " ſent; which makes the ninth Article of the " Treaty of Commerce, as it now ſtands, and is " the ſame that was rejected by the Parliament, " of which Sir Thomas Hanmer was Speaker. " And this Article, which has been ſo univer-" ſally and juſtly condemn'd, appears to be the " Work of the Engliſh Miniſtry, and the Price " for which they ſold France the Fiſhery of " Newfoundland.
The Miniſtry ſell the Newfoundland Fiſhery for the rejected Article of the Treaty of Commerce.

" This Treatment of France could not but give " the Miniſtry the greateſt Uneaſineſs, though " the Apprehenſions, leſt the Circumſtances " they were in ſhould be known, far exceeded " their Concern at the Diſappointment Great- " Britain was like to meet with." They had ſign'd a Separate Treaty with France in 1711. We cannot forget what ſolemn Declarations and Aſſeverations they made againſt this, and that the Earl of Oxford pronounc'd thoſe to be Fools, Knaves and Villains who conſented to ſuch a Treaty: " Upon this ſingle Principle, " that the Intereſts of Great-Britain were in the " firſt Place to be adjuſted; and as long as they " had this to ſay, they were unconcern'd at other " Events. They had gone on for fifteen Months " together, and acted in every thing as the In-" ſtruments of France, and are at laſt in Dan-" ger of being diſavow'd by France, in the moſt " eſſential Part of all their Treaty. One of the chief Inducements, and principal Conditions " upon which the fatal Ceſſation was granted, " was, that no Privileges or Advantages rela-" ting to Commerce with France, ſhall be yield-" ed to any Foreign Nation, which ſhall not at " the ſame time be granted to the Subjects of her " Britannick Majeſty. But France had now " reap'd the full Benefit of the Suſpenſion, and " were at liberty to diſpute the Principle of Gens " Amiciſſimæ. In theſe Circumſtances were the " Engliſh Miniſters in January 1712; and to " extricate themſelves, they give up all Points " in Diſpute in North-America, and the Fiſhery " of Newfoundland, upon the ſingle Conſider-" ation of the ninth Article of the Treaty of " Commerce, which the Parliament rejected " with a juſt Indignation. However, to bring " France to a Compliance, even upon theſe " Conditions, the Duke of Shrewſbury is in-" ſtructed to prevail with France to come to " this Reſolution, without the loſs of a Mo-" ment's Time. The Parliament was ſudden-" ly to meet, and it would be neceſſary for the " Queen to communicate to both Houſes the " preſent State of the Negotiation. The Duke
The Duke of Shrewſbury*'s further Inſtructions.* " is then to repreſent to Monſ. de Torcy, How ſmoothly every thing would glide along, if the Queen was able to ſpeak of her own Intereſts as abſolutely determin'd with France; and on the other Hand, what Travels we ſhall be expos'd to, and what Confuſion may ariſe, if our Negotiation appears to be ſtill open; and if the Secret comes to be divulg'd, that France refuſes to make good in the Treaty the full Effect of former Promiſes to the Queen: That as the French Miniſters deſire that the Queen would precipitate the Concluſion of her Peace, and leave all the Confederates at their Mercy, they muſt be told, that when the mutual Intereſts of France and England are ſettled, the Plenipotentiaries if Great-Britain ſhall publickly declare in the Congreſs, that they are ready to ſign with thoſe of France, and ſhall call upon the Al- lies

A.D. 1713

lies to quicken their Negotiations, and conclude without loss of Time: But if they seek unnecessary Delays, or make unreasonable Demands, her Majesty, who has induced them to treat, will, by the same Measures, engage them to conclude, or at least she will sign without them. And that the Queen having once declar'd her Interest to be settled, and her Treaty ready to be sign'd, the General Peace becomes from that Moment sure, and the Remainder of the Negotiation easy. It is therefore wise for the French to comply with her Majesty. Thus are these Deserters to the common Enemy, at the same time that they are publickly boasting of giving Peace to Europe, begging it of the French.

The English Ministry beg Peace of France privately.

" The great Distraction they were in, appears " sufficiently from this long Letter of Lord Bo- " lingbroke's to the Duke of Shrewsbury: But " to be fully satisfy'd what their own Appre- " hensions were, and what they themselves " thought would be the Consequence of such " Proceedings, the Committee takes notice of " two Letters writ upon this Subject by Lord " Bolingbroke to Mr. Prior; one of January " the 19th, the other of the 22d, O. S. In the " first he says, We stand indeed upon the Brink " of a Precipice, but the French stand there too. " Pray tell Monsr. de Torcy from me, that he " may get Robin and Harry hang'd, but Af- " fairs well soon run back into so much Confusion, " that he will wish us alive again." This frank Confession of their deserving the Gallows for what they had done, makes it astonishing that they should escape it, or that the least Attention should be given to what the Treasurer said afterwards in Vindication of himself, his Bosom-Friend, and Fellow-Counsellor in the Peace, having own'd that hanging was their Due, tho' the Debt, to the great Scandal of National Justice, was not paid them. Their Merit is further explain'd in what the Quondum Viscount says in the same Letter: " Unless the Queen " can talk of her Interests, as determin'd with " France, and unless your Court will keep our " Allies in the wrong, as they are sufficiently at " this time, I foresee inextricable Difficulties. " My Scheme is this, Let France satisfy the Queen, " and let the Queen immediately declare to her Par- " liament, and in the Congress, that she is ready to " sign; at the same time let the French Plenipo's " shew a Disposition to conclude with all the Allies.

Lord Bolingbroke owns he and the Lord Treasurer in danger of being hanged.

Then he enumerates the several Offers which he would have France make to the several Allies; which tho' very general, and insufficient, he says, " If such Overtures as these made to the Allies, " were not instantly accepted, our SEPARATE " PEACE would, sitting the Parliament, be " address'd for, made and approv'd, and the " Cause of France for once become popular in " Britain. If they were accepted, let Monsr. " de Torcy sit down and consider what a Bar- " gain would be made for France; let him re- " member his Journey to the Hague, and com- " pare the Plans of 1709 and 1712." The Treaty of the Hague, of which he puts Torcy in Mind, is here acknowledged to be for the Advantage of the Confederates; and that at Utrecht, or rather the Ministry's Separate Convention with the French Ministers, to be for the Advantage of France; yet had this prodigious Ministry been so unjust, as to get the Lord Townshend to be voted an Enemy to his Country, which he had so faithfully and eminently served in the Treary of the Hague. The Secretary in another Letter writes to Prior;

Lord Bolingbroke boasts of the Advantages France has by the Separate Peace.

He proves the Vote against the Ld. Townshend, which himself got, to be unjust.

A.D. 1713

" We are now at the true Crisis of our Disease; " we die at once, or recover at once; let " France depart from that shameful Expedient, " by which they thought to bubble us out of " the Advantage which they had solemnly " yielded, and All is well; otherwise, By God, " both they and we are undone." The Impiety and Lewdness of the Character broke out here in a Degree not known to Pagans, Turks or Papists, who all abhor the Profanation of the tremendous Name of the Almighty in so daring a manner. How must the pious Queen be impos'd on, to admit a Man capable of this Wickedness, into her Cabinet. He adds in the Letter, " The Queen can neither " delay the Meeting of the Parliament, nor " speak to the Houses, 'till we hear from you. " My Complements to Monsr. de Torcy: " Let him know, that if they do not agree with " the Queen, I may perhaps be a Refugee; if I " am, I promise before-hand to behave myself " better in France, than the French Refugees " do here. Make the French asham'd of their " sneaking Chicane: By Heaven! they treat " like Pedlars, or, which is worse, like At- " torneys.

He swears in his Letter,

And says, he must fly his Country.

The Committee of Secrecy having observ'd, that most of these Publick Transactions pass'd through the Hands of the Lord Bolingbroke, proceed to shew, that the Earl of Oxford directed and govern'd all these Councils, not only in the great and treasonable Affair of Tournay, but also in giving up the Newfoundland Fishery to France, and in writing to the British Plenipo's at Utrecht, to sign the Separate Peace immediately, if the Ministers of the Allies hesitated any longer about signing with them. By which he made himself answerable for all the fatal Consequences of the Cessation of Arms, the precarious Articles of Commerce, and the whole French Peace. M. de Cize writes, Il est divertissant de voir l' Embarras ou ils soient de justifier leur Conducte devant le Parliament. Nous sommes sur le bord du Precipice mais les François y sont aussi, je vous prie dites de ma part a Monsr. de Torcy qu il peul faire pendre Robert & Harry, &c.

'Tis pleasant to see how they were embarrass'd " to justify their Conduct to the Parliament: " We are on the Brink of a Precipice, says Lord " Bolingbroke to Mr. Prior, but the French are " there also. Tell Mr. de Torcy from me, he may " get Robert and Henry hang'd, &c. as before; and then my Author adds, " However, we see " that Lord Bolingbroke acted by the Lord Trea- " surer's Direction, who assum'd the Sovereign " on several Occasions: he corresponded with " Foreign Princes, and treated of Peace and " War, sometimes without the Queen's Know- " ledge, or communicating it to the Ministers; " but he seldom interpos'd his Authority, except " the Case was very extraordinary. The Pleni- " potentiaries at Utrecht found the Behaviour " of the French there so different from what " they had promis'd, that they were mightily " perplex'd, and cou'd not bring themselves to " sign the Peace by Orders from Lord Boling- " broke only: Upon which the Earl of Oxford " writes them a Letter himself, which overcame " all their Scruples, and the Peace was presently " sign'd by the English and French Plenipoten- " tiaries.

Mr. Rob. Harley at the Head of these Transactions.

" We find in the whole Course of this Nego- " tiation, that the Ministers were in great Per- " plexity for fear of having their clandestine

" Practices

*A.D.*1713 " Practices diſcover'd; they were continually " contriving how to hide their Deſigns from the " People, and were fix'd in their Reſolution to " have a Peace at any Rate. One ſees they " were entirely devoted to the Intereſt of France, " and were always throwing Contempt on the " Houſe of Hanover and the Dutch, whom Bo- " lingbroke compar'd to wild Beaſts in the Toils " that ſtruggled in vain to break them, and being " at laſt tir'd with ſtruggling, became tame and " tractable." He declar'd alſo, in a Letter to the Biſhop and Earl at Utrecht, That the Queen did not much enter into the Notion of the Degradation of Hanover, as a Matter of any Importance, &c. And it is obſervable, that among all the Demands that were made on the account of any Prince or Potentate in the Alliance, none met with the leaſt Regard; when at the ſame time, the Intereſt of the Princeſs Urſini, was eſpous'd in the ſtrongeſt manner, tho' ſhe was known to be a zealous Agent for the Pretender when ever ſhe had Opportunity; a Principality in the Netherlands, with a Revenue of 30,000 Crowns a Year, was to be demanded for her, as a Condition ſine qua non of the General Peace.

Lord Bolingbroke's infamous Reflections on the Queen's Diſregard of the Houſe of Hanover.

The Miniſtry's ſhameful Demand for the Princeſs Urſini, Agent for the Pretender.

The Treaſurer's Letter to the Britiſh Plenipotentiaries at Utrecht being come to hand, it remov'd all their Obiections as to ſigning the Peace; and on the 11th of April, the Biſhop of Briſtol and Earl of Strafford ſign'd the Treaties of Peace and Commerce between Great-Britain and France at about three o' Clock in the Afternoon. This Example was follow'd by ſeveral of the Allies, and laſt of all, when it was in vain to hold out any longer, the Dutch, about Midnight, ſign'd their Treaties of Peace and Commerce, and the Emperor and Empire alone, choſe rather to bear the weight of the War, than ſubmit to ſuch diſadvantagious and diſhonourable Terms as had been carv'd out for them by England and France.

L. Bolingbroke's Brother brings the Treaty of Utrecht to England.

On the 14th of April, N. S. this Treaſure, the Treaty of Peace and Commerce between England and France, was brought to St. James's, by Mr. St. John, the Lord Bolingbroke's Brother. To make this good News ſtill better, it was given out that the Plenipotentiaries of Pruſſia, Portugal, Savoy, and the States-General, had ſign'd their reſpective Treaties; and the State Guns were order'd to be fir'd; the Bonefire Men, very much in the Intereſt of the Treaſurer and Dr. Sachaverel, perform'd their Part in the Evening. Four Days after, a Council was held at St. James's, in which the Lord Keeper Harcourt, who had put the Great-Seal to all the ſecret Commiſſions that were ſent him to authorize theſe Negotiations, was declar'd Lord High-Chancellor of Great-Britain, and the Duke of Athol was ſworn of the Privy-Council; then the Queen propos'd to the Board, the ratifying the Treaties of Peace and Commerce: To which, the Earl of Cholmondeley objected, ſaying, " That " this Matter being of the higheſt Importance " for her Majeſty and her Kingdoms, as well as " all Europe; it requir'd the matureſt Conſidera- " tion; and theſe Treaties containing ſeveral " Terms of the Civil Law, in which the leaſt " Equivocation might be of great Conſequence, " and being, beſides, couch'd in Latin and " French, it ſeem'd very neceſſary to have them " tranſlated into the vulgar Tongue." His Lordſhip was back'd by another Member; but the French being in haſte, and our Miniſters ſo too, their Opinion was over-rul'd, as no doubt they expected it wou'd be, and only ſaid it to bear their Teſtimony againſt the Ratification, which was perfected on the Spot; and the next Day, April 8, O. S. the White-Staff, as Treaſurer of the Houſhold, was taken from that noble Lord; and Sir Richard Temple was diſplac'd from the Command of the Regiment of Dragoons, formerly the Earl of Eſſex's. The very next Day after this, the Queen, who was made to believe that ſhe was about to beſtow an almoſt infinite Bleſſing to her People, went to the Houſe of Peers, the Parliament being to meet that Day, and made a long Speech to both Houſes, which has in every Paragraph Matter enough for Reflection, if the Miniſtry that drew it up had not put her Majeſty's Name to it; for it extols the Advantages obtain'd in Commerce for the Britiſh Nation, her Majeſty's Zeal for the Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, and has other things as extraordinary and well grounded.

*A.D.*1713 He is turned out of his Poſt; As is alſo Sir Rich. Temple.

Lord Cholmondeley oppoſes in Council the ratifying it.

The Queen being retir'd from the Houſe of Lords, the Duke of Beaufort mov'd for an Addreſs of Thanks, which occaſion'd a Debate; Objections being made to the Expreſſion General Peace, one of thoſe Abſurdities by which the Miniſtry diſtinguiſh'd themſelves in all their publick Speeches and Declarations; the Emperor, the King of Poland, the Elector of Hanover, and other Princes and States of the Empire were not yet come into it: But the Friends to the Miniſters anſwer'd, That tho' the Peace was not Univerſal, yet it was General; becauſe the major Part of the Allies had ſign'd it. It might as juſtly be ſaid, that a Vote is Nemine contradicente, becauſe the Majority had no Negative amongſt them. In order to know, for what Thanks were to be given, a Motion was made for an Addreſs, to have the Treaties of Peace and Commerce laid before the Houſe; but according to the Detection, p. 452, it was carry'd in the Negative, both Lords and Commons, in their reſpective Addreſſes, chiming in with the Court, and giving Thanks for a Peace, the Articles of which had not yet been laid before them. The Commons indeed did, upon a Motion of General Stanhope, reſolve to addreſs for the Treaties of Peace and Commerce to be laid before them; but the Miniſtry's Emiſſaries added theſe Words in due Time, that is, after they had out-done all former Thanks in the laſt for the glorious Peace that had been made, tho' they knew not what it was.

The Queen's remarkable Speech in Praiſe of the Peace.

Call'd General, tho' ſeveral Princes had not ſign'd.

Addreſſes of Thanks for the Peace, without knowing what it was.

The Peace being approv'd, ſays the Annaliſt, and a Supply voted, the obſequious Commons, in Complaiſance to the Court, proceeded to the ſtigmatizing thoſe that delighted in War: In order to that, Mr. William Shippen, who never was charg'd with taking any ſuch Delight, made a Report of Miſmanagements from the Committee, to examine the Debts due to the Army; the Prevarications and Miſrepreſentations of which, are too many to be enumerated, ſince no more came of it than a Blaſt of ill Breath againſt thoſe that had ſo faithfully and ſucceſsfully ſerv'd in the Adminiſtration in the beſt Times, ſince the Death of King William. They paſt a ſlight Cenſure on William Churchill, Eſq; a Member of their Houſe, for being, when a Commiſſioner for Sick and Wounded, a Partner in Contracts relating to that Office; they alſo made a vain Attempt to faſten a Miſdemeanour on the Earl of Wharton, for taking 1000 l. of one Hutchenſon, for procureing him the Office of Regiſter of Seizures in the Cuſtoms; but they dropt it, becauſe it was done before the laſt Act of Indemnity: " Thus ended the Storm, ſays our Author, which for " ſome time, had threatned that great Patriot, who

A.D.1713 " who look'd down with Contempt on the im- " potent Malice of his Enemies." We are oblig'd in this Period of our Hiſtory to remember Perſons and Things that are below its Dignity, but are thrown into our way by the Unhappineſs of the Times. Of this Kind is the Pretender's Proteſtation, which he ſent by the Poſt to the Plenipo's at Utrecht, who otherwiſe wou'd not deign'd to have receiv'd it. It contain'd in Subſtance, That ſince after a War ſo long and ſo pernicious to all Chriſtendom, all Parties ſeem'd ready to come to a Peace, and were ſpeedily about to ſign it, he thought it fit and neceſſary, by this ſolemn Proteſtation, to aſſert his undoubted Right, againſt any thing that might be done towards the Diminution of it. That he would not enlarge upon what had been unjuſtly done againſt him, ſince no body could doubt of the Juſtice of his Cauſe. Nor was he indeed only moved with the Condition of his own Affairs; but being uncapable to change his Affection towards his Subjects, he could not, without the moſt ſenſible Grief, behold, that neither their Blood nor their Wealth had hitherto been ſpar'd to ſupport the great Injuſtice that had been done him; and that they were at laſt reduc'd ſo far, that if a Peace was made excluſive of him, they muſt neceſſarily become a Prey to Foreigners. That ſince he underſtood, that the Confederate Powers had no Regard to his Right, he thought himſelf moſt indiſpenſably oblig'd to himſelf, to Poſterity, and to his Subjects, not to ſeem, by his Silence, to conſent to what was tranſacting to the Prejudice of him, and the lawful Heirs of his Kingdoms. And therefore he ſolemnly proteſted againſt All that might be agreed or ſtipulated to his Prejudice, as being void by all the Laws in the World. This Piece of Impertinence and Falſhood was receiv'd, as it deſerv'd, with Contempt, and no notice taken of it.

The Pretender's Proteſtation againſt the Peace.

The Biſhop and Earl left at Utrecht.

Upon the ſigning of the Peace at Utrecht, the Imperial Miniſter left that Place, and the Biſhop of Briſtol and Earl of Strafford had no body to rejoice with upon it but the Ambaſſador of France: For tho' the Plenipotentiaries of other Powers had ſign'd the Treaty, they were drawn to it by the Separate Meaſures of England, and what they did was againſt their Wills.

On the 9th of May, Mr. Benſon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, preſented to the Houſe the Copies of the ſeveral Treaties and Acts made at Utrecht, which went down very glibly, all except the eighth and ninth Articles of the Treaty of Commerce, which were debated five Days after. Mr. Arthur Moore, whoſe chief Skill in Buſineſs lay in Stock-jobbing, particularly the African, was the Man whom the Treaſurer conſulted in the Affairs of Commerce, and the Balances of the Trade of the World, which he knew no more of than himſelf, having never been a regular Merchant either by Breeding or Practice. However, he made him a Commiſſioner of Trade; and the Fortune he had rais'd by Stocks or otherwiſe, procur'd him a Seat in the Houſe of Commons, wherein he labour'd, in a rude manner, to prove that Trade with France would be very beneficial to the Nation. He enumerated the ſeveral ſort of Commodities of the Growth and Manufacture of Great-Britain, which the French drew from hence before the two laſt Wars.

A. Moore extols the Trade with France.

Here this Creature of the Treaſurer inſiſted boldly on an Aſſertion which every one knew to be falſe, that was ever ſo little acquainted with the Trade with France before the Revolution; which, by the Conſent of all Parties, was at leaſt a Million a Year to the Advantage of France in the Balance; yet had he the Impudence to offer ſuch Stuff to the Houſe for Fact and Argument. I do not wonder that Sir William Wyndham, Sir Thomas Hanmer, Mr. Benſon, and Mr. Ward, ſpoke on the ſame Side with Arthur Moore; but it is wonderful that Sir James Bateman ſhould have been wheedled into ſuch groſs Contradiction to all Commercial Knowledge, by the Lord Treaſurers's good Words and Looks. This Gentleman, whoſe chief Dealings had been in Stocks and Funds, by which he had acquir'd an immenſe Eſtate, was, on that Account, much courted by the Treaſurer; and going one Day to dine with him, was met by a Gentleman, whom I have often mentioned in this Hiſtory, who underſtanding whoſe Gueſt he was to be, told him, He would be miſtaken if he thought to make a new Friendſhip there, for there was no truſting to a Word he ſaid. Sir James reſolv'd to make the Experiment, and went his way. Some Days after he ſaw that other Gentleman again, and taking him aſide, ſaid, You are in the right; tho' I ſtay'd with him 'till ſix or ſeven o'Clock, and endeavour'd ſeveral times to bring him to a Point on a certain Subject, I could never get any thing from him that was intelligible. In anſwer to Arthur Moore, and thoſe that back'd him, Mr. Lechmere endeavour'd to prove, that the Trade to France would be very prejudicial to our Woollen Manufactures, and to our Commerce with Portugal, which was ſo notorious, that it might be as well doubted whether there was ſuch a Country as Portugal, as whether we did not get more by the Trade to it than by any other Trade whatſoever; and that a great Part of that Trade, if not all, would have been loſt, if the Trade with France had been put on the Foot of Arthur Moore's and the Miniſtry's Project. Mr. Lechmere was ſupported not only by General Stanhope, Mr. John Smith, Mr. Nath. Gould, Sir Peter King, Sir Joſeph Jekyl, Mr. Wortley Montagu, Lord Caſtlecomer, and other good Engliſhmen, but alſo by Sir George Newland, one of Sacheverel's Patrons, and Mr. Robert Heyſham, who, tho' formerly a Hoſier in Fanchurchſtreet, had for many Years paſt been a principal Weſt-India Merchant, and converſant with Commerce of moſt Kinds. Newland and he had 'till then gone almoſt always with the Court; but this Attempt, ſo ruinous to the Trade of the Nation, and conſequently to the Nation itſelf, ſo diſguſted him at the Harleians, that he would have no more to do with them. Mr. Gould ſaid in anſwer to Mr. Moore, " That he " begg'd the very thing in Queſtion, and that, " in his Opinion, the opening a free Trade " with France, would be highly detrimental to " the Nation. That ſince the Revolution, the " State of Commerce was entirely chang'd; and " as France had ſet up, and very much encou- " rag'd Woollen Manufactures, and made a " Shift without ſeveral Goods which they drew " from hence, ſo England had learn'd to be " without the Product of France, by ſetting up " Silk Manufactures, and Paper-Mills, encoura- " ging the making of all manner of Toys, &c. " which ſav'd and gain'd vaſt Sums of Money to " the Nation, and employ'd an infinite Number " of Artificers, who would be reduc'd to Beggary, " if the Importation of French Goods of the " ſame Kind were allow'd; becauſe the French " had their Work done for leſs Money, and " conſequently could ſell their Commodities " cheaper. He added, that the moſt valuable " Branch of our Trade was that to Portugal,

Sir James Bateman's Saying of the Treaſurer's Inſincerity.

A.D. 1713 " which of late Years was mainly owing to " the great Quantities of Wines that were imported from thence, and consumed in Great-Britain, instead of French Wines, by reason " of the high Duties laid on the latter. But if " these Duties were, pursuant to the Treaty of " Commerce in question, reduced and made " equal with those on Portugal Wines, the " Importation and Consumption of the latter " would infallibly decrease, and thereby our valuable Trade with Portugal be in Danger of " being lost." Instead of answering these solid Reasons, Sir William Wyndham took Occasion to reflect on the late Ministry, as much as it was foreign to the eighth and ninth Articles of Arthur Moore's Treaty of Commerce with France, in which Secretary St. John was his Fellow-Labourer. The old Ministry, in his Opinion, had let Slip the Opportunity of making a good Peace when they had it in their Power; tho', as Mr. Secretary had put Torcy in mind, the late Ministers had made a good Peace at the Hague, and the French durst not have refus'd to ratify it, had not the Tories in England given them Hopes of the Distractions and Divisions which follow'd soon after; and the shifting of Hands in favour of the common Enemy. Then, as it was customary for these Men during their usurp'd Authority, comes a Menace, A Time might come, and he hop'd was not far, when the Mismanagements of the Enemies to their Country should be animadverted. In which, like the Gentile Priests, he spoke prophetically, without knowing or intending it; and his Prophecy was in part, tho' not perfectly, fulfill'd, in the Impeachments of the Ministers with whom he was then in Conjunction.

Sir William Wyndham answers the Merchants with reflecting on the old Ministry.

I recommend what was said further in this Speech, to the least Dabbler in Foreign Commerce. As to the Portugal Trade, he said, That that Kingdom would ever have Occasion for the Woollen Manufactures and Corn of England, and consequently be oblig'd to take off great Quantities from hence, as they did before the Year 1703, when the Court of Portugal had laid high Duties on English Goods and Merchandize.

What he said of the Portugal Trade.

I have often observ'd, that this Ministry had little Regard to what themselves or others said for or against a thing, if they thought it would serve their Purpose at the Instant to assert or deny. At the same time that this was said of the Trade to Portugal, and the Duties of 1703, Signor Bruciado, the Portugueze Minister at London, represented to the Court in a Memorial, That in Case any Breach was made in the Treaty concluded in 1703, whereby the Duties on French Wines were stipulated to be at least one Third higher than on those of Portugal, the King his Master would renew the Prohibition of the Woollen Manufactures and Products of Britain. Which not only allarm'd the Portugal Merchants, but all Persons concern'd in the Woollen Manufactures all over England: And nothing can give us a better Idea of the Strength and Temper of this Minister's way of arguing, than by comparing Sir William Wyndham's Speech with Signor Bruciado's Memorial, and General Stanhope's Answer to it.

Answer'd by a Memorial of the Portugueze Ambassador,

And by General Stanhope.

" That the Affair now in question was not a " Party Business, neither did it concern the late " or present Ministry, but the whole English " Nation; and therefore for his own Part he " would freely speak his Thoughts about it with " the utmost Impartiality. That the Peace being made, it was now preposterous to speak " any thing for or against it; but as no Treaty " could bind the Commons of Great-Britain to " make any Act or Deed against their own Interest, the only Point to be consider'd was, " whether a Free Trade with France would be " advantageous or not; and that in order to " clear that important Matter, it was necessary " to consult the Merchants and Manufacturers, " who had presented several Petitions and Representations about it." This was also urg'd by Mr. Smith, late Speaker, who made a Motion for adjourning the Debate, and taking the Papers before them into Consideration; but the Question being put, it was carried in the Negative by a Majority of 252 against 130. A.D. 1713

Good God! that the entire Well-being of England should have so little Weight in the Balance against the Prevalence of Party in the Support of such a Ministry! Those in the Country Interest despairing of doing any Good, by staying in the House any longer, went out, and left the Minister's Creatures and Adherents to vote as they pleas'd: So a Bill was order'd to be brought in, to make effectual the Eighth and Ninth Articles of the Treaty of Commerce with France, which would effectually have destroy'd the most beneficial Commerce of this Kingdom.

The French Commerce Bill order'd to be brought in.

As bad as the Peace was, the Populace had been so well prepar'd for it by the Inferior Clergy, and other Instruments made use of by the Ministers, that when it was proclaim'd, it was, as the Annalist observes, receiv'd with the loudest Acclamations of the giddy People, who fondly expected great Benefits by it; but it was not long before the Eyes of the Generality were open'd; and the Treaties of Peace and Commerce being printed and publish'd, the latter rais'd such a Clamour, as rous'd the Genius of England, which by some powerful Inchantment seem'd to have been plung'd into a profound Lethargy. Hereupon many worthy Patriots, Mr. Robert Walpole, General Stanhope, &c. exerted themselves, and publish'd several excellent Pieces, that shew'd the Advantage of the Trade with Italy, Spain and Portugal, to which Nations we constantly exported more than we imported from them, and brought the Balance in Money; whereas a Trade with France would be destructive of our Home Manufactures, and of our Commerce with other Nations. The East-India Company resolv'd to petition against the French-Trade Bill, but were prevented by a Vote in their Favour. However, the Turkey Company, the Italian, Spanish and Portugal Merchants, the Weavers of London, and the Woollen Manufacturers of all Parts and Quarters of the Kingdom, petition'd against it; and let the Reader judge whether they, or Sir William Wyndham and Mr. Benson, Chancellor of the Exchequer, knew best what was for the Interest of England in respect to its Commerce. I make use of the Annalist in the following Paragraph, not but I was well acquainted with the Particulars he relates. I copy him, only to avoid the Charge of Partiality.

The Merchants and Manufacturers allarm'd at it, petition against it.

" To stem this Torrent, those at the Helm " thought fit to encourage the publishing of a " weekly Paper, entituled, Mercator, or Com- " merce Retriev'd; which was generally fa- " ther'd upon Arthur Moore, Chief Manager of " the Treaty, assisted by Dr. D'avenant; but " the latter solemnly disown'd it; and it " was soon after discover'd to be the Productions " of an Ambodextrous mercenary Scribler Daniel " Foe, employ'd by that very Statesman, the " Earl of Oxford, who when Secretary of State had

The Lord Treasurer hires Dan. Foe to write the Mercator.

A.D.1713 " had caus'd him to be pillor'd for a Whig-Libel, but who, nevertheleſs, for this dirty " Work, allow'd him a conſiderable Weekly " Salary.

The Author here is only out in ſaying the Earl of Oxford was Secretary when Foe ſtood in the Pillory, for it was the Earl of Nottingham, who was then in that Office; Foe, as well as the Lord-Treaſurer, had been a rank Presbyterian, or Independant, and having paſs'd thro' Bankrupcy, as a Hoſier, was ready to engage in any Drudgery that he cou'd get ſomething by: Mr. Harley's Genius was ſo near a-kin to Foe's, that he cou'd not but take him into his Confidence as ſoon as he got Acquaintance with him; and tho' he never had been a Merchant, otherwiſe than peddling a little to Portugal, and was for ſome Years Secretary, as he ſtil'd himſelf, to the Tile-Kilns and Brick-Kilns at Tilbury; he was ador'd and careſs'd by that mighty Stateſman, who gave him, as that Mercenary ſaid himſelf, to the Value of 1000 l. in one Year: Foe's Buſineſs was only to puzzle the Cauſe by mercantile Cant and bold Sophiſtry; which ſeveral eminent Merchants and others being appriz'd of, they deſir'd Mr. Henry Martin, Bailiff of Southwark, an ingenious judicious Man, to publiſh a Paper call'd the Britiſh Merchant, which came out twice a Week; wherein, with plain Reaſon, and unconteſted Matters of Fact, he expos'd the Fallacies, Blunders, Inconſiſtencies and Ignorance of the Hireling Mercator, inſomuch, that at length, the Thoughts of true Engliſhmen about Commerce, which, at firſt, were repreſented to be the Efforts of Diſcontent and Faction, as was hinted in the Queen's Speech, appear'd to be the univerſal Senſe of all Traders.

Oppos'd by the Britiſh Merchant.

Malt-Tax to extend to Scotland.

There was about the ſame Time another Affair of great Conſequence depending in Parliament, concerning the Malt-Tax Bill, which was now propos'd to extend to Scotland, which, without ſome particular Modification, with reſpect to that Kingdom, they had reaſon to think a Grievance; and the Majority of the Houſe of Commons being in no Diſpoſition to relieve them, their Repreſentatives in Parliament, Lords and Commons, deputed four of their Number, the Duke of Argyle, the Earl of Mar, Mr. Lockhart and Mr. Cockburn, to lay the State of their Caſe before the Queen, which they did; and intimated, that if ſo inſupportable a Burden was laid on the Scots, it might prompt them to declare the Union diſſolv'd. To this, the Queen anſwer'd, It is a precipitate Reſolution, and I wiſh they may not repent it; but, however, I will endeavour to make all Things eaſy. On Monday the 1ſt of June, the Earl of Finlater open'd the Debate of this Affair in the Houſe of Lords; and having ſet forth the Scots Grievances, mov'd for the bringing in a Bill for diſſolving the Union, and ſecuring the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover: This Motion was ſeconded by the Earl of Mar, and oppoſed by the Lord North and Grey; whoſe Eloquence was no more remarkable than his Decorum, in reflecting on the Scots Nation before ſo many noble Peers, Natives of that Kingdom. The Lord Eglington, in anſwer to him, ſaid, If the Scots were poor, they were leſs able to pay the Malt-Tax. The Earl of P———h ſpoke againſt diſſolving the Union, and was anſwer'd by the Earl of Ilay. The Earl of P———h, in his Reply, animadverted on the Scots, as a People that wou'd never be ſatisfy'd; that they wou'd have all the Advantages of being united to England, but wou'd pay nothing by their good-will; and that they had more Money from England, than all their Eſtates amounted to in their own Country. One might be ſure ſuch Expreſſions as theſe, wou'd not paſs without Remark in that auguſt Aſſembly; and there was Room enough for an Engliſh Peer, much more a Scots, to take off the Force of them. His Grace the Duke of Argyle reply'd, with equal Spirit and Eloquence; " That he was by ſome reflected on, as " if he was diſguſted, and had chang'd Sides; " but that he deſpis'd their Perſons, as much as " he undervalu'd their Judgments; that it was " true, he had a great hand in making the Union; " that the chief Reaſon that mov'd him to it, " was the ſecuring the Proteſtant Succeſſion; but " that he was ſatisfy'd that might be done as well " now, if the Union were diſſolv'd: That he " believ'd in his Conſcience, 'twas as much for " the Intereſt of England, as of Scotland to have " it diſſolv'd; and if it were not, he did not expect long to have either Property in Scotland, " or Liberty in England. He urg'd, that the " Tax upon Malt in Scotland, was no leſs unequal, than the taxing Land by the Acre " throughout England wou'd be; becauſe Land " is worth 5 or 6 l. per Acre, about London, and " not ſo many Shillings in remote Parts of the " Country; that this was the Caſe between the " Scotch and Engliſh Malt, the latter being worth " three or four Shillings the Buſhel, the other " not above one; ſo that if this Tax were collected in Scotland, it muſt be done by a Regiment of Dragoons." The Lord Chief-Juſtice Trevor having aſſerted 'twas impoſſible to diſſolve the Union, he was back'd by the Lord-Treaſurer, who had been very buſy in making it, and ſent Foe to Scotland, as a Preſbyterian, to forward it, if he cou'd, among the Brethren of the Kirk. He was anſwer'd by the Earl of Nottingham, and the Earl of Sunderland ſaid, That tho' he had a Hand in making the Union, yet, if it had not that good Effect which was expected from it, he was likewiſe for diſſolving it: The Lord Townſhend was of the ſame Opinion, provided Means cou'd be found for the ſecuring the Proteſtant Succeſſion; and therefore he deſir'd to know what Security the Scots cou'd give for that eſſential Point before they proceeded any farther. The Scots Peers reply'd, that wou'd appear when the Bill was brought in. The Lord Halifax declar'd alſo for diſſolving the Union, provided it cou'd be made appear, that the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line cou'd be ſecur'd. It was obſervable, that when the Danger England wou'd be in from the Pretender, if the Union was diſſolv'd, was urged in this Debate, the Lord Townſhend anſwer'd, That the Queen, Lords and Commons of England, if join'd in one Intereſt, need fear no Enemy in the World; and therefore ought to deſpiſe the Pretender and all his Abettors. The Duke of Argyle having occaſion to mention the Pretender, ſaid, He knew not what Appellation to give him, his Name being now as uncertain as his Parents: But the Earl of Scarſdale call'd him the Prince, or added, the Pretender, which you will. It does not ſeem to be which they wou'd; he was, by the Laws of England, an attainted Out-Law, and no Prince. The Queſtion being put upon the Earl of Finlater's Motion, 'twas carried in the Negative by four Voices. The Earl of Oxford having, in the Courſe of this Debate, advanc'd, That if tho' the Malt-Tax were laid, it might be remitted by the Crown, and not levied: The Earl of Sunderland ſaid, He wondred ſuch Expreſſions, as tended to eſtabliſh a deſpotick diſpenſing Power, and arbi-

Oppos'd by the Scots Lords and Gentlemen.

A Motion for diſſolving the Union.

Lord North and Grey's indecent Reflection on the Scots.

Lord Peterborough's Speech,

anſwer'd by the Duke of Argyle.

Duke of Argyle concerning the Pretender.

The Earl of Scarſdale calls him Prince.

A.D. 1713

trary Government, ſhou'd come from that noble Lord. The Earl of Oxford, touch'd to the Quick by ſo juſt a Reproof, deſcended ſo low, as perſonal Reflection, ſaying, His Family had never been for promoting and adviſing Arbitrary Meaſures, as others had done; he having been made a Lord not many Months before, and his Family never in Station to give Counſel about State-Meaſures: This Eſcape of Malice and Vanity was the more remarkable. The Earl of Sunderland taking this as 'twas intended, to be a Reflection on his Father, vindicated him, and added, the other Lord's Family was hardly known in thoſe Days; ſuch new Men often meet with the like Rebuffs, when they take too much upon them, in the Preſence of thoſe, who, by the Nobility of their Anceſtry, have a Right to give a Check to their Forwardneſs and Petulance.

The Lord-Treaſurer's perſonal Reflection on the Earl of Sunderland.

The Earl of Sunderland retorts.

The next Day, June 2, the Lords reſum'd the Conſideration of the eighth and ninth Articles of the Treaty of Commerce, and heard ſome eminent Traders, particularly Mr. Cooke and Mr. Torriano; but they came to no Reſolution, intending to ſee what Turn that Matter wou'd take in the Houſe of Commons, who, in a grand Committee, June the 9th, took it again into Conſideration: Sir Robert Davers in the Chair, Mr. Cooke attending, was heard to it, in behalf of the Turkey Company, and ſpoke with great Solidity of Reaſon and Argument, and had the Applauſe of all who were not liſted on the other ſide of the Queſtion. He ſhew'd how detrimental the opening a Trade with France would be to the Britiſh Woollen and Silk Manufactures, and to all the Branches of our Trade. After he was withdrawn, General Stanhope, to corroborate what Mr. Cooke had alledg'd, quoted the Preamble to an Act of Parliament, made in the 13th Year of Charles II. which runs thus; Foraſmuch as it has been, by long Experience, found that the Importing of French Wines, Brandies, Linnens, Silk, Salt and Paper, and other Commodities of the Growth, Product or Manufactures of the Territories and Dominions of the French King, has much exhauſted the Treaſure of this Nation, leſſen'd the Value of the Native Commodities and Manufactures thereof, and caus'd great Detriment to this Kingdom. Be it therefore enacted, &c. Mr. Bromley, the Speaker, who prov'd not to be ſo well vers'd in theſe Things as General Stanhope, ſaid, There was no ſuch thing in that Act. Upon which the General inſiſted that the Clerk ſhould read the ſaid Act; and his Quotations appearing to be right, he and other Members, ſays the Annaliſt, animadverted with ſome Vehemence on the Speaker's Blunder.

Mr. Cook, the Merchant, heard againſt the French Committee Bill, and General Stanhope.

Mr. Wil. Bromley's Blunder animadverted on.

On the the 10th of June the Spaniſh, Italian and Portugal Merchants, and the Weavers of London, were heard upon their ſeveral Petitions. Mr. Torriano, who ſpoke in Behalf of the Spaniſh Trade, having animadverted on the eighth and ninth Articles of the Treaty of Commerce, and mention'd the tenth and eleventh, as relating to the two former, ſome of the Miniſter's Creatures were offended at it; and after he had done ſpeaking, mov'd, that a Mark of their Diſpleaſure might be ſet on him; but General Stanhope, Mr. Lechmere, Sir Peter King, and the late Speaker, Mr. Smith, ſaid, "That unleſs "they gave the Merchants full Liberty of "Speech, the Houſe would never be able to "form a right Judgment;" which, in truth, was what thoſe who were for the French Peace did not deſire to have found. "This, ſays our "Author, together with the noble Spirit which "appear'd in the Houſe on Behalf of the Mer- "chants by the great Number of Members both "Tory and Whig, who all at once ſtood up to "defend Mr. Torriano, made the Courtiers drop "that Matter;" and ſo Mr. Wyat, for the Italian Merchants; Mr. Milner, for the Portugal Merchants, and Colonel Lekeux, for the London Weavers, were heard to their ſeveral Petitions; as were other Petitioners the next Day. And a Motion being made, June 15, that the Bill ſhould be engroſs'd, it occaſioned a warm Debate from three o'Clock in the Afternoon 'till near eleven at Night. General Stanhope, Sir Peter King, Mr. Gould, Mr. Hampden, and others, expatiated on the Diſadvantages of an open Trade with France; and it was a pitiful Caſe that the Miniſters had no better Advocate for it than Arthur Moore, who, beſides that he was one of the chief Contrivers of the two Articles in Diſpute, and indeed of all the Articles of that wretched Treaty of Commerce, and conſequently was not heeded, as being a Party concerned, was but ill ſtock'd with any thing but Impudence for the Support of an Argument. What help'd very much to the throwing a Negative on this Bill, was a Speech of Sir Thomas Hanmer, who was at firſt for it, as might have been expected from a Perſon who was in the Depths of the Secret of the Utrecht Peace. But on the Queſtion for this Bill, he ſaid to this Purpoſe: That before he had fully examined the Affair, he had given his Vote for the bringing in the Bill; but that having afterwards maturely weighed, and conſider'd the Allegations of the Traders and Manufacturers in their ſeveral Petitions and Repreſentations, he was convinc'd, that the paſſing of it would be of great Prejudice to the Woollen and Silk Manufacture of this Kingdom, and conſequently increaſe the Number of the Poor, and in the End affect Land. That while he had the Honour to ſit in that Houſe, he would never be blindly led by any Miniſtry; neither on the other Hand was he biaſs'd by what might weigh with ſome Men; viz. the Fear of loſing their Elections. But that the Principles upon which he acted were the Intereſt of his Country, and the Conviction of his Judgment; and upon theſe two Conſiderations alone, he was againſt the Bill. This Speech made a great Impreſſion on many Members; and Mr. Aiſlabie, one of the Commiſſioners of the Admiralty proceeding on the ſame Principles, notwithſtanding his Place at the Board, and Mr. Fr. Anneſley, one of the Commiſſioners of the Publick Accompts, leaving the Miniſtry's Party on this Occaſion, the Bill was rejected by a Majority of 194 againſt 185, a full Houſe, conſidering the Seaſon, almoſt Midſummer. Sir William Withers, one of the London Members, and at that Time (for at another he went with the Whigs) a ſtaunch Tory, voted for the Bill. The three other London Members, Hoare, Caſs and Newland, voted againſt it, as was ſuppoſed, to ſecure their Election. Upon the News of the Bill's being thrown out, there were Bonfires and Illuminations in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and moſt other Cities and Trading Towns in England. It was reported, that the Earl of Oxford, being apprehenſive of the Fate of his Bill, wrote the Night before a Letter to the Speaker, deſiring him to uſe his Intereſt to have it dropp'd; but after the Speaker's late Blunder, and the Increaſe of the Oppoſition, it was not likely he would be able to effect it, the Negatives being reſolved to have it rejected with Diſgrace to the Promoters of it. However, the rejecting it being carried but by nine

A.D. 1713

More Merchants heard.

Sir Tho. Hanmer's Speech againſt the Bill.

And Mr. Aiſlabie.

Tories were for puniſhing Mr. Torriano the Merchant.

The Bill flung out.

The Lord Treaſurer writes to the Speaker to get the Bill dropt.

A.D.1713 nine Voices, the Miniſters deſpair'd not of procuring an Addreſs from their wonted Majority, to palliate the Matter, and ſkreen them from Inquiry and Puniſhment: And they ply'd Sir Thomas Hanmer ſo effectually with their Reaſons for confirming the Treaty of Commerce, as well as the Treaty of Peace, that notwithſtanding whatever the Merchants had ſaid to the Conviction of his Judgment againſt that ruinous Treaty, he made a Motion for an Addreſs, "To "thank her Majeſty for the great Care ſhe had "taken for the Security and Honour of her Kingdoms in the Treaty of Peace, and alſo for "what ſhe had done in the Treaty of Commerce "with France, by laying a good Foundation "for the Intereſts of her People in Trade, and "humbly to deſire her Majeſty, that ſhe would "be pleas'd to appoint Commiſſioners to treat "with Commiſſioners on the Part of France, "for adjuſting ſuch Matters as ſhould appear "more neceſſary to be ſettled by the Treaty of "Commerce, &c." It will not bear repeating: The Viſcount Bolingbroke had declar'd, that referring a thing to French Commiſſioners, was giving it up.

This Addreſs was carried by the Majority aforeſaid, and Sir Thomas Hanmer the next Day reported the Queen's Anſwer, which I know very well was the Earl of Oxford's and Viſcount Bolingbroke's Anſwer, and do grieve, with all good Britons, that ever they had an Opportunity to get ſuch Words delivered from the Throne. The Queen extols the Advantages in Trade gain'd for her Subjects. She thank'd them moſt heartily for that Addreſs, which ſo fully expreſs'd their Approbation of the Treaties of Peace and Commerce with France. Adding, It was with no ſmall Difficulty that ſo great Advantages in Trade were gain'd for her Subjects. I dare not ſpeak the Truth: Let the Citizens of London ſpeak for me, and they ſay in their Inſtructions to their Repreſentatives in the firſt Parliament of King George, that they ſhould enquire, By whoſe Advice and Management the beſt Branches of our Trade were exchang'd for Chimera's, and the Ruin of the whole endanger'd by a VILE Treaty of Commerce with France. Article 11. turn to the Annals.

Commons trick'd into Thanks by Mr. Wm. Bromley, &c. "This Anſwer ſurpriz'd many of the Mem"bers, who had readily gone into the Addreſs, "with no other Intentions than to approve the "Treaty of Peace, abſtracted from the Treaty "of Commerce. But the Speaker having early "the next Day reported that Anſwer to a very "thin Houſe, it was reſolv'd to return her Ma"jeſty Thanks for that too. However, tho' "the Miniſtry eſcap'd thus in a Miſt induſtriouſly "rais'd, yet ſome began to fear that this ugly "Affair of Trade would at laſt end in their utter Ruin, unleſs prevented by more deſperate "Meaſures, which, in all probability, from this "time forward they reſolved to purſue.

What Preparations they had made for ſuch deſperate Meaſures, will appear pretty plain in the Report of the Secret Committee, as follows:

The Miniſtry now enter upon deſperate Meaſures. It is evident, that ſome Negotiations which required more than ordinary Privacy, were verbally tranſacted; "And upon all Occaſions Abbot "Gualtier was the Perſon to whom the French "and Engliſh Miniſters mutually referr'd each "other. And as nothing could be a greater Se"cret than all Matters relating to the Pretender, "this Province was particularly allotted to Ab"bot Gualtier, that through his Hands, and "under his Conveyance, by French Couriers "going continually betwixt France and Eng"land, ſuch Practices might be carried on A.D.1713. "with great Safety, which in any other man"ner had been too dangerous an Undertaking. "The firſt time that any Secret Negotiation is "referr'd to Abbot Gualtier, is found in a Let"ter, where Mr. St. John, March 4, 17$\frac{11}{12}$, "tells Monſ. de Torcy, He has deferr'd writing to him of late 'till the neceſſary Diſpoſitions were made concerning our People at home, and 'till the Queen had taken the only Reſolution which could bring us in a ſhort time to a good and ſolid Peace. I have the Satisfaction to tell you, that this Reſolution is taken, and that Mr. Harley will carry with him this Night, or to Morrow Morning, the final Inſtructions of the Queen to her Plenipo's. I refer to Mr. Gualtier, to explain to you more at large this Gentleman's Commiſſion, and what the Queen hopes his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty will do to operate with her. They make uſe of Gualtier, the Pretender's Agent.

"It is not to be expected that thoſe who "have been ſo careful to ſuppreſs Matters of "leſs Importance, would leave behind them any "Tranſactions that might tend directly to fa"vour the Cauſe of the Pretender; but as the "Committee has obſerved ſeveral Paſſages, "which are a plain Indication of the Regard "with which the Cauſe and Perſon of the Pre"tender were treated as often as mentioned, "they thought fit to bring them together, and "lay them before the Houſe in one View. "There is a Paper that was left in Lord Bo"lingbroke's Cloſet, dated at Verſailles, Sept. "24, 1711, endors'd as other Office-Papers uſu"ally are. It gives an Account, that the Pope's "Nuncio had, in his laſt Audience of the King, "made the following Declaration. The Court of Rome being fully inform'd that France was endeavouring to procure a Peace upon the moſt advantageous Terms that was poſſible, and being perſwaded that if the Peace ſhould be made, England would not ſuffer that the King of France ſhould permit the Prince of Wales to continue in his Realms, the Court of Rome offers to the King of France to give this Prince an Aſylum at Rome, or in any other Part of the Eccleſiaſtical Dominions. To which the King of France return'd in Anſwer, That an Aſylum for the Prince of Wales would be no Obſtacle to the Peace. That if the Allies did really deſign to make Peace, he would accept of any reaſonable Propoſitions they ſhould make, and in this Caſe, an Article for the Prince of Wales would be inſerted in the Treaty. June the 7th, 1712, the Biſhop of Briſtol, giving an Account to the Lord Bolingbroke of ſome Diſcourſe he had with ſome of the Miniſters of the Allies, ſays, Conſbruck, one of the Emperor's Plenipo's, kept alſo within the Terms of Decency, ſave only, that he took it for granted that the great End of all this Management on our Part, was to bring in the Pretender; which Apprehenſion one of the Miniſters of the States own'd in private Diſcourſe to have been the fundamental Reaſon of all their Conduct of late. "It cannot be forgot what "great Streſs and Weight was laid upon the Re"moval of the Pretender out of the Domini"ons of France. This is what all the Nation "with great Juſtice expected, and what the "Queen declared was taken Care of as an Ad"ditional Security to the Proteſtant Succeſſion; "but his removing out of France, and being "permitted to reſide in Lorain, was not only "a great Surprize to all the Nation, but was "receiv'd with ſuch Indignation, that the Par"liament addreſs'd the Queen upon this Occa"ſion, That ſhe would inſiſt upon his Removal Their Concerns for the Pretender.

A.D. 1713

from Lorain, that Reſidence being equally, or more dangerous to Great-Britain than his Abode in France. Her Majeſty anſwer'd, that ſhe would repeat her Inſtances: "Which occaſion'd in the "Houſe of Lords a becoming Reſentment, that "the Duke of Lorain would preſume to receive "and entertain the Pretender to her Crown, in "Defiance to her Majeſty's Application to the "contrary. This will be enlarg'd upon hereafter. "But it will now appear in what manner the "Removal of the Pretender out of France was "ſettled, and that his reſiding in Lorain was not "only with the Approbation, but even by the Di-"rection and Appointment of the Engliſh Miniſtry. "Mr. St. John, in his Letter to Monſ. Torcy, "May 24, 1712, concludes with ſaying, He hopes that with the general Repoſe, we ſhall ſee renew'd in a few Weeks a good Underſtanding between two Nations, which may become to each other the moſt uſeful Friends, for the ſame Reaſon they have been the moſt formidable Enemies. The Queen commands me to tell you, that ſhe hopes when you ſend an Anſwer to this Letter, we ſhall have an Account that the Chevalier has begun his Journey. In anſwer to this Monſ. de Torcy ſays, You may aſſure the Queen, that the Chevalier is ready to depart at a Moment's Warning, if he did but know where he is to go, and in what Place he might be in Safety. I own to you that I know no Prince who is willing to receive him, for fear of diſpleaſing the Queen, or other Powers. It will be abſolutely neceſſary, that there be ſome Explanation upon this Subject, which I deſire you to make to me by the Abbot Gualtier, if you do not judge it proper to do it your ſelf. Mr. St. John, "June 6, 1712, O. S. writes a publick Letter "in anſwer to the ſeveral Points contain'd in "M. de Torcy's laſt Letter, but in that takes no "notice at all of the Chevalier: But the Day "after, June 7, he writes a private Letter, as he calls it himſelf, to Monſ. de Torcy, and concludes, The Abbot Gualtier will write to you upon the Subject of the Chevalier; who ſtaying ſtill in France, Mr. Prior wrote thus concerning him, December 28, 1712. "A further Point upon "which the Queen is very ſollicitous is, that the "Chevalier remaining in any Town of France, "obſtructs the ſigning of the Peace, yet he can-"not go to Lorain 'till the Emperor's Paſſports "will ſecure him there. Your Lordſhip by the "Peruſal of the Papers will ſee the State of that "Caſe; and I have only to add upon this Sub-"ject, that the Court of France expreſſes an "Impoſſibility on their Side to do more than "they have done, and hopes we ſhould have "Intereſt enough with the Emperor, to obtain "ſuch Paſſports from him, as may ſecure as well "the Perſon who is to go into Lorain, as the "Duke of Lorain, who is to receive him." Mr. Prior on the 29th writes to the ſame effect to the Lord-Treaſurer, and ſays, The Monarch is a good deal troubled upon this Head, leſt the young Man ſhould fall into the Hands of the Huſſars and Barbarians; and Monſ. d'Aumont has, I preſume, Orders to ſpeak to our Miniſtry upon it. As to the Dowry, I ſhall not only be dunn'd to Death, but hang'd. [We ſhall find preſently he and all of them richly deſerv'd it] for the Dowager ſends Meſſengers to me, which you in England do not think it extreamly lawful to receive. But if it is to be paid, pray let it be done in a handſome Manner, that may ſhew the Charity of the Queen, and the Generoſity of her Lord-Treaſurer. For a Perſon whom to correſpond with was Treaſon by Law. "The Papers re-

The Miniſtry direct the Pretender's Reſidence in Lorain.

A.D. 1713

"fer'd to in Mr. Prior's Letter, contains an Ac-"count of what the Duke of Lorain had done "at the Deſire of the King of France, to ob-"tain from the Allies the neceſſary Safeguards for "the Chevalier." He ſays, That underſtanding the Queen of Great-Britain had already granted her Safeguard, or Protection, to the Chevalier de St. George, he believ'd they had no more to do but to apply to the Emperor, and to the States-General. "By this Account it is evident, that the Abbot "Gualtier managed the Affairs of the Pretender, "with whom ſuch Practices were verbally to be "tranſacted, as our own Miniſters did not think "proper to commit to Writing. That the "Place to which he was to go, becauſe no body "would receive him at the Hazard of the "Queen's Diſpleaſure, and where he might re-"main in Safety, was to be preſcrib'd from "England; that this was not fix'd and deter-"min'd 'till Lord Bolingbroke went into France. "And if his Inſtructions are conſider'd, it will "be hard to find in them any thing of that Im-"portance and Secrecy, as to requ re his going in "Perſon to ſettle it. He gives an Account from "thence that the Pretender was to go to Bar, "and this is acquieſced in here without the leaſt "Objection made." The Miniſtry are told by Mr. Prior, That the Court of France hopes by our Intereſt, ſuch Paſſports might be procur'd as might ſecure his Perſon. And in the Paper ſent "to France from the Duke of Lorain, it is aſ-"ſerted, that the Queen of Great-Britain had "already granted her Protection to the Pre-"tender."

The Queen's Protection granted to the Pretender.

Was it not high time for all good Engliſhmen to ſhew the Extent of their Zeal for the Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion; when, notwithſtanding ſo many Declarations from the Throne, that Nothing was more at Heart than the ſecuring it, Protection is granted to the Impoſtor, who laid Claim to the Crown as well of the Poſſeſſor as the Succeſſor. On the 30th of June, the E. of Wharton mov'd in the Houſe of Lords, That an Addreſs be preſented to the Queen, that ſhe would be pleaſed to uſe her moſt preſſing Inſtances with the Duke of Lorain, and with all the Princes and States in Amity and Correſpondence with her Majeſty, that they would not receive, or ſuffer to continue within their Dominions, the Pretender to the Imperial Crown of theſe Realms. Several Members being ſurpriz'd at this unexpected Motion, which was deſign'd to try the Inclinations of ſome Perſons, there was a Pauſe for a while. At laſt the Lord North and Grey, who in Breach of Oaths and Abjurations, did afterwards openly eſpouſe that Pretender's Intereſt, broke Silence, and endeavour'd to have that Motion laid aſide, repreſenting, "That ſuch an Addreſs would "ſhew a Diſtruſt either of the Queen, or of her "Miniſters, and that her Majeſty would be "puzzled what to do, in caſe the Princes and "States in Amity with her ſhould be unwilling "to comply with her Inſtances, ſince it would "not be in her Power to compel them. He concluded with aſking, Where they would have the Pretender reſide, ſince moſt, if not all the Powers in Europe, were in Amity with her Majeſty? A notable Queſtion truly! Let him reſide where he would, what Matter was it to us, as long as he was far enough off from his traiterous Faction in England. The Earl of Peterborough anſwer'd, Since he began his Studies at Paris, the fitteſt Place for him to improve himſelf was Rome. The Earl of Oxford endeavouring to have the Motion laid aſide, or a Negative to be put upon it, it, was taken up with ſome Warmth by the Earl of Wharton, whoſe ſuperiour Genius, and perfect Knowledge of that of his Antagoniſt, gave him great Advantages over him in this and other Debates. The Queſtion being put, it was carried in the Affirmative; and the Addreſs to the Purport of the Motion being preſented to the Queen July 2, ſhe was pleaſed to anſwer, That ſhe took extream kindly their Addreſs, and the Thanks they gave her for what ſhe had done for eſtabliſhing the Proteſtant Succeſſion; that ſhe ſhould repeat her Inſtances to have that Perſon removed according to their Deſire, and that ſhe promis'd herſelf they would concur with her; that if they would cure their Animoſities and Diviſions at Home, it would be the moſt effectual Method to ſecure the Proteſtant Succeſſion. By Animoſities and Diviſions in this and the like Anſwers, ſince Sacheverel's Sedition, we are to underſtand the Oppoſition of our Patriots and their Adherents, to the Beginning, Progreſs and Concluſion of the Treaty of a diſhonourable, diſadvantagious Peace, with the inveterate Enemy to our Country, Religion and Liberty, and to all the ſcandalous ruinous Meaſures of the then Miniſtry, whoſe ſecret Inclinations to deprive us of the ineſtimable Bleſſing of the Proteſtant Succeſſion, we have had ſome Light into, and ſhall have more. Yet the only way to ſecure that Succeſſion was, it ſeems, to let thoſe Miniſters go on, without Interruption, with their Endeavours to deſtroy it. The Lord-Chancellor Harcourt having reported the Queen's Anſwer to the Houſe of Peers, the Duke of Buckinghamſhire, Lord-Preſident, very frankly ſaid, He had never heard of any Inſtances that had yet been made to the Duke of Lorain, for removing the Pretender out of his Dominions. Had either of the two Principal Secretaries of State been in the Houſe, they might have explain'd her Majeſty's Anſwer; but being both at Dinner with the Duke d'Aumont, the French Ambaſſador, the Earl of Sunderland took that Opportunity to make a Motion for a ſecond Addreſs, which was ſeconded by the Earl of Nottingham, and after ſome Oppoſition, it was order'd, "That an humble Addreſs be "preſented to her Majeſty, to return her Thanks "for her Anſwer to their Addreſs, and for the "Aſſurances ſhe had been pleaſed to give them "of repeating her Inſtances for removing the "Pretender, and to expreſs their Surprize, "that ſuch Inſtances had not had their full Effect, notwithſtanding the French King and "King of Spain had ſhewed their Compliance "to her Majeſty's Deſires on that Occaſion: "And to aſſure her Majeſty, that this Houſe "would ſtand by her, and ſupport her in whatever her Majeſty ſhould judge proper for obtaining a Demand which was ſo warranted by "the Laws of Nations, and ſo neceſſary for "the Honour and Safety of her Majeſty, and "for the preſent and future Peace and Quiet of "the People." Whether the Queen, as Lord North and Grey ſaid, was puzzled, or whether the Miniſters were, and could not tell what Anſwer to make to ſo reaſonable an Addreſs, certainly it had no Anſwer, and both the Addreſſes were for ſome time thrown by as waſte Paper.

A.D.1713 Addreſs againſt receiving the Pretender abroad.

The Queen's Anſwer.

Another Addreſs againſt the Pretender.

Both rejected.

The next Day after the Earl of Wharton made the above-mention'd Motion in the Houſe of Lords, General Stanhope made a like Motion in the Houſe of Commons, and was ſeconded by Mr. Lechmere. The only Objection that was rais'd againſt it was ſtarted by Sir William Whitlock, Son to the famous Parliamentarian Bulſtrode Whitlock, who ſaid, He remembred that the like Addreſs was made to the Protector, almoſt threeſcore Years before, for having Charles Stuart remov'd out of France; notwithſtanding which that Prince was ſome time after reſtored to his Father's Throne. If this antiquated Knight had no more Law left in him than Politicks, he muſt have little Conſcience to take Fees for his Counſel. Was the Pretender's Father as well known, and his Right as well eſtabliſh'd as Charles Stuart's? Beſides, had it not been for Deſerters and Renegadoes, ſuch as was the Compoſition of the new Miniſtry, Charles Stuart, as he calls him, might have wander'd from one Place to another as long as he liv'd, which will be the Fate of the Pretender. The Tory Members not caring to hazard their Elections for the next Parliament, which were coming on, fell in with General Stanhope's Motion, and it paſs'd Nemine Contradicente, "That an humble Addreſs be preſented "to her Majeſty, acknowledging the great Care "her Majeſty had always taken, particularly in "the late Treaties of Peace and Guaranty, to "prevent the Pretender to her Throne being in "a Condition to diſturb theſe Realms; and to "beſeech her Majeſty that ſhe would uſe the "moſt preſſing Inſtances with the Duke of Lorain, and with all other Princes and States in "Amity or Correſpondence with her Majeſty, "that they would not, under any Pretext whatſoever, receive, or ſuffer to continue within "any of their Dominions, the Perſon, who in "Definace of her Majeſty's undoubted Title to "the Crown, and the Settlement thereof in the "Illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover, had aſſumed "the Title of King of theſe Realms; and to "aſſure her Majeſty, that the Commons of "Great-Britain would, on all Occaſions, ſupport her Majeſty in ſuch Steps as ſhould be neceſſary towards rendring thoſe Inſtances effectual."

The Commons Addreſs to the like Purpoſe.

This Addreſs was preſented by the whole Houſe five Days after, and her Majeſty anſwer'd coldly, She thank'd them for it, and would give Directions according to their Deſire. All this while the Miniſters knew full well that the Pretender was in Lorain by their own Management, and under the Protection of the Queen. The Magnificence with which he was receiv'd in that Dutchy, was exaggerated, to keep up the Spirits of his Party, which indeed were all this time ſo far from languiſhing, that ſome of them had the Impudence to avow their treaſonable Principles in Addreſſes to her Majeſty, which were ſo far from being diſcountenanc'd, that they were printed in the London Gazette.

We ſhall ſee preſently what a Farce the Miniſtry led the two Houſes into, by concealing from them their being the Movers in the Pretender's Reſidence in Lorain, which occaſion'd Addreſſes againſt what her Majeſty and they themſelves had done, and the returning Thanks for Anſwers which were never intended to be perform'd. But the moſt deplorable Circumſtances of the Management of theſe evil Counſellors, are the appointing a Day of Faſting for procuring a bad Peace, and a Day of Thankſgiving for the concluding it. The former has been mention'd already; the latter was appointed to be the 7th Day of July, to render Thanks to the Almighty God for a Safe and Honourable Peace. Let us once more ſee the Senſe of the City of London on this Subject, the Thankſgiving being celebrated with a great Affectation of Pomp in their own Cathe-

A Day of Thankſgiving for a bad Peace.

A. D. 1713 Cathedral St. Paul's, and we ſhall find that Senſe in a Letter to the Liverymen of the City of London, which had great Influence on the Election of Members, a Year and half after this Thankſgiving-Day. The Author tells the Citizens, among other things, I might mention to you the deplorable Condition to which the Iniquity and Folly of the Men lately in Power had reduc'd the Trade of this Kingdom in general, and of this City in particular, by the Pernicious and Deſtructive Treaties of Peace and Commerce. To thank God in ſo ſolemn a manner for ſuch a Peace, what a Tremor does it put one into to think of it? The Annaliſt ſays, "The Abſence of the Whig Mem- "bers, was from their taking it to be a down- "right Mockery of Religion, to return God Al- "mighty thanks for a Peace which they had ſtre- "nuouſly oppos'd, and ſtill loudly condemn'd." However, the Rabble, who had been kept warm by Lampoons and Ballads ever ſince the Doctor was impeach'd and condemn'd, made Bonfires and Illuminations, and magnificent Fireworks were play'd off on the Thames, whether by Accident or on Purpoſe, over againſt Whitehall, where more magnificent Fireworks had been ſhewn for the Birth of the ſuppoſitious Prince of Wales. The Queen being ill of the Gout, went not to St. Paul's on this Occaſion, but nine Days after her Majeſty was ſo well recover'd as to come to the Houſe of Peers and paſs ſeveral publick and private Acts, which done, ſhe ſpoke to this Effect:

The Queen glories again in the Advantages of this Peace.

"That ſhe came to put an End to that Seſſion "with great Satisfaction, and to return them "All her hearty Thanks for the good Service "they had done the Publick. She more parti- "cularly thank'd the Commons for their Sup- "plies, and recommended to them All to make "her Subjects truly ſenſible what they had gain'd "by the Peace, and that they would endeavour "to diſſipate thoſe groundleſs Jealouſies which "had been ſo induſtriouſly fomented amongſt "us; that our unhappy Diviſions might not "weaken, and in ſome ſort endanger the Ad- "vantages ſhe had obtain'd to her Kingdoms." This ſo often Repetition of things contradictory to People's Seeing and Feeling, was doubtleſs an Effect of the Treaſurer's Contempt of People's Senſes and Underſtandings, and of his Politicks to ſay any thing that ſerv'd the preſent Turn, let wiſe and ſober Perſons take it as they pleas'd. Theſe Advantages are ſpoken of in the firſt Speech made by the noble and worthy Spencer Compton, Eſq; Speaker of King George's firſt Parliament, to his then Majeſty: Your Commons could not ſee, without the utmoſt Indignation, the Glory of her late Majeſty's Reign tarniſh'd by a treacherous Ceſſation of Arms; the Faith of Treaties violated, that ancient Probity for which the Engliſh Nation had been juſtly renown'd throughout all Ages, expos'd to Scorn and Contempt, and the Trade of the Kingdom given up by inſidious and precarious Treaties of Commerce; whilſt the People amus'd with new Worlds explor'd, were contented to ſee the moſt advantageous Branches of their Commerce in Europe loſt or betray'd.

After the Queen had ended her Speech, with remembring to encourage Church Principles, and reduce the Spirit of Faction, the Parliament was prorogu'd to the 25th of July, and before that Day diſſolv'd, having left upon it, ſays the Annaliſt, a ſtrong Imputation of CORRUPTION. Be that as it will, it left upon it moſt certainly a ſtrong Imputation of a blind and abject Obedience to the Directions of a Miniſtry, whoſe Memory will ever be had in Abhorrence by all good Britons. A. D. 1713

The Sentence by which Sacheverel was forbid to preach for three Years, expiring in March this Year, his Rabble made Bonfires and Rejoycings every where, as if ſome extraordinary Felicity had happen'd to them; and that inſignificant Tool, as he was term'd at his Trial, in his firſt Sermon, made, to uſe the Annaliſt's Words, a tacit, but an obvious arrogant Parallel between his Sufferings and thoſe of our bleſſed Saviour. That he was the Miniſter's Tool, appears by the Treaſurer's Hiſtorian, in his Book entituled, The White Staff; but as Inſignificant as he was otherwiſe, they got the Queen to give him one of the beſt Benefices in England, that of St. Andrew's Holbourn, and he made a ſawcy Scoundrel, his Footman, Clerk of that great and populous Pariſh. About the ſame time Dr. Atterbury, afterwards an Exile in France for his treaſonable Practices, was advanced by them to the See of Rocheſter, and Dr. Smalridge, who was ſaid to have had a great Hand in Sacheverel's Speech, to that of Briſtol. The Earl of Dorſet, a Nobleman of great Parts and ſteady Attachment to the Intereſt of the Houſe of Hanover, was remov'd from being Governor of Dover, and Warden of the Cinque-Ports, to make room for the Duke of Ormond and his Son-in-Law, the Lord Aſhburnham, in thoſe Poſts, and not long after the Duke had a Penſion of 5000 l. per Ann. ſettled upon him in Conſideration of his eminent Services, for which, however, he was in leſs than two Years impeach'd and attainted for High-Treaſon, by Act of Parliament. Berwick alſo was put by them into truſty Hands, and Sir Henry Bellaſiſe, who diſtinguiſh'd himſelf ſo notably at Port St. Mary's, when he was there with the Duke of Ormond, in the Beginning of this Reign, was again taken into Service. The Earl of Portland was order'd to diſpoſe of his Poſt of Colonel and Captain of the firſt Troop of Horſe-Guards, which was given alſo to the Lord Aſhburnham. Sir John Powel, one of the Judges of the Queen's-Bench, dying, was ſucceeded by Sir Thomas Powis, one of the Council againſt the Biſhops in King James's time. James Cardonnel, Eſq; late Secretary to the Duke of Marlborough, was turn'd out of his Place as Commiſſioner of the Salt-Office, and was ſucceeded by Martin Killegrew, Eſq;. His Grace the Duke of Montagu having obtain'd the Queen's Leave to travel beyond Sea, generouſly reſolv'd to ſtay abroad, and follow the Fortune of the Duke of Marlborough his Father-in-Law. The Duke of Montroſe, having ſignaliz'd himſelf by his Zeal for the Proteſtant Succeſſion, was remov'd from his Place of Lord Privy-Seal of Scotland, and was ſucceeded by the Duke of Athol; "which Change, ſays the "Annaliſt, rather increas'd than abated the pre- "ſent Ferment in that Part of Great-Britain: "For on one Hand the Preſbyterian Miniſters "refus'd to obſerve the Publick Thankſgiving- "Day for the Peace, and their Conduct was a tacit Reproof of thoſe, who calling themſelves the Servants of the moſt High, in the other Part of Great-Britain, comply'd ſo far with the Orders of State, as to mock him even at the Altar, and thank him for the Calamities which were like to be the Conſequences of that dangerous and diſgraceful Treaty. "On the other Hand the Friends of the "Pretender preſuming on the Connivance of the "Government, or their Strength, made great Pre- "parations to celebrate his Birth-Day in Scotland.

Sacheverel compares his being ſilenc'd for three Years to the Sufferings of Chriſt.

Lords and Gentlemen turn'd out of Place by the Miniſtry.

A.D. 1713 In this Place let us inſert a few more Anecdotes of theſe rare Times. Beſides the ſeveral ſevere Pieces that were now publiſh'd againſt the Miniſtry, by Mr. Maynwaring, Mr. Steele, &c. by Direction of the Leaders of the Whigs, who were always upon the watch to detect and obviate every Step that was taken either at Home or Abroad in favour of the ignominious Peace, or ſpurious Pretender, it may be remember'd that the News-Paper, call'd the Flying-Poſt, gave ſuch broad Hints from time to time, of the Deſigns of the Jacobite Party, and ſuch ſharp Invectives againſt their Managers, as made both the Queen and her Miniſtry very uneaſy, they knowing very well that the honeſt Paragraphs againſt them ſent to that Paper, came from the moſt noble and beſt inſtructed Hands. There were three Papers in particular, for which the Author being proſecuted, and oblig'd to fly his Country, I ſhall mention the Paragraphs for which the Informations againſt him were fil'd in the Court of Queen's-Bench, and give a little Account of the Proceedings thereupon, from ſome Minutes taken at the Trial; the rather, becauſe tho' it made a great Noiſe at that time, I don't meet with it in any of our State-Trials.

The Proſecution of Mr. Ridpath.

In the Flying-Poſt of July 5, 1712, was the following Letter, ſaid to be from a very good Hand at Paris, dated June 20, N. S.

" The Chevalier de St. George is at Chaillot, " where he is to be retired ſome Days, and lay " aſide the Title of King. 'Tis not yet ſaid what " other Title he will take, tho' 'tis not doubted " but it will be that of Prince of Wales, and " that all this is done in concert, becauſe it would " not be convenient for him to go to England " with the Title of King, but with that of the " Preſumptive Heir, &c. 'Tis not known whi- " ther he is to go from hence at firſt, but only " that he is to ſet out as ſoon as the Peace ſhall " be declar'd."

Flying-Poſt of September 4, 1712. " If the " Allies don't come to a General Peace within " four Months, a Peace will be concluded be- " twixt France and Great-Britain excluſive of " them. The French flatter themſelves that " Great-Britain will join with them to force " the Allies to a Peace, and that the Pretender " is to be aſſociated with in the Sovereignty."

Flying-Poſt, September 30. " I deſire you " would be ſo good as to print the Abjuration- " Oath at large, for the uſe of the Inferior " Clergy, who, by their common Diſcourſe, " wou'd make one believe either that they have " forgotten what they have ſworn, or that " they value their Oaths no more than their " Subſcriptions.

The firſt Article ſo enrag'd the French and Jacobite Faction, that at the Quarter-Seſſions held the Week following for Weſtminſter, they procur'd a Preſentment againſt it by the Grand Jury upon their Oaths, as a Paper containing diverſe malicious and unaccountable Inſinuations, and indirect Practices, whereby to make a Difference between her Majeſty's Subjects, and prevent the Peace now under the Conſideration of her Majeſty, and both Houſes of Parliament. And on the 8th of September following Mr. George Ridpath, a Native of Scotland, was taken up upon Suſpicion of being the Author, carried before a Committee of Council at the Cockpit, and tho' he had Bail ready, could not get Leave to ſend for them, but was inſtantly hurry'd to Newgate, where, rather than lie on the Common-Side amongſt Felons, he was forc'd to give near Five Pounds for one Night's Lodging. However, A.D. 1713. he was next Day admitted to Bail before the Lord Chief-Juſtice Parker; Grey Nevil, Eſq; of Billingbear in Berkſhire, and Walter Steuart, Merchant of London, being each bound in 300 l. for his Appearance the next Term, and himſelf in 600 l.

He appear'd accordingly, with his Printer, at the Court of Queen's Bench, the firſt Day of Michaelmas Term, from whence he was continued upon his Recognizance 'till the Sittings after Hillary Term $17\frac{12}{13}$, when, upon the 19th of February, his Trial came on at Guildhall, before the Lord Chief-Juſtice Parker.

It was ſet forth in the firſt Information, that a Negotiation of Peace being on foot, the Defendant (who was therein term'd) a ſeditious Perſon, and a notorious Inventer and Framer of Libels, did, on the 5th of July laſt, publiſh the Libel firſt mention'd, in favour of the Pretender, and to ſtir up the People to a ſeditious Diſlike of the ſaid Negotiations. The Impudence of this was the more daring, for that thoſe that drew the Information knew it to be a Lye, and that Ridpath wou'd do nothing in favour of the Pretender.

The Council for the Queen, who were Sir Edward Northey, Attorney-General, Sir Robert Raymond, Sollicitor-General, and Sir Thomas Powis, Serjeant at Law, one of the Council againſt the ſeven Biſhops, having aggravated their Charge in the moſt odious Terms that it could poſſibly admit of, call'd their Witneſſes (which were but two) one of whom, the Devil (which is the common Nickname for Runners to and from the Preſs) had been ſecreted from his Maſter the Printer, and fed and cloath'd on purpoſe to be a Witneſs for the Proſecutors; and the other was a Preſs-man, both whoſe Depoſitions amounted to no more than this, that the Copy of the Papers in queſtion was indeed fetched from the Defendant's Houſe, in order to be printed and publiſh'd, but that only a part of it was in the Defendant's Hand-writing, the reſt being written by Mr. Whatley, his Aſſiſtant; and that ſometimes the Defendant, and ſometimes Mr. Whatley, and ſometimes both of them, corrected the Paper. Of theſe two Evidences, the Lord Chief Juſtice himſelf obſerv'd, that he they called the Devil, was no better a Witneſs than a Carrier's Horſe, becauſe it appear'd in Court, that he could neither write nor read; and as for the other doughty Evidence, the Preſs-man, the Publick may judge what Credit ought to be given to his Teſtimony, ſince the Devil himſelf depoſed at the Bar upon Oath, that he ſaid, It wou'd never be well 'till the Pretender was here, and that he hop'd to ſee the Maſs-Houſes as full as the Churches.

The pack'd Evidence againſt him.

The Attorney-General was pleas'd to obſerve to the Jury, that the Defendant had for ſome Years outſtripp'd all his Predeceſſors in Scandal, and that the like is not ſuffer'd in any Nation in the World. Both himſelf and the other Council argu'd, that the Word concert could be applicable to nothing elſe but concerting with the Queen; and if Libellers were ſuffer'd to dreſs up Perſons and Things in ſeeming Diſguiſe, but in ſuch Terms as may be underſtood by every Body except a Judge and Jury, we are in a ſad Caſe.

I am well aſſur'd, that there was a former Information drawn up againſt this Paper, in which a different Inuendo was put upon the Word concert, viz. in concert with the Queen and her Miniſtry; which ſhews, how little Streſs is to be laid upon Inuendoes, when they are capable of

*A.D.*1713 different Conſtructions by ſome of the greateſt Men of the long Robe. And upon this Occaſion 'tis worth while to remember the firſt of the Reaſons upon which the Houſe of Lords revers'd a Judgment given againſt Sir Samuel Barnardiſton; which Reaſon was as follows, viz. "The "Information in this Caſe being grounded upon "Letters, which in themſelves were not ma- "terial, but made ſo by Inuendoes, their Lord- "ſhips declar'd, that Inuendoes, or ſuppoſed or "forced Conſtructions, ought not to be allow- "ed; for all Accuſations ſhould be plain, and "the Crimes aſcertain'd." And if the Reader will but give himſelf the Trouble to turn back to her Majeſty's Speech, and the Lords and Commons Addreſſes to her upon the Pretender's Invaſion in 1708, he will find the Myſtery of a Concert fully explain'd, ſince they all aſcribe that deſperate Attempt, which was proſecuted with ſo few Ships and Troops, to a Concert with ſome of her Subjects of reſtleſs Paſſions and arbitrary Principles, who had miſrepreſented the Inclinations, Intereſts and Actions of her beſt Subjects, and created Jealouſies in her of thoſe who had ſerv'd her Majeſty moſt eminently and faithfully.

The Defendant's Council were ſix of the moſt eminent that ever were call'd to the Bar: All but one of them have ſince been advanc'd to the Bench, and three of them to the Peerage of Great-Britain, and to the Privy-Council. They were

Mr. Serjeant Pratt, afterwards Lord Chief-Juſtice of the King's-Bench, and a Commiſſioner of the Great-Seal.

Sir Peter King, Recorder of London, afterwards Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, Lord King, and Lord High-Chancellor of Great-Britain.

Nicholas Lechmere, Eſq; afterwards Attorney-General, Lord Lechmere, and Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaſter, durante Vitâ.

Sir John St. Leger, afterwards Baron of the Exchequer in Ireland.

Charles Talbot, Eſq; afterwards Sollicitor and Attorney-General, and now Lord Talbot, and Lord High-Chancellor.

William Cowper, Eſq; Nephew to Earl Cowper.

I have not room to give all, or indeed the Subſtance of all the Arguments of thoſe learned Gentlemen in Defence of their Client, but ſhall mention what I think ought ever to be remember'd to their Honour, as obſerv'd by all who attended the Trial, that they exerted themſelves with as much Zeal in his Behalf, as if their Hearts, more than their Fees (which I am aſſur'd were not ſmall) engag'd them in his Cauſe; inſomuch, that the Attorney-General Northey complain'd to the Court, how hard it was that the Queen's Council ſhould be ſtorm'd out of a Proſecution. The Council for the Defendant, after having ſhewn in what manner this Proſecution had been ſpirited up, argued that the Words in the firſt Paper meant concerting with the French King: That neither of the three Papers was libellous; and that the Information againſt the firſt was not ſufficiently prov'd, unleſs it was prov'd by Authorities under the Great-Seal, that a Negotiation of Peace was on foot, and that there was ſuch a Perſon as the Chevalier de St. George.

The 2d Paper was not ſufficiently prov'd; and as to the third, the Defendant's Council pleaded, that it ought not to be applicable to the Clergy of the Church of England only: But the Queen's Council wou'd not allow of this Plea, becauſe, tho' there were Preachers and Teachers of other Congregations, yet the Law knew none by the Name of Clergy but thoſe of the Church of England. Fine Divinity this, and fine Reaſoning! To conclude: After the Trial had laſted eight Hours, the Defendant's Council would have prevail'd on the Court to leave it Special; which not being comply'd with, they then ſtickled hard, and tender'd a Demurrer, but it wou'd not be receiv'd. And then the Lord Chief-Juſtice having ſumm'd up the whole with great Judgment and Candor, left it to the Jury; who, in about a half quarter of an Hour, brought the Defendant in guilty of the firſt and third Libels, and that the one meant the Queen, and no Body elſe, and the other the Clergy of the Church of England, the worſt part of them no doubt, for the beſt of them were aſham'd of this Proſecution. *A.D.*1713

However, a Bill of Exceptions was ſign'd in Court before the Verdict was allow'd, in order to have the Matter argu'd before the Lord Chief-Juſtice, and the other Judges of the Queen's-Bench. And after the Trial was over, the Preſsman above-mention'd was bound over to anſwer for the Treaſonable and Popiſh Expreſſions then charg'd upon him by his Fellow Evidence the Printer's Devil, who was alſo bound over to be Evidence againſt him; and one Took was likewiſe bound over for tampering with the other Evidence againſt Mr. Ridpath in Court; but the Devil was committed to Hard Labour at Bridewell in about a Month after, by a Warrant from Sir William Withers, for ſtealing ſome Plate; and ſo we heard no more of this Proſecution, nor indeed of Mr. Ridpath's, who being adviſ'd to go beyond Sea by his Friends, who foreſaw that the Intention of Mr. St. John, &c. was to put him in the Pillory, and there to expoſe him to the Rage of their Mobs, ſurrender'd his Perſon and Effects to his Bail, and with their Conſent, and being furniſhed with Money by the very Gentleman who at the ſame time was at his own Expence proſecuting D. Foe, Pettis and other Libellers, for writing againſt the Hanover Succeſſion, he left London. The Libel written by Pettis was entitled, Jus Sacrum, or a Diſcourſe wherein it is fully prov'd, that no Prince ought to be depriv'd of his Natural Right on Account of Religion, &c. and 'tis remarkable that both he and D. Foe had already been elevated to the Pillory.

Mr. Ridpath ſet out at Midnight, about the latter End of April, for Scotland; and after a ſhort ſtay at Colonel Areſkine's fine Seat in the Shire of Fife, being cloſely purſu'd by Bolingbroke's Greyhounds, who firſt got Scent of him at Sir William Strickland's Seat in the North, where he had harbour'd for a Day or two, in his Way to Scotland, he ſet out in a ſmall Veſſel for Holland. While he was there he wrote two ſeaſonable Pamphlets, the one call'd, Parliamentary Right maintain'd, or the Hanover Succeſſion juſtified, in anſwer to Dr. Bedford's Hereditary Right of the Crown of England aſſerted; and the other entitled, The new Project examin'd, or the Deſign of the Faction to deprive the Family of Hanover of the Power to name Lords Juſtices, anatomiz'd. His Friends in England took care to follow him to Holland with Recommendations to proper Perſons on that Side of the Water, by whom he was protected and countenanc'd, and afterwards preſented to King George, when he came to the Hague, in his Progreſs to the Throne of Great-

A.D.1713 Great-Britain. Mean while Bolingbroke offer'd a Reward of One hundred Pounds in the Gazette, and Poſt-Boy, for apprehending Mr. Ridpath; and was ſo inrag'd to ſee the Flying-Poſt ſtill carried on with the ſame Spirit, that his Recognizances were order'd to be eſtreated for Non-appearance; but by ſome Accident or other the Matter was put off from time to time, 'till the latter End of July, 1714, when it was abſolutely determin'd to proceed forthwith againſt his Bail; but the Quarrels among thoſe at the Helm, and the Sickneſs and Death of the Queen, prevented it.

D. d'Aumont arrives at London.

I leave to other Hiſtorians the Ornament of the Duke d'Aumont's Embaſſy in England, who doubtleſs had Orders from his Maſter, the French King, to ſcatter Money among the Populace, that they too might feel the Effects of French Friendſhip as well as their Governors. He arriv'd at London the 2d of January, and was lodg'd at Powis-Houſe in Ormond-ſtreet. The Miniſters ſeem'd to vie with each other who ſhould entertain him with moſt Profuſion of Expence and Careſſes. He ſupp'd firſt with the Earl of Dartmouth, Secretary of State, and then went his Rounds in Viſits and Entertainments. The Viſcount Bolingbroke, another Secretary of State, conducted him to a private Audience of the Queen, who return'd his Complement in very gracious Terms. A Countryman of his ſpeaks thus of his Equipage. "The French Am-
His Retinue of ordinary Perſons.
" baſſor was accompanied by about forty Gen-
" tlemen, all in deep Mourning; but it was ob-
" ſerv'd, that excepting the Marquis de Car-
" vaſin, a Relation of his, Monſieur Nicholas,
" Son to the firſt Preſident of la Chambre des
" Comptes, Monſieur Le Vidame de Cambray,
" and Monſieur de St. Aubin, Counſellor in the " Parliament of Paris, to whom he might have
" added the Prince d'Harcourt, the reſt of his
" Retinue rather diſgrac'd than credited his Em-
" baſſy, being made up of obſcure Perſons, a-
" mong whom were ſome Tradeſmen, who,
" to get their Expences, brought over ſeveral
" ſorts of Merchandize in the Ambaſſador's
" Trunks and Package." On the 6th of January the Earl of Oxford paid him a Viſit, and the ſame Day he found by Experience what little Streſs was to be laid on the Applauſe of the Multitude: For having ceas'd to throw Money amongſt them, they gave free Vent to their natural Averſion to France, and inſtead of following his Coach with Acclamations of Joy, ſet up a Cry of No Popery, No Pretender. Some of them committed greater Inſolencies before his Houſe, and meeting with Oppoſition, a Scuffle enſu'd; upon which it was thought fit to order the Conſtables of that Pariſh to look to the Security of the Ambaſſador's Houſe: And truly there was need enough of it; for the People had got Intelligence, that his Domeſticks had brought over and run Wines, Silks, and other Goods, which they ſold, as they could well afford, at cheaper Rates than the Engliſh Tradeſmen could do. The French deny'd the Goods were run, and the Ambaſſador diſown'd his Servants in ſuch Practices; but certain it was, Wine was ſold by Retail in his Houſe before his Arrival, if not after; and the People in their Indignation put up the Sign of the Bunch of Grapes before it in the Night-time, and ſeveral Ballads were writ upon it both in French and Engliſh, one called the Merchant A-la-mode, by no mean Poet, which reflecting not only on the Ambaſſador, but on the Treaſurer, and even higher ſtill, ſtrict Search was made after the Publiſher of it, one of whom was taken, and thrown into Jail; but if the Author had been diſcover'd, the Treaſurer would have been extreamly puzzled what to have done, having profeſs'd Friendſhip to him when he was making his Way to the Prime Miniſtry. Several Letters were ſent Monſieur d'Aumont by the Penny-Poſt, to give him Notice that his Houſe would be fir'd; which, whether by Deſign or Accident, happen'd on Monday the 26th of January. The Fire broke out about three o'Clock in the Afternoon, and was ſo furious, that the whole Houſe was burnt to the Ground before Night. I my ſelf ſaw Plate, and other valuable Goods, flung out at the Windows, but the richeſt Part of the Furniture was ſav'd. The Duke of Ormond not only ſent Detachments of the Horſe and Foot Guards to Ormond-ſtreet, but went himſelf to direct the Engineers and Firemen. The Loſs the Ambaſſador and his Domeſticks ſuſtain'd, was by ſome magnified to a prodigious Degree, with a View, as was ſuppoſed, of making it well up by Reparation from the Court of France. Indifferent Perſons made ſlight of it, and it was ſaid afterwards the Duke d'Aumont was far from being a Loſer by it. Some ſaid the Fire happened by the Careleſsneſs of his Confectioner, who was preparing criſp Almonds for the Deſert, and went down Stairs from his Confectionary, an upper Room, without leaving any one to look after his Stove. The Miniſters of Venice, Sweden and Florence, the Lord Waldegrave, and other Perſons of Diſtinction, dining with him that Day, were at Dinner when Fire was cry'd, and the Ambaſſador was juſt then jeſting on the Penny-Poſt Letter he had receiv'd about burning his Houſe. Others reported that the Houſe was ſet on Fire by an Iron Pot full of Charcoal that had been put into the Middle of a Room newly painted, to dry it. Others again ſaid, it was ſet on Fire by two Bricklayers, who two or three Days before had been employ'd to mend the Tiles of the Houſe, and did it at the Inſtigation of the Whigs. This wild nonſenſical Story was eſpouſed by the Miniſters, thoſe able Heads, as their Flatterers then cry'd them up, and the two Bricklayers were immediately taken hold of by the Queen's Meſſengers. Nay, an Advertiſement was publiſhed in the Gazette of February 3d, importing, That her Majeſty thought fit to promiſe, that if any of the Perſons who wrote the Letter to the Duke d'Aumont, or any other Perſon whatſoever ſhould diſcover the Contrivers or Actors of ſo ſcandalous and wicked a Deſign, ſo that they, or any of them, be brought to Juſtice, ſhall receive a Reward of Five Hundred Pounds, and her Majeſty's Pardon for the Offence. The ſtricteſt Enquiry that could be made proving to no purpoſe, this Plot, like the Screw and Band-Box Plots ſerv'd only to render the Miniſtry as ridiculous as they were odious to all good Engliſhmen. Our Hiſtorian adds to this Account, what I remember then was the common Talk, if not the Belief of many, who conſider'd, That as ſoon as the Queen was inform'd of the Misfortune that had befallen the French Ambaſſador, ſhe gave immediate Orders that the fineſt Appartment in Somerſet-Houſe ſhould be prepared for his Accommodation, began to entertain a Suſpicion that Powis-Houſe was deſignedly ſet on Fire, for a Pretence to remove the French Ambaſſador to a Royal Palace on the River Thames, where any Perſons might come to him by Water undiſcover'd, and indeed have Acceſs to him ſafely by Land. Others carried their Surmiſes ſo far, as that the Pretender him-

He is ſhouted, and then inſulted by the Populace.

The Houſe he lodg'd in burnt.

The Miniſters pretend it was burnt by the Whigs.

The Pretender thought to be with d'Aumont.

A.D.1713

A.D. 1713 himself was come over with the Duke d'Aumont, his fast Friend, and had private Interview with the Queen, and some of her Ministers. These Jealousies were encreas'd by the frequent Entertainments and Balls which the Duke gave in his Apartment, where a great Concourse of Persons resorting to his Masks, he had an Opportunity to sound the Sentiments of many concerning the Chevalier de St. George.

For my Part, I did then, and do still believe, that neither the Chevalier, nor his Friends the Ministers, had Courage enough to run such a Venture. The Chevalier must needs have learned what would have been the End of an Attainted Person, if he was caught in England; and the Ministers knew and dreaded it too much, to risk it in such a manner on his Account. However, I must not omit what I was told by Colonel Sands, an old Courtier, who had Lodgings in Somerset-House, as had also several Papists, whom Neighbourhood had made him very familiar with, and they did not stick at intimating to him, after Duke d'Aumont was gone, that the Pretender had been in England, and lodged in that Palace, putting him in Mind of the sudden fitting up of an Appartment, which, he said, they in the House were surpriz'd at; adding, It was for him. Another Story I had from as credible Hands as low Life could furnish. A Woman who serv'd People of Quality with Oranges, and attended daily at Powis-House, when the Lord was in Town, for that Purpose, but more especially when the French Ambassador was there, was, being a zealous Papist, inform'd, that the King, as those Miserables call'd him, was in England. She imagining he must be at Powis-House, upbraided one of the Servants with not letting her into the Secret, and so earnestly press'd him to tell her if it was true, that the Servant confess'd he came with Duke d'Aumont, and that she had seen him. The Orange-Woman transported at so good News, prevail'd at last with the Domestick to give her some Sign how she might know him, and the Answer was, there will be a select Company to Night at Supper, and the young Gentleman in Scarlet embroider'd with Gold is he, but for your Life take no notice of it. The Woman being admitted, as usual, no sooner saw the young Man in the Embroider'd Coat, than she fell upon her Knees, burst into Tears and Prayers for his Majesty, which threw all the Company into Confusion. She was thrust out of the Room, with a strict Charge to say nothing, tho' it was pretended she committed a Blunder, and mistook the Person. I give no more weight to this Tale than the Reader who is most scrupulous; but it may, perhaps, entertain the Curiosity of others. I shall only add, what Monsr. de Cize writes, On eut de violents Soupcons que la Chevalier de St. George etoit eu en personne a Londres, &c. "'Twas strongly "suspected that the Chevalier de St. George was "at London in Person; that he lodg'd in So-"merset-House; that it was for him the Duke "d'Aumont made so many Masquerades, to give "him Opportunities of making Acquaintance "with the English Nobility, and that he was "often in the Queen's Closet." And truly his Declaration after her Death seems to warrant such Suspicions. However, this is true, that Dr. Sacheverel was in great Esteem with the French Ambassador's Domesticks, who said he was so all over France. Being in a Publick-House when one or two of his Equipage, who I believe had some Dealings with the Man that kept it, came in, I observ'd they presently had their Eye on the Mezzotinto Print of the Doctor, which was the Decoration of every Tavern and Eating-House in City and Country, as well as Ale-Houses and Stews. The Frenchmen pointed to the Picture, and gave the Landlord to understand, they had it in France, and drank his Health as we did in England.

Dr. Sacheverel admir'd in France.

A.D. 1713

One of the most remarkable Things which the Duke d'Aumont did, during his Embassy, was to present a Memorial against Monsr. Dubourdieu, the French Minister of the Royal Chapel in the Savoy, to desire that Exemplary Punishment might be inflicted on him and all Ministers, who abus'd their Pulpits by Declamations against his Master. This Memorial is perfectly of the libellous Kind, and makes one apt to suspect, that Mr. St. John or Swift had a hand in it. As no body has express'd himself with more Rage and Scandal than Mr. Arnold Dubourdieu, Minister of the Church of the Savoy, whose whole Religion is reduc'd to Declamations against France, and the Person of the King; he thinking by that Means to gain the Esteem of Parties to conceal his scandalous Life, &c. One may perceive by this, that the Richlieus, the Mazarines, the Louvois, and the Colberts were dead, and there was a Run of Weakness in the French Counsels, which prov'd their having been conquer'd as much as the Loss of their Provinces and Cities. Mr. Prior had before-hand acquainted the Viscount Bolingbroke, that such a Memorial was intended; but the French Minister depending on the Infatuation of the English Ministry in their Compliances with him, consider'd not that it would clash with the Constitution of our free Government, and that as well inclin'd as those at the Helm in Great-Britain were to serve them, they durst not give Occasion to the least Murmur against the Persecution of a French Protestant Minister, for complaining of the Cruelties his Brethren in France suffer'd in Gallies, Jails, &c. for Conscience-sake. The Answer to this Memorial was, That it was the Bishop of London's Business; who accordingly cited Monsr. Dubourdieu to appear before him; and having examined that Divine, was so well satisfy'd with what he said, that upon his Report of it to the Queen, the Matter dropt; which some, who hated the present Management, wish'd to have been push'd farther, the Ministers having more to fear from it than Monsr. Dubourdieu. Notwithstanding there was such an Affectation of Zeal for the Protestant Religion Abroad, as well as for the Church at Home, that a Letter was written to the King of Poland to dissuade him from letting his Son, the Electoral Prince of Saxony, go to Rome to renounce the Faith of his Baptism, and become a Son of that Idolatrous Church, that Instances were made in France to the King in Behalf of the Protestants of that Kingdom, yet the great Disregard that was had of the Protestant Succession, the only Security under Providence for our Holy Religion, render'd these Steps in its favour suspected.

D. d'Aumont presents a Memorial against Mr. Dubourdieu the Minister.

A Contemporary Writer speaks of it thus: We shall but just hint at the Application made to the Queen to use her Interest at the French Court in favour of the poor Protestants on Board the Gallies; but now having granted such a Peace to France as she could scarce ever hope for three or four Years before, Louis the XIVth seem'd to have little Regard either for our Friendship or Interest.

The

A.D.1713 The Duke d'Aumont's Publick Entry and Audience; his Speech to the Queen full of nauſeous Flattery; his Cajolleries afterwards to ingratiate himſelf at Court, and the Flaſhes of his Wit, equally affected and ſurfeiting, and only agreeable to a French Taſte, will without doubt be enlarg'd upon by the Panegyriſts of this Miniſtry, to whom they are left entire.

The Magiſtrates of Dunkirk petition the Queen not to demoliſh the Fortifications, &c.

About the Middle of July there came the moſt whimſical Deputation to our Court that ever was, or perhaps ever will be heard of, and that was, from the Magiſtrates of Dunkirk, doubtleſs at the Inſtigation of the Miniſtry in France. The Demolition of the Fortifications, and the Spoiling the Harbour was the main Argument made uſe of by the Britiſh Miniſters and their Advocates, for making the Utrecht Peace. It was the only Compenſation they procur'd for Great-Britain, for giving up the Glory and Advantages of ten Victorious Campaigns, and for the Expence of ſo much Blood and Treaſure; yet the Miniſtry in France, and the Magiſtrates of Dunkirk had ſuch wrong Heads, as to flatter themſelves that the Deputy Tugghe's Memorials would diſſolve that only Article of the Treaty, which had any thing in it that look'd favourable to England. The Subſtance of his two Addreſſes or Petitions, was to beg her Majeſty's Clemency in ſparing the Harbour and Ramparts of their Town, which, if left ſtanding, he ſaid, ſhould be an eternal Monument of her Glory. Every Word of his Papers being Impertinence, there's enough of them, and I ſhall content my ſelf with Viſcount Bolingbroke's Anſwer, which has ſomething of the ſame Kind. That the Queen had read with Attention the Addreſs Mr. Tugghe had preſented to her in the Name of the Magiſtrates of the Town of Dunkirk, and that ſhe had commanded him to tell him, that ſhe beheld with Sorrow, [what every good Briton would moſt certainly have beheld with unſpeakable Joy] the Damages which the Inhabitants of that Town would ſuſtain by the demoliſhing of its Ramparts and Harbour; but that ſhe did not think it convenient to make any Alteration in a thing agreed on and determin'd by a Treaty. Tugghe was ſo fooliſh as to print one of his Memorials, as an Appeal to the People, who doubtleſs if they had known him, and his Errand, would have given him a deciſive Anſwer. This Paper was ſmartly animadverted upon by Mr. Steel, in his Daily-Paper, called The Guardian; but not by Mr. Maynwaring, as the Annaliſt writes, that Gentleman having been dead ſome Months before Mr. Tugghe came to England. The Rebuff this extravagant Deputation met with, the Commiſſion granted to Colonel Armſtrong and Colonel Clayton, to ſee the Fortifications of Dunkirk demoliſhed, and the ſending two Captains of Men of War to ſee the Harbour filled up, gave ſome Relief to the Impatience of the Nation to have that Work accompliſhed; and it was accordingly begun and carried on, but in what manner, we ſhall ſee by a Concluſion of a Memorial laid before his Majeſty King George upon his Acceſſion to the Throne.

The Folly of Tugghe the Dunkirk Deputy.

1. "The Demolition of Dunkirk was not begun "'till after the time in which it was to have been "finiſhed was elapſed. 2. Thro' the Advice, "and with the Conſent of the Engliſh Miniſtry, the Fortifications of the Town and Harbour of Dunkirk were entirely demoliſhed before any Step had been made towards deſtroying the Harbour, whereby they gave up the "the only Means, which Great-Britain had in her Hands to get the Harbour filled up, and "to hinder France from making the new Canal "from Mardyke. 3. The Engliſh Miniſtry conſented, that in order to open a new Canal, "the French ſhould make uſe of the Pretence "of preſerving the Country from being drowned. "4. They not only acquieſced in, but even approved and authorized the making the new "Canal, altho' they had been forewarn'd by "the Commiſſioners, and in particular by Mr. "Armſtrong, that the French intended thereby "to get a new Harbour. 5. By Means of this "new Canal the Harbour of Dunkirk becomes "more Uſeful and Advantagious to France than "it was before. In this whole Negotiation the "Britiſh Miniſtry ſuffer'd themſelves to be "ſhamefully impos'd upon, or rather there is "reaſon to ſuſpect that this whole Affair was concerted between the two Courts, and that the "Engliſh Miniſtry made only faint Repreſentations, of which they expected to reap no other Fruit than to ſerve for their own Juſtification, in caſe this Matter ſhould ever be examin'd into."

A.D. 1713

J. Robinſon, D.D. made Biſhop of London.

In the Beginning of Auguſt, Dr. John Robinſon, Biſhop of Briſtol, was remov'd to the See of London, vacant by the Death of Dr. Henry Compton. The Annaliſt tells us, it was in Conſideration of his late Pacifick Labours. It could not be in Conſideration of his due Diſcharge of his Paſtoral Office in the Dioceſe of Briſtol, where he never was in his Life, at leaſt after he was Biſhop. Such Men, who in Defiance of their Duty in ſo holy a Vocation, entirely neglect the Cure or Care of Souls, will be at a loſs to account for it when they are call'd to it at the laſt Tremendous Day. About the ſame time the Earl of Peterborough was inſtalled Knight of the Garter at Windſor, with the other Knights before-mention'd; Sir Jacob Bancks, the Swede, ſtanding Proxy for the Earl of Strafford. On the 5th of Auguſt a Proclamation was publiſhed for diſſolving the Parliament, and another on the 17th of Auguſt for calling a new one. Robert Benſon, Eſq; was created Lord Bingley, and named Ambaſſador Extraordinary to King Philip. His Place of Chancellor of the Exchequer was given to Sir William Wyndham, to whom the Nation was in great Meaſure indebted for the Schiſm Bill, and the Deſign to take away from Proteſtant Diſſenters the liberty of educating their Children in their own Way. The Earl of Mar, who two Years after broke out into Rebellion at the Head of Scots, Iriſh and other Papiſts, was made Secretary of State, as was alſo Mr. William Bromley, Speaker of the Houſe of Commons. Mr. Thomas Moore, Brother to Arthur Moore, was made Paymaſter of the Forces Abroad, in the room of the Honourable Mr. Brydges. Mr. Thomas Foley was appointed Auditor of the Impreſt-Accompts, in the room of Mr. Maynwaring, deceas'd; the Lord-Treaſurer's Brother, Mr. Edward Harley, being the other Auditor; and thus he got the Publick Accounts into his own Family. Whether his ingroſſing the Management of the Principal Affairs to himſelf, and treating the other Miniſters as his Dependants, diſguſted the Viſcount Bolingbroke, whoſe Vanity and Arrogance could hardly bear an Equal, and much leſs a Superior in Power; or whether, what is pretended, he would not come into the Secretary's Scheme in favour of the Chevalier de St. George, it is certain that there was a great Miſunderſtanding between them, which grew upon them to Honours conferr'd.

The Parliament diſſolv'd.

R. Benſon, Eſq; made Lord Bingley.

His Place of Chancellor of the Exchequer given to Sir W. Wyndham.

The Earl of Mar and Mr. Bromley made Secretaries of State.

A.D. 1713. an irreconcilable Hatred, and ended in a Rupture, which ruin'd the Lord-Treaſurer's Intereſt at Court; where, towards the End of this Reign, none were ſo welcome as the moſt obnoxious Tories and Jacobites. Before the Breach among them happen'd, the Earl of Finlater was made Chancellor of Scotland, George Granville, Lord Lanſdown, Treaſurer of the Houſhold, in the room of the Earl of Cholmondeley; Lord De la-war Treaſurer of the Chamber, in the room of the Lord Fitzharding, an old, faithful and beloved Servant of Prince George of Denmark, the Queen's Conſort; Francis Gwynn, Eſq; ſtaunch in all Times to High-Church Principles, was made Secretary at War; the Duke of Northumberland and Sir John Stonehouſe, a Berkſhire Gentleman, were made Privy-Counſellors, and the latter Comptroller of the Houſhold; the Earl of Denbigh, Teller of the Exchequer; and the lower Places were every where filled with Perſons in the ſame way of Thinking, to the great Satisfaction of all thoſe who wiſh'd well to Hereditary Right and Perſecution.

The Lord Treaſurer's ill Credit in the City.

The Earl of Oxford having caus'd an Advertiſement to be inſerted in the Gazette, to propoſe the borrowing of 300,000 l. upon South-Sea Stock, lodg'd in the Hands of the Chamberlain of London, and the Deputy-Tellers of the Exchequer, not above 70,000 l. of it was ſubſcribed in ſeven Weeks time. To quicken the Subſcription, he iſſued an Order the 19th of September, importing, that whoever ſhould ſubſcribe 100 l. to the ſaid Loan, ſhould be entitled to buy ten Tickets of 10 l. each in the Houſhold-Lottery of 500,000 l. a Sum of Money which he got out of the laſt Parliament in a very extraordinary unaccountable manner. Mr. Benſon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, carried a Meſſage from the Queen to the Commons, in June, importing, "That ſhe lay under great Difficulties "by Civil Liſt Debts, formerly incurr'd; ſo that "ſhe found her ſelf oblig'd in Juſtice to many "Creditors, to order an Eſtimate to be laid be"fore them of what was owing on that Liſt in "the Year 1710, &c." 'Tis all of a Piece; Eternal Prevarication! Decency forbids the true Name for it. The Chancellor of the Exchequer then preſented the Eſtimate of the Civil Liſt Debts owing about Midſummer 1710. Would one think that ſuch a Perſon would offer to ſuch an Aſſembly an Eſtimate that was not true, purely to lay a wrong Imputation on the late moſt faithful and able Miniſters; yet thus it is, for John Smith, Eſq; late Chancellor of the Exchequer, and then one of the Tellers, having objected to that Eſtimate, ſaid, That to his certain Knowledge, the Debts of the Civil Liſt in the Month of Auguſt, 1710, two Months after Mr. Benſon's Midſummer, did not amount to above 150,000 l. for the Payment of Part of which Sum, there were ſome Monies ſtanding out, beſides great Quantities of Tin; whereas by the Eſtimate now laid before the Houſe, the ſaid Debts to Midſummer, 1710, were made to amount to 400,000 l. This was ſo plain an Impoſition upon them, that a Motion was made to have an Account of the Arrears of the Civil Liſt Funds at Midſummer, 1710; and alſo an Account of the Civil Liſt Debts, as they were then laid before the Houſe. But that would have made a ſcandalous Diſcovery of the falſe Eſtimate, and therefore, upon the Queſtion, it paſt in the Negative, and a round Sum of 500,000 l. was readily given to anſwer it, and at the ſame time fix another Brand of Male-Adminiſtration on the old Miniſters. It is a hard Caſe that England only, a Nation diſtinguiſh'd by its Character of Probity and Integrity, ſhould furniſh Hiſtory with Inſtances of Men in the higheſt Station, who during the four laſt Years were guilty of Diſhoneſty and Baſeneſs, never before met with but in the loweſt Life.

Queen's Meſſage for 500000 l. by Mr. R. Benſon.

Who gives a falſe Eſtimate, prov'd by Mr. Speaker Smith.

A.D. 1713. A falſe Charge on the old Miniſtry.

The Marquis de Miremont, whom the Queen had ſent to Utrecht with a Commiſſion to take Care of the Intereſt of the French Proteſtants, being come over, waited on her Majeſty at Windſor in September, and gave her an Account of what he had done in purſuance of her Orders. He alſo return'd her Majeſty thanks for the Enlargement from the Gallies of one hundred thirty ſix Confeſſors of the Proteſtant Faith, deſiring her ſtill to interpoſe her good and pious Offices for the Deliverance of one hundred eighty five more of thoſe poor Sufferers, who were ſtill detain'd in the Gallies. The Marquis de Rochegude, a French Proteſtant, being then at Windſor, deliver'd to her Majeſty a Letter from the States-General and the Princeſs Sophia to the ſame Purpoſe. The Queen, who had been given to underſtand that all the Proteſtants on Board the French Gallies had been enlarg'd, was extreamly ſurpriz'd to find there were ſo many under Affliction, and deſir'd the Marquis de Rochegude to give her a Liſt of them, which he did accordingly; and the Archbiſhop of York ſeconded both the Marquiſſes Sollicitations, which, after many Delays, had the deſired Effect. The Duke of Shrewſbury being recalled from his Embaſſy in France, in order to go Lord-Lieutenant to Ireland, Lieutenant-General Roſs, of whom the Miniſters had no Reaſon to complain, was appointed Envoy Extraordinary to that Court.

Marquis de Miremont thanks the Queen in the Name of the French Proteſtants

General Roſs ſent to the French Court.

In the mean time the Election for Members of Parliament went on, not ſo much to the good liking of the Miniſtry as many expected. It was impoſſible but ſo many raſh and ruinous Meaſures muſt, by degrees, open the Eyes of thoſe that meant well, tho' they judged ill; and probably had the enſuing Parliament taken thoſe Meaſures into Conſideration, theſe Miniſters might not have been able to keep their Ground much longer, had there been no Demiſe, unleſs they had deliver'd up the Nation to the Pretender; and how it would have far'd with him and them afterwards, was well worth their conſidering. Lockhart of Carnwarth, a great Stickler for his Intereſt, being choſen Member of Parliament for Edinburgh, the Inhabitants gave him a Petition to be preſented to the Parliament for Diſſolving the Union. Nay, the Scots Jacobites were ſo daring, as the Report was, that one Arbuthnot, their Agent at Roan, preſented a Petition to the French King, repreſenting their Grievances, and deſiring his Protection for their Redreſs, in Conſideration of the ancient Alliance between France and Scotland; which being Treaſon in Arbuthnot and his Principals, Care was taken to prevent any Proof of it. We muſt not forget, that a little before the Writs were iſſued for calling a new Parliament, ſeveral Letters ſign'd H, meaning Harley, were ſent by the Poſt to the Mayors, and other Magiſtrates of diverſe Corporations, recommending to them to promote the Intereſt of the Pretender in the next Elections, which, 'twas ſuggeſted, would be acceptable to the Queen and Miniſtry. No Body imagin'd that the Man, of whoſe Name H was the initial, wou'd write ſuch Letters; but it appear'd by it, that ſome, perhaps, that ſate at the ſame Table with him in Council, were conſpiring his Ruin, tho' it muſt be own'd this Dirt was not likely to ſtick.

Scots Jacobites appeal to the French King againſt the Union.

Letters to promote the Intereſt of the Pretender.

It

A.D. 1713 It ſeems to me more probable, that it came from that Quarter than from the Whigs, who generally are not ſo great Fools out of Place as the Tories, and have better Heads than to attempt Political Miſchief when there is no Hope of doing it. The pitiful Reward for the Diſcovery of the Author or Authors of the ſaid Letters ſeems to confirm the Suſpicions that it was rather a Tory Stratagem than a Whig. The following Advertiſement was inſerted in the Gazette of the 1ſt of Auguſt.

The Earl of Dartmouth's Advertiſement about the Letters ſign'd H.

WHEREAS ſeveral Treaſonable Letters ſign'd H, have lately been ſent by the Poſt to the Mayors and other Magiſtrates of diverſe Corporations; her Majeſty is pleas'd to promiſe her moſt gracious Pardon to any Perſon who ſhall diſcover to either of her Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, or to any Juſtice of the Peace or other Magiſtrate, the Author or Authors of the ſaid Letters, and thoſe who have thus diſpers'd the ſame, for any Crime, of which he or ſhe may have been guilty, by concealing his or her Knowledge thereof, or abetting the ſame; and as a farther Encouragement to ſuch Diſcovery, ſuch Perſon ſhall have the Reward of One hundred Pounds, to be paid upon the Conviction of the Offender or Offenders.

DARTMOUTH.

What follows is an Anecdote which well deſerves no longer to remain ſo, but to be recorded as a flagrant Proof of the ill Intentions of the Harleian Miniſtry towards the Houſe of Hanover.

The Importance of the Act of Succeſſion.

About the latter End of the Year 1713, ſomething happen'd which very well deſerves a Place in the Hiſtory of thoſe Times. No one was ignorant of how much Importance the Regency-Bill was to the Succeſſion of the Houſe of Hanover in Great-Britain, and conſequently to the Liberties of England; and the chief Strength of that Security depended upon the Power given to the Perſon next in Succeſſion, to nominate as many as He or She pleas'd to act with the great Officers nam'd in the Bill, upon the Death of the Queen. This was, properly ſpeaking, the Sheet-Anchor of the Proteſtant Succeſſion. The Act was very particular (as it ſhould have been to prevent Impoſitions) in directing ſeveral things to be done in that Affair by the Perſon next in Poſſeſſion abroad, and by his Miniſter or Agent here.

A dangerous Miſtake with relation to that Act diſcover'd by Mr. W. Benſon.

Mr. Wm. Benſon (the Gentleman who has been already more than once mention'd in this Hiſtory) was apprehenſive that ſome Omiſſions might have been in this reſpect, by which the Nomination could not be of any Uſe, whenever the Caſe for which it was to provide might happen. Upon Application to Baron Bothmar, to be inform'd in this Particular, he found his Fears were too well grounded. The Act directed that the Inſtruments of Nomination ſhould be three in Number, and tranſmitted hither to the Reſident of the Perſon next in Succeſſion, whoſe Credentials were to be inroll'd in Chancery, and after ſuch Inrollment, the Reſident was to depoſit one Part in the Hands of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, another with the Lord Chancellor or Keeper, and the third was to remain in the Cuſtody of the ſaid Reſident; and that the ſeveral Seals of the ſaid three Perſons ſhould be affixed to the Covers in which the ſaid Inſtruments were included. Now it happen'd that Baron Bothmar, in whoſe Hands one of theſe Inſtruments was left, had not the Character of Reſident, and that Mr. Kreinberg, who had the Character of Reſident, and whoſe Credentials were inroll'd as Reſident, was not at all concern'd in this Matter. Again, neither Baron Bothmar's Seal, nor Mr. Kreinberg's was affix'd to the Inſtruments, nor the Lord Chancellor's, but the Seal of M. Schutz, who had been driven away from the Court (as has been already mention'd) and of the Lord Cowper, who was no longer Chancellor; neither had Monſ. Schutz the Character of Reſident whilſt he was here, and had depoſited the Inſtruments; but M. Kreinberg was at that time alſo Reſident, and his Credentials were then likewiſe inroll'd in Chancery; ſo that if the Queen had dy'd whilſt this Matter was in this Situation, theſe Inſtruments could never have been open'd, the Act of Parliament not having been comply'd with. That this is certain beyond all Diſpute, appears from the firſt Speech which the Lord Chancellor Harcourt, in the Name of the Lords Juſtices, made to both Houſes of Parliament, Auguſt 5, 1714, wherein he ſays, "The three Inſtruments were produc'd and open'd before the Privy-Council, which had been depoſited in the Hands of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Lord-Chancellor, and the Reſident of Brunſwick, according to Acts of Parliament for ſettling the Succeſſion; and that the Regency had regulated their Proceedings by the Rules preſcrib'd in thoſe Acts." Which proves, beyond all Queſtion, that if the Rules preſcrib'd by the Act, in depoſiting thoſe Inſtruments, had not been ſtrictly obſerv'd, the Great Officers of the Council (who were themſelves the Regency appointed directly by the Act) could not have taken any notice of them.

In this Light Mr. Benſon repreſented this important Concern to Baron Bothmar, upon his being firſt appris'd of it; and the Baron was very much alarm'd, and deſir'd Mr. Benſon to go to the Lord Chief-Juſtice Parker and acquaint him with the whole Affair, which Mr. Benſon did immediately; and his Lordſhip being under no little Concern, deſir'd there might be a Meeting of the chief Perſons truſted by the Houſe of Hanover, the next Morning at the Duke of Devonſhire's, and that Baron Bothmar would bring his Part of the depoſited Inſtruments with him. Accordingly there was a Meeting at the Duke's, and upon examining the Seals affix'd to the Inſtruments, and taking the other Matters above-mention'd into Conſideration, every one preſent was of Opinion the whole was wrong, and that it was of the utmoſt Conſequence that it ſhould be redreſs'd as ſoon as poſſible. The Lord Chief-Juſtice undertook to direct the proper Forms, which he did with all the Speed imaginable; and a Meſſenger was immediately diſpatch'd to Hanover, who return'd with great Expedition with Inſtruments according to Law; the firſt of which was to appoint Mr. Kreinberg Reſident, and after the Inrollment of his Credentials, he had new Inſtruments to be depoſited by him, purſuant to the Act of Parliament. Mr. Kreinberg went forthwith to the Lord-Chancellor, and deliver'd him his new Credentials, and deſir'd they might be inroll'd, which his Lordſhip told him ſhould be done in a few Days. Two or three Days after Mr. Kreinberg went to him for the Credentials dentials inroll'd; but his Lordship made some Excuse, and desir'd him to come again, which he did; but the Credentials were not yet inroll'd. Upon this, Mr. Kreinberg went to him a third time, and told him, that if his Credentials were not return'd to him inroll'd by the next Post, he must acquaint the Princess Sophia with it. This his Lordship resented, but, however, bid him come again in a Day or two, and he shou'd have his Credentials. M. Kreinberg attended his Lordship again according to his Orders, at which time his Lordship deliver'd him not his Credentials, but a Copy thereof on a common Piece of Paper.

The Miſtake rectify'd by the Court of Hanover.

A.D.1713 Difficulty of getting the Hanover Minister's Credentials properly inroll'd.

When this Paper was shewn to the Lord Chief-Justice Parker, as deliver'd by the Lord-Chancellor himself to the Resident of the House of Hanover, as his Credentials inroll'd, pursuant to the Act of Parliament, his Lordship was in a very great Surprize, and desir'd that he might have the Paper to carry with him to Westminster-Hall (whither he was that Minute going) that he might shew it to the Lord-Chancellor, and speak to him about it. As soon as the Lord Chief-Justice came to Westminster-Hall, he went into the Lord-Chancellor's Room, and sent him Word (then sitting in Court) that he desir'd to speak with him. When he had shewn the Paper to the Lord-Chancellor, and told him, that it had been deliver'd to the Hanover Resident as his Credentials inroll'd, without saying who had done it, the Lord-Chancellor look'd over the Paper, as if he knew nothing at all of the Matter, and after some little Hesitation, said with some Warmth, and Marks of Anger, This is very wrong, but this is a young Fellow just come into his Office, his Father being lately dead; but let me have the Paper, and I will take Care to set this Matter to rights for M. Kreinberg, if he will come to me in a Day or two. M. Kreinberg did not fail waiting upon his Lordship, and at last got his Credentials back again properly inroll'd, on or about the 27th Day of March, 1714. In a very short time afterwards the Instruments appointing the Persons to be added to the Lords Regents upon the Queen's Demise, were deposited in proper Form; which had not been done before in eight Years time; for so long the Act had subsisted, having been passed in 1706.

The critical Juncture in which this Inrollment was finish'd.

To which I cannot help adding this Remark, that the Queen did not live four Months after it; so that it seem'd as if that Providence, which had so often interpos'd for the Deliverance of this Country in its greatest Dangers, had preserved the Queen alive 'till we were actually in Possession of the only Humane Security that was left us.

Duke of Shrewsbury Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

People were generally very willing to believe that the Duke of Shrewsbury preserv'd his Revolution Principles, tho' he comply'd with the Ministry so far as to give into their Schemes for Peace; and his going to Ireland was grateful to both Parties. The Government there, since the Lord Wharton resign'd it, was Jacobite almost without Reserve, and the Boldness of the Irish Papists, countenanc'd by Sir Constantine Phipps, one of Sacheverel's Advocates, alarmed the Protestants, and made them be on their Guard against the Attempts of their Enemies, who began to be as Impudent as in the Time of Tyrconnel, or as in England when the infamous Jefferies and Father Petre were Ministers. Phipps being one of the Lords-Justices, began his Tyranny in the City of Dublin, with endeavouring to impose a Tool of his upon them for Lord-Mayor. The Aldermen chose Mr. Pleasants, and were strenuously oppos'd by the then Lord-Mayor, which occasion'd a Reference of the Affair to the Privy-Council, where one must imagine the Lords-Justices had the Direction. Accordingly on the 4th of September the Council came to these Resolutions, That the "Lord-Mayor of the City of Dublin for the "Time being, has the Right of nominating "three Aldermen to be put in Election for "Lord-Mayor of Dublin, and that the Lord-"Mayor and Aldermen are oblig'd to elect one "of the three to be the succeeding Lord-May-"or, unless just Objections be made against "him. 2. That the Proceedings of seventeen "Aldermen in the Election of Alderman Plea-"sants for Lord-Mayor, and James King for "Sheriff, in the Absence of Sir Samuel Cook, "Lord-Mayor, was a Breach of the new Rules, "and that such Election was null and void." Six Days after, the Lord-Mayor summoned the Aldermen to meet to proceed to a new Choice; and in pursuance of the Resolution of the Council, he named Sir William Fownes, Alderman Constantine and Alderman Mason, the same who were in Nomination before. But twenty Aldermen insisted on a previous Question touching the first in Nomination, and offer'd some Objections to him; upon which the Lord-Mayor dissolved the Court. When the Duke of Shrewsbury came to Dublin, he quickly perceiv'd the Pretender's Friends had receiv'd no small Encouragement from Sir Constantine Phipps, Lord-Chancellor, and took hold of all Occasions to give a Check to that Spirit of Rebellion which the Countenance of Phipps had fomented. His Grace, in a particular manner, on King William's Birth-day declared, He was still the same he was in the Year 1688, and publickly drank to the Pious and Glorious Memory of King William, a notable Reproof of the Disaffection of the Bishop of Cork, who preach'd against drinking that Health, pretending, that drinking for the Dead was like praying for the Dead. A new Parliament being call'd in Ireland, the Struggle there between the Protestant Interest and the Ministry Interest was as great as in England, particularly in the Metropolis, the City of Dublin, where Sir William Fownes and Mr. Tucker were set up by the Tories, and Mr. Recorder Forster and Mr. Burton by the Whigs. The Poll began on the 6th of November; and the Sheriffs perceiving the Electors were going into a Riot, sent to the Guards for a File of Musqueteers to prevent it; upon which a Tumult arose, and the Guards being assaulted by the rude Multitude, fired some Shot among them, kill'd one Man, and wounded some others. Both Parties made their Complaints to the Lord-Lieutenant, who the next Day appointed a Committee to make a strict Enquiry into the Disorder, and directed the Sheriffs to take the Poll at two different Places, to prevent the meeting and clashing of the two contending Parties; and upon Information that the Papists and Jacobites were the chief Promoters of the Riot, his Grace caus'd several Popish Chapels in Dublin to be shut up, which wonderfully endear'd him to all Protestants. On the 17th of November the Sheriffs clos'd the Poll, and Mr. Recorder Forster and Mr. Burton were declar'd duly elected by a great Majority. The most disagreeable Circumstance in the

A.D.1713

His Measures oppos'd by the Duke of Shrewsbury.

Drinking to the glorious Memory of K. William.

Sir Const. Phipps's Tyranny in Dublin.

His Grace's good Government.

A.D. 1713 the Duke of Shrewſbury's Government, was the Speech the Engliſh Miniſters carv'd for him to make to the Parliament when they met, which was on the 25th of November. It began thus, That her Majeſty having procur'd a ſafe and honourable Peace, had nothing more to wiſh but that her Subjects might enjoy the Benefits and Advantages of it. The Miniſters were perpetually dinning People in the Ears with the Safety, Honour, Benefits and Advantages of a Peace, which the People were continually crying out againſt, as dangerous, diſhonourable, diſadvantageous and deſtructive to their Trade. The next Day there was a great Struggle in the Houſe of Commons about the Choice of a Speaker. The Tories put up Sir Richard Leving, whom a Tory Parliament had voted guilty of ſpreading groundleſs and ſcandalous Reports, and the Whigs gave their Voices for Alan Broderick, Eſq; who carried it by a Majority of four Voices only.

Abſurd and ridiculous Praiſe of a bad Peace.

Alan Broderick, Eſq; choſen Speaker of the Parliament of Ireland.

The Addreſſes of Compliment to the Queen and the Lord-Lieutenant, having been preſented, the Commons proceeded vigorouſly in providing, by good Laws, for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion againſt the open and ſecret Deſigns of the Papiſts. They order'd a Bill to be brought in to attaint the Pretender, and all Perſons that adher'd to him, of High-Treaſon, with a Clauſe for a Reward to any Perſon who ſhould, within that Kingdom, take the Pretender living, or bring in his Body dead. They appointed a Committee to enquire into the Proceedings againſt Edward Lloyd, for printing and publiſhing a Book, entitled The Memoirs of the Chevalier de St. George; and againſt Dudley Moore, Eſq; and others, relating to a pretended Riot at the Play-Houſe, occaſioned by that Gentleman's ſpeaking the Prologue to Tamerlane in Praiſe of King William, which giving Offence to the Papiſts and Tories, they grew noiſy and inſolent, being ſure of the Protection of Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Lord-Chancellor, which the Well-affected not taking patiently, a Scuffle happen'd, and Phipps caus'd Mr. Moore, and other Proteſtants, to be proſecuted as Aggreſſors, when the Tories and Papiſts were the Occaſion of the Uproar.

The Commons attaint the Pretender.

A Reward for taking him alive or dead.

Sir Conſt. Phipps's Tyrannous Proceedings againſt Mr. Moor.

The Houſe taking the Riot at the Dublin Election into Conſideration, came to ſeveral Reſolutions, "confirming the Election of "Mr. Forſter and Mr. Burton, and declaring "that to prevent the taking a free Poll, and "to procure Sir William Fownes and Mr. "Tucker to be choſen, a dangerous Deſign "was form'd to inſult and mob Mr. Bradſhaw and Mr. Surdeville, who acted as Sheriffs with great Prudence, Integrity and Impartiality." The next Day, December the 16th, it was further reſolved, "That Thomas Harvey, Gent. Servant to Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Lord High-Chancellor of "Ireland, was a chief Promoter of, and Inſtrument in the carrying on the riotous "Deſign, and Force uſed to obſtruct the Poll "at the Tholſel; and that Robert Symons, "Aſſiſtant-Armourer in the Ordnance, and "eleven other Perſons, who were active in "that Riot, be taken into Cuſtody. That "there being an abſolute Neceſſity to ſend "for the Guard to quell the Tumult, Capt. "Hales, and other Officers under his Com-"mand, diſcharg'd their Duty, and acted according to their Orders; and that the Vote A.D. 1713 "of this Houſe relating to the ſaid Captain "Hales, and other Officers, be laid before the "Lord-Lieutenant.

Vigorous Proceedings of the Commons againſt the Dublin Rioters.

Two Days after the Commons unanimouſly reſolved,

1. "That the Book entitled, Memoirs fo "the Chevalier de St. George, was a ſeditious "and treaſonable Libel.

2. "That the faint and remiſs Proſecution "of Edward Lloyd, News-writer, for pub-"liſhing Propoſals to print the ſaid Libel, "gave great Encouragement to the Popiſh and "other Friends of the Pretender in that King-"dom.

3. "That the Deſign of the ſaid traite-"rous Libel was to impeach her Majeſty's "Title to the Crown, and the Succeſſion to "the ſame in the Illuſtrious Houſe of Ha-"nover.

4. "That Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Knt. "Lord High-Chancellor of Ireland, having "repreſented Edward Lloyd as an Object of "her Majeſty's Mercy, as not having an "evil Deſign in publiſhing the ſaid Libel, in "order to obtain a Noli Proſequi on the In-"dictment againſt him, acted therein contrary "to his Duty, and contrary to the Proteſtant "Intereſt of that Kingdom.

The Houſe of Commons vote againſt Sir Conſt. Phipps.

5. "That the ſaid Sir Conſtantine Phipps, "in a Speech made by him on the 16th of "January, 1712, to the Mayor and Alder-"men of the City of Dublin, being then one "of the Lords-Juſtices of Ireland, did take "upon himſelf, by declaring his Opinion, to "prejudge the Merits of the Cauſe then de-"pending between her Majeſty and Dudley "Moore, Eſq; and thereby to influence the "Aldermen, ſome of whom are conſtantly "return'd as Juries in Cauſes of Importance "of that City.

6. "That an Addreſs be preſented to her "Majeſty, humbly to beſeech her to remove "Sir Conſtantine Phipps from his Place of "Lord High-Chancellor, for the Peace and "Safety of her Proteſtant Subjects of that "Kingdom.

The Biſhops of Ireland, tho' preferr'd for the moſt part by Whig Chief Governors, reſolv'd not to leave Dr. Sacheverel's Advocate to the Reſentment of the Houſe of Commons, and therefore did their utmoſt to get a contrary Addreſs voted in the Houſe of Lords, where they very often turn'd the Scale by their Dead Weight; and accordingly it was there reſolv'd, That Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Knt. Lord High-Chancellor of Ireland, had, in the ſeveral Stations wherein he had ſerv'd her Majeſty, acquitted himſelf with Honour and Integrity. And a Committee was order'd to draw up an Addreſs immediately purſuant to that Reſolution; which was done in haſte, and preſented to the Lord-Lieutenant to be tranſmitted to England: But it was obſerv'd, that this was an Arbitrary Vote, without the leaſt Hint of a Reaſon for it; whereas the Votes of the Commons carried with them the Reaſons why they

A.D. 1713 were pass'd. And tho' Mr. Richard Nuttal, a Lawyer, was censur'd by the Lords, for saying The Lord-Chancellor of Ireland was a Canary-Bird, and a Villain, and had set the Kingdom together by the Ears, and ought to be hang'd; it was almost the general Opinion in Ireland, and not an uncommon one in England, that what he said was true.

Mr. Nuttal the Lawyer says he deserv'd to be hang'd,

On the 21st of December the Commons took into Consideration the State of the Nation, and came to the following Resolutions, which will explain to us the Conduct of the Duke of Ormond, and those employ'd under him, and other Lord-Lieutenants and Justices of the same Stamp with Phipps.

Votes of the Parliament against the late Chief Governors in Ireland.

1. "That for some Years last past there "had been a Design form'd and carried on "to subvert the Constitution, and alter the "Government of the City of Dublin.

2. "That, to carry on that Design, a cor- "rupt and illegal Attempt was made in 1711, "to corrupt Alderman Ralph Gore, then Lord- "Mayor, by offering him a Bribe of Five hun- "dred Pounds to name thirty-two Persons, "mark'd in a List then deliver'd to him by "Martin Tucker, Esq; Sub-Collector of the "Port of Dublin, to be Common-Councilmen for "the said City.

3. "That it appear'd on the Examination "of Martin Tucker, Esq; that he was sent to "offer the said Sum of Five hundred Pounds "to Alderman Gore, while Sir Constantine "Phipps, Knt. Lord High-Chancellor of Ire- "land, and Lieutenant-General Ingoldsby, were "Lords-Justices.

4. "That the City of Dublin had of late "been, and still continued, in great Disorder "and Confusion, by reason of the frequent "Disapprobation of Persons elected Lord- "Mayors and Sheriffs of the said City, all "of them of known Affection to her Majesty's "Person and Government, and to the Consti- "tution in Church and State.

5. "That Sir Constantine Phipps had been "the chief Cause and Promoter of such Dis- "approbations, and thereby the Occasion of "the said Disorder and Confusion.

6. "That since the making the new Rules "in 1672, until Sir Constantine Phipps arrived "in that Kingdom, no Person elected Lord- "Mayor of the City of Dublin had been dis- "approv'd, except in the Government of the "Earl of Tyrconnel.

It is very remarkable, that this Phipps, the High-Church Advocate, being unhappily trusted with the Administration, fell presently into Tyr- connel's Methods of Government, in which he anticipated a little the Ministry in England by their very good Liking, or they would have left him to the Justice and Resentment of the Parliament of Ireland.

7. "That the Council-Board had not at "this time, nor had since the Term given "them by the Explanation-Act expired, any "Power to make Rules or Orders for regula- "ting the Election of Magistrates in any Cor- "poration of that Kingdom.

A.D. 1713

8. "That the Right of Election of Lord- "Mayor of Dublin, is in the Lord-Mayor and "Aldermen of the said City; and that the "Aldermen are in no sort restrain'd in the "Choice of the succeeding Lord-Mayor to "one of any three Persons nominated to be "put in Election by the Lord-Mayor.

As I have taken little or no Notice of the Convocation-History of England, it being, as the Revenue-Clerks say, a Nil Account, so I should have entirely omitted that of Ireland, had it not been for the Incident I am about to relate. Robert Molesworth, Esq; afterwards Lord Viscount Molesworth, famous for his most excellent Preface to the State of Denmark, being a Privy-Counsellor in Ireland as well as Member of Parliament, was at the Castle of Dublin, with other Members, on the Day they presented their Address against the Chancellor Phipps. The two Houses of Convocation coming there to present a quite contrary Address to his Grace the Lord-Lieutenant, Mr. Molesworth said, jocularly, THEY THAT HAVE TURNED THE WORLD UPSIDE DOWN, ARE COME HITHER ALSO. Notwithstanding they must needs know that this was said of the Apostles, yet they took it so much in Dudgeon, that the Lower House of Convocation sent a Complaint to the Upper, representing with equal Segacity and Temper, "That they look'd upon the Words utter'd "by Mr. Molesworth, to be an intolerable "Profanation of the Holy Scriptures; and "that his speaking them at that Time, and "in that Place, was with design to cast an "Odium and Aspersion on their Graces and "their Lordships, the true Apostolical Stile, and "the whole Clergy, and to represent them a "turbulent and seditious Body. That they "thought themselves in Duty oblig'd to lay "the Matter before the Upper House, not "only for the Reasons above-mention'd, but "because they conceiv'd it to be a high Af- "front to her Majesty, and great Disrespect to "her Representative, the Lord-Lieutenant. "And they humbly pray their Lordships to "vindicate the whole Clergy from this wicked "Calumny.

Mr. Molesworth's Saying of seditious Priests.

The Convocations Address against him.

The Upper House of Convocation immediately laid this Complaint before the House of Lords; where themselves had so great Influence, that their Lordships desired a Conference with the Commons, and left with them a Copy of the Convocation-Paper. The Commons, says the Annalist, laid no great Stress on that Complaint. In truth, the Words spoken were just among them, as Mr. Molesworth apply'd them, and made many merry as well in England as Ireland. However, the English Ministers vented their Spite against that worthy Gentleman, by getting an Order for his Removal from the Council-Board in Ireland, who could not be much enamour'd with a Seat there in Company with such Men as Phipps, &c.

Mr. Molesworth turned out of the Council.

On the 24th of December the House of Commons voted Thanks to be given by their Speaker to John Forster, Esq; Recorder of the City of Dublin, for his unshaken and steady Behaviour

A.D.1713 Behaviour in the Defence of the Liberties of that City, and of the Proteſtant Intereſt in that Kingdom. They alſo paſs'd the like Votes in Honour of Alderman Ralph Gore, the late Lord-Mayor, and of the following Aldermen:

Sir John Rogerſon,
Thomas Quin, Eſq;
Samuel Wallam, Eſq;
John Page, Eſq;
John Pearſon, Eſq;
Thomas Wilkinſon, Eſq;
Thomas Curtis, Eſq;
Benjamin Burton, Eſq;
John Eccles, Eſq;
James Barlow, Eſq;
James Stoyte, Eſq;
Thomas Bolton, Eſq;
George Forbus, Eſq;
William Dixon, Eſq;
Thomas Pleaſants, Eſq;
Thomas Bolton, Eſq;
Anthony Barky, Eſq;
Matthew Pearſon, Eſq;
William Quail, Eſq;
Robert Cheſham, Eſq;

The Encouragement given by Phipps, and others at the Helm in Ireland, embolden'd the Papiſts ſo much, that Men were inliſted almoſt publickly for the Pretender, particularly by one Toby Butler, a Lieutenant in the Lord Galway's Regiment; to apprehend whom the Duke of Shrewſbury iſſu'd a Proclamation. This Parliament being not at all reliſh'd by the Miniſtry in England, his Grace receiv'd Orders to prorogue them; but before he did it, he ſent for the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons out of the Country to attend him, and told him the Queen was willing to give them an Opportunity to do themſelves Juſtice; but if they did not proceed with Unanimity at their next meeting, he had Orders to diſſolve them. The Proceeding with Unanimity, in the Cant of the then Miniſters, ſignified an Acquieſcence in all they did. This Parliament being by no means ſo diſpos'd, they ſat no more in this Reign: The Duke himſelf did not much like the Situation he was in, and having conſtant Inteiligence of the ill State of her Majeſty's Health, from one of her Phyſicians, he thought it too dangerous for him to chooſe Abſence from Court in ſo critical a Juncture as her Demiſe was like to be. So he deſir'd, and obtain'd Leave to return to England; but he left two Men in the Government of Ireland, Sir Conſtantine Phipps, Lord-Chancellor, and Dr. Lindſay, Archbiſhop of Armagh, than whom he could not have pick'd out two other Men in the whole Kingdom more diſagreeable to all good Proteſtants. Perhaps he could not help it; for, as the Author I laſt quoted writes, He was little more than the Pageant of the Government of Ireland, of which the main Springs were in the Lord-Chancellor's Hands, but one Remove from the Pretender's. He found that he was not much conſider'd; for upon the Archbiſhop of Armagh's Death, three Months before, his Grace would have advanced to that Primacy that excellent Prelate Dr. Talbot, his Kinſman, Biſhop of Oxford; but on the Recommendation of Phipps, Dr. Lindſay, Biſhop of Raphoe, was immediately preferr'd. This Man was, as has been hinted, at firſt Parſon of Woolwich in Kent, and getting into the good Liking of Dr. Sprat, Biſhop of Rocheſter, he went over to Ireland with Sir Cyril Wyche, by that Biſhop's Recommendation, and ſome how or other, made himſelf ſo acceptable to the Lord Capel, that he took him into his Favour, and promoted him when he was Chief Governor of that Kingdom. He was a Perſon ready to go all Lengths, ſays the ſame Author, to favour the Scheme in Hand.

A.D.1713. Dr. Lindſay, late Parſon of Woolwich made Archbiſhop of Armagh by Phipps's Recommendation.

In England the Jacobite Faction threw off all Diſguiſe, and in the moſt impudent and treaſonable Manner, aſſerted the Pretender's Right to the Crown, in a voluminous Libel, entituled, The Hereditary Right of the Crown of England aſſerted, &c. The Book itſelf is a Heap of hiſtorical Lies, Miſrepreſentations, falſe Suggeſtions and Sophiſtry; which it was charg'd with by ſeveral Writers at that Time. This traiterous Book was not only advertis'd in the London Gazette with particular Allowance, tho' all who were concern'd in it deſerv'd to have been hang'd for it, but diſperſed and cry'd up with great Induſtry. If to write againſt the Proteſtant Succeſſion was Treaſon by the Laws of the Land, and Mr. Bromley, one of the Secretaries of State, did, as was then reported, own the allowing it a Place in the Gazette; let the Reader judge what was the Crime and what ought to have been the Puniſhment. Some of the Quotations in this Book were taken out of Manuſcripts in the Harleian Library. For tho' the Earl of Oxford was far from being an Adept in polite Learning, or Maſter of any of the finer Arts; yet becauſe Lord Somers, Lord Halifax and Lord Sunderland, Whig Miniſters, had diſtinguiſh'd themſelves by the Belles Lettres, as well as by Politicks, he too affected to collect a Library, and did it with the Help of ſuch as underſtood thoſe Things better than himſelf. I ſpeak what I am about to ſay of my own Knowledge, that John Bagford, a Journeyman Shoemaker, afterwards an Aſſiſtant to John Bullord the Auctioneer, aſſiſted the Prime Miniſter in his Collection of Antiquities. His throwing his Library open to Jacobites, who made ſuch a wicked uſe of it, occaſion'd Surmiſes not at all agreeable to his Profeſſion of Attachment to the Houſe of Hanover. If they were reaſonable or not, is left to others to determine; but this was not the only Surmiſe which alarm'd the Well-affected to the Proteſtant Succeſſion. On the publiſhing this daring Piece of Treaſon, there was a Report, which was thought to be too well grounded, that one of the firſt Preſents of the Book, ſplendidly bound, was made to her Majeſty's own Perſon at Windſor by Mr. Nelſon, who was ſuppos'd to have the greateſt Hand in it, and by the Stiffneſs of the Stile one would think it had paſs'd under the Pen, to uſe a Phraſe of Earl Mortimer's, of the ſame Author, who was at ſo much Pains to prove the Holineſs of Saint's Days, Faſts and Feſtivals. See what the Detector writes upon this.

Bedford's treaſonable Book againſt the Proteſtant Succeſſion encourag'd.

Mr. Wm. Bromley allows it a Place in the Gazette.

John Bagford, the Journeyman Shoemaker, helps the Lord Treaſurer in his Library.

The Book preſented to her Majeſty by Mr. Nelſon.

Mr.

A.D. 1713.

Mr. Nelson the Nonjuror admitted frequently to the Queen's Closet. Pleads for Bedford.

Mr. Hezekiah Bedford being now try'd and convicted for publishing a Book concerning Hereditary Right, a Reverend and Able Divine informs us in a Letter publish'd and address'd to the Bishop of Carlisle, that he had form'd more than ordinary Indignation at the hearing from an Eye-witness, it was presented to the Queen by a Gentleman who had not taken the Oaths to her, and who at that Time would not have gone to the Chapel with her, and by Principle could never pray for her; and yet that Gentleman, upon and after the Publication of that Book, had frequent Accesses to the Royal Closet, and by his own Application and Interest obtain'd a hasty Discharge of a great Part of the Penalty inflicted by Law on the Nonjuring Priest who convey'd the Copy of it to the Press, and corrected the Sheets.

The Friends to the House of Hanover bestirr'd themselves so much to find out the Persons concern'd in the Publishing it, that the Ministers were oblig'd to order Richard Smith the Bookseller to be apprehended; and he confessing that Bedford, the Nonjuror above-mention'd, brought the Copy to the Printer, he was also taken up, and own'd impudently enough, that it was true. Upon which, for Form-sake, he was bound over to appear at the Court of Queen's-Bench. A faint Prosecution was also carried on against him, who had render'd himself as Criminal as the Author or Authors, by putting it to, and taking Care of it at the Press, though he was not thought capable of writing it, as bad as it was written. He was fin'd One thousand Marks, to remain in Prison 'till it was paid, and for the Term of three Years. He was also to find Five Thousand Pounds Security for his good Behaviour during Life, and to be brought into all the Courts of Westminster-Hall, with a Paper affixed to his Head, denoting his Offence. But after Sentence was pass'd, an Order was produc'd from the Government, counterfign'd by a Secretary of State, it is no matter which of them, directing the Judges of the Queen's-Bench to supersede the ignominious Part of the Punishment by reason of the Sacred Function of the Criminal. The Jargon! Is Treason to one's Country a less Crime than destroying a Bastard-Child, for which a Shropshire Vicar was hang'd some Years before, not three Years after Paul, another Vicar, was hang'd also at Tyburn for Rebellion. What is the Function to a Man that is a Disgrace to it? The Truth is, the Ministers, two of whom car'd no more for the Function than they did for a Pædagogue's, were not willing to give any Discouragement to the Rebellious Spirit then in the highest Ferment among the Nonjuring and Jacobite Priesthood. This Proceeding, said that eminent Lawyer Mr. Lechmere, could bear no other Construction than as a Licence and Protection to Men in Holy Orders to propagate their Destructive Positions with Impunity, and the Character of the Person, which ought, in Justice, to have aggravated his Guilt, and heighten'd his Punishment, became his Indemnity against the Reproach of it, even by the Authority of the Government itself, against which that Treatise was level'd. This Indulgence appear'd the more glaring, considering what Severities were at the same time exercis'd against those Persons who had Courage enough to assert the Interest of their Country, and of the Protestant Succession. Particularly Mr. George Ridpath, who wrote the Observator and Flying-Post, and was forc'd to fly out of England to avoid the mortal Effects of Mr. St. John's Resentment and Cruelty; no body doubting but that if he had staid, and been put into the Pillory, as it was intended, he would have been murder'd, as his Printer Hurt would have been, when he was pillor'd for printing some Jests on the Dutchess of Shrewsbury and others, had he been kept a Minute longer. Several Fellows in Bolingbroke's Livery were among the Rabble that assaulted Hurt. But Foe, the Bankrupt Hosier, and Apostatiz'd Independant and Republican, who was then in the Earl of Oxford's Pay, as he said himself to me and many more, and knowing it would not displease him, had written several Pamphlets, which seem'd to favour the Pretender's Interest, whom, to my Knowledge, he look'd upon as a despicable Impostor, 'till the Treasurer took him into his Protection: Foe, I say, and have already said, had a Pardon under the Great-Seal, which was publickly declar'd, as if to encourage the like Labours in others to wean People from their Fondness of the Protestant Succession; but that was not in their Power, and its taking Effect, was, Thanks be to Almighty God, nearer than even their Guilt and their Fears made them imagine.

A.D. 1713

He is faintly prosecuted.

Bedford pardon'd as to the Ignominy, on account of his Sacred Function.

Foe has a Pardon.

Before the new Parliament met, the Marquis of Lothian, Colonel of the Scotch Regiment of Foot-Guards, was remov'd from that Post, and succeeded in it by the Earl of Dunmore. Sir Richard Temple's Regiment of Dragoons was bestow'd on Major General Evans; and Major General Sibourg had the Regiment of Horse lately commanded by the Marquis of Harwich, deceas'd.

Marquis of Lothian turn'd out.

The Loyal Hanover Club before-mention'd took the Occasion of the Queen's Birth-Day, February the 6th, to signalize their Zeal and Affection to the Protestant Succession, by causing the Effigies of the Devil, the Pope, and the Pretender to be carried in solemn Procession from Charing-Cross to the Royal Exchange, and so back to Charing-Cross, where they were burnt. Three Drummers of the Guards attended the Procession, and in the first Line of the March were Colonel Coote, and other Gentlemen, to lead the Populace, who were very numerous and hearty, and not the least Disorder was committed; but the Drummers having beaten within the City Liberties without special Warrant from the Lord-Mayor, their Retreat was cut off at Ludgate, and they were seiz'd and sent to Prison, which did not hinder the Procession continuing to Charing-Cross, where a numerous Meeting of Officers, and other Gentlemen, waited to see Execution done, and assist at the doing it. The Lord M——— came once to such a Meeting at Man's Coffee-House, and told the Officers, as a Friend, that there were Spies upon them; and he desir'd, that whatever they thought, they would put a Guard upon their Expressions, for the Queen had always an account of them.

The

A.D.1713. The Prorogation of the Parliament, from time to time, was occaſion'd by the Queen's Illneſs, which kept her at Windſor; and the Jars among the Miniſters, who had Heads well enough fitted to Factions and Seditions, but ill enough turn'd for ſober Counſel and ſound Politics. The Lord-Treaſurer's Cunning did, with many, paſs for Gravity, and doubtleſs his own was ſuperior to thoſe that endeavour'd to ſupplant him in Court-Favours. "It was then ſtrongly reported, ſays the "Annaliſt, that the Lord Bolingbroke, Mr Secre- "tary Bromley, and Sir William Wyndham, who "was lately made Privy-Counſellor, having gained "the Aſcendant, the Lord-Treaſurer entertain'd "Thoughts of Retirement." Which is far from being true; he never intended to retire, but, on the contrary, to form new Schemes, and a new Party, himſelf to be always at the Head; and, in order to accompliſh it, he was in no great pain what ſide to join with, being determined to take that which was ſtrongeſt, de menager tout le monde & de ſe ranger du cote du plus fort, which Side it is not unlikely he thought would be form'd by the Friends of the Houſe of Hanover, in conjunction with thoſe Tories, who were weary of Bolingbroke's Inſolence and Inconſtancy.

Jars among the Miniſters.

The Hiſtory of the White Staff; written by Foe; by the Ld. Treaſurer's Direction.

One cannot doubt but, the Secret Hiſtory of the White Staff, a Pamphlet Foe wrote ſoon after King George's Acceſſion to the Throne, was by the Earl of Oxford's Direction, and that the moſt natural Hints for it came from him, becauſe the whole Treatiſe is calculated for his Vindication; and Foe depended upon him too much, to dare to publiſh any ſuch thing without his Participation and Conſent. Tho' 'tis full of Falſhood, both in Fact and Argument, yet there are ſome Things which have a Face of Truth, inaſmuch as it agrees with the Characters of his Opponents, the Men above-mentioned, to whom muſt be added the then Lord Chancellor; and theſe, ſays the Treaſurer's Advocate, above all the ſeveral Diviſions, beſt deſerve the Name of Faction. The Queen was adviſed by him to apply Faction to the old Miniſtry, her beſt Servants, and their Friends; and now he himſelf, by the Pen of his Hiſtorian, applies it to St John, Bromley, Harcourt, &c. If he is partial, let them prove him to be ſo, 'tis no Buſineſs of mine. One of the chief Reaſons of their quarrelling with him, next to that of getting his Staff into their own Hands, was, becauſe he would not do as they would have had him, which was thus, according to his Hiſtorian,

P.40. calls the Lord Bolingbroke, the Lord Harcourt, Sir W. Wyndham, and Mr Will. Bromley, the Factious.

Their Quarrel.

"They told him, it was time to ſtrike home, "as it was call'd, at the whole Whig-Party, to p. 25. with the Lord-Treaſurer. "give them the Coup de Grace, that they might "die at once, to make a thorough Reformation, "by diſplacing every Whig, or moderate Man in "the Nation, to carry a ſtreight Rein, and make "the Government formidable; to reſtore the "Prerogative, and make the People know their "Duty: To rule by Law, they ſaid, was to put "the Law effectually in execution, and not "make the Law a Terror to the Miniſtry, in- "ſtead of being a Terror to the People. That "there was no way to quell Seditions, but by "Correction. That Juſtice was made uſe of "againſt a Faction to keep them down before "they get up, as well as to pull them down when "they are up. That they had now gained "an entire Victory, and they were not to act "like Hannibal, who having overthrown the "Romans, had the Benefit of his Victory wrung "out of his Hands, for want of a vigorous fol- "lowing his Blow. That now was their time "to ſuppreſs effectually the Whigs, who had thus "long ſtruggled with them. That a Home-blow A.D.1713. "now would for ever knock them down," and the like.

His Schemes to deſtroy the Whigs.

Whatever the Earl of Oxford could ſay to the contrary, "theſe Men, continues his Hiſtorian, "went on to form Reſolutions againſt the "moderate Meaſures, and againſt all that oppo- "ſed the Methods of their own preſcribing, in "which they were ſo fix'd and unalterably re- "ſolved, that they not only refuſed to concert "with the Lord Treaſurer the Meaſures of their "future Conduct, but ſolely to oppoſe him, and "underwork him in every thing. Not content "with this, they began openly to cenſure his con- "duct, charging him with reſerving in his Ad- "miniſtrations, and with taking Meaſures preju- "dicial to the Intereſt in which they were en- "gaged," there ſeems to be ſome Truth in this. Monſ. de Cize, a French Hiſtorian, who was then an Officer in the Engliſh Service, writes, Bolingbroke ſe voyant a la tete de la Party que la Reine conſideroit croit qu'elle ne pouvoit rien luy refuſer. "Bolingbroke finding himſelf at the Head of a "Party to which the Queen inclin'd to ſhew Fa- "vour, thought ſhe could refuſe him nothing. "He form'd the Model of a new Miniſtry, a new "Army, a new Adminiſtration in all things; of "which himſelf, the Biſhop of Rocheſter, and the "Lord High-Chancellor Harcourt, were to be "Chiefs. Thoſe who were to ſerve under them, "were to be of their Kidney, that is, fiery, "bold, without reſpect to Perſons or Things, "capable of undertaking any thing, who aimed "at nothing but the overturning the Govern- "ment, without minding what would be the "Conſequences, or what People thought or ſaid "of them."

Lord Bolingbroke's Contrivances againſt the Lord-Treaſurer.

The Raſhneſs and Wickedneſs of this Faction.

In the mean time, the Queen was taken ill at Windſor on Chriſtmas-Eve; it was given out, to be no more than an Ague-fit; for which ſhe took the Bark, and ſeem'd to mend upon it. It was whiſper'd, however, that it was a Fit of an Apoplexy; and, as ſhe was never really well after it, there is reaſon to believe, the Miniſtry conceal'd her Diſtemper from the Public as much as poſſible. The Detector tells us, "it alter'd her Com- "plexion ſo much, that ſhe did not look like the "ſame Perſon as before, and therefore it was ex- "pedient from henceforward to uſe Paint to diſ- "guiſe the Diſcolourings: but this was kept ſo "ſecret, that it never was as much as whiſper'd "in her Life-time, neither did it become a popu- "lar Diſcourſe after her Death."

The Queen taken ill.

Said to be an Apoplexy.

Nowithſtanding the Endeavours of the Faction, as the Lord Treaſurer's Hiſtorian calls St John, Harcourt, &c. to turn every Whig out of Place, eſpecially near her Majeſty's Perſon; yet her Eſteem for the Ducheſs of Somerſet was ſuch, that ſhe not only continued her in her Poſt of Groom of the Stole, but frequently ſent for her, eſpecially in the time of her Illneſs; and having done this once or twice in this Juncture the Meſſage was not deliver'd: And when the Lady came of her ſelf to viſit the Queen, ſhe was receiv'd with ſome Coldneſs, and expoſtulated with about the Reaſon of her Non-Attendance. The Truth was ſoon found out, that no Meſſage was deliver'd to the Ducheſs, but the Excuſes made for it were admitted; yet the Queen, from henceforward, when ſhe wrote to the Ducheſs at Petworth, or elſewhere remote from her, ſent her Letter by a particular Meſſenger to the Poſt-Office, and always required a Receipt for the Delivery of it from the proper Officer, that ſhe might not for the future be impos'd upon, when ſhe had a mind to have Queen abuſed by the Miniſters in the Caſe of the Ducheſs of Somerſet.

*A.D.*1713. that Lady near her Perſon. Every body may remember, ſays our Author, what a Clamour the New Miniſtry made againſt the Old, for making a Property of the Queen, and ſuffering none to come near her. I defy them, with any Face of Truth and Sincerity, to give ſuch an Inſtance of ill Uſage and Diſobedience as this; ſuch an Irreverence to Majeſty is ſcarce to be parallell'd in any of our Hiſtories.

Detect. 436.

*A.D.*1714. The uncertain State of the Queen's Health kept every thing in a State of Uncertainty; and the juſt Apprehenſions of the People, that St John and his Faction, as the Earl of Oxford's Hiſtorian call'd them, were in the Intereſt of the Pretender, and endeavouring to bring about a ſecond Reſtoration, (becauſe we had been made ſo happy by the firſt) made Publick Credit ſuffer much, and the Funds fell gradually, from the Beginning to the End of January. It was reported, that a Squadron of Men of War was fitting out in the Ports of France; and that the Duke of Berwick was drawing 12 or 14000 Men down to the Coaſts, to be tranſported to England. It is probable Peoples Jealouſies both of the Queen and her Miniſters favourable Diſpoſition to the Pretender might magnify the Danger from that Quarter: For though there is no doubt that they were not ſo well affected towards the Houſe of Hanover as they ſometimes profeſs'd; yet there is no likelihood, that any direct Steps were taken for bringing in the Chevalier de St George. Bolingbroke was indeed likely enough to have run ſuch a Hazard, having already run ſo many Hazards equally mortal; and he had no way, as he had all the Reaſon in the World to think, to eſcape National Juſtice, but by running that too. His Faction was, doubtleſs, in the ſame Diſpoſition, and had his Courage been equal to his Guilt and his Malice, ſome deſperate Attempt of that kind might reaſonably have been fear'd, and was fear'd ſo much as to reduce the Publick Affairs to Perplexity and Confuſion. The Queen's Sickneſs, having, as was thought, precipitated their evil Deſigns to prevent the farther Fall of Stocks and Credit, her Majeſty wrote this Letter to the Lord Mayor of London, by the Advice of her Miniſters.

Lord Bolingbroke's Faction for the Pretender.

Stocks fall.

ANNE R.

The Q's Letter to the Lord Mayor of her Health.

" RIGHT Truſty and Well-beloved, We " greet you well. Altho' an aguiſh Indiſ- " poſition, ſucceeded by a Fit of the Gout, has de- " tain'd Us at this Place longer than We deſign'd, " yet ſince it has pleaſed Almighty God to re- " ſtore Us to ſuch a degree of Health, that We " hope to be able ſoon to return to Our uſual Reſi- " dence: We continue determined, to open Our " Parliament on Tueſday the 16th of this inſtant " February, according to the Notice given by the " Proclamation. Thus much We have judged " proper to communicate to you; and by you to " the Court of Aldermen, and others of Our " loving Subjects of Our good City of London, to " the Intent, that you may all, in your ſeveral " Stations, contribute to diſcountenance and put " a Stop to thoſe malicious Rumours ſpread by evil- " diſpos'd Perſons, to the Prejudice of Credit, and " to the eminent Hazard of the Publick Peace and " Tranquillity. And ſo We bid you farewel.

" Given at Our Caſtle at Windſor, the firſt Day " of February, 1713, in the Twelfth Year " of Our Reign.

By Her Majeſty's Command,

BOLINGBROKE.

To Our Right Truſty and Well-beloved, Sir Samuel Stanier, Knight, Lord-Mayor of Our City of London.

There being a great Run upon the Bank of England at this time, the Directors ſent four of their Number to the Lord-Treaſurer, to repreſent the Dangers that threaten'd Publick Credit, and deſire his Advice and Aſſiſtance: But as his own Credit at Court was ſinking daily, and was never great in the Nation, they could not expect to have ſuch Relief from him as they had from the Lord-Treaſurer Godolphin on the like Occaſion. This Letter, and the Accounts from France, that the pretended Armament was a Fiction, in a little while put a Stop as well to the Run on the Bank, as the Fall of Stocks. *A.D.*1714.

In the mean time, the War between the Emperor and France continued; and the former, after the Loſs of Friburgh and Landau, inclin'd to hearken to a Treaty upon Overtures made him on the Part of the French King by the Electors of Cologne and Palatine. The Conferences held at Radſtadt between Prince Eugene and the Mareſchal de Villars, previous to the Treaty, were kept ſo ſecret that the Engliſh Miniſters knew no more of them than what they found in News Papers: A Mark of Contempt, which they might with Reaſon have expected, after the Slights they had put on his Imperial Majeſty's Miniſters. They were uneaſy at it, and the Earl of Strafford was order'd to confer upon it with the States Deputies, to whom he made a long Harangue. The Subſtance of which will be ſeen in the Anſwer return'd by their High Mightineſſes a few Days after. They thanked him for the Aſſurances of Friendſhip he gave them, on the Part of her Majeſty of Great Britain, and offered to concert with her Majeſty the Meaſures proper to be taken for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion, eſpecially in the Empire, and for procuring the Abolition of the Clauſe of the fourth Article of the Peace at Reſwick. As to the Apprehenſions of a new War in Italy, their High Mightineſſes hop'd, that by the Peace of Radſtadt the Emperor and the King of France had provided for the Tranquillity of that Country; and that they had likewiſe regulated the Affairs relating to the Duke of Savoy, and to Sicily. For this Reaſon, and becauſe the Conditions of that Peace were not yet known to their High Mightineſſes, they could not, at preſent, enter into Deliberations with the Earl of Strafford upon theſe Matters. That as to the Treaty with Spain, their High Mightineſſes had the Regard they ought to her Majeſty's Recommendations for the Intereſts of the Princeſs Urſini. What a Rout is there made about this Princeſs Urſini, a zealous Papiſt, and Friend to the Pretender, whoſe Intereſt was eſpous'd by the Engliſh Miniſters with Warmth and Clamour, while that of the Proteſtant Religion, of which the Proteſtant Succeſſion was the chief Support, was neglected, if not abandon'd, for whatever appear'd in it's Favour was forced and affected. Theſe Miniſters were more ſollicitous for the Intereſt of Madam Urſini than even the King of Spain himſelf, who was the only Prince that had particular political Obligations to her; as appears by the States Anſwer, that they had given ſuch good Reaſons why they could not agree to a Guarantee, that the King of France, and even the King of Spain had acquieſc'd in them, and deſiſted from their Demands thereupon; that for this Reaſon, the States-General promiſed themſelves, from the Queen's Goodneſs and Equity, that her Majeſty would not inſiſt upon a thing which even the King of Spain himſelf had let drop. It is ſurprizing, that Men in their Wits ſhould, in the Name of the Queen of England, make Demands of the States in behalf of an Enemy to the Proteſtant Religion and Succeſſion, which the obliged Friends of the Party, alike Enemies Conferences at Radſtadt, between Prince Eugene and Mr Villars, not communicated to the Q's Miniſters.

The Earl of Strafford's Speech to the States upon it.

Their Anſwer.

An odious Zeal for the Intereſt of the Princeſs Urſini.

A.D.1714. Enemies to both had given up, or that they could get any one to act this Part for them in Holland. The reſt of the Anſwer is concerning the States withdrawing their Troops from Oſtend, and the Queen's withdrawing her's from Ghent and Bruges, which they would have communicated to the Emperor, not doubting but the Spaniſh Netherlands were yielded to him by the Treaty of Radſtadt, they deſir'd that no Deviation from, or Alteration in the Barrier Treaty, might be made. The Earl of Strafford was very officious in negotiating with the Miniſters of the Proteſtant Princes of Germany, or Deputations from the Proteſtants, to aſſiſt at the Congreſs at Baden, in Swiſſerland, for concluding a Peace between the Emperor and the French King, purſuant to the Reſolution taken at Radſtad. But it was generally ſuſpected, that this Proceeding of the Engliſh Miniſtry, was rather to perplex the Emperor, than to favour the Proteſtants; and accordingly when the Earl of Strafford preſs'd the States-General to ſend a Miniſter to Baden, to act in Concert with the Miniſter her Majeſty would ſend thither, to negociate the Abolition of the Clauſe in the fourth Article of the Ryſwick Peace, their High-Mightineſſes anſwered coldly, That the States of the Empire having referred it to his Imperial Majeſty, to conclude the Peace in the Name of the Empire, it was believed the Electors and Princes would not ſend any Miniſters thither, and that for that Reaſon, their High-Mightineſſes did not think it proper to ſend any on their Part. The Truth is, their High-Mightineſſes had been given to underſtand, that the Emperor would not admit any Miniſter from the Queen of Great Britain, nor from them, that there might not appear Diſtinction.

Treaty of Radſtad.

The Earl of Strafford's Negotiation in Holland ſlighted.

The Emperor, as a further Mortification to the Britiſh Miniſtry, order'd Baron Heems to declare to the States Deputies, "That his Imperial Ma-"jeſty was diſpoſed to treat with their High-"Mightineſſes, concerning a Barrier in the Ne-"therlands, that the Treaty might be prepared "and brought to ſome Maturity at the Hague, "but that the Emperor would be glad to have "it perfected and concluded at Vienna, whether "their High-Mightineſſes were deſired to ſend a "Miniſter." One may ſuppoſe, that whatever Face the States General put upon it, they were well enough pleaſed at this Slur on the Britiſh Court and Miniſtry, and with the Earl of Strafford's Part in it particularly, on account of the grand Airs he had aſſum'd in the Courſe of the Negotiations at Utrecht. The Earl expreſs'd great Surprize at this Declaration, when it was told him by the States Deputies, and ſaid, among other things, That her Majeſty, as well as the States, was intereſted in the Affair of the Barrier, and therefore no Step ought to be taken in it, without acting therein in concert with her Majeſty, which moſt certainly was right. But the Miniſtry, and Himſelf in particular, had done ſo many provoking things in neglecting and offending the Allies, that this was only rendering the Meaſure by which they themſelves had meeted. What follows, is in the Tone of the late Biſhop of Briſtol, at Utrecht. That He had Orders to declare, in the Name of the Queen his Miſtreſs, That the treating and concluding on the Barrier at Vienna, ſeemed to be propoſed with Intention only to exclude her Majeſty from the Negotiations about it. That in ſuch a Caſe, her Majeſty would forthwith renounce all Engagements with this State. And again, almoſt in a Breath, I muſt declare that her Majeſty would look upon ſuch a Proceeding, as a form'd Deſign of their High-Mightineſſes, to diſſolve all Engagements now ſubſiſting between her Majeſty and the State. In private Life this would be the richer bullying the poorer, where there was Dependance. But in this Caſe, the Intereſts that bound thoſe Engagements, were mutual and inſeparable. And unleſs thoſe Miniſters had a form'd Deſign to betray their Country to France, their Gaſconnade was as ridiculous as it was abſurd. Both Engliſh and Dutch ſtood in Neceſſity of mutual Aſſiſtance for the Security of their Religion and Liberty. Neither of them could ſingly ſecure them againſt the Power and Tyranny of France. Suppoſe the Dutch had been as weak and as raſh as the Britiſh Miniſters, and had taken them at their Word, they muſt have been a Prey to the French, one after the other, and the Britons would have only had the lighter Chains at firſt, becauſe they came early and volantarily into Slavery. This Matter was accommodated afterwards. The Earl of Strafford endeavour'd to draw to the Hague, the Negotiations of the Peace in the North; and engaged the Court of France, by Monſ. de Chateauneuf, their Ambaſſador at the Hague, to offer their Mediation for that Purpoſe to the Northern Allies. But the King of Pruſſia having caus'd the King of Poland to be founded, whether he was inclin'd to enter into the Engagement which Baron Sparre, and the Count de Rottenbourg, had propoſed at the Hague, on the part of France, his Poliſh Majeſty ſignify'd, That he could never have any ſuch Thoughts, for it would never be his Intereſt to ſeparate himſelf from his Allies. What a killing Reproach was this tacitly to the Adminiſtration in Great Britain.

A.D.1714.

The wretched Politicks of it.

Farther Slights on the Britiſh Miniſtry.

The Biſhop of Briſtol's Tone upon it.

The Archbiſhop of York dying when the Queen was ill, ſhe, upon her Recovery, preferred a Baronet, Sir William Dawes, to that Metropolitan See, and made Dr Francis Gaſtrel Biſhop of Cheſter, in the room of Sir William Daws, Bart. the late Biſhop of that Dioceſe; Dr Smalridge, Biſhop of Briſtol, was made Lord-Almoner, and the Military Preferments ran in the ſame Channel with the Religious and Civil. The ſecond Troop of Horſe-Granadier Guards, vacant by the Death of the Earl of Crawford, was beſtow'd on the Earl Mareſchal, a Scots Jacobite Nobleman, who was one of the firſt of his Nation of Quality, that broke out into open Rebellion a Year or two after. Sir Thomas Veſey, another Baronet, was made Biſhop of Oſſory in Ireland, and ſeveral Clergymen, Juſtices of the Peace in England and Ireland, to the great Comfort of all who believ'd the Church was in Danger.

Earl Mareſchal made Captain of the Granadier Guards.

Baronets made Biſhops, and Clergymen Juſtices of the Peace.

While the Duke of Marlborough was beating the French, the Tories look'd upon them as their beſt Friends. Les Tories en general, ſays my French Hiſtorian, ont plus d' Inclination a s' attacher a la France; and The Tories in general have more Inclination to join with the French, than with the Dutch, either out of a liking of their Deſpotic Government, or becauſe they cannot maintain themſelves without the French King's Aſſiſtance. And whatever Profeſſions of Affection to the Proteſtant Succeſſion were made by ſome of the Miniſters, eſpecially the Earl of Oxford, it was obvious to all Men of common Senſe, that every Step they took in favour of France, which was every Step ſhe was concerned in, was alſo in favour of the Pretender. That Earl ſent his Couſin Thomas Harley again to Hanover, about the middle of February, to inform that Court, who wanted not his Informations, with what good Intentions the Court and Miniſtry in England, gave ſo much

A.D.1714. Encouragement to Jacobites and Papiſts, and upon all Occaſions maltraited the hearty Friends to the the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line. The Annaliſt does Honour to two or three of Mr Thomas Harley's Companions, by naming the Son of Mr Bromley, Mr Creſſet, and Mr Winnington. On the 16th of February the Parliament met, and upon a Motion of Viſcount Scudamore, choſe Sir Thomas Hanmer to be their Speaker. The Convocation meeting alſo, choſe Dr Stanhope, Dean of Canterbury, to be their Prolocutor, which will be all that we need ſay of them in this Reign.

The new Parliament choſe Sir Thomas Hanmer Speaker.

The Lord-Treaſurer, and ſeveral Directors of the South-Sea Company, having huddled up the Aſſiento Buſineſs among themſelves, a General Court was held the 27th of February, to communicate what Papers they had prepar'd for them. The Members were ſtrangely ſurpriz'd at the Contents of them. Let us not forget what her Majeſty and her Miniſters have ſaid again and again, of the great Advantages procur'd for the Nation in Trade, particularly this Aſſiento, with which I remember a Spaniard, called Sir James de Caſtillo, twenty Years before hawk'd about, offering it for an inconſiderable Sum, in compariſon with the Price the Spaniſh and Britiſh Miniſters now put upon it. The Company expected the Queen had procur'd the whole Aſſiento Contract for them, and they now found that one half of the clear Profits was reſerv'd for her Majeſty and the King of Spain, beſides 7 ½ per Cent. granted to an unknown Perſon. I do not ſay, or believe, it was the Pretender, but there is good Reaſon to believe it was a Perſon they were aſham'd of. Beſides theſe Exceptions, Mr Milner, an eminent Portugal Merchant, who knew the Trade and Value of the Aſſiento better than all of them, declared that the Company might very well ſpare the trying Experiment of a Trade, by which other Nations were known to have been Loſers, eſpecially upon ſuch hard Terms as were offered to them, the rather becauſe the ſaid Trade would be precarious, and at the Mercy of their late reconciled Enemies. He was back'd by other Merchants, and Arthur Moore, who may be ſuppoſed to have learn'd ſomething of the Negro Trade under Sir James Hayes his Maſter, whoſe Servant he was, a leading Man in the Royal African Company, laboured in vain to bring the South-Sea Company into a good Opinion of this boaſted Aſſiento. They ordered the Papers that had been prepared for them to be printed, for the Information and Satisfaction of all their Proprietors againſt another Meeting; when, after the reading of the Papers, ſeveral Speeches were made for and againſt accepting the Aſſiento Contract, Arthur Moore, and John Ward, the Treaſurer's chief Advocates, endeavoured to ſhew the great Advantages of that Contract, Mr Craggs, Mr Newman, Mr Fiſher, and other Gentlemen of great Experience in commercial Affairs, maintained the contrary Opinion, with ſuch Force and Argument, that it was thought, if the accepting or not accepting had been then put to the Vote, it would have been carry'd for the latter by a great Majority: But it being moved and agreed to decide the Queſtion by Ballot, and the Members ſhould have one Vote for every 500*l.* Capital Stock, what by the Influence of the Directors, who were to be Managers of the Trade, and almoſt ſure to be Gainers, or they did not underſtand the Direction as well as thoſe of other Societies; what by the Contrivance of the Stock-jobbers, whoſe Buſineſs was, and is, to keep the Funds in perpetual fluctuation; and in order to that, to engage the Company in dubious Adventures: What by the juſt Apprehenſions the generality of the Members had, that the rejecting of this Trade would be interpreted as an Affront to the Lord-Treaſurer, who made them a Company, and in Reſentment might do what he could to unmake them, by ſtopping the annual Proviſion for their Intereſt till 1716. Upon all theſe, and other Conſiderations, it was carry'd, to accept of a Contract, as a prodigious Advantage, which all other Nations, that had before accepted of it, were Loſers by. About the ſame time, the Queen's Meſſengers brought over from Holland the Ratifications exchang'd of the Treaties of Peace and Commerce between Great-Britain and Spain; and the Peace was proclaimed the firſt of March. The Catalans were abandon'd in this Treaty, and a ſeparate Article agreed to in favour of the Lady Princeſs of Urſini, to guaranty to her a Grant of a Principality, and 30,000 Crowns a Year, which the Duke of Anjou had conferred on her, while we were at war with him, out of the Emperor's Province of Limburgh: Tho' what need we had to trouble ourſelves about this Lady Urſini could only enter into ſuch Heads as our Miniſtry was now compos'd of.

A Court of the South-Sea Company. Mr Milner, &c. againſt the Aſſiento Contract.

All Nations before loſe by the Aſſiento.

The Catalans abandon'd by the Treaty with Spain.

On the 2d of March the Queen was carry'd in a Chair to the Houſe of Lords, and made a pretty long Speech to both Houſes; the Subſtance of which is, in the Detection; and I choſe to take it from thence, that I might not be eternally charg'd with Partiality by the High Church, of whoſe Patrons, now in the Miniſtry, no Hiſtorian can ſpeak Truth, without being accuſed of writing a Satire inſtead of a Hiſtory, as I am ſure thoſe impartial ones will ſay of me.

The Princeſs Urſini's Grant guarante'd by it.

" Her Majeſty having taken notice of the p. 464.
" Treaty of Peace and Commerce with Spain
" being ratify'd, together with the Advantages of
" it to her Subjects, and the honourable and ad-
" vantageous Peace ſhe had made, ſhe was per-
" ſuaded, that with their hearty Concurrence, her
" Interpoſitions might at laſt prove effectual, and
" compleat the Settlement of Europe." But this ibid.
was ſo far from proving true, ſays the Detector, that the Emperor, now in Treaty with France, would not let her know the leaſt Syllable of what was tranſacted, or have any Communication with her to the laſt hour of her Life.

" That having congratulated with her Subjects,
" that they were delivered from a conſuming
" Land-War, ſhe ſaid, It was the Glory of the
" wiſeſt and greateſt of her Predeceſſors, to hold
" the Ballance of Europe, and to keep it equal by
" caſting in their Weight as Neceſſity requir'd;
" that ſhe had proceeded upon the ſame Principle."
What! by leaving Spain, and the Indies, in the Hands of the Houſe of Bourbon, very few unprejudiced Men, that underſtood any thing of Politicks, believed it at that time.

" Then having talk'd of the Flouriſhing of " Trade; the Accounts that ſhould be laid before
" the Commons; of Supplies for the current Year,
" and of the Joy that was expreſs'd upon her
" Recovery, ſhe wiſh'd effectual Care might
" be taken to ſuppreſs ſeditious Papers and factious
" Rumours, wherein ſome proceeded to that height,
" as to inſinuate, the Proteſtant Succeſſion was in
" Danger under her Government."

It is very certain more than half the Nation did, and there were viſible Reaſons for it then, and the Event juſtified theſe Inſinuations with a witneſs.

It has been ſeen often, that the Meaſures, Speeches, and Declarations, ſince theſe Men were in the Miniſtry, are in Defiance to Truth and

A.D.1714. Decency, that it is tireſome to repeat Remarks upon it.

The ſeditious Papers were publiſh'd by their Hirelings, without regard to either the one or the other; and one of the firſt Things the Houſe of Lords did, was to enquire into the publiſhing of a villainous Libel againſt the Scots Nation in general, and his Grace the Duke of Argyle in particular; as will be ſhewn preſently. I proceed after the Detector.

" How diſſonant ſoever the Queen's Speech " was in ſome Particulars, both Lords and Com- " mons fell in, for the moſt part, with it; and " after ſhe had return'd to the firſt her Thanks " for their affectionate Addreſs, ſhe added, that " they who were neareſt the Throne, would firſt " of her Subjects feel the evil Conſequences of " any Diminutions of the Regal Authority; that " it was a Comfort to her ſhe had the Aſſurance " of their Support; and they might depend upon " it, ſhe would never give way to the leaſt At- " tempt on the juſt Authorities of the Crown, " or any of their Rights and Privileges.

" The Commons likewiſe reſolv'd on an Ad- " dreſs, without Oppoſition; only a worthy " Member ſuggeſted, that they ought not to act " by a Spirit of Divination, and return Thanks " for the Treaty of Commerce with Spain, be- " fore they knew whether the ſame were advan- " tageous or not, which occaſion'd ſome Modi- " fications in the Addreſs as to that Particular; " and the principal Part of the Queen's Anſwer " imported, that the Confidence they had in her " Affection; the Abhorrence they declar'd of the " malicious Inſinuations of the Proteſtant Succeſ- " ſion being in danger under her Government, " and their Acquieſcence in the preſent Securities " for it, were very ſuitable Returns for the very " tender Regard ſhe had always had for what con- " cern'd her People, and would moſt effectually, by " the Bleſſing of God, unite the Minds of her Sub- " jects, and diſappoint the Deſigns of thoſe who " would diſturb the preſent Tranquillity." By which nothing was meant but the diſturbing a Miniſtry hated by all that lov'd the Houſe of Hanover, in the Proſecution of the Deſign to leſſen their Intereſt and increaſe that of the Pretender.

On the 2d of March, the Earl of Wharton made a Complaint in the Houſe of Peers of that deteſtable Libel above-mention'd, entitled, The Publick Spirit of the Whigs, ſet forth in their generous Encouragement of the Author of the Criſis; a Treatiſe written by Mr Richard Steele, from a Hint given him by his Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to ſerve two Ends, the one Publick, the other Private; the publick End was to collect all the Authorities in Law that aſſerted the Title of the Houſe of Hanover to the Crown after the Demiſe of the Queen, and ſet forth the Perils People might unwarily bring themſelves and the Nation into by oppoſing it: The private End, was to raiſe Contributions for the Author, who with all his Leſſons of Œconomy in his Guardians, and other moral Writings, was hardly ever out of Streights, occaſion'd by his Profuſeneſs and Indolence. The Criſis was little more than a Tranſcript of the Clauſes in ſeveral Acts of Parliament for ſettling the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, interſpers'd with Arguments, as well to prove the Neceſſity, as the Juſtice of adhering to that Settlement. Tho' theſe Arguments were not ſo forcible as ſome others in Treatiſes of more room, yet the Edge of ſo many Laws being turn'd againſt the Jacobites and the Miniſtry Party, if they were deviſable, look'd terrible, and frighten'd many into their Duty who were departing from it before. This excited Jonathan Swift, D. D. to take up the Pen, and the Quarrel of the moſt rampant of the Diſaffected, as we are inform'd by the Annaliſt. And [redacted]mes the Libel, of which my Lord Wha[redacted] whom Swift had great Obligations, complain[redacted] It was written, as my Author ſays, in the Sarcaſtic Strains of that Divine's Tale of a Tub, and was full of Ribaldry, which Hiſtory diſdains to record. He then quotes the Paſſages, containing impudent Reflections on the Union, the whole Scots Nation, and without Reſerve, inſulting, and vilifying the Duke of Argyle, " who of " late, to uſe the Words of the Annaliſt, had broken " all Meaſures with the Miniſtry. It was gene- " rally look'd upon as impolitick and ill-tim'd, " ſince the ſixteen Scots Peers, who ſate in the " Houſe of Lords, and who (at leaſt there) were " the principal Support of thoſe at the Helm, " were involv'd in the general Reflections on the " Scots Nation. But it ſeems, Dr Swift, who was " ſhrewdly ſuſpected of being the chief Author " of this Lampoon, and took a Pride in having " libelled the Junto round, (a very fit Employ- " ment for a Divine) would not loſe a Jeſt " which he thought might gratify the Spleen of " thoſe in Power. However, either the Au- " thor, or his Patrons, having a few Days after " the publiſhing of the Libel, foreſeen the Offence " it would give to the Scotch Peers, it was thought " fit to conceal the Leaves in which the ſcandalous " Reflections above-mentioned were contain'd, and " to let the reſt go abroad, with a new Title, " under the Name of a Second Edition.

A.D.1714.

Dr Swift Author of the Libel, call'd, The Publick Spirit of the Whigs. p. 47[2].

The Impudence and Falſehood of it.

The Majority of the Houſe of Lords join'd with the Earl of Wharton in the Complaint, and even the Lord-Treaſurer diſowned it, proteſting he knew nothing of it, and exclaim'd againſt the malicious Inſinuations that were in it. John Morphew, the Publiſher, was committed to the Cuſtody of the Black Rod, having upon his Examination confeſs'd, that an unknown Porter had brought to his Houſe the Copies of the Pamphlet in queſtion, from the Houſe of John Barber, a Printer, near Puddle-Dock, who, the Annaliſt tells us, was a Creature of Bolingbroke's; which is the more likely, becauſe he printed not only the Gazette, but the Votes of the Houſe of Commons, during the happy Times of this Miniſtry, and by the Money he made of theſe Jobbs, and the Atalantis, a lewd Libel on the Junto alſo, written by a Strumpet too wicked for a Name in Hiſtory, he put himſelf into a Condition to oblige the Doctors Commons Men, by being their Alderman.

John Barber the Printer call'd to an Account for that Libel.

The Annaliſt proceeds. " John Barber was " ordered into Cuſtody of the Black Rod, and " both he and Morphew were on Friday, the " 5th of March, ſeverally examin'd at the " Bar of the Houſe of Lords. Morphew ſtood " to his former Declaration, and own'd the " publiſhing and ſelling of that Libel. But Bar- " ber ſaid he knew nothing of it, and inſiſted not " to anſwer any Queſtions, the Anſwer to which " might tend to accuſe himſelf, or to corroborate " the Accuſations againſt him." Being withdrawn, the Earl of Wharton ſaid, they had nothing to do either with the Publiſher or Printer, but that it highly concerned the Authority of that auguſt Aſſembly to find out the VILLAIN who was the Author of that falſe and ſcandalous Libel, in order to do the Scotch Nation Juſtice " And thereupon mov'd, " that Barber might be again examined, together " with his Journey-men and Servants; the ſame " was readily agreed to, but the next Day the Earl " of Marr, one of the Secretaries of State, ac- " quainted

Mr Steele writes the Criſis.

Two Deſigns anſwer'd by it.

A.D.1714. " quainted the House, that, pursuant to the Queen's " Commands, he had directed John Barber to " be prosecuted, and it was the earnest Desire " of all good Britons, that he might be brought " to condign Punishment: The [redacted] Wharton " desir'd to know upon what [redacted] they de- " sign'd to proceed against him, but the Earl of " Marr replied, he wonder'd such a Question should The Earl of Marr prevents Barber's being further questioned. " be put to a Secretary of State, who was known to " be under Oath of Secrecy." A most conscien- cious Person this Marr; who made no Scruple not many Months after, to break his Oaths of Allegiance, Abjuration, Secrecy, &c. and take Arms in the Service of the Pretender. By this means Barber's Affair was no farther enquir'd into in a Parliamentary Way. And thus did the Ministers make the Queen be perpetually complaining of Libels, at the same time that they employed, encouraged, and protected, the most impudent and traiterous Libels. Barber, three Days after, was discharg'd from the Custody of the Black Rod, and contrary to the Expectations and Hopes of all good Men, escap'd without any other Brand than the Infamy of the Crime. However, the Lords resolved on an Address, reciting the Steps they had taken to find out the Villain, as Lord Wharton called him, who wrote the Libel, whom they had not been able yet to discover, and therefore, that nothing might be wanting on their Part towards the discovering and punishing so great a Criminal, they humbly besought Her Majesty to issue her Royal Proclamation, with a Reward to any Person that should discover him. Accordingly a Proclamation was publish'd, with a Reward of 300 l. " But, says the Annalist, nevertheless " Dr Swift, the reputed Author of the Libel in " question, remained undiscovered to the Public, P. 673. " though at the same time he was daily highly " caress'd by the Lord-Treasurer, (whose Father " would have been afraid that his House would " have tumbled on his Head, had he suffer'd such " a Man to come into it) as Barber the Printer " was by the Lord Bolingbroke."

Mention has been made of Mr Steel's Crisis, which gall'd the Jacobites so much, they could not help wincing within doors and without; and Mr Steele being chosen Member of Parliament for Stockbridge, it was resolved by them to give him all the Mortification and Vexation which they could. In the first place, they got a Petition lodg'd against him for an undue Election; but that Mr Steele complained of in the House of Commons. not being likely to come to a hearing soon enough to answer the Impatience of the Faction, Mr John Hungerford, who had formery been expelled the House for a Bribe of 20 Guineas, complained, March 11, of several scandalous Papers, lately published under the Name of Richard Steele, Esq; He was seconded by Auditor Foley, the Earl of Oxford's Cousin, and Auditor Harley, the Earl of Oxford's Brother; whose Pictures Mr Steele had so well delineated in his Account of the Crabtrees and Brickdusts of Gotham, in Herefordshire. The Cousin Foley said, " That unless means were found " to restrain the Licentiousness of the Press, and P. 674. " to shelter those, who had the Honour to be in The Ld. Treasurer's Kindred spoke against him. " the Administration, from malicious and scan- " dalous Libels, they, who by their Abilities, are " best qualified to serve their Queen and Coun- " try, would decline public Places and Employ- " ments." This was back'd by Sir William Wyndham, who added, " That some of Mr Steele's " Writings contained insolent, injurious Reflexi- " ons on the Queen herself, and were dictated by " the Spirit of Rebellion," which we shall have occasion to speak of more particularly, the next As does Sir W. Wyndham. time that Gentleman's Name comes into History. A.D.1714. It would have been very well, if instead of this arbitrary Reason, he had undertaken to confute Mr Steele, I am satisfy'd the World would have been diverted, if not instructed. The next day, the other Auditor, Mr Edward Harley, spoke of three printed Pamphlets, that had given most Offence to the Court. The ENGLISHMAN, of January 19. The CRISIS, and the last ENGLISHMAN, written by Richard Steele, Esq; As the Complainant said, every thing with much Form, let the matter be ever so serious, his manner of conducting it, gave it an Air of Levity and Ridicule.

On Saturday, the 13th of March, this Complaint was taken into Consideration; and after the two Auditors had made their Discharges, Mr James Craggs, jun. stood up to speak in Mr Steele's Behalf, but was prevented by the confus'd Noise of several Voices, To Order, intimating, that according to the Order of the Day, Mr Steele was to be heard himself in his Place; upon which Mr Steele said, that he was attacked on several Heads, without any previous Notice, and hop'd the House would allow him at least a Week's time to prepare his Defence. Auditor Harley having excepted against so long a Delay, and mov'd for hearing him the Monday following, Mr Steele, who to my Knowledge, had a hearty Contempt for both the Auditors, his Prosecutors, " who, " says the Annalist, were known to have been " rigid Presbyterians, (though they now sided " with the High Church), assumed their sanctify'd Mr Steele " Countenance, and owned, in the Meekness and his merry " Contrition of his Heart, that he was a very Speech on " great Sinner, and he hoped the Member that the Kin- " spoke last, who was so justly renowned for his dred of " exemplary Piety and Devotion, would not be the Lord- " accessary to the accumulating the Number of his Treasu- " Transgressions, by obliging him to break the SAB- rer. " BATH of the LORD, by perusing such " prophane Writings, as might serve for his Ju- " stification." This Speech, in the Harleian Cant and Countenance, set the generality of the Assembly in a good Humour; and Mr Steele carried his Point so far, that the Consideration of the Charge against him was put off till the Thursday following, by which time it was expected that Sir Richard Onslow, Mr ———, and Mr Lechmere, who were absent, would be come to Town, though Mr Steele fore-judg'd rightly, that the Malice and Number of his Enemies would prevail against the Justice of his Cause, and the Quality of his Friends; yet he was not to be silenc'd by their Complaints and Menaces, but on that very Monday, upon which Auditor Harley insisted to have him tried in the House of Commons, he moved there for an Address to have the several Representations of her Majesty's Engineers and Offices, who had the Care and Inspection of the Demolition of Dunkirk, and all Orders and Instructions thereupon laid before the House; but the previous Question being put, it was carried in the Negative, by 214 Voices against 109. " Our Author adds, The Court Party had not " the Confidence to oppose another Motion, which, " with the same Intent, was the same Day made " by the Lord Lumley, eldest Son to the Earl of " Scarborough, who being seconded by the Earl " of Hartford, eldest Son of his Grace the Duke " of Somerset, it was thereupon unanimously re- " solv'd, that an humble Address be presented to her " Majesty, That She would be pleased to order an " Account to be laid before the House, what Steps " had been made for the removing the Pretender, " from

A.D.1714. " from the Dominions of the Duke of Lorrain, pur-
" ſuant to the Addreſs of both Houſes of the laſt
" Parliament, and what Anſwers had been given to
" Her Majeſty, or any of Her Miniſters, by the
" Duke of Lorrain, or any of his Miniſters."

On Thurſday, the 18th of March, the Day appointed for Mr Steele's Trial, the Harlieans thought fit to get the Houſe cleared from all Strangers; which done, and Mr Steele appearing in his Place, Auditor Foley moved, That before they proceeded any farther, Mr Steele ſhould declare whether he acknowledged the Writings that bore his Name; upon which Mr Steele own'd he wrote and publiſh'd the ſaid Pamphlets, and the ſeveral Paragraphs there, which had been complained of, and read to the Houſe, WITH THE SAME CHEARFULNESS AND SATISFACTION WITH WHICH HE HAD ABJURED THE PRETENDER. Then Auditor Foley propoſed that Mr Steele ſhould withdraw, but little Heed was given to him, and it was carried without dividing, that Mr Steele ſhould ſtay and make his Defence. He deſired he might be allowed to anſwer what was urged againſt him, Paragraph by Paragraph; but though he was powerfully ſupported by Mr Robert Walpole, General Stanhope, the Lord Finch, eldeſt Son of the Earl of Nottingham, and the Lord Hinchingbroke, eldeſt Son of the Earl of Sandwich, yet Mr Steele's Accuſers inſiſted, and it was carried, that he ſhould proceed to make his Defence, generally upon the Charge againſt him.

Mr Steele aſſiſted by Mr Addiſon.

Mr Steele proceeded accordingly, being aſſiſted by Mr Joſeph Addiſon, his intimate Friend, and Fellow-labourer in the Spectator, Member for Malmſbury, who ſate near him, to prompt him upon occaſion. And for near three Hours he ſpoke to the ſeveral Heads extracted out of the three Pamphlets above-mentioned, which had been given in print to all the Members, with ſuch Temper, Modeſty, Unconcern, eaſy and manly Eloquence, as gave entire Satisfaction to all, except the Brick-duſts and Crabtrees, above-mentioned, and the Faction they were liſted in. Mr Steele being withdrawn, Auditor Foley, inſtead of ſumming up and anſwering his Defence, as moſt Members expected, ſaid, with ſome Confuſion, without amuſing the Houſe with long Speeches, it is plain the Writings that had been complained of, were ſeditious and ſcandalous, injurious to Her Majeſty's Government and Church, and what was aſtoniſhing to come from that Mouth, The UNIVERSITIES. So he called out for the Queſtion, as the Ultima Ratio of a Majority. This occaſioned a very warm Debate, which laſted till eleven o'Clock at Night. The firſt who ſpoke for Mr Steele, was Robert Walpole, Eſq; and the Power of Argument and Eloquence, never was more ſenſibly felt in that Houſe, than in his Speech; not a Word of which ought to be loſt, if we could help it: The rather, becauſe it is a Reproof to all the Enemies of that honourable Perſon's Merit, who endeavour to leſſen it by Falſhood and Calumny. His Love to his Country, to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, to the Rights and Liberties of his Fellow-ſubjects, expreſs'd in that Speech, will warm every true Briton's Breaſt with Sentiments of Affection and Eſteem.

Auditor Foley calls out for the Queſtion.

R. Walpole, Eſq; for Mr Steele.

He began with ſhewing, " that this extraordi-
" nary and violent Proſecution, ſtruck at the Li-
" berties of the Subject in general, and of the " Members of that Houſe in particular. He
" then juſtify'd Mr Steele on all the Heads of
" the Accuſation rais'd againſt him; and ſaid,
" he hop'd the Houſe would not ſacrifice one of
" their Members to the Reſentment and Rage
" of the Miniſtry, for no other Crime than his
" expoſing their notorious Miſmanagements; and,
" like a good Patriot, warning his Countrymen
" againſt the imminent Dangers with which the " Nation in general, and in particular her Ma-
" jeſty's Sacred Perſon, were threaten'd by the
" viſible Encouragement that was given to the " Pretender's Friends. If a Papiſt, ſaid Mr Wal-
" pole, to that purpoſe, nay an Iriſh Papiſt, who
" for many Years has been a Servant to the late
" King James and the Pretender, meaning Sir Pa-
" trick Lawleſs, one who has born Arms againſt
" her Majeſty in France and Spain; one who is
" ſtrongly ſuſpected of having embru'd his Hands
" in the Blood of the late Duke of Medina Celi,
" and Marquis of Leganez; if, ſaid he, ſuch a
" Man be not only permitted to come into
" England, but to appear at Court in the Pre-
" ſence-Chamber, if he be careſs'd by the Mi-
" niſters, nay I ſpeak it with Horror, if ſuch a
" Man be admitted to her Majeſty's private Au-
" dience in her Cloſet, will not every good Sub" ject think her Majeſty's Perſon in Danger?
" And is it then a Crime in Mr Steele to ſhew
" his juſt Concern for ſo precious a Life?"

A.D.1714.

The Pretender's Agent an Iriſh Jacobite, careſs'd by the Miniſters.

As to that Paſſage in Mr Steele's Criſis, wherein he ſays, That a late treaſonable Book, on the SUCCESSON of HEREDITARY RIGHT, has publiſhed the Will of King HENRY VIII, which ſeems to be intended as a Pattern for the like Occaſion. And a little lower, Let thoſe who act under the preſent Settlement, and yet pretend to diſpute for an Abſolute Hereditary Right, quiet themſelves with the Arguments they have borrow'd from Popery. Mr Walpole ſaid, " It could not be denied but the Lord-
" Treaſurer was the Patron of learned Men,
" for whoſe Uſe and Improvement he had ſet
" up a fine Library, ; and that it appeared by
" the Book called The Hereditary Right of the " Crown of England Aſſerted, &c. That the " Author had free Acceſs to that Library, and
" had drawn very material Paſſages out of ſome
" Manuſcripts in it. But that the Lord-Trea-
" ſurer's Care to ſupply him with Materials to" wards that Work, went yet farther; ſince his
" Lordſhip had employ'd a Man to look among
" old muſty Papers, The laſt Will and Teſtament
" of King Henry VIII, which the ſaid Author
" had inſerted at length in the Appendix to his
" Book. He appeal'd to Mr Lowndes, a Mem" ber of the Houſe of Commons, and Secretary to
" the Treaſury, whether he had not paid, by the " Lord-Treaſurer's Order, twelve or fourteen
" hundred Pounds to the Perſon that had made
" that great Diſcovery; but in caſe he ſhould de-
" ny it, he had Evidence to prove it." Mr Lowndes ſeem'd not to deny the Fact; he only ſaid, That Will was not ſo rare a Piece, ſince it was to be ſeen in a Place he named in Weſtminſter-Abbey.

Whatever Pretences the Earl of Oxford might make to Merit, by his Services to the Houſe of Hanover, it is plain that he ſo far countenanc'd this treaſonable Book, as not to be offended at the Author's publiſhing to the World, that he receiv'd great Helps towards it out of his Library, and by the tender Treatment of the Nonjuring Prieſt, who put it to the Preſs, and therefore deſerv'd as much to be hang'd, as if he had been convicted of writing it, is no very good Proof of it.

After this Mr Walpole mention'd three Points, in which he endeavour'd to prove, that the Peace had already been broke. " The firſt, he ſaid,
" was the Demolition of Dunkirk, which ought

A.D.1714. "to have been finish'd five Months after the "signing of the Treaty. But that instead of "that, the French had yet, only pull'd down "part of the outward Fortifications, without "touching the Foundations, which on the one "hand rendered the English Garrison useless, and "exposed to any Insults; and, on the other hand, "would afterwards make it easy for the French "to restore and rebuild those Fortifications, which "was the more probable to be in their Thoughts, "since instead of ruining the Harbour, they were "actually repairing the Sluices, and working on "a new Canal. The second Point was, The Re-

Mr Walpole proves the Violation of the Treaty of Peace.

"nunciations of the Princes of the House of Bourbon, "which were laid down as the Foundation and "Basis of the Peace, and as a Pretence, that thereby "the Crowns of France and Spain would be "more divided than ever: But that supposing "what he could not by any means grant, that "those Renunciations were to be depended upon, "they were yet conditional, and supposed the "Emperor's Renunciation to the Crown of Spain. "And therefore as no Care had been taken to "engage his Imperial Majesty to agree to that "necessary Condition, so the Renunciations of the "Princes of the House of Bourbon, became there-"by not binding, and void. The third Instance "of the Violation of the Peace, was the French "King's Ordinance, dated September 18, N. S. "1713, forbidding the Children of French Re-"fugees, though born out of his Dominions, to "come into them without his Permission, upon "pain of being sent to the Gallies. This Ordi-"nance was against Natural Right, and the Law "of Nations; and particularly derogatory to the "Rights and Liberties of the British Nation, "which the Children of the Refugees born in "England, were entitled to enjoy as well as "the other Natives; and he would adventure "to say in their Behalf, that it were to be "wish'd that all who have the Happiness to be "born in England, were as good Englishmen as "the Sons of the Refugees; and the British Na-"tion was the more concerned in having that re-"peal'd, in that the Refugees and their Children "were the fittest to carry on a Trade with "France."

The Lord-Treasurer refuses to pay the French Refugees.

